25 And Amasias the son of Ioas, king of Ioudas, lived fifteen years after the death of Ioas son of Ioachaz, king of Israel. 26 And the rest of the histories of Amasias, the first and the last, behold, are they not written in the Book of the Kings of Ioudas and Israel? 27 And at the time when Amasias turned from the Lord, they plotted a plot against him, and he fled from Ierousalem to Lachis. And they sent after him to Lachis and there put him to death.

28 And they took him back on horses and buried him with his fathers in the city of Davud.

26 And all the people of the land took Oziyas and he was sixty years old, and they made him king in his father Amasias' stead. 2 He built Ailath and restored it to Ioudas after the king slept with his fathers. 3 Oziyas became king being a son of sixteen years and reigned in Ierousalem forty-two years. And his mother's name was Chalia, from Ierousalem. 4 And he did what was right before the Lord in accordance with everything his father Amasias had done. 5 And he would seek out the Lord in the days of Zacharias who had understood in fear of the Lord. And in his days he sought the Lord, and the Lord made him prosper.

6 And he went out and made war against the allophyles and pulled down the walls of Geth and the walls of Labne and the walls of Azotus, and he built cities of Azotus and among the allophyles. 7 And the Lord made him prevail over the allophyles and over the Arabs who lived on the rock and over the Minites. 8 And the Minites gave Oziyas gifts, and his fame reached as far as the entry to Egypt, because he was highly strong. 9 And Oziyas built towers in Ierousalem, both at the gate of the corner and at the gate of the ravine and on the corners, and he grew strong. 10 And he built towers in the wilderness and hewed out many cisterns, because he had large herds in Sephela and in the low land and vinedressers in the hill country and in Carmel, because he loved the soil. 11 And Oziyas had forces making war and going out to battle in number, and their number was through the hand of Iiel the scribe and Maasaias the judge through the hand of Ananias the king's deputy. 12 And the entire number of the patriarchs of the mighty ones for war was two thousand six hundred. 13 And with them was a military force of three hundred and seven thousand five hundred. These were the ones making war with power of strength to assist the king against his adversaries. 14 And Oziyas equipped them, the entire force, with shields and spears and helmets and breastplates and bows and slings for stones. 15 And he made machines in Ierousalem devised by a mathematician to be on the towers and on the corners, to fire projectiles and large stones. And their construction was noised abroad far and wide, because it was marveled at in order to be of help until he became strong.

16 And as he grew in power, his heart was exalted so as to be corrupt, and he did wrong against the Lord, his God, and entered into the Lord's shrine, to burn incense on the altar of incense. 17 And Azarias the priest entered after him and with him the priests of the Lord, eighty mighty sons. 18 And they opposed King Oziyas and said to him, "It is not for you, Oziyas, to offer incense to the Lord, but for the priests, the sons of Aaron, who are consecrated, to offer incense. Go out of the holy precinct, because you are in revolt against the Lord, and this will not win you any glory from the Lord God." 19 And Oziyas became angry, and in his hand was the fumigator to offer incense in the shrine. And when he became angry with the priests, leprosy also rose up on his forehead in front of the priests in the house of the Lord over the altar of incense. 20 And the first priest and the priests turned toward him and, behold, he was leprous on his forehead. And they hurried him out of there, and indeed he himself hurried to get out, because the Lord had convicted him. 21 And King Oziyas was leprous until the day of his death, and he sat as a leper in the house of aphphousoth, because he was excluded from the Lord's house. And Ioatham his son was in charge of his kingdom, judging the people of the land.

22 And the rest of the histories of Oziyas, the first and the last, were written by Iessias the prophet. 23 And Oziyas slept with his fathers, and they buried him with his fathers in the plain of the kings' burial, because they said, "He is leprous." And Ioatham his son became king in his stead.

27 Ioatham was a son of twenty-five years when he became king and reigned sixteen years in Ierousalem. And his mother's name was Ierousa daughter of Sadok. 2 And he did what was right before the Lord in accordance with everything his father Oziyas had done—but he did not enter into the Lord’s shrine. And still the people were becoming corrupt. 3 He built the high gate of the Lord’s house and built extensively on the wall of Ophla. 4 And he built cities in the hill country of Judah and both dwellings and towers in the forests. 5 He fought with the king of the sons of Ammon and prevailed over him. And the sons of Ammon would give him one hundred talents of silver annually and ten thousand kors of wheat and ten thousand of barley. These the king of Ammon would bring him annually in the first year and the second and the third. 6 And Joatham became strong, because he ordered his ways before the Lord, his God. 7 And the rest of the histories of Joatham and the war and his acts, behold, they are written in the Book of the Kings of Judah and Israel. 8 And Joatham slept with his fathers and was buried in the city of David, and his son Achaz became king in his stead.

28 Achaz was a son of twenty years when he became king and reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem. And he did not do what was right before the Lord, as David his father had done. 2 And he walked in the ways of the kings of Israel, for indeed he made carved objects for their idols. 3 And he would sacrifice incense on the high places and on the roofs and under every woodland tree.

5 And the Lord, his God, handed him over through the hand of the king of Syria, and he struck at him and took captive of them a large captives here to us, because you speak to us in regard to sinning against the Lord to add to our sins and ignorance, because great is our sin and the anger of the Lord’s wrath against Israel.” 14 And the warriors left the captives and the plunder before the rulers and all the assembly. 15 And the men got up as their name was called out and assisted the captives and wrapped all the naked from the plunder and clothed them and shaved them and gave them to eat and to be anointed and assisted every sick person with pack animals and brought them back to their brothers in Jericho, the city of palms, and they returned to Samaria.

16 At that time Achaz sent to the king of Assyria to help him and on this occasion, because the Idumeans had attacked and struck at Judah and taken a captivity captive. 18 And the allophyles had attacked against the cities of the low land and from the southwest of Judah, and they had taken Bath-sheams and Ailons and Gadera and Socho and its villages and Thamna and its villages and Gamzo and its villages, and they settled there, because the Lord humbled Judah on account of Achaz, king of Judah, because he had rebelled with rebellion against the Lord. 20 And Thaglathphellasar, king of Assyria, came against him and struck him. 21 And Achaz took what was in the Lord’s house and in the house of the king and of the rulers and gave it to the king of Assyria, but it was of no help to him. 22 Rather by his having been afflicted, he even added to rebel against the Lord, and the king said, “I will seek out the gods of Damascus who are hitting me.” And he said, “Because the gods of the king of Syria themselves will strengthen them, I will therefore sacrifice to them, and they will support me.” And they became a stumbling block to him and to all Israel. 24 And Achaz removed the utensils of the Lord’s house and cut them up and closed the doors of the Lord’s house and made altars for himself on every corner of Jerusalem.

25 And in every city and city in Judah he made high places to burn incense to foreign gods, and they angered the Lord, God of their fathers. 26 And the rest of his histories and his acts, the first and the last, behold, they are written in the Book of the Kings of Judah and Israel. 27 And Achaz slept with his fathers and was buried in the city of David, because they did not bring him to the tombs of the kings of Israel. And his son Hezekiah reigned in his stead.

29 And Hezekiah became king at age twenty-five and reigned twenty-nine years in Jerusalem. And his mother’s name was Abba daughter of Zacharias. 2 And he did what was right before the Lord, just as his father David had done. 3 And it happened that, when he was established over his kingdom, in the first month he opened the doors of the Lord's house and repaired them. 4 And he brought in the priests and the Levites and placed them on the side toward the east. 5 And he said to them, "Listen, Levites, now be purified and purify the house of the Lord, God of your fathers, and cast out uncleanness from the holy places, because our fathers were apostate and did what was evil before the Lord and abandoned him and turned their face from the Lord's tent and gave their neck and shut the doors of the shrine and put out the lamps. And they did not burn incense and did not offer whole burnt offerings in the holy place to Israel's God. 6 And the Lord was angered with anger against Joudas and against Jerusalem and gave them into terror and into annihilation and into scorn, as you see with your very eyes. 7 And, behold, your fathers were struck by dagger, and your sons and your daughters and your wives are in captivity in a land not their own, which even now is the case. 8 As a result of these things, it is now in my heart to make a covenant with the Lord, God of Israel, and he will turn the anger of his wrath from us. 9 And now do not delay, because the Lord has chosen for you to stand before him to minister and to be ministers and incense burners for him."

10 And the Levites arose, Maath the son of Amasi and Joel the son of Azarias from the sons of Kaath, and from the sons of Merari, Ki the son of Abdi and Azarias the son of Ialleel, from the sons of Gedsoni, Ioa the son of Zemmath and Ioan the son of Iochaa. 11 And of the sons of Elisaphan, Sambri and Iiel, and of the sons of Asaph, Zacharias and Maththaniyas, 12 and of the sons of Haiman, Iiel and Semei, and of the sons of Idithon, Samais and Oziel. 13 And they gathered their brothers and were purified according to the king's commandment by the hand of the prophet, and of Nathan the prophet, for the ordinance was through the Lord's commandment by the hand of the prophets. 14 And the Levites stood with instruments of David and of Gad the king's seer and of Nathan the prophet. And they hymned with gladness and fell down and did obeisance.

30 And Hezekias answered and said, "Now you have filled your hands to the Lord; bring, and bear sacrifices of praise also to the Lord's house. And the assembly brought sacrifices of praise also to the Lord's house, and everyone eager in heart brought whole burnt offerings. 2 And the number of the whole burnt offering that the assembly offered was seventy calves, one hundred rams, two hundred lambs. All these were for a whole burnt offering to the Lord. 3 And the consecrated calves were six hundred; sheep, three thousand. 4 But the priests were few and were unable to skin the whole burnt offering, and their brothers the Levites assisted them until the task was finished and until the priests were purified, because the Levites had been purified more eagerly than the priests. 5 And the whole burnt offering was abundant with the fats of the completion for deliverance and of the libations of the whole burnt offering. And the service in the Lord's house was restored. 6 And Hezekias and all the people were glad on account of the fact that God had prepared for the people, because the thing had come about suddenly.
the phasek to the Lord, God of Israel. 2 And the king and the rulers and all the assembly in Jerusalem took counsel to hold the phasek in the second month, 3 for they were unable to hold it at that time, because not enough priests had been purified and the people had not gathered in Jerusalem. 4 And the plan was pleasing both to the king and to the assembly. 5 And they fixed a plan to pass a message through all Israel from Bersabee up to Dan to come and hold the phasek to the Lord, God of Israel, in Jerusalem, because the multitude had not held it according to prescription. 6 And the couriers with the letters from the king and the rulers traveled throughout all Israel and Ioudas in accordance with the king's ordinance, saying, "Sons of Israel, turn to the God of Abraham and Isaak and Israel, and he will return those survivors who escaped the hand of the king of Assour. 7 And do not be like your fathers and your brothers, who became apostate from the Lord, God of their fathers, and he gave them over to desolation, as you yourselves see. 8 And now do not harden your necks. Give glory to the Lord God, and enter his holy precinct, which he sanctified forever, and be subject to the Lord, your God, and he will remove from you the anger of his wrath, because, when you return to the Lord, your brothers and your children will become pitied before all who took them captive, and he will return them to this land, because the Lord our God is merciful and compassionate and will not turn his face from us, if we turn to him." 10 And the couriers passed through city from city in Mount Ephraim and Manasse and as far as Zaboulon, and they were, as it were, as people deriding and mocking them. 11 But the people of Aser and some of Manasse and of Zaboulon were moved to shame and came to Jerusalem. 12 And the hand of the Lord was on Ioudas to give them one heart to go and act in accordance with the ordinance of the king and the rulers in the word of the Lord.

13 And many people gathered in Jerusalem to hold the feast of unleavened bread in the second month, an exceedingly vast assembly. 14 And they got up and removed the altars that were in Jerusalem, and all with which they had burned incense to the false ones they pulled down and threw into the Wadi Kidron. 15 And they sacrificed the phasek on the fourteenth of the second month. 16 And the priests and the Levites were ashamed and were purified and brought whole burnt offerings into the Lord's house. 17 And they stood at their station according to their judgment in accordance with the commandment of Moyses, man of God. And the priests received the blood of the hand of the Levites, 18 for the majority of the assembly were not purified and the Levites had to sacrifice the phasek for anyone unable to be purified for the Lord, 19 for the majority of the people from Ephraim and Manasse and Issachar and Zaboulon had not been purified but ate the phasek in contravention of prescription. And Hezekias prayed for them, saying, "Let the good Lord be propitiated over every heart directed to seek out the Lord, God of their fathers, and not in accordance with the purity of the holy things." 20 And the Lord heard Hezekias and healed the people. 21 And the sons of Israel who were found in Jerusalem held the feast of unleavened bread for seven days with great gladness and were singing hymns to the Lord day by day, and the priests and the Levites with instruments to the Lord. 22 And Hezekias spoke to every heart of the Levites and those with a good understanding for the Lord, and they completed the feast of unleavened bread, sacrificing sacrifices for deliverance for seven days and acknowledging the Lord, God of their fathers.

23 And the assembly decided to hold it together for seven more days, and they celebrated for seven days with gladness, 24 for Hezekias contributed to the assembly of Ioudas a thousand calves and seven thousand sheep and the rulers contributed to the people a thousand calves and ten thousand sheep, and the priests' holy things were in abundance. 25 And the whole assembly was glad: the priests and the Levites and all the assembly of Ioudas and those present from Israel and the guests who had come from the land of Israel and those who dwelt in Ioudas. 26 And there was great gladness in Jerusalem. From the days of Salomon son of Dauid king of Israel there had not been such a feast in Jerusalem. 27 And the priests, the Levites, stood up and blessed the people. And their voice was heard and their prayer entered his holy dwelling place in the sky.

31 And when all this was finished, all Israel found in the cities of Ioudas went out and demolished the steles and cut down the groves and completely dismantled the high places and altars from all over Judea and Beniamin and from Ephraim and from Manasse. And all Israel—one—returned to his inheritance and to their cities.

2 And Hezekias appointed the daily divisions of the priests and of the Levites and the daily divisions of each according to their ministry for the priests and for the Levites in whole burnt offerings and in the sacrifice of deliverance and to praise and acknowledge and minister at the gates in the courts of the Lord's house. 3 And the king's portion from his possessions was for whole burnt offerings, morning and evening, and whole burnt offerings on sabbaths and on new moons and on the feasts written in the Lord's law. 4 And he told the people who lived in Jerusalem to give the portion due to the priests and the Levites so that they might be strong in the ministry of the Lord's house. 5 And when he had prescribed the matter, the sons of Israel multiplied their first fruits of grain and of wine and of oil and of honey and of every field crop, and the sons of Israel and of Ioudas brought all the tithes in profusion. And the inhabitants of all the cities in Ioudas, they too brought tithes of calves and of sheep and tithes of goats, and they dedicated them to the Lord, their God, and brought them in and laid them in heaps by heaps. 7In the third month the heaps began to be formed and in the seventh month they were finished. 8And Hezekias and the rulers came and saw the heaps and blessed the Lord and his people Israel. 9And Hezekias learned from the priests and from the Levites about the heaps. 10And Azarias the ruling priest said to him, and he said, "From the time that the first fruits began to be brought to the house of the Lord, we have eaten and drunk and had left over, because the Lord has blessed his people, and we still have this abundance left over."

11 And Hezekias told them to prepare shrine-carriers' chambers for the house of the Lord, and they prepared them. 12And there they faithfully brought the first fruits and tithes, and Chonenias the Levi was supervisor over them, and Semei his brother was deputy. 13And Iiel and Ozazias and Naeth and Asael and Ierimoth and Iozabath and his sons were appointed through Chonenias and Semei his brother, as King Hezekias and Azarias, the chief officer of the Lord's house, had ordered. 14And Kore the son of Jemna the Levi, the door-keeper on the east, was in charge of the gifts to give the first fruits to the Lord and the holies of holies through the hand of Odom and Beniamin and lesous and Semei and Amarias and Schonias through the hand of the priests, to give faithfully to their brothers according to the daily divisions, in accord with great and small, 16apart from the off-spring of the male line from three years old and up to every one entering the Lord's house, on the appropriate day, for ministry according to the calculation of days with the daily divisions of their dispositions. 17This was the register of the priests according to their paternal houses, and the Levites were in their daily divisions from the age of twenty and up, in order, 18in registers, in every generation of their sons and their daughters to their full extent, because they faithfully purified the holy place for the sons of Aaron, those serving as priests. And those from their cities, in every city and city, men who were named by name, were to give a portion to every male among the priests and to everyone enumerated among the Levites.

20 And Hezekias acted so in all Ioudas and did what was good and right before the Lord, his God. 21And in every task with which he began in the work in the Lord's house and in the law and in the ordinances, he sought out his God with his whole soul and acted and succeeded.

32 And after these matters and this truth, Sennacherim, king of the Assyrians, came, and he came against Ioudas and encamped against the walled cities and said that he would take possession of them. 2And Hezekias saw that Sennacherim had come and that his face was set to wage war on Ierousalem. 3And he took counsel with his elders and the magnates to seal off the waters of the springs that were outside the city, and they supported him. 4And he gathered a large group of people and sealed off the waters of the springs and the stream that separated the city, saying, "May the king of Assour not come and find much water and be reviv'd." 5And Hezekias strengthened and built the entire wall that had been demolished and towers and another external wall, and he strengthened the retaining structure of the city of David and fashioned many weapons. 6And he set war commanders over the people, and they gathered to him in the square of the ravine gate, and he spoke to their hearts, saying: 7"Be strong, and be manly. Do not be terrified from before the king of Assour and from before all the nation with him, because with us are more than with him. 8With him are physical arms, but with us is the Lord, our God, to save us and to fight our war for us." And the people took heart at the words of Hezekias, king of Ioudas.

9 And after this, Sennacherim, king of the Assyrians, sent his servants to Ierousalem, and he himself was at Lachis, and all his army with him. And he sent to Hezekias, king of Ioudas, and to all Ioudas in Ierousalem, saying, 10"Thus says Sennacherim, king of the Assyrians: In what have you put your trust, that you sit in the siege in Ierousalem? 11Is not Hezekias deceiving you, to put your trust, that you sit in the siege in Ierousalem? 12Was it not this Hezekias who removed his altars and his high places and said to Ioudas and the inhabitants of Ierousalem, saying, 'Opposite this altar you shall do obeisance and upon it you shall offer incense'? 13Shall you not know what I have done, I and my fathers, to all the peoples of the countries? Being able were the gods of the nations of all the earth able to save their people from my hand? 14Who was there among the gods of those nations whom my fathers utterly destroyed? Were they able to save their people from my hand? 15Now, let Hezekias not deceive you; let him not make you trust like this, and do not believe him, because no god of any nation or kingdom shall be able to save his people from my hand and from the hand of my fathers—because your God will not save you from my hand."

16 And his servants spoke still more against the Lord God, and against Hezekias his servant. 17And he wrote a note to reproach the Lord, God of Israel, and spoke about him, saying, "As the gods of the nations of the earth did not deliver their peoples from my hand, so Hezekias' God will not deliver his people from my hand." 18And he shouted with a loud voice in Iudean to the people of Ierousalem who were on the wall, to frighten them and draw them down in order that they might seize the city. 19And he talked about Ierousalem's God as he did about the gods of the peoples of the earth: works of human hands.

son of Amos prayed about this and shouted out to the sky. 21 And the Lord sent an angel, and he destroyed every powerful warrior and commander and general in the camp of Assour's king, and he returned to his country shame-faced. And he came into the house of his god, and some of those fathered from his belly struck him down with a sword. 22 And the Lord saved Hezekias and the inhabitants of Ierousalem from the hand of Sennacherim, king of Assour, and from the hand of all. And he gave them rest on every side. 23 And many brought gifts to the Lord in Ierousalem and presents to Hezekias, king of Ioudas, and he was exalted in the eyes of all the nations after that.

24 In those days Hezekias became sick unto death. And he prayed to the Lord, and he heard him and gave him a sign. And Hezekias did not repay according to the reward which he had given him; rather, his heart was exalted. And anger came upon him and upon Ioudas and Ierousalem. 26 And Hezekias was brought low from the exaltation of his heart—and the inhabitants of Ierousalem—and the Lord's anger did not come upon them in the days of Hezekias.

27 And wealth and very great honor accrued to Hezekias. And he made himself treasures for silver and gold and precious stone and for spices, and armories also for desirable articles, and cities for the produce of grain and oil and wine and mangers for every herd and folds for the flocks and cities, which he built for himself, and goods for sheep and cows in profusion, because the Lord gave him very abundant goods. 30 This same Hezekias closed above the outlet of the water of Gion and directed them below to the southwest of the city of Dauid. And Hezekias prospered in all his works, and likewise with regard to the envoys of the commanders of Babylon, who had been sent to him to inquire from him the marvel that had happened on the land, and the Lord abandoned him, and he prayed to him and heard him, to know what was in his heart.

32 And the rest of the histories of Hezekias and his mercy, behold, they are written in the Prophecy of Esaias son of Amos the Prophet and in the Book of the Kings of Ioudas and Israel. And Hezekias slept with his fathers, and they buried him on the ascent of the tombs of Dauid's sons, and 'all Ioudas' and the inhabitants of Ierousalem gave him fame and honor in his death. And Manasses his son became king in his stead.

33 Manasses was twelve years old when he became king and reigned fifty-five years in Ierousalem. And he did what was evil before the Lord, arising from all the abominations of the nations whom the Lord had utterly destroyed from before the sons of Israel. And he turned and built the high places that his father Hezekias had pulled down and erected steles to the she-Baalim and made groves and did obeisance to all the host of the sky and was subject to them. And he built altars in the Lord's house of which the Lord had said, "In Ierousalem shall my name be forever." And he built altars to all the host of the sky in the two courts of the Lord's house. He too passed his children through fire in Gai-Banai-ennom, and he acted as a diviner and practiced ornithomancy and sorcery and acted as ventriloquists and enchanters. He multiplied doing evil before the Lord in order to provoke him. And he installed what was carved and what was smelted, an image that he had made, in the Lord's house of which God had said to Dauid and to Salomon his son, "In this house and Ierousalem, which I have chosen out of all the tribes of Israel, I will put my name forever." And I will not add to shake Israel's foot from the land that I gave to their fathers, if only they are careful to do all that I have commanded them, according to all the law and the ordinances and the judgments by Moyses' hand. And Manasses led astray Ioudas and the inhabitants of Ierousalem to do what was evil beyond all the nations whom the Lord had removed from before the sons of Israel.

And the Lord spoke to Manasses and to his people, but they gave no heed. And the Lord led against them the commanders of the force of the king of Assour, and they took Manasses in manacles and bound him with fetters and brought him to Babylon. And when he was in distress he sought the face of the Lord, his God, and he was humbled exceedingly from before the God of his fathers. And he prayed to him, and he heard him. And he heard his cry and brought him back to Ierousalem to his kingdom. And Manasses knew that the Lord, he is God.

And afterward he built a wall outside the city of Dauid from the southwest by Gion in the wadi and when people exit the round about gate even on to Ophla, and he heightened it significantly. And he appointed commanders of the force in all the walled cities in Ioudas. And he removed the foreign gods and the carved item from the Lord's house and all the altars that he had built on the mountain of the Lord's house and in Ierousalem and outside the city. And he restored the Lord's altar and sacrificed on it a sacrifice of deliverance and of praise, and he said that Ioudas should be subject to the Lord, God of Israel. The people, however, were still on the high places; the Lord, however, was their God.

And the rest of the histories of Manasses and his prayer to God and the words of the seers when they spoke to him in the name of the Lord, God of Israel, behold, they are in the accounts of the seers when they spoke to him in the name of the Lord, God of Israel, and in the accounts of the seers. And the rest of the histories of Manasses and his prayer to God and the words of the seers when they spoke to him in the name of the Lord, God of Israel, behold, they are in the accounts of the seers when they spoke to him in the name of the Lord, God of Israel, and in the accounts of the seers. And he restored the Lord's altar and sacrificed on it a sacrifice of deliverance and of praise, and he said that Ioudas should be subject to the Lord, God of Israel.

And Manasses slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the orchard of his house. And his son Amon became king in his stead.

21 Amon became king at twenty-two years old and reigned two years in Ierousalem.
what was evil before the Lord as Manasses his father had done. And Amon would sacrifice to all the idols his father Manasses had made, and he was subject to them. 23 And he was not humbled before the Lord, as his father Manasses had been humbled, because his son Amon increased error. 24 And his servants plotted against him and struck him in his house. 25 And the people of the land struck those who had plotted against King Amon, and the people of the land made Josias his son king in his stead.

34 Josiah was eight when he became king and reigned thirty-one years in Jerusalem. 2 And he did what was right before the Lord and walked in the ways of his father David and did not stray to right or left. 3 And in the eighth year of his reign—and he was still a lad—he began to seek the Lord, God of David his father. And in the twelfth year of his reign he began to purge Iouda and Jerusalem of the high places and the groves and melted items. 4 And he pulled down in front of him the altars of the Baalim and the high places on them, and he cut down the groves and demolished the carved and melted items and pulverized and threw them upon the memorials to those who had sacrificed to them, 5 and the bones of the priests he burned on the altars and purified Iouda and Jerusalem. 6 And in the cities of Ephraim and Manasse and Symeon and Nephthali and in reference to their sites round about, 7 he also pulled down the groves and the altars and demolished the idols into smithereens and cut down all the groves from off the land of Israel and returned to Jerusalem. 8 And in the eighteenth year of his reign—in order to purge the land and the house—he sent out Saphan son of Eselias and Maasias ruler of the city and Iouach son of Iochaz, his recorder, to repair the house of the Lord, his God. 9 And they came to Chelkias the great priest and delivered the book to the king and rendered a further account to the king, saying, "Chelkias the priest has given me a book," and Saphan read it before the king. 10 And those appointed in the Lord’s house gave it into the hand of people doing the task. 11 And as they were bringing out the money that had been collected into the Lord’s house, Chelkias the priest found a book of the Lord’s law through the hand of Mosyes. 12 And Chelkias answered and said to Saphan the scribe, "A book of the law I have found in the Lord’s house," and Chelkias gave the book to Saphan. 16 And Saphan brought the book to the king and rendered a further account to the king, "All the donated money is in the hand of your servants who are doing the task. 17 And they have smelted the silver found in the Lord’s house and have given it into the hand of the overseers and into the hand of those doing the work." 18 And Saphan the scribe reported to the king, saying, "Chelkias the priest has given me a book," and Saphan read it before the king.

And it happened, when the king heard the words of the law, he rent his garments. 20 And the king commanded Chelkias and Saphan’s son Achikam and Abdon, Michaias’ son, and Saphan the scribe and Asaias the king’s servant, saying: 21 “Go, and inquire of the Lord concerning me and concerning every one who is left in Israel and Iouda, concerning the words of the book that has been found, because the Lord’s wrath kindled against us is great, because our fathers did not listen to the words of the Lord, to act in accordance with all that is written in this book.”

22 And Chelkias went, and those to whom the king had spoken, to Holda the prophetess, wife of Sellem son of Thakouath son of Chelles, since she kept the vestments—and she lived in Jerusalem in masana, and they spoke to her to that effect. 23 And she said to them, “Thus said the Lord, God of Israel: Say to the man who sent you to me, 24 Thus says the Lord: Behold, I am bringing harm against this place, all the words that are written in the book that was read before the king of Ioudas, 25 since they have forsaken me and have offered incense to foreign gods so that they have provoked me to anger with all the works of their hands. And my wrath was blazed in this place, and it will not be quenched. 26 And as to the king of Ioudas, who sent you to inquire of the Lord, thus shall you say this to him: Thus says the Lord God of Israel: As for the words that you heard—and your heart was embarrassed, and you were humbled from before me, when you heard my words regarding this place and regarding those who inhabit it, and you were humbled before me and tore your garments, and you wept before me; I on my part also heard you, says the Lord. 28 Behold, I will add you to your fathers, and you shall be added to your memorials in peace, and your eyes shall not see among all the harm that I am bringing upon this place and upon its inhabitants.” And they gave back word to the king.

29 And the king sent and gathered the elders of Iouda and Jerusalem. 30 And the king went up to the Lord’s house, and all Iouda and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, both the priests and the Leuites and all the people, from great to small. And he read in their hearing all the words of the book of the covenant that had been found in the Lord’s house. 31 And the king stood by the pillar and made a covenant before the Lord to walk before the Lord, to keep his commandments and testimonies and ordinances with his whole heart and with his whole soul, the words of the covenant that are written in this book. 32 And he made all those found in Jerousalem and Benjamin stand, and the inhabitants of Jerousalem made a covenant in the house of the Lord, God of their fathers. 33 And Josias removed all the abominations from the entire land, which belonged to the sons of Israel, and he made all those found in Jerousalem and Israel be subject to the Lord, their God, all his days. He did not stray from behind the Lord, God of his fathers.

35 And Josias held the phasech on the Lord, his God, and they slaughtered the phasech on the fourteenth of the first month. 2 And he set the priests at their watches and strengthened them for the tasks of the Lord’s house. 3 And he said to the Levites, who were powerful in all Israel, that they should be sanctified to the Lord, and they placed the holy ark in the house that Salomon son of David, the king of Israel, had built. And the king said, "You are not to carry anything on your shoulders. Now then, minister to the Lord, your God, and to his house according to the divisions of your paternal houses. 4 And prepare according to your paternal houses and according to your daily divisions according to the writing of Daud, king of Israel, and through the hand of his son Salomon. 5 And stand in the house according to the divisions of your paternal houses for your brothers, the sons of the people, and a portion of the paternal house is for the Levites. 6 And slaughter the phasech, and prepare the holy things for your brothers to do according to the word of the Lord through the hand Moyses." 7 And Josias contributed sheep and lambs and kids from the young of goats to the sons of the people, everything for the phasech for all those present, up to a number of thirty thousand and three thousand calves. These were from the king’s substance. 8 And his officials contributed to the people and to the priests and the Levites. Chelkias and Zacharias and Iel, the chief officers of the house of God, gave to the priests, and they gave for the phasech two thousand six hundred sheep and lambs and kids and three hundred calves. 9 And Choenianas and Banaias and Samaias and Nathaniel, his brother, and Hasabias and Iel and Lozabad, rulers of the Levites, contributed five thousand sheep and five hundred calves to the Levites for the phasech.

10 And the service was set up. And the priests stood at their post, and the Levites in their divisions according to the king’s command. 11 And they slaughtered the phasech, and the priests poured the blood out of their hand, and the Levites did the skinning. 12 And they made ready the whole burnt offering to pass on to them according to the divisions of their paternal houses to the sons of the people to offer to the Lord, as it is written in the book of Moyses, and so until morning. 13 And they roasted the phasech with fire according to the rule and boiled the holy things in the copper vessels and in the cauldrons. And it was a success, and they ran to all the sons of the people. 14 And after preparing for them and for the priests, because the priests offered the fat and whole burnt offerings till night, the Levites prepared both for themselves and for their brothers, the sons of Aaron. 15 And the harp-singers, sons of Asaph, were at their post according to the commandments of Daud. And Asaph and Haiman and Idithon, the king’s prophets, and the rulers and the gatekeepers of gate and gate— it was not for them to move from the ministry of the holy things, because their brothers the Levites ministered to them.

16 And all the service of the Lord was set up and prepared on that day, to hold the phasech and to offer the whole burnt offerings upon the Lord’s altar according to King Josias’ command. 17 And the sons of Israel who were present held the phasech at that time and the feast of unleavened bread for seven days. 18 And no phasech like it took place in Israel from the days of Samouel the prophet, and none of the kings of Israel celebrated anything like the phasech that Josias held for the Lord—and the priests and the Levites and all the people, who were present, and the inhabitants of Jerousalem—in the eighteenth year of King Josias’ reign. 19 And King Josias burned the ventriloquists and the wizards and the tharaphin and the idols and the karasim, which were in the land of Loudas and in Jerousalem in order to establish the words of the law that were written in the book that Chelkias the priest found in the Lord’s house. 20 No one like him appeared before him who turned to the Lord with all his heart and with all his soul and with all his strength, according to all the law of Moyses, and none like him arose after him. 21 Nevertheless, the Lord did not turn back from the anger of his great wrath with which the Lord was angry with wrath against Loudas for all the provocations with which Manasses provoked him to anger. 22 And the Lord said, "Indeed, Loudas I will remove from before me as I removed Israel, and I have rejected the city I chose, Jerousalem, and the house about which I said, ‘My name shall be there.’ " 23 And Pharao Nechao, king of Egypt, went up against the king of the Assyrians to the river Euphrates, and King Josias went to meet him. 24 And he sent envoys to him, saying, "What have I to do with you, king of Loudas? I have not come against you today to make war, and God has told me to hurry. Beware of the god who is with me, lest he destroy you." 25 And Josias did not turn away his face from him, but he was strengthened to fight him and did not listen to Nechao’s words through God’s mouth and went to fight in the plain of Magedon.

23 And the archers shot at King Josias. And the king said to his servants, “Take me away, because I am very much in trouble.” 24 And his servants removed him from the chariot and put him on the secondary chariot that he had and brought him to Jerusalem. And he died and was buried with his fathers. And a all Ioudas a and Jerusalem mourned for Josias. 25 And Jeremiah lamented over Josias, and all the leading men and leading women have spoken the lament over Josias until this very day. And they gave it as an ordinance for Israel, and see, it is written among the Laments. 26 And Josias’ affairs and his hope are written in the Lord’s law. 27 And his affairs, the first and the last, behold, they are written in the Book of the Kings of Israel and Ioudas.

36 And the people of the land took Ioachaz son of Josias, and anointed him and established him as king in Jerusalem in his father’s stead. 2 Ioachaz was a son of twenty-three years when he became king and reigned three months in Jerusalem. 2a And his mother’s name was Amital daughter of Lobena. 2b And he did what was evil before the Lord in all respects as his fathers had done. 2c And Pharaoh Nechao bound him in Debathla in the land of Hemath so that he would not reign in Jerusalem.

3 And the king transferred him to Egypt, and he imposed on the land a tribute of one hundred talents of silver and a talent of gold. 4 And Pharaoh Nechao appointed Josias’ son Eliakim as king of Ioudas in place of his father Josias and changed his name to Ioakim. 4b And Pharaoh Nechao took his brother Ioachaz and led him to Egypt, and he died there. 4a And they gave the gold and silver to Pharaoh. Then the land began to be subject to tribute to give the silver at the mouth of Pharaoh, and everyone according to his power demanded silver and gold from the people of the land to give to Pharaoh Nechao.

5 Ioakim was twenty-five years old when he became king and reigned eleven years in Jerusalem. And his mother’s name was Zechora daughter of Nerias of Rama. And he did what was evil before the Lord in all respects as his fathers had done. 5a In his days, Nabouchodonosor, king of Babylon, came into the land, and he was subject to him for three years, and he left him. 5b And the Lord sent upon them the Chaldeans and the robber bands of the Syrians and the robber bands of the Moabites and of the sons of Ammon and of Samaria, and they rebelled after this affair according to the Lord’s word by the hand of his servants the prophets. 5c Nevertheless, the Lord’s wrath was upon Ioudas, to remove it from before him on account of the sins of Manasses in all that he did and for the innocent blood that Ioakim shed, and he filled Jerusalem with innocent blood, and the Lord did not want to destroy them utterly. 6 And Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, came up against him and bound him in bronze fetters and led him away to Babylon. 7 And he removed part of the vessels of the Lord’s house to Babylon and placed them in his shrine in Babylon. 8 And the rest of the histories of Ioakim and all that he did, behold, is this not written in the Book of the Histories of the Days of the Kings of Ioudas? And Ioakim slept with his fathers and was buried in Ganoza with his fathers, and Iechonias his son became king in his stead.

9 Iechonias was a son of eighteen years when he became king and reigned three months and ten days in Jerusalem and did what was evil before the Lord. 10 And as the year was turning King Nabouchodonosor sent and brought him to Babylon along with the prize vessels of the Lord’s house and made his father’s brother Sedekias king over Ioudas and Jerusalem.

11 Sedekias was twenty-one years old when he became king and reigned eleven years in Jerusalem. 12 And he did what was evil before the Lord, his God, and was not moved to shame from before the prophet Jeremiah and out of the mouth of the Lord, 13 when he violated the terms with King Nabuchodonosor, to which he had made him swear by God, and he hardened his neck and steeled his heart not to return to the Lord, God of Israel. 14 And all those held in honor in Ioudas and the priests and the people of the land multiplied violating with violations of abominations of the nations, and they polluted the Lord’s house in Jerusalem.

15 And the Lord, God of their fathers, sent out by the hand of prophets, sending his messengers early on, because he was trying to spare his people and his holy precinct. 16 And they kept mocking his messengers and disregarding his words and poking fun at his prophets until the Lord’s wrath went up against his people until there was no cure.

17 And he led against them a king of the Chaldeans, and he killed their young men by sword in the house of his holy precinct, and he did not spare Sedekias, and on their young women they had no mercy, and their elderly they led away. He handled over everything into their hands. 18 And all the vessels of the house of God, large and small, and the treasures and all the treasures of the king and the nobles, all these he brought to Babylon. 19 And he set on fire the Lord’s house and broke down the wall of Jerusalem, and its bastions he burned with fire and every handsomest vessel to annihilation. 20 And he deported the remaining people to Babylon, and they were slaves to him and to his sons until the reign of the Medes in order to fulfill the Lord’s word by the mouth of Jeremiah until the land received its sabbaths to sabbatize. All the days of its desolation it sabbatized until the fulfillment of seventy years.

22 In the first year of Cyrus, king of the Persians, after the fulfillment of the Lord’s dictum through the mouth of Jeremiah, the Lord stirred up the spirit of Cyrus, king of the Persians, and he announced to proclaim in all his kingdom, in writing, saying, 23 “This is what Cyrus, king of the Persians says: The Lord, the god of the sky, has given me all the kingdoms of the earth, and it is he who has commanded me to build him a house in Jerusalem, which is in Judea. Who of you is from all his people? His god shall be with him, and let him go up.”

EDITED OF THE GREEK TEXT

The NETS translation of 1 Esdras is based on the standard critical edition prepared by Robert Hanhart (Septuaginta: Vetus Testamentum Graecum Auctoritate Academiae Scientiarum Gottingensis editum VIII.1: Esdræ liber I [Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1974]).

OVERVIEW OF THE BOOK

This book is known as Esdræ A' in the Greek tradition and 1 Esdræ in English translations. 1 Esdræ and 2 Esdræ (Esdræ B') are one pair of double traditions found in Septuagint collections (see as well the double traditions of Daniel and Esther). They represent material from the Hebrew-Aramaic 2 Chronicles (2 Supplements), Ezra (2 Esdræ 1–10), and Nehemiah (2 Esdræ 11–23); in addition, in 1 Esdræ there is a story of three youths who served as bodyguards for King Darius of Persia.

The general relationship of content among the various versions is as follows:

The relationship of this Greek book to the Hebrew-Aramaic biblical tradition, from a source-critical point of view, is unclear. There are two main positions: 1) that the book represents an earlier form of the biblical accounts, although the present form is thought to be only a portion of that larger work;¹ and 2) that the book is a composition subsequent to, and depending upon, the biblical books.²

In this book, Zorobabel (Zerubbabel) plays a more prominent role, being the winner of the wisdom contest in the story of the three young men (4.13), and appearing where he does not in the MT version (6.17 // Ezra 5.14; 6.26b // Ezra 6.7; 6.28b // Ezra 6.9a). Neemias (Nehemiah), however, is mentioned only in 5.8 (Ezra 2.2) and 5.40 (Ezra 2.63), the latter, significantly, being an addition compared to the Hebrew.

Another emphasis is the temple, the culmination of the restoration program (walls, altar, temple), and items and persons associated with it being made more prominent and distinct through the use of the ἱερο- stem: the temple (ἱερόν “temple” 1.2 et passim), its paraphernalia and practices (ἱερός “holy, sacred” 1.39 et passim; ἄνιψιόν “to consecrate, devote” 9.4), priests and priestly figures like the priest with the Urim and Thummim and Ezra, (ἱερατικός “priestly” 4.54; 5.44; ἱερεύς “priest” 1.2 et passim; ἱεροσύνη “priesthood” 5.38; ἀρχιερεύς “high priest” 5.40 et passim) and various temple officials (ἱερόδουλος “temple-slave” 1.3 et passim; ἱεροστάτης “temple official” 7.2; ἱεροψάλτης “temple-musician” 1.15 et passim).

General Character

It is unclear whether this book is strictly the translation of a non-MT Hebrew-Aramaic text or loosely a composition in Greek that made use of 2 Chronicles, Ezra and Nehemiah or Greek translations of those works. It is clear that the work contains a few characteristics similar to those found in other translations. However, unlike works that are clearly translations, the Greek of this book is of a good quality. Thus, if it is a translation, it is of much freer quality than the counterparts with parallel material (2 Supplements and 2 Esdras). There are few signs of literalism, due to the translator's/composer's contextualization of lexical choices and use of more normal Greek structures. Some features that suggest a Semitic source are:

Pleonasm

There are only a few examples of superfluous pronouns: 2.9 (“that Nabouchodonosor had removed . . . and stored them”; ἀμην τὸν Βασιλέα τοῦ Βασιλείου . . . καὶ ἀπερίστατο αὐτῶ; Ezr 1.7); 3.5 (“whosoever his statement seems wiser”, καὶ οὐ ἄν ἀναφέρῃ τὸ ὅμοιο ὑπομνήματα; Ezr 1.7); 4.63 (“the temple where his name is named on it”; καὶ τὸ ἱερόν, οὐ ωμομάυσῃ τὸ ὄνομα αὐτοῦ ἑπτά αὐτῶ; Ezr 6.12); 6.32 (“the Lord, whose his name is there called upon”; καὶ ο κύριος οὐ τὸ ὄνομα αὐτοῦ ἐπικελήθη ἐκεί; Ezr 6.12).

Hebraisms

There is greater than normal occurrence of the conjunction καὶ, suggesting Semitic influence of the conjunction. The phrase καὶ ἐγένετο “and it happened,” for Hebrew הvrolet, is found only one time (9.3), but in neither case is the comparable construction in the source. At 8.38 we find ἴδου, “behold” (Ezr 9.15b, θάνατον, “Behold, us!”), but forms of ἴδον, “Behold!” occur 3 additional times in the parallel materials in Ezra-Nehemiah (2 Chronicles 35.25 // 1.30; 35.27 // 1.31; 36.8 // 1.40), but they are represented only here in 1 Esdras.

Dependence

Although the vocabulary of 1 Esdras is distinct from other translations, one phrase stands out as dependent upon existing tradition: ἕως ἅμα τὴν ἀρχήν ἐνθέδομεν τὸν δηλωσιν καὶ τὴν ἀλήθειαν “until a high priest should arise wearing Explanation and Truth,” (5.40) for γινόμενος ἐνθέδομεν τὸν δήλωσιν καὶ τὴν ἀλήθειαν (Ezr 2.63), “until there should be a priest to consult Urim and Thummim” (NRSV). The 1 Esdras translation is in keeping with those in the LXX: Ex 28.30 [MT 26]; Leu 8.8; Deut 33.8.

The NETS Translation of 1 Esdras

As a matter of convenience this translation began with the NRSV, which was modified as necessary to fit this project. While the NRSV seeks to smooth out problematic constructions, uncertainties, etc., NETS seeks to represent the Greek as much as possible. Thus, alterations were made to the NRSV to bring it into line with Hanhart’s edition. As well, for vocabulary and style, an attempt was made to keep consistency with the rest of NETS and particularly with 2 Esdras: as much as possible, words from the same stem, used to translate the same material from Ezra-Nehemiah, are represented by words from the same stem in English in both 1 and 2 Esdras.

Editorial Policy

Versification differs among Greek editions of 1 Esdras and among the translations, and all have differences from the MT. In this translation, I have followed the versification of the critical edition.

Bibliographical Note

The translation on which this is based is the NRSV. I also consulted Jacob M. Myers, I and II Esdras: Introduction, Translation and Commentary (AB 42; Garden City, NY: Doubleday, 1974).

3 See Talshir, 1 Esdras, 181–268 for a detailed analysis of the characteristics of the translation.
And Iosias celebrated the pascha to his Lord in Ierousalem, and he sacrificed the pascha on the fourteenth day of the first month, after he had arranged the priests by their daily duties, robed, in the temple of the Lord. And he told the Leuites, temple-slaves of Israel, that they should sanctify themselves to the Lord for the task of putting the holy ark of the Lord in the house that Salomon the king, the son of Dauid, had built, 4 "You need no longer carry it on your shoulders. And now, serve the Lord, your God, and attend to his nation Israel, and prepare yourselves by your paternal families and tribes, according to the writing of Dauid, king of Israel, and according to the magnificence of his son Salomon. And having stationed yourselves in the temple by the paternal groupings of you, the Leuites, who stand before your kindred, sons of Israel, in order, sacrifice the pascha, and prepare the sacrifices for your kindred. And keep the pascha according to the ordinance of the Lord that was given to Moyses."

To the people who were found there, Iosias presented a gift of thirty thousand lambs and kids and three thousand calves; these were given, according to promise, from the king's possessions to the people and the priests and Leuites. Chelkias and Zacharias and Eseylos, the chief officers of the temple, gave the priests two thousand six hundred sheep, three hundred calves, for the pascha. And Iechonias and Samaias and his brother Nathanael and Hasabias and Ochielos and Ioram, officers of thousands, gave the Leuites five thousand sheep, seven hundred calves, for the pascha.

And when these things were done in proper order, the priests and the Leuites, holding the unleavened bread, stood before the people by tribe and by groupings of fathers to offer to the Lord in accordance with what is written in the book of Moyses, and so they did in the morning. And they roasted the pascha with fire, as required, and they boiled the sacrifices in bronze pots and cauldrons, with a pleasing odor, and carried them to all that were from the people. Now, after this they prepared both for themselves and for their kindred the priests, sons of Aaron. For the priests were offering the fat until quite late, and the Leuites prepared it for themselves and for their kindred the priests, sons of Aaron. And the temple-musicians, sons of Asaph, were in their order according to what had been arranged by Dauid—and Asaph and Zacharias and Eddinous, the king's representatives. And the porters were at each gateway. It was not possible that anyone omit his own daily service, for their kindred, the Leuites, made preparations for them.

And the things that had to do with the sacrifice of the Lord were accomplished in that day: that the pascha was celebrated and that the sacrifices were offered on the altar of the Lord according to the injunction of King Iosias. And the sons of Israel who were found at that time celebrated the pascha and the feast of unleavened bread for seven days. And no pascha like it had been celebrated in Israel since the times of Samouel the prophet, and none of the kings of Israel had celebrated such a pascha as Iosias celebrated, and the priests and the Leuites and the Judeans and all of Israel, who were found in their dwelling place, in Ierousalem. This pascha was celebrated in the eighteenth year when Iosias reigned. And the deeds of Iosias, done with his heart full of piety, were deemed right in the sight of his Lord. Now, also the matters of his reign in previous times have been recorded: about those who sinned and those who acted impiously toward the Lord, more than any nation and kingdom, and how they conspicuously grieved him—and the words of the Lord rose up against Israel.

And after all this activity of Iosias, it happened that Pharaoh, king of Egypt, came to incite war at Charkamys on the Euphrates, and Iosias went out to confront him. And the king of Egypt sent a dispatch to him, saying, "What issue do I and you have, O king of Judea? I have not been sent out against you by the Lord God, for my war is at the Euphrates. Now then, the Lord is with me! Also, the Lord with me is urging me on! Stand aside, and do not oppose the Lord."

And Iosias did not turn himself away to his chariot, but he undertook to fight with him, not heeding the words of Ieremias the prophet from the mouth of the Lord. On the contrary, he joined battle with him in the plain of Maggeddo, and the rulers came down against King Iosias. And the king said to his servants, "Take me away from the fight, for I have become very weak." And his servants immediately took him from the line of battle, and he got into his secondary chariot. And after he was brought back to Ierousalem, he departed this life and was buried in his ancestral tomb.

In the whole of Judea they mourned for Iosias. And Ieremias the prophet lamented for Iosias. And the principal men, together with women, lament him to this day. And this has been handed on to the whole race of Israel always to do. These things stand inscribed in the document of the events being recorded about the kings of Judea. And every single thing done of the activity of Iosias and of his splendor and of his understanding of the law of the Lord, both which were done by him before and now, have been recorded in the book of the kings of Israel and loudas.

And when the people of the nation had taken Iechonias son of Iosias, they appointed him king in place of Iosias his father, when he was twenty-three years old. And he reigned in loudas for three months. And the king of Egypt deposed him from reigning in Ierousalem, and fined the nation one hundred talents of silver and one talent of gold. And the king of Egypt appointed his brother, King Ioakeim, king of Judea and Ierousalem. And Ioakeim incarcerated the nobles. But he seized his brother Zarios and brought him back from Egypt.

Now Ioakeim was twenty-five years old when he began to reign in Judea and Ierousalem; he did what was evil in the sight of the Lord.
38 Now Nabouchodonosor, the king of Babylon, came up against him, and he bound him with a bronze fetter and took him away to Babylon. 39 Nabouchodonosor also took some sacred vessels of the Lord and carried them away; he deposited them in his shrine in Babylon. 40 And the things recorded, about him and his uncleanness and impiety, stand inscribed in the document of the times of the kings.

41 And his son Ioakeim became king in his place, for when he was appointed king, he was eighteen years old. 42 Now he reigned in Jerusalem for three months and ten days, and he did what was evil in the sight of the Lord. 43 And a year later Nabouchodonosor sent and removed him to Babylon, together with the sacred vessels of the Lord. 44 And he appointed Sedekias king of Judea and Jerusalem, when Sedekias was twenty-one years old.

Now he reigned eleven years. 45 And he did what was evil in the sight of the Lord and felt no hesitation arising from the words spoken by Ieremias the prophet from the mouth of the Lord. 46 And although he had been made to swear, by King Nabouchodonosor, by the name of the Lord, he broke his oath, rebelled and, having hardened his neck and his heart, he transgressed the precepts of his God, which is in Jerusalem. 47 Now also the leaders of the people and of the priests committed many acts of impiety and lawlessness, more than all the unclean deeds of all the nations, and they defiled the temple of the Lord that had been sanctified in Jerusalem. 48 And the God of their fathers sent word through his messenger to call them back, because he tried to spare them and his covert. 49 But they mocked at his messengers, and on the day the Lord spoke, they were scoffing at his prophets until in his anger against his nation, on account of their impious acts, he ordered that the kings of the Chaldeans go up against them. 50 These killed their young men by sword around about their holy temple, and they did not spare young man or young woman and old man and younger man, but all he handed over into their hands. 51 And they took away all the sacred vessels of the Lord, great and small, the treasure chests of the Lord and the royal stores and carried them off to Babylon. 52 And they set fire to the house of the Lord, and they wrecked the walls of Jerusalem and burned its towers with fire. 53 And they finished rendering useless all its glorious features. And the survivors he led away by sword to Babylon. 54 And they were servants to him and to his sons until the Persians reigned, in fulfilment of the word of the Lord by the mouth of Ieremias, 55 "Until the land takes pleasure in its sabbaths, it shall sabbatize all the time of its desolation until the completion of seventy years."

2 In the first year that Cyrus was reigning the Persians, with a view to fulfilment of a word of the Lord by Ieremias’ mouth, 2 the Lord stirred the spirit of Cyrus, king of the Persians, and he proclaimed in his whole kingdom and at the same time in written form, 3 "This is what Cyrus, the king of the Persians, says: The Lord of Israel, Lord the Most High, has appointed me king of the world, 4 and he indicated to me that I should build him a house in Jerusalem in Judea. 5 If anyone of you, therefore, is of his nation, let his Lord be with him, and when they have gone up to Jerusalem, which is in Judea, let him build the house of the Lord of Israel. 6 This is the Lord who encamps in Jerusalem. 7 And there arose the chiefs of the paternal families of the tribe of Lousad and Beniamin and the priests and the Leuites and all whose spirit the Lord had stirred to go up to build the house for the Lord, which is in Jerusalem, 8 and the people in their surrounding area, and they helped them with everything, with silver and gold, horses and livestock and with the greatest number of vows from many whose mind was stirred.

9 And King Cyrus brought out the sacred vessels of the Lord that Nabouchodonosor had removed from Jerusalem and stored them in his own idol temple. 10 Now when Cyrus, the king of the Persians, had brought them out, he gave them over to Mithridates, his own treasurer, 11 and they were handed over by him to Sanabassaros, administrator of Judea. 12 Now the number of these was: gold libation bowls, one thousand; silver libation bowls, one thousand; silver censers, twenty-nine; gold saucers, thirty; silver, two thousand four hundred ten; and other vessels, one thousand. 13 Now all the vessels were recovered, gold and silver: five thousand four hundred sixty-nine. 14 Now they were carried back by Sanabassaros, along with the people of the captivity, from Babylon to Jerusalem.

15 Now in the times under Artaxerxes, the king of the Persians, Beslemos and Mithridates and Tabellios and Raoumos and Beeletemos and Samsaio the scribe and the rest of those associated with them but living in Samaria and the other places wrote out the following letter to him against those who were living in Judea and Jerusalem, 16 "To King Artaxerxes, Sir, your servants Raoumos the one for events and Samsaio the scribe and the rest of their council and the judges who are in Coele-Syria and Phoenicia. 17 And now, let it be known to the lord king that, when Judeans came up from you to us, having come to Jerusalem, they are building the rebellious and wicked city, repairing both its market places and the walls, and are laying the foundations for a shrine. 18 So if this city is built and the walls are completed, not only will they not submit to paying tribute, but they will also resist kings. And since the work on the shrine is in progress, we assume it best not to overlook such a matter but to address our lord king in order that, if it seems good to you, a search may be made in the books from your fathers. 19 And you will find in the records what has been written about them and will learn that that city was rebellious, troubling both kings and cities, and that the Judeans were rebels and set up blockades in it from of old, for which reason this city was also laid waste. 20Therefore we are now pointing out to you, Lord King, that if this city is built and its walls rise up, you will no longer have a way down to Coele-Syria and Phoenicia."

21Then the king wrote back the following to Raoumos the recorder of events and to Beelteemos and Samsaio the scribe and to the rest associated with them and living in Samaria and Syria and Phoenicia,

22"I read the letter that you have sent to me. I therefore ordered that a search be made, and it was found that that city from of old has been opposing kings and that the people in it perpetrate rebellions and wars and that strong and cruel kings used to be masters in Ierusalem and were extracting tribute from Coele-Syria and Phoenicia. 23and that the people in it are not to build the city and that you take care that nothing more be done and that such wicked proceedings go no further so as to annoy kings."

24Now, therefore, I have ordered that you prevent those people from building the city and that you write down what you find. 25And when what was written by King Artaxerxes had been read, Raoumos and Samsaio the scribe and those associated with them marched in haste to Ierusalem with cavalry and a throng of scribes and those associated with them and went into the temple and took the records and the contracts that had been written there by decree of the kings and the covenants that had been written about them and would learn that that city is rebellious, troubling both kings and cities, and that the Judeans are rebels and set up blockades in it from of old, for which reason this city was also laid waste. 20Therefore we are now pointing out to you, Lord King, that if this city is built and its walls rise up, you will no longer have a way down to Coele-Syria and Phoenicia."

3And King Darius gave a great banquet for all who were under him and for all his homebred and for all the nobles of Media and of Persia and for all the satraps and generals and district governors that were under him in the hundred twenty-seven satrapies from India to Ethiopia. 3And they ate and drank, and when they were satisfied, they went away, but Darius the king went to his bedroom and went to sleep but woke up again.

4Then the three young men, the bodyguards, who kept guard over the person of the king, said one to another, 5"Let us state, each of us, one thing which will prove superior, and whosoever his statement seems wiser than the other—Darius the king will give him grand gifts and great prizes of victory and that he be clothed in purple and drink from a golden cup and sleep on gold and have a chariot with a gold studded bridle and a turban of fine linen and a torque around his neck. 7And because of his wisdom, he shall take his seat next to Darius and shall be called Kinsman of Darius."

8And then they wrote, each his own statement, sealed it and put it under the pillow of Darius the king. And they said, 9"When the king gets up, they will give him what is written, and whomever the king picks—and the three nobles of Persia—because his statement is wisest, to him the victory shall be given, as it stands written." 10The first wrote, "Wine proves superior." 11The second wrote, "The king proves superior." 12The third wrote, "Women prove superior, but above all things truth is victorious."

13And when the king awoke, they took what was written and gave it to him, and he read. 14And he sent and summoned all the nobles of Persia and of Media and satraps and generals and district governors and consuls, and he took his seat in the council chamber, and what was written was read in their presence. 15And he said, "Call the young men, and they themselves shall explain their statements." And they were summoned and came in. 16And they said to him, "Tell us about what you have written."

And the first, who had spoken of the strength of wine, began and spoke thus. 17"O Gentlemen, how does wine prove superior? It leads astray the thoughts of all men who drink it. It makes equal the thoughts of both the king and the orphan, of both the domestic and the free, of both the poor and the rich. 19And it turns every thought to feasting and mirth and does not remember any sorrow or any obligation. 20And it makes all hearts rich and does not remember king or satrap and makes everyone talk in talents. 21And when people drink, they do not remember to be friendly with friends and kindred, and before long they draw daggers. 22And when they recover from the wine, they do not remember what they did. 23O Gentlemen, does not wine prove superior, since it forces people to behave thus?" And when he had said this, he fell silent.

4And the second, who had spoken of the strength of the king, began to speak. 2"O Gentlemen, do not humans prove superior, since they rule over land and sea and all that is in them? 3But the king proves superior and is lord of all and their master, and whatever he says to them they heed. 4If he tells them to make war one against the other, they do it, and if he sends them out against enemies, they proceed and conquer mountains and walls and towers. 5They murder and are murdered and do not transgress the king's bidding, and if they are victorious, they bring everything to the king—whatever spoil they take and everything else. 6And as many as do not serve in the army or go to war, they instead till the soil; in turn, whenever they sow and reap, they send some to the king, and one compels the other to bring levies to the king. 7And he is one single man! If he tells them to kill, they kill. He tells them to release, they release; 8he tells them to smite, they strike; he tells them to lay waste, they lay waste; he tells them to build, they build; 9he tells them to cut down, they cut down; he tells them to plant, they plant. 10And all his people and his forces heed him. Furthermore, he himself reclines; he eats and drinks and sleeps, but they keep watch all around him, and no one may go away and tend to his own affairs, nor do they disobey him. 12O Gentlemen, how does not the king prove superior, since he is to be obeyed in this way?" And he fell silent.

13 Now the third, who had spoken of women and truth (he was Zorobabel), began to speak.

14 "Gentlemen, is not the king great, are not men many, and does not wine prove superior? Who is it, then, that is master over them, or who is lord over them? Is it not women? 15 Women give birth to the king and to all people that are lord over sea and land. 16 And from them they were born, and it is they that brought up those who plant the vineyards from which comes the wine. 17 And it is they that make men’s robes, and it is they that bring men glory, and men cannot exist apart from women. 18 Now if men gather gold and silver or any beautiful thing, and they see one woman lovely in appearance and beauty, 19 they then let all those things go and gape at her and with open mouths stare at her, and all choose her rather than gold or silver or any beautiful thing. 20 A man leaves his own father, who brought him up, and his own country and clings to his own wife. 21 And with his wife he releases his soul and neither result you must realize that women are lords over all his works quake and tremble, and with him there is nothing unrighteous. 37 Wine is unrighteous; the king is unrighteous; women are unrighteous; all sons of men are unrighteous, and all their works are unrighteous—all such things. And there is no truth in them, and in their injustice they will perish. 38 But truth endures and is strong forever and lives and prevails forever and ever. 39 And with it there is no partiality or preference, but it does what is righteous instead of anything that is unrighteous or wicked. And all approve her deeds, 40 and there is nothing unrighteous in her judgment. And to her belongs the strength and the kingship and the authority and the majesty of all the ages. Blessed be the God of truth!" 41 And he stopped speaking, and all the people then shouted, "Great is truth, and it proves superior!"

42 Then the king said to him, "Request what you want in addition to what is written, and we will give it to you, for you have been found to be the wisest. And you shall sit next to me and be called my Kinsman." 43 Then he said to the king, "Remember the vow that you made on the day you received your kingship to build Jerousalem and to send back all the vessels that had been taken from Jerousalem, which Cyrus set apart when he vowed to destroy Babylon and vowed to send them back there. 45 You also vowed to build the shrine, which the Idumeans burned when Judah was laid waste by the Chaldeans. 46 And now, O Lord King, this is what I ask of you and what I request of you, and this is greatness that is yours. I pray, therefore, that you fulfill the vow that you vowed with your mouth to do for the king of heaven."

47 Then Darius the king got up and kissed him and wrote letters for him to all the stewards and district governors and generals and satraps, that they should give safe conduct to him and all who were going up with him to build Jerousalem. 48 He also wrote letters to all the district governors in Coele-Syria and Phoenicia and to those in Lebanon, to convey cedar timber from Lebanon to Jerousalem, and that they should build the city with him. 49 He also wrote for all the Judeans who were going from his kingdom to Judea, in the interest of their freedom, that no officer or satrap or district governor or steward should assail their doors and that all the country they would seize should be theirs without tribute and that the Idumeans should give up the villages of the Judeans that they held and that twenty talents a year should be given for the building of the temple until it was built and an additional ten talents a year for whole burnt offerings to be offered on the altar every day, in accordance with the commandment they have, to offer seventeen, and that all who would come from Babylonia to found the city should have their freedom, both they and their children and all the priests who would come. 54 Now, he also stipulated the expense and the priestly vestment, in what way they would serve in it. 55 He also stipulated that they should give the Levites the expense until the day when the house..."
would be finished and Jerusalem built. 56 He also stipulated that they give allotments of land and wages to all who would guard the city. 57 He also sent back from Babylon all the vessels that Cyrus had set apart, and everything that Cyrus said that he would do he too instructed to be done and to be sent back to Jerusalem.

58 And when the young man went out, he lifted up his face toward heaven to Jerusalem and blessed the king of heaven, saying, 59 “From you comes victory, and from you comes wisdom, and yours is the glory. And I am your domestic. 60 Blessed are you, who have given me wisdom, and you I acknowledge, O Master of our fathers.”

61 And he took the letters and departed, and he went to Babylon and told all his kindred. 62 And they blessed the God of their fathers, because he had given them permission and release 63 to go up and build Jerusalem and the temple where his name is named on it, and with music and rejoicing they drank hard for seven days.

5 Now, after these things the leaders of the house of the paternal families and their wives and sons and daughters and their male and female servants and their livestock were chosen to go up by their tribes. 2 And Darius sent along with them a thousand cavalry until they would restore them to Jerusalem in peace, and with the music of drums and flutes. 3 And all their kindred were making merry, and he made them go up along with them.

4 And these are the names of the men who went up, by their paternal families for the tribes, over their groups: 5 the priests, sons of Phinees son of Aaron: Iesous the son of Iosedek the son of Sara-ias and Ioakeim the son of Zorobabel the son of Salathiel, of the house of David, of the lineage of Phares and of the tribe of Ioudas, 6 who spoke wise words before Darius, the king of the Persians, in the second year of his reign, in the month of Nisan, the first month.

7 Now, the following are those from Judea who went up out of the captivity in exile, whom Nabou-chodonosor, the king of Babylon, had deported to Babylon, 8 and each returned to Jerusalem and the rest of Judea, to his own town, those who came with their leaders Zorobabel and Iesous, Neemias, Zaraias, Resaias, Enenios, Mardochaia, Benasoros, Aspharasos, Borolias, Roimos and Baana.

9 The number of those from the nation and their leaders: sons of Phoros, two thousand one hundred seventy-two; sons of Saphat, four hundred seventy-two; 10 sons of Aree, seven hundred fifty-six; 11 sons of Phaathmob, with respect to the sons of Iesous and Ioab, two thousand eight hundred twelve; 12 sons of Olamos, one thousand two hundred fifty-four; sons of Bani, six hundred forty-eight; sons of Bena, six hundred twenty-three; sons of Asgad, three thousand three hundred twenty-two; sons of Adonikam, six hundred sixty-seven; sons of Bagoi, two thousand sixty-six; sons of Adinos, four hundred fifty-four; 13 sons of Ater son of Hezekiahs, ninety-two; sons of Kilan and Asetas, sixty-seven; sons of Azouros, four hundred thirty-two; 16 sons of Hannias, one hundred one; sons of Arom; sons of Bassai, three hundred twenty-three; sons of Hariphos, one hundred twelve; 17 sons of Baiteros, three thousand five; sons from Baithlomon, one hundred twenty-three. 18 Those from Netebas, fifty-five; those from Enatos, one hundred fifty-eight; those from Baitalmon, forty-two; 19 those from Kariahiairos, twenty-five; those from Kapiras and Berot, seven hundred forty-three.

20 The Chadiias and Hammidians, four hundred twenty-two; those from Kiramas and Gabbes, six hundred twenty-one; 21 those from Makalon, one hundred twenty-two; those from Baitalmon, sixty-five; 22 sons of the other Kalamo and Onous, seven hundred twenty-five; sons of Ierechos, three hundred forty-five; 23 sons of Sanaas, three thousand three hundred thirty.

24 The priests: sons of leddos the son of Iesous, with reference to the sons of Anasib, nine hundred seventy-two; sons of Emmeros, one thousand and fifty-two; 25 sons of Phassouras, one thousand two hundred forty-seven; sons of Charme, one thousand seventeen.

26 Now, the Leuites: sons of Iesous and Kad-mielos and Bannos and Houdias, seventy-four. 27 The temple-musicians: sons of Asaph, one hundred forty-eight. 28 The porters: sons of Saloum, sons of Atar, sons of Tolman, sons of Akoub, sons of Hateta, sons of Sobi, in all one hundred thirty-nine.

35 All the temple-slaves and the sons of Salomon’s servants were three hundred seventy-two.

36 And the following are those who came up from Thermeelee and Thelersas with Charaath leading them: Adan and Amar—37 and they could not prove by their paternal families or generations how they were from Israel—sons of Dalan the son of Touban, sons of Nekodan, six hundred fifty-two.

38 Also, from the priests those who had assumed the priesthood but were not found: sons of Hobia, sons of Hakkos and the sons of Iodous who took Augia to wife, one of the daughters of Pharzellaias, and was called by his name. 39 And when their genealogical entry was sought in the register and was not found, they were excluded from serving as priests, 40 and Neemias and Hattarias told them that they were not to share in the holy things until a high priest should arise wearing Explanation and Truth.

41 Now, their total was: of Israel, twelve or more years of age, besides male and female servants, forty-two thousand three hundred sixty; their male and female servants were seven thousand three hundred thirty-seven; there were two hundred forty-five harpists and harp singers. 42 There were four hundred thirty-five camels and seven thousand thirty-six horses, two hundred forty-five mules and five thousand five hundred twenty-five beasts of burden.

43 And some of those who led by paternal families, when they arrived at the temple of God that is in Jerusalem, vowed that they would erect the altar on its site according to their power 44 and that they would give to the temple treasury for the work a thousand minas of gold and five thousand minas of silver and one hundred priests’ vestments.

45 And the priests and the Levites and those who were from his people were settled in Jerusalem and its vicinity, and the temple-musicians and the porters and all Israel were in their villages.

46 Now, when the seventh month came and the sons of Israel were all in their own homes, they gathered with a single purpose in the open area of the first eastward facing gateway. 47 And Iesous stood, along with his sons and kindred, the sons of Iosedek and their kindred, the Leuitical priests and of those who presided over the paternal families, the old men who had seen the house before this one, came to the building of this one with outcries and loud weeping, 58 and the nations that were in the land were hostile to them and were stronger than they, and they offered sacrifices at the proper time and whole burnt offerings to the Lord, God of Israel, so that they could offer whole burnt offerings upon it, following what was prescribed in the book of Moyses the man of God. 49 And some from the other nations of the land joined them. And they erected the altar in their place, because all the nations that were in the land were hostile to them and were stronger than they, and they offered sacrifices at the proper time and whole burnt offerings to the Lord in the morning and late afternoon. 50 They celebrated the feast of tent pitching, as it is ordered in the law, and sacrifices every day, as was proper, 51 and thereafter the perpetual offerings and sacrifices on sabbaths and new moons and all the consecrated feasts. 52 And as many as had made a vow to God began to offer sacrifices to God from the new moon of the seventh month, and the shrine of God had not yet been built.

53 And they gave money to the masons and carpenters and food and drink and carts to the Sidonians and the Tyrians, to deliver cedar logs from Lebanon, to convey them in rafts to the harbor of Joppe, according to the written ordinance that they had from Cyrus, the Persians’ king.

54 And in the second year after his arrival at the temple of God in Jerusalem, during the second month, Zorobabel the son of Salathiel and Iesous the son of Iosedek and their kindred, the Leuitical priests, and all who had arrived at Jerusalem from the captivity made a beginning and laid the foundation of the shrine of God on the new moon of the second month in the second year of their coming to Judea and Jerusalem. 55 And they appointed the Levites who were twenty or more years of age to have charge of the work of the Lord. And Iesous stood, along with his sons and kindred, both Kadmiel his brother and the sons of Iesous Emadaboun and the sons of Ioda son of Iliadoun with their sons and kindred, all the Levites, as taskmasters functioning with a single purpose for the work on the house of the Lord.

And the builders built the shrine of the Lord, 57 and the priests stood in their vestments with musical instruments and trumpets, and the Levites, sons of Asaph, holding cymbals, were singing hymns to the Lord and blessing according to David, the king of Israel, 58 and they intoned through hymns, acknowledging the Lord, because his goodness and his glory are forever in all Israel.

59 And all the people trumpeted and shouted with a loud voice, singing hymns to the Lord for the erection of the house of the Lord. 60 And some of the Leuitical priests and of those who presided over their paternal families, the old men who had seen the house before this one, came to the building of this one with outcries and loud weeping, 61 and many people with trumpets and joy with a loud sound, 62 so that the people could not hear the trumpets because of the people’s weeping. For it was the crowd that was trumpeting so loudly that they were heard far away.

63 And when the enemies of the tribe of Ioudas and Benjamin heard it, they came to learn what the sound of trumpets meant. 64 And they learned that those who were from the captivity were building the shrine for the Lord, God of Israel. 65 And when they approached Zorobabel and Iesous and the leaders of the paternal families they said to them, “We will build along with you. 66 For, like you, we hear your Lord, and we have been making offerings to him ever since the days of Asbasareth, the king of the Assyrians, who transferred us to here.” 67 And Zorobabel and Iesous and the leaders of the paternal families of Israel said to them, “You have nothing to do with us in building the house for the Lord, our God, 68 for we alone will build it for the Lord of Israel, following what Cyrus, the king of the Persians, has ordered us.” 69 But the nations of the land, by falling asleep over those in Judea and laying siege to them, con-
And by bringing about plots and demagoguery and uprisings, they prevented the completion of the building as long as King Cyrus lived. And they were kept from building for two years until the reign of Darius.

6 Now in the second year of the reign of Darius, the prophets Haggai and Zachariah the son of Eddo prophesied to the Judeans who were in Judea and Jerusalem, in the name of the Lord, God of Israel, who is over them. 2Then Zorobabel the son of Salathiel and Iesous the son of Iosedek arose and began to build the house of the Lord that is in Jerusalem, the prophets of the Lord joining in and helping them.

3 At the same time, there came to them Sisinnias, the governor of Syria and Phoenicia, and Sathrabouzanes and their associates, and they said to them, 4"By whose order to you are you building this house and this roof and are finishing all the other things? And who are the builders that are finishing these things?" 5And the elders of the Judeans had favor with the captives, due to consideration from the Lord, 6and they were not prevented from building until Darius would be notified about them and his orders be issued.

7 A copy of a letter Sisinnias, the governor of Syria and Phoenicia—and Sathrabouzanes and their associate leaders in Syria and Phoenicia—wrote to Darius and sent,

"To King Darius, greetings! 8Let it be fully known to our lord the king that, when we arrived in the region of Judea and entered the city of Jerusalem, we found the elders of the Judeans of the captivity building in the city of Jerusalem a great new house for the Lord, using smoothed stones with costly timbers in the walls, 9and that those projects are proceeding with speed and that the work is going well in their hands and that they are being completed with all splendor and care. 10Then we inquired of these elders, saying, 'By whose orders are you building this house and laying the foundations of these projects?' 11So, in order that we might inform you and write you about who the individuals are that lead them, we questioned them and asked them for the list of the names of the proponents. 12But they answered us, 'We are the servants of the Lord who created heaven and earth. 13And the house had been built rather many years ago by a great and strong king of Israel, and it was completed. 14And when our fathers sinned against the heavenly Lord of Israel, provoking him, he gave them into the hands of Nabouchodonosor, king of Babylon, king of the Chaldeans. 15They, having pulled it down, both burned the house and carried off the people captive to Babylon. 16But in the first year that Cyrus reigned over the country of Babylon, King Cyrus wrote that they could build this house. 17And the sacred vessels of gold and silver, which Nabuchodonosor had taken out of the house in Jerusalem and stored in his own shrine, these Cyrus the king took out again from the shrine in Babylon, and they were given to Zorobabel and Sanabassaros the governor. 18And he ordered him to return all these vessels and put them in the shrine in Jerusalem, and that this shrine of the Lord should be built on its site. 19Then when this Sanabassaros arrived, he put in the foundations of the house of the Lord that is in Jerusalem, and although it has been in the process of construction from that time until now, it has not reached completion.' 20Now therefore, O King, if it is judged right, let there be a search in our lord king's royal archives in Babylon, 21and if it is found that the building of the house of the Lord, which is in Jerusalem, was done with the consent of Cyrus the king and if it be judged right by our lord king, let him give us directions about these things."

22 Then King Darius ordered that search be made in the royal archives that were stored in Babylon. And in Ecbatana, the bastion that is in the country of Media, one volume was found in which the following was recorded, 23"The first year of the reign of Cyrus: King Cyrus ordered that the house of the Lord that is in Jerusalem, where they make offerings with perpetual fire, be built; 24its height is to be sixty cubits and its width sixty cubits, with three courses of smoothed stones and one course of new native timber, and the cost to be paid from the house of Cyrus the king. 25And that the sacred vessels of the house of the Lord, both of gold and of silver, which Nabuchodonosor took out of the house in Jerusalem and carried away to Babylon, should be restored to the house in Jerusalem where they used to be in order that they be placed there."

26 Now, he ordered Sisinnias, the governor of Syria and Phoenicia, and Sathrabouzanes and their associates and those who were appointed as leaders in Syria and Phoenicia to take care to keep away from the place and to permit Zorobabel the servant of the Lord and governor of Judea and the elders of the Judeans to build that house of the Lord at the site. 27And I have also instructed that they build it completely and that they watch carefully that they work closely with those who have returned from the captivity of Judea until the house of the Lord be finished 28and that from the tribute of Coele-Syria and Phoenicia a portion be scrupulously given to these people, to Zorobabel the governor, for sacrifices to the Lord, for bulls and rams and lambs, 29and likewise also wheat and salt and wine and oil, perpetually, on a yearly basis, without quibbling, for daily use as the priests in Jerusalem may indicate, 30in order that libations may be offered to the Most High God for the king and his servants, and they might pray for their life, 31and I order that, if any should transgress or even not act on any of the things herein said and written, a beam should be taken out of their own house, and they should be hanged upon it, and their property be forfeited to the crown.

32 "For the same reasons, also, may the Lord, whose his name is there called upon, destroy any king and nation that shall stretch out its hand to hinder or damage that house of the Lord that is in Ierousalem.

33 “I, King Darius, have decreed that it be done with all diligence as here prescribed.”

Then Sisinnes, the governor of Coele-Syria and Phoenicia, and Sathrabouzanes and their associates, in compliance with the orders given by King Darius, supervised the sacred work with very great care, assisting the elders of the Judeans and the temple officials. And the sacred work prospered while the prophets Haggaios and Zacharias were prophesying. And they completed it by the sixth year of Darius, the king of the Persians, due to the ordinance of the Lord, God of Israel, and with the consent of Cyrus and Darius and Artaxerxes, kings of the Persians. The holy house was completed by the twenty-third of the month of Adar, in the sixth year of King Darius. And the sons of Israel, even the priests, the Leuites and the rest of those added from the captivity, acted in accordance with what is in the book of Moyses. At the dedication of the temple of the Lord, they offered one hundred bulls, two hundred rams, four hundred lambs, twelve male goats for the sin of all Israel, according to the number of the twelve tribal leaders of Israel, and the priests and the Leuites stood in their vestments, by tribe, for the projects of the Lord, God of Israel, following the book of Moyses, and the porters stood at each gateway.

10 And the sons of Israel, of those from the captivity, celebrated the pascha on the fourteenth of the first month, when the priests and the Leuites had been sanctified together. And not all sons of the captivity were sanctified, because the Leuites were all sanctified together and sacrificed the pascha for all the sons of the captivity and for their brothers the priests and for themselves. And the sons of Israel who had returned from captivity ate it, all those who had been separated from the abominations of the nations of the land, as they were seeking the Lord. They also celebrated the feast of unleavened bread seven days, rejoicing before the Lord, because he had changed the will of the king of the Assyrins concerning them, to strengthen their hands for the projects of the Lord, God of Israel.

And later than these, when Artaxerxes king of the Persians was reigning, Esdras came—son of Saraias the son of Ezerias the son of Chelkias the son of Salemos the son of Saddoukos the son of Achitob the son of Amarias the son of Ezias the son of Mareroth the son of Zaraias the son of Saouia
the son of Boksa son of Abisoue the son of Phinees the son of Eleazar the son of Aaron the first priest.
This Esdras went up from Babylonia as a scribe, being a man of genius in the law of Moyses, which had been delivered by the God of Israel, and the king showed him honor, for he found favor before the king in all his requests. And some of the sons of Israel and of the priests and Leuites and temple-musicians and porters and temple-slaves came back with him to Ierousalem in the seventh year of the reign of Artaxerxes, in the fifth month
(this was the king’s seventh year), for they left Babylon on the new moon of the first month and arrived in Ierousalem on the new moon of the fifth month, due to the successful journey that the Lord gave them. For Esdras possessed much knowldge, so that he omitted nothing from the law of the Lord or the commandments to teach all Israel all the statutes and judgments.

8 The written ordinance from Artaxerxes the king, having come to the attention of Esdras the priest and reader of the law of the Lord, a copy of which follows,

9 “King Artaxerxes to Esdras the priest and reader of the law of the Lord, greetings. Since I on my part have also decided on humane treatment, I have given orders that those that desire of the nation of Judeans and of the priests and the Leuites and, moreover, those in our own realm—if they so choose—go together with you to Ierou-salem. Let as many as are so disposed, therefore, set out with you, just as both I and the seven Friends, my counsellors, have decreed, in order to look into the affairs of Judea and the affairs of Ierousalem, in accordance with what is in the law of the Lord, and to take along to Ierousalem the gifts for the Lord of Israel that both I and the Friends have vowed and to collect for the Lord in Ierousalem all the gold and silver that may be found in the country of Babylonia, together with what is given by the nation for the temple of their Lord which is in Ierousalem, both the gold and the silver for bulls and rams and lambs and what goes with them, so as to offer sacrifices to the Lord on the altar of their Lord, which is in Ierou-salem. And whatever you, along with your kindred, wish to do with gold and silver, discharge it in accordance with the will of your God; also you shall place before your God who is in Ierou-salem the sacred vessels of the Lord that have been given you for the use of the temple of your God that is in Ierousalem. And whatever else occurs to you as required for the temple of your God, you will provide out of the royal treasury.

Moreover, I, King Artaxerxes, have ordered the treasurers of Syria and Phoenicia that whatever Esdras the priest and reader of the law of the Most High God sends for, they are to take care to give to him, up to one hundred talents of silver, and one hundred measures of wine and salt in abundance.
Let all things prescribed in accordance with the law of God be scrupulously fulfilled for the Most High God so that wrath may not come upon the realm of the king and his sons.
You are also informed that no tribute or any other imposition be laid on any of the priests and the Leuites and temple-musicians and porters and a Or for all his worthy projects  b Heb 1 kor = 22 liters  c Gk 1 metretes = 22 liters temple-slaves and officials of this temple and that no one has authority to impose such things on them.

23 "And you, Esdras, in keeping with the wisdom of God, appoint judges and justices to judge all those who know the law of your God, throughout all Syria and Phoenicia; moreover you shall teach it to those who do not know. 24 And all who transgress both the law of your God and the royal law shall be strictly punished, whether by death and physical punishment or by financial penalty or arrest."

25 Blessed be the Lord alone, who put this into the heart of the king, to glorify his house, which is in Jerusalem, 26 and who honored me before the king and those who give him counsel and all his friends and nobles. 27 As for me—I became encouraged by the support of the Lord my God, and I gathered men from Israel to go up with me.

28 And these are the leaders, by their paternal families and their groups, who went up with me from Babylon in the reign of Artaxerxes the king: 29 Of the sons of Phinees, Garomos. Of the sons of Letamaros, Gamelos. Of the sons of Daud, Hatous the son of Sechanias. 30 Of the sons of Phoros, Zacharias, and with him a hundred fifty men from the register. 31 Of the sons of Phaathmoab, Eliaos, and with him a hundred fifty men from the register. 32 Of the sons of Isahar, Zacharias son of Zeruos, and with him three hundred men. Of the sons of Adinos, Ben son of Ihanthos, and with him two hundred fifty men. 33 Of the sons of Elam, Esias son of Gotholias, and with him seventy men. 34 Of the sons of Saphatias, Zaraias son of Michaelos, and with him seventy men. 35 Of the sons of Joab, Abadias son of Iezelos, and with him two hundred twelve men. 36 Of the sons of Bania, Salimos son of Josaphias, and with him two hundred sixty men. 37 Of the sons of Babi, Zacharias son of Bebai, and with him twenty-eight men. 38 Of the sons of Asgath, Ioanes son of Hakatan, and with him a hundred ten men. 39 Of the sons of Adoni-kam—they were the last ones, and these were their names: Eliphalatos, Ieouel and Samaias, and with them seventy men. 40 Of the sons of Bagos, Outhi the son of Iesias, and with him seventy men. 41 And I gathered them at the river called the river of the willows, and we encamped at that spot three days, and I inspected them. 42 And when I found there none of the sons of the priests or of the Levites, 43 I sent word to Eleazaros and Iouelos and Maasmas and Elnatan and Samaias and Ioribos, Nathan, Ennatan, Zacharias and Mosollamos, who were the leaders and men of knowledge, 44 and I told them to go to Addaios, who was the leading man at the place of the treasury and commanded them to discuss with Addaios and his kindred and the treasurers at that place to send us men to serve as priests in the house of our Lord. 46 And by the mighty hand of our Lord they brought us knowledgeable men of the sons of Mooli son of Leui son of Israel: Asebeias and his sons and kindred, who numbered eighteen; 47 also Hasebias and Announos and Osias, a brother from the sons of Chanounaios, and their sons, twenty men; 48 and of the temple-slaves, whom Daud and the leaders had given for the service of the Levites, two hundred twenty temple-slaves; the list of all their names was reported.

49 And I proclaimed there a fast for the young men before our Lord so that we could seek from him both a successful journey for ourselves and for our children and the livestock that were with us. 50 For I hesitated to ask the king for both foot soldiers and cavalry and for an escort for security against those who were opposed to us, 51 for we had said to the king, "The strength of our Lord will be with those who seek after him for complete restoration." 52 And again we petitioned our Lord about all these things, and we found him very merciful.

54 And I set apart twelve men from the tribal leaders of the priests, both Serebias and Has-samias, and ten men from their kindred with them, 55 and I weighed out to them the silver and the gold and the sacred vessels of the house of our Lord, which the king himself had granted—and his counselors and the nobles and all Israel. 56 And when I weighed out, I handed over to them six hundred fifty talents of silver and silver vessels worth a hundred talents and a hundred talents of gold and twenty items of wrought gold and twelve bronze vessels of fine bronze that glittered like gold. 57 And I said to them, "You too are holy to the Lord, and the vessels are holy, and the silver and the gold as a vow to the Lord, Lord of our fathers. 58 Be watchful and on guard until you deliver them to the tribal leaders of the priests and the Levites and to the leaders of the paternal families of Israel, in Jerusalem, in the priests' chambers of the house of our Lord." 59 And the priests and the Levites who took along the silver and the gold and the vessels that had been in Jerusalem carried them to the temple of the Lord.

60 And when we had left the river Theras on the twelfth of the first month, we traveled until we arrived in Jerusalem by the mighty hand of our Lord, which was upon us; the Lord rescued us from investigation—from every enemy, and we came to Jerusalem. 61 And when we had been at that location three days, the silver and the gold having been weighed were handed over in the house of our Lord to the priest Marmothi of Ourias—62 and with him was Eleazar the son of Phinees, and there were with them the Levites, Isosados son of Iesous and Moeth son of Sabannos—all by count and weight, and the weight of everything was recorded at that very time.

63 Now, those who had arrived from captivity offered sacrifices to God, Lord of Israel: twelve bulls on behalf of all Israel, ninety-six rams, seventy-two lambs, twelve male goats for deliverance—all as a sacrifice to the Lord. 64 And they delivered the king's ordinances to the royal stewards and to the governors of Coele-Syria and Phoenicia, and they honored the nation and the temple of the Lord.

65 And when these things had been completed, the leaders came to me, saying, 66 "The nation of Israel and the rulers and the priests and the Leuites have not put away from themselves the alien nations of the land as their uncleanness requires—the Chananites and Chettites and Pher-ezites and Iebousites and Moabites and Egyptians and Idumeans. For both they and their sons have lived with their daughters, and the holy seed has been mixed with the alien nations of the land, and from the beginning of the matter the leaders and the nobles have been sharing in this lawlessness.

68 And it happened that, as soon as I heard these things, I tore my garments and my sacred clothing and pulled out hair from my head and beard and sat in anxiety and grief. And all that were ever moved at the word of the Lord of Israel gathered together to me, as I mourned over this lawlessness, and I sat grief-stricken until the late afternoon sacrifice. And when I rose from my fast, with my garments and my sacred clothing torn, when I had bent my knees and stretched out my hands to the Lord, I said, 71 "O Lord, I am ashamed; I am embarrassed before your face. For our sins have exceeded the height of our heads, and our mistakes had piled up to the sky already from the times of our fathers, and we are in great sin to this day. And on account of our sins and the sins of our fathers, we with our kindred and with our kings and with our priests were given over to the kings of the earth for sword and captivity and plundering, in shame until this selfsame day. And now in some measure mercy has come to us from you, O Lord, so that a root has been left to us and a name in the location of your holiness, even to uncover our light in the house of our Lord, to give us food in the time of our slavery. And when we were in slavery, we were not forsaken by our Lord, but he brought us into favor before the kings of the Persians, to give us nourishment and to honor our temple and to raise desolate Sion for us as a stronghold in Judea and Jerusalem.

79 "And now, O Lord, what shall we say, when we have these things? For we have transgressed your ordinances, which you gave by the hand of your servants the prophets, saying. The land that you are entering to possess is a land polluted with the pollution of the aliens of the land, and they have filled it with their uncleanness. And now, do not let their daughters marry your sons, and do not give your daughters to their sons, and do not seek at any time to have peaceful relations with them in order that you may prevail and eat the good of the land and leave it for an inheritance to your children forever. And all that is happening to us results from our evil deeds and our great sins. For you, O Lord, you canceled our sins and gave to us results from our evil deeds and our great sins. For you, O Lord, you canceled our sins and gave to us light in the house of our Lord, to give us food in the time of our slavery. And when we were in slavery, we were not forsaken by our Lord, but he brought us into favor before the kings of the Persians, to give us nourishment and to honor our temple and to raise desolate Sion for us as a stronghold in Judea and Jerusalem.

81 And now, what shall we say, when we have these things? For we have transgressed your ordinances, which you gave by the hand of your servants the prophets, saying. The land that you are entering to possess is a land polluted with the pollution of the aliens of the land, and they have filled it with their uncleanness. And now, do not let their daughters marry your sons, and do not give your daughters to their sons, and do not seek at any time to have peaceful relations with them in order that you may prevail and eat the good of the land and leave it for an inheritance to your children forever. And all that is happening to us results from our evil deeds and our great sins. For you, O Lord, you canceled our sins and gave to us results from our evil deeds and our great sins. For you, O Lord, you canceled our sins and gave to us light in the house of our Lord, to give us food in the time of our slavery. And when we were in slavery, we were not forsaken by our Lord, but he brought us into favor before the kings of the Persians, to give us nourishment and to honor our temple and to raise desolate Sion for us as a stronghold in Judea and Jerusalem.

86 O Lord of Israel, you are genuine, for we were left as a root on this very day. Behold, we are now before you with our lawless deeds, for no one is able to stand in your presence any longer because of these things. And when Esdras was praying—he was making confession—weeping, on the ground before the temple, there gathered to him a very large crowd from Jerusalem, men and women and youths. For there was great weeping among the multitude. And lechions son of Ieelos, of the sons of Israel, called out and said to Esdras, "We have sinned against the Lord and have married alien women from the nations of the land. Even now there is hope for Israel. Let us take an oath to the Lord on this, that we will put out all our alien wives along with their children, because it was judged right by you—and as many as submit to the authority of the law of the Lord. Rise up, and get it done, for the task is yours, and we are with you to enforce it." And Esdras stood up and put under oath the tribal leaders of the priests and the Leuites of all Israel to do this. And they took an oath.

9 And Esdras got up and went from the court of the temple to the priest's chamber of Ioanan the son of Eliasibos. And though he spent the night there, he did not taste food or drink water, mourning over the great acts of lawlessness of the multitude. And a proclamation occurred throughout the whole of Judea and Jerusalem to all who had returned from the captivity that they should assemble at Jerusalem. And if any did not present themselves within two or three days, in accordance with the judgment of the ruling elders, their livestock would be devoted to temple use, and he himself would be deemed estranged from the multitude of the captivity.

5 And all those from the tribe of loudas and Beniamin assembled together at Jerusalem within three days; this was the ninth month, on the twentieth of the month. And the entire multitude sat together in the large open area before the temple, shivering because of present winter. And Esdras stood up and said to them, "You have broken the law and married alien women to add sins to Israel. Now then, give glory, as a confession, to the Lord, God of our fathers, and do his will, and be separated from the nations of the land and from the alien women."

10 And the entire multitude shouted and said with a loud voice, "We will do as you have said. But the multitude is large, and the weather is wintry, and we do not have the strength to stand in the open air and have not found it, and the task we cannot do in one day or two. For we have sinned rather much in these things. But let the leaders of the multitude take a stand, and let all those from our settlements, as many as have alien wives, come, having received time, and furthermore the elders and judges of each location, until they undo from us the anger of the Lord over this matter."
14 Ionathas son of Azaelos and Iezias son of Thokanos undertook the matter on these terms, and Mosollamos and Lewis and Sabbataios served together as arbitrators for them. 15 Those from the captivity acted in accordance with all this.

16 And Esdras the priest chose for himself men who were leaders of their paternal families, all of them by name, and on the new moon of the tenth month they sat down together to examine the matter. 17 And the cases of the men who had taken to themselves alien wives were brought to an end by the new moon of the first month.

18 And of the priests, those who gathered together and were found to have alien wives were: 19 of the sons of lesous son of Ioazedek and his kindred, Maseas and Eleazaros and Ioribos and Ioanos. 20 And they put on their hands to put away their wives and as expiation to offer rams for their mistake. 21 And of the sons of Emmer: Hananias and Zabdaios and Manes and Samaios and Iereel and Azarias. 22 And of the sons of Phousair: Elioenais, Maesias, Ismaelos and Nathanaelos and Okidolos and Salthas.

23 And of the Leuites: Iozabdos and Semeis and Kolios (this is, Kalitas) and Pathaiois and Ooudas and Ioonas. 24 Of the temple-musicians: Elisabios, Bakchouros. 25 Of the porters: Salloumos and Tolbanes.

26 Of Israel: of the sons of Phoros: Iermas and Iezias and Melchias and Miaminos and Eleazaros and Hasibias and Bannaia is. 27 Of the sons of Elam: Matthianias and Zacharias and Iezrielos and Obaudios and Ieremoth and Elias. 28 And of the sons of Zamoth: Eliadas, Eliasimos, Othonias, Iarimoth and Sabathos and Zerdaiais. 29 And of the sons of Bebai: Ioanes and Hananias and Zabdos and Emathis.

30 And of the sons of Mani: Olamos, Mallouchos, Iedaios, Iasoubos and Asaelos and Ieremoth. 31 And of the sons of Addi: Naathos and Moossias, Lakkounos and Naidos and Matthanias and Sesthel and Balnouos and Manasseas. 32 And of the sons of Hannan: Elionas and Asaias and Melchias and Sabbaios and Simon Chosamaios. 33 And of the sons of Hasom: Mattanaiois and Mattathios and Sabdaious and Eliphatal and Manasses and Semei.

34 And of the sons of Baani: Jeremias, Moadios, Maeros, Jouel, Mamedai and Pedias and Anos, Karabasion and Elisabios and Mamnitanaimos, Eliasios, Bannous, Elialis, Someis, Seleimi, Nathania. And of the sons of Ezora: Sesis, Ezril, Azaelos, Samatos, Zambris, Iosepos. 35 And of the sons of Nooma: Mazitias, Zabadaias, Edais, Jouel, Banaias.

37 And the priests and the Leuites and those from Israel settled down in Jerusalem and throughout the country. On the new moon of the seventh month—and the sons of Israel were in their settlements—38 the entire multitude gathered with one accord in the large open area before the gateway toward the east of the temple, 39 and they told Esdras the chief priest and reader to bring the law of Moyses that had been handed over by the Lord, God of Israel. 40 And Esdras the chief priest brought the law for the entire multitude, from man to woman, and for all the priests to hear the law, on the new moon of the seventh month. 41 And he kept reading aloud in the large open area before the gateway of the temple from dawn until midday in the presence of both men and women, and the entire multitude gave its attention to the law. 42 And Esdras the priest and reader of the law stood on the wooden platform that had been prepared, 43 and beside him stood Mattathias, Sammous, Hananias, Azarias, Ourias, Hezekias and Baalsamos on his right 44 and on his left Phadaios, Misael, Melchias, Lothasoubos, Nabarias, Zacharias. 45 And when Esdras took up the book of the law in the presence of the multitude (for he was seated in the place of honor in the presence of all) 46 and when he opened the law, they all stood straight. And Esdras blessed the Lord, God Most High, God Sabaoth, Almighty, 47 and the whole multitude exclaimed “Amen,” and when they lifted up their hands and fell to the ground, they did obeisance to God. 48 The Leuites Lesous and Anniouis and Sarabias, Iadinos, Iakoubos, Sabbataios, Haoulias, Maiannas, Kalitas, Azarias and Iozabdos, Hananias, Phliais were teaching the law of the Lord and were reading the law of the Lord to the multitude, at the same time inspiring the reading.

49 And Hathharates said to Esdras, the chief priest and reader, and to the Leuites who were teaching the multitude, with regard to all, 50 “This day is holy to the Lord”—and all were weeping when they heard the law—51 “so proceed, and eat fats, and drink sweet drinks, and send portions to those who do not have, 52 for the day is holy to the Lord. And do not be sorrowful, for the Lord will exalt you.” 53 And the Leuites were commanding all the common people, saying, “This day is holy; do not be sorrowful.” 54 And they all departed to eat and drink and enjoy themselves and to give portions to those who had none and to be greatly joyful. 55 because they were also inspired by the words by which they had been taught, and they had gathered together.

The NETS translation of 2 Esdras is based on the standard critical edition prepared by Robert Hanhart (Septuaginta: Vetus Testamentum Graecum Auctoritate Academiae Scientiarum Gottingensis editum XVIII.2: Esdræ liber II [Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1993]). The text of this edition was followed almost invariably for the translation. Only at 4.21–22 have I departed from it, where have I followed Codex B. I have not adhered as closely to the punctuation provided by Hanhart.

This book is known as Esdras B in the Greek tradition. The title “2 Esdras” also has been used for three other works: the Vulgate translation of Nehemiah; the later Latin-manuscript book that consists of chapters 1–2 of the Vulgate book 4 Esdras, which is also known as 5 Ezra in scholarship or 2 Esdras 1–2 in modern translations; and the modern English translations of 4 Esdras from the Vulgate (scholarship’s 4 Ezra, 5 Ezra, and 6 Ezra), such as in the NRSV.

1 Esdras (Esdras A) and 2 Esdras are one pair of double traditions found in Septuagint collections (see as well the double traditions of Daniel and Esther). They represent material from the Hebrew-Aramaic 2 Chronicles (2 Supplements), Ezra (2 Esdras 1–10), and Nehemiah (2 Esdras 11–23). The general relationship of content among the various versions is as follows:

The Greek 2 Esdras is arguably the most pedantic of the translations of biblical books found in “the Septuagint” and is possibly the best representative of an “interlinear translation.” It has not fared well in scholarly assessments, being described as “a very literal and servile translation of the Hebrew,”1 “un-Greek, literal and mechanical,”2 a translation that “discloses servile conformity to the Hebrew and Aramaic original, at the cost of clarity, and thus fails to attain even the pretence of Greek idiomatic expression, not to speak of distinction in diction.”3 Subsequent examination has only confirmed such conclusions.4 The difficult nature of the Greek in this book makes its translation problematic. This translation into English makes an attempt to remain faithful to the Greek but also to render it into grammatical English.

General character
The translator of 2 Esdras used a Hebrew-Aramaic text that was of the Masoretic tradition (MT) of texts and translated it by a slavish adherence to the forms and order of the source text and with little in the way of creativity or translator’s license. The translation is so close to the MT that there is very little change even of word order, a feature hard to reflect in the English translation.

Another feature is easier to reflect, however. With very few exceptions, where a Hebrew-Aramaic conjunctive ְַ occurs in the MT, it is rendered by καὶ in this translation. This is different from other OG/Septuagint books where there tends to be somewhat more variety. So extreme is this feature of 2 Esdras that there are only four occurrences of δὲ anywhere in the book (2.64; 5.12; 7.9; 19.18), and for those four occurrences only at 7.9 is there a ְַ in the source text, the other three being introduced without explicit warrant. Given this approach to the translation of the Hebrew and Aramaic, in the NETS translation of 2 Esdras there is no attempt to represent the various nuances possible when rendering καὶ, with the result that “and” is grossly overused.

Transcription

Another significant characteristic of this book is that there are 35 transcriptions used 67 times, and this does not include the transcription of the over 500 names that occur in the genealogies and lists. This use of transcriptions is not consistent throughout the book. Thus, for example, for the same Hebrew word, פֶּרֶס, we find פֶּרֶס (2.43; 21.3) and פֶּרֶס (2.58, 70; 7.7, 24; 8.17, 20; 13.26; 17.46, 60, 73; 20.28), and for another, פֶּרֶס, פֶּרֶס (13.26) and פֶּרֶס (13.27). The treatment of names in the book is also inconsistent, so that one finds, for example, Αφίδη (2.15), Αφίδη (8.6) and Ηφίδη (17.20) for ἡφίδη; Αμανιται (23.1) and Αμανιται (9.1) for ἀμανιται; Παναυ (2.10), Παναυ (10.29) and Παναυ (18.7) for ἀμανιται; Ηρεμ (2.32), Ηρεμ (2.39), Ιαμ (20.5) and Ιαμ (22.15) for ἰαμ; Κωλιτας (10.23), Κωλιτας (18.7) and Καλιταυ (10.20) for Κωλιτας; Σαδουκ (7.2), Σαδουκ (20.21) and Σαδουκ (23.13) for ἱαμ.

Pleonasm

In this book there are scattered examples of redundant adverbs and pronouns where the Greek uses the relative pronoun to translate ἅν or ὅ when they function as relative particles marking the connection between two independent clauses. When the Hebrew or Aramaic clause has an adverb or pronoun, it is rendered redundantly, such as in 1.4: “And every one left shall go up from all the places where (ἅν) he resides there (ὅ–εἰ).” These are redundant in Greek and therefore have been rendered into equally redundant English.

Lists and the lack of grammaticality

A more difficult grammatical problem is encountered at 9.1; 10.18; 13.24–25, 26, 31; 14.13; 21.4–7, 25–30 where there are lists of two or more people or items in the MT in which Greek grammar seems to have been abandoned and the words are listed without grammatical connection to the first item in the list. In this translation we have found ways to render these, taking into account what is possible given Greek grammar and knowing what the translator probably saw in the source text. They are awkward translations, but not as awkward as the Greek.

THE NETS TRANSLATION OF 2 ESDRAS

Whereas the Greek follows its parent MT text very closely, we have tried to maintain as many connections to the NRSV as possible, within the guidelines of the project. Where the Greek is gender specific, such as in the use of ἄνηρ, we have made the translation specific. Given the pedantic nature of the translation, where “sons of” is found in what could arguably be a generic form, we have rendered it with the gender specific “sons of,” etc.

EDITORIAL POLICY

Whereas 2 Esdras in the OG/Septuagint is the translation of both Ezra and Nehemiah, the chapters do not follow the MT for the book of Nehemiah: 2 Esdras 1–10 is the translation of Ezra 1–10, and 2 Esdras 11–23 is the translation of Nehemiah 1–13.

Versification differs among editions of 2 Esdras and from the MT:

Compared to the MT, some text is not represented in 2 Esdras at 14.6 (Neh 3.37–38); 21(11.12–35); and 22(12).2–9, 25, 29. Where the material is lacking in chapters 21 and 22, the versification follows that of the MT, and thus there are gaps in the sequences of numbers.

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL NOTE
The only English translation of this book that I consulted in the process of developing this translation was that by Brenton.

R. GLENN WOODEN

1 And in the first year of Cyrus, king of the Persians, in order that the word of the Lord from the mouth of Jeremias might be fulfilled, the Lord stirred up the spirit of Cyrus, king of the Persians, and he commanded an utterance in all his kingdom, indeed in written form, saying:

2 "Thus said Cyrus, king of the Persians: the Lord, the God of heaven, has given me all the kingdoms of the earth, and he himself has visited upon me to build him a house in Jerusalem, which is in Judea. Who is there among you from all his people? And his God will be with him, and he will go up to Jerusalem, which is in Judea, and let him build the house of Israel's God; he is the God who is in Jerusalem. And every one left shall go up from all the places where he resides there, and the men of his place shall receive them with silver and gold and with goods and animals, besides the freewill offering for the house of the God who is in Jerusalem."

5 And the chiefs of the paternal families of Judah and Benjamin and the priests and the Levites got up, all of whom God had stirred up their spirit, to go up to build the Lord’s house, which is in Jerusalem. And all from round about prevailed with their hands with vessels of silver, with gold and with goods and with livestock and with presents, besides the things that were freely offered. And King Cyrus brought out the vessels of the house of the Lord, which Nabuchodonosor took from Jerusalem and placed them in the house of his god. And Cyrus, king of the Persians, brought them out onto the hand of Mithridates Garbaron, and he counted them for Sasabassar, the ruler of Judah, six hundred twenty-twelve; sons of Banou, six hundred forty-two; sons of Babai, six hundred twenty-three; sons of Azgad, one thousand two hundred twenty-two; sons of Adonikam, six hundred sixty-six; sons of Addin, four hundred fifty-four; sons of Ater—in reference to Hezekias—ninety-eight; sons of Bassou, three hundred twenty-three; sons of Iora, one hundred twelve; sons of Hasoum, two hundred twenty-three; sons of Gaber, ninety-five; sons of Baithel, one hundred twenty-twelve; sons of Nehamias, one thousand seven hundred forty-three; sons of Kariathir, Chaphira and Beroth, seven hundred forty-three; sons of the Rama and of Gabaa, six hundred twenty-one; men of Machmas, one hundred twenty-two; men of Baithel and Aia, four hundred twenty-three; sons of Nabo, fifty-two; sons of Magebis, one hundred fifty-six; sons of Elamar, one thousand two hundred fifty-four; sons of Heram, three hundred twenty; sons of Lod, Hadid and Ono, seven hundred twenty-five; sons of Jericho, three hundred forty-five; sons of Senaa, three thousand six hundred thirty.

36 And the priests: sons of Ledoua—in reference to the house of lesous—nine hundred seventy-three; sons of Emmer, one thousand fifty-two; sons of Phasour, one thousand two hundred forty-seven; sons of Herem, one thousand seven. And the Levites: sons of lesous and Kadmiel—in reference to the sons of Hodouia—seventy-four. The singers: sons of Asaph, one hundred twenty-eight. Sons of the gatekeepers: sons of Selloum; sons of Ater; sons of Telmon; sons of Akoub; sons of Hatita; sons of Sobai, in all one hundred thirty-nine.

2 And these are the sons of the country, who went up from the captivity of the exile, which Nabouchodonosor, king of Babylon, had exiled to Babylon, and they returned to Jerusalem and Iouda, a man to his city, who went with Zoroabel: Jesous, Neemias, Saraias, Reelias, Mardochoeos, Balsan, Masphar, Bagouai, Reoum, Baana.

Number of the men of the people of Israel: sons of Phoros, two thousand one hundred seventy-two; sons of Saphatia, three hundred seventy-two; sons of Ares, seven hundred seventy-five; sons of Phaathmoab—in reference to the sons of Iesou, of Ioab—two thousand eight hundred twelve; sons of Ailam, nine hundred sixty; sons of Banou, six hundred forty-two; sons of Babai, six hundred twenty-three; sons of Azgad, one thousand two hundred twenty-two; sons of Addin, four hundred fifty-four; sons of Ater—in reference to Hezekias—ninety-eight; sons of Bassou, three hundred twenty-three; sons of Iora, one hundred twelve; sons of Hasoum, two hundred twenty-three; sons of Gaber, ninety-five; sons of Baithel, one hundred twenty-twelve; sons of Nehamias, one thousand seven hundred forty-three; sons of Kariathir, Chaphira and Beroth, seven hundred forty-three; sons of the Rama and of Gabaa, six hundred twenty-one; sons of Machmas, one hundred twenty-two; sons of Baithel and Aia, four hundred twenty-three; sons of Nabo, fifty-two; sons of Magebis, one hundred fifty-six; sons of Elamar, one thousand two hundred fifty-four; sons of Heram, three hundred twenty; sons of Lod, Hadid and Ono, seven hundred twenty-five; sons of Jericho, three hundred forty-five; sons of Senaa, three thousand six hundred thirty.

40 And the Levites: sons of lesous and Kadmiel—in reference to the sons of Hodouia—seventy-four. The singers: sons of Asaph, one hundred twenty-eight. Sons of the gatekeepers: sons of Selloum; sons of Ater; sons of Telmon; sons of Akoub; sons of Hatita; sons of Sobai, in all one hundred thirty-nine.
And the seventh month arrived, and Israel was in their cities, and the people gathered as one man to Jerusalem. And Lesous the son of Losedek and his brothers the priests and Zorobabel the son of Salathiel and their brothers got ready and built the altar of the God of Israel in order to offer up whole burnt offerings on it, according to the things written in the law of Moyses the man of God. And they prepared the altar on its prepared basis, because they had dread upon them from the peoples of the countries, and a whole burnt offering to the Lord was mounted upon it, in the morning and at evening. And they observed the feast of tents, according to what was written, and the whole burnt offerings day by day, by number, according to decision, a matter of a day for its day, and after that the whole burnt offerings of perpetuity and those for the new moons and for all the consecrated feasts to the Lord and the freewill offering of everyone who was making a freewill offering to the Lord. On day one of the seventh month they began to offer up whole burnt offerings to the Lord, and the foundation of the Lord’s house was not laid. And they gave silver to the stonemasons and the carpenters and food and drink and oil to the Sidonians and the Tyrians, to bring cedar trees from the Lebanon to the sea of Joppa, according to the grant of Cyrus, king of the Persians, to them.

And in the second year of their going to the house of God at Jerusalem, in the second month, Zorobabel the son of Salathiel and Lesous the son of Losedek and the rest of their brothers, the priests and the Leuites and all who were coming to Jerusalem from the captivity made a beginning and appointed the Leuites, from twenty years old and upward, over those who were doing the projects in the Lord’s house. And Lesous and his sons and his brothers, Kadmiel and his son, sons of Iouda, sons of Henadad, their sons and their brothers the Leuites supervised those doing the projects in the house of God.

And they laid the foundation to build the house of the Lord, and the priests stood in their vestments with trumpets, and the Leuites, sons of Asaph, with cymbals, to praise the Lord upon the house of God.

And all the people signaled with a loud voice to praise the Lord for the foundation of the house of Israel, for his mercy is forever upon Israel.”

And all the people signaled with a loud voice to praise the Lord for the foundation of the house of the Lord. And many from the priests and the Leuites and chiefs of the paternal families, the old people, who had seen the first house on its foundation and this house with their eyes, were weeping with a loud voice, also the crowd at a signal with merriment to raise up a song. And the people were not distinguishing the sound of the signal of merriment from the sound of the people’s weeping, for the people shouted with a loud voice and the sound was being heard even at great distance.
paternal families and said to them, “Let us build with you, for we seek your God as you do, and we have been sacrificing to him since the days of Asaraddon, king of Assyria, who brought us here.”

And Zorobabel and Iesous and the rest of the chiefs of the paternal families of Israel said to them: “It is not for us and for you to build a house for our God, because we ourselves together will build for the Lord, our God, as Cyrus, the king of the Persians, commanded us.”

And the people of the land were weakening the hands of the people of Iouda, and they were trying to hinder them from building and were hiring people against them, plotting to scatter their council all the days of Cyrus, king of the Persians, and until the reign of Darius, king of the Persians.

And in the reign of Asoueros, in the beginning of his reign, they wrote a letter against those inhabiting Iouda and Ierousalem.

And in the days of Arthasastha, they wrote in peace—Mithridates, Tabeel with also the rest of his fellow-slaves—to Arthasastha, king of the Persians; the tribute collector wrote in Syrian a document, also having been translated. Reoum, Baaltam and Samsai the scribe wrote one letter against Ierousalem to Arthasastha the king. Reoum, Baaltam and Samsai the scribe and the rest of our fellow-slaves, the Dinians, Apharsathachians, Tarphallians, Apharsians, Archyians, Babylonians, Sousanachians, Dauians, the rest of the nations, whom the great and honorable Asennaphar deported and whom he settled in the cities of Somoron, and the rest beyond the river have rendered judgment as follows. This is the commandment of the letter that they sent to him:

“ar Arthasastha the king. Your servants, men beyond the river. Let it be known to the king that the Judeans, having come up from you to us, went to Ierousalem, the rebellious and wicked city, which they are building, and its walls have been finished, and they raised up its foundations. Now then, let it be known to the king that, if that city is rebuilt and its walls are finished, you do not have peace. Therefore, we are making it known to the king that, if that city is built and its walls are finished, you do not have peace.”

And the king sent peace and tidings to Reoum, Baaltam and Samsai the scribe and the rest of their fellow-slaves who live in Samaria and to the rest of those from beyond the river. The tribute collector whom you sent to us was summoned before me. And a decision was made by me, and we searched and discovered that that city, from days of old, rises up against kings, and that rebellions and banishments occur in it. And kings became strong in Ierousalem and ruled over the whole west of the river, and full tributes and a share were given to them. And now, make a decision that those men stop. And the city will no longer be built due to the decision, since you have been on guard against being slack in this matter, lest damage might perchance multiply to the detriment of kings.”

Then the tribute collector of Arthasastha the king read before Reoum, Baaltam and Samsai the scribe, his own fellow-slaves. And they went quickly to Ierousalem and in Iouda and stopped them with horses and a force. Then the work in Ierousalem on the house of God stopped and remained stopped until the second year of the reign of Darius, the king of the Persians.

And Haggaios the prophet and Zacharias the son of Addo prophesied a prophecy to the Judeans who were in Iouda and Ierousalem, in the name of Israel’s God, who was over them. At that time Zorobabel the son of Salathiel and Iesous son of Josedek set out and began to build the house of God, which is in Ierousalem, and with them were the prophets of God, helping them.

At the same time Thaththanai, the commander of the area beyond the river, Satharbozanes and their fellow-slaves, the Apharsachians, who were in the area beyond the river, sent to Darius the king. They sent him a report and in these things were written: “To Darius the king, all peace! Let it be known to the king that we went to the Judean region, to the house of the great God, and it is being built with choice stones, and timbers are laid in the walls, and that work is prosperous and going well in their hands. Then we asked those elders and spoke to them thus, ‘Who gave you a decision to build this house and to supply these materials?’ And they said to them this: ‘What are the names of the men who are building this city?’ And the eyes of God were upon the captivity of Iouda, and they did not stop them until the advice was delivered to Darius. And then an answer about the matter was sent to the tribute collector.

The explanation of the letter that Thaththanai, the commander of the area beyond the river, Satharbozanes and their fellow-slaves, the Apharsachians, who were in the area beyond the river, sent to Darius the king. They sent him a report and in these things were written: “To Darius the king, all peace! Let it be known to the king that we went to the Judean region, to the house of the great God, and it is being built with choice stones, and timbers are laid in the walls, and that work is prosperous and going well in their hands. Then we asked those elders and spoke to them thus, ‘Who gave you a decision to build this house and to supply these materials?’ And we asked them their names, to inform you, so we could record for you the names of the men who are their rulers. And they replied to us with a speech like this, saying: ‘We are slaves of the God of heaven and earth, and we are building the house that had been built many years before now (and a great king of Israel built it and finished it for them). But after that our fathers angered the God of heaven; he gave them into the hands of Nabouchodonosor, king of Babylon, the Chaldean, and he destroyed this house and exiled the people to Babylon. 13 But in the first year of Cyrus the king, Cyrus the king had a decision made that this house of God should be built. 14 And, as for the gold and silver vessels of the house of God, which Nabouchodonosor brought out from the house, which is in Ierusalem, and brought away into the shrine of the king, Cyrus the king brought them out of the shrine of the king and gave them to Sanabassaros, the treasurer who was over the treasury, and said to him, “Take all the vessels, and go; put them in the house, which is in Ierusalem, in their place.” 15 Then Sanabassar came and laid the foundations of the house of God in Ierusalem, and from then until now it was built and was not finished.

16 Then, if it seems good to the king, have a search made in the house of the treasure of the king of Babylon, the Chaldean, and he destroyed Nabuchodonosor’s shrine of the king and gave them to Sanabassaros, the treasurer who was over the treasury, and said to him, “Take all the vessels, and go; put them in the house, which is in Ierusalem, in their place.” 17 And now, if it seems good to the king, have a search made in the house of the treasure of the king of Babylon, so you might know that a decision was issued from King Cyrus to build that house of God, which is in Ierusalem. And when the king knows about this, let him send notification to us.”

6 Then Darius the king made a decision, and he searched in the libraries where the treasure is deposited in Babylon. 2 And in the city of Amatha, in the bastion of the city of the Medes, one scroll was found, and this had written in it: “A record:

3 In the first year of Cyrus the king, Cyrus the king issued a decision concerning the house of God, which is in Ierusalem: Let a house and a place where they sacrifice sacrifices be built, (and he made an elevation sixty cubits in height and its width sixty cubits, and there were three courses of hard stones and one course of timber), and the cost will be paid from the house of the king. 4 And, as for the silver and gold vessels of the house of God, which Nabouchodonosor brought out of the house, which was in Ierusalem, and carried off to Babylon, let them also be given, and let them go to the shrine, which is in Ierusalem, to the place where they were put in the house of God.”

6 “Now, commanders beyond the river, Satharbozanai and their fellow-slaves, the Apharsachians, who are in the area beyond the river, you will give these things, though being far away from there. 7 And now permit the work of the house of God. Let the leaders of the Judeans and the elders of the Judeans build that house of God on its site. 8 And a decision has been issued by me, lest you do anything with the elders of the Judeans to build that house of God. And let the cost diligently be paid to those men from the king’s possessions, the tributes from beyond the river, so that they are not delayed. 9 And whatever the need—in a case of both the offspring of cattle and rams and male lambs for whole burnt offerings to the God of heaven, wheat, salt, wine, oil, according to the word of the priests who are in Ierusalem—let it be given to them day by day, whatever they request, so that they may be offering fragrances to the God of heaven and be praying for the life of the king and his sons. 10 And a decision has been issued from me that, as for any person who alters this word, a beam shall be taken down out of his house, and he will be raised up and impaled on it, and his home made my possession. 11 And may the God whose name encamps there overthrow any king and people that shall put forth its hand to alter or to destroy that house of God which is in Ierusalem. I, Darius, have issued a decision; it shall be done with all diligence.”

13 Then Thaththanaï, governor beyond the river, Satharbozanai and his fellow slaves in this way acted with all diligence toward what Darius the king had sent. 14 And the elders of the Judeans and the Leuites kept building during the prophe-saying of Haggaios the prophet and Zacharias son of Addo, and they rebuilt and finished it due to the decision of the God of Israel and due to the decision of Cyrus and Darius and Arthasastha, kings of the Persians. 15 And they completed this house until the third day of the month of Adar, which was the sixth year of the reign of Darius the king.

16 And sons of Israel—the priests and the Leuites and the rest of the sons of the exile—cele-brated the rededication of the house of God with joy. 17 And for the rededication of the house of God they offered one hundred calves, two hundred rams, four hundred male lambs, twelve male goats for sin on behalf of all Israel, for the number of the tribes of Israel. 18 And they set the priests in their divisions and the Leuites in their orders for the ser-vice of the God who is in Ierusalem, in accor-dance with the scripture of the book of Moyses.

19 And on the fourteenth of the first month the sons of the exile kept the pascha. Because the priests were purified and the Leuites pure, one and all, they also slaughtered the pascha for all the sons of the exile and for their brothers the priests and for themselves. 21 And sons of Israel—those from the exile and every one who was separating himself from the impurity of the nations of the land, joining them, in order to seek after the Lord, God of Israel—ate the pascha. And they cele-brated the feast of unleavened bread for seven days with joy, because the Lord made them joyful, and the Lord turned the heart of the king of Assour to them, to strengthen their hands in the projects of the house of the God of Israel.

7 And after these matters, in the reign of Arthasastha, king of the Persians, Esdras went up—son of Saraias son of Azarias son of Helkia 2 son of Selloum son of Saddouk son of Achitob 3 son of Amaria son of Ezria son of Maraioth 4 son of Zaraia son of Ozios son of Bokki 5 son of Abisoue son of Phinees son of Eleazar son of Aaron the first priest. 6 Esdras himself went up from Babylon, and he was a scribe quick in the law of Moyses that the Lord God of Israel had given. And the king gave to him, for the hand of the Lord, his God, was upon him in all that he himself was seeking.
7 And some of the sons of Israel and some of the priests and some of the Levites and the singers and the gatekeepers and the nethinim\(^a\) went up to Jerusalem in the seventh year of Arthasastha the king.\(^8\) And they came to Jerusalem in the fifth month, that is, the seventh year of the king—\(^9\) because on the first of the first month he himself founded the ascent from Babylon, but on the first of the fifth month they came to Jerusalem, for the hand of his God was good upon him—\(^10\) because Esdras proposed in his heart to seek the law and to practice and to teach the ordinances and judgments in Israel.

11 And this is the clear statement of the edict that Arthasastha gave to Esdras the priest, the scribe of the book of words of the commandments of the Lord and his ordinances for Israel: \(^{12}\) Arthasastha, king of kings, to Esdras, the scribe of the law of the Lord, the God of heaven. The message and its answer have been completed. \(^{13}\) A decision was issued from me that any from the people of Israel and priests and Levites in my kingdom who freely offer to go to Jerusalem are to go with you. \(^{14}\) It was sent from before the king and the seven counselors that you conduct an inspection of Judea and of Jerusalem in accordance with the law of their God, which is in your hand—\(^15\) and that you inspect the silver and gold for the house of the Lord that the king and counselors freely offered to the God of Israel who encamps in Jerusalem \(^{16}\) and any silver and gold that you might find in the whole country of Babylon besides the freewill offering of the people and the priests who are giving willingly to the house of God, which is in Jerusalem, \(^{17}\) and everything that comes in, readily enter this one in this book: calves, rams, lambs and their offerings and their libations, and you shall offer them on the altar of the house of your God, which is in Jerusalem. \(^{18}\) And if something seems good to you and your brothers to do with the rest of the silver and gold, do as is pleasing to your God. \(^{19}\) And the vessels that are being given you for the service of the house of God, deliver them before God in Jerusalem. \(^{20}\) And as for the rest of the requirements for the house of your God—whatever you think you should provide, you will provide out of the houses of the king's treasure.

21 "And I, Arthasastha the king, have issued a decision from me for all the treasures in the area beyond the river that everything that Esdras, the priest and scribe of the law of the God of heaven, asks you, let it be done with all diligence, \(^{22}\) up to one hundred talents of silver and up to one hundred kors\(^a\) of wheat and up to one hundred baths\(^b\) of wine and one hundred baths\(^b\) of oil and salt for which there is no writ. \(^{23}\) Everything that is in the decision of the God of heaven, let it be done. Beware of someone attacking the house of the God of heaven, lest wrath come upon the realm of the king and his sons. \(^{24}\)

And this has been made known to you among all the priests and Levites, singers, door keepers, nethinim\(^a\) and ministers of God's house. Let there be no tribute for you, you will not have the power to enslave them.

25 "And you, Esdras, in keeping with the wisdom of God in your hand, appoint scribes and judges so that they may be judging in the interest of all the people who are in the area beyond the river, all who know the law of your God, and you shall make it known to the one who does not know it. \(^{26}\) And any who does not observe the law of God and the law of the king, readily the judgment will be one that issues from it, whether for death or whether for discipline or whether for loss of livelihood or whether for bonds."

27 Blessed be the Lord the God of our fathers, who in this way put it in the heart of the king to glorify the house of the Lord, which is in Jerusalem, and has inclined mercy upon me in the eyes of the king and his counselors and all the king's exalted rulers. And I was strengthened, for the good hand of God was upon me, and I gathered rulers from Israel to go up with me.

8 And these are the chiefs of their paternal families, the guides who went up with me in the reign of Arthasastha, the king of Babylon: \(^2\) of Phinees's sons, Gerson; of Ithamar's sons, Daniel; of David's sons, Hattous; \(^3\) of Sachania's sons; of Phoros' sons, Zacharias, and with him the company of one hundred fifty; \(^4\) of Phaathmoab's sons, Eliana son of Sarea, and with him two hundred males; \(^5\) of Zathoes' sons, Sechenias son of Haziel, and with him three hundred males. \(^6\) And of Adin's sons, Obeth son of Ijonathan, and with him fifty males. \(^7\) And of Elam's sons, Isaia son of Athelia, and with him seventy males. \(^8\) And of Saphatia's sons, Zabdias son of Michael, and with him the eighty males. \(^9\) And of Iob's sons, Abadia—he being son of Ieiel—and with him were the two hundred eighteen males. \(^10\) And of Baani's sons, Selimouth son of Josephia, and with him the one hundred sixty males. \(^11\) And of Babi's sons, Zacharias son of Babi, and with him the twenty-eight males. \(^12\) And of Azgad's sons, Ioanan—he being son of Hakkatan—and with him the one hundred ten males. \(^13\) And of Adonikam's sons—they were last—and these were their names: Eliphalath, Ieiel and Samaia, and with them the sixty males. \(^14\) And of Bagouai's sons, Oouthai and Mesoulam, and to Nathan and to Zacharia and to Mesoulam and to Iarib and to Elnathan, and I gathered them to the river that runs to Eui, and there we camped three days. And I took notice among the people and among the priests, and I did not find there any of Levi's sons. \(^15\) And I sent intelligent people to Eleazar, to Ariel, to Samaia and to Maonam and to Iarib and to Elnathan and to Nathan and to Zacharia and to Mesoulam and to Iarib and to Elnathan, and I brought...

them out to the ruler with the silver of the place, and I placed words in their mouths to say to the brothers of them, of the nathinim, so that they would bring for us, with the silver of the place, singers for the house of our God. And since the good hand of our God was upon us, there came to us a man of Sachol, some of Mooli’s sons, son of Leui son of Israel (and his sons and his brothers, eighteen of them, came at the beginning), and Hasebia and Isaa of Merari’s sons, his brothers and their sons, twenty, and of the nathinim whom Dauid and his rulers had given into slavery to the Leuites, two hundred twenty nathinim. They were all gathered together by name.

And I proclaimed a fast there at the river Aoue, so that we might be humbled before our God, to seek from him a straight journey for ourselves and our children and all our property. Because I was ashamed to request from the king a force and horses to save us from an enemy on the journey, because we had spoken to the king, saying, “The hand of our God is upon all who seek him for good, and his power and his wrath are upon all who forsake him.” And we fasted and sought from our God about this, and he listened to us.

And I set apart twelve from the leaders of the priests, in reference to Saraia, in reference to Hasasia, and ten from their brothers with them, and I weighed out for them the silver and the gold and the vessels of the first fruit of the house of our God, which the king and his counselors and his rulers and all Israel who were found had lifted up. And I weighed onto their hands six hundred fifty talents of silver and one hundred silver vessels and one hundred talents of gold, and for the journey twenty gold chaphourec worth a thousand drachmas and excellent, desirable vessels of fine polished bronze in gold. And I said to them, “You are holy to the Lord God, and the vessels are holy, and the silver and the gold are freewill offerings to the Lord, God of our fathers. Be vigilant, and keep them until you weigh them before the rulers of the priests and the Leuites and the chiefs of paternal families in Ierousalem, at the tents of the house of the Lord.” And the priests and the Leuites took the weight of the silver and the gold and the vessels, to bring to Ierousalem to the house of our God.

And we started out from the river Aoue on the twelfth of the first month, to go to Ierousalem, and the hand of our God was upon us, and he delivered us from the hand of the enemy and hostility on the journey. And we came to Ierousalem and settled there three days. And it happened on the fourth day, in the house of our God, we weighed the silver and the gold and the vessels into the hand of Marimoth son of Ouria the priest (and with him was Eleazar son of Phinees, and with them Iozabad son of Iesous and Noadia son of Ba-nai, the Leuites). everything by number and by weight, and the total weight was recorded. At that time those who had come from captivity, sons of the exiles, offered as whole burnt offerings to the God of Israel twelve calves for all Israel, ninety-six rams, seventy-seven lambs, twelve male goats for sin; these were all the burnt offerings to the Lord. And they gave the king’s currency to the administrators of the king and to the commanders beyond the river, and they extolled the people and the house of God.

And after these things had been done, the rulers approached me, saying, “The people of Israel and the priests and the Leuites were not separated from the peoples of the lands with their things put far away, in reference to the Chanani—the Heththi, the Pherezi, the Iebousi, the Ammoni, the Moab, the Mosri and the Amori—because they have taken from their daughters for themselves and for their sons, and the holy seed was influenced by the peoples of the lands, and the hand of the rulers was in this faithlessness in the beginning.” And when I heard this word, I tore my garments and was quivering and was pulling out some of the hair of my head and some of my beard and was sitting in silence. And everyone who pursued the word of Israel’s God, because of the faithlessness of the exile—they gathered to me, and I kept sitting in silence until the evening sacrifice.

And at the evening sacrifice I got up from my humiliation. And when I had torn my garments, and I was quivering and was getting down on my knees and spreading out my hands to the Lord God and said, “O Lord, I was ashamed and hesitated to lift, O my God, my face to you, because our acts of lawlessness have multiplied above our heads, and our errors have been increased up to heaven. From the days of our fathers to this day we are in error, and for our acts of lawlessness we and our kings and our sons have been handed over in the hand of the kings of the nations, by sword and by captivity and by plundering and by shame of our face, as this day. And now the Lord, our God, was fair with us to leave us for salvation and give us support in the place of his holiness in order that he might brighten our eyes and grant us a little vitality in our slavery. Because we are slaves, the Lord, our God, has not forsaken us even in our slavery and inclined mercy upon us before the kings of the Persians, to give us vitality that they might raise up the house of our God and to repair its ruins and to give us a fence in Iouda and in Ierousalem.

“Our God, what shall we say after this? Because we have forsaken your commandments, which you gave us by the hand of your slaves the prophets, saying, ‘The land that you are entering to possess it is a land undergoing change by the changing of the peoples of the nations, with their things put far away, who they have filled it from mouth to mouth with their impurities.’ And now..."
do not give your daughters to their sons, and do not take some of their daughters for your sons, and never seek out their peace and their prosperity so that you may be strong and eat the good of the land and distribute it to your sons forever." And after all that is coming upon us for our evil deeds and for our great error—because there is none like our God, because you canceled our acts of lawlessness and gave us salvation, because we returned to scatter your commandments and to intermarry with the peoples of the lands, do not be provoked at us until destruction so that there is no remnant and survivor. O Lord, God of Israel, you are just, and now there is endurance for Israel in this. And now let us make a covenant with our God to cast out all the women and the issue from the house of God, from their tumult about the month, all the people sat in the open square of Ierousalem within the three days; this assembly of the exile.

Anathematized, and he himself banned from the elders demand—all his property will be given express orders—all his property will be anathematized, and he himself banned from the assembly of the exile. And all the men of Iouda and Beniamin assembled to Ierousalem within the three days; this was the ninth month. On the twentieth of the month, all the people sat in the open square of Ierousalem and wept and lifted up while weeping. And Sechenias son of Ieiel, of Elam's sons, answered and said to Esdras, "We were faithless with our God and set up foreign women from the peoples of the land, and now there is endurance for Israel in this. And now let us make a covenant with our God to cast out all the women and the issue from them, however you want. Arise, and scatter them with the commandments of our God, and let it be done according to the law. Arise! The word is upon you, and we are with you; be strong, and act." And Esdras arose and made the rulers, the priests and Leuites and all Israel swear to act according to this word. And they swore.

And Esdras arose from before the house of God and went to the treasure chamber of Ioanan son of Elisoub, and he went there. He did not eat bread and did not drink water, because he was mourning over the faithlessness of the exile. And they presented an utterance in Iouda and in Iesous son of Iosedek and his brothers: Maaseia and Eliezer and Jarib and Gadalia. And they gave their hand to put away their wives and errors—a ram of the flock for their error. And of Emmer's sons: Hanania and Zabdiam. And of Heram's sons: Masias and Elia and Samaia and Ieiel and Ozia. And of Phasour's sons: Elionenai, Maasia and Ismael and Nathanael and Iozabad and Elasa.

And of the Leuites: Iozabad and Samou and Kolia (that is, Kolitas) and Phetheia and Ioudas and Eliezer. And of the singers: Elisab. And of the gatekeepers: Solmen and Telmen and Odoue. And of Israel: of Phoros' sons: Ramia and Iazia and Melchia and Meamin and Eleazar and Hasabia and Banaia. And of Elam's sons: Maththania and Zacharia and Iail and Abdia and Ierimoth and Elia. And of Zaththoua's sons: Elieonai, Elisoub, Maththani and Iarmoth and Zabad and Oziza. And of Babi's sons: Ioanan, Hanania and Zabou, Othali. And of Bani's sons: Meoulam, Malouch, Adaias, Iasoub and Saal and Remoth. And of Phaathmoab's sons: Edne and Chalel and Banaia, Maasea, Maththania, Beselel and Banoui and Manasse. And of Heram's sons: Eliezer, Ieseia, Melchia, Samaias, Semeon, Benjamin, Malouch, Samaria. And of Hasem's sons: Maththani and Maththatha, Zabad, Eliphalet, Jeremi, Manasse and Semei. And of Bani's sons: Moodia, Amram and Ouel, Banaia, Badaia, Chelia, Ououania, Marimoth, Elisab, Maththania, Maththani and so did Banoui's sons and Semei's sons and Selemia and Nathan and Adaias, Machnadabou, Sesei, Arou, Ezriel and Selemia and Samarias, Selloum, Amarias, Ioseph. And of Nabou's sons: Ieiel, Maththathias, Zabad, Zebinlas, Iadai and Ioel and Banaia. All these had married foreign women, and they fathered sons by them.

10 And as Esdras prayed and as he declared, weeping and praying before the house of God, a very great assembly—men and women and young men—gathered to him from Israel, because the people wept and lifted up while weeping. And Sechenias son of Ieiel, of Elam's sons, answered and said to Esdras, "We were faithless with our God and set up foreign women from the peoples of the land, and now there is endurance for Israel in this. 23 And of the Leuites: Iozabad and Samou and Kolia (that is, Kolitas) and Phetheia and Ioudas and Eliezer. 24 And of the singers: Elisab. 11 (Neh 1.1) Words of Neemias son of Hachalia. And it happened in the month of Chaseleu, in the twentieth year, and I was in Sousan Habira, and one of my brothers, Hanani, he and men of louda came, and I asked them about those that survived, those who had been left over from the captivity, and about Jerusalem. And they said to me, "Those who are left over from the captivity there in the country are in great trouble and in shame, and the walls of Jerusalem are broken down, and its gates were burned with fire."

And I sat down and wept and mourned for days, and I was fasting and praying before the God of heaven. I sat down and wept and mourned for days, and I asked them about those that survived, those who had been left over from the captivity, and about Jerusalem. And they said to me, "Those who are left over from the captivity there in the country are in great trouble and in shame, and the walls of Jerusalem are broken down, and its gates were burned with fire."

4 And it happened, when I heard these words, I sat down and wept and mourned for days, and I was fasting and praying before the God of heaven, and I said, "Nay indeed, O Lord, you the strong and the great and the awesome God of heaven, one who keeps covenant and mercy with those who love him and keep his commandments, let now your ear be attentive to the prayer of your slave that I am praying before you today, day and night, for Israel's sons, your slaves, and I am declaring with regard to the sins of Israel's sons, which we have sinned against you. Both I and my father's house have sinned. In breaking up we broke up with you and did not keep the commandments and the ordinances and the judgments that you commanded your servant Moyses. Remember now the word that you commanded your servant Moyses, saying, 'You, if you are faithless, I will scatter you among the peoples, and if you return to me and keep my commandments and do them, if your dispersion is to the farthest skies, from there I will gather them and lead them to the place where I have chosen my name to encamp there.' And they are your servants and your people, whom you redeemed by your great power and by your strong hand. Nay indeed; rather, let your ear be attentive to the prayer of your slave and to the prayer of your servants who want to revere your name, and give now success to your servant today, and give him over to feelings of compassion before this man!"

And I was cupbearer to the king.

12 (2.1) And it happened in the month of Nisan, in the twentieth year of Arhasastha, the king. And wine was before me, and I took the wine and gave it to the king, and there was no one else before him. And the king said to me, "Why is your face sad," and, "You are not unwell, are you? This is nothing except sadness of the heart." And I was very much afraid. And I said to the king, "Let the king live forever! Why should my face not be sad, since the city, the home of my fathers' graves, was laid waste, and its gates have been consumed with fire?" And the king said to me, "For what are you looking in this matter?" And I prayed to the God of heaven and said to the king, "If it is good to the king and if your servant shall find favor before you so that you send him to Louda, to the city of my fathers' graves, I will also rebuild it." And the king and his concubine who was sitting beside him said, "How long will your journey be, and when will you return?" And it found favor before the king, and he sent me, and I gave him a limit. And I said to the king, "If it is good to the king, let him give me letters to the governors beyond the river so that I may go on my way until I arrive in Louda, and a letter to Asaph, the keeper of the park that belongs to the king, so that he will give me timber to cover the gates and for the wall of the city and for the house into which I shall enter it." And the king gave them to me, because the hand of God was good.

9 And I came to the governors beyond the river and gave them the king's letters, and the king had sent leaders of the force and horsemen with me. And Sanballat the Haroni and Tobia the slave, the Ammoni, heard it, and it displeased them that a person had come to seek good for the sons of Israel.

11 And I came to Jerusalem and was there for three days. And I got up during the night, I and a few men with me, and I told no one what God was putting into my heart to do along with Israel, and there is no animal with me except the animal which I ride upon it. And I went out by the gate of Golela and to the mouth of the fountain of the figs and to the gate of the dung. And I was crushing in the wall of Jerusalem, which they are pulling down. And its gates were consumed by fire. And I went on to the gate of Ain and in the king's swimming pool, and there was no place for the animal under me to continue. And I kept going up in the wall of the wadi by night and kept crushing in the wall. And I was in the gate of the ravine and returned. And those who were guarding did not know why I went and what I was doing, and until then I had not told the Judeans and the priests and the distinguished and the generals and the rest that were doing the work.

17 And I said to them, "You see the trouble in which we are in, how Jerusalem is in ruins, and its gates were given to fire. Come, and let us wall off Jerusalem's wall, and we will no longer suffer disgrace." And I reported to them the hand of God that was good upon me and the words that the king had spoken to me, and I said, "Let us arise and build!" And their hands were strengthened for the good. And Sanballat the Haroni and Tobia the slave, the Ammoni, and Gesam the Arabi heard, and they mocked us and came against us and said, "What is this matter that you are doing? Are you rebelling against the king?" And I returned word to them and said to them, "The God of heaven, he will give us success, and we are his pure slaves, and we will build it, and you have no share and righteousness and record in Jerusalem."

13 (3.1) And the great priest Elisoub and his brothers the priests set out and built the sheep gate. They consecrated it and set up its doors, and they consecrated it as far as the tower of the hundred, as far as the tower of Hanameel, 2 and at the hand of the sons of the men of Jericho and at the hand of the sons of Zakhour son of Amari.

3 And Hasana’s sons built the fish gate; they covered it and set up its doors and its bars and its bolts. 4 And at their hand, one of Ramoth son of Ouria son of Hakkos took control. And at their hand Mesoulam son of Barachiou son of Masezebel took charge. And at their hand Sadouk son of Baana took charge. 5 And at their hand the Thekoim took charge, and the Adoreem did not contribute their neck to their service.

6 And Ioida son of Phasek and Mesoulam son of Basodia—they took control of the gate of Iasona; they covered it and set up its doors and its bars and its bolts. 7 And at their hand Maltias the Gabaonite and Euaron the Meronothite, men of Gabaon and of Maspha, took control as far as the throne of the ruler “beyond the river”. 8 And beside them Oziel son of Harachias, one of the smiths, secured things. And at their hand Hananias son of Rokeim took control, and they left Jerusalem alone as far as the broad wall. 9 And at their hand Raphaia son of Hour, ruler of half the area around Jerusalem, took control. 10 And at their hand and opposite his home ledaia son of Heromaph took control. And at his hand Hattous son of Hasbania took control. 11 And a second Melchias son of Heram and Hasoub son of Phaathmoab took control as far as the tower of the Thannourim. 12 And at his hand Salloum son of Halloes, ruler of half the area around Jerusalem, took control, he and his daughters.

13 Hanoun and the inhabitants of Zano took control of the gate of the ravine; they built it and set up its doors and its bars and its bolts and a thousand cubits on the wall, as far as the gate of dung.

14 And Melchia son of Rechab, ruler of the area around Bethachcharam, took control of the gate of dung, he and his sons, and covered it and set up its doors and its bars and its bolts.

15 Then Salomon son of Coleze, ruler of the district of Maspha, fortified the gate of the fountain; he himself built it up and covered it and set up its doors and its bolts, and he built the wall of the pool of the fleeces at the shearing of the king, and as far as the stairs that go down from the city of Daud. 16 Behind him Neemias son of Azbouch, ruler of half the area around Bethours, took control as far as the garden of the grave of Daud and as far as the artificial pool and as far as Bethgabaram. 17 Behind him the Leuites took control: Raoum son of Bani, and at his hand Hasabia, ruler of half the area around Keila, took control for his surrounding area. 18 After him their brothers took control: Benei son of Hanadar, ruler of half the area around Keila. 19 And at his hand Azour son of Lesous, ruler of Masphe, controlled a second section of the tower of ascent, which joins the corner.

20 And after him Barouch son of Zabou took control of the next section from the corner to the door of Bethelisoub the great priest. 21 And after him Meramoth son of Ouria son of Hakkos controlled a second section from the door of Bethelisoub to where Bethelisoub leaves off. 22 And after him the priests, the men of Hachchechar, took control.

23 And after him Benjamin and Hasoub took control opposite their house. And after him Azaria son of Maasias son of Anania took control beside his house. 24 After him Bani son of Henadad controlled a second section, from Bethazzaria to the corner and as far as the bend. 25 Of Phalal son of Euzai from opposite the corner—and it is the upper tower that projects from the house of the king at the court of the guard—and after him Padia son of Phoros. 26 And the nathim were dwelling in Ophal as far as the garden of the gate of water to the east. And the tower is the one projecting.) 27 After him the Thekoim took control of a second section from opposite the great projecting tower and as far as the wall of Ophla.

28 Above the gate of the horses the priests took control, a man opposite his house. 29 After him Saddouk son of Emmer took control opposite his house. And after him Samaia son of Sechenia, the keeper of the gate of the east, took control. 30 After him Hanania son of Selemia and Hanom sixth son of Seleph took control of a second section. After him Mesoulam son of Barchia took control opposite his treasure chamber. 31 After him Melchia son of Sarephi took control as far as Bethannahinim and the hucksters opposite the gate of Maphekad and as far as the ascent at the bend. 32 And in the midst of the sheep gate the smiths and the hucksters took control.

14 (4.1) And it happened, when Sanaballat heard that we were building the wall, and he was upset and greatly enraged, and he mocked at the Judeans. 2 And he said in the presence of his brothers, “Is this the power of Somoron, that these Judeans are building the city for themselves? Are they, then, sacrificing? Will they, then, be strong, and will they today repair the scorched stones after they had become the rubbish heap of the land?” 3 And Tobias the Ammanite came beside him, and they said to themselves, “They will not sacrifice or eat in their place, will they? Will a fox not go up and break down their stone wall?” 4 Hear, O our God, for we have become despised, and return their taunt to their heads, and give them over to sneering in a land of captivity, and do not cover over lawlessness.

7 And it happened, when Sanaballat and Tobia and the Arabs and the Ammanites heard that the stature of the walls of Jerusalem was rising because the gaps were beginning to be closed, and it looked very bad to them. 8 And they all gathered together to come and get ready to fight in Jerusalem. 9 And we prayed to our God and set up an advance guard against them day and night because of their presence.

10 And loudas said, "The strength of the enemies was crushed. And there is much rubbish, and we will not be able to build on the wall." 11And those who were afflicting us said, "They will not know and will not see until we come into their midst and kill them and stop the work." 12And it happened, when the Judeans who lived next to them came, and they said to us, "They are coming up against us from all the places." 13And I stationed some into the lowest parts of the space behind the wall, in covered places, and I stationed the people according to divisions, their spears and their bows, with their swords. 14And I looked and stood up and said to the distinguished and to the generals and to the rest of the people, "Do not be afraid from before them. Remember our great and awesome God, and get ready to fight for your brothers, your sons and your daughters and your wives and your homes."

15 And it happened, when our enemies heard that it was known to us and that God had scattered their council, and we all returned to the wall, a man to his work. 16And it happened from that day on, half of the outcasts were doing the work and half were standing in defense, and there were spears and oblong shields and the bows and body-armor and the rulers behind every house of Iouda belonging to those who were building on the wall. 17And as for those who were lifting with lifters with weapons—with one hand he was doing his work and with one he was grasping the javelin. 18And as for the builders—a man with his sword strapped on his lower back—and they kept building, and the one who trumpeted with the horn was beside him. 19And I said to the distinguished and to the rulers and to the remanders of the people, "The work is wide-spread and great, and we are far away from before fear of God. 20And I did not take control over them by the work on the wall, and I did not seek the food of exaction and our vineyards and our homes. And bring out for yourselves the grain and wine and olive-oil from the money." 21And they said, "We will give these back and not seek these from them. We will do just as you say." And I called the priests and made them swear to do like this word. 22And I shook out the fold of my garment and said, "So may God shake out every man from his house and from his property who does not establish this word, and thus they will be shaken out and emptied." And all the assembly said, "Amen," and praised the Lord, and the people did this word.

14 From the day that he commanded me to be their ruler in the land of Iouda, from the twentieth year even to the thirty-second year of Arthasastha, twelve years, I and my brothers did not eat an ejection in abundance with everything, and I did not seek the food of exaction from them. 15And as for the first exactions, with which they burdened them before me, they also took the last money from them for food and wine, forty didrachmas. And their outcasts exercise authority over the people, and I did not do so, from before fear of God. 16And I did not take control over them by the work on the wall, and I did not acquire a field, and all who were gathered were there for the work. 17And the Judeans, one hundred fifty men, and those who came to us from the nations around us, were at my table. 18And what was prepared for one day was one bull calf, and they were preparing six choice sheep and a goat for me and among ten days wine in abundance with everything, and I did not seek the food of exaction with them, because the service was heavy on this people. 19Remember me, O God, for good, all that I have done for this people.

15 (5.1)And there was a great outcry of the people and their wives against their Judean brothers. 2And there were some, saying, "With our sons and our daughters, we are many, and we will get grain and eat and stay alive." 3And there are some, saying, "As for our fields and our vineyards and our homes—we are mortgaging them, and we will get grain and eat." 4There are some, saying, "As for our fields and our vineyards and our homes—

16 (6.1)And it happened, when it was heard to Sanaballat and Tobias and to Gesam the Arabia and to the rest of our enemies that I had built the wall, and there was no breath left in them. Up to that time I had not set up the doors in the gates. 2And Sanballat and Gesem sent to me, saying, “Come, and let us meet together in the villages in the plain of Ono.” And they were intending to do me harm. 3And I sent messengers to them, saying, “I am doing a great work, and I will not be able to come down, lest the work stop. Whenever I finish it, I will come down to you.” 4And they sent to me like this word, and I sent to them in the same manner. 5And Sanballat sent his servant to me and an open letter in his hand. 6And in it was written, “It was heard among the nations that you and the Judeans intend to rebel, which is why you are building the wall, and you are becoming their king. 7And besides these, you have set up prophets for yourself so that you might sit in Jerusalem as king in Judah. And now these words will be reported to the king. And now come, let us confer together.” 8And I sent to him, saying, “Their hands will slacken from this work, and it will not be done.” But now I strengthened my hands.

10 And I went into the house of Semiramis son of Dalaia son of Metabeel, and he was confined. And he said, “Let us gather together at the house of God, in the midst of it, and let us close its doors, and let the doors be shut and barred. And appoint advance guards from those living in Jerusalem, a man at his watch and a man opposite his home.” 11And I said, “Should a man like me run away? Or, what kind of man would enter the house and live?” 12And I perceived, and behold, God had not written in it: “Their hands will slacken from this work, and it will not be done.” But now I strengthened my hands.

13 A crowd against me, so I might become afraid and do so and sin and become a bad name for them so they could taunt me. 14 Remember, O God, against Tobias and against Sanballat as the acts of his and against the prophet Noadia and against the rest of the prophets who were trying to make me afraid.

15 And the wall was finished on the twenty-fifth of the month Eloul, in fifty-two days. 16And it happened, when all our enemies heard, and all the nations around us were afraid, and fear fell severely on their eyes, and they knew that this work came to be completed with the help of our God. 17And in those days letters were going from many of Iouda’s distinguished to Tobias, and those of Tobias were coming to them, because many in Iouda were bound by oath to him, because he was the son-in-law of Sechenia son of Eran, and his son Jonathan had taken the daughter of Mesoulam son of Barachia as wife. 19And they were telling me his words and were conveying my words to him, and Tobias sent letters to intimidate me.

(7,1) And it happened, when the wall was built, and I set up the doors, and the gatekeepers and the singers and the Leuites were reviewed. 2And I commanded my brother Hanania and Hanania, ruler of the bira in Jerusalem, because he was like a truthful man and feared God more than many. 3And I said to them, “The gates of Jerusalem will not be opened until at the same as the sunb, and while they are still keeping watch, let the doors be shut and barred. And appoint advance guards from those living in Jerusalem, a man at his watch and a man opposite his home.” 4And the city was wide and large, and the people in it were few, and no homes had been built.

5 And God gave it into my heart, and I assembled the distinguished and the rulers and the people into a company. And I found the book of the company—those who came up at first, and I found written in it:

6 And these are sons of the country who went up from the captivity of the exile which Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, had exiled, and they returned to Jerusalem and to Iouda, a man to his city, 7with Zorobabel and Iesous, and Neemias, Azaria, Reelma, Naemani, Mardochaios, Balsan, Maaspharath, Esdras, Bagouiai, Naoum, Baana, Masphar, men of the people of Israel: 8Sons of Phoros, two thousand one hundred seventy-two.

43 The Leuites: sons of Jeshous, in reference to Kadmiel, in reference to the sons of Houdouia, seventy-four. 44 The singers: sons of Asaph, one hundred forty-eight. 45 The gatekeepers: sons of Selloum, sons of Ater, sons of Tolmol, sons of Akoub, sons of Hatita, sons of Sabi, one hundred thirty-eight.

60 All the nathnim and sons of Salomon’s slaves, three hundred ninety-two.

61 And these went up from Thermelah, Thelaresa, Cheroub, Eron, Jemmer, and they could not declare their paternal houses and their seed, whether they were from Israel: 62 sons of Dalaia, sons of Boua, sons of Tobia, sons of Nekoda, six hundred forty-two. 63 And from the priests: sons of Ieale, sons of Pherida, sons ofHangaba.

68 And some of the portion of the leaders of paternal families contributed to the work of Hthersatha, they contributed to the treasury one thousand gold coins, fifty saucers and thirty chthonoth\footnote{bHeb = robes} of the priests. 71 And some of the leaders of paternal families gave to the building fund twenty thousand gold coins and two thousand two hundred minas\footnote{cone mina = 100 drachmas} of silver, and the rest of the people gave twenty thousand gold coins, two thousand two hundred minas of silver and sixty-seven chthonoth of the priests.

73 And the priests and the Leuites and the gatekeepers and the singers and those from the people and the nathnim\footnote{a} and all Israel settled in their cities.
month 15 and that they should sound with trumpets in all their cities and in Jerusalem. And Esdras said, “Go out to the mountain and bring foliage of olive trees and foliage of cypress wood and foliage of myrtle and foliage of palm and foliage of the leafy tree to make tents, in accord with what is written.” 16 And the people went out and brought them and made tents for themselves, a man on his housetop, and in their courts and in the courts of the house of God and in the squares of the city and as far as the house of Ephraim. 17 And all the assembly, those who had returned from the captivity, made tents and lived in tents, because from the days of Jesous son of Naue to that day sons of Israel had not done so. And there was very great rejoicing. 18 And day by day, from the first day to the last day, he read from the book of the law of God, and they kept the feast seven days, and on the eighth day there was a finale, according to the judgment.

19 (9.1) And on the twenty-fourth of this month the sons of Israel gathered with fasting and in sackcloth and with ashes on their head. 2 And the sons of Israel were separated from every foreign son, and they stood and declared their sins and the acts of lawlessness of their fathers. 3 And they kept their stance and read in the book of the law of the Lord, their God, and they were declaring to the Lord and doing obeisance to the Lord, their God. 4 And Jesous and the sons of Kadmiel, Sechニア the son of Sarabia, sons of Chanani, stood at the ascent of the Levites and cried out with a loud voice to the Lord their God. 5 And the Levites, Jesous and Kadmiel, said, “Stand up. Bless the Lord, our God, from everlasting and to everlasting, and they will bless your glorious name and exalt it and give you all your blessings. 6 And Esdras said: “You yourself are the Lord alone; you made heaven and the heaven of heavens and all their position, the earth and all that is on it, the seas and all that is in them, and you give everything life, and the armies of the heavens do obeisance to you. 7 You are the Lord God. You made a choice in Abram and brought him out of the country of the Chaldeans and made for him a name, Abraam. 8 And you found his heart faithful before you and made a covenant with him to give him and his seed the land of the Chananites and Chettites and Amorrites and Pherezites and Jebusites and Gergesites, and you established your word, because you are righteous. 9 And you saw the humiliation of our ancestors in Egypt and heard their cry at the Red Sea. 10 And you gave signs in Egypt against Pharaoh and against all his servants and against all the people of his land, because you knew that they acted insolently against them, and you made a name for yourself, as this day. 11 And you broke asunder the sea before them, and they passed through in the midst of the sea on dry land, and those who pursued them closely you threw into the depths, like a stone in violent water. 12 And by day you led them with a pillar of cloud, and during the night with a pillar of fire, to give them light on the way in which they should go in it. 13 And you came down upon Mount Sina and spoke to them from heaven and gave them straightforward judgments and laws of truth and ordinances and good commandments. 14 And you made known your holy sabbath to them; you commanded them commandments and ordinances and law by the hand of your slave Moyses. 15 And you gave them bread from heaven in their famine, and you brought water for them out of the rock for their thirst. And you told them to go in to possess the land to which you stretched out your hand to give them.

16 "And they and our fathers behaved arrogantly and stiffened their neck and did not listen to your commandments, 17 and they refused to obey and were not mindful of your wonders that you performed with them, and they stiffened their neck, and they gave a beginning to return to their slavery in Egypt. And you are the God who forgives sins, is gracious and merciful, slow to anger and very gracious, and you did not forsake them. 18 Furthermore, they made a cast-metal bull calf for themselves and said, ‘These are the gods who brought us up out of Egypt’ and committed great provocations. 19 And you in your great mercies did not forsake them in the wilderness; you did not turn away from them the pillar of cloud for leading them on the way by day and the pillar of fire to lighten for them the way in which they should go in it during the night. 20 And you gave your good spirit to instruct them and did not withhold your manna from their mouth and gave them water in their thirst. 21 And forty years you sustained them in the wilderness; there was no lack of anything for them; their clothes did not grow old, and their sandals did not tear. 22 And you gave them kingdoms and allotted them peoples, and they took possession of the land of Seon, king of Hesebon, and the land of Og, king of Basan. 23 And you multiplied their sons like the stars of heaven and brought them into the land about which you told their fathers, and they possessed it. 24 And you wiped out before them the inhabitants of the land of the Chananites and gave them and their kings and the peoples of the land into their hands, to do with them as was pleasing before them. 25 And they captured lofty cities and took possession of homes filled with all sorts of goods, hewn cisterns, vineyards and olive orchards and every sort of fruit tree in abundance, and they ate and were filled and became fat and were nourished on your great goodness.

26 “And they changed and departed from you and cast your law behind their body and killed your prophets, who had warned them to turn them back to you, and they committed great provocations. 27 And you gave them into the hands of their oppressors, and they oppressed them. And they cried out to you in their time of oppression, and you heard from your heaven, and through your great mercies you gave them deliverers and delivered them from the hand of their oppressors.
28 And after they rested, they returned to doing what is evil before you, and you abandoned them to the hands of their enemies, and they ruled among them. And again they cried to you, and you listened from heaven and rescued them by your many mercies. 29 And you repeatedly warned them in order to turn them to your law, and they did not listen but sinned against your commandments and judgments by the doing of which a person shall live by them. And they presented a disobedient back and stiffened their neck and did not listen.
30 And many years you lasted with them and repeatedly warned them by your spirit by the hand of your prophets, and they did not give ear, and you gave them into the hand of the peoples of the land. 31 And in your many mercies you did not make an end of them and forsake them, because you are strong and merciful and compassionate.
32 “And now, our strong, great, mighty and awesome God, in keeping the covenant and your mercy, let all the hardship not be treated lightly before you, which found us and our kings and our rulers and our priests and our prophets and our fathers and among all your people from the days of the kings of Assour even until this day. 33 And you are just in all that has come upon us, for you have dealt truthfully, and we did wrong. 34 And our kings and our rulers and our priests and our fathers did not practice your law and did not heed your commandments or your testimonies about which you repeatedly warned them. 35 And even they—in your rule and in your great goodness that you bestowed on them and in the broad and rich land that you set before them—were not subject to you and did not turn from their wicked habits.
36 Behold, we are slaves today, and the land that you gave to our fathers to eat its fruit 37 belongs to the kings whom you gave over us because of our sins, and they have power over our bodies and over our animals as seems best to them, and we are in great affliction.”
38 And by all these things we are setting forth a pledge of faith and are writing it down, and all our rulers, our Levites, our priests are sealing it.

28 And the rest of the people, the priests, the Leuites, the gatekeepers, the singers, the nathini-am and every one who adheres to the law of God from the people of the land, their wives, their sons, their daughters, every one who knows and understands, were prevailing against their brothers, and they cursed them and entered into a curse and an oath to go in God’s law, which was given by the hand of Moyeses the slave of God, to observe and to do all the commandments of the Lord and his judgments, and in order not to give our daughters to the peoples of the land. And we will not take their daughters for our sons. 31 And the peoples of the land who bring in merchandise and any sale on the sabbath day to sell, we will not buy from them on the sabbath and on a holy day. And we will release the seventh year and a claim of every hand.
32 And we will lay on ourselves the commandments to charge ourselves yearly one-third of a didrachma for the service of the house of our God 33 for the loaves of the presence and the sacrifice of perpetuity and for the whole burnt offering of perpetuity of the sabbaths, of the new moons, for the feasts and for the sacred things and the items for sin to make atonement for Israel and for the projects of the house of our God. 34 And we, the priests and the Leuites and the people, have cast lots for the assignment of carrying wood, to bring it for the house of our God, for the houses of our paternal families, for seasons of the times, year by year, to burn on the altar of the Lord our God, as it is written in the law, 35 and to bring the first products of our land and the first products of the fruit of every tree, year by year, to the house of the Lord, and to the house of our God for the priests who minister in the house of our God, the firstborn of our sons and of our livestock, as it is written in the law, and the firstborn of our cattle and of our flocks.
37 We will bring the first fruit of our grain and the fruit of every tree, wine and oil, for the priests, to the treasure chamber of the house of God, and the tithes of our soil for the Leuites. And the Leuites themselves are collecting the tithes in all the cities of our service, 38 and the priest, the son of Aaron, shall be with the Leuite in the tithe of the Leuite, and the Leuites shall bring up the tithe of the tithe to the house of our God, to the treasure chambers at the house of God. 39 Because the sons of Israel and the sons of Leui shall bring into the storerooms the first fruits of the grain and wine and the oil, and the holy vessels and the priests that minister and the gatekeepers and the singers are there. And we will not neglect the house of our God.

21 And the rulers of the people lived in Jerusalem, and the rest of the people cast lots to bring one out of ten to live in Jerusalem, the holy city, and nine-tenths remained in the other cities. And the people blessed all the men who willingly offered to live in Jerusalem.

8 And in the days of Josiah, his brothers, the priests and their brothers in the reign of Darius the Persian: 23 sons of Levi were chiefs of paternal families and priests in the reign of Darius the Persian. And Ezra was the scribe. 24 And the rulers of the Levites were Soni of Hilkiah—being a son of Phahathiel—he being a son of Malchiel—he being a son of Iatli—being a son of Iessia. 8 And after him Gebi, Seli, having been recorded in the book of the words of the days, even until the days of Neemias. And Ezra was the priest and the scribe.

27 And at the rededications of the wall of Jerusalem they sought the Levites in their places, to bring them to Jerusalem, to celebrate the rededication and the dedication of the house of God. 28 And the sons of the singers and some from the region that circles around Jerusalem and some from villages and some from the fields gathered, because the singers in Jerusalem built the villages for themselves. 30 And the priests and the Levites were purified, and they purified the people, the gatekeepers and the wall.

31 And they brought the rulers of Judah up onto the wall and appointed two great ones—command with the cymbals and harps and cymbals. 28 And the sons of the singers and some from the region that circles around Jerusalem and some from villages and some from the fields gathered, because the singers in Jerusalem built the villages for themselves. 30 And the priests and the Levites were purified, and they purified the people, the gatekeepers and the wall.

of Samaia—being a son of Maththania—being a son of Michaia—being a son of Zakchour—being a son of Asaph, 36 and his brothers were Samaia and Oziel, Gelolia, Maaia, Nathanael and Ioudas, Hanani, so that they might sing with the songs of Dauid the man of God, and Esdras the scribe was in front of them at the gate of Ain, opposite Dauid the man of God, and Esdras the scribe was Hanani, so that they might sing with the songs of and Oziel, Gelolia, Maaia, Nathanael and Ioudas, and the Leuites were sanctifying for sons of Aaron. 37 And concerning praise, the second one meeting them went out, and I followed it, and half of the people were on the wall above the tower of the Thennorim even as far as the broad wall and above the gate of Ephraim and to the Eisiana gate and to the fish gate and at the tower of Hanameel and from the tower of Mea, even as far as the sheep gate, and they stood in the gate of the guard. 38 And the two of praise stood in the house of God, and I and half of the generals with me and the priests Eliakim, Maasias, Beniamin, Michaias, Elioniai, Zacharias, Hananias and Semeias and Eleazar and Oziyas and Ioanna and Melchias and Ailam and Ezour and the singers were heard and reviewed. 39 And they offered great sacrifices on that day and rejoiced, because God made them rejoice greatly, and their wives and their children rejoiced, and the joy in Ierousalem was heard from far away. 40 And on that day they appointed men over the treasure chambers for stores, for the first fruits and for the tithes and for the things collected in them for the rulers of the cities, portions for the priests and for the Leuites, because there was joy in Iouda both over the priests and over the Leuites that stood. 41 And they guarded the guard stations of the house of their God and the guard stations for purification and the singers and the gatekeepers, according to the commandments of Dauid and his son Salomon. 42 Because in the days of Dauid, Asaph from the beginning was the first of those that sing both hymn and praise to God, and in the days of Zorobabel all Israel was giving portions for the singers and the gatekeepers, the rule of a day for its day, and were sanctifying for the Leuites, and the Leuites were sanctifying for sons of Aaron.

23 (13.1) On that day there was read from the book of Moyses in the hearing of the people, and there was found written in it that Ammanites and Moabites should not enter in the assembly of God forever, because they did not meet the sons of Israel with bread and with water and hired Balaam against him to curse him, and our God turned the curse into a blessing. And it happened, when the people heard the law, and every person of mixed race in Israel was separated. 4 And before this, Elisib the priest, while living in the treasure chamber of the house of our God, being next of kin to Tobias, also prepared for him a large treasure chamber, and there they had previously put the manaa and the frankincense and the vessels and the tithe of grain and of the wine and of the oil (a commandment of the Leuites and of the singers and of the gatekeepers) and the first fruits of the priests. And in all this I was not in Ierousalem, because in the thirty-second year of Arthasatha, king of Babylon, I went to the king. And after the end of the days, I made a request from the king and went to Ierousalem. And I gained understanding in the wrong that Eliasib had done for Tobias, to prepare a treasure chamber for him in the court of the house of God. And it seemed very bad to me, and I threw all the vessels of the house of Tobias out from the treasure chamber. And I spoke, and they cleansed the treasure chambers, and I brought back there the vessels of the house of God, the manaa and the frankincense.

10 And I knew that the portions of the Leuites had not been given, and the Leuites and the singers, who were doing their task, had fled, a man to his field. And I remonstrated with the generals and said, "Why was the house of God forsaken?" And I gathered them together and set them in their station. And all Iouda brought the tithe of the wheat and the wine and the oil into the storehouses upon the hand of Selemia the priest and Sadok the scribe and Phadaia from the Leuites, and upon their hand was Hanan son of Zakchour—he being son of Maththaniou, because they were considered faithful to them to distribute to their brothers. Remember me, O God, in this, and let not the mercy I did in the house of the Lord God be wiped out.

15 In those days I saw in Iouda people treading wine presses on the sabbath and bringing in sheaves of grain and loading them on donkeys and also bringing into Ierousalem on the sabbath day wine and grapes and figs and all kinds of burdens, and I warned them on their day of sale. And they settled in it, bringing fish and selling all kinds of merchandise on the sabbath to the sons of Iouda, and in Ierousalem. And I remonstrated with the free sons of Iouda and said to them, "What is this evil matter that you are doing and profaning the sabbath day? Did not our fathers act in this way? And our God brought all these terrible things upon them and upon us and upon this city. And you are adding wrath to Israel to profane the sabbath.”

19 And it happened, when the gates in Ierousalem settled down before the sabbath, and I spoke, and they shut the gates, and I spoke so that they would not be opened until after the sabbath. And I set some of my servants over the gates so that people would not carry burdens on the sabbath day. And they all spent the night and made sales outside Ierousalem once and twice. And I warned them and said to them, “Why do you spend the night in front of the wall? If you do so again, I will extend my hand against you.” From that time on they did not come on the sabbath.

22 And I told the Leuites who were purifying themselves and were coming, guarding the gates, to keep the sabbath day holy. Remember me for these things, O God, and spare me according to the fullness of your mercy.

23 And in those days I saw Judeans who had set up women of Azotia, Ammanites, Moabites (and half of their sons speak Azotian and do not know how to speak Judean), and I contended with them and cursed them and beat the men among them and pulled out their hair, and I made them take an oath by God: “If you give your daughters to their sons and if you take some of their daughters for your sons!”

26 Did not Solomon, king of Israel, sin in this way? And among many nations there was no king like him. And he was beloved to God, and God gave him as king over all Israel. And foreign women ruined this man. 27 And shall we listen to you to do all this evil to be faithless with our God to set up foreign women?

28 And one of the sons of Ioada the son of Elisoub, the great priest—he was the son-in-law of Sanaballat the Horanite—and I chased him away from me. 29 Remember them, O God, because of their close kinship to the priesthood and the covenant of the priesthood and the Leuites.

30 And I cleansed them from everything foreign, and I established classes for the priests and Leuites, a man according to his task, the gift of the wood carriers, in seasons of the times and in the bakchouria. Remember me, O our God, for goodness.

ESTHER

TO THE READER

Edition of Greek Text
The NETS version of Esther is based on the full critical edition prepared by Robert Hanhart (Septuaginta: Vetus Testamentum Graecum Auctoritate Academiae Scientiarum Gottingensis editum VIII.3: Esther [Gottingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1966]).

The Two Greek Versions
Esther is one of three books in the Hebrew canon to have survived in two distinct Greek versions. The Göttingen critical edition of Esther prints both Greek texts. The “Septuagint” (Old Greek = OG) version is printed on the top half of the page with the siglum o’. The second Greek version is known as the Alpha-text (AT) and is printed on the bottom of the page with the siglum L, because at the time of its printing, this Greek version was thought to be Lucianic. It is not known with certainty which of the two Greek versions is the older or if one text is a revision of the other. Recent scholarship has challenged the traditional view that the o’ text of Esther was the first Greek translation made of the Hebrew and that the AT was a later revision of it. The o’ text carries a colophon, which, if historically reliable, would allow for three possible dates for the origin of the translation: 114/13 BCE, 78/77 BCE, or 48 BCE. Scholars disagree on which is most likely. Both Greek versions have been translated for NETS. The NRSV translates the o’ text into English with the title “Esther: The Greek Version Containing the Additional Chapters” and includes it within the Apocryphal/Deuterocanonical Books.

Both the o’ text and the AT contain six additional chapters that are found only in the Greek textual tradition. These six additional chapters are almost identical in both Greek versions of Esther, indicating that they were not a part of the original Greek text of either, but were inserted later into both versions, probably being copied from one of the Greek versions of Esther to the other.

There is no manuscript evidence that the six additional chapters found in the Greek versions ever existed in Hebrew or Aramaic. Furthermore, their style and syntax indicates that they were composed in Greek, with the possible exception of addition D. Additions B and E are royal memos and exhibit an overworked style that satirizes the pompous and self-serving character of the king.

The Alpha-Text of Esther (Göttingen L)
The Alpha-text (AT) of Esther is a second Greek version of the story preserved in only four manuscripts. It is a significantly shorter telling of the story than both the Hebrew (MT) and the other Greek version (o’), and its versification differs from both. This translation follows the Göttingen versification.

The siglum L, indicating Lucianic, was assigned to this text in the nineteenth century because it was preserved in manuscripts containing the Lucianic recension of Reigns (Samuel-Kings). Although it is no longer considered Lucianic by most scholars who have examined it, there is no agreement on its origin, its relationship to the Hebrew Esther, or to the other Greek version. Current theories propose that it is (a) a revision of the o’ text, (b) a second, independently made translation of the MT, (c) a translation of another Hebrew text of Esther of uncertain relationship to the MT, or (d) a midrashic re-write of the Esther story.

Apart from the six additional chapters, the syntax and style of both Greek versions of Esther are similar to other books of the Septuagint that have been translated from the Hebrew. Of the two versions, the o’ text of Esther follows the Hebrew MT more closely and, when the six additional chapters are excluded, agrees with it semantically in about 87% of its translation units and formally in about 62% of its translation units. In comparison, the AT, which is about 20% shorter than the MT even including the six additional chapters, exhibits about 81% semantic agreement with the MT and about 52% formal agreement. Hence, the AT is the freer translation of the two, if its Hebrew Vorlage is presumed to have been sufficiently similar to the MT. The AT is also the more lexically diverse of the two versions, using a greater variety of Greek words to render a given Hebrew word than does the o’ text.
Although the o’ text follows the MT closely in most chapters, it is not an isomorphic translation such that each word of the Hebrew is represented by a word in the Greek, a translation practice that results in Hebraisms that are not idiomatic Greek. Nevertheless, a few Hebraisms can be found, for instance in 6.13 (“you will fall when you fall”) where the Greek syntax reflects a literal rendering of the Hebrew infinitive absolute and, for instance, in 8.3 where the Greek verb προστίθημι expresses the Hebrew idea “to do again” or “keep on doing.” Elements in the Hebrew that are synonymous or redundant are often expressed by only one element in the Greek. Nouns and proper names are often omitted or replaced with a pronoun (and sometimes vice versa). Explanatory phrases are sometimes added, especially to make God’s presence explicit (e.g., 6.13). The o’ text translates about 80% of the text found in the MT.

The second Greek text of Esther, the AT, or L text, is shorter than the o’ text (and the Hebrew MT) by about 20%. It represents only about half the text found in the MT. More often than not, the AT follows the word order of the MT and agrees with it about as often as does the o’ text. The primary difference between the AT and the MT is the many small pluses and minuses, though many of these are due to inherent differences between the Hebrew and Greek languages. Most of the significant pluses and minuses in the AT compared to the MT are found in chapters 8–10 and appear to be caused by a deliberate decision (a) to minimize Esther’s role while magnifying Mardochaios’, (b) to reflect less interest in the origin and celebration of Purim, and (c) to highlight in the AT the role of the Jews (Judeans) as advantageous to the king in the political intrigue of the pagan court with a special interest in the theme of political assassination. Like the o’ text, the AT is not an isomorphic translation and typically preserves the sense but not the form of the Hebrew idioms involving “face,” “hand,” “eyes” and “heart.”

The current consensus of scholarship denies that one Greek version of Esther is a recension of the other, but the o’ text and AT are clearly translations of the same story as extant in the MT because they virtually never agree against the MT (though the AT and MT sometimes agree against the o’ text). Chapters 8–10 of the two Greek versions differ sufficiently to deny a literary dependence between the two and to suggest that both Greek versions were redacted extensively and independently when addition E was introduced into each. Chapter 8 shows the least agreement between the two Greek versions because they share very few of the same syntactic units, but those few that they do share show a high percentage of agreement.

The same six additional chapters found in both Greek versions appear not to have been in the original text of either, with perhaps the exception of addition D interwoven into chapter 5. It is likely that this additional material was added first to one Greek version, whether all at once or over time, and then later copied to the other. Additions A and F clearly function together, being the apocalyptic dream of Mardochaios (A) and its interpretation (F) that frame the events of the Esther story as a fulfillment of restored covenant blessing as predicted in the prophecy against Babylon in Jeremiah 28 (LXX). Additions C and E share sufficient common vocabulary to indicate that E was composed to answer the prayers of Mardochaios and Esther voiced in C, which therefore must have logically, if not chronologically, preceded the composition of E. Moreover, addition C shows influence from the Greek translation of Moyses’ intercessory prayer in Deut 9.26 LXX. Although conflicting evidence allows no consensus about which Greek version is the older, there is some evidence that the AT preserves the older form of additions A, B, C, E, and F. This does not necessarily mean that the additions were first introduced into the AT, only that the texts of these additional chapters have experienced fewer changes since being introduced into the AT than they have in the o’ text. That may be because the o’ text enjoyed a longer and wider transmission history than the AT, which is extant in only four manuscripts.

THE NETS TRANSLATION OF ESTHER

The Hebrew MT was the text from which the NRSV English translation was made. Where the Göttingen Greek text agrees with the Hebrew, the NRSV text was allowed to stand in NETS, where acceptable. For the six additional chapters for which there is no extant Hebrew, the Göttingen text was compared to the NRSV English translation of the Greek Esther, which was allowed to stand unless the NRSV violated NETS policy.

Versification

The NETS translations of Esther follow the versification of the Göttingen edition. Numbers in parentheses refer to the parallel text. The six additional chapters are of particular note. Referred to by the letters A–F in the Göttingen edition, and likewise in NETS, they traditionally have been taken out of narrative sequence and numbered as chapters 11–16. Following Jerome’s pattern, they were displaced to the end of the book following chapter 10, making narrative nonsense of the material. These six additional chapters are translated in the NETS edition in the position in which they are found in the Greek versions.

In the second year when Artaxerxes the Great was king, on the first day of Nisa, Mordechaios the son of Iairos son of Semeias son of Kisaios, from the tribe of Benjamin, saw a dream. He was a Judean man dwelling in the city of Susa, a great man, serving in the court of the king. Now he was of the group of exiles which Nabouchodonosor, king of Babylon, took captive from Jerusalem with Iechonias the king of Judea. And this was his dream: Look! Shouts and confusion! Thunder and earthquake! Chaos upon the earth! Look! Two great dragons came forward, both ready to fight, and a great noise arose from them! And at their sound every nation prepared for war, to fight against a nation of righteous people. Look! A day of darkness and gloom! Affliction and anguish! Oppression and great chaos upon the earth! And the whole righteous nation was in chaos, fearing the evils that threatened themselves, and they were ready to perish. Then they cried out to God, and from their cry, as though from a small sound of this cry. It was a testimony to all the peoples—a day of darkness and gloom and chaos of war! And every nation prepared to fight. And we cried out to the Lord because of the sound of their cry. And there came from a small spring abundant water, a great river. Light, the sun rose, and the lowly were exalted and devoured those held in esteem. Then when Mordechaios, who had seen this dream and what God had determined to do, awoke, he had it on his heart and sought until nightfall to understand it in every detail.

And Mordechaios took his rest in the courtyard with Gabatha and Tharra, the two eunuchs of the king who guarded the courtyard. He both overheard their deliberations and inquired into their ambitions, and learned that they were preparing to lay hands on Artaxerxes the king, and he told the king about them. Then the king interrogated the two eunuchs, and when they confessed, they were led away. And the king wrote these things in the record, and Mordechaios wrote concerning these things. And the king ordered Mordechaios to serve in the court and gave to him gifts for these things. But Haman son of Hamadathos, a Bougean, was highly esteemed by the king, and he sought to harm Mordechaios and his people because of the two eunuchs of the king.

Now it happened after these things in the days of Artaxerxes—this Artaxerxes controlled one hundred twenty-seven lands from India—in those days when King Artaxerxes was enthroned in the city of Susa, in the third year when he was king, he gave a feast for his Friends and for the other nations and for those highly esteemed of the Persians and Medes and for the rulers of the satrapies. And after these things, after he had displayed to them the great wealth of his kingdom and the glory of the celebration of his wealth for one hundred eighty days and when the days of the wedding feast were completed, the king gave a wine party for all those found in the city of Susa—from great to small—for seven days inside the king's

A In the second year when Assyros the Great was king, on the first day of the month of Adar Nisan (which is Dystros Xanthikos) Mordechaios the son of Iairos son of Semeias son of Kisaios, of the tribe of Benjamin, saw a dream. He was a great man, one of the exiles whom Nabouchodonosor, king of Babylon, took captive with lechonias, the king of Judea. And this was his dream: Look! A shout and a cry of confusion! Thunder and earthquake and chaos upon the earth! Two dragons! And they came forward, both ready to fight, and a noise arose from them! And everything was troubled by the sound of this cry. It was a testimony to all the peoples—a day of darkness and gloom and chaos of war! And every nation prepared to fight. And we cried out to the Lord because of the sound of their cry. And there came from a small spring abundant water, a great river. Light, the sun rose, and the rivers were exalted and swallowed those held in esteem. Then, when Mordechaios arose from his sleep, he pondered what the dream meant and what the Mighty One was preparing to do. And his dream was hidden in his heart, and at every opportunity he was trying to figure it out. Its interpretation would become clear to him on the day when Mordechaios napped in the courtyard of the king with Astaos and Thedeutes, the two eunuchs of the king. And he overheard their words and their schemes as they were plotting to assault Assyros the king to kill him.

So after thinking about it, Mordechaios reported about them. Then the king questioned the two eunuchs and found Mordechaios’ words true, and when the eunuchs confessed, they were led away. So Assyros the king wrote about these things, and Mordechaios was written about in the book of the king so that these things would be remembered. And the king commanded concerning Mordechaios that he serve in the court of the king and conspicuously guard every door. And he assigned to him for these things Haman son of Hamadathos, a Macedonian in the presence of the king. And Haman was seeking to harm Mordechaios and all his people because of what he had said to the king concerning the eunuchs, because they had been executed.
wine party for the nations present in the city, for six days, in the courtyard of the house of the king. 6It had been decorated with linen and cotton curtains hung on cords of linen and purple attached to gold and silver blocks on pillars of marble and other stones. There were couches of gold and silver on a mosaic pavement of emerald, mother-of-pearl and marble. There were gossamer throws in many colors embroidered with roses round about. 7The goblets were made of gold and silver, and a miniature cup made of ruby was on display that was worth thirty thousand talents. The wine was abundant and sweet, which the king himself drank. 8Now this wine party was not by established law, but so the king wanted it, and he ordered his stewards to do as he and his men wanted.

9 And Astin the queen gave a wine party for the women in the royal quarters where King Artaxerxes was. 10 Now on the seventh day, when he was feeling merry, the king told Haman and Bazan and Tharra and Boraze and Abataka and Tharaba, the seven eunuchs who attended King Artaxerxes, to bring the queen to him in order to proclaim her queen and to place the diadem on her and to show her to the rulers and her beauty to the peoples, because she was beautiful. 12But Astin the queen did not obey him to come with the eunuchs. The king was angry, and he was enraged! 13Then he said to his Friends, "This is how Astin spoke, therefore give your ruling and judgment on this." 14So Arkesaios, Sarsathaio and Malesear, the rulers of the Persians and Medes who were close to the king and seated first by the king, came to him. 15And they reported to him what, according to law, must be done with Astin the queen, because she had not done the things ordered by the king through the eunuchs. 16Then Mouchaios said to the king and the rulers, "Astin the queen has wronged not only the king, but also all the rulers and governors of the king." 17(For he had reported to them the words of the queen and how she defied the king.) "Therefore, just as she defied King Artaxerxes, so this very day the other princesses of the rulers of the Persians and Medes, when they hear what was said to the king by her, will similarly dare to dishonor their husbands. Therefore, if it pleases the king, let him issue a royal order, and let it be written according to the laws of the Medes and Persians, and let it not be applied differently, neither let the queen any longer come to him, and let the king give her royal position to a woman better than she. Let the law declared by the king be heard, whatever law he enacts in his kingdom. And thus all women shall bestow honor on their own husbands, from the poor to the rich." This word was good in the heart of the king, and he acted readily according to this advice.
After these things, the king got over his anger, and he no longer remembered Astin, recalling what she had said and how he condemned her. Then the king’s ministers said, “Let pure girls be sought for the king, beautiful in appearance. And the king shall appoint officers in all the lands of his kingdom and let them select maidenly girls, beautiful in appearance, into Susa the city, into the harem, and let them be entrusted to the king’s eunuch, the guard of the women; then let cosmetics and other care be given. And whichever woman is pleasing to the king will be queen instead of Astin.” The advice pleased the king, and he did so.

Now there was a Judean man in Susa the city, and his name was Mardochaios the son of Iairos son of Semeias son of Kisaioi, from the tribe of Benjamin, who was an exile from Jerusalem, which Nabouchodonosor, king of Babylon, had taken captive. And this man had a foster child, a daughter of Aminadab, his father’s brother, and her name was Esther. And when her parents died, he trained her for himself as a wife. And the girl was beautiful in appearance. So when the king’s ordinance was heard, many girls were gathered into Susa the city under the charge of Gai. Esther was also taken to Gai, the guard of the women. The girl pleased him and found his favor, and he hastened to provide her with cosmetics and her portion of food and with seven girls assigned to her from the palace, and he provided well for her and her attendants in the harem. Esther did not reveal her race or her ancestry, for Mardochaios had commanded her not to tell. Each day Mardochaios walked around in front of the harem court, to learn how Esther would fare.

When nightfall came, she was led in, and in the early morning she was dismissed. And as the king considered all the virgins, Esther was shown to be the most splendid. And she found his personal favor and compassion, and he placed the royal diadem upon her head. And so the king held a splendid wedding feast for Esther and gave rest to all the provinces.
Now it happened after these things that King Assyroes promoted Haman son of Hamadathos, a Bougean, and advanced him and set his throne above those of his Friends so that all would bend over and bow themselves on the ground before him. Therefore, although everyone would do obeisance to him in accord with the king's ordinance, Mardochaios would not do obeisance before him. And the servants of the king saw that Mardochaios was not doing obeisance before Haman, and the servants of the king said to Mardochaios, "Why do you disobey the king and not do obeisance before Haman?" So he told them that he was a Judean. And they informed Haman about him. Now when Haman learned, he was provoked to jealousy against Mardochaios, and rage burned within him. So he planned to destroy Mardochaios and all his people on one day. Since Haman was provoked and all his rage was stirred up, he turned red, driving him from his sight. And with a malicious heart, he kept speaking evil to the king about Israel, saying, "There is a people scattered throughout all the kingdoms, a people of war and insubordinate, who have different laws from your laws, O King. They do not pay heed though they are known among all nations because they are evil, and they set aside your commands to undermine your glory. Therefore, if it pleases the king and this judgment is good in his heart, let this nation be given to me for destruction, and I will pay into the treasury ten thousand talents of silver."

So the king said to him, "Keep the silver, but treat the nation as you wish." Then the king's secretaries were summoned on the thirteenth day of the first month, and they wrote as Haman commanded to the governors and to the rulers of every land—from India to Ethiopia—to one hundred twenty-seven lands and to the rulers of the nations in their own language in the name of Artaxerxes the king. It was sent by couriers throughout Artaxerxes’ empire, to destroy the race of the Judeans in one day of the twelfth month, which is Adar, and to seize their property.
Now Mardochoeus learned the outcome, he tore his clothes and put on sackcloth and sprinkled ashes, and as he rushed through the square of the city, he cried out with a loud voice, “An innocent nation is being destroyed!” He went up to the king’s gate and stood there, for it was not permitted him to enter the courtyard clothed with sackcloth and ashes. And in every land, wherever the letters were posted, there was crying and wailing and great mourning among the Judeans; they put sackcloth and ashes on themselves. The queen’s attendants and eunuchs came in and told her, and she was troubled when she heard what had happened.

3 Copies of the letters were posted in every land, and it was ordered all the nations to be ready for this day. The matter proceeded quickly even to Susa. While the king and Haman were sitting down to drink, the city was being thrown into confusion.

Now Mardochoeus learned everything that had happened, and the city of Susa was in turmoil because of the things that had taken place. For all the Judeans there was great and bitter sorrow in the whole city. Now Mardochoeus went to his home, folded up his clothes and put on sackcloth. After he had sprinkled ashes on himself, he went out as far as the outer courtyard and stood there, for he could not enter the royal precincts in sackcloth. So he called one eunuch and sent him to Esther. And the queen said, “Take off his sackcloth, and bring him in.” But he did not want to.

4 14(1) And he subjoined the following letter:

B The Great King Artaxerxes writes as follows to the rulers and satraps of the one hundred and twenty and seven lands from India to Ethiopia:

15(2) “Being the ruler of many nations and master of the whole world, I have determined (not high-mindedly with presumption of authority but always acting in moderation and with kindness) to secure lasting tranquility in the lives of my subjects and, making my kingdom peaceable and open to travel to its full extent, to restore the peace desired by all people.

16(3) When I was asking my counselors how this might be accomplished, Haman—who has excelled among us in sound judgment, by unchanging goodwill and steadfast fidelity having attained the second place in the kingdom—pointed out to us that among all the tribes in the world there is scattered a certain hostile people, who have laws contrary to those of every nation and continually disregard the ordinances of kings so that the joint administration of the kingdom that we honorably intend cannot be achieved. Therefore, whereas we understand that, since this nation stands constantly all alone in opposition to all humankind, perversely following an estranging manner of life due to their laws and since it is ill-disposed to our interests, doing the worst harm and in order that our kingdom may not attain stability.

6 We therefore have ordered that you utterly destroy those indicated to you in the letters written by Haman, who is in charge of the affairs of state and is our second Father—including women and children—by the daggers of their enemies, without any compassion or restraint, on the fourteenth day of the twelfth month, Adar, of this present year, so that those who have long been hostile and so remain, when they in one day have gone down to Hades by force, may in the time hereafter render the matters of state completely tranquil and untroubled for us.”

3 14 Copies of the letters were posted in every land, and it was ordered all the nations to be ready for this day. The matter proceeded quickly even to Susa. While the king and Haman were sitting down to drink, the city was being thrown into confusion.

4 Now Mardochoeus learned the outcome, he tore his clothes and put on sackcloth and sprinkled ashes, and as he rushed through the square of the city, he cried out with a loud voice, “An innocent nation is being destroyed!” He went up to the king’s gate and stood there, for it was not permitted him to enter the courtyard clothed with sackcloth and ashes. And in every land, wherever the letters were posted, there was crying and wailing and great mourning among the Judeans; they put sackcloth and ashes on themselves. The queen’s attendants and eunuchs came in and told her, and she was troubled when she heard what had happened.

4 Now Mardochoeus learned everything that had happened, and the city of Susa was in turmoil because of the things that had taken place. For all the Judeans there was great and bitter sorrow in the whole city. Now Mardochoeus went to his home, folded up his clothes and put on sackcloth. After he had sprinkled ashes on himself, he went out as far as the outer courtyard and stood there, for he could not enter the royal precincts in sackcloth. So he called one eunuch and sent him to Esther. And the queen said, “Take off his sackcloth, and bring him in.” But he did not want to. Instead he said, “Thus you will say to her,
Do not turn away from going to the king and flattering his person for the sake of me and my people, remembering your humble days when you were being brought up by my hand, because Haman, who is the second in command, has spoken to the king against us to put us to death. Therefore call upon God, and speak about us to the king, and deliver us from death!"

6(9) So he made known to her the tribulation of Israel. 7(10) And she sent to him saying as follows, (11) "You know as well as anyone that whoever goes to the king uninvited, he to whom he does not hold out his golden scepter will be subject to death. And I have not been called to him for thirty days. So how can I go now, not being invited?"

9(13) So Mardochaios sent to her and said to her, (14) "If you ignore your nation and do not help them, then surely God will be to them a helper and deliverance, but you and your father’s household will perish. And who knows if for this time you were made queen?"

12(17) And Mardochaios did so.

Then he petitioned the Lord, remembering all the works of the Lord.

And he said, “Lord, Lord, King of all powers, for the universe is subject to your authority, and there is no one who can oppose you when it is your will to save Israel, because you have made heaven and earth and every wonderful thing in it under heaven. You are Lord of all, and there is no one who can withstand you, the Lord. You know all things; you know, O Lord, that it was not in insolence nor pride nor for any love of glory that I did this, namely, to refuse to do obeisance to this proudful Haman, for I would have been willing to kiss the soles of his feet for Israel’s safety! But I did this so that I might not set human glory above the Lord. And I and my attendants will also abstain from food. And then I will go to the king, though it is against the law, even if it be that I perish."

And Mardochaios went and did what Esther had commanded him.
divine glory, and I will not do obeisance to anyone but you, my Lord, and I will not do these things in pride. 8And now, O Lord God, King, God of Abraam, spare your people, for they are looking to ruin us, and they desired to destroy the inheritance that has been yours from the beginning. 9Do not neglect your portion, which you redeemed for yourself out of the land of Egypt. 10Hear my petition, and have mercy upon your allotment; turn our mourning into feasting, that we may live and sing hymns to your name, O Lord; do not silence the mouth of those who praise you.”

11 And all Israel cried out from their strength, because their death was before their eyes.

12 Then Esther the queen fled to the Lord, seized with the agony of death. 13Taking off the garments of her glory, she put on the garments of distress and mourning, and instead of costly perfumes she covered her head with ashes and dung, and she utterly humbled her body; every part that she loved to adorn she covered with her tangled hair. 14Then she petitioned the Lord, God of Israel, and said: “O my Lord, you alone are our king; help me, I who am alone and have no helper except you, because my danger is in my hand. 16I have heard from my birth in the tribe of my family that you, O Lord, took Israel out of all the nations and our fathers from among all their forebears, to be an everlasting inheritance, and you did for them all that you said. 17And now we have sinned before you, and you have delivered us into the hand of our enemies, because we honored their gods. You are righteous, O Lord! 19And now they were not satisfied that we are in bitter slavery, but they have put their hands into the hands of their idols, to annul the stipulation of your mouth and to destroy your inheritance and to stop the mouths of those who praise you and to extinguish the glory of your house and your altar, to open the mouth of the nations for the mighty deeds of vain things, and that a mortal king be admired forever.

22 “O Lord, do not surrender your scepter to those who don’t exist, and do not let them laugh at our downfall, but turn their plan against them, and make a public example of him who began this against us. 23Remember, O Lord; make yourself known in a time of our affliction, and embolden me, O King of the gods and Master of all dominion! 24Put eloquent speech in my mouth before the king, and change his heart to hate the one who fights against us so that there may be an end of him and those who agree with him. 25But save us by your hand, and help me, who am alone and have no one except you, O Lord. You have knowledge of everything. 26And you know that I hate the glory of the lawless and abhor the bed of the uncircumcised and of any foreigner. 27You know my predicament—that I abhor the sign of my proud

18(12) Then Esther the queen fled to the Lord, seized with the agony of death. (13)She took off the garments of glory from herself and every sign of her splendor, and she put on distress and mourning, and instead of costly perfumes she covered her head with ashes and dung, and she utterly humbled her body; every sign of her beauty and adornment she covered humbly with her lovely hair. (14)Then she petitioned the Lord and said: “O Lord, King, you alone are a helper; help me, I who am humble and have no helper apart from you, because my danger is in my hand. (15)Now I have heard from the book of my heritage that you redeemed Israel out of all the nations and their fathers from among their forebears, appointing Israel over them to be an everlasting inheritance. And you did for them what you said to them and provided whatever they asked. (17)We have sinned before you, and you delivered us into the hand of our enemies if we honored their gods. 22You are righteous, O Lord! And now they were not satisfied that we are in bitter slavery, but they have put their hands into the hands of their idols, to annul the stipulation of your mouth, and to extinguish the glory of your house and your altar, to open the mouths of enemies for the mighty deeds of vain things, and that a mortal king be admired forever.
position that is upon my head on days when I appear in public. I abhor it like a menstrual cloth, and I do not wear it on the days when I am in private. 28And your slave has not eaten at Haman's table, and I have not honored the king's banquet nor drunk the wine of libations. 29Your slave has not rejoiced since the day of my change until now, except in you, O Lord, God of Abraam. 30O God who has power over all things, hear the voice of those who despair, and save us from the hand of evildoers. And save me from my fear!

And it happened on the third day, as she ceased praying, she took off the garments of service and put on her glory. 2Then, when she had become majestic, after calling upon the all-seeing God and savior, she took along two of her attendants; 3on one she leaned gently for support, 4while the other followed, holding her train. 5She was radiant with the full flush of her beauty, and her face looked happy as if she were cheerful, but her heart was in anguish from fear. 6When she had gone through all the doors, she stood before the king. He was seated on the throne of his kingdom, clothed in the full array of his splendor, all covered with gold and precious stones. And he was most terrifying.

12 Then he lifted the golden rod and placed it on her neck; he welcomed her and said, "Speak to me." 13She said to him, "I saw you, Lord, like a divine angel, and my heart was shaken from fear of your glory. 14For you are marvelous, lord, and your face is full of grace." 15And while she was speaking, she fell from faintness. 16Then the king and all his servants were troubled, and he reassured her.

5 And the king said to her, "What do you want, Esther? What is your request? Even up to half of my kingdom, and it shall be yours." 4Then Esther said, "Today is my special day. If, therefore, it pleases the king, let both he and Haman come to the dinner that I will prepare today." 5Then the king said, "Bring Haman quickly so that we may do what Esther has said." So both came to the dinner that Esther had spoken about. 6During the drinking, the king said to Esther, "What is it, Queen Esther? And it shall be, whatever you ask." 7Then she said, "This is my petition and request: 8If I have found favor before the king, let the king
9 So Haman went out from the king very happy and rejoicing. But when Haman saw Mardochaios the Judean in the courtyard, he became very angry.

10 So he went home and called his friends and Zosara his wife, and he announced to them his riches and the glory that the king had bestowed on him and how he had made him to be first and to be leader of the kingdom. 11 Haman said, “The Queen has not summoned with the king anyone but me to the dinner. Tomorrow also I have been invited. 12 Yet all this does not please me when I see Mardochaios the Judean in the courtyard.” 13 Then his wife Zosara and his friends said to him, “Let a pole fifty cubits high be cut for you, and early in the morning speak to the king and have Mardochaios hanged on it; then you, go to the dinner with the king, and celebrate.” This advice pleased Haman, and he had the pole prepared.

6 But the Lord kept sleep from the king that night, and he told his teacher to bring the written daily annals, to read to him. 2 And he found the entries written concerning Mardochaios, how he informed the king about two of the king’s eunuchs, while they were on guard and sought to lay hands on Artaxerxes. 3 Then the king said, “What honor or distinction have we bestowed on Mardochaios?” The king’s servants said, “You have done nothing for him.” 4 While the king was inquiring about Mardochaios’ goodwill—Look! Haman was in the courtyard! The king said, “Who is in the courtyard?” Now Haman had just entered to speak to the king to hang Mardochaios on the pole that he had prepared for him. 5 So the king’s servants said, “Look! Haman is standing in the courtyard.” And the king said, “Call him.” 6 So the king said to Haman, “What should I do for the person whom I want to extol?” And Haman said to himself, “Whom would the king want to extol if not me?” 7 So he replied to the king, “For the person whom the king wants to extol, let the king’s servants bring a fine linen robe, which the king wears, and a horse upon which the king rides. 8 And let him give to him one of the king’s most noble Friends take these things and clothe him, and let him mount him on the horse and proclaim through the square of the city, saying: ‘So shall it be for every person whom the king extols.’” 9 Then the king said to Haman, “You have spoken well. So do to Mardochaios the Judean who serves in the court. And let not a word of what you have said be transgressed.” 10 So Haman took the robe and the horse and robed Mardochaios in the royal robes and mounted him on the royal horse and proclaimed through the square of the city, saying: “This is how it shall be for every person whom the king extols.”

20(9) And it was reported to Haman likewise, and he marveled. And the king departed and retired. 21(10) So Haman went into his home and gathered together his friends, his sons and Zosara his wife. 12 And he boasted saying how the queen had invited no one on her special day “except the king and me only. Tomorrow also I have been invited. 22(13) Yet this alone distresses me: whenever I see Mardochaios the Judean in the court of the king, and he does not bow down to me.” 23(14) Then his wife Zosara said to him, “He is from the race of the Judeans. Since the king has allowed you to destroy the Judeans and the gods have given you a day of destruction to take revenge on them, let a pole fifty cubits high be cut for you and be set up, and hang him on the pole. And early in the morning you shall speak to the king about him. And now go; rejoice with the king.” 24 This pleased Haman, and he did so.

but the mighty one kept sleep from the king that night, and he told his teacher to bring the written daily annals, to read to him. and he found the entries written concerning Mardochaios, how he informed the king about two of the king’s eunuchs, while they were on guard and sought to lay hands on Artaxerxes. and the king asked, “who is in the courtyard?” now Haman had just entered to speak to the king to hang Mardochaios on the pole that he had prepared for him. so the king’s servants said, “look! Haman is standing in the courtyard.” And the king said, “Call him.” so the king said to Haman, “what should I do for the person whom I want to extol?” and Haman said to himself, “whom would the king want to extol if not me?” so he replied to the king, “for the person whom the king wants to extol, let the king’s servants bring a fine linen robe, which the king wears, and a horse upon which the king rides. and let him give to him one of the king’s most noble friends take these things and clothe him, and let him mount him on the horse and proclaim through the square of the city, saying: ‘so shall it be for every person whom the king extols.’” then the king said to Haman, “you have spoken well. so do to Mardochaios the Judean who serves in the court. and let not a word of what you have said be transgressed.” so Haman took the robe and the horse and robed Mardochaios in the royal robes and mounted him on the royal horse and proclaimed through the square of the city, saying: “this is how it shall be for every person whom the king extols.” so the king said to Haman, “run quickly, and take the horse and robe as you have said, and do so to...
Mardochaios the Judean who sits in the gateway.
And let not your word transgressed.”

13 Now when Haman realized that it was not he himself who would be extolled, but that it was Mardochaios, his heart was utterly broken, and his spirit became feeble.

14(11) And Haman took the robe and the horse, showing reverence to Mardochaios even on the very same day on which he intended to impale him. 15And he said to Mardochaios, “Tear off the sackcloth.” 16And Mardochaios was distressed as one dying, and with anguish he took off the sackcloth and put on the garments of glory. 17And Mardochaios thought he saw a sign, and his heart was toward the Lord, and he was mystified in silent fear. 18And Haman hastened to put him on horseback. 19And Haman led the horse outside and went before him proclaiming, “Thus shall it be done for the man who honors the king, whom the king wishes to extol.” 20(12)And so Haman went to his place downhearted, and Mardochaios went to his home. 21(13)Haman explained to his wife everything that had happened to him. 22His wife and his wise men said, “Ever since you spoke evil about him, evil things have been coming to you; be quiet, because God is among them.”

23(14) While they were still speaking, someone arrived hurrying him to the wine party. And so he was cheered up, and when he had covered the distance, he reclined with them on time.

7 So the king and Haman went in to drink with the queen. 2And the king said to Esther on the second day as they were drinking, “What is it, Queen Esther? What is your petition and what is your request? Let it be yours, up to the half of my kingdom.” 3Then she answered and said, “If I have found favor with the king, let my life be given at my petition, and my people at my request. 4For we have been sold, I and my people, to be destroyed, to be booty and to be enslaved—we and our children as male and female slaves—and I kept silent. For the slanderer is not worthy of the court of the king.” 5Then the king said, “Who is this who dared to do this deed?” 6So Esther said, “A man who is an enemy! Haman is this wicked one!” Then Haman was terrified because of the king and the queen.

7 The king rose from the banquet and went into the garden, but Haman was begging the queen, for he saw himself in deep trouble. 8Then the king returned from the garden. Now Haman had fallen on the couch, entreating the queen. And 8(6)So Esther was emboldened and said, “Haman, your Friend, is this liar, this evil man!”
the king said, “So then, you even violate my wife in my own house?” When Haman heard this, he covered his face. 9Then Bougathan, one of the eunuchs attending the king, said, “Look! Haman has even prepared a pole for Mardochaios, who spoke up on behalf of the king, and a pole fifty cubits tall has been erected at Haman’s.” And the king said, “Let him be crucified upon it.” 10So they hanged Haman on the pole that had been prepared for Mardochaios. Then the king got over his anger.

8On that very day King Artaxerxes granted to Esther all that belonged to Haman the slanderer, and Mardochaios was summoned by the king, for Esther had revealed that he was related to her. 2Then the king took the signet ring, which he had taken from Haman, and gave it to Mardochaios. So Esther appointed Mardochaios over everything of Haman’s.

3 Then she spoke again to the king, and she fell before his feet and pleaded that he revoke the evil of Haman and what he had done to the Judeans. 4So the king held out the golden rod to Esther, 5and Esther rose and stood before the king. And Esther said, “If it pleases you and if I have found favor, let an order be dispatched to revoke the letters sent by Haman, which were written to destroy the Judeans who are in your kingdom. 6For how can I bear to see the suffering of my people? And how can I bear to be saved amidst the destruction of my lineage?” 7Then the king said to Esther, “If everything belonging to Haman I gave and turned over to you, and him I hanged upon the pole, because he plotted to lay hands on the Judeans, what more do you seek? 8You also write in my name as it pleases you, and seal it with my ring, for whatever is written as the king commands and sealed with my ring cannot be countermanded.”

9 And so the secretaries were summoned in the first month, which is Nisa, on the twenty-third day of the same year, and they wrote to the Judeans what had been commanded to the administrators and rulers of the satrapies from India to Ethiopia, one hundred twenty-seven satrapies country by country, each according to its own language. 10It was written by the king and sealed with his ring, and they sent the orders by couriers, 11how he ordered them to live in accordance with their laws in every city, both to help themselves and to deal with their adversaries and their enemies as they wished, 12on a single day in the whole kingdom of Artaxerxes, on the thirteenth of the twelfth month, which is Adar.

What is written below is a copy of the letter:

"The Great King Artaxerxes, to the rulers of the lands from India to Ethiopia, one hundred twenty-seven satrapies, and to those who are loyal to our interests, greetings.

2 "Many people, who are frequently honored

22 So he wrote the following letter: "The Great King Assyeros, to the rulers of the one hundred and twenty-seven lands from India to Ethiopia and to the satraps who are loyal to our interests, greetings.

23(2) "Many people, who are frequently hon-with the greatest kindness of their benefactors, become the more ambitious and not only seek to harm those subject to us, but not being able to deal with prosperity, they even undertake to scheme against their own benefactors. They not only abolish gratitude from among people, but also, carried away by the boasts of those who are inexperienced in goodness, they even presume to escape the evil-hating divine justice, who always observes everything. Furthermore, many times encouragement has implicated many of those appointed to places of authority, those entrusted to administer the affairs of friends, making them partly responsible for the shedding of innocent blood, and has brought about irremediable calamities by the malicious lie of an evil disposition of people who misconstrue the sincere goodwill of their sovereigns.

7 "And it is possible to see this not so much from the more ancient records as we handed them down, as it is right at your feet, when you examine things impiously perpetrated by the pestilent behavior of those who hold power unworthily. And it is possible to look out hereafter in order that we may render the kingdom quiet for all people, with peace, utilizing changes and always discerning what comes to our attention with a rather considerate response. For whereas Haman son of Hamadathos (a Macedonian who was in truth a foreigner to the blood of the Persians and quite devoid of our kindness), when he was entertained by us as our guest, obtained the goodwill that we have for every nation to such an extent that he was publicly proclaimed our Father and was continually done obeisance to by all as the second person to the royal throne, but being unable to restrain his arrogance, he made it his business to deprive us of our rule and our breath and by the crafty deceit of ruses asked to destroy Mardochaios, our savior and constant benefactor, and Esther, the innocent companion of our kingdom, together with their whole nation. For when by these methods he had caught us undefended he thought that he would transfer the power of the Persians to the Macedonians.

15 "But we find that the Judeans, who were consigned to annihilation by this thrice-accursed man, are not criminals but are governed by most righteous laws and are children of the most high, most great, living God, who has directed the kingdom for us and for our ancestors in the most excellent order.

17 "You will therefore do well not to carry out the letters sent by Haman son of Hamadathos, because he who did these things has been crucified at the gates of Susa with his whole household, since the God who prevails over all things has recompensed him quickly with the deserved judgment.

19 "And you will do well to post a copy of this letter publicly in every place to allow the 24(7) "And it is possible to see this from the records that have been handed down to us, and to the extent that we duly see what lies at our feet due to the savagery of those that hold power, it is possible to look out in the future and to render the kingdom quiet for all nations with peace, since we do not utilize slanders but manage the matters that come to our attention with consideration. For as our guest, Haman son of Hamadathos, the Bougean (who was in truth a stranger to the thinking of the Persians and quite devoid of our kindness), obtained so fully the goodwill from us for every nation to such an extent that he was publicly proclaimed our Father and was continually done obeisance to by all as the second person to the royal thrones. But, unable to restrain his arrogance, he undertook to divest us of our rule and our breath and by crafty ruses fangled to destroy Mardochaios, our constant savior, and Esther, his innocent partner, together with their whole nation. For when by these methods he had caught us undefended he thought that he would bring about an alienation of the rule of the Persians to the Macedonians.

27(15) "Therefore, we find that the Judeans, who were consigned to you by this thrice-accursed man, are not criminals but are governed by most righteous laws and are even children of the only and true God, who has directed the kingdom for us until now in the most excellent order.

28(17) "Therefore, do well not to pay attention to the letters previously sent to you by Haman, because he himself who did such things has been crucified at the gates of Susa, since the Judge who always sees all things has recompensed him with the deserved penalty.

29(19) "So let a copy of this letter be posted in every place, so the Judeans might both live by their Judeans to live in accordance with their own precepts and to join in helping them in order that they might defend themselves against those who attack in the time of oppression, on the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, Adar, on that same day. For God, who rules over all things, has made this day to be a joy for his chosen race instead of a day of destruction for them.

Therefore, you also shall celebrate this with all good cheer as a holiday among your commemorative feasts so that both now and hereafter it may be deliverance for us and for the well-disposed Persians, but for those who plot against us, a memorial of destruction.

Every city and country, without exception, that does not do according to this by spear and fire shall be consumed with wrath. It shall be made not only impassable for people, but also most hostile to wild animals and birds for all time.

Now in the twelfth month, on the thirteenth day of the month that is Adar, the letter written by the king arrived. On that same day the opponents of the Judeans perished, for no one resisted, because they feared them. For the rulers and the tyrants and the royal secretaries esteemed the Judeans; for the fear of Mardochaios did not only impassable for people but also for wild animals and birds.

And every city and country that does not do according to this by spear and fire shall be consumed with wrath. It shall be stretched out to wild animals and birds for all time.

And a public notice containing these things was posted also in Susa. And the king authorized Mardochaios to write whatever he wished.

So Mardochaios sent out letters and sealed them with the king's signet ring, saying that his people should each remain in their own land and celebrate a feast to God. And the letter which Mardochaios sent contained these things:

"Haman sent to you letters containing thus, 'Hasten quickly to send the disobedient nation of the Judeans to me for destruction.' But I, Mardochaios, inform you that the one who did this has been hung at the gates of Susa, and his household has been despatched. For this one wished to kill us on the thirteenth of the month that is Adar."

Then Mardochaios went out wearing the royal clothing and a diadem of purple linen, and the horsemen went out in a hurry to perform what the king had commanded, and the ordinance was posted also in Susa. Then Mardochaios went out, wearing the royal robe, with a gold crown and a diadem of purple linen, and when the people in Susa saw him they rejoiced.

For the Judeans there was light and gladness; in every city and country wherever the ordinance was posted, wherever the proclamation was made, there was gladness and joy among the Judeans, a feast and mirth. And many of the nations were circumcised and became Judeans out of fear of the Judeans.

And the king said to Esther, "How have your people here and in the surrounding countryside fared?"

And Esther said, "Let it be granted to the Judeans to destroy and plunder whomever they wish."

I.e. the 14th and 15th of Adar
And he agreed. (16) And they killed seventy thousand one hundred men.

So Mardochaios recorded these things in a book and sent it to the Judeans who were in the kingdom of Assyros—both far and near—to keep these days for hymns and rejoicing in the place of pain and grief, the fourteenth and fifteenth. And he sent portions to the poor, and they welcomed them. Because of this these days are called Phouraia, because of the lots that fell on these days as a memorial.

Now the rest of the Judeans who were in the kingdom also gathered and defended themselves and gained relief from their adversaries. For they killed fifteen thousand of them on the thirteenth of Adar, but they plundered nothing. But the Judeans in the city of Susa gathered together also on the fourteenth and did not rest. They celebrated also the fifteenth with joy and gladness. Therefore for this reason, the Judeans who are scattered in every land outside celebrate the fourteenth day of Adar as a holiday with gladness, each sending portions to those nearby. But those living in the large cities also celebrate the fifteenth of Adar as a joyful holiday, sending portions to those nearby.

Now Mardochaios recorded these things in a book and sent it to the Judeans—as many as were in the kingdom of Artaxerxes, to those near and far, to keep these days, the fourteenth and fifteenth of Adar—for on these days the Judeans gained relief from their enemies—and the whole month, which was Adar, in which matters had been turned for them from sorrow into joy and from mourning into a holiday, to celebrate it as days of feasting and gladness, sending portions to their friends and to the poor.

So the Judeans accepted just what Mardochaios had written to them—how Haman son of Hamadathos, the Macedonian, had warred against them, inasmuch as he had proclaimed a decision and had cast the lot to destroy them, and how he went in to the king, telling him to hang Mardochaios, but as much evil as he had devised to bring upon the Judeans came upon him, and he himself and his children were hanged.

Because of this, these days are called Phrourai, because of the lots (because in their language they are called Phrourai), because of the words of this letter, and as much as they had suffered because of these things, and as much as had happened to them. He established them, and the Judeans accepted them for themselves and their descendants and all who had joined them and surely not to do otherwise. And these days are a memorial, kept from generation to generation, by city, family and country. These days of Phrourai shall be celebrated for all time, and the commemoration of them shall never cease among their generations.

 nadab, along with Mardochaios, the Judean, wrote what they had done, and the confirmation of the

 there was light and sun and abundant water; Es-

 5The nations are those that gathered to destroy the name of the Judeans. 6And my nation, this is Israel, who cried out to God and were saved. The Lord has saved his people, and the Lord has rescued us from all these evils, and God has done signs and great wonders that have not happened among the nations. 7For this purpose he made two lots, one for the people of God and one for all the nations, 8and these two lots came to the hour and the right time and to the day of decision before God, and for all the nations. 9And God remembered his people and vindicated his own inheritance.

 the fourteenth and fifteenth of that same month, will be observed by them with a gathering and joy and rejoicing before God, from generation to generation forever among his people Israel.”

 and Kleopatra, Dositheos, who said he was a priest and a Leuite, and Ptolemy his son brought the isted, and Lysimachus son of Ptolemy, one of those in Ierousalem, translated it.

IOUDITH

Edition of the Greek Text
The NETS translation of the book of Ioudith is based on the edition of R. Hanhart (Septuaginta: Vetus Testamentum Graecum Auctoritate Academiae Scientiarum Gottingensis editum VIII.4: Iudith [Göttingen: Van- denhooeck & Ruprecht, 1979]). While I have followed Hanhart’s critical text for the most part, there are a few instances in which, to my mind, the Greek manuscript evidence commends an alternative reading as representing the earliest form of the Greek text. These departures from Hanhart are duly noted as they arise. In three places (3.8; 4.9; and 6.6), I am convinced that a copying error must have crept into the text early in its history and that consequently the original reading has been obscured; in these passages, emendation was called for without the support of a Greek manuscript. In each case the reading I have followed does enjoy attestation by the Syriac text, which itself represents an early translation of the Greek.

Place of Ioudith Within NETS
Although the book of Ioudith is demonstrably the translation of a Semitic work, most likely Hebrew, its parent text vanished sometime in late antiquity. Consequently, the present translation cannot serve the synoptic purpose of NETS with the NRSV. I have nevertheless endeavored to provide a translation which is faithful to the principles and aims of NETS.

General Character
One of the aims of the NETS translator is to capture in English the constitutive character of the Septuagintal text. For much of the corpus, this means that the translator must squarely address the fact that the book he or she is rendering is itself a translation. In this respect, the book of Ioudith is no exception. From its language one can infer with some measure of confidence not only that the text represents the translation of a Hebrew parent, but that it represents a certain kind of translation, namely, one which has rendered its parent in a relatively metaphrastic fashion; this is to say that within the constraints of grammaticality, the Greek of the translation shows every indication of an isomorphic and quantitative fidelity to the language of its source. Implicit in the verbal texture of any translation is its relationship with another text in another language. In an interlinear translation, this relationship is characterized by a high degree of dependence: the Greek of Ioudith reads as it does in large measure because the Hebrew of its parent read as it did. The image NETS has adopted to capture this profile is that of interlinearity, the picture of one text following another, word-for-word, line-by-line. What this image conveys is the relative transparency of the Greek translation to the Semitic discourse it renders.

Semantics
Although upon reading Ioudith one is struck by the peculiar way in which familiar Greek words are used by the translator, it must nevertheless be stressed that idiosyncratic usage is the exception rather than the norm. Yet unconventional usage in Ioudith needs an explanation. In an interlinear translation the frame of reference within which a given word is deployed has been defined almost entirely by the task of translation itself, i.e., the need to provide lexical equivalents. A given word was chosen by the translator precisely because it was deemed an appropriate rendering of the corresponding word in the parent text. Its coherence with the larger verbal context of the target language was not a primary consideration, and so it is that we find Greek words which, at first blush, behave more or less like Semitic ones. This does not mean that they have somehow taken on Semitic meanings; on the contrary, it is upon Greek linguistic convention that the translator erects his interlinear edifice. Conventional Greek meanings had to be presumed if the Greek text was to discharge its constitutive function vis-à-vis its parent, i.e., as an extended series of glosses.

Under the paradigm of interlinearity one can identify various approaches to the task of selecting suitable lexical equivalents. Thus, while certain translations within the Septuagintal corpus exhibit a tendency to stereotypical rendering, where one Greek word is assigned to a Semitic counterpart and then deployed consistently as its equivalent, others will show markedly less reliance on such one-to-one equations. As far as one can tell in the absence of its parent, the book of Ioudith can be characterized by its use of numerous Greek words to render a single Hebrew item, hence by semantic differentiation. Consequently, the book boasts a rich vocabulary. Such differentiation should not be seen to imply, however, that the translator’s usage is always felicitous. One senses at times that it is not the context that motivates his word choice so much as the principle of variety itself. Furthermore, he tends to negotiate the meaning of the parent text in an atomistic fashion, if not word-by-word then at least phrase-by-phrase. This follows directly from the premise of interlinearity. It gives rise to many isolate renderings, word choices which reflect the translator’s understanding of a corresponding Hebrew item but which have been made at the expense of conventional Greek usage. While the translator may thereby offer his reader considerable interpretive purchase on a small unit of the parent text, the price paid is often as not the overall coherence of the Greek prose.

Although I have noted semantic differentiation within the translation, further qualification is needed. For although the Greek translator employs a large vocabulary, he exhibits a tendency to use his words in accordance with the distribution of their Hebrew counterparts. Greek words are evidently assigned to items in the source language and then deployed according to this equivalency. Put simply, certain Greek words seem to tag along with the Hebrew words they render; this can be inferred from their distribution, which is often distinct from that found in Greek prose of this period. Not surprisingly, there is at times a certain tension between word and context. An example of this is provided by the Greek verb ποιέω (“to make”), the core meaning of which pertains to the production of things external to some agent. This verb was evidently assigned to Hebrew תָּאָשׁ, which in very many cases denotes agency without a view to production. The result is that the translator repeatedly deploys ποιέω in contexts which, while fully appropriate for the Hebrew item, would have undoubtedly occasioned the use of another verb in compositional Greek.

For certain items the translator relaxes his lexical bravado and chooses to convey the repetitive character of the parent text. While his usage may be consistent with contemporary Greek convention, the frequency with which a given word occurs will often arise directly from Hebrew literary style. So for example the translator’s use of the verb ἐξέρχομαι (“to go out”), which likely rendered Hebrew לֵא, is a fitting equivalent, and the meaning of the Greek is never strained by its use. At the same time, the persistence with which this word occurs lends the translator’s prose an unmistakably Hebraic quality.

It is important to emphasize that on many occasions the translator’s choice of vocabulary is altogether apt. His penchant for variety even leads him to draw upon literary usage seldom found elsewhere in the translated corpus. At 14.9, for instance, rather than use εὐφρόνω (“cheerful”) to convey the cheerful response of the people to Ioudith’s account of her triumph, he supplies the much less common form εὐφρόσυνος (see Esth 9.19), which carries poetic associations altogether fitting to the heightened atmosphere of the scene.

The translator’s use of the Greek language, while constrained by his translation technique, remains the product of one whose first language was likely to have been Greek. Coming as it does from the hand of one at home in Hellenistic culture, Ioudith is often best understood against this background. A striking example of this is to be found in Ioudith’s song (16.6) where she makes reference to both the γίγαντες and the γίγαντος. While the translator no doubt had a warrant in the parent text for both of these mytho-poetic figures, the גִּגְאָנִים (see Gen 14.5) and the גִּגְאָנִי (see Gen 6.4) respectively, instead of providing transliterations of the Hebrew names he chose to introduce comparable figures from Greek mythology.

In sum, if we view the work of the translation in terms of the solution of problems posed by the source language, we can speak of the transmission of such solutions from one translator to another.

Syntax

The most obvious syntactical feature of Ioudith is parataxis. While popular Greek composition of this period tolerated parataxis to a fair degree, the prose of Ioudith often amounts to a seemingly endless march of clauses beginning with the conjunction καὶ (“and”) followed by the finite verb. While in Hebrew such parataxis reflects the canons of classical composition, the interlinear rendering of these sequences in Greek, on the other hand, is decidedly at variance with the style of any period.

The jarring use of prepositions is also worthy of comment. Again, it is less a question of grammaticality than of convention. A preposition will at times be supplied which, while adequate to the translator’s purpose of representing the structure of the parent text, sits somewhat uneasily within its Greek context.
In certain instances, it is not the construction itself but its sheer frequency that bespeaks its Semitic origin. One favorite usage of the translator is the so-called telic \( \varepsilon \varepsilon \). A legitimate construction in Greek, it involves the construal of the preposition with a nominal item so as to carry the sense of purpose or reference. In the book of Ioudith it was evidently used in certain instances to render Hebrew constructions with \( \tilde{\delta} \).

While he is not altogether rigid in his use of translation equivalencies, the translator of Ioudith is fairly consistent in his handling of the syntactical problems posed by the source language. This means that while, on the one hand, a limited range of Greek constructions appears with a certain regularity, others are conspicuous by their absence, as e.g., the genitive absolute. Participles are seldom construed as adverbials (i.e., circumstantial) but most often as adjectivals; conversely, infinitives tend not to be used as out and out substantives. In both cases, therefore, the Greek mimics the Hebrew. By and large, the translator makes minimal use of the resources available in Greek for subordination. The end result of such a selective use of the Greek syntactical repertoire is that the language of the translation reflects a profoundly Hebraic prose style: terse, direct, measured, stately.

A particularly telling characteristic of Ioudith is its literal rendering of Hebrew idiomatic expressions. Most prevalent are those which trade on a figurative use of the word “face.” Hebrew \( \delta\varphi\varsigma \) occurs in a number of thoroughly conventional prepositional constructions, e.g., \( \varepsilon\varepsilon\varepsilon\varsigma \) and \( \varepsilon\varepsilon\varepsilon\) \( \varepsilon\varepsilon \), marking relative spatial position. Here the lexeme \( \delta\varphi\varsigma \) is semantically bleached, as it were, its function predominantly structural. In Greek, however, spatial position is not typically marked by expressions which involve the face (although it can be). Hence, the translator’s tendency to render \( \delta\varphi\varsigma \) by \( \varepsilon\varepsilon\varepsilon\) \( \varepsilon\varepsilon \) results in a proliferation of phrases that, while adequately conveying the prepositional force of their Hebrew counterparts, nevertheless carry some of the semantic content of the word “face” into the context. This lends the Greek prose a certain naiveté. The important point is that this quality does not arise from stylistic motivation; it is a function of interlinearity.

Fixed phrases abounded in the parent text of Ioudith, and their literal rendering contributes to the Hebraic tone of the translation. Two notable expressions not current in standard Greek are \( \pi\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma \) \( \sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\s the mandate of the translator to provide his community with an interlinear text. What we might call the literary style of Ioudith is thus to be accounted for on this premise. At the same time, the translator’s prose, while not by any stretch of the imagination adhering to contemporary Greek poetics, does carry a certain charm and resonance of its own. The repetition of certain verbal patterns is obviously a reflex from the Hebrew. Yet it is no less effective a literary feature for all that, investing the text with various sorts of verbal complexity. So too, there are times when the language of Ioudith echoes that of earlier Greco-Jewish translations. The fact that such intertextuality is often a reflex of shared translation technique does not diminish the added dimension of significance it has to offer the reader.

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL NOTE

Not unlike the Greco-Jewish translator of Ioudith, I have self-consciously undertaken my one word translation within the context of a literary tradition. For English letters, the Authorized Version is a wellspring from which one is well advised to drink deeply. I made a point of returning to its translation of Ioudith, not so much as a guide to the problems of translation, but rather as a literary departure point. After all, the language of the AV has certain features that invite comparison with the Greek of the Septuagint, not least of all its approximation of Hebrew prose style. Of the relevant secondary literature, I found the textual notes and commentary of Morton S. Enslin and Solomon Zeitlin’s The Book of Judith (Leiden: E.J. Brill, 1972) most useful. All English-speaking scholarship on Ioudith is in some manner indebted to A. E. Cowley’s “The Book of Judith” (in Charles 1:242–267), and in that respect I am no exception.

My greatest debt is that owed to my academic advisor, friend, and mentor, Albert Pietersma. To read a text with any measure of competence is to have served an apprenticeship of sorts, and here I was trained by one of the most able readers of the Septuagint today, whose considerable learning and astute insight have informed my work from start to finish.

CAMERON BOYD-TAYLOR

1 It was the twelfth year of the reign of Nabouchodonosor, who ruled over the Assyrians from Nineue, the great city. It was in the days of Arphaxad, who ruled over the Medes from Ecbatana and who had built walls around Ecbatana from stones hewn to a breadth of three cubits and to a length of six cubits and made the height of the wall seventy cubits and its breadth fifty cubits and raised up its towers at its gates one hundred cubits and laid out their foundations to a breadth of sixty cubits and made its gates, gates rising to a height of seventy cubits and their width being forty cubits for the passage of his army of chief men and the ranks of his foot-soldiers. And it was in those days that King Nabouchodonosor made war against King Arphaxad in the Great Plain, that is, the plain on the frontier of Rhagau. And there rallied against him all the inhabitants of the highlands and all who dwell by the Euphrates and the Tigris and the Hydaspes and in the plain of Arioch, king of the Elymeans. And a great many nations gathered for the battle of the sons of Cheleoud.

7 And Nabouchodonosor, king of the Assyrians, had sent to all those who inhabit Persia and to all the inhabitants of the west, the inhabitants of Cilicia and Damascus and Lebanon and Anti-Lebanon and all the inhabitants facing the coast and those among the nations of Carmel and Galaad and Upper Galilee and the great plain of Esdrelom and all those in Samaria and its cities and beyond the Jordan as far as Ierousalem and Batane and Chealous and Kades and the wadif of Egypt and Taphnas and Ramesse and all the land of Gesem, until one comes above Tanis and Memphis, and all the inhabitants of Egypt, until one comes to the frontier of Ethiopia. And all the inhabitants throughout all the land had contempt for the word of Nabouchodonosor, king of the Assyrians, and did not join with him for the war, for they did not fear him; rather, in their eyes he was but one man, and they sent back his messengers empty-handed and shamefaced.

12 And Nabouchodonosor became violently angry at all this land and swore by his throne and by his kingdom that he would punish the entire region of Cilicia and the Damascus and Syria and that he would dispatch with his sword all the inhabitants of the land of Moab and the sons of Ammon and all Judea and all those in Egypt, until one comes to the region of the two seas.

13 And in the seventeenth year, he took the field of battle before his army against King Arphaxad and prevailed in his war. And he turned back the entire army of Arphaxad, all his cavalry and all his chariots, and he seized his cities. And he came as far as Ecbatana and gained possession of the towers and looted its streets, and its honor he turned to its shame. And he overtook Arpha-
And in the eighteenth year, on the twenty-second day of the first month, there was word in the household of Nabouchodonosor, king of the Assyrians, that he would punish all the land, just as he had said. And he summoned together all his attendants and all his nobles and put before them the secret of his purpose. And from his mouth he recounted every vice of the land, and they decided to destroy all flesh, all who did not heed the word from his mouth.

And it came to pass, when he had completed his counsel, Nabouchodonosor, king of the Assyrians, called for Olophernes, the field marshal of his army, being second in command after him, and said to him: This is what the Great King, Lord of all the earth, says: Behold, you shall go forth from my presence, and you shall take with you men who rely on their strength, as many as one hundred and twenty thousand infantry and a troop of horse with twelve thousand riders. And you shall go forth to meet all the land to the west, for they disobeyed the word of my mouth, and you shall instruct them to make ready earth and water, for in my fury I will come upon them and cover all the face of the land with the feet of my army and hand them over for their plunder. And their slain shall fill their ravines, and every wadi and river overflowing shall be filled with their dead. And I will lead them captive to the ends of all the earth. Now when you go forth, you shall occupy in advance all their territory for me, and they shall surrender themselves to you, and you shall watch them closely for me until the day of their censure. As for those who refuse to comply, your eye shall not spare to hand them over for slaughter and plunder in each of your lands.

For as I live, and not spare to hand them over for slaughter and plunder in each of your lands. For as I live, and not spare to hand them over for slaughter and plunder in each of your lands. For as I live, and not spare to hand them over for slaughter and plunder in each of your lands.

And Olophernes set out from the presence of his lord and summoned all the lords and the generals and commanders of the army of Assour, and he numbered chosen men for battle, just as his lord had commanded him, as many as one hundred and twenty thousand archers, and he formed them up in the way troops are drawn up for war. And he took for their baggage camels and donkeys and mules, a vastly large number, and for their provision sheep and cattle and goats, which were countless, and for every man a store of provisions aplenty and ever so much gold and silver from the king's household.

And he set out on the march, he and all his army, to go before King Nabouchodonosor and cover all the face of the land to the west with their chariots and knights and picked infantry. Great also was the mongrel troop, which grasshopper-like accompanied them; indeed, they were as the sand of the ground, for they were countless owing to their sheer multitude.

And from Nineue they made a three-day march toward the face of the plain of Bektileth and encamped down from Bektileth near the mountain, which is toward the left of upper Cilicia. And he took all his army, infantry and cavalry, and his chariots and departed from there into the highlands. And he broke through Phoud and Loud and plundered all the sons of Rassis and the sons of Ismael, those facing the wilderness toward the south of Cheleon. And he went along the Euphrates and through Mesopotamia and razed all the high cities along the wadi Abron until one comes to the sea. And he seized the region of Cilicia and cut down all those who resisted him, and he went as far as the frontier of Lapheth, which is toward the southwest facing Arabia. And he encircled all the sons of Madiam and set alight their coverts and plundered their sheepfolds. And he went down to the plain of Damascus in the days of the wheat harvest and set all their fields ablaze, and he handed over their flocks and herds for destruction and stripped their cities and ravaged their plains, and he struck down with the sword's edge all their young men.

And upon those inhabiting the coast, those in Sidon and in Tyre and those inhabiting Sour and Okina and all those inhabiting Lemnaan, there fell a fear and dread of him, and those inhabiting Azotus and Ascalon feared him exceedingly.

And they sent envoys to him with a suit for peace, saying: Behold, we the servants of Nabouchodonosor the Great King are at your disposal; treat us as is pleasing in your sight. Behold, our dwellings and all our buildings and every plain of wheat and the flocks and the herds and all the sheepfolds of our tents are at your disposal; treat them as it pleases you. Behold, so too our cities and their inhabitants are your slaves; when you come, meet them as is good in your sight.

And the men arrived before Olophernes and reported to him according to these very words. And he descended upon the coast, he and his army, and garrisoned the high cities and conscripted select men for an auxiliary. And they and all their environs received him with garlands and dances and tambourines. And he razed all their temples and cut down their sacred groves. Indeed, he had been appointed to root out all the gods of the land, that every nation and every tongue should serve Nabouchodonosor and him alone and that their every tribe should invoke him as a god.

9 And he went along the face of Esdrelom near Dotaia, which is opposite the great ridge of Judea, and he encamped between Gaibai and Scythopolis and spent a month of days there in order to assemble all the baggage of his army.

4 And all the sons of Israel who inhabit Judea heard everything that Olophernes, field marshal of Nabouchodonosor, king of the Assyrians, had done to the nations and in what manner he had stripped all their sacred precincts and handed them over for destruction. 2And they became most exceedingly frightened by his visage and distressed for Jerusalem and the shrine of the Lord their God, for they had recently come up out of captivity, and all the people of Judea had just now been united, and the vessels and the altar and the house purified of their desecration. 4And they sent to all the territory of Samaria and to Kona and Baithoron and Belmain and Iericho and to Choba and Haisora and to the valley of Salem, and they occupied in advance all the summits of the high mountains and fortified the villages in them, and they set aside stores for military provisions, for their plains had just recently been harvested.

6 And Ioakeim the great priest, who at that time was in Jerusalem, wrote to those inhabiting Baityloua and to Baitomestham, which is over against Esdrelom facing the plain near Dothaim, bidding them hold the ascents of the hill country, since the entrance to Judea was through them, and it was easy to hinder those climbing up, the approach being narrow, wide enough for at most two men.

8 And the sons of Israel did as Ioakeim the great priest instructed them—and the senate of all the people of Israel, who were seated in Jerusalem, wrote to those inhabiting the highlands next to where you are residing, and no falsehood shall be forthcoming from the mouth of your slave. 6These people are descendants of the Chaldeans. And in former times they sojourned in Mesopotamia, for they had no wish to follow the gods of their fathers, who were in the land of the Chaldeans. And they had departed from the ways of their forebears and did obeisance to the god they knew, and their forebears had driven them from the sight of their gods, and they had fled into Mesopotamia and sojourned there for many days. And their God told them to go forth from their sojourning and to go into the land of Chanaan, and they settled there and abounded in gold and silver and in exceedingly many cattle. And they descended into Egypt, for famine covered the face of the land of Chanaan, and they sojourned there until they threw. And there they grew to a very large number, and their race was countless. And the king of Egypt outwitted them, and they befuddled them; with clay and brick they abased them and reduced them to slaves. And they cried out to their God, and he struck all the land of Egypt with plagues, from which there was no cure, and the Egyptians drove them from their presence. And their God dried up the Red Sea before them and led them toward the way of Sina and Kades Barne. And they drove out all the inhabitants of the wilderness and dwelt in the land of the Amorrites, and with their strength they destroyed all the Hesebonites. And when they crossed the 15 And there were ashes upon their turban, and with all their might they were calling upon the Lord to look after the entire house of Israel for good.

5 And it was reported to Olophernes, field marshal of the army of Assur, that the sons of Israel had prepared for war and that they had blocked the highland passages and fortified all the summits of the high mountains and had set traps in the plains. And he grew violently angry with rage and summoned all the rulers of Moab and the generals of Ammon and all the satraps of the coast and said to them: “Now tell me, sons of Chanaan, who is this people seated in the highlands, and what cities do they inhabit, and what is the number of their army, and in what does their power and strength lie, and who has arisen over them as king, leading their army, and why have they, of all the inhabitants of the west, disdained to come and meet me?”

5 And Achior, leader of all the sons of Ammon, said to him: “Only suffer my lord to hear a word from the mouth of your slave, and I will tell you the truth concerning this people who inhabit these highlands next to where you are residing, and no falsehood shall be forthcoming from the mouth of your slave. These people are descendants of the Chaldeans. And in former times they sojourned in Mesopotamia, for they had no wish to follow the gods of their fathers, who were in the land of the Chaldeans. And they had departed from the ways of their forebears and did obeisance to the God of Heaven, and they had come to acknowledge, and their forebears had driven them from the sight of their gods, and they had fled into Mesopotamia and sojourned there for many days. And their God told them to go forth from their sojourning and to go into the land of Chanaan, and they settled there and abounded in gold and silver and in exceedingly many cattle. And they descended into Egypt, for famine covered the face of the land of Chanaan, and they sojourned there until they threw. And there they grew to a very large number, and their race was countless. And the king of Egypt outwitted them, and they befuddled them; with clay and brick they abased them and reduced them to slaves. And they cried out to their God, and he struck all the land of Egypt with plagues, from which there was no cure, and the Egyptians drove them from their presence. And their God dried up the Red Sea before them and led them toward the way of Sina and Kades Barne. And they drove out all the inhabitants of the wilderness and dwelt in the land of the Amorrites, and with their strength they destroyed all the Hesebonites. And when they crossed the...
Jordan they inherited all the highlands and drove from their sight the Chananite and the Pherezite and the lebusite and Sychem and all the Gergesites, and they inhabited them for many days.

17 "And as long as they did not sin in the sight of their God, good fortune was with them, for with them is a God who hates injustice. But when they revolted from the way which he had decreed for them, they were completely and utterly destroyed in numerous wars and taken captive into a land not their own, and the shrine of their God was razed to the ground, and their cities were conquered by their enemies. And now, having turned back to their God, they have come up out of the dispersion, there where they were dispersed and have occupied Jerusaleem, where their holy precinct is, and have settled in the highlands, for they were deserted.

20 "And now, O lord and master, if there is in fact negligence amongst this people, and they are sinning against their God, we will also mark this offense which is amongst them, and we will go up and make war on them. But if there is no lawlessness in their nation, then let my lord pass them by, rather than have their Lord and their God shield them. And we shall be disgraced before all the earth!"

2 "And who are you, Achior and the mercenaries of Ephraim, to prophesy amongst us as you have done today and to tell us not to wage war against the race of Israel, because their God will shield them? And who is god if not Nabouchodonosor? This very one will dispatch his might against Baityloua and to occupy in advance the assembly to his house and gave a drinking bout for the elders, and all that night they called upon the God of Israel for help.

5 "But you, Achior, mercenary of Ammon, who have spoken these words in the day of your injustice, from this day forth you shall not see my face again until I punish the race of those out of Egypt. And when I return, the blade of my army and the spears of my attendants shall then thrust through your sides, and you shall fall amongst their wounded. And now my slaves shall restore you to the highlands and place you in one of the cities of the ascents, and you shall not perish until such time as you are utterly destroyed with them. And if you are hoping in your heart that they will not be taken, don’t let your face drop; I have spoken, and none of my words will fail."

10 And Olophernes ordered his slaves, who were standing by in his tent, to seize Achior and restore him to Baityloua and to give him into the hands of the sons of Israel. And his slaves seized him and led him outside of the camp into the plain, and they made their way from the middle of the flatlands into the high country and arrived at the springs, which were beneath Baityloua. And when the men of the city saw them in quest of the mountain’s summit, they took up their arms and went off outside the city to the mountain’s summit, and every man armed with a sling checked their ascent and kept pelting them with rocks. And having slipped away beneath the mountain, they bound Achior and left him flung against the foot of the mountain and were gone to their lord.

14 The sons of Israel, coming down from their city, approached him, and upon releasing him, they led him off to Baityloua and presented him to the rulers of their city. Who in those days were Ozias, Micha’s son from the tribe of Symeon, and Chabris, Gothoniel’s son, and Charmis son of Melchiel. And they summoned together all the elders of the city, and all their youth and the women rushed together for the assembly, and they stood Achior in the middle of all their people, and Ozias questioned him as to what had happened. And in reply he reported the words of the counsel of Olophernes to them, and all that he had said before the rulers of the sons of Assour, every word, and all that Olophernes had boasted regarding the house of Israel. And throwing themselves down, the people did obeisance to God and cried out, saying:

19 "Lord, God of Heaven, behold their arrogance, and have pity on the lowliness of our race, and look this day upon the face of those who are dedicated to you."

20 And they sent for Achior and commended him heartily, and Ozias took him along from the assembly to his house and gave a drinking bout for the elders, and all that night they called upon the God of Israel for help.

7 Now on the following day, Olophernes gave orders to all his army and his entire people, who were at hand for his alliance, to move off against Baityloua and to occupy in advance the as-cents of the highlands and to make war on the sons of Israel. 2And every chief man of their number moved off that day, and their army of warriors was one hundred and seventy thousand infantry and twelve thousand cavalry, not to mention the baggage and the men who were on foot with them, a vastly large number. 3And they encamped at the spring in the ravine near Baityloua and stretched out to a breadth over Dothaim as far as Belbaim and to a length from Baityloua as far as Bean-field, which is opposite Esdrelom.

4 Now when they saw their number, the sons of Israel were greatly alarmed, and each man said to the one next to him: "These ones will now lick up the face of all the land, and neither the high mountains nor the ravines nor the hills will withstand their weight." 5And each man, taking up their battle gear and lighting fires upon their towers, remained on guard all that night.

6 On the second day, Olophernes led out all his horse to face the sons of Israel, who were in Baityloua, and he surveyed the ascents of their city, and he inspected their springs of water and occupied them in advance and stationed detachments of warriors near them, and he himself departed for his people.

8 And all the rulers of the sons of Esau and all the leaders of the people of Moab and the generals of the coast, approaching him, said: 9 "Do but let our master hear a word, that there be no fracture within your army; 10for this people of the sons of Israel do not rely upon their spears but upon the heights of the mountains, wherein they themselves dwell, for it is not easy to ascend the summits of their mountains. 11And now, O Master, do not wage war against them as a military force is wont to do in regular battle, and not a single man of your people will fall. 12Remain at your camp, preserving every man of your army, and let your servants hold the spring of water, which issues forth from the foot of the mountain, 13for all those who inhabit Baityloua draw their water from there, and the thirst will kill them, and they will surrender their city. And we and our people shall climb up to the neighboring summits of the mountains and encamp upon them for an advanced guard, that not a single man set out from the city. 14And they will waste away in their famine, they and their women and their children, and before the sword comes upon them they will be laid out in the streets of their dwelling place. 15And you will pay them back a painful repayment, because they broke out in rebellion and did not meet your face in peace."

16 And their words were pleasing in the eyes of Olophernes and in the eyes of all his attendants, and he instructed them to do just as they had said. 17And the detachment of the sons of Ammon departed, and with them five thousand of the sons of Assour, and they encamped in the valley and occupied in advance the waters and the springs of water of the sons of Israel. 18And the sons of Esau and sons of Ammon went up and encamped in the highlands opposite Dothaim. And they sent from among them to the south and east opposite Egrebel, which is near Chous, which is on the Wadi Mochmour. And the remainder of the Assyrian army encamped in the plain and covered all the face of the land, and their tents and baggage were in a great mass, and they amounted to a vastly large number.

19 And the sons of Israel cried out to the Lord their God, for their spirit was fainthearted, for all their enemies encircled them, and there was no escape from their midst. 20And the entire assemblage of Assour, the infantry and the chariots and the horsemen of them, remained round about them for thirty-four days. And all their vessels of water failed all the inhabitants of Baityloua, 21and the cisterns were emptied out, and they were unable to drink their fill of water for a single day, for they were giving them to drink in measure. 22And their infants lost heart, and the women and the young men failed from thirst, and they were falling in the streets of the city and in the passages of the gates, and there was no longer strength in them.

23 And all the people had been gathered to Ozias and the rulers of the city, the young men and the women and the children, and they cried with a loud voice and said before all the elders: 24 "May God judge between you and us, for you have done in our presence a great injustice not speaking peaceably with the sons of Assour. 25And now there is no helper for us, but God has sold us into their hands, to be laid low before them with thirst and great destruction. 26And now, call upon them and surrender the whole city to the people of Olophernes and to all his army for pillage. 27For it is better for us to become their plunder, for we shall become slaves, and our spirit will live, and we shall not see the death of our infants with our eyes, and our women and children quiting their spirits. 28Against you we call to witness heaven and earth and our God and the Lord of our fathers, who punishes us according to our transgressions and according to the transgressions of our fathers, lest he act according to these words on this very day."

29 And in the midst of their assembly, a loud wailing arose with one accord from everyone, and they cried out to the Lord God with a loud voice. 30And Ozias said to them: "Take courage, brothers, let us hold out five days yet, within which our Lord God will turn his mercy towards us, for he will not forsake us completely, 31but if they should pass and help not come upon us, I shall do according to your words."

32 And he dispersed the people each one to his detachment, and they went off to the walls and the towers of their city, and they sent the women and children to their homes, and in the city they were in a very low state.

And he had died in the days of the barley harvest; 3for he had been in charge of the ones binding sheaves in the plain, and the burning heat had been upon his head, and he had fallen upon his bed and come to an end in Baityloua his city, and they had buried him with his fathers in the field which is between Dothaim and Balamon. 4And Ioudith had lived in her house as a widow for three years and four months. 5And she had made herself a tent upon the roof of her house and placed sackcloth about her waist, and upon her were the garments of her widowhood. 6And she had been fasting all the days of her widowhood, apart from pre-sabbaths and sabbaths and pre-new moons and new moons and feasts and rejoicings of the house of Israel. 7And she was beautiful in appearance and quite lovely to see. And Manasses her husband had left her gold and silver and male and female servants and cattle and fields, and she remained over them. 8And there was no one who brought a malicious word against her, for she feared God exceedingly.

9And she heard the malicious words of the people against the ruler, because they were faint-hearted due to the lack of water, and Ioudith heard all the words which Ozias had said to them, how he swore to them that after five days he would give all the words which Ozias had said to them, how people against the ruler, because they were faint-hearted, feared God exceedingly.

“Now listen to me, rulers of the inhabitants of Baityloua, for your word, which you have spoken in the presence of the people in this day, is not right, and you have placed this oath, which you have spoken between God and you and have said that unless the Lord turn his assistance to you, you shall not inquire after my wisdom, nor any of our race. 22And among the nations he will bring upon our head the murder of our brothers and the captivity of the land and the waste of our inheritance, where, if there we be enslaved, we shall also become an offense and a disgrace before our owners. 23For our bondage will not be directed to favor, but rather the Lord, our God, will reckon it for dishonor.

32And Ioudith said to them: “Listen to me, and I will accomplish a deed which shall reach generations of generations amongst sons of our race. 33Stand upon the gate this night, and I will set forth with my favorite slave, and within the days after which you said you would surrender the city to our enemies, the Lord will look after Israel by my hand, but you shall not inquire after my deed, for I will not tell you until the things which I shall do are accomplished.” 35And Ozias said to her and the rulers: “Go in peace, and the Lord God...

9 Now Ioudith fell face down, and she placed ashes upon her head and stripped off the sackcloth that she wore, and just then in Jerousalem the incensea for that evening was being carried into the house of God, and with a loud voice Ioudith cried out to the Lord and said:

2 “O Lord, God of my father Symeon, to whom you gave a sword in hand for vengeance on aliens, the ones who ravaged the virgin’s vulva for defilement and stripped naked the thigh for shame and polluted the vulva for disgrace, for you said: ‘It shall not be thus,’ and they did; therefore you handed over their rulers for slaughter, and their bed which, deceived, felt ashamed at their deceit, for blood, and you struck down slaves with lords and lords upon their thrones, and you handed over their wives for pillage and their daughters for captivity and all their spoils for division among the sons loved by you, who also were zealous in zeal for you and detested the defilement of their might with your power, and bring down their heads; place in the hand of me, the widow. O God, my God, also listen to me, the widow.

5 “For you accomplished the things previously and those at hand and those thereafter and at present, and those of the future you contemplated, and what you conceived of came to pass, and what you had resolved stood by and said: ‘Behold, we are here.’ For all your ways are prepared, and your judgment is with foreknowledge.

7 “For behold, the Assyrians were increased in their power; they were exalted by horse and rider; they took pride in the arm of infantry; they put their hope in shield and javelin and bow and sling and did not realize that you are the Lord who crushes wars; the Lord is your name. Dash down their might with your power, and bring down their strength with your fury, for they have resolved to pollute your holy precincts, to defile the covert of the resting place of the name of your glory, to strike down with the blade the horn of your altar. Look upon their arrogance; dispatch your anger for their heads; place in the hand of me, the widow, the strength that I have contemplated. By the lips of my deceitb strike down the slave with the ruler and the ruler with his attendant; shatter their stature by the hand of a female.

11 “For your strength is not in numbers, nor is your dominance in those who are fit, but you are a God of the lowly; you are the helper of the inferior, the supporter of the weak, the shelterer of the lowly; you are the God of the lowly; you are the helper of the infernal, and the summit of Sion and the house of your sons’ possession. And among every nation and every tribe bring about the knowledge to realize that you are God, Godc of all power and strength, and that there is no one other than you shielding the race of Israel.”

10 And it came to pass, when she had ceased crying out to the God of Israel and had finished all these words, and she rose from falling and summoned her favorite slave and went down into the house, wherein she remained in the days of the sabbaths and in her feasts, and removed the sackcloth which she wore and stripped off the clothing of her widowhood, and she washed herself, all around the body, with water and anointed herself with thick ointment and fixed the hair of her head and placed a turban upon it and put on the clothing of her merriment with which she was accustomed to dress in the days of the life of her husband Manasses, and she took sandals for her feet and put on the anklets and the bracelets and the rings and the earrings and her every ornament, and she made herself up provocatively for the charming of the eyes of men, all who would cast eyes upon her. And she gave her favorite slave a skin of wine and crust of oil, and she filled a bag with barley meal and fig cake and pure bread, and she packed all her vessels and placed them upon her.

6 And they set forth for the gate of the city of Baityloua, and they found Oziyas standing at it and the elders of the city, Chabris and Charmis; now when they saw her and her face was altered and her dress changed, they were then completely and utterly astounded by her beauty and said to her: “May the God of our fathers give you as a favor, and may you accomplish your mission, for the pride of the sons of Israel and the exaltation of Jerousalem.” And she did obeisance to God.

9 And she said to them: “Give orders to open the gate of the city for me, and I shall go forth for the accomplishment of the words which you have spoken to me.” And they instructed the young men to open it for her as she said. And so they did. And Ioudith set forth, she and her slave girl with her. The men of the city continued watching her until she went down the mountain, until she passed through the ravine and they no longer saw her.

11 And they continued going straight ahead in the ravine, and the advance guard of the Assyrians met her. And they seized her and asked: “Of whom are you, and where do you come from, and where are you going?” And she said: “I am a daughter of the Hebrews, and I am running away from their presence, for they are about to be handed over to you for fodder, and I am entering into the presence of Olophernes field marshal of your force in order to relate words of truth, and before his presence I will point out the path on which he

14 Now when the men heard her words and considered her face, and before them it was wonderful beyond measure in beauty, they also said to her: 15 "Hastening to come down to face our lord, you have saved your life. And now, approach his tent, and some of us will escort you until they pass you into his hands. 16 Now if you should stand before him, do not be afraid in your heart, but rather report according to your words, and he will treat you well."

17 And they chose a hundred men from among them and set them alongside her and her favorite slave, and they led them to the tent of Olophernes. 18 And a surging throng arose in all the encampment, for her arrival in the coverts was the talk of all, and they came and were wheeling around her, while she stood outside the tent of Olophernes, until they brought news to him concerning her. 19 And they remained awestruck by her beauty, and in awe of the sons of Israel on account of her, and each said to the one near him: "Who will despise this people, who keep such women to themselves? For it is not good that a single man be left surviving from their number, who upon their release will be able to outwit all the earth."

20 And they came out, those who slept beside Olophernes, and all his attendants, and they led her into the tent. 21 And Olophernes was resting on his bed in the mosquito netting, which was of purple and gold and emerald and costly stones interwoven. 22 And they reported to him concerning her, and he came out to the anteroom, and silver torches were leading his way. 23 Now when Ioudith came before the face of him and of his attendants, they were all awestruck by the beauty of her face, and falling face forward, she did obeisance to him, and his slaves raised her up.

11 And Olophernes said to her: "Take courage woman; do not be afraid in your heart, for I have not hurt any person who has chosen to be subject to the king of all the earth, Nabuchodonosor. 2 And now, as for your people who inhabit the highlands, if they had not shown me contempt, I would not have taken up my spear against them, but they have done these things to themselves. 3 And now, tell me why you ran away from them and came to us, for you have come to safety. Be of courage; you shall live in this night and the future; 4 for there is no one who will harm you, but rather will treat you well, as is done with the slaves of my lord, King Nabuchodonosor."

5 And Ioudith said to him: "Accept the words of your slave, and let your girl speak to your face, and I will not report falsehood to my lord in this night. 6 And should you follow the words of your girl, God will see the matter through with you entirely, and my lord will not fail in his mission. 7 For Nabuchodonosor, king of all the earth, lives, and his might lives, he who sent you for the correction of every soul; not only will people be subject to him on account of you, but also through your strength the beasts of the field and the cattle and the birds of the sky will live for Nabuchodonosor and all his house. 8 For we have heard tell of your wisdom and of the cunning ways of your spirit, and it has been reported before all the land that in all the kingdom you alone are noble and pre-eminent in experience and prodigious in the campaigns of war.

9 "And now, as for the word which Achior spoke in your council, we have heard his words, for the men of Baityloua saved him, and he reported to them everything that he had said before you. 10 For which reason, O lord and master, do not disregard his word but rather lay it up in your heart, for it is true, for he does not punish our race, nor does a sword prevail against them, unless they sin against their God.

11 "And now, lest my lord be spent and idle, death will also fall upon their face, and transgression has overcome them by which they will provoke their God to anger, at such time as they are guilty of deviance. 12 When their foodstuffs had failed them and all water become scarce, they resolved to set upon their livestock, and they elected to use up everything, all that God in his laws enjoined them not to eat. 13 And the first fruits of grain and the tithes of wine and of oil, which they preserved, consecrating them for the priests who stand in the presence of our God in Jerusalem, which it is not proper for any of the common people to touch with their hands, they have decided to consume entirely. 14 And to Jerusalem, for there too the inhabitants did these things, they have sent envoys to convey dispensation to them from the senate. 15 And it shall be that as soon as they report to them and they go ahead, they will be given to you for destruction in that day.

16 "Therefore, having witnessed all these things, I your slave ran away from their presence, and God sent me to accomplish with you deeds at which all the earth will be amazed, all who hear them. 17 For your slave is devout and serving the God of heaven night and day, and now I shall remain with you, my lord, and your slave will set forth into the ravine each night, and I shall pray to God, and he will tell me when they have committed their transgressions. 18 And when I come I shall bring back to you, and you will march forth with all your army, and there is not one of them who will withstand you. 19 And I shall lead you through the midst of Judea until you come before Jerusalem, and I shall set your seat in its midst, and you will lead them as sheep for whom there is no shepherd, and no dog will grumble against you with his tongue, for these things were spoken to me according to my foreknowledge, and they were related to me, and I was sent to announce them to you."

were awestruck by her wisdom and said: 21 “In beauty of face and sagacity of words there is not such a woman from one end of the earth to the other.” 22 And Olophernes said to her: “God did well sending you before the people, that might be should be in our hands, but destruction amongst those who showed contempt to my lord. 23 And now, you are charming in your appearance and virtuous in your words, for, if you do as you have said, your God shall be my God, and you shall be seated in the house of King Nabouchodonosor, and you shall be famous more than the entire earth.”

12 And he ordered to lead her in to where his silver service was being set, and he instructed to spread for her some of his finest foods and some of his wine to drink. 2And Ioudith said: “I shall not eat from them, lest there be offense, but it will be supplied from the things which have accompanied me.” 3And Olophernes said to her: “But should the things being with you fail, from where shall we produce things like them to give you? For there is none from your race with us.” 4And Ioudith said to him: “Your spirit lives, my lord, that your slave will not exhaust the things with me until the lord has accomplished by my hand what he has resolved.”

5 And the attendants of Olophernes led her into the tent. And she slept until it was the middle of the night and arose toward the morning watch. 6And she sent to Olophernes, saying: “Let my lord now give the order to permit your slave to set forth for prayer.” 7And Olophernes ordered the bodyguards not to hinder her. And she remained in the camp for three days, and she went out each night into the ravine of Baityloua and bathed at the spring of water. 8And when she came up, she would plead the Lord, God of Israel, to direct her path for the grandeur of the sons of his people. 9And entering clean, she would remain in the tent until she took her food toward evening.

10 And it came to pass, Olophernes gave a drinking bout on the fourth day for his slaves alone and did not summon the invitation any of those engaged in duties. 11And he said to Bagoas, the eunuch who was in charge of all his things: “Go now, and persuade the Hebrew woman who is with you to come to us and eat and drink with us. 12For behold, if we allow such a woman to pass by without having intercourse with her, it will be a source of shame for our face, for if we fail to gain this one, she will mock us.”

13 And Bagoas set forth from the presence of Olophernes, and he went in to her and said: “Do not let this beautiful girl hesitate now to come to my lord and be honored before his presence and to drink wine with us for merriment and to become in this day like a daughter of the sons of Assour, who attend in the house of Nabouchodonosor.” 14And Ioudith said to him: “Who in-deed am I to speak against my lord? For I shall hurry and do everything which will be pleasing in his eyes, and this will be a joy to me until the day of my death.” 15And standing up, she was furnished with raiment and every feminine adornment. And her slave girl approached and on the ground before Olophernes spread out the fleece for her, which they had taken from Bagoas for her daily use so that she might eat reclining upon it.

16 And Ioudith entered and reclined, and Olophernes’ heart was beside itself for her, and his spirit reeled, and he was filled with a violent lust to lie with her. And he had been watching for a time to seduce her from the day he saw her. 17 And Olophernes said to her: “Now drink, and be merry with us.” 18 And Ioudith said: “I shall drink now, my lord, for today my life has been exalted within me beyond all the days of my birth.” 19And she took, and she ate and drank before him what her slave had prepared. 20 And Olophernes was delighted by her and drank a vast amount of wine, more than he had ever before drunk in a single day from the time he was born.

13 Now when it was evening, his slaves were eager to depart. And Bagoas shut the tent from the outside and dismissed the attendants from the presence of his lord, and they departed for their beds, for they were all tired, as the drinking bout had lasted so long. 2And Ioudith was left alone in the tent—and Olophernes, having collapsed upon his bed, for the wine had overcome him.

3 And Ioudith had told her slave girl to stand outside of her bedchamber and watch out for her departure, just as each day, for she said she would be setting forth for her prayer, and she had spoken to Bagoas according to these words. 4And everyone departed from sight, and no one was left behind in the bedchamber from small to great, and standing by his bed, Ioudith said within her heart: “Lord, God of all power, in this hour look upon the works of my hands for the exaltation of Jerousalem; 5for now is the time to defend your inheritance and to accomplish my mission for the wreck of the enemies who rose up against us.”

6 And approaching the bedpost that was near Olophernes’ head, she took down his scimitar from it, and drawing near to the bed she took hold of the hair of his head and said: “Strengthen me, Lord, God of Israel, in this day.”

8And she struck at his neck twice with her strength and took his head from him. 9And she rolled his body from the mattress and took the mosquito netting from the posts. And she set forth shortly afterward and handed the head of Olophernes over to her favorite slave, and she threw it into her bag of provisions.

And the two went forth together as was their custom for prayer, and passing through the camp they circled that ravine and climbed the mountain.

of Baityloua and came to its gates. 11 And from afar Ioudith said to the guards on the gates: "Open, open the gate immediately! God, our God, is with us to rouse again strength in Israel and power against the enemies, just as also he did today."

12 And it came to pass, when the men of her city heard her voice, they were eager to get down to the gate of their city and called together the elders of the city. 13 And they all ran together, from the small to the great for it was remarkable to them that she had come, and they opened the gate and welcomed them, and lighting a fire for light they formed a circle about them. 14 She then said to them in a loud voice: "Praise God, give praise! Praise God, who did not withdraw his mercy from the house of Israel, but who in this night shattered our enemies through my hand."

15 And producing the head from the bag, she displayed it and said to them: "Behold, the head of Olophernes, field marshal of the army of Assour, and behold, the mosquito netting in which he was displayed it and said to them: "Behold, the head of Olophernes, field marshal of the army of Assour, and behold, the mosquito netting in which he was lying in his drunkenness, and the Lord struck him by the hand of a female. 16 And the Lord lives, who in this very day showed contempt for the enemies of your people."

18 And Ozias said to her: "Blessed are you, daughter, to God Most High, above all women who in this very day showed contempt for the enemies of your people.

20 And all the people were utterly amazed, and bending forwards they did obeisance to God and said with one accord: "Blessed are you, our God who in this very day showed contempt for the enemies of your people."

21 And the Lord lives, who in this very day showed contempt for the enemies of your people."

22 And it shall be, when the men of her city heard her voice, they tore their tunics, and their spirit was extremely distressed, and there arose from them screaming and an extremely loud cry in the midst of the camp.

23 And when those who were in their coverts heard, they were shocked at what had happened, and fear and trembling fell upon them, and there was not a person still remaining to face his neighbor, but rushing out they proceeded to flee with one accord for every path of the plain and the highlands, and those encamped in the highlands around Baityloua also turned to flight. And then the sons of Israel, every warrior of them, rushed upon them. And to Baitomasthaim and Bebai and Chobai and Kola and to all the territory of Israel Ozias dispatched ones carrying reports about the things which had unfolded, and in order that all should rush against the enemies for their annihilation. Now when the sons of Israel heard, they all with one accord fell upon them and beat them back as far as Choba. And just as those from Jerusalem were present, so too were those from all the highlands, for they had reported to them what had happened to the camp of their enemies. And those in Galaad and those in Galilee outflanked them in a great defeat, until they came to Damascus and its territory. But the remaining inhabitants of Baityloua fell upon the camp of Assour, and they looted them and became enormously rich. Now when they returned from the slaughter, the sons of Israel seized the rest, and the villages and hamlets in the highlands and the plain laid hold of much plunder, for there was an enormously large mass.

8 And Ioakeim the great priest and the senate of the sons of Israel, those residing in Jerusalem, came in order to view the good things which the Lord had accomplished for Israel and to see Ioudith and to speak peace with her. Now when they came to her, they all blessed her with one accord, and they said to her: "You are the exaltation of Jerusalem; you are the great pride of Israel; you are the great boast of our race. You accomplished all these things by your hand; you accomplished good things with Israel, and God was pleased on account of them. Be blessed before the omnipotent Lord for all time." And all the people said: "So be it."

11 And all the people looted the camp for thirty days, and they gave Ioudith the tent of Olophernes and all the silver service and the couches and the basins and all his furniture, and she took and placed them upon her mule, and she hitched her carts and heaped them upon them.

12 And every woman of Israel rushed together so as to see her, and they blessed her, and some of them performed a choral dance for her, and she took wands in her hands and gave them to the women who were with her. And they crowned themselves with olive, and she and those with her, and she went before all the people leading all the women in dancing, and every man of Israel, vested in armor, was following along with crowns, and they were singing hymns with their mouth.

14 And Ioudith began this confession in the midst of all Israel, and all the people were singing out this praise.

16 And Ioudith said:

Address my God with tambourines; sing to the Lord with cymbals.

Adapt a tune and a song of praise for him; exalt and invoke his name.

For the Lord is a God who crushes wars; for into his camps, in the midst of the people, he plucked me from the hand of those in pursuit of me.

Assour came out of the mountains from the north; he came in the myriads of his army, of whom their multitude clogged wadis and their horse covered hills.

He said he would set my territory ablaze and dispatch my young men with the sword and put my sucklings to the ground and hand my infants over for pillage and plunder my young women.

The omnipotent Lord set them aside with the hand of a female.

For their mighty one did not capitulate to young men, nor did sons of the Titans strike him, nor did towering Giants set upon him, but Ioudith the daughter of Merari undid him with the beauty of her face.

For she stripped off the dress of her widowhood for the eminence of those who are weary in Israel.

She daubed her face with an anointing, and she put up her hair in a turban, and she took a linen stole for the seduction of him.

Her sandal caught his eye, and her beauty captivated his soul; the scimitar passed through his throat.

The Persians shuddered at her daring, and the Medes were alarmed at her boldness.

Then my lowly ones raised the war cry, and my weak ones shouted. And they were terrified; they raised their cry and turned to flight.

Sons of girls pierced them through and, like children of deserters, continued to wound them. They vanished from the battle line of my Lord.

I will sing to my God a new hymn: O Lord, you are great and glorious, prodigious in strength, unsurpassable.

Let your entire creation be subject to you; for you spoke, and they came into being. You sent your spirit, and it built them up, and there is no one who will withstand your voice.
For the mountains will be shaken from their foundations together with the waters, while the rocks will melt away like wax from your presence.

But yet<sup>a</sup> to those who fear you, you will be most gracious to them.

For every offering is a little thing for an odor of fragrance, and all suet is insignificant for a whole burnt offering to you, but the one fearing the Lord is great forever.

Woe to the nations who plot against my race; the omnipotent Lord will punish them in the day of judgment, to send fire and worms for their flesh, and they will wail in full consciousness forever.

When they came into Jerusalem, they did obeisance to God, and when the people were purified, they offered up their whole burnt offerings and their voluntary offerings and the gifts. And Ioudith dedicated all the baggage of Olophernes, all that the people had given her, and the mosquito netting, which she herself had taken from his bedroom, she gave to God as a dedication. And the people continued celebrating in Jerusalem in front of the holy precincts for three months, and Ioudith remained there with them.

After these days each returned to his inheritance, and Ioudith departed for Baityloua and remained there on her property, and in her time she was renowned in all the land. And many desired her, and no man knew her in all the days of her life since the day Manasses her husband had died and was added to his people. And she kept increasing in stature, and she grew old in the house of her husband, one hundred and five years. And she set free her favorite slave. And she died in Baityloua, and they buried her in the cave of her husband, Manasses, and the house of Israel mourned her for seven days. And before she died she divided her possessions among all the nearest of Manasses her husband and the nearest of her race. And there was not again one who terrified the sons of Israel in the days of Ioudith and for many days after she had died.

TOBIT

EDITION OF THE GREEK TEXTS

The present translations have been based on the critical edition of Robert Hanhart (Septuaginta: Vetus Testamentum Graecum Auctoritate Academiae Scientiarum Gottingensis editum VIII.5: Tobit [Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1983]). In my translations I have differed from the readings in Hanhart’s edition in only a few cases (and only in GII [see below]) and have adopted another reading on the basis of Greek manuscript evidence. See, for example, 1.2, where I omit Hanhart’s reading “road” (δοξα), because Codex Sinaiticus does not contain it. In 2.6, I retain “ways” (οδοί), the reading of Sinaiticus; Hanhart (following the conjecture of Rahlfs and Fritzsche) adopts the reading “songs” (wο|dai) and refers to Amos 8.10. In 6.11, I follow MS 319, a reading supported also in 4QpapTobit[bd] “he has a beautiful (καλή) daughter whose name is Sarra”; Hanhart omits “beautiful.”

Attestation

There are two complete versions of the book of Tobit in Greek. Robert Hanhart, the editor, calls these versions Greek I (= GI), the shorter text form, and Greek II (= GII), the longer form (by about 1700 words). Almost all major manuscripts—Vaticanus, Alexandrinus, Venetus, Papyrus Oxyrhynchus 1594 (= Rahlfs 990) and most cursive manuscripts—contain GI of Tobit, which Hanhart prints at the top of the page of his Göttingen edition with its apparatus underneath.

Unfortunately, GII is found relatively intact only in Codex Sinaiticus and partially (from 3.6 to the word τούτου in 6.16) in cursive manuscript 319, which, however, gives GI from 1.1 to 3.5 and from 6.16 ὄτι to 14.15. Sinaiticus contains many copyist’s errors and has two significant lacunae (4.7–18 and 13.7–9). A tiny portion of GII is preserved also in sixth-century Papyrus Oxyrhynchus 10763 (= Rahlfs 910), containing 2.2–5, 8. Hanhart prints GII at the bottom of the page with an apparatus, which includes readings from 319 and 910 as well as the critically important Old Latin manuscripts (= La). The Old Latin, which contains the entire book of Tobit, is important, for it was translated from a text-form very close to the version found in Sinaiticus.

Priority

Curiously, in the introduction to his critical edition, Hanhart notes in passing that up to his day the question of the priority between GI and GII could not be answered with certainty.4 In his later study of the text and textual history of Tobit, however, Hanhart is more nuanced; while noting that a case could be made for the priority of either GI or GII, he favors the judgment that GI is a reworking of GII.5 Since earlier scholars up to the nineteenth-century preferred GI to GII, the King James Version (1611) and Revised Standard Version (1957) were translated from GI. In the opinion of the vast majority of scholars today, however, GII with its highly Semitic coloring represents more accurately the original form of the book. In fact, the Cave IV fragmentary texts of Tobit from Qumran (four in Aramaic, 4QToba–d ar, and one in Hebrew, 4QTobe) “agree in general with the long version of the book found in the fourth-century Greek text of Codex Sinaiticus.”6 4 Hanhart, Tobit, 33.

6 Fitzmyer, “Tobit,” 2. Fitzmyer (“The Aramaic and Hebrew Fragments of Tobit from Qumran Cave 4,” CBQ 57 [1995] 675) writes that the Qumran fragments preserve “perhaps not more than a fifth of the original Semitic texts,” and then he adds that “there is little in [these fragments] that is radically new, or different from the form of the story in either [Sinaiticus] or the VL.” He dates (Ibid., 655–657) the copies of these fragments from roughly 100 BCE to CE 50.
Thus, the priority of GII seems beyond question. Accordingly, the most recent translations of Tobit are based on GII: Jerusalem Bible (1966), New American Bible (1970), New English Bible (1970), Good News Bible, also known as Today’s English Version (1979), New Jerusalem Bible (1985), Revised English Bible (1989), New Revised Standard Version (1989), and the translation by Carey A. Moore in the Anchor Bible. Oddly enough, however, despite the evidence of Qumran, Paul Deselaers and Heinrich Gross continue to defend the priority of GI over GII.

Internal evidence also favors GII as the basis of GI; see, for example, 2.3 where one would be hard put to imagine how the fourteen Greek words of GI (“And he came and said, ‘Father, one of our race has been strangled and thrown into the marketplace.’”) could possibly have been the source of the thirty-nine Greek words found in GII (“So Tobias went to seek some poor person of our kindred. And on his return he said, ‘Father!’ And I said, ‘Here I am, my child.’ Then in reply he said, ‘Father, behold, one of our people has been murdered and thrown into the marketplace and now lies strangled there.’”). One can readily see how the translator of GII has condensed the narrative and the dialogue between Tobias and Tobit. In contrast, GII provides the expected Semitic narrative framework as well as the back and forth dialogue of son and father.

A more dramatic example is 5.10 where GI has only eight Greek words: “Then he called him, and he went in, and they greeted each other.” It is extremely unlikely that these eight words could have been the origin of the 149 words in GII in which in detailed (typically biblical) fashion Tobit tells the angel Raphael (in disguise as a relative, Azarias) the anguish he experiences because of his blindness and the need he has for a reliable guide to accompany his son Tobias into Media: “Then Tobias went out and called him and said to him, ‘Young man, your father is calling you.’ So he went in to him, and Tobith greeted him first. And he said to him, ‘Many joyful greetings to you!’ But in reply Tobith said to him, ‘What is there for me still to be joyful about? Now I am a man with no power in my eyes, and I do not see the light of heaven, but I lie in darkness like the dead who no longer look at the light. Living, I am among the dead. I hear the voice of people, but I do not see them.’ So he said to him, ‘Take courage; the time is near for God to heal you; take courage.’ Then Tobith said to him, ‘Tobias my son wishes to go into Media. Can you go along with him and lead him? And I will give to you your wages, brother.’ And he said to him, ‘I can go with him; indeed, I know all the roads. Also I went into Media many times, and I crossed all its plains, and I know its mountains and all its roads.’”

A close examination of chapter 9 in GI and GII provides further convincing evidence that the former is condensed from the latter. The text of GI, which omits many narrative elements, fails to convey the drama and tension found in the much more detailed form of the story in GII.

By reading the translations of GI and GII synoptically, the reader will see many other instances where GI condenses GII or omits the GII repetitions that are a hallmark of biblical narrative. Perhaps the translator of GI was writing for a more sophisticated Greek-speaking audience for whom the Semitic-type repetitions and extended dialogues could seem otiose or stylistically less elegant.

A Third Version

A third version exists in cursive manuscripts 106–107 (= d) that Hanhart calls Greek III (= GIII); it preserves the text of only 6.9–12.22. Hanhart describes GIII as a secondary text-form fundamentally related to GII; accordingly, he includes its variants in the apparatus of GII. It should be noted that 106–107 give the GI form of the text from 1.1 to 6.8 and again from 13.1 to 14.15.

Approach to the Greek Text

Synoptic Rendering

In accord with the general principles of NETS concerning books that have two Greek forms, I have rendered the exact synoptic parallels between the two versions of Tobit in the same way. These synoptic parallels within their contexts provide a further opportunity for the reader to see how GI was indeed based upon GII and not the other way around. In any case, I hope that the reader will be able to follow more easily, with the aid of my translations, the two Greek forms of the book as we now have them. Since these Greek forms are themselves translations of a Semitic original, in my translations I have attempted to reproduce in English the flavor of these two Greek forms.

Recent Translations

The recent translations of the book of Tobit are based, as I mentioned above, on G II, and these make a serious effort to reconstruct or correct the defective text of Sinaiticus on the basis of Greek witnesses, whenever possible, and also on the basis of the critically essential Old Latin witnesses. See, for example, the critical footnotes the translators of Tobit supplied in the New Revised Standard Version, and especially the extensive critical notes I provided for my translation of Tobit in the New American Bible. The forthcoming revision of Tobit in the New American Bible, revised edition, by Joseph A. Fitzmyer who, as noted above, edited the Qumran fragments of Tobit, also will contain readings from these fragments.

The NETS Translations of Tobit

My translation of GI, however, is different from any of these other translations. What I give is a translation of GII alone, warts and all. In those places where Codex Sinaiticus has lacunae, as noted above, Hanhart does not supply a text, but only an apparatus. These lacunae, therefore, are represented also in my translation; to see what essentially would have been in these lacunae the reader should look to the translation of GI. In rare cases when a passage of GII is awkward, I render it into English without attempting to improve on the Greek. In 11.11–13, for instance, I give the following translation: “Then he lay the medicine on him, and ait workeda. And he scaled it off with both his hands from the corners of his eyes.” Note a then states: “Gk uncertain.” Thus, readers can see for themselves what the Greek text says. I followed the same procedure in my translation of GI.

If the translation of a Greek expression needs clarification, I have appended a note. The translation of 1.2 in GII, for example, states, “Thisbe which is to the righta of Kydios . . . above Asserb to the west, leftc of Phogor.” My note a reads: “Aram/Heb = south,” and note c reads “Aram/Heb = north.”

The Names of the Protagonist(s)

In the Qumran Aramaic and Hebrew fragments the father’s name appears as יְבוֹנָם, a Hebrew name meaning “my good,” but this form is clearly an abbreviation of the son’s name יְבוֹנָי, a Hebrew name meaning “Yah[weh] is my good,” which recurs also in Ezra 2.60; Neh 2.10, 19; 3.35; 4.1; 6.1, 12, 14, 17, 19; 7.62; 13.4, 7, 8. The father’s name in the Greek forms of the book is spelled in different ways: Twbi/t in GI and Twbij (twenty-two times) in GII; the final consonant in each of these forms was added to the final vowel of the Greek transliteration to make the name indeclinable. In GII a second form, Twbij, is found eight times and is inflected: nominative (11.10; 12.4), dative Twbεi (7.2) and accusative Twbn (3.17; 7.4; 9.6; 10.8; 11.18). The son’s name recurs as Twbij in GI as well as in GII, a name that also can be inflected; this Greek name represents the transliteration of Hebrew יְבֹנָי. In the LXX of Ezra 2.60 and most of the Nehemiah texts, the name occurs as indeclinable Twbij. But in Neh 3.35; 6.12, 19, the name is given as Twbij while in 6.17 the name occurs in the first of two instances in the accusative case.

The book of the words of Tobith son of Tobiel son of Hananiel son of Adouel son of Gabael son of Raphael son of Ragouel of the descendants of Asiel, of the tribe of Nephthaleim, who in the days of Enemessaros, the king of the Assyrians, was

1 I, Tobith, walked in the ways of truth and righteously acted all the days of my life, and I performed many acts of charity for my kindred and my people who had gone with me in exile into the land of the Assyrians, into Nineue. And when I was in my own country, in the land of Israel, and when I was young, all the tribe of Nephthaleim my ancestor withdrew from the house of Daud my ancestor and from Ierousalem, the city chosen from all the tribes of Israel to offer sacrifice for all the tribes of Israel, and the shrine of God’s covert had been consecrated and established in it for all the generations of the age.

2 All my kindred and the house of Nephthaleim my ancestor sacrificed to the calf which Ierobeam, the king of Israel, had made in Dan on all the mountains of Galilee. But I alone went frequently into Ierousalem for the feasts, as it is written in all Israel in an everlasting ordinance. Taking the first fruits and the first products and the tithes of the cattle and the first shearings of the sheep, I would hurry off to Ierousalem. And I gave these to the priests, the sons of Aaron, at the altar, and the tenth of the grain and the wine and olive oil and pomegranates and the figs and the rest of the fruits to the sons of Leui who ministered in Ierousalem. Also I tithed the second tenth in silver for six years and would go and spend these things in Ierousalem each year. And I gave these things to the orphans and the widows and guests who had attached themselves to the sons of Israel. I brought and gave these things to them in the third year, and we would eat them according to the decree that had been decreed concerning them in the law of Moyses and according to the commands which Debbora, the mother of Hananiel our father, had commanded, for my father had left me an orphan and died. And when I became a man, I took a wife, one of our own family, and by her I became the father of a son, and I called his name Tobias.

3 After I was taken captive to the Assyrians and when I was taken captive, I went into Nineue. And all of my kindred and my race ate the food of the nations, but I kept myself from eating the bread of the nations. And when I was mindful of my God with my whole soul, the Most High gave me favor and good standing with Enemessaros, and I bought everything he needed. So I would go into Media and buy for him there until he died. And I placed in trust bags of silver, ten talents worth, with Gabaelos, the brother of Gabrias, at Rhaga in Media. But when Enemessaros died, Sennachereim his son became king in his place, and his roads became unstable, and I could no longer go into Media.

4 When I was young, all the tribe of Nephthaleim my ancestor was chosen from all the tribes of Israel for all the tribes to offer sacrifice, and the shrine of the Most High’s covert had been consecrated and established for all the generations of the age.

5 And all the tribes that had joined in apostasy and the house of Nephthaleim my ancestor offered sacrifice to Baal the heifer. But I alone went often into Ierouslya for the feasts, as it is written for all Israel in an everlasting ordinance, taking the first fruits and the tithes of the produce and the first shearings. And I gave these to the priests, the sons of Aaron, at the altar. I gave the tenth of all the produce to the sons of Leui who ministered in Ierousalem, and the second tenth I sold and went and spent these things in Ierousyla each year. And I gave the third tenth to those to whom it was my duty, as Debbora, my father’s mother, had commanded me, for I was left an orphan by my father. And when I became a man, I took Hanna as wife, one of our own family, and by her I became the father of Tobias.
when Enemassar died and Sennachereim his son became king in his place, then the roads to Media became unfit, and I could no longer go into Media.

16 In the days of Enemessaros I performed many acts of charity for my kindred, those of my race. 17I would give my bread to the hungry and clothing to the naked, and if I saw anyone of my people dead and cast out behind the wall of Nineue, I would bury him. 18And if Sennachereim killed anyone, when he came fleeing from Judea in the days of judgment which the king of heaven executed upon him because of the blasphemies which he blasphemed, I buried him. 19Then a certain one of the people of Nineue went and informed the king about me, that I bury them; so I hid myself. But when I discovered that the king knew about me and that I was being sought out to be put to death, I was afraid and ran away. 20Then everything that belonged to me was seized, and nothing was left to me except Hanna my wife and Tobias my son.

21 But forty days did not pass before two of his sons killed him, and they fled into the mountains of Ararat. Then Sacherdonos his son became king after him. And he appointed Achiacharos son of Hanael my brother over all the accounts of his kingdom, and he had authority over all the administration. 22Then Achiacharos interceded for me, and I returned into Nineue. For Achiacharos was chief cupbearer and keeper of the signet and in charge of administration and accounts under Sennachereim, the king of the Assyrians, and Sacherdonos appointed him second to himself. Now he was my nephew and from my kinsfolk.

2 When I returned home and Hanna my wife and Tobias my son were given back to me at the feast of Pentecost, which is the holy feast of seven weeks, there was a good dinner for me, and I reclined to eat. 2And I saw many foods, so I said to my son, “Go, and bring whatever poor person of our kindred you may find who is mindful of the Lord, and behold, I shall wait for you.” 3And he came and said, “Father, one of our race has been strangled and thrown into the marketplace!” 4So before I tasted anything, I sprang up and removed him to a certain chamber until the sun set. 5And returning, I washed myself and ate my bread in sorrow. 6Then I remembered the prophecy of Amos, when he said, mournings. Then I remembered the saying of the prophet, those things that Amos spoke against Baithel, saying,

“Your feasts shall be turned into mourning, and all your ways into lamentation.”

And I wept.

7 And when the sun had set, I went and dug a grave and buried him. And my neighbors were laughing in scorn, saying, “Is he still not afraid? For he was already sought out to be murdered for this thing, and he ran away. And again, behold, he is burying the dead!”

9 Then the same night I returned from the burial, and because I was defiled, I slept by the wall of the courtyard, and my face was uncovered because of the heat. And I did not know that there were sparrows in the wall above me, and their warm excrement settled into my eyes and brought about white films. So I went to the physicians to be healed, but the more they anointed me with the medicines so much the more were my eyes blinded by the white films until I became completely blind. And I was powerless with my eyes four years. Now all my kindred grieved for me, but Achiacharos supported me two years before he went to Elymais.

11 And at that time Hanna my wife earned money in women’s works. Then she would send what she made to their owners, and they would give her the wages. Now, on the seventh of Dystros, she cut off a piece of weaving and sent it to the owners, and they gave her all the wages and also gave her for the family a kid from the goats. And when it came in toward me, the kid began to bleat. So I called her and said, “Where is this kid from? Is it not stolen, is it? Give it back to its owners, for we have no authority to eat anything stolen.”

But she said to me, “It was given to me as a gift in addition to the wages.” But I did not believe her and told her to give it back to the owners. And because of this I flushed with anger against her. Then in reply she said to me, “Now where are your acts of charity? Where are your righteous deeds? See, these things are known about you!”

Then being grief-stricken in spirit and groaning, I wept, and I began to pray with sighs:

“Then I remembered the saying of the prophet, those things that Amos spoke against Baithel, saying, “Your feasts shall be turned into mourning, and all your merriments into lamentation.” And I wept. 7 And when the sun had set, I went and dug a grave and buried him. And my neighbors were laughing, saying, “He is no longer afraid to be murdered for this thing. And he ran away, and behold, he is again burying the dead!”

9 Then on the same night I returned from the burial, and because I was defiled, I slept by the wall of the courtyard, and my face was uncovered. 10 I did not know that there were sparrows in the wall, and since my eyes were open the sparrows dropped their warm excrement into my eyes, and white films came into my eyes. So I went to physicians, but they did not help me. Achiacharos, however, supported me until he went to Elymais.

11 And my wife Hanna earned money in women’s works. Then she would send what she made to the owners. And they in turn gave her the wages, giving in addition also a kid. But when it came toward me, it began to bleat. So I said to her, “Where is the kid from? Is it not stolen, is it? Give it back to the owners, for it is not lawful to eat what is stolen.”

14 But she said, “It was given to me as a gift in addition to the wages.” But I did not believe her and told her to give it back to the owners. And I blushed in anger against her. She, however, said to me in reply, “Now where are your acts of charity? Where are your righteous deeds? Behold, all things are known about you!”

Then in grief I wept, and I prayed with anguish, saying,

“You are righteous, O Lord, and all your deeds are righteous, and all your ways are mercy and truth; you judge the age.

And now you, O Lord, remember me, and look down.

And do not punish me for my sins and for my unwitting offenses and those of my ancestors; they sinned before you, and they disobeyed your commandments.

And you gave us over to plunder and exile and death and for an illustration and by word and reproach among all the nations among which you have scattered us.

5 And now your many judgments are true in doing with me according to my sins, because we did not keep your commandments and did not walk truthfully before you.

6 So now according to what is pleasing to you do with me, and command my spirit to be taken up from me, that I may be set free from the face of the earth and become earth. For it is better for me to die than to live, because I have heard false reproaches, and grief is great in me. O Lord, command that I be set free from this distress; set me free into the place everlasting, and do not turn away your face, O Lord, from me. For it is better for me to die than to see great distress in my life, and better not to hear reproaches."

7 On that day, it happened to Sarra daughter of Ragouel at Ecbatana in Media that she also heard reproaches from one of her father's maids. For she had been given to seven husbands, and Asmodaio the wicked demon had killed them before they had been with her as is prescribed for wives. So the maid said to her, "You are the one who kills your husbands! Behold, already you have been given to seven husbands, and you have not borne the name of one of them. Why do you beat us concerning your husbands? Because they are dead? Go with them! And may we never see a son or a daughter of yours!"

10 Hearing these things, she was so deeply grieved that she thought to hang herself. But she said, "I am my father's only one; if I do this, it will be a disgrace to him, and I shall bring down his old age with sorrow into Hades." So she prayed toward the window and said,

"Blessed are you, O Lord my God! And blessed is your holy and honored name forever. Let all your works praise you forever."

12 And now my face is toward you, and I lift up my eyes. Command that I be set free from the earth and that I hear reproaches no more. You know, O Master, that I am pure from all impurity with a man and that I did not defile my name or my father's name in the land of my captivity. I am my father's only begotten, and he has no other child who will be his heir, nor has he a near kinsman or son of his 4 On that day Tobith remembered the silver, which he had placed in trust with Gabaelos at Rhaga in Media, and he said in his heart, “Behold, I have asked for death. Why do I not call Tobias my son and inform him about this silver before I die?” Then he called Tobias his son, and he came to him. And he said, “Bury me properly. And honor your mother and do not abandon her all the days of her life. And do what is pleasing before her, and do not grieve her spirit in anything. Remember her, my child, because she experienced many dangers for you in her womb. And when she dies, bury her beside me in one grave.

5 “And all your days, my child, remember the Lord, and do not desire to sin or to transgress his commandments. Do righteous acts all the days of your life, and do not walk in the ways of injustice. For those who keep to the truth will succeed in all their deeds. And to all those who do righteousness, . . .

16 At that very moment, the prayer of both was heard in the presence of the glory of God. Raphael was sent to heal the two: Tobis, by removing the white films from his eyes so that he might see with his eyes the light of God, and Sarra daughter of Ragouel, by giving her to Tobias son of Tobith as wife and by freeing Asmodaios the wicked demon from her, because Tobias had the right to inherit her before all others who desired to have her. At that moment Tobith returned from the courtyard into his house, and Sarra daughter of Ragouel also came down herself from the upper room.

17 Now the prayer of both was heard in the presence of the glory of the great Raphael. And he was sent to heal the two: to scale away the white films of Tobit and to give Sarra daughter of Ragouel to Tobias son of Tobit as wife and to bind Asmodaus the wicked demon, because Tobias had the right to inherit her. At that very moment Tobit returned and entered into his house, and Sarra daughter of Ragouel came down from her upper room.

16 On that day Tobit remembered about the silver, which he had placed in trust with Gabaelos at Rhaga in Media, and he said in himself, “I have asked for death. Why do I not call Tobias my son so that I may inform him before I die?” Then he called Tobias his son, and he came to him. And he said, “Bury me properly. And honor your mother and do not abandon her all the days of her life. And do what is pleasing before her, and do not grieve her spirit in anything. Remember her, my child, because she experienced many dangers for you in her womb. And when she dies, bury her beside me in one grave.

5 “And all your days, my child, remember the Lord, and do not desire to sin or to transgress his commandments. Do righteous acts all the days of your life, and do not walk in the ways of injustice. For those who keep to the truth will succeed in all their deeds. And to all those who do righteousness, . . .
19... the Lord will give to them good counsel. And if the Lord wishes, he casts down to deepest Hades. So now, my child, remember these commandments, and do not let them be erased from your heart.

5 Then in reply Tobias said to Tobith his father, “Everything that you have commanded me I shall do, father. 2 But how can I get it from him; indeed, he does not know me, nor do I know him? What sign shall I give him, so he will recognize me and give me the silver? Also, I do not know the roads into Media in order to go there.” 3 Then in reply Tobith said to Tobias his son, “He gave me his bond, and I gave him my bond. And I divided it into two, and we each took one part, and I put it in with the silver. And now behold, it is twenty years since I placed this silver in trust. So now, my child, seek for yourself a trustworthy man who will go with you, and we will give him wages until you come. But get this silver from him.”

4 So Tobias went out to seek a man who would go with him into Media, who was acquainted with the road. And he went out and found Raphael the angel standing in front of him, but he did not know that he was an angel of God. 5 And he said to him, “Where are you from, young man?” And he said to him, “From the sons of Israel, your kin-
8 And he said to him, “Yes, I have been there many times; I am acquainted with and know all the roads. Often I went into Media, and I stayed with Gabaelos our kinsman who dwells in Rhaga of Media. Now it is a journey of two days from Ecbatana into Ragai, for it lies in the mountain, Ecbatana in the middle of the plain.” Then he said to him, “Wait for me, young man, until I go in and tell my father, for I need you to go with me, and I will give you your wages.” 8And he said, “Behold, I will stay; only do not delay.”

9 So Tobias went in to tell Tobith his father and said to him, “Behold, I have found some one who will go along with me.” Then he said, “Call him to me so that I may find out to what tribe he belongs and if he is trustworthy to go with you.”

10 Then he called him, and he went in, and they greeted each other.

11 Then Tobit said to him, “Brother, of what tribe and what family are you? Tell me.” 12And he said, “Why, do you need a tribe?” And he said to him, “I want to know the truth about whose son you are, brother, and what your name is.” 13So he said to him, “I am Azarias son of Hananias the great, one of your relatives.” 14Then he said to him, “Come in, brother, in good health and safety! And do not be bitter toward me, brother, because I wanted to know the truth about your family also. Now you happen to be a relative, and you are of a noble and good lineage. I knew Hananias and Nathan, the two sons of Semelias the great, and they would go with me into Jerusalem and do obeisance with me there, and they did not err. Your relatives are good people; you are of good stock. So come in with joy!” 15Then he said to him, “I will give you a drachma a day as wages, and what is needed for you as well as for my son. So go with my son. 16I will also add more to your wages.” And he said to him, “I shall go with him; so do not fear. We shall go away in good health, and we shall return to you in good health, because bias said to him, “Wait for me, and I shall tell my father.” 8And he said to him, “Go, but do not delay.”

9 So he went in and said to his father, “Behold, I have found some one who will go along with me.” Then he said, “Call him to me so that I may find out to what tribe he belongs and if he is trustworthy to go with you.”

the road is safe." 17So he said to him, "Blessing be upon you, brother."

Then he called his son and said to him, "My child, prepare the things for the journey, and go out with your brother. And may God in heaven bring you safely there and restore you back to me in good health, and may his angel journey along with you in safety, my child." And he went out to go on his journey, and he kissed his father and mother. Then Tobith said to him, "Go in good health."

18 But his mother wept and said to Tobit, "Why is it that you have sent my child away? Is he not the rod of our hand as he goes in and goes out before us? 19 Do not add silver to silver, but let it be a ransom for our child. 20 For as it has been given to us to live by the Lord, that is enough." 21 And he said to her, "Do not worry; our child will go in good health and come back to us in good health. And your eyes will see him on the day when he comes back to you in good health. Do not worry! Do not fear for them, my sister. 22 For a good angel will accompany him, and his journey will be successful, and he will come back in good health."

2 Then the child went out, and the angel with him, and the dog went out with him and walked with them. And they both walked, and the first night came upon them, and they camped by the Tigris River. 3 Then the child went down to wash his feet in the Tigris River. And a large fish, leaping up from the water, wanted to swallow the foot of the young man, and he cried out. 4 Then the angel said to the young man, "Take hold of the fish, and hang on!" So the child seized the fish and carried it up onto the land. 5 Then the angel said to him, "Cut open the fish, and take the heart and liver and gall, and put them away safely." 6 So the young man did as the angel had told him. Then, roasting the fish, they ate.

And they both journeyed until they drew near to Ecbatana. 7 And the young man asked the angel, "Brother Azarias, of what use is the fish's liver and heart and gall?" 8 And he said to him, "As for the fish's heart and liver, burn them to smoke in the presence of a man or woman afflicted by a demon or evil spirit, and every affliction will flee away from him and will not remain with him any longer. 9 And as for the gall, anoint a person's eyes on which white films have come up; blow upon them, upon the white films, and they will be healed."

10 And when he went into Media and already drew near to Ecbatana, 11 Raphael said to the young man, "Brother Tobias." And he said to him, "Here I am." Then he said to him, "This night we must stay in the home of Ragouelos. Now the man is your relative, and he has a beautiful daughter whose name is Sarra. And he has no male son or daughter except Sarra alone, and you are closer to her than all other men, to have her as an inheritance. And it is right for you to have her father’s possessions as an inheritance. Also the girl is sensible and brave and very beautiful, and her father is noble." And he said, “It is right for you to take her. So listen to me, brother, and I shall speak to the father about the girl this night so that we may take her to be your bride. And, when we return from Rhaga, we shall celebrate her wedding feast. And I know that Ragouel cannot keep her from you or promise her to another; he would be liable to death according to the decree of the book of Moyses. And he knows that the inheritance is yours by right to take his daughter before any other man. So now listen to me, brother, and we shall speak this night concerning the girl and have her engaged to you. And, when we return from Rhaga, we shall take her and bring her back with us into your house.”

14 Then in reply Tobias said to Raphael, “Brother Azarias, I heard that she already has been given to seven husbands, and they died in their bridal chamber. On the night when they went in toward her, they would die. And I heard people say that a demon kills them. And now I am afraid—for it does not harm her, but anyone who desires to approach her it kills; I am my father’s only son—that I may die and bring my father’s and my mother’s life, because of me, to their grave with sorrow. And they have no other son, that he may bury them.”

16 But he said to him, “Do you not remember your father’s commandments, that he commanded you to take a wife from your father’s house? So now listen to me, brother, and do not worry about this demon, and take her. And I know that this night a wife will be given to you. Now when you go into the bridal chamber, take some of the fish’s liver and heart, and put them on the embers of the incense, and the smell will go forth. Then the demon will smell it and flee and will never be seen around her any more. And when you are about to be with her, get up first, both of you, and pray, and beseech the Lord of heaven that mercy and safety may be upon you. So do not be afraid, for she was set apart for you from of old. And you will save her, and she will go with you. And I suppose that you will have children by her, and they will be as brothers to you. Do not worry!” Now when Tobias heard the words of Raphael, and that she was his kinswoman of the lineage of his father’s house, he loved her very much, and his heart clung to her.

7 Now when they entered into Ecbatana, he said to him, “Brother Azarias, lead me straight to Ragouel our brother.” So he led him into the house of Ragouelos, and they found him sitting beside the door of the courtyard. And they greeted him first, and he said to them, "Many joyful greetings, brothers, and welcome in good health!" Then he led them into his house. 2And he said to Edna his wife, "How much this young man resembles Tobis my kinsman!" 3Then Edna asked them and said to them, "Where are you from, brothers?" And they said to her, "We belong to the children of Nephthaleim, who were taken captive in Nineue." 4So she said to them, "Do you know Tobis our kinsman?" And they said, "We do know him." 5Then he said to them, "Is he in good health?" And they said, "He is both alive and in good health." And Tobias said, "He is my father!" 6Then Ragouel jumped up and kissed him and wept. 7And he spoke and said to him, "Blessings on you, my child, son of a noble and good father! O most miserable of calamities that a righteous man who also gives alms has become blind!" Then he fell on the neck of Tobias his kinsman and wept. 8Also Edna his wife wept for him, and Sarra their daughter likewise wept. 9Then he slaughtered a ram from the flock and welcomed them very warmly.

Now when they had bathed and washed themselves and had reclined to have dinner, Tobias said to Raphael, "Brother Azarias, speak of those things which you talked about on the journey, and let the matter be settled." 10So he communicated the word to Ragouel. And Ragouel said to Tobias, "Eat, and drink, and be merry, for it is your right to take my child. But let me explain the truth to you. 11I have given my child to seven husbands, and when they came in toward her, they died during the night. But for now be merry." Then Tobias said, "I will taste nothing here until you stand firm and are confirmed in my regard."

So Ragouel said, "Take her from now on, according to the decree. And you are her brother, and she is yours. Now may the merciful God prosper you both with the best." 12Then he called Sarra his daughter, and taking her hand, he gave her over to Tobias as wife, and he said, "Behold, according to the law of Moyses take her, and lead her away to your father." And he blessed them. 13Then he called Edna his wife, and taking a scroll, he wrote out a contract, and they set their seals to it. 14And they began to eat.

Tobias then said to Raphael, "Brother Azarias, speak of those things which you talked about on the journey, and let the matter be settled." 10So he communicated the word to Ragouel. And Ragouel said to Tobias, "Eat, and drink, and be merry, for it is your right to take my child. But let me explain the truth to you. 11I have given my child to seven husbands, and when they came in toward her, they died during the night. But for now be merry." Then Tobias said, "I will taste nothing here until you stand firm and are confirmed in my regard."

So Ragouel said, "Take her from now on, according to the decree. And you are her brother, and she is yours. Now may the merciful God prosper you both with the best." 12Then he called Sarra his daughter, and taking her hand, he gave her over to Tobias as wife, and he said, "Behold, according to the law of Moyses take her, and lead her away to your father." And he blessed them. 13Then he called Edna his wife, and taking a scroll, he wrote out a contract, and they set their seals to it. 14And they began to eat.

15 Then Ragouel called Edna his wife and said to her, “My sister, prepare the other room, and lead her in there.” 16 So she went and made the bed in the room as he had told her, and she led her there. And she wept for her. Then she wiped away the tears and said to her, 17 “Take courage, my daughter; may the Lord of heaven grant you joy in place of your sorrow. Take courage, my daughter.” Then she went out.

8 When they had finished eating and drinking, they wanted to go to sleep; so they led the young man out and led him into the room. 2 Then Tobias remembered the words of Raphael, and he took the fish’s liver and heart out of the bag where he had them and put them on the embers of the incense. 3 And the odor of the fish became a hindrance, and the demon fled into the upper parts of Egypt. But Raphael went and bound him there hand and foot and tied him up at once.

4 Then they went out and shut the door of the room. And Tobias got up from the bed and said to her, “Sister, get up, let us pray and implore our Lord that he grant us mercy and safety.” 5 So she got up, and they began to pray and implore that safety may be theirs. And he began to say, “Blessed are you, O God of our ancestors, and blessed be your name for all the ages forever. Let the heavens and all your creation bless you for all the ages.

6 You made Adam, and you made for him a helper, a support—his wife Heua. And from the two of them the human race has come. And you said, ‘It is not good for the man to be alone; let us make for him a helper like himself.’ 7 And now not because of lust am I taking this kinswoman of mine, but with sincerity. Grant that I and she may have mercy and that we may grow old together.” 8 And they said with each other, “Amen, Amen.” 9 Then they went to sleep for the night.

But Ragouel got up and called his servants to him, and they went and dug a grave, 10 for he said, “Perhaps he may die, and we may become an object of ridicule and derision.” 11 And when they had finished digging the grave, Ragouel went into the house and called his wife, 12 and he said, “Send one of the maids, and have her go in to see if he is alive. But if he is dead, let us bury him so that no one may know.” 13 So they sent the maid and lit the lamp and opened the door, and she went in and found them lying there fast asleep together. 14 And the maid went out and told them that he was alive and that nothing was wrong. 15 So they blessed the God of heaven, and they said,

"Blessed are you, O God, with every pure blessing, and may they bless you forever and ever.

And blessed are you because you have made me glad, and it did not turn out as I expected, but according to your great mercy you have dealt with us.

And blessed are you because you had mercy on two only children. Have mercy on them, O Master, and keep them safe, and bring their life to fulfillment with gladness and mercy."

Then he told his domestics to fill in the grave before it became dawn.

And he told his wife to make many loaves of bread, and he went out to the herd and brought two steers and four rams and commanded that they be killed. So they began to make preparations.

Then he called Tobias and aswore an oath to him and said: "For fourteen days you shall not move from here but shall stay here eating and drinking with me, and you shall make my daughter's spirit glad which has been depressed. Then take at once half of what I own and return in good health to your father, and the other half will be yours when I die, and my wife as well. Take courage, my child. I am your father, and Edna is your mother, and we belong to you and to your kinswoman now and forever. Take courage, my child."

Then Tobias called Raphael and said to him, "Brother Azarias, take with you four domestics and two camels, and go to Rhagai. And go to the house of Gabaelos, and give him the bond, and get the silver, and then bring him back with you to the wedding feast. For you know that my father is counting the days, and if I delay one day, I will grieve him very much. And you see how Ragouel has sworn, and I cannot violate his oath." So Raphael and the four servants and two camels went into Rhagai in Media and stayed with Gabaelos. Then he gave him the bond and told him about Tobias son of Tobith, that he had taken a wife and invited him to the wedding feast. So he got up and counted out for him the money bags, with the seals; then they \[\text{a}\] loaded them on the camels. And they both got up early in the morning and went to the wedding feast. And they went to Ragouel's place and found Tobias reclining at table. Then he sprang up and greeted him, and he wept and blessed him and said, "Noble and good son of a noble and good, upright and charitable man, may the Lord give the blessing of heaven to you and to your wife and to your father and to the mother of your wife. Blessed be God, for I see Tobis my cousin who is just like him."

Now Tobit his father was counting each day, and when the days for the journey had expired and they did not come, he said, “Perhaps he has been detained there? Or perhaps Gabael has died, and no one is giving him the silver?” And he grieved very much. Then the wife said to him, “My child has perished; that is why he has delayed.”

Then Tobias said to Ragouel, “Send me back, for my father and mother do not hope to see me again.” But his father-in-law said to him, “Stay with me, and I will send others to your father, and they will tell him how things are with you.” But he said to him, “By no means! I beg you that you send me back from here to my father.”

So Ragouel arose and gave Tobias Sarra his wife and half of all his property—male and female slaves, oxen and sheep, asses and camels, clothing and silver and utensils. Then he sent them away in good health, and he embraced him and said to him, “Good health, my child; go away in good health. The Lord of heaven prosper you and Sarra your wife, and may I see your children before I die.” Then he said to Sarra his daughter, “My daughter, honor your father-in-law and your mother-in-law, for from now on they are as much your parents as those who gave you birth. Go in peace, my daughter; may I hear a good report about you as long as I live.” And he took leave of them and let them go. Then Edna said to Tobias, “My child and dear brother, may the Lord of heaven bring you back safely and grant that I may see your children by Sarra my daughter so that I may rejoice before the Lord. And behold, I entrust my daughter to you as a pledge; do not grieve her.”

Then Tobias went away from Ragouel in good health and rejoicing and blessing the Lord of heaven because he had made his journey a success. And he blessed Ragouel and Edna his wife.
When they came near to Kaserein, which is opposite Nineue, 2Raphael said, “You know how we left your father. Let us run on ahead of your wife and prepare the house while they are on the way.” 4So the two of them went together, and he said to him, “Take the gall with your hands.” And the dog came along behind them.

5 Now Hanna sat looking intently at the road for her son. 6And she caught sight of him coming, and she said to his father, “Behold, your son is coming, and the man who went with him!”

7 Then Raphael said to Tobias, before he had approached his father, “I know that his eyes will be opened. 8Sprinkle the gall of the fish on his eyes, and the medicine will make the white films contract and peel off from his eyes, and your father will look up and see the light.”

9 Then running out, Hanna fell on the neck of her son and said to him, “I see you, my child; from now on I am ready to die.” And they both wept. 10Then Tobit went out toward the door, and he stumbled. But the son ran out to him 11and took hold of his father, and he sprinkled the gall on his father’s eyes, saying, “Take courage, father.” Then he lay the medicine on him, and it worked. 12And he scaled it off with both his hands from the corners of his eyes. Then he fell on his neck, 13and he wept and said to him, “I see you, my child, the light of my eyes!” Then he said, “Blessed be God, and blessed is your name forever, and blessed are all your holy angels.

15 For he afflicted me, but behold, I see Tobias my son!” And Tobias went in rejoicing and blessing God with full voice. Then Tobias told his father that his journey had been successful and that he had brought the silver and that he had taken Sarra daughter of Ragouel as wife and that behold, she is arriving and is near the gate of Nineue.

16 Then Tobith went out to the gate of Nineue to meet his daughter-in-law, rejoicing and blessing God. Now the people of Nineue, seeing him walking and moving along in all his strength and with no one leading him, were amazed. And Tobith acknowledged before them that God had been merciful to him and that he had opened his eyes. Then Tobith approached Sarra, the wife of Tobias his son, and he blessed her and said to her, “Come in, in good health, daughter, and blessed be your God, who has brought you to us, daughter. And blessed be your father and your mother, and all the angels be blessed throughout all the ages.

15 For you have afflicted me, but you have had mercy upon me; behold, I see Tobias my son!” And his son went in rejoicing, and he announced to his father the great things that had happened to him in Media.

16 Then Tobit went out to the gate of Nineue to meet his daughter-in-law, rejoicing and blessing God. Now those who saw him walking were amazed because he could see. And Tobit acknowledged before them that God had been merciful to him. Now when Tobit approached Sarra his daughter-in-law, he blessed her, saying, “Come in, in good health, daughter! Blessed be God, who has brought you to us, and blessed be your father and your mother.” And there was joy among all his relatives in Nineue. Also Achiacharos and Nasbas his nephew came. Then the wedding feast of Tobias was held with rejoicing for seven days.

blessed be Tobias my son, and blessed be you, daughter. Come into your house in good health, with blessing and joy. Come in, daughter." On that day there was joy among all the Judeans who were in Nineue. 18And Achikar and Nabad his nephews came rejoicing to Tobis.

12 Now when the wedding feast was ended, Tobith called Tobias his son and said to him, "My child, see that you give the wages to the man who went with you, even add to his wages." 2So he said to him, "Father, how much shall I give him as his wages? It would do me no harm to give him half of the possessions he brought back with me. 3He has led me back in good health and cured my wife and brought the silver with me, and he healed you. How much shall I still give him as wages?" 4Then Tobis said to him, "It is his right, my child, to take half of all that he came back with." 5So he called him and said, "Take half of all that you came back with for your wages, and go away in good health."

6 Then he called the two in secret and said to them, "Bless God, and before all the living acknowledge him for the good things he has done for you. Bless, and sing praise to his name. The words of God declare with honor to all people. And do not hesitate to acknowledge him. 7It is good to conceal the secret of a king, but to reveal and acknowledge honorably the works of God. Do what is good, and evil will not overtake you. 8Prayer is good with fasting, but almsgiving with righteousness is more than wealth with injustice. It is better to give alms rather than to store up gold. 9Almsgiving delivers from death, and it purges away every sin. Those who give alms will enjoy life to the full. 10Those who commit sin and injustice are enemies of their own self.

11 "I shall declare the whole truth to you, and I will not conceal any word from you. Already I declared to you and said, 'It is good to conceal the secret of a king, but to reveal gloriously the works of God.' 12So now when you and Sarra prayed, I brought the memorial of your prayer before the glory of the Lord and did likewise when you would bury the dead. 13And when you did not hesitate to get up and leave your dinner and when you went and buried the dead, 14then I was sent to you to test you. And at the same time God sent me to heal you and Sarra your daughter-in-law. 15I am Raphael, one of the seven holy angels who approach and enter before the glory of the Lord."

16 Then they were both troubled, and they fell on their face, for they were afraid. 17But he said to them, "Do not be afraid; peace be with you. 6 Then calling the two in secret, he said to them, "Bless God, and acknowledge him, and magnify him, and before all the living acknowledge him concerning the things he has done for you. And do not hesitate to acknowledge him. 7It is good to conceal the secret of a king but to reveal gloriously the works of God. Do good, and evil will not overtake you. 8Prayer is good with fasting, but almsgiving with righteousness. A little with righteousness is better than much with injustice. It is better to give alms than to store up gold. 9For almsgiving delivers from death, and it will purge away every sin. Those who practice almsgiving and righteousness will have fullness of life. 10but those who sin are enemies of their own life.

11 "I will not conceal any word from you. I have indeed said, 'It is good to conceal the secret of a king but to reveal gloriously the works of God.' 12And now when you and your daughter-in-law Sarra prayed, I brought the memorial of your prayer before the Holy One, and when you would bury the dead, I was likewise present with you. 13And when you did not hesitate to get up and leave your dinner to go out and bury the dead, the good deed was not hidden from me, but I was with you. 14So now God sent me to heal you and your daughter-in-law Sarra. 15I am Raphael, one of the seven holy angels who approach and enter before the glory of the Holy One."

16 Then they were both troubled, and they fell face forward, for they were afraid. 17But he said to them, "Do not be afraid; you will have peace. But bless God forever. 18For not by my grace, but by the will of our God have I come. Therefore, bless him forever. 19All the days I appeared to you, but I did not eat or drink; rather, you were seeing a vision. 20So now acknowledge God, for I am as-praises. Now you were watching me; I did not eat anything, but a vision was being seen by you. So bless the Lord on the earth and acknowledge God. Behold, I am ascending to him who sent me. Write down all these things that have happened to you.” And he ascended. Then they stood up, and they could see him no longer. And they blessed and sang praises to God, and they acknowledged God for these marvelous deeds of his, when an angel of God had appeared to them.

13 Then he said:
“Blessed be God who lives forever, and blessed be his kingdom.
2 For he afflicts, and he shows mercy; he leads down to Hades in the lowest part of the earth, and he brings up from the great destruction, and there is nothing that will escape his hand.

3 Acknowledge him, O sons of Israel, before the nations, for he has scattered you among them.
4 Even there he has shown you his greatness; so exalt him in the presence of all the living, because he is our Lord and he is our God, and he is our Father and he is God for all the ages.

5 He will afflict you for your injustices, and he will show mercy on all of you from all the nations among whom you have been scattered.

6 When you turn back to him with all your heart and with all your soul, to do what is true before him, then he will turn back to you and will no longer hide his face from you.

And now see what he has done with you, and acknowledge him with full voice. And bless the Lord of righteousness, and exalt the king of the ages . . .
and again your tent will be built in you with joy.
And may he gladden within you all those who are captives and love within you all those who are distressed, for all the generations of the age.

A bright light will shine to all the ends of the earth;
many nations from far away will come to you,
the inhabitants of all the remote parts of the earth to your holy name, also bearing their gifts in their hands for the king of heaven.
Generations of generations will give joyful worship in you,
and the name of the chosen one will last for the generations of the world.

Cursed are all who speak a harsh word;
cursed will be all who cast you down and pull down your walls and all who overthrow your towers and set your homes on fire.
But blessed forever will be those who fear you.

Then go, and rejoice before the sons of the righteous, for they all will be gathered together and will bless the Lord of the age.
Happy are those who love you,
and happy are those who will rejoice in your peace.
And happy are all the people who will grieve over you, over all your afflictions, for they will rejoice over you and see all your joy forever.

My soul blesses the Lord, the great king.
For Jerusalem will be built as a city, as his house for all the ages.
Happy shall I be if a remnant of my seed should be present to see your glory and to acknowledge the king of heaven.
And the gates of Jerusalem will be built with lapis lazuli and emerald, and all your walls with precious stone.
The towers of Jerusalem will be built with gold,
and their battlements with pure gold.
The streets of Jerusalem will be paved with ruby and stone of Souphir.
And the gates of Jerusalem will say hymns of joy, and all her houses will say, ‘Hallelouia! Blessed be the God of Israel!’
And the blessed will bless his holy name forever and ever.”

Or O my soul, bless = Ha
14 Then the words of Tobith’s praise were completed.

And he died in peace at one hundred twelve years, and he was buried with honor in Nineue. 2 Now he was sixty-two years old when he became maimed in his eyes, and after he saw again he lived in prosperity and gave alms. And he still continued to bless God and to acknowledge the majesty of God.

3 Now when he was about to die, he called Tobias his son and commanded him, saying: “My child, take your children, and hurry off into Media, for I believe the word of God about Nineue, that the things Naoum spoke, that all these things will come about and happen to Athour and Nineue. Also everything that the prophets of Israel spoke, those whom God sent, will happen. And not one of all their words will fail, but all will come true at their appointed times. So in Media there will be safety rather than among the Assyrians or in Babylon. For I know and believe that all things that God said will be fulfilled and will come to pass, and no utterance of his words shall fail. And our kindred, who live in the land of Israel, all will be scattered and taken as captives from the good land, and the whole land of Israel will be desolate, even Samaria and Jerusalem will be desolate. And the house of God will be in grief and will be burned down for a time.

5 “But again God will have mercy on them, and God will bring them back into the land of Israel, and again they will build the house, not like the first one, until the time when the time of the appointed times will be completed. Then after this they all will return from their captivity, and they will build Jerusalem honorably. And the house of God will be built in it, just as the prophets of Israel said concerning it. Then all the nations in the whole world will turn back and truly fear God. And all will abandon their idols, which deceitfully have made them err in their error. And they will bless the God of the ages in righteousness. All the sons of Israel who are saved in those days, mindful of God in truth, will be gathered together. And they will go into Jerusalem and live forever in the land of Abraam with security, and it will be given over to them. And those who love God in truth will rejoice, but those who commit sin and injustice will vanish from all the earth.

8-9 “So now, my children, I command you, serve God in truth, and do what is pleasing before him. Also your children are to be commanded to practice righteousness and almsgiving and to be mindful of God and bless his name at every moment in truth and with all their strength.

“So now, my child, go out from Nineue, and do not remain here. On the day you bury your mother with me, on that day do not spend the night within its borders. For I see that there is much injustice within it and that much deceit is accomplished within it, and they are not ashamed. See, my child, what Nadab did to Achilaceros who went down into the darkness. Manasses gave alms and was saved from the death trap that they had not remained in. 10 And Tobit stopped praising.
had reared him. Was he not, while still alive, brought down into the earth? And God repaid the dishonor to his face. Now Achikaros came out into the light, but Nadab went into the everlasting darkness, because he sought to kill Achikaros. Because he gave alms, he came out of the death trap that Nadab had set for him, but Nadab fell into the death trap himself, and it destroyed him. 11 So now, my children, see what almsgiving does and what injustice does: it kills! But behold, my soul is about to leave." Then they laid him on the bed, and he died, and he was buried honorably.

12 And when Hanna died, he buried her with his father. Then Tobias went away with his wife and his sons to Ecbatana to Ragouel his father-in-law. 13 And he grew old honorably, and he buried his parents-in-law honorably. Then he inherited their property and that of Tobit his father.

14 Then he died at the age of one hundred seventeen years. 15 And before he died he saw and heard of the destruction of Nineue, and he saw its captivity being led into Media, which Achiacharos, the king of Media, had taken captive. And he blessed God for all the things that he had done to the sons of Nineue and Athouria; before he died he rejoiced over Nineue, and he blessed the Lord God forever and ever. Amenᵃ.

1 MAKKABEES
TO THE READER

Edition of the Greek Text
The NETS translation of the book of 1 Makkabees is based upon the critical edition of the Greek text published by W. Kappler (Septuaginta: Vetus Testamentum Graecum Auctorisate Societatis Litterarum Göttingensis editum IX.1: Maccabaeorum liber I [Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 2nd rev. ed., 1967]). Kappler's text has been adjusted at 10.49 where there is confusion among the manuscripts between the names Alexander (Balas) and Demetrius. Although the context suggests that Alexander defeated Demetrius in battle then pursued and killed him, the Kappler text follows the readings of those manuscripts that name Demetrius as the winner, even though he was killed in this battle. The variant readings in Kappler's critical apparatus, which support the historical fact that Alexander emerged victorious, have been preferred in this case.1

Already in antiquity the existence of an original Semitic—probably Hebrew—Vorlage of 1 Makkabees was documented by early writers.2 The first-century Jewish historian Josephus may have had occasion to consult the original Hebrew text as he paraphrased substantial parts of its Greek translation in his Jewish Antiquities.3 But it is more certain that the Christian Bible scholars Origen (third century) and Jerome (late fourth/early fifth centuries) knew of the existence of the Hebrew text of 1 Makkabees. Origen is quoted by the fourth-century Church historian Eusebius as referring to a “Makkabean History” outside of the twenty-two book Hebrew scriptural canon; Origen identifies this book by its Hebrew title “Sarbethsabanaiel.”4 Jerome also, in his preface to the books of Samuel and Kings, clearly distinguishes the “Hebrew First Book of Makkabees” from the “Second Greek Book,” which ostensibly was 2 Makkabees.5

Modern scholars generally confirm the ancient viewpoint that our Greek text of 1 Makkabees is a translation of a long lost Hebrew Vorlage.6 The Semitic character of the original work is readily apparent in the extant Greek translation.7 Parataxis—a distinctive linguistic characteristic of Hebrew—is ubiquitous in 1 Makkabees except for the speeches and hymns scattered throughout the book. What has been said with regard to the LXX in general applies most especially to 1 Makkabees: “[. . .] there is no syntax, only parataxis. The whole is one great scheme of clauses connected by καί, and we have to trust the sense to tell us which is to be so emphasized as to make it into the apodosis.”8 Other literary characteristics of 1 Makkabees identified by scholars as indicating a Hebrew Vorlage are: 1) the occurrence of traditional bibal phrases such as “and it came to pass” and “in those days”; 2) the presence of many expressions that appear to have been copied from biblical texts; 3) the direct transliteration of certain proper names from their original forms (e.g., Ramathaim, 11.34; Imalkoue 11.39; Chaphenatha, 12.37; Asaramel, 14.27); 4) the use of Jewish names for the months (e.g., Chasleu, 1.54; 4.52, 59; Adar, 7.43, 49; Eloul, 14.27; Sabat, 16.14); 5) the presence of archaic terminology, pious addresses, and poems; 6) the large number and variety of Semitic idioms; 7) the incorporation of official documents; and 8) the fact that some difficulties in the Greek text can be explained as misunderstandings of the original Hebrew.

The author of the original version of 1 Makkabees has been praised for having written in an elegant Hebrew style that was modeled purposely after the historical books of the Bible—Judges, Samuel, Kings and Chronicles. The faithfulness of 1 Makkabees to traditional biblical historiography implies that the writer may have considered his work to be a continuation of the Chronicler’s history. The Greek translation of 1 Makkabees also seems to have been crafted by someone who shared the same conservative perspective as the original author. Scholars extol the careful, extremely literal Jewish-Greek translational style of 1 Makkabees and even consider it to be a deliberate choice on the part of the translator, whose exceptional vocabulary betrays a considerable facility with the Greek language. The translator may have been making a political statement by choosing to follow traditional Jewish parataxis, as opposed to more correct Greek syntax. Continuing in the tradition of the original author, and of the Makkabees themselves, our translator deliberately rejected “Hellenism” in order to support the traditional linguistic style of his own Jewish cultural heritage.

The strategy followed in the present translation has been dictated by the special circumstances surrounding the preservation of the text of 1 Makkabees: 1) there is general agreement that the extant Greek text is a translation from a Semitic Vorlage; 2) no fragments of the Vorlage are known to have survived, even among the Dead Sea Scrolls; and 3) the Greek translation of 1 Makkabees is our only link to the vanished original, given that all the other ancient versions of this book ultimately derive from the Greek. Though in books extant in both Hebrew (Aramaic) and Greek, the NRSV functions as base text for NETS, as a matter of principle, in 1 Maccabees such a role has been accorded the NRSV purely for the sake of convenience. The difference between NETS and NRSV typically reflects a difference in translation philosophy.

Throughout the NETS translation an effort has been put forth to represent Greek words consistently with the same corresponding English terms. Exception has been made for recurring Greek words that require a different meaning within a specific context. For example, the plural of the word for “force,” δυνάμεις, was rendered as “forces” throughout with the exception of 12.49. The word “infantry” was used in this case to distinguish these forces from the “cavalry” referred in the same verse. “Forces and cavalry” would seem redundant in English, since cavalry could also be described as forces.

Special care has been taken in the NETS translation to distinguish different Greek words of similar meaning by rendering them consistently with the same English terms. The most pertinent examples are a variety of words that denote holy things and places generically, and temples and liturgical items more specifically. Attention to these terms was necessitated by their tendency to appear in clusters, as in 4.36–58 where references to “holy” places and things are interspersed. The following chart delineates the occurrence of these words throughout 1 Makkabees:

- ἱερόν as temple: 6.2; 10.43, 84; 11.4; 13.52; 15.9; 16.20
- εἰδώλιον as house for an idol: 1.47; 10.83
- ναὸς as shrine: 1.22; 2.8; 4.49, 50, 57; 7.36
- ἁγίουσα as holy precinct: 1.21, 36, 37 (2x), 39, 45, 46
- τέμενος as sacred precinct: 1.47; 5.43, 44
- τὰ ἁγία:
  - as holy things: 2.12; 3.43, 58; 7.42; 10.39 (2x), 44; 13.3, 6; 14.29, 31, 42, 43
  - as holy places: 3.51; 4.36, 41, 43, 48; 6.18, 54; 7.33; 9.54; 14.15 (2x), 36, 48; 15.7

And it happened after the triumph of Alexander the Macedonian the son of Philip, who came out of the land of Chettiim and defeated Darius, king of the Persians and Medes, and became king in his place, formerly being king of Greece—and he conducted many wars and seized fortresses and slaughtered the kings of the earth. And he penetrated to the ends of the earth and took the spoils of a multitude of nations. And the earth became quiet before him, and he was exalted, and his heart was uplifted. And he gathered a very powerful force and ruled over countries, nations and tyrants, and they became tributary to him.

5 And after this he fell upon his bed and knew that he was dying. And he called his distinguished servants, who had been raised with him from their youth, and divided his kingdom among them while he was still living. And Alexander ruled for twelve years and died.

8 And his servants took control, each in his own place. And they all put on crowns after he died, as did their sons after them for many years, and they multiplied evils on the earth.

10 And out of them arose a sinful root, Antiochus Epiphanes son of Antiochus the king, who had been a hostage in Rome and became king in the one hundred thirty-seventh year of the kingdom of the Greeks.

11 In those days out of Israel came sons, transgressors of the law, and persuaded many, saying, “Let us go and make a covenant with the nations around us, because from the time we separated ourselves from them many evils have found us.” And the proposition seemed good in their eyes; so some of the people took courage and went to the king, and he gave them the authority to follow the statutes of the nations. And they built a gymnasium in Hierosolyma according to the precepts of the nations, and they fashioned foreskins for themselves and apostatized from the holy covenant and joined themselves to the nations and sold themselves to do evil.

16 And the kingdom was ready in the sight of Antiochus, and he undertook to become king of the land of Egypt so that he might rule over the two kingdoms. And he invaded Egypt with a heavily armed host, with chariots and elephants and a large fleet. And he made war against Ptolemy, king of Egypt, and Ptolemy turned from before him and fled, and many fell wounded. And they seized the fortified cities in the land of Egypt, and he took the spoils of the land of Egypt.

20 And Antiochus returned after conquering Egypt in the one hundred forty-third year and went up against Israel and went up against Hierosolyma with a heavily armed host. And he entered the holy precinct with arrogance and took the golden altar and the lamp stand for the light and all its utensils and the table of presentation and the libation bowls and the saucers and the golden censers and the veil and the crowns, and he stripped off all the gold ornamentation on the facade of the shrine. And he took the silver and the gold and the precious vessels, and he took the hidden treasures, which he found. And taking everything, he left for his own land and carried out murder and spoke with great arrogance.

25 And there was great mourning in Israel, in every place of theirs.

26 And rulers and elders groaned, virgins and young men weakened, and the beauty of the women was deformed.

28 And the land quaked for those dwelling in it, and all the house of Iakob was clothed with shame.
29 Two years later the king sent a chief revenue agent to the cities of Louda, and he came to Le- rousalam with a heavily-armed host. 30 And he spoke peaceful words to them with deceit, and they trusted him. But he fell upon the city suddenly and struck it a great blow, and he destroyed many people from Israel. 31 And he took the spoils of the city and burned it with fire and tore down its houses and the walls around it. 32 And they took the women and the children captive and took possession of the livestock. 33 And they reconstructed the city of David with a large and fortified wall with fortified towers, and it became a citadel for them. 34 And they stationed a sinful nation there, lawless men, and they became strong in it. 35 And they stockpiled weapons and food, and gathering the plunder of Jerusalem, they stored it there and became a great threat.

36 It became an ambush for the holy precinct and an evil enemy to Israel continuously. And they poured out innocent blood around the holy precinct and defiled the sanctuary. 37 And the residents of Jerusalem left because of them, and it became a residence for foreigners and became foreign to those born of her, and her children abandoned her. 38 Her holy precinct became deserted as a wilderness; her feasts were turned to mourning, her sabbaths to disgrace, her honor to scorn. 39 Her dishonor was multiplied to equal her former glory, and her exaltation was turned to mourning.

40 And the king wrote to all his kingdom for all to be as one people and for each to abandon his own precepts; all the nations complied with the dictum of the king. 41 And many also from Israel approved of his service and sacrificed to idols and profaned the sabbath. 42 And the king sent documents carried by the hand of messengers to Jerusalem and the cities of Louda for them to follow precepts foreign to the land and to withhold whole burnt offerings and sacrifice and libation from the holy precinct and to profane sabbaths and feasts and to defile holy precinct and holy ones, to build altars and sacred precincts and houses to idols and to sacrifice swine and common animals and to leave their sons uncircumcised, to make their souls abominable in every unclean and profane thing, so as to forget the law and to change all the statutes. 43 And whoever would not abide by the command of the king would die.

51 According to all these words he wrote to all his kingdom and appointed supervisors over all the people and commanded all the cities of Louda to sacrifice city by city. 52 And many of the people joined them, everyone who abandoned the law, and they did evil in the land. 53 And they forced Israel into hiding places, into every one of their places of refuge.

54 And on the fifteenth day of Chislev in the one hundred and forty-fifth year, he constructed an abomination of desolation on the altar, and in the cities around Louda they built altars and burned incense at the doors of the houses and in the city squares. 55 And the books of the law which they found they tore up and burned with fire. And wherever there was found in someone’s possession a book of the covenant, or if someone was conforming to the law, the judgment of the king put them to death. 56 And they were using their power on those who were found in Israel month by month in the cities. 57 On the twenty-fifth of the month they were sacrificing on the altar that was on top of the sacrificial altar. 58 And the women who had circumcised their children they put to death according to the ordinance, and they hung the babies from their necks and put to death their families and those who circumcised them.

62 But many in Israel remained strong and fortified themselves not to eat common things. 63 And they preferred to die so as not to be contaminated by food and not to defile the holy covenant, and they died. 64 And there was a very great wrath upon Israel.

2 In those days Mattathias son of Ioannes son of Symeon, a priest of the sons of Ioarib, left Jerusalem and settled in Modein. 2 And he had five sons, Ioannes, who was called Gaddi, Simon, who was called Thassi, Ioudas, who was called Makkabaios, Eleazaros, who was called Avaran, Ioneethes, who was called Apphous. 4 And he saw the blasphemies occurring in Louda and in Jerusalem and said,

"Woe to me, why was I born to see this, the destruction of my people and the destruction of the holy city?
And they lived there when it was delivered into the hands of enemies, the holy precinct into the hands of foreigners.
8 And her shrine became as a man without honor.
9 The vessels of her glory were taken captive.
Her infants were killed in her city squares, her young people by the sword of an enemy.
10 What nation did not possess her in its kingdom nor seize her spoils?
11 All her adornment was removed; from being free she became a slave.
And look, our holy places, our beauty and our glory were devastated.
And the nations defiled them.
Why is there still life in us?"

14 And Mattathias and his sons tore their garments and put on sackcloth and mourned intensely.

15 And the agents of the king, who were enforcing the apostasy, came to the city of Modein to sacrifice. 16And many from Israel came to them, and Mattathias and his sons gathered together. 17And the agents of the king answered and said to Mattathias, saying, "You are a ruler, both glorious and great in this city, and supported by sons and brothers. 18Now you come forward first and execute the ordinance of the king, as have done all the nations and the men of louda and those remaining in Ierousalem. And you and your sons will be among the Friends of the king, and you and your sons will be glorified with silver and gold and much compensation."

19 And Mattathias answered and said with a loud voice, "If all the nations which are in the realm of the king obey him so as to apostatize, each one from the religion of their fathers, and adopt his commandments, 20both I and my sons and my brothers will walk in the covenant of our fathers. 21God help us if we abandon the law and the statutes; 22we will not obey the words of the king nor deviate from our religion to the right or to the left."

23 And as he finished speaking these words, a Judean man came within sight of all to sacrifice on the altar in Modein in accordance with the ordinance of the king. 24And Mattathias saw this, and he became zealous, and his kidneys became stirred up. And his anger arose in judgment. And running, he slaughtered him on the altar and killed the agent of the king, who was forcing them to sacrifice, 25and killed the commander of the king, who was forcing them to sacrifice at that time, and tore down the altar. 26And he became zealous in the law as Phinees had done against Zambri son of Salom.

27 And Mattathias cried out in the city with a loud voice, saying, "Let everyone who is zealous in the law and is upholding the covenant follow me." 28And he and his sons fled to the mountains and abandoned everything they had in the city.

29 At that time many who were seeking righteousness and judgment descended to the wilderness to live there, 30they, their sons, their wives and their livestock, because evils worsened upon them. 31And it was announced to the king's men and to his forces that were in Ierousalem, the city of Daud, that the men who had spurned the commandment of the king went into hiding in the wilderness. 32And many chased after them and overtaking them, marshaled against them and engaged them in battle on the day of the sabbaths. 33And they said to them, "Enough! Come out, and do according to the dictum of the king, and you will live." 34And they said, "We will not come out. Nor will we execute the dictum of the king to defile the day of the sabbaths." 35And they increased the battle against them. 36But they neither answered them nor threw a stone against them nor even secured their hiding places, 37saying, "Let us all die in our simplicity. Heaven and earth bear witness to us that you destroy us unjustly." 38And they fell upon them in battle on the sabbaths, and they and their wives and their children and their livestock died, as many as one thousand human souls.

39 And Mattathias and his friends learned of this, and they mourned over them greatly. 40And they said, a man to his neighbor, "If we all do as our brothers did and do not fight against the nations for our lives and for our statutes, now quickly they will annihilate us from the land." 41And they decided on that day saying, "Every person who comes against us in battle on the day of the sabbaths, let us fight against them, and we will not all die as our brothers died in the hiding places."

42 At that time a gathering of Hasideans joined together with them, strong in power, from Israel, every one of them volunteering for the law. 43And all the fugitives from the evils were added to them and became a support for them. 44And they assembled a force and struck down sinners in their wrath and lawless men in their anger, and the rest fled to the nations to be saved. 45And Mattathias and his friends went around and tore down the altars and circumcised by force all the uncircumcised boys they found within the borders of Israel. 46And they persecuted the children of insolence, and their mission was successful by their hand. 47And they reclaimed the law out of the hands of the nations and out of the hands of the kings, and they gave no support to the sinner.

49 And the days drew near for Mattathias to die, and he said to his sons, "Now arrogance and reproach have been established, a time of destruction and fierce wrath. 50Now, children, be zealous in the law, and give your lives for the covenant of our fathers.

51 "Remember the works of our fathers, which they did in their generations, and receive great glory and an everlasting name. 52Was not Abraam found faithful in temptation, and it was accounted to him as righteousness? 53Joseph in the time of his affliction observed the commandment and became lord of Egypt. 54Phinees our father, by becoming zealous with zeal, received a covenant of everlasting priesthood. 55Iesous, by fulfilling the command, became a judge in Israel. 56Chaleb, by bearing witness in the assembly, received an inheritance of land. 57Daud, by his mercy, inherited the throne of a kingdom forever. 58Elias, by becoming greatly zealous for the law, was taken up into heaven. 59Hananias, Azarias and Misael, because of their faith, were saved from fire. 60Daniel, by his simplicity, was rescued from the mouth of lions.

61 "Therefore, keep in mind from generation to generation that all who hope in him will not weaken. 62And do not fear on account of the words of a sinner, because their glory will become dung and worms. 63Today they will be elevated, but tomorrow they will not be found, because they will have returned to their dust and their counsels will be lost. 64 Children, be brave, and be strong in the law, for by it you will be glorified.

65 “And look, Symeon your brother, I know that he is a man of counsel. Hear him all the days. He shall be as a father to you. 66 And Ioudas Makkabaios has been strong in power since his youth. He shall be commander of the army and shall fight the war of the peoples. 67 And you shall draw to you all those who observe the law and execute vengeance for your people. 68 Return what is due to the nations, and be attentive to the ordinance of the law.”

69 And he blessed them and was joined to his fathers. 70 And he died in the one hundred forty-sixth year and was buried among the tombs of his ancestors in Modein. And all Israel mourned for him with great mourning.

3 And Ioudas his son who was called Makkabaios, rose up in his place, and all his brothers helped him, as did all who had joined his father. And they fought the war for Israel with gladness.

3 And he spread glory to his people and put on a breastplate like a giant and strapped on his war instruments. And he conducted battles, protecting the camp by the sword.

4 And he resembled a lion in his works and was like a whelp roaring in the hunt.

5 And seeking out the lawless, he persecuted them and burned up those who disturbed his people.

6 And the lawless drew back for fear of him, and all the workers of lawlessness were disturbed, and salvation was successful by his hand.

7 And he caused bitterness to many kings, and gladness to Iakov by his works, and his memory will be a blessing forever.

8 And he went through the cities of Iouda and annihilated the impious from it and turned away wrath from Israel.

9 And his name was known to the ends of the earth, and he gathered together those who were lost.

10 And Apollonius gathered together the nations and a large force from Samaria, to make war against Israel. 11 And Ioudas found out, and he went out to meet him. And he struck and killed him. And many fell wounded, and the rest fled. 12 And they took their spoils, and Ioudas took the dagger of Apollonius and fought with it all his days.

13 And Seron, the commander of the force of Syria, heard that Ioudas had gathered a force and an assembly of troops loyal to him who were going out with him to battle. 14 And he said, “I will make a name for myself and will be glorified in the kingdom. And I will make war on Ioudas and those with him who disregard the dictum of the king.”

15 And there was added a powerful company of impious men, and it went up with him to help him take revenge on the descendants of Israel.

16 And he drew near to the ascent of Baithoron, and Ioudas went out to meet him with few companions. 17 But as they saw the company coming to meet them, they said to Ioudas, “How will we, being so few, be able to fight against such a powerful multitude? And we are weak, having eaten nothing today.” 18 And Ioudas said, “It is easy for many to be ensnared by the hands of a few. And it makes no difference before heaven to save by many or by a few. 19 For victory in war is not in the multitude of force, but rather, power is from heaven. 20 They come against us with great arrogance and lawlessness, to eliminate us and our wives and our children, to despoil us. 21 But we fight for our lives and our precepts, and he himself will smash them before us. You, therefore, do not be afraid of them.”

23 When he had finished speaking, he drove upon them suddenly. And Seron and his company were smashed before him. 24 And they pursued him on the descent of Baithoron down to the plain. And eight hundred men of them fell, and the rest fled to the land of Phylishtim. 25 Thus began the fear of Ioudas and his brothers, and dread fell upon the nations all around them. 26 And his name reached the king himself, and every nation was discussing the battles of Ioudas.

27 But when Antiochus heard these words, he raged in anger and sent for and gathered together all the forces of his kingdom, a very powerful company. 28 And he opened his treasury and gave rations to his forces for a year. And he commanded them to be prepared for every service. 29 But he saw that the money from the treasuries had given out, and the taxes of the country were few because of the dissension and affliction that he had brought upon the land by revoking the precepts, which existed from the first days. 30 And he was concerned that he might not have as much as he usually had for his expenditures and for the gifts, which he used to give before with a liberal hand when he exceeded the kings preceding him. 31 And he was greatly frustrated in his soul and decided to go to Persia and to take the taxes from those countries and to gather much money.

32 And he left Lysias, a distinguished man of the royal family, over the affairs of the king from the Euphrates river to the borders of Egypt 33 and to raise Antiochus his son until he returned. 34 And he gave to him half of his forces and the elephants and commanded him concerning everything he was considering and concerning the inhabitants of Judea and Ierousalem, 35 to send a force against them to wipe out and to destroy the strength of Israel and the remnant of Ierousalem and to remove the memory of them from the place and to settle alien sons in all their regions and to parcel out their land by lot. 37 And the king took the half of the forces that remained and departed from Antioch, from the city of his kingdom in the one hundred and forty-seventh year. And he crossed over the Euphrates river and went through the upper countries.

38 And Lysias selected Ptolemy son of Dorymenes and Nicanor and Gorgias, powerful men from the Friends of the king. 39 And he departed together with their whole force, and they came and camped near Ammaous. 40 And he departed with the forty thousand men and seven thousand cavalry to go into the land of Iouda and to devastate it according to the dictum of the king. 41 And the merchants of the land heard their name, and they took silver and very much gold and shackles and came to the camp to take the sons of Israel as servants. And there were added to them a force from Syria and from the land of the allophyles.

42 And Ioudas and his brothers saw that the evils were multiplied and that the forces were camped within their borders and learned of the orders of the king, which he had commanded to do to the people for destruction and annihilation, and they said, each to his neighbor, “Let us raise up the ruination of our people and make war for our people and the holy places.” 43 And the congregation gathered together to be ready for battle and to pray and to request mercy and compassion. 44 And Jerusalem was uninhabited like a wilderness. There was no one going in or going out of those born of her. And the holy precinct was downtrodden, and sons of aliens were in the citadel, a dwelling-place for the nations. And enjoyment was taken away from Iakob, and flute and lyre ceased.

45 And they gathered together and came to Massepha across from Jerusalem, for there was a place of prayer formerly in Massepha for Israel. 46 And they fasted on that day and wrapped themselves in sackcloth and ashes on their head and spread out the book of the law, seeking that concerning which the nations inquire of the images of their idols. 47 And they brought the garments of the priesthood, the first products and the tithes, and they aroused the Nazirites who had fulfilled their days. 48 And they cried out loudly to heaven saying, “What shall we do to these, and where shall we carry them? And your holy places have been downtrodden and defiled, and your priests are in mourning and humiliation. And look, the nations have gathered together against us to annihilate us. You know what they are contemplating against us.”

51 How will we be able to withstand them face to face, if you do not help us?”

52 And they trumpeted with the trumpets and cried out with a great shout. 53 And after this, Ioudas established leaders of the people, officers of thousands and officers of hundreds and officers of fifties and officers of tens. 54 And he said to those who were building houses and were betrothed to women and were planting vineyards and were cowards to return each one to his home according to the law. 55 And the company departed and camped to the south of Ammaous.

56 And Ioudas said, “Gird yourselves, and become strong sons. And be ready in the morning to do battle with these nations, which have gathered together against us to annihilate us and our holy places. 57 For it is better for us to die in battle than to look upon the evils of our nation and of our holy places. 58 But as is the will of heaven, thus shall he do.”

4 And Gorgias took five thousand men and one thousand select cavalry. And the company departed by night in order to fall upon the camp of the Judeans and strike them suddenly. And the sons of the citadel were his guides. 3 And Ioudas learned this, and he and his strongest men went out to defeat the force of the king, which was at Ammaous, while the forces were still scattered from the camp. 5 And Gorgias arrived at the camp of Ioudas at night and found no one, and he sought them in the mountains, because he said, “These men are fleeing from us.”

6 And at daybreak Ioudas was seen in the plain with three thousand men, except that they had no coverings and dagger as they wanted. 7 And they saw the camp of the nations, strong, heavily-defended and with cavalry encircling it, and these were instructed for war. 8 And Ioudas said to the men who were with him, “Do not fear their multitude, and do not be cowardly at their charge. Remember how our fathers were saved in the Red Sea when Pharao was pursuing them in force. 9 And now let us cry out to heaven, if he will desire us and will remember the covenant of our fathers and will smash this company in front of us today. 10 And all the nations will know that there is one who redeems and saves Israel.”

12 And the allophyles lifted up their eyes and saw them coming from the opposite side, and they came out of the camp to battle. And those who were with Ioudas trumpeted and joined battle with them. And the nations were smashed and fled to the plain. 13 But all the hindmost fell by the sword. And they pursued them as far as Gazera and as far as the flatlands of Idumea, Azotus and Jamnia, and of them three thousand men fell. 16 And Ioudas and his force returned from chasing after them. 17 And he said to the people, “Do not desire plunder, for the battle is before us. 18 And Gorgias and the force in the mountain are near us. But now, stand against our enemies, and do battle against them, and after that take the plunder freely.”

19 Just as lousdas was concluding these things, a certain detachment was seen peering out of the mountain. 20 And they saw that they had been routed, and they were burning the camp, for the smoke that was being seen made apparent what had happened. 21 Now when they comprehended these things, they became very frightened. And perceiving also the army of lousdas in the plain ready in battle order, 22 they all fled to the land of the al-lopheles. 23 And lousdas turned to the plundering of the camp, and they took much gold and silver, blue and sea purple cloth and great wealth. 24 And returning, they sang hymns and blessed heaven, “for he is good, for his mercy is forever.” 25 And when they arrived, they informed Lysias of everything that had happened. 26 And as many of the allophyles survived,
when they arrived, they informed Lysias of everything that had happened. 27 Upon hearing, he became confused and disheartened, because things that he did not want had happened to Israel, and what resulted was not what the king had commanded him. 28 And in the following year he mustered sixty thousand select men and five thousand cavalry in order to make war on them. 29 And they took counsel concerning the altar of whole burnt offering, which had been defiled, as to what they should do with it. 30 And there fell to them a good counsel, to tear it down
so that it would not become a reproach to them, because the nations defiled it. And they tore down the altar 46 and put away the stones on the mount of the house in a suitable place until a prophet would come to give an answer concerning these things. 47 And they took whole stones
according to the law and built a new altar like the former one. 48 And they built the bholy placesb
and the inner areas of the house and sanctified the courts. 49 And they made new holy vessels and brought the lamp stand and the altar of incense and the table into the shrine. 50 And they burned incense on the altar and lit the lamps, which were
on the lamp stand, and they gave light in the shrine. 51 And they placed loaves on the table and spread out the veils and finished all the works
which they made.

30 And he saw the powerful army, and he prayed and said, “Blessed are you, the savior of Israel, who smashed the attack of the powerful one by the hand of your slave David and delivered the camp of the allophyles into the hands of Ionathes son of Saoul and of the bearer of his armor. 31 En-trap this camp in the hand of your people Israel, and let them be put to shame in their army and their cavalry. 32 Give them cowardice, and melt the boldness of their strength, and let them be shaken in their ruination. 33 Subdue them by the sword of those who love you, and let all those who know your name praise you with hymns.”

34 And they joined battle with each other, and from the army of Lysias fell five thousand men, and they fell from before them. 35 And seeing the developing rout of his own formation but the complete boldness of Lousdas and how they were ready to live or die bravely, Lysias departed to Antioch and was enlisting foreign troops, [and] complete boldness of Ioudas and how they were 36 But Lousdas and his brothers said, “Look, our enemies have been smashed. Let us go up to purify and rededicate the bholy placesb.” 37 And the whole company gathered together and went up to Mount Sion. 38 And they saw the holy precinct desolate and the altar defiled and the doors burned and plants growing in the courts as in a thicket or as in one of the mountains and the chambers of the priests demolished. 39 And they tore their garments and mourned with great mourning. And they spread ashes on themselves 40 and fell on their faces on the ground. And they trumpeted with the signal trumpets and cried out to heaven.

41 Then Lousdas ordered men to fight those in the citadel until he could purify the bholy placesb.
42 And he selected uncorrupted priests, devotees of the law, 43 and they purified the bholy placesb and took the stones of pollution to an unclean place. 44 And they took counsel concerning the altar of whole burnt offering, which had been defiled, as to what they should do with it. 45 And
there fell to them a good counsel, to tear it down
so that it would not become a reproach to them, because the nations defiled it. And they tore down the altar 46 and put away the stones on the mount of the house in a suitable place until a prophet would come to give an answer concerning these things. 47 And they took whole stones
according to the law and built a new altar like the former one. 48 And they built the bholy placesb
and the inner areas of the house and sanctified the courts. 49 And they made new holy vessels and
brought the lamp stand and the altar of incense and
the table into the shrine. 50 And they burned
incense on the altar and lit the lamps, which were
on the lamp stand, and they gave light in the shrine. 51 And they placed loaves on the table and spread out the veils and finished all the works
which they made.

52 And they arose on the morning of the twenty-fifth of the ninth month, this being the month Chaseleu, of the one hundred and forty-eighth year, 53 and they offered sacrifice according to the law on the new altar of whole burnt offerings that they made. 54 During the same time and on the same day on which the nations defiled it, on that day it was rededicated with songs and lyres and cinyras and cymbals. 55 And all the people fell on their face and did obeisance and blessed heaven, which made them successful. 56 And they accomplished the rededication of the altar in eight days and offered whole burnt offerings with gladness.
And they offered a sacrifice of salvation and praise.
57 And they decorated the façade of the shrine with gold crowns and small shields and renewed the gates and priest’s chambers and furnished them with doors. 58 And very great gladness came upon the people, and their disgrace before the nations was removed.

59 And Lousdas, his brothers and the whole assembly of Israel established that the days of the rededication of the altar would be commemorated in their times, year by year, eight days from the twenty-fifth of the month Chaseleu, with gladness and joy.

60 And they constructed at that time all around Mount Sion high walls and fortified towers so that the nations would not return and trample them down as they did before. 61 And he stationed a force there to defend it, and he fortified it to defend Baithsoura so that the people would have a fortress facing Idumea.

And it happened, when the surrounding nations heard that the altar had been built and the holy precinct had been rededicated as before, and they were greatly angered and decided to annihilate the race of Jakob who were in their midst. And they began to kill among the people and to drive them out. And Ioudas made war against the sons of Esau in Idumea, against Akrabbatene, because they were besieging Israel. And he struck them a mighty blow and reduced them and took their spoils. And he remembered the evil of the sons of Baian, who were to the people as a snare and as a trap by ambushing them on the roads. And they were confined by him to the towers, and he marshaled his troops against them and anathematized them and burned their towers with fire to the end. And he crossed over against the sons of Amnon and found a strong band and many people with Timothy their leader. And he engaged in many battles against them, and they were smashed before him, and he defeated them. And he occupied Lazer and its daughters and returned to Judea.

And the nations in Galaca gathered together against the Israelites who were within their borders, to eliminate them, but they fled to the fortress of Dathema. And they sent letters to Ioudas and his brothers, saying, "The nations around us are gathered together against us to annihilate us. And they were confined by him to the towers, and he marshaled his troops against them and anathematized them and burned their towers with fire to the end. And he crossed over against the sons of Amnon and found a strong band and many people with Timothy their leader. And he engaged in many battles against them, and they were smashed before him, and he defeated them. And he occupied Lazer and its daughters and returned to Judea.

9 And the nations in Galaca gathered together against the Israelites who were within their borders, to eliminate them, but they fled to the fortress of Dathema. And they sent letters to Ioudas and his brothers, saying, "The nations around us are gathered together against us to annihilate us. And they were confined by him to the towers, and he marshaled his troops against them and anathematized them and burned their towers with fire to the end. And he crossed over against the sons of Amnon and found a strong band and many people with Timothy their leader. And he engaged in many battles against them, and they were smashed before him, and he defeated them. And he occupied Lazer and its daughters and returned to Judea.

10 And he engaged in many battles against them, and they were smashed before him, and he defeated them. And he occupied Lazer and its daughters and returned to Judea.

And Ioudas said to Simon his brother, "Fight today for our kindred. And Ioudas went out in three divisions from behind them, and they trumpeted with the trumpets and cried out in prayer. And the army heard these words, a great assembly was gathered together to decide what they should do for their kindred who were in affliction and were embattled by them. And Ioudas said to Simon his brother, "Select men for yourself, and go, and rescue your kindred who are in Galaca. And I and ionathan my brother will go to Galadidentis. And he left Iosephos the son of Zacharias, and Azarias, a leader of the people, with the remainder of the force in Judea for defense. And he commanded them saying, "Protect this people, and do not join battle against the nations until we return." And three thousand men were allotted to Simon to go to Galaca, and to Ioudas eight thousand men for Galadidentis.

21 And Simon went to Galaca and conducted many battles against the nations, and the nations were smashed from before him. And he pursued them as far as the gate of Ptolemais, and from the nations up to three thousand men fell, and he took their spoils. And he took those from Galilee and in Arbatta with the women and children and everything that was theirs and led them to Judea with great gladness.

24 And Ioudas Makkavaio and ionathan his brother crossed over the Jordan and went three days’ journey in the wilderness. And they came upon the Nabateans and met with them peacefully. And they related to them everything that had happened to their kindred in Galadidentis and that many of them were captive in Bosora and Bosor, in Alema, Chaspho, Maked and Karnain. "All these cities are fortified and great. And in the remaining cities of Galadidentis also there are captives. They are marshalling troops, to assault the fortresses tomorrow and to take them and to annihilate all these people in one day."

28 And Ioudas and his army turned away by the road into the wilderness toward Bosora suddenly and took the city. And he killed every male by the edge of the sword and took all their spoils and burned it with fire. And he departed from there by night, and they went as far as the fortress. And it happened in the morning, they lifted up their eyes, look, a large crowd of people, which was innumerable, carrying ladders and siege engines to take the fortress, and they were battling them. And Ioudas saw that the battle had begun, and the screaming of the city went up as far as heaven with trumpeting and great screaming, and he said to the men of his force, "Fight today for our kindred." And he went out in three divisions from behind them, and they trumpeted with the trumpets and cried out in prayer. And the army of Timothy recognized that it was Makkavaio, and they fled from before him, but he struck them a heavy blow, and up to eight thousand of their men fell on that day.

35 And he turned aside to Maaphe and made war on it and took it. And he killed every male in it and took its spoils and burned it with fire. From there he departed and occupied Chaspho, Maked and Bosor and the remaining cities of Galadidentis.

37 After these developments Timothy gathered another army and camped before Raphon on the other side of the wadi. And Ioudas sent agents to spy out the camp, and they reported to him saying, "There are gathered together to him all the nations surrounding us, a very great force. And he has even hired Arabs to help them, and they are camped on the other side of the wadi ready to come against you in battle." And Ioudas went out to meet them. And Timothy said to the commanders of his force as Ioudas and his army came near to the wadi of water, "If he crosses over towards us first, we will not be able to withstand him for he is powerful enough to prevail against us. But if he becomes cowardly and camps on the other side of the river, we will cross over towards him and will prevail against him." 42But when Ioudas came near to the stream of water, he set the scribes of the people at the stream and commanded them, saying, "Do not allow any person to camp, but let them all come into the battle." 43And he crossed over against them first, and all the people were behind him. And the nations were smashed from before him, and they threw down their weapons and fled to the sacred precinct in Karnain. 44And they occupied the city and burned the sacred precinct with fire together with all who were in it. And Karnain was vanquished, and they were no longer able to stand before loudas.

45 And Ioudas gathered together all of Israel who were in Galaditis from the small to the great and their wives and their children and belongings, a very great company, to come to the land of louda. 46And they came as far as Ephron. And this was a great city on the road, very well fortified, and it was not possible to go around it to the right or to the left, but only to go through the middle of it. 47But the people who were from the city closed them out and blocked the gates with stones.

48 And Ioudas sent a message to them with peaceful words, saying, "We will pass through your land to return to our land, and no one will do you harm; we will only pass by on foot." But they did not want to open to him. 49And Ioudas gave the order to announce to the army for each to camp in the place where they were. 50And the men of the force camped, and he made war on the city all that day and all night, and the city was delivered into his hand. 51And he destroyed every male by the edge of the sword. And he demolished it and took its spoils and passed through the city over those who had been killed.

52 And they crossed over the Jordan to the large plain before Baithsan. 53And Ioudas was gathering the stragglers and encouraging the people all along the road until he came to the land of louda. 54And they went up to Mount Sion with gladness and joy and offered whole burnt offerings, because no one of them fell until they returned in peace.

55 And in the days during which Ioudas and Jonathan were in the land of Galaad and Simon his brother was in Galilee before Ptolemias, 56Ioseph the son of Zacharias and Azarias, commanders of the force, heard of the heroic actions and of the war which they executed. 57And they said, "Let us make a name for ourselves also, and let us go to make war against the nations around us." 58And they gave orders to the men of the force that was with them and went to Jamnia. 59And Gorgias and his men came out of the city to meet them in battle. 60And Iosephos and Azarias were routed and were pursued as far as the borders of Judea, and on that day up to two thousand of the people of Israel fell. 61And there was a great rout among the people, because they did not listen to Ioudas and his brothers, intending to act heroically.

62 But they were not of the seed of those men to whom was given salvation to Israel by their hand. 63 And the man Ioudas and his brothers were glorified greatly before all Israel and all the nations where their name was heard. 64And they would gather together praising them.

65 And Ioudas and his brothers went out and made war on the sons of Esau in the land to the south. And he struck Chebron and its daughters and tore down its fortresses and burned the towers all around it. 66And he departed to go to the land of the allophyles and was going through Marisa. 67On that day priests fell in battle, desiring to act heroically in it by going into battle thoughtlessly. 68And Ioudas turned away to Azotus, a land of the allophyles, and tore down their altars and burned the carvings of their gods with fire and took the spoils of the cities and returned to louda.

6 And King Antiochus was going through the upper lands and heard that Elymais is a city in Persia distinguished for its wealth in silver and gold. 2And the temple that is in it is very wealthy, and there are golden coverings and breastplate and weapons, which Alexander left there, the son of Philip, the king, the Macedonian, who first became king over the Greeks. 3And he came and sought to take the city and to plunder it, and he was not able, because word of it became known to people from the city, 4and they stood up against him in battle. And he fled and departed from there with great sorrow to return to Babylon.

5 And someone came to him in Persia reporting that the armies that were going to Judea had been routed and that Lysias went initially with a powerful force but was turned back from before them, and they were strengthened by the weapons and power and much plunder that they took from the armies that they had cut down and that they tore down the abomination that he had built on the altar in Ierousalem and encircled the holy precinct with high walls as it had been before, and also Baithsoura, his city.

8 And it happened, when the king heard these words, he was astonished and greatly shaken, and he fell upon his bed and fell into illness from grief, because things did not happen for him as he desired. 9And he remained there rather many days, because intense grief mounted in him and he reckoned that he was dying. 10And he called all his friends and said to them, "Sleep eludes my eyes, and I am disheartened from worry. 11And I said in my heart, 'To what affliction have I come, and how great is the cataclysm in which I am now?' For I was kind and beloved in my authority. 12But now I remember the evils which I did in Ierousalem. And I took all the silver and gold vessels that were in it, and I sent men to annihilate the inhabitants of louda in vain. 13I know that, because of these things, these evils have found me, and now look, I am perishing with great grief in a foreign land."

established him over his whole kingdom. 15 And he gave him his crown and robe and the seal ring in order to guide Antiochus his son and raise him to be king. 16 And Antiochus the king died there in the one hundred forty-ninth year. 17 And Lysias found out that the king had died, and he established Antiochus his son to be king in his place, whom he had raised as a youth, and he called his name Eupator.

18 And the men from the citadel had shut Israel in around the holy places and were seeking to do harm by every means and to support the nations. 19 And Ioudas determined to eliminate them and summoned all the people together to besiege them. 20 And they gathered together and besieged them in the one hundred fiftieth year. And he built siege towers and engines. 21 But a group of them broke out of the siege and some of the impious of Israel joined themselves to them. 22 And they went to the king and said, “How long will you not do justice and avenge our kindred? 23 We were pleased to the king and said, “How long will you not do justice and avenge our kindred? 24 We were pleased to the king and said, “How long will you not do justice and avenge our kindred? 25 And not only upon us did they lay hands, but also upon all things along their borders. 26 And look, today they are camped against the citadel in Jerusalem to take it, and they have fortified the holy precinct and Baithsoura. 27 And if you do not forestall them with haste, they will do more than these things, and you will not be able to restrain them.”

28 And the king became angry when he heard this and gathered together all his Friends, commanders of his army and those over the cavalry. 29 And from other kingdoms and from the islands of the seas mercenary forces came to him. 30 And the number of his forces was one hundred thousand foot soldiers and twenty thousand cavalry and thirty-two elephants trained in war. 31 And they came through Idumea and camps at Baithsoura. 32 And Ioudas departed from the citadel and led the army in haste down the road to Baithzacharia. And the forces prepared for battle and trumpeted with the trumpets. 33 And the army went forth to Baithzacharia, and they were marching of the multitude and the clashing of the weapons, for the army was very great and mighty. 34 And Ioudas and his army drew near to do battle, and six hundred men of the army of the king fell. 35 And Eleazaros Auaran saw one of the beasts plated with royal armor, and it stood above all the other beasts, and he thought that the king was on it. 36 And he gave himself up to save his people and to secure for himself an everlasting name. 37 And he ran at him boldly, into the middle of the phalanx, and was killing to the right and to the left, and they separated before him on each side. 38 And he got down under the elephant and stabbed it underneath and killed it, but it fell to the ground on top of him, and he died there. 39 And they saw the might of the kingdom and the charge of the forces, and they turned back from them.

40 But the men from the army of the king went up to meet them in Jerusalem, and the king camped in Judea and at Mount Sion. 41 And he made peace with the people of Baithsoura, and they came out of the city, because there was no food for them there to be shut in it, because it was sabbath in the land. 42 And the men from the army of the king went up to meet them in Jerusalem, and the king camped in Judea and at Mount Sion. 43 And he made peace with the people of Baithsoura, and they came out of the city, because there was no food for them there to be shut in it, because it was sabbath in the land. 44 And the men from the army of the king went up to meet them in Jerusalem, and the king camped in Judea and at Mount Sion. 45 And he made peace with the people of Baithsoura, and they came out of the city, because there was no food for them there to be shut in it, because it was sabbath in the land.
ple, and let us make peace with them and with every nation of them. And let us permit them to live in accordance with their precepts as before, for on account of those precepts, which we dispersed, they became angered and did all these things.

60 And the speech was satisfactory to the king and to the rulers, and he proposed to them to make peace, and they accepted. And the king and the rulers swore an oath to them, and on this basis they came out of the fortress. And the king entered into Mount Sion and saw the fortification of the place, but he set aside the oath which he swore and commanded and tore down the surrounding wall. And he departed quickly and returned to Antioch, and he found Philip governing the city. And he made war upon him and took the city by force.

7 In the one hundred fifty-first year, Demetrius son of Seleucus left Rome and ascended with a few men to a seaside city and became king there. And it happened as he was going into the royal palace of his fathers, his forces apprehended Antiocus and Lysias to lead them to him. But when this action became known to him, he said, “Do not show me their faces.” And the forces killed them, and Demetrius sat on the throne of his kingdom.

5 And all the lawless and impious men of Israel came to him, and Alcimus, who wanted to be a priest, led them. And they denounced the people to the king, saying, “Ioudas and his brothers destroyed all your Friends and scattered us out of our land. Now then, send a man whom you trust, and let us make peace with them and with the rulers, and let us make peace with them and with the country of the king, and let him go to see all the destruction which he has done to us and to the country of the king, and let him punish them and everyone who gave assistance to them.”

8 And the king selected Bacchides from the Friends of the king, who governed the area beyond the river and was a great man in the kingdom and was faithful to the king. And he sent messengers to Ioudas and his brothers with peaceful words with deception, saying, “We will not seek to do evil to you or to your friends.” And they trusted him, but he apprehended from among them sixty men and killed them in one day according to the word which was written,

17 “The flesh of your holy ones and their blood they poured out around Judaea, and there was no one to bury them.”

18 And fear and trembling of them fell upon all the people, for they said, “There is no truth and judgment in them, for they have violated the stipulation and the oath which they swore.”

19 And Bacchides departed from Jerusalem and camped at Bethzait. And he sent and apprehended many of the men who had deserted to him and some of the people, and he killed them in the great pit. And he entrusted the country to Alcimus and left a force with him to help him, and Bacchides returned to the king.

21 And Alcimus struggled to gain the high priesthood, and all those who were stirring up their people joined together with him. And they prevailed over the land of Iouda and did great harm in Israel. And Ioudas saw all the evil that Alcimus and those with him had done to the sons of Israel, which was more than the nations had done. And he went out into all the regions around Judea and executed vengeance on the men who had deserted, and they were prevented from going out into the country. But when Alcimus saw that Ioudas and those with him had strengthened, he also knew that he would not be able to resist them, and he returned to the king and denounced their misdeeds.

26 And the king sent Nicanor, one of his distinguished commanders, who hated and was hostile to Israel, and he commanded him to annihilate the people. And Nicanor came to Jerusalem with a large force and sent a message to Ioudas and his brothers with peaceful words with deceit, saying, “Let there be no warfare between me and you. I will come with a few men in order to see you personally with peace.”

29 And he came to Ioudas, and they greeted each other peacefully, but the enemies were ready to seize Ioudas. Word of this became known to Ioudas, that he came to him with deceit, and he became terrified of him and did not want to see his face again. Nicanor learned that his plan had been revealed, and he came out to meet Ioudas in battle near Chapharsalama. Around five hundred men of those with Nicanor fell, and they fled to the city of Daud.

33 After these developments Nicanor went up to Mount Sion, and some of the priests from the holy places and some of the elders from the people came out to greet him peacefully and to show him the whole burnt offering that was being offered in behalf of the king. But he mocked them and ridiculed them and defiled them and spoke arrogantly. And he swore with anger, saying, “If Ioudas and his army do not surrender themselves into my hands now, in the future, if I return in peace, I will burn down this house.” And he went out with great anger. And the priests went in and stood in front of the altar and the shrine and wept and said, aI.e. the Judeans  bI.e. temple

You have selected this house for your name to be invoked in it, to be a house of prayer and supplication for your people.

Execute vengeance on this man and on his army, and let them fall by the sword. Remember their blasphemies, and do not allow them to endure.

And Nicamor went out of Jerusalem and camped in Bethoron, and the Syrian force met him. And Ioudas camped in Adasa with three thousand men. And Ioudas prayed and said, "When the men from the king blasphemed, your angel came out and killed one hundred eighty-five thousand of them. In the same manner smash this army before us today, and let the rest know that he spoke wickedly against your holy places, and judge him according to his wickedness."

And the armies engaged in battle on the thirteenth of the month Adar. And the army of Nicamor was smashed, and he fell first in battle. And as his army saw that Nicamor fell, they threw down their weapons and fled. And they pursued them one day's distance from Adasa until they came to Gazer, and they trumpeted with the signal trumpets behind them. And people came out of all the surrounding villages of Judea and outflanked them, and they turned back against each other. And all of them fell by the sword, and not even one of them was left. And they took the plunder and the spoils and cut off the head of Nicamor and his right hand, which he had stretched out arrogantly, and they brought them and exhibited them in Jerusalem. And the people rejoiced greatly, and they observed that day as a day of great gladness. And they established the observation of that day every year on the thirteenth of Adar.

And Ioudas heard the name of the Romans, that they were powerful in strength and were pleased with all those who allied themselves with them, that they would establish friendship with all those who come to them and that they are powerful in strength. And they recounted to him their wars and the heroic actions which they were doing with the Galatians and that they prevailed over them and made them subject to tribute and all they did in the land of Spain to gain control over the metals, the silver and the gold which was there and how they prevailed over the whole place by their strategy and patience, and the place was very far distant from them, and the kings came against them from the ends of the earth until they smashed them and struck them a great blow, while the rest give them tribute every year. And Philip and Perseus, the king of Kittians, and those who came up against them, they smashed them in war and prevailed over them, and Antiochus the Great, king of Asia, who came against them in war having one hundred twenty elephants and cavalry and chariots and a very large force, and was smashed by them, and they took him alive and established that he and those who would rule after him would give them a large tribute and would give hostages and territorial cession, the country of India and Media and Lydia, among the most beautiful of their countries, and taking them from him, they gave them to Eumenes the king. And that men from Greece wanted to come and annihilate them, but word of this became known to them, and they sent one general against them, and they battled against them, and many of them fell wounded, and they captured their wives and their children and plundered them and took control of their land and tore down their fortresses and enslaved them to this day. And the rest of the kingdoms and the islands, as many as ever resisted them, they devastated and enslaved them, but with their friends and those who were supported by them they maintained friendship, and they got control of kings both near and far, and whoever heard their name feared them. And those whom they want to help and to be king, they are king, and those, whom they want, they remove. And they have been exalted greatly. And in all this not even one of them has put on a crown nor have they wrapped themselves in purple so as to show their power by it. And they built for themselves a council chamber, and every day three hundred twenty senators deliberate continuously about the multitude so that they might live in an orderly way. And they trust one man to rule them each year and to govern all their land, and they all obey the one, and there is no jealousy or envy among them.

And Ioudas selected Eupolemus son of Ioannes of Akkos and Jason son of Eleazaros and sent them to Rome to establish friendship and an alliance and to lift the yoke from them, for they saw the kingdom of the Greeks enslaving Israel in servitude. And they went to Rome, and the distance was very long, and they entered into the council chamber and answered and said, "Ioudas, who is also called Makkabaios, and his brothers and the multitude of the Judeans sent us to you to establish with you an alliance and peace and to enroll us as allies and friends of yours." And the speech was pleasing to them. And this is a copy of the letter which they copied onto brass tablets and sent to Jerusalem to be with them there as a memorial of peace and alliance:

May it be well with the Romans and with the nation of the Judeans on the sea and on land forever, and may sword and enemy be removed far from them. But if war should come to Rome first or to any of their allies in all their dominion, the nation of the Judeans will be their ally with their whole heart as the time may indicate to them. And they will not give to the enemies, neither will they supply wheat, weapons, silver, ships, as it seemed good to Rome, but they will keep their commitments, receiving nothing in return. In the same manner, if a war occurs first to the nation of the Judeans, the Romans will be their ally, willingly as the time may indicate to them. And to the allies will not be given wheat, weapons, silver, ships, as it seemed good to Rome. And they will keep these commitments and not with deceit. According to these words, thus stand the Romans with the citizenry of the Judeans. But if after these words the first party and the second party desire to add or subtract, they shall do it by their own choice, and whatever they add or subtract shall be authoritative.

And concerning the evils which king Demetrius is doing to them, we have written to him saying, “Why have you made your yoke heavy on our friends and allies, the Judeans? If then they petition against you again, we will give the judgment to them, and we will make war on you by sea and by land.”

9 And Demetrius heard that Nicanor and his forces had fallen in battle; he again sent Bacchides and Alcimus for the second time to the land of Ioudas, and the right flank with them. And they traveled the road to Galgala and camped against Maisaloth in Arbela and occupied it and destroyed many people’s lives. And in the first month of the one hundred fifty-second year, they camped against Jerousalem, and they departed and went into Bereth with twenty thousand men and two thousand cavalry.

5 And Ioudas was camped at Elasa, and three thousand selected men with him. And they saw the multitude of the forces, that they were many, and they became very frightened, and many melted away from the camp; there did not remain of them but eight hundred men.

7 And Ioudas saw that his army had melted away and the battle was pressing him, and he was shattered in spirit, because he did not have time to gather them together. And he became faint and said to those who were left, “Let us arise and go up against our adversaries. Perhaps we are strong enough to do battle with them.” But they deterred him, saying, “We are not strong enough, but rather, let us save our lives now. We and our brothers will return and will do battle against them. But we are few.” And Ioudas said, “Far be it from me to do this thing, to flee from them. And if our time has drawn near, and let us die with courage for the sake of our brothers, and let us leave no accusation against our honor.”

11 And the forcea departed from the camp and stood for the engagement with them. And the cavalry was divided into two parts, and the slingers and the archers went ahead of the army as did all the strong warriors. But Bacchides was on the right flank, and the phalanx approached from both sides. And they blew the trumpets, and the men with Ioudas also trumpeted with their trumpets. And the earth was shaken from the sound of the armies, and the battle was joined from the morning until evening.

14 And Ioudas saw that Bacchides and the bulk of his army were on the right, and with him came all the bravest in heart. And the right wing was smashed by them, and he pursued them as far as Mount Azotus. And those on the left flank saw that the right flank had been smashed, and they turned on the heels of Ioudas and those with him from behind. And the fighting became heavy and many wounded fell from both sides. And Ioudas fell, and the rest fled.

9 And Ionathan and Simon took Ioudas their brother and buried him in the tomb of their fathers in Modein and wept for him. And all Israel mourned him with great mourning and grieved many days and said,

21 “How the mighty savior of Israel fell!”

22 And the rest of the words of Ioudas and of the battles and heroic acts which he did and of his greatness were not written down for they were very many.

23 And it happened after the death of Ioudas, the lawless came forth in all the regions of Israel, and all those who worked injustice arose. In those days there was a very great famine, and the country deserted with them. And Bacchides selected the impious men and established them as masters of the country. And they sought out and investigated the friends of Ioudas and led them to Bacchides, and he retaliated against them and taunted them. And there was a great affliction in Israel such as had not been since the day that a prophet was not seen among them.

28 And all the friends of Ioudas came together and said to Ionathan, “Since your brother Ioudas has died, there is no man like him to come forward and to go against the enemy and Bacchides and those who are hostile to our nation. Now then we have chosen you today in his place to be for us a ruler and a leader to fight our war.” And Ionathan accepted the leadership at that time and rose up in the place of Ioudas his brother.

32 And Bacchides learned this, and he sought to kill him. But Ionathan and Simon his brother and all those with him found out and fled into the wilderness of Thekoe and camped at the waterhole of Asphar. And Bacchides learned this on the day of the sabbaths, and he and all his army came to the other side of the Jordan.

35 And he sent his brother, a leader of the host, and requested of his Nabatean friends to store with them the large amount of their baggage. But the sons of Iambri from Medaba came out and seized Iloannes and everything that he had and, having them, went away.

37 After these developments, they announced to Ionathan and to Simon his brother that the sons of Iambri are holding a big wedding and are bringing the bride from Nadabath, a daughter of one of the great nobles of Chanaan, with a large convoy. And they remembered the blood of Iloannes their brother and they went up and hid under the cover of the mountain. And they lifted up their eyes and saw and look, a commotion and a large entourage, and the bridegroom and his friends and his brothers came out to meet them with drums and musicians and many weapons. 40And they rose up against them from the ambush and killed them. And many wounded fell, and the rest fled to the mountain, and theya took all their spoils.

41And the wedding changed to mourning, and the sound of their musicians to lamentation. 42And they exacted vengeance for the blood of their brother and returned to the marshland of the Jordan.

43 And Bacchides heard this, and he came on the day of the sabbaths as far as the banks of the Jordan with a large force. 44And Jonathan said to those with him, 45"Let us rise up now and fight for our lives, for today is not as yesterday or the third day. 45For look, the battle is before us and behind us, and the water of the Jordan is on this side and that, and there is marsh and thicket; there is no place to turn. 46Now then, cry out to heaven so that you may be saved from the hand of our enemies."
47And the battle began, and Jonathan stretched out his hand to strike Bacchides, but he turned away from him toward the rear. 48And Jonathan and those with him jumped into the Jordan and swim through to the other side, but theyb did not cross through the Jordan against them. 49And up to a thousand men with Bacchides fell on that day.

50 And he returned to Ierousalem and built fortified cities in Judea, the fortress in Iericho, and Ammaous and Baithoron and Baithel and Tham-natha Pharathon and Tephon with high walls and gates and bolts. 51And he placed a guard in them, to be hostile to Israel. 52And he fortified the city of Judeans of the evil, up to fifty men, and killed them.
54 And in the one hundred and fifty-third year, went up and took Ptolemais. And they accepted
over to him.

5 And Jonathan learned this, and he sent emissaries to him to conclude peace with him and to give back the captives to them. 7And he accepted and did according to his words, and he swore to him not to seek evil for him all the days of his life.
8And he gave back to him the captives whom he had captured formerly from the land of Iouda, and turning back he returned to his land and did not add to come again to their territory. 73And the sword ceased from Israel, and Jonathan lived in Machmas and began to judge the people and removed the impious from Israel.

10 And in the one hundred sixtieth year,
Alexander Epiphanes son of Antiochus went up and took Ptolemais. And they accepted him, and he ruled there. 2And Demetrius the king heard this, and he gathered together very many forces and came out to meet him in battle. 3And Demetrius sent letters to Jonathan with peaceful words in order to magnify him, 4for he said, "Let us move beforehand to make peace with them before he makes peace with Alexander against us.
5For he will remember all the evils which we car-rried out against him and his brothers and the nation." 6And he gave him authority to muster forces and to prepare weapons and to be his ally; he also said for the hostages in the citadel to be turned over to him.

7 And Jonathan came to Ierousalem and read the letters in the hearing of all the people and of those from the citadel. 8And they became very frightened when they heard that the king had given authority to him to muster forces. 9And those from the citadel turned the hostages over to Jonathan, and he gave them back to their parents.
10 And Jonathan established his residence in aI.e. the Judeans  bI.e. the enemy  cI.e. temple

And he said to those who were doing the works to build the walls also, and Bacchides had built, fled. And each one abandoned his place and went back to his own land. Only in Baithsoura were some of those left who had abandoned the law and the ordinances, for it became a place of refuge.

And Alexander the king heard all the offerings that Demetrius had sent to Jonathan, and they recounted to him the battles and the heroic acts that he and his brothers had done and the troubles that they had had. And he said, "Surely, we shall not find one such man! And now let us make him our friend and ally." And he wrote letters and sent them to him according to these words, saying,

"King Demetrius to the nation of the Judeans, greeting. We have heard about you, that you are a man powerful in strength and suitable to be our friend. And now we have appointed you today to be high priest of your nation and to be called a friend of the king"—and he sent him purple vestments and a golden crown—"and to think about things as we do and to keep friendship toward us."

And Jonathan put on the holy vestments in the seventh month of the one hundred sixty-sixth year at the feast of tent pitching, and he mustered forces and prepared many weapons.

And Demetrius heard of these developments, and he was grieved and said, "What is this that we have done, that Alexander has acted before us to establish friendship with the Judeans for support. Also will we write them words of invitation and exaltation and gifts so that they may be with me for support." And he sent a message to them according to these words,

"King Demetrius to the nation of the Judeans, greeting. Since you have kept your treaties with us and have remained in our friendship and have not gone over to our enemies, we have heard this and rejoiced. And now persist in keeping faith with us, and we will return good things to you in exchange for what you do for us. We will grant you many exemptions and will give you gifts."

"And now I release you and exempt all the Judeans from tribute and from the levy of salt and the crown taxes. Also, instead of the third of the Judeans from tribute and from the levy of salt and provisions will be given to them as is appropriate for all the forces of the king. And some of them will be stationed in the large fortresses of the king, and some of these will be assigned to the affairs of the kingdom, which are confidential. And let those who are over them and the rulers be from their own people, and let them follow their laws, as also the king ordered in the land of Iouda."

And let the three districts that were annexed to Judea from the country of Samaria be combined with Judea for the purpose of being considered to be under one rule and not to obey any other authority but that of the high priest. Furthermore, I will give every year fifteen thousand shekels of silver out of the accounts of the king from the places belonging to him. And all the excess that they did not pay out from the revenues, as they did among the first nations, from now on they shall give for the works of the house.

And in addition to this, five thousand shekels of silver, as much as they received from the revenues of the holy place out of the account every year, these also are remitted, because they belong to the priests who are ministering. And all who take refuge in the temple in Jerusalem and in all its areas, because they are in debt to the king or for any other reason, let them and everything that is theirs be set free in my kingdom.

And the cost of constructing and renewing the buildings of the holy places also shall be paid from the account of the king. And the cost of constructing the walls of Jerusalem and fortifying it all around shall be paid from the account of the king, as shall that of constructing the walls in Judea."

But when Jonathan and the people heard these words, they did not believe them nor accept them, because they remembered the great evil that he did in Israel and how he oppressed them greatly. And they preferred Alexander, because it was he who began to speak to them with peaceful words, and they allied themselves with him all his days.

And Alexander the king gathered together large forces and camped opposite Demetrius. And the two kings joined in battle, and the army of Demetrius fled, and Alexander pursued him, and he prevailed over them.
tle forcefully until the sun set, and Demetrius fell on that day.

51 And Alexander sent ambassadors to Ptolemy, king of Egypt, with these words, saying, 52 "Whereas I have returned to my kingdom and have sat on the throne of my fathers and have taken hold of the government and have crushed Demetrius and have taken control of our land, and I joined battle with him, and he and his army were smashed by us, and we have sat on the throne of his kingdom," and now let us establish friendship with each other, and now give me your daughter as a wife, and I will become your son-in-law and will give gifts to you and to her, which are worthy of you."

55 And Ptolemy the king answered, saying, "It was a good day on which you returned to the land of your fathers and sat on the throne of their kingdom. And now I will do for you what you wrote, but meet me in Ptolemais so that we may see each other, and I will become your father-in-law as you have said."

57 And Ptolemy came out of Egypt, he and his daughter, and came to Ptolemais in the one hundred sixty-second year. 58 And Alexander the king met him, and he gave him Cleopatra his daughter and held her wedding in Ptolemais as kings with great pomp.

59 And Alexander the king wrote to Ionathan the high priest saying, "If your forces come to a meeting with him, 60 and he came with a multitude of cavalry and trusted in it. Simultaneously he advanced to the plain, because he had a multitude of cavalry and trusted in it. And he4 chased after him into Azotus, and the two armies joined in battle. 79 But Apollonius secretly left a thousand cavalry behind them. 80 And Ionathan understood that there was an ambush behind him, and they surrounded his army and shot arrows at the people from morning until the afternoon. 81 But the people stood, as Ionathan had ordered, and the enemy cavalry grew tired.

82 And Simon drew in his force and joined battle with the phalanx, for the cavalry had broken up, and theyb were smashed by him and fled. 83 And the cavalry was scattered in the plain, and they fled to Azotus and entered Bethdagon, the house of their idol, to be saved. 84 And Ionathan burned Azotus and the cities surrounding it and took their spoils, and the temple of Dagon, and burned them with fire. 85 And those who fell by the dagger, together with those who were burned, were about eight thousand men. 86 And Ionathan departed from there and camped against Ascalon, and the people from the city came out to meet him with great pomp.

And in the one hundred sixty-fifth year Demetrius son of Demetrius came from Crete to the land of his fathers. 68 And Alexander the king learned this, and he was greatly grieved and returned to Antioch. 69 And Demetrius appointed Apollonius, who was over Coele-Syria, and he gathered a large force and camped in Jamnia. And he sent a message to Ionathan the high priest saying, "You alone rise up against us, and I have become an object of ridicule and derision because of you. And why do you have authority over us in the mountains? 71 Now then, if you are confident in your forces, come down to us on the plain, and let us measure ourselves with each other there, because with me is the army of the cities. 72 Ask, and learn who I am and who the rest are who are helping us. And they say, 'You are not able to stand against us, because twice your fathers were routed in their land.' 73 And now you will not be able to withstand the cavalry and so much force on the plain where there is no stone or rock, nor any place to flee."

74 But when Ionathan heard the words of Apollonius, he was moved in thought. And he selected ten thousand men and came out of Jerusalem, and Simon his brother met him to help him. 75 And he camped at Joppa, but those from the city closed him out, because there was a garrison of Apollonius in Joppa, and they made war against it, and those in the city became afraid and opened it, and Ionathan took control of Joppa.

77 And Apollonius heard this, and he marshaled three thousand cavalry and a large force and went to Azotus as if he were passing through. And Ionathan understood that there was an ambush behind him, and they surrounded his army and shot arrows at the people from morning until the afternoon. 81 But the people stood, as Ionathan had ordered, and the enemy cavalry grew tired.

82 And Simon drew in his force and joined battle with the phalanx, for the cavalry had broken up, and theyb were smashed by him and fled. 83 And the cavalry was scattered in the plain, and they fled to Azotus and entered Bethdagon, the house of their idol, to be saved. 84 And Ionathan burned Azotus and the cities surrounding it and took their spoils, and the temple of Dagon, and those who had taken refuge in it he burned with fire. 85 And those who fell by the dagger, together with those who were burned, were about eight thousand men. 86 And Ionathan departed from there and camped against Ascalon, and the people from the city came out to meet him with great pomp.

87 And Ionathan returned to Jerusalem with peace and gladness.

And the king of Egypt assembled many forces, like the sand that is at the edge of the sea, and many ships and sought to take control of the kingdom of Alexander by deceit and to add it to his own kingdom. 2And he set out for Syria with peaceful words, and the people from the cities opened to him and met him, because it was the command of Alexander the king to meet him, because he was his father-in-law. 3But as he entered into the cities, Ptolemy stationed forces as a guard in each city.

4 When he drew near to Azotus, they showed him the burnt temple of Dagon and Azotus and its outskirts in ruins and bodies scattered around and the burned corpses which he had burned in the war, for they made piles of them along his way. 5And they recounted to the king the things that Jonathan had done in order to blame him, but the king kept silent. 6And Jonathan met the king at Joppa with pomp, and they greeted each other and slept there. 7And Jonathan went with the king as far as the river called Eleutherus, and he returned to Jerusalem.

8 But King Ptolemy took control of the cities on the coast as far as Seleuceia by the sea, and he was contemplating evil thoughts about Alexander. 9And he sent ambassadors to Demetrius the king, saying, “Come, let us conclude an agreement between ourselves, and I will give you my daughter, whom Alexander has, and you will rule over the kingdom of your father. 10For I have changed my mind about giving my daughter to him, because he has sought to kill me.” 11And he blamed him, because he desired his kingdom. 12And he took his daughter away and gave her to Demetrius, and he became alienated from Alexander, and their hostility became apparent.

13 And Ptolemy entered Antioch and put on the crown of Asia, and he placed two crowns on his head, that of Egypt and of Asia. 14But Alexander, the king was in Cilicia during those times, because the people from those places were rebelling. 15And Alexander heard of this, and he came against him in battle. And Ptolemy marched out and met him with a strong troop and routed him, because he was his father-in-law. 16And Alexander fled to Arabia to hide himself in danger. 17And taking silver, gold and clothing and many other gifts, he went to the king in Ptolemais and found favor before him. 18But King Ptolemy died on the third day, and his men who were in his fortresses were hostile to him. 19And Jonathan went with the king as far as the river called Eleutherus, and he returned to Jerusalem.

20 In those days Jonathan gathered together men from Judea to assault the citadel in Jerusalem, and they made many siege engines against it. 21But certain people who hated their nation, lawless men, went to the king and reported to him that Jonathan was besieging the citadel. 22And when he heard this he became angry, and as soon as he heard it, he marched immediately and came to Ptolemais, and he wrote Jonathan not to besiege the citadel and to present himself to him for a meeting in Ptolemais most speedily.

23 But when Jonathan heard this, he directed that the siege continue, and he selected some of the elders of Israel and some of the priests and put himself in danger. 24And taking silver, gold and clothing and many other gifts, he went to the king in Ptolemais and found favor before him. 25And certain lawless men from his nation petitioned against him, 26but the king did to him as his predecessors did to him before him and exalted him before all his Friends. 27And he bestowed upon him the high priesthood and as many other honors as he had before and made him be counted among his First Friends. 28And Jonathan requested that the king make Judea tax-free, as well as the three districts and Samaritis, and pledged to him three hundred talents. 29And the king was pleased and wrote letters to Jonathan concerning all these things in this way:

30 “King Demetrius to Jonathan his brother and the nation of the Judeans, greeting. 31This copy of the letter that we wrote to Lasthenes our relative concerning you we have also written to you so that you may know its contents. 32"King Demetrius to Lasthenes his Father, greeting. 33To the nation of the Judeans, who are our friends and continue to do what is right toward us, we have decided to do good because of their good will toward us. 34We have guaranteed for them the boundaries of Judea as well as the three districts of Aphirrema and Lydda and Ramathaim; these were added to Judea from Samaritis, with all the areas belonging to them, for all those who sacrifice in Jerusalem in exchange for the royal taxes that the king received from them formerly every year from the produce of the earth and from the tree fruits. 35And the other revenues belonging to us from the present time, from the tithes and the taxes that belong to us, and the lakes of salt and the crown taxes that belong to us, all these we will excuse for them. 36And not one of these shall be set aside from the present time on forever. 37Now then take care to make a copy of this, and let it be given to Jonathan, and let it be put on the holy mountain in a prominent place.”

38 And Demetrius the king saw that the land became quiet before him, and no one opposed him, and he dismissed all his forces, each one to his own place, except for the foreign forces whom he had enlisted from the islands of the nations. But all the forces that had served under his fathers were hostile to him. 39And Trypho was one of those who were with Alexander formerly, and he saw that all the forces were complaining against Demetrius, and he went to Imalkoue the Arab, who was raising Antiochus, the small son of Alexander, 40and was watching over him until he could hand him over to him so that he could rule in his father’s place. And he reported to him all that Demetrius had accomplished and the hostility that his forces showed toward him, and he remained there many days.

41 And Jonathan sent a message to Demetrius the king to remove the soldiers of the citadel from Jerusalem, and the soldiers in the fortresses, for they were battling Israel. 42 And Demetrius sent a message to Ionathan, saying, “Not only will I do these things to you and to your nation, but I will glorify you and your nation greatly, if I have the opportunity. 43 Now then, you will do right to send men to me who will ally themselves with me, because all my forces have revolted.” 44 And Ionathan sent three thousand men powerful in strength to him in Antioch, and they came to the king, and the king rejoiced at their arrival. 45 And the people from the city gathered together in the middle of the city up to one hundred and twenty thousand men, and they wanted to kill the king. 46 But the king fled into the court. And the people of the city seized the thoroughfares of the city and began to fight. 47 And the king called the Judeans for help, and they all together came to him and scattered throughout the city and killed on that day up to a hundred thousand. 48 And they burned the city and took many spoils on that day and saved the king. 49 And the people of the city saw that the Judeans had taken control of the city as they wanted, and they became weakened in their spirit and called out to the king with supplication, saying, “Make a treaty with us, and let the Judeans stop fighting us and the city.” 50 And they threw down their weapons and made peace. And the Judeans were glorified before the king and before all those in his kingdom. And they became renowned in his kingdom and returned to Jerusalem having many spoils. 51 And Demetrius the king sat upon the throne of his kingdom, and the land became quiet before him. 52 But he falsified everything he had said and became alienated from Ionathan and did not return the favors that he had given to him, but pressed him greatly. 53 Now after these things Trypho returned, and with him Antiochus, a rather young boy, and he became king and put on a crown. 54 And all the forces that Demetrius had cast off gathered together and fought against him, and he fled and was routed. 55 Trypho took the beasts and took control of Antioch. 56 And Antiochus the younger wrote to Ionathan, and he made a treaty with him. 57 And Ionathan hearing that the commanders of Demetrius had arrived in Kedes in Galilee with a large force desiring to remove him from his position. 58 And he met with them but left his brother Simon in the country. 59 And Ionathan went out and crossed over beyond the river and among the cities, and the whole force of Syria gathered to him in alliance. And he came to Ascalon, and the people of the city met him with pomp. 60 And he went from there to Gaza, but the people of Gaza closed him out. And he besieged it and burned its outskirts with fire and plundered them. 61 And he went from there to Kedes, as far as their camp, and they encamped there. 62 And on that day up to three thousand men of the allophyles fell, and Ionathan returned to Jerusalem.

And Ionathan saw that the time was opportune for him, and he selected men and sent them to Rome to affirm and to renew the friendship with them. 2 And to the Spartans and other places he sent letters for the same purpose. 3 And they went to Rome and entered the council chamber and said, “Ionathan the high priest and the nation of the Judeans sent us to renew friendship with them and the alliance as before.” 4 And they gave letters to them for the people in each place to conduct them to the land of Iouda with peace. 5 And this is a copy of the letters that Ionathan wrote to the Spartans: 6 “Ionathan the high priest and the senate of the nation and the priests and remaining citizenry of the Judeans to their brothers the Spartans, greeting. 7 Already beforehand letters were sent to Onias the high priest from Areius, who was king over you, that you are our brothers as the copy indicates. 8 And Onias received the man who had been sent with honor and accepted the letters in which it was made clear concerning the alliance and friendship. 9 We too, then, not being in need of these things and taking comfort in the holy books in our possession, have endeavored to send this proposal to renew our brotherhood and friendship toward you so as not to be alienated from you, for many seasons have passed since you sent your message to us. 11 We then, at every opportunity continuously both at our feasts and the other appropriate days, remember you in the sacrifices that we offer and in the prayers as is proper and fitting to remember brothers. 12 And we rejoice at your glory. 13 But many afflictions have encircled us, and many wars, and the kings around us have made war upon us. 14 We then decided not to bother you and the rest of our allies and friends in these wars, 15 for we have the help from heaven helping us, and we were rescued from our enemies, and our enemies were humbled. 16 Therefore, we selected Numenius son of Antiochus and Antipater son of Jason and sent them to the Romans to renew the former friendship and alliance with them. 17 We then commanded them to come also to you and to greet you and to deliver to you the letters from us concerning the renewal and our brotherhood. 18 And now you will do well to respond to us regarding these things.”

19 And this is a copy of the lettera that they sent to Onias: 20 “Ares, king of the Spartans, to Onias the great priest, greeting. 21 It has been found in a document concerning the Spartans and the Judeans that they are brothers and that they are of the descendants of Abraham. 22 And now that we know these things, you will do well to write us concerning your peace. 23 We in turn write to you: ‘Your livestock and your belongings are ours and ours are yours.’ Therefore, we commanded that theyb apprise you accordingly.”

24 And Jonathan heard that the commanders of Demetrius had returned with a large force, more than before, to fight against him, and he departed from Jerusalem and met them in the country of Hamathitis, for he did not give them the opportunity to march into his country. 25 And he sent spies into their camp, and they returned and informed him that they were marshalling troops to fall upon them by night. 26 So as the sun was setting, Jonathan gave orders to those with him to be vigilant and to be ready for battle with their weapons through the whole night, and he posted advanced guards around the camp. 27 And his opponents heard that Jonathan and those with him had prepared for battle, and they became frightened and cowered in their spirit, and they lit fires in their camp. 28 But Jonathan and those with him did not know it until morning, for they saw the lights burning. 29 And Jonathan chased after them but did not catch them, for they had crossed the Eleutherus river. 30 And Jonathan turned aside to the Arabs, who are called Zabadeans, and defeated them and took their spoils. 31 And he set out and went to Damascus and passed through all that country.

32 And Simon also went out and passed through as far as Ascalon and the fortresses close by. And he turned aside to Joppa and occupied it, 33 for he heard that they wanted to surrender the fortress to those with Demetrius, and he placed a garrison there to guard it. 34 And Jonathan returned and assembled the elders of the people and took counsel with them to build fortresses in Judea 35 and to elevate the walls of Jerusalem and to raise up a high wall between the citadel and the city, to separate it from the city in order that it could be isolated so that they could neither buy nor sell. 36 And they gathered together to build the city, and part of the wall of the wadi to the east had fallen, and he repaired that which was called Chaphenath. 37 Simon also built Adida in Sephela, and he fortified it and erected gates and bolts.

38 And Trypho sought to become king of Asia and to put on the crown and to stretch out his hand against Antiochus the king. 39 But he was afraid, lest Jonathan not allow him and lest he fight against them, and he sought a way to apprehend and destroy him, and he departed and came to Baithsan. 40 And Jonathan came out to meet him with forty thousand selected men in battle order, and he came to Baithsan. 41 And Trypho saw that he had come with a large force, and he was afraid to stretch out his hand against him. 42 And he received him with honor and introduced him to all his Friends and gave him gifts and gave orders to his Friends and to his forces to obey him as they would himself. 43 And he said to Jonathan, “Why have you wearied all these people without there being a war with us? 44 And now send them to their homes and select for yourself a few men who will be with you and come with me to Ptolemais, and I will turn it over to you, and the other fortresses and the other forces and all those in the royal service, and I will turn and leave. For this reason I am present.”

46 And trusting him, he did as he said; he sent away the forces, and they went to the land of Judea. 47 And he left with himself three thousand men of whom he left two thousand in Galilee, and one thousand went with him. 48 But when Jonathan entered into Ptolemais, the people of Ptolemais shut the gates and apprehended him, and all those who entered with him they killed by the sword.

49 And Trypho sent infantry and cavalry to Galilee and the great plain to destroy all those who were with Jonathan. 50 But they knew that he had been apprehended and destroyed together with those who were with him, and they encouraged themselves and marched close together ready for battle. 51 And the pursuers saw that it was a matter of life or death for them, and they turned back. 52 And they all came to the land of Judea in peace, and they mourned for Jonathan and those with him and were very afraid, and all Israel mourned with great mourning. 53 And all the nations around them sought to annihilate them, for they said, “They have no ruler or helper. Now then, let us do battle with them and wipe out the memory of them from people.”

of louda and to devastate it. 2And he saw the people, that they were trembling and fearful, and he went up to Jerusalem and gathered the people. 3And he encouraged them and said to them, “You yourselves know all that I and my brothers and the house of my father have done for the laws and the holy places, and the wars and the hardships that we have seen. 4For this reason all my brothers have perished for the sake of Israel, and I have been left alone. 5And now far be it from me to preserve my life in any time of affliction, for I am not greater than my brothers. 6But I will take vengeance for my nation and for the holy places and for your women and children, for all the nations have gathered together to annihilate us out of enmity.”

7 And the spirit of the people was rekindled as they heard these words, 8and they responded with a loud voice, saying, “You are our leader in place of Loudas and Jonathan your brother. 9Fight our war, and all that you say to us we will do.” 10And he gathered together all the fighting men and hurried to finish the walls of Jerusalem and fortified it all around. 11And he sent Jonathan the son of Asia and with him a sufficient force to Joppa and expelled those in it and remained there in it.

12 And Trypho departed from Ptolemais with a large force to enter into the land of Judea, and Jonathan was with him under guard. 13But Simon camped in Adida facing the plain. 14And Trypho learned that Simon had risen up in place of Jonathan his brother and that he was about to join battle with him, and he sent ambassadors to him, saying, 15“On account of the money that Ionathan his brother owed to the royal treasury for the position he held, we are detaining him. 16And now send one hundred talents of silver and two of his sons as hostages so that if he is freed he will not rebel against us, and we will free him.”

17 And Simon knew that they were speaking to him with deceit, and he sent for the silver and the boys so as not to raise great animosity in the people, 18who would say, “Because I did not send the silver and the boys to him he was perished.” 19And he sent the boys and the hundred talents, but he deceived him and did not free Jonathan.

20 And after these things Trypho came to march into the country and to devastate it, and they circled around on the road to Adora. But Simon and his army marched parallel with him to whatever place he went. 21But the men in the citadel were sending envoys to Trypho urging him to come to them through the wilderness and to send food to them. 22And Trypho prepared all his cavalry to go, but on that night there was very much snow, and he did not go because of the snow. And he departed and went to Galaaditis. 23But as he drew near to Baskama, he killed Jonathan, and he was buried there. 24And Trypho returned and went back to his land.

31 But Trypho acted with deceit toward the younger Antiochus the king and killed him, 32and he became king in his place and put on the crown of Asia, and he did great harm in the land. 33And Simon built the fortresses of Judea and walled them around with high towers and great walls and gates and bolts, and he put food in the fortresses. 34And Simon selected men and sent them to Demetrius the king to bring about exemption for the country, because all the acts of Trypho were robbery. 35And Demetrius the king sent to him in accordance with these developments and replied to him and wrote some such letter to him: 36“King Demetrius to Simon, the high priest and Friend of kings, and the elders and nation of the Judeans, greeting. The gold crown and the palm leaf that you sent we have received, and we are ready to make a great peace with you and to write to those over the revenues to exempt you from taxes. 38And whatever agreements we made with you stand, and the fortresses that you built may remain for you. 39We also excuse oversights and violations up to this very day, and the crown tax that you owe, and if any other tax used to be collected in Jerusalem, let it no longer be collected. 40And if some of you deserve to be enrolled among our associates, let them be enrolled, and let there be peace among us.”

41 In the one hundred seventieth year the yoke of the nations was lifted from Israel, 42and the people began to write on their documents and transactions, “In the first year of Simon the great high priest, both general and leader of the Judeans.”

43 In those days he camped against Gazara and surrounded it with soldiers. And he made a siege engine and brought it to the city and assaulted one tower and took it. 44And the men in the siege engine jumped out into the city, and there was a great commotion in the city. 45And the men in the city with their women and their children went up on the wall, tearing their clothes, and they cried out with a loud voice begging Simon to make peace with them, 46and they said, “Do not deal with us according to our evil acts but according to your mercy.” 47And Simon reconciled with them and did not fight them but ejected them from the city and cleansed the houses in which the idols were. And thus he entered it singing hymns and praises. 48And he removed from it every uncleanness and settled in it men who observed the law, and he further fortified it and built in it a residence for himself.

49 Now those who were in the citadel in Jerusalem were prevented from going in and going out into the country to buy and sell. And they became very hungry, and plenty of them perished in the famine. 50 And they cried out to Simon to make peace, and he gave it to them. But he ejected them from there and cleansed the citadel from the impurities. 51 And they entered it on the twenty-third day of the second month of the one hundred seventy-first year with praises and palms and with cinyra\textsuperscript{a} and cymbals and nablas\textsuperscript{b} and with hymns and with odes that a great enemy was eliminated from Israel. 52 And he\textsuperscript{c} established that that day be observed every year with gladness. And he fortified the temple mount beside the citadel, and he himself and those with him resided there. 53 And Simon saw his son Ioannes, that he had become a man, and he made him commander of all the forces, and he resided in Gazara.

14 And in the one hundred seventy-second year Demetrius the king gathered his forces together and went to Media to procure help for himself so that he could do battle with Trypho. 2 And Arsaces, the king of Persia and Media, heard that Demetrius had entered into his territory, and he sent one of his commanders to apprehend him alive. 3 And he went and defeated the army of Demetrius and apprehended him and led him to Arsaces, and he put him in prison.

And the land became quiet all the days of Simon, and he sought good things for his nation, and his authority was pleasing to them, and his glory all his days.

And with all his glory he took Joppe as a harbor and made it an entrance way to the islands of the sea.

And he widened the borders of his nation and controlled the country.

And he gathered many captives and dominated Gazara and Baithsoura and the citadel, and he took away the uncleanness from it, and there was no one to oppose him.

And they were farming their land in peace, and the land was giving its produce, and the trees of the plains their fruit.

Elders were sitting in the city squares; all were conversing about good things, and the youths were dressing in splendor and uniforms of war.

He furnished food to the cities and equipped them with implements of fortification until his glorious name was renowned to the end of the earth.

He made peace in the land, and Israel was glad with great gladness.

And everyone sat under their own vine and their own fig tree, and there was no one to frighten them.

And a person fighting them disappeared in the land, and the kings were crushed in those days.

And he supported all the humble among his people; he sought out the law, and he eliminated every lawless and evil person.

He glorified the holy places\textsuperscript{d} and multiplied the vessels of the holy places\textsuperscript{d}.

And it was heard in Rome and as far as Sparta that Jonathan had died, and they were greatly grieved. 17 But when they heard that Simon his brother had become high priest in his place and that he was in control of the country and of the cities in it, 18 they wrote to him on brass tablets to renew with him the friendship and alliance which they had established with Ioudas and Jonathan his brothers. 19 And they were read before the assembly in Jerusalem.

And this is a copy of the letters\textsuperscript{e} that the Spartans sent:

"The rulers and the city of the Spartans to Simon the great priest and the elders and the priests and the remaining citizenry of the Judeans, our brothers, greeting. 2 The ambassadors who were sent to our citizenry announced to us concerning your glory and honor, and we rejoiced at their coming. 22 And we have recorded the things said by them in the public resolutions thus: 'Numenius son of Antiochus and Antipater son of Jason, ambassadors of the Judeans, came to us renewing their friendship with us. 23 And it was pleasing to the citizenry to receive these men honorably and to place the copy of their words in the official public books so that the citizenry of the Spartans may have a remembrance of them. They also wrote a copy of them for Simon the high priest."

24 After this, Simon sent Numenius to Rome with a large gold shield, a weight of one thousand minas\textsuperscript{f}, to establish the alliance with them.

25 And when the citizenry heard of these developments they said, "What favor shall we return to Simon and his sons? 26 For he himself and his brothers and the house of his father stood firm and fought off the enemies of Israel and established freedom for it." And they recorded this on brass tablets and placed them on steles on Mount Sion.

27 And this is a copy of the writing: "On the eighteenth day of Eloul, in the one hundred seventy-second year, and this is the third year of Simon the great high priest in Asaramel, in the great congregation of priests and of the people and rulers of the nation and of the elders of the country, it was made known to us 29 that when many times wars came about in the country, then Simon the son of Mattathias the son of the sons of Ioarib and his brothers put themselves in danger and stood up against the opponents of their nation so that their holy placea and the law could endure, and they glorified their nation with great glory. 30 And Jonathan mobilized his nation and became their high priest and was gathered to his people. 31 And their enemies decided to march into their country to devastate their country and to stretch out their hands against their holy places. 32 Then Simon resisted and fought for his nation. And he spent much of his own money, and he armed the men of the forces of his nation and gave rations to them. 33 And he fortified the cities of Judea and Baithsoura on the borders of Judea, where the weapons of the enemies were formerly, and he stationed there a guard of Judean men. 34 And he fortified Joppe by the sea and Gazara on the borders of Azotus in which the enemies resided there formerly. And he settled Judeans there, and all that was appropriate for their reconstruction he placed in them.

35 "And the people saw the faith of Simon and the glory that he determined to bring to his nation, and they made him their leader and high priest, because he had done all these things, and for the justice and faith that he preserved in his nation. And he sought in every way to elevate his people. 36 And in his days he was successful in removing by his hands the nations from his country, and those in the city of David and those in Jerusalem who had built a citadel for themselves out of which they would come and desecrate the vicinity of the holy places and do great harm to its purity. 37 And he settled Judean men in it and fortified it for the security of the country and city, and he heightened the walls of Jerusalem.

38 "And King Demetrius bestowed up on him the high priesthood for these things, 39 and he made him one of his Friends and glorified him with great glory. 40 For he had heard that the Judeans had been called friends, allies and brothers by the Romans and that they had met with the ambassadors of Simon with honor 41 and that the Judeans and the priests were pleased that Simon would be their leader and high priest forever, until a faithful prophet would arise, 42 and that he would be commander over them and that the responsibility would be upon him concerning the holy places to establish authorities for it over their works and over the country and over the armed forces and over the fortresses 43 and that the responsibility would be upon him concerning the holy places and that he would be obeyed by all and that all documents in the country would be written in his name and that he would be clothed in purple and wear a gold brooch. 45 But whoever acts against or sets aside any of these resolutions shall be culpable."

46 And all the people were pleased for Simon to be established to act according to all these words. 47 And Simon accepted and was pleased to be high priest and to be commander and ethnarch of the Judeans and priests and to protect all of them. 48 And they said for this writing to be set on brass tablets and to put them in the precinct of the holy places in a prominent place 49 and to put copies of them in the treasury so that Simon and his sons might have them.

15 And Antiochus son of Demetrius the king sent letters from the islands of the sea to Simon the priest and ethnarch of the Judeans and to all the nation. 2 And their contents were like this: "King Antiochus to Simon the great priest and ethnarch and the nation of the Judeans, greeting. 3 Since certain corrupt men gained control of the kingdom of our fathers, I want to lay claim to the kingdom so that I can restore it as it was formerly, and I have recruited a multitude of forces and have prepared warships, 4 and I want to disembark into the country so that I can go after those who have corrupted our country and those who have devastated many cities in my kingdom. 5 Now then, I affirm for you all the tribute from which the kings before me exempted you and as many other payments as they exempted you. 6 And I have given permission for you to make your own die for coinage in your own country 7 and for Jerusalem and the holy places to be free. And all the weapons that you have prepared and the fortresses that you have built and now control, let them be yours. 8 And every royal debt and the future royal debts from the present and for all time, let them be annulled for you. 9 And when we establish our kingdom, we will glorify you and your nation and the temple with great glory so that your glory will become apparent in all the earth."

10 In the one hundred seventy-fourth year Antiochus went out into the land of his fathers, and all the forces joined with him so that few were with Trypho. 11 And Antiochus pursued him, and he, fleeing, came to Dora by the sea, 12 for he knew that evils had converged upon him, and his forces abandoned him. 13 And Antiochus camped against Dora, and with him one hundred twenty thousand fighting men and eight thousand cavalry. 14 And he surrounded the city, and the ships joined battle from the sea, and he pressed the city from the land and the sea and allowed no one to go out or to go in.

15 And Numenius and those with him came from Rome having letters for the kings and the countries in which were written these things: 16 Leukios, consul of the Romans, to Ptolemy the king, greeting. 17 The ambassadors of the Judeans came to us as our friends and allies, renewing the original friendship and alliance, having been sent by Simon the high priest and the citizenry of the Judeans. 18 And they brought a gold shield weighing one thousand minas. 19 Therefore it pleased us to write to the kings and the countries, for them not to seek evils against them and not to make war on them and their cities and their countries and that they not ally themselves with those who make war on them. 20 And it seemed good to us to accept the shield from them. 21 Therefore if certain corrupt people from their country have taken refuge with you, give them over to Simon the high priest so that he may take vengeance upon them according to their law.

22 And he wrote the same things to Demetrius the king and to Attalus and Ariarathes and Arsaces and to all the countries and to Sampsakes and the Spartans and to Delos and to Myndos and to Sicyon and to Caria and to Samos and to Paphos and to Lycia and to Halicarnassos and to Rhodes and to Phaselis and to Cos and to Side and to Arados and to Gortyna and Cnidus and Cyprus and Cyrene. 23 They also wrote a copy of these things to Simon the high priest.

24 Now Antiochus the king camped against Dora a second time, attacking it constantly and making war machines, and he shut Trypho off from going out and going in. 25 And Simon sent to him two thousand selected men to fight with him and silver and gold and many implements of war. 26 However, he decided not to accept them but to set aside all the agreements he had concluded with him formerly and became alienated from him. 27 And he sent to him Athenobius, one of his Friends, to converse with him, saying, “You are in control of Joppe and Gaza and the citadel in Jerusalem, which are cities of my kingdom. 28 You have devastated their regions and have done great harm in the land and have taken control of many places in my kingdom. 29 Now then, turn over the cities that you have taken and the taxes of the places of which you have taken possession outside the boundaries of Judea. 30 Or if not, instead of them give five hundred talents of silver for the destruction that you have caused, and for the taxes of the cities another five hundred talents. Or if not, we will come and make war upon you.”

31 And Athenobius, the Friend of the king, came to Jerusalem and saw the glory of Simon and all the people and our country, for these we will give one hundred talents.”

And he did not answer a word to him but returned with wrath to the king and reported to him these words and the glory of Simon and all the things that he saw. And the king became very angry.

37 But Trypho, boarding a ship, fled to Orthosia. 38 And the king established Kendebaios as overall commander of the coast and gave him infantry and cavalry forces. 39 And he commanded him to camp before Judea, and he gave orders to him to build Kedron and to fortify the gates so that he might also make war on the people, but the king pursued Trypho. 40 And Kendebaios arrived in Jamneia and began to stir up the people and to march into Judaea and to take the people captive and to kill them. 41 And he built Kedron and stationed horsemen there and infantry so that they could go out and march along the roads of Judaea as the king had instructed him.

16 And Ioannes went up from Gaza and reported to Simon his father what Kendebois had done. 2 And Simon called his two older sons, Loudas and Ioannes, and said to them, “I and my brothers and the house of my father have fought the enemies of Israel from our youth until this very day, and we were successful in rescuing Israel by our hands many times. 3 But now I have grown old, but you mercifully are sufficient in years. Become my replacement and my brother’s; then go out, and fight for our nation, and may the help from heaven be with you.”

4 And he selected from the country twenty thousand fighting men and horsemen, and they went to Kendebois and slept in Modon. 5 And arising in the morning, they went to the plain and saw a large force about to meet them, foot-soldiers and horsemen, and there was a wadi between them. 6 And he camped before them, he and his people. And he saw the people frightened to cross the wadi, and he crossed first, and the men saw him, and they crossed after him. 7 And he divided the people with the horsemen in the middle of the infantry. But the cavalry of the adversaries was very large. 8 And they trumpeted with the trumpets, and Kendebois and his army were routed, and many of them fell wounded, and the rest fled to the fortress. 9 That was when Loudas, the brother of Ioannes, was wounded, but Ioannes pursued them until he came to Kedron, which he had built. 10 And they fled to the towers in the fields of Azotus, and he burned it with fire, and up to two thousand of them fell. And he returned to Judea with peace.

11 And Ptolemy son of Aboubos was the appointed commander in the plain of Jericho, and he had much silver and gold, for he was a son-in-law of the high priest. 12 And his heart was exalted, and he wanted to take control of the country, and he plotted with deceit against Simon and his sons to eliminate them. 14 Now when Simon was touring the cities in the country and attending to his supervision of them, he also went down to Jericho, he and Mattathias and Ioudas, his sons, in the one hundred and seventy-seventh year in the eleventh month; this is the month Sabat. 15 And the son of Aboubos received them with deceit in his small fortress called Dok, which he had built, and he put on a great banquet for them, and he hid men there. 16 And when Simon and his sons became drunk, Ptolemy and those with him rose up and took their weapons and rushed in on Simon in the symposium and killed him and his two sons and some of his servants. 17 And he committed a great betrayal and returned evil for good.

18 And Ptolemy wrote about these things and sent a report to the king so that he would send forces to him for assistance and would turn over the cities and the country to him. 19 And he sent other men to Gazara to eliminate Ioannes, and to the officers of thousands he sent letters for them to come to him so that he might give to them silver and gold and gifts, 20 and he sent other men to take Jerusalem and the temple mount. 21 But someone, running ahead, reported to Ioannes in Gazara that his father and his brothers had been destroyed and that “he has also sent men to kill you.” 22 And hearing this, he was greatly astounded, and he apprehended the men who came to destroy him, and he killed them, for he knew that they were seeking to destroy him.

23 And the rest of the stories about Ioannes and his wars and his heroic deeds which he did and the building of the walls which he built and his actions, 24 look, these have been written in the book of days of his high priesthood from the time when he became high priest after his father.
2 MAKKABEES

TO THE READER

EDITION OF THE GREEK TEXT

It was not always possible to follow the text reconstructed by Hanhart. Wherever the present translator’s textual-critical decisions differ from those of Hanhart, this has been indicated in the footnotes. Some of the considerations that necessitated such decisions are laid out in the next section.

The Text of 2 Makkabees

Any critical edition of 2 Makkabees relies mainly on two famous Greek uncial manuscripts: the Codex Alexandrinus (fifth century) and the Codex Venetus (eighth century). There is also a rich tradition of Greek minuscule manuscripts, as well as manuscript witnesses to Syriac, Armenian and Latin translations. There also is a Coptic fragment of some passages from 2 Makk 5–6.¹ Hanhart’s edition is based mainly on Alexandrinus and on minuscules 55, 347 and 771.

The body of the text of 2 Makkabees, that is, 3.1–15.36, is a literary creation in its own right without a Hebrew parent text. It is an epitome drawn from the five-volume work of Jason of Cyrene produced by an epitomator who introduces the results of his labors in the prooemium found in 2.19–32. In 1.1–10a and 1.10b–2.18 two letters referring to the feast of Succoth in the month of Kislev are made to introduce the main part. The letters most likely are translations of Hebrew or Aramaic originals, but the parent texts are not known. An epilogue, which was produced by the epitomator, follows in 15.37–39.

The main body of the text (3.1–15.36) goes back to Jason of Cyrene, the author whose five-volume history was abbreviated (or “epitomised”). However, Jason could not possibly have produced some passages: 4.17; 5.17–20; and 6.12–17. The epitomator authored them. The whole of chapter 7, 12.43–45 and 14.37–46 also seem alien in the context of Jason’s history.² Furthermore, two versions of the Heliodorus narrative exist side by side in chapter 3. Version A, as identified by E. Bickerman (3.24, 25, 27, 28, 30),³ must have been produced by a post-Jasonic author.⁴

Some Observations Pertinent to the NETS Translation

The NETS translation of 2 Makkabees obviously has to address textual-critical problems and does so on the basis of the Göttingen edition. This takes us back to the exemplary debate between P. Katz and R. Hanhart. It was provoked by Katz’s review⁵ of Hanhart’s critical edition. Building on the work of his pre-to the reader of 2 Makkabees, especially on the research done by A. Wilhelm. Katz discussed Hanhart’s edition and made a number of conjectural and other suggestions, which a translator of 2 Makkabees ignores at his or her peril. Some of the passages in question are 2 Makk 5.8; 6.2; 12.34; 13.2; 14.17, all of which are noted in the footnotes of our translation.

I should like to discuss one particular problem as an exemplar. It is taken from 2 Makk 1.19. The Göttingen edition reads:

καὶ γὰρ ὅτε εἰς τὴν Περσηκὴν ἠγοντο ἡμῶν οἱ πατέρες οί τότε εὐσεβεῖς ἱερεῖς λαβόντες ἀπὸ τοῦ πυρὸς τοῦ θυσιαστηρίου λαθραίως κατέκρυψαν ἐν κοιλώματι φρέατος ταξὶν ἐχοντος ἀνδρῶν, ἐν ὧν κατηφαλάσσαν ὡστε πάσιν ἀγνωστῶν εἶναι τὸν τόπον.

For the italicized part the NRSV reads: “... and secretly hid it in the hollow of a dry cistern . . . .”

The NRSV is based on the Hanhart edition, and there is no note in the NRSV indicating that an alternative reading was preferred. We therefore conclude that the committee of NRSV translators thought that its rendering represented a faithful rendering of the text established by Hanhart. However, Hanhart’s text here does not quite make sense. Generations of scholars have felt this passage to be difficult. The NRSV follows the example of such scholars as James Moffatt, who translated, “... hid it secretly in the hollow of an empty cistern . . . .” However, nobody is really able to make sense of the NRSV’s rendering. The NRSV translators seem to have read φρέατος and έχοντος in conjunction, thus understanding something like “in the hollow of a cistern that had a dry cavitt,” which did not quite make sense and was simply paraphrased as “a dry cistern.”

Contrary to such forced efforts to make sense of an obviously corrupt text, A. Wilhelm suggested the reading ἐν κοιλώματι φρέατος ταξὶν ἐχοντι ἀνδρον. His conjecture takes seriously that, in 2 Makk 9.18 and other passages of Hellenistic Greek literature, ταξὶς is used in a similar way. Thus we read, in 9.18:

Οὐδαμοὶς δὲ ληγοντων των πόνων—ἐπεληθή καὶ εἰς αὐτὸν δικαία ἢ τοῦ θεοῦ κρίσις—τὰ κατ’ αὐτὸν ἀπελπίσας ἔγραψεν πρὸς τοὺς ᾿Ιουδαίους τὴν ὑπογεγραμμενήν ἑπιστολήν ἱκτηρίας ταξὶν ἐχουσαν περιέχουσαν δὲ οὕτως.

But when his sufferings did not in any way abate, for the judgment of God had justly come upon him, he gave up all hope for himself and wrote to the Jews the following letter, in the form of a supplication. This was its content (NRSV).

Wilhelm points out that the participle is in accordance with the term that designates the object that is being compared, with regard to its ταξὶς, with another object. This is a fine example of a conjectural reading that is not warranted by any of the manuscripts but seems to be, after careful consideration, the only possibility to make sense of the text. This is why it was accepted by P. Katz in his review article. I have taken it over and have accordingly rendered the text as “[they] hid it in a cavity, which had the appearance of a waterless cistern.” Other such cases might be cited.

Generally speaking, Hanhart’s critical edition is marked by an exceedingly conservative attitude towards emendations. It has rightly been pointed out against Hanhart that 2 Makkabees should not be found fire but only marsh water, he ordered them to draw it up and bring it. 21 When the materials for the sacrifices were presented, Neemias ordered the priests to sprinkle the water on the wood and on the things laid upon it. 22 When this had been done and some time had passed and when the sun, which had been clouded over, shone out, a great fire was kindled so that all marvelled. 23 And while the sacrifice was being consumed, the priests offered prayer—the priests and everyone. Ionathas led, and the rest responded, as did Neemias. 24 The prayer was to this effect:

"O Lord, Lord God, Creator of all things, you are awe-inspiring and strong and just and merciful; you alone are kind and are kind; 25 you alone are bountiful; you alone are just and almighty and everlasting. You rescue Israel from every evil; you chose the fathers and sanctified them. 26 Accept this sacrifice and let us know that you have need of them, send people to get them for you.

O Lord, Creator of all things, you are awe-inspiring and strong and just and merciful; you alone are kind and are kind; 25 you alone are bountiful; you alone are just and almighty and everlasting. You rescue Israel from every evil; you chose the fathers and sanctified them. 26 Accept this sacrifice on behalf of all your people Israel, and preserve your portion, and make it holy. 27 Gather together our scattered people; set free those who are slaves among the nations; look on those who are rejected and despised, and let the nations know that you are our God. 28 Punish those who oppress and are insolent with pride. 29 Plant your people in your holy place, as Moyses said."

30 Then the priests sang the hymns. 31 After the materials of the sacrifice had been consumed, Neemias ordered that the water that was left should be poured on large stones. 32 When this was done, a flame blazed up, but when the light from the altar shone back, it was consumed. 33 When this matter became known and it was reported to the king of the Persians that, in the place where the sacrifice was being consumed, the priests had hidden the fire, the water had appeared, with which Neemias' men had purified the materials of the sacrifice, 34 the king investigated the matter and enclosed the place and made it sacred. 35 And with those persons whom the king favoured he exchanged many excellent gifts.

2 One finds in the records that the prophet Jeremias ordered those who were being deported to take some of the fire, as has been mentioned, 2 and that the prophet, after giving them the law, commanded those who were being deported not to forget the ordinances of the Lord or to be led astray in their thoughts on seeing the gold and silver statues and their adornment. 3 And with other similar words he exhorted them that the law should not depart from their hearts.

4 It was also in the document that the prophet, having received an oracle, ordered that the tent and the ark should follow with him and that he went out to the mountain where Moyses had gone up and had seen the inheritance of God. 5 Jeremias came and found a cave dwelling, and he brought there the tent and the ark and the altar of incense; then he sealed up the entrance. 6 Some of those who followed him came up intending to mark the way but could not find it. 7 When Jeremias learned of it, he rebuked them and declared, “The place shall remain unknown until God gathers his people together again and shows his mercy. 8 Then the Lord will disclose these things, and the glory of the Lord will appear, and the cloud, as it showed itself to Moyses, and as Salomon prayed that the place be specially sanctified.”

9 It was also told that, possessing wisdom, he offered sacrifice for the dedication and completion of the temple. 10 Just as Moyses prayed to the Lord and fire came down from heaven and ate up the sacrifices, so also Salomon prayed, and the fire came down and consumed the whole burnt offerings. 11 And Moyses said, “They were eaten up because the sin offering had not been eaten.” 12 Likewise Salomon also kept the eight days. 13 The same things are reported in the records and in the memoirs of Neemias, and also that he founded a library and collected the books about the kings and prophets, and the writings of David, and letters of kings about votive offerings. 14 In the same way Ioudas also collected all the books that had been lost on account of the war that had come upon us, and they are in our possession. 15 So if you have need of them, send people to get them for you.

16 Since, therefore, we are about to celebrate the purification, we write to you. You would do well to keep the days too. 17 It is God who has saved all his people and has returned the inheritance to all, and the kingship and the priesthood and the sanctification, 18 as he promised through the law. We therefore have hope in God that he will soon have mercy on us and will gather us from everywhere under heaven to his holy place, for he has rescued us from great evils and has cleansed the place.

19 The story of Ioudas Makkabaios and his brothers and the purification of the greatest temple and the dedication of the altar 20 and further the wars against Antiochus Epiphanes and his son Epator 21 and the appearances that came from heaven to those who behaved themselves manfully for Judaism so that though few in number they seized the whole land and pursued the barbarian hordes 22 and regained possession of the temple famous throughout the world and liberated the city and re-established the laws that were about to be abolished, while the Lord with great kindness became gracious to them— 23 all this, which has been set forth by Jason of Cyrene in five volumes, we shall attempt to condense into a single book. 24 For considering the flood of figures involved and the difficulty there is for those who wish to enter upon the narratives of history because of the mass of material, 25 we have aimed to please those who wish to read, to make it easy for those who are inclined to memorize and to profit all those who happen to read this. 26 For us who have undertaken the toil of

While the holy city was inhabited in unbroken peace and the laws were strictly observed because of the piety of the high priest Onias and his hatred of wickedness, it came about that the kings themselves honored the place and glorified the temple with the finest presents, even to the extent that Seleucus, the king of Asia, defrayed from his own revenues all the expenses connected with the ministry of the sacrifices.

But a man named Simon, of the tribe of Balgea, who had been made captain of the temple, had a disagreement with the high priest about the administration of the city market. Since he could not prevail over Onias, he went to Apollonius son of Phænæaus, who at that time was governor of Coele-Syria and Phœnícia, and reported to him that the treasury in Hierosolyma was full of untold sums of money, so that the amount of the funds could not be reckoned, and that they did not belong to the account of the sacrifices, but that it was possible for them to fall under the control of the king. When Apollonius met the king, he told him of the money about which he had been informed. And he chose Heliodorus, who was in charge of his affairs, and sent him with commands to effect the removal of the reported wealth. Heliodorus at once set out on his journey, ostensibly to make a tour of inspection of the cities of Coele-Syria and Phœnícia but in fact to carry out the king’s purpose.

When he had arrived at Hierosolyma and had been kindly welcomed by the high priest of the city, he told about the disclosure that had been made and stated why he had come. But he inquired whether this really was the situation. The high priest explained that there were some deposits belonging to widows and orphans and also some money of Hyrcanus son of Tobias, a man of very prominent position, and that it talled in all four hundred talents of silver and two hundred of gold. To such an extent the impious Simon had misrepresented the facts. And he said that it was utterly impossible that wrong should be done to those people who had trusted in the holiness of the place and in the sanctity and inviolability of the temple that is honored throughout the whole wide world.

But the other one, because of the commands he had from the king, said that this money must in any case be confiscated for the king’s treasury. So he set a day and went in to direct the inspection of these funds.

There was no little distress throughout the whole city. The priests prostrated themselves before the altar in their priestly vestments and called toward heaven upon him who had given the law about deposits, that he should keep them safe for those who had deposited them. To see the appearance of the high priest was to be wounded at heart, for his face and the change in his color disclosed the anguish of his soul. For terror and bodily trembling had come over the man, which plainly showed to those who looked at him the pain lodged in his heart.

People also were hurrying out of their houses in crowds to the supplication of the entire people because the holy place was about to be brought into dishonor. Women, girded with sackcloth under their breasts, thronged the streets. Of the virgins who were kept indoors, some ran together to the gates and some to the walls, while others peered out of the windows. And holding up their hands to heaven, they all made supplication. There was something pitiable in the prostration of the whole populace and the anxiety of the high priest in his great anguish.

While they were calling upon the Almighty Lord that he would keep what had been entrusted safe and secure for those who had entrusted it, Heliodorus went on with what had been decided. But when he was present at the treasury with his bodyguards, then and there the Sovereign of spirits and of all authority caused so great a manifestation, that all who had been so bold as to accompany him were astounded by the power of God and became faint with terror. For there appeared to them a magnificently caparisoned horse with a frightening rider; it rushed furiously at Heliodorus and struck at him with its front hoofs. He who sat upon it was seen to have a full golden harness. Two young men also appeared to him, remarkably strong, gloriously beautiful and splendidly dressed, who stood on either side of him and flogged him continuously, inflicting many blows on him. When he suddenly fell to the ground and deep darkness came over him, they took him up, put him on a stretcher and carried him, who had just entered the aforesaid treasury with a great retinue and all his bodyguard but was now with all his weapons unable to help himself, away. They thus clearly recognized the dominance of God.

While he lay prostrate, speechless because of
The previously mentioned Simon, who had informed about the money against his own country, slandered Onias, saying that it was he who had incited Heliodorus and had been the real cause of the evils. He dared to designate as a plotter against the government the man who was the benefactor of the city, the protector of his compatriots and a zealot for the laws. When his hatred progressed to such a degree that even murders were committed by one of Simon's approved agents, Onias recognized that the rivalry was serious and that Apollonius son of Menestheus, and governor of Cœle-Syria and Phoenicia, was intensifying the malice of Simon. So he appealed to the king, not accusing his compatriots but having in view the welfare, both public and private, of all the people. For he saw that without the king's attention public affairs could not again reach a peaceful settlement and that Simon would not stop his folly.

When Seleucus died and Antiochus, who was called Epiphanes, succeeded to the kingdom, Jason the brother of Onias obtained the high priesthood by corruption, promising the king at an interview three hundred sixty talents of silver and from another source of revenue eighty talents. In addition to this he promised to pay one hundred fifty more, if permission were given to establish by his authority a gymnasium and a body of youth for it and to draw up the list of the ‘Antiochenes’ amongst those in Hierosolyma. When the king assented and he came to office, he at once shifted his compatriots over to the Greek way of life.

11 He set aside the existing humane royal concessions to the Judeans, secured through Ioannes the father of Eupolemus, who went on the mission to establish friendship and alliance with the Romans, and he destroyed the policy’s lawful ways of living and introduced new customs contrary to the law. He took delight in establishing a gymnasium right under the acropolis, and subjugating them, he induced the noblest of the young men to wear the Greek hat. There was such an extreme of hellenization and increase in the adoption of Hellenism because of the surpassing wickedness of Jason, who was impious and no true high priest, that the priests were no longer intent upon their ministry at the altar. Rather, despising the shrine and neglecting the sacrifices, they hurried to take part in the unlawful distribution of the oil because of the surpassing wickedness of hellenization and increase in the adoption of Hellenism because of the surpassing wickedness of Jason, who was impious and no true high priest,

4 Onias recognized that the rivalry was serious and that Apollonius son of Menestheus, and governor of Cœle-Syria and Phoenicia, was intensifying the malice of Simon. So he appealed to the king, not accusing his compatriots but having in view the welfare, both public and private, of all the people. For he saw that without the king’s attention public affairs could not again reach a peaceful settlement and that Simon would not stop his folly.

he, when presented to the king, extolled him with an air of authority and secured the high priesthood for himself, outbidding Jason by three hundred talents of silver. 25 After receiving the king’s commands he returned, possessing no qualification for the high priesthood but having the hot temper of a cruel tyrant and the rage of a savage wild beast. 26 So Jason, who after supplanting his own brother was supplanted by another man, was driven as a fugitive into the land of Ammon. 27 Although Menelaus continued to hold the office, he did not pay regularly any of the money promised to the king. 28 So when Sostratus the captain of the acropolis kept requesting payment—for the collection of the revenue was his responsibility—the two of them were summoned by the king on account of this issue. 29 Menelaus left his own brother Lysimachus as deputy in the high priesthood, while Sostratus left Crates, the commander of the Cyprian troops.

30 While such was the state of affairs, it happened that the people of Tarsus and of Mallus revolted because their cities had been given as a present to Antiochis, the king’s concubine. 31 So the king went hurriedly to settle the trouble, leaving Andronicus, a man of high rank, to act as his deputy. 32 But Menelaus, thinking he had obtained a suitable opportunity, stole some of the gold vessels of the temple and gave them to Andronicus; other vessels, as it happened, he had sold to Tyre and the neighboring cities. 33 When Onias became fully aware of these acts, he publicly exposed them, having first withdrawn to a place of sanctuary at Daphne near Antioch. 34 Therefore Menelaus, taking Andronicus aside, urged him to kill Onias. Andronicus came to Onias, and resorting to treachery, offered him sworn pledges and gave him his right hand; he persuaded him, though still suspicious, to come out from the place of sanctuary; then, with no regard for justice, he immediately put him out of the way.

35 For this reason not only Judeans, but many also of other nations, were grieved and displeased at the unjust slaughter of the man. 36 When the king returned from the region of Cilicia, the Judeans in the city appealed to him with regard to the unreasonable murder of Onias, and the Greeks shared their hatred of the crime. 37 Therefore Antiochus was grieved at heart and filled with pity and wept because of the moderation and good conduct of the deceased. 38 Inflamed with anger, he immediately stripped off the purple robe from Andronicus, tore off his clothes and led him around the whole city to that very place where he had committed the outrage against Onias, and there he removed the bloodthirsty fellow from the world. The Lord thus repaid him with the punishment he deserved.

39 When many acts of sacrilege had been committed in the city by Lysimachus with the connivance of Menelaus and when report of them had spread abroad, the populace gathered against Lysimachus, because many of the gold vessels had already been stolen. 40 Since the crowds were becoming aroused and filled with anger, Lysimachus armed about three thousand men and launched an unjust attack under the leadership of a certain Auranus, a man advanced in years and no less advanced in folly. 41 But when they became aware that Lysimachus was attacking them, some picked up stones, some blocks of wood, and others took handfuls of the ashes that were lying around and threw them in wild confusion at Lysimachus’ men. 42 As a result, they wounded many of them and killed some and put all the rest to flight; the temple robber himself they killed close by the treasury.

43 Charges were brought against Menelaus about this incident. 44 When the king came to Tyre, three men sent by the senate presented the case before him. 45 But Menelaus, already as good as beaten, promised a substantial bribe to Ptolemy son of Dorymenes to win over the king. 46 Therefore, Ptolemy, taking the king aside into a colonnade as if for refreshment, induced the king to change his mind. 47 Menelaus, the cause of all the trouble, he acquitted of the charges against him, while he sentenced to death those unfortunate men, who would have been freed uncondemned, if they had pleaded even before Scythians. 48 And so those who had spoken for the city and the villages and the holy vessels quickly suffered the unjust penalty. 49 Therefore even the Tyrians, showing their hatred of the crime, provided magnificently for their funeral. 50 But Menelaus, because of the greed of those in power, remained in office, growing in wickedness, having become the chief plotter against his compatriots.

5 About this time Antiochus made his second invasion of Egypt. 2 And it happened that, for almost forty days, there appeared over all the city golden-clad cavalry charging through the air, in companies fully armed with lances and drawn daggers—troops of cavalry drawn up, attacks and counterattacks made on this side and on that, brandishing of shields, massing of spears, hurling of missiles, the flash of golden trappings and armor of all kinds. 4 Therefore everyone prayed that the apparition might prove to have been a good omen.

5 When a false rumor arose that Antiochus was dead, Jason took no fewer than a thousand men and suddenly made an assault on the city. When the troops on the wall had been forced back and at last the city was being taken, Menelaus took refuge in the acropolis. 6 But Jason kept relentlessly slaughtering his compatriots, not realizing that success at the cost of one’s kindred is the greatest misfortune but imagining that he was setting up trophies of victory over enemies and not over compatriots. 7 He did not, however, gain control of the government; in the end he got only disgrace from his conspiracy and fled again into the Ammonitis. 8 Finally he met a miserable end. Accused before

Aretas the ruler of the Arabs, fleeing from city to city, pursued by everyone, hated as a rebel against the laws and abhorred as the executioner of his country and his compatriots, he was cast ashore in Egypt. 9 There he, who had driven many from their own country into exile, died in exile, having embarked to go to the Spartans in hope of finding protection because of their kinship. 10 He who had cast out many to lie unburied had no one to mourn for him; he had no funeral of any sort and no place in his ancestral tomb.

11 When news of what had happened reached the king, he took it to mean that Judea was in revolt. So, raging inwardly, he left Egypt and took the city by force. 12 He commanded his soldiers to cut down relentlessly everyone they met and to kill those who went into their houses. 13 Then there were massacres of young and old, destruction of women and children, slayings of virgins and infants. 14 Within the total of three days eighty thousand were destroyed, forty thousand in hand-to-hand fighting, and as many were sold into slavery as were killed.

15 Not content with this, Antiochus dared to enter the most holy temple in all the world, guided by Menelaus, who had become a traitor both to the laws and to his country, 16 taking the sacred vessels with his polluted hands and pulling down with profane hands the votive offerings that other kings had made to enhance the glory and honor of the place. 17 Antiochus was elated in spirit and did not perceive that the Lord was angered for a little while because of the sins of those who lived in the city and that this was the reason he was disregarding the place. 18 But if it had not happened that they were involved in many sins, this man would have been flogged and turned back from his rash act as soon as he came forward, just as Heliodorus had been, whom King Seleucus sent to inspect the treasury. 19 But the Lord did not choose the nation for the sake of the place, but the place for the sake of the nation. 20 Therefore the place itself shared in its misfortunes that befell the nation and afterward participated in its benefits, and what was forsaken in the wrath of the Almighty was restored again in all its glory when the great Lord became reconciled.

21 So Antiochus carried off eighteen hundred talents from the temple and hurried away to Antioch, thinking in his arrogance that he could make the land navigable and the sea passable on foot, because his heart was elated. 22 He left governors to oppress the people: at Hierosolyma, Philip, by birth a Phrygian and in character more barbarous than the man who appointed him; 23 and on Garizim, Andronicus, and besides these Menelaus, who lorded it over the citizens worse than the others did because of his malice toward the Judean citizens. 24 Antiochus sent Apollonius, the captain of the Mysians, with an army of twenty-two thousand and ordered him to kill all the grown men and to sell the women and boys as slaves. 25 When this man arrived in Hierosolyma, he pretended to be peacefully disposed and waited until the holy sabbath day; then, finding the Judeans not at work, he ordered his troops to parade under arms. 26 He put to the sword all those who came out to see them, then rushed into the city with his armed warriors and killed great numbers of people.

27 But Ioudas Makkabaios, with about nine others, got away to the wilderness and kept himself and his companions alive in the mountains as wild animals do; they continued to live on what grew wild so that they might not share in the defilement.

6 Not long after this, the king sent an Athenian senator to compel the Judeans to forsake their ancestral laws and no longer to live by the laws of God—also to pollute the shrine in Hierosolyma and to call it the shrine of Olympian Zeus and to call the one on Garizim the shrine of Zeus-the-Friend-of-Strangers, as the people who lived in that place had petitioned.

3 Harsh and utterly grievous was the onslaught of evil. 4 For the temple was filled with debauchery and revelling by the nations, who dallied with prostitutes and had intercourse with women within the sacred precincts, and besides brought in things for sacrifice that were unfit. 5 The altar was covered with abominable offerings that were forbidden by the laws. 6 People could neither keep the sabbath nor observe their ancestral feasts nor so much as confess themselves to be Judeans.

7 On the monthly celebration of the king’s birthday, the Judeans were taken, under bitter constraint, to partake of the sacrifices, and when a feast of Dionysus was celebrated, they were compelled to wear wreaths of ivy and to walk in the procession in honor of Dionysus. 8 At the suggestion of Ptolemy a vote was issued to the neighboring Greek cities that they should adopt the same ritual, to partake of the sacrifices and should kill those who did not choose to change over to Greek customs. One could see, therefore, the misery that had come upon them. 9 For example, two women were brought in for having circumcised their children. They publicly paraded them around the city with their babies hanging at their breasts and then hurled them down headlong from the wall. 10 Others who had assembled in the caves nearby in order to observe the seventh day secretly were betrayed to Philip and were all burned together, because their piety kept them from defending themselves, in view of their regard for that most holy day.

12 Now I urge those who read this book not to be depressed by such calamities, but to recognize that these punishments were designed not to destroy but to discipline our people. 13 In fact, it is a sign of great kindness not to let the impious alone for long but to punish them immediately. 14 For in the case of the other nations the Lord waits patently to punish them until they have reached the full measure of their sins, but he does not deal in this way with us 15in order that he may not take vengeance on us afterward, when our sins have reached their height. 16Therefore he never withdraws his mercy from us. While he disciplines us with calamities, he does not forsake his own people. 17Let what we have said serve as a reminder; we must go on briefly with the story.

18 Eleazaros, one of the scribes in high position, a man now advanced in age and of noble presence, was being forced to open his mouth to eat swine’s flesh. 19But he, welcoming death with honor rather than life with pollution, went up to the rack of his own accord, spitting out the flesh, 20as all ought to do who have the courage to refuse things that it is not right to taste, even for the natural love of life.

21 Those who were in charge of that unlawful sacrifice took the man aside because of their long acquaintance with him and privately urged him to bring meat of his own providing, proper for him to use, and to pretend that he was eating the flesh of the sacrificial meal that had been ordered by the king 22so that by doing this he might be saved from death and be treated kindly on account of his nation.

7 It happened also that seven brothers and their mother were arrested and were being compelled by the king, under torture with whips and thongs, to partake of unlawful swine’s flesh. 2One of them, acting as their spokesman, said, “What do you intend to ask and learn from us? For we are ready to die rather than transgress our ancestral laws.”

3 The king fell into a rage and ordered to have frying-pans and cauldrons heated. 4These were heated immediately, and he ordered that the tongue of their spokesman be cut out and that they scalp him and cut off his hands and feet, while the rest of the brothers and the mother looked on. 5When he was utterly helpless, the king ordered them to take him to the fire, still breathing, and to fry him in a pan. The smoke from the frying-pan spread widely, but the brothers and their mother encouraged one another to die nobly, saying, 6“The Lord God is watching over us and in truth has compassion on us, as Moyeses declared in his song that bore witness against the people to their faces, when he said, ‘And he will have compassion on his slaves.’ ”

7 After the first brother had died in this way, they brought forward the second for their sport. They tore off the skin of his head with the hair and asked him, “Will you eat rather than have your body punished limb by limb?” 8He replied in his ancestral language and said to them, “No.” Therefore he in turn underwent tortures as the first had done. 9And when he was at his last breath, he said, “You accursed wretch, you dismiss us from this present life, but the King of the universe will raise us up to an everlasting renewal of life, because we have died for his laws.”

10 After him, the third was the victim of their sport. When it was demanded, he quickly put out his tongue and courageously stretched forth his hands 11and said nobly, “I got these from Heaven, and because of his laws I disdain them, and from him I hope to get them back again.” 12As a result the king himself and those with him were astonished at the young man’s spirit, for he regarded his sufferings as nothing.

13 After he too had died, they maltreated and tortured the fourth in the same way. 14When he was near death, he said, “It is desirable that those who die at the hands of human beings should cherish the hope God gives of being raised again by him. But for you there will be no resurrection to life!”

15 Next they brought forward the fifth and maltreated him. 16But he looked at him and said, “Because you have authority among human beings, though you also are mortal, you do what you please. But do not think that our people have been forsaken by God. 17Keep on, and see how his mighty power will torture you and your descendants!”

18 After him they brought forward the sixth. And when he was about to die, he said, “Do not suade her son. 27 But, leaning close to him, she much urging on his part, she undertook to per-taken care of you. 28 I implore you, my child, to brought you up to this point in your life and have 20 The mother was especially admirable and worthy of honorable memory. Although she saw her seven sons perish within the course of a single day, she bore it with good courage because of her hope in the Lord. 21 She encouraged each of them in their ancestral language. Filled with a noble spirit, she reinforced her woman’s reasoning with a man’s courage and said to them, 22 “I do not know how you came into being in my womb. It was not I who gave you life and breath, nor I who set in order the elements within each of you. 23 Therefore the Creator of the world, who shaped the origin of man and devised the origin of all things, will in his mercy give life and breath back to you again, since you now forget yourselves for and to the widows and orphans and distributed some of the spoils to those who had been tortured and gloriously. But Makkabaios gathered his tbers and because he had called them by his holy name. He ever met them, if not for their own sake, then for the sake of the covenants made with their fathers and because he had called them by his holy and glorious name. But Makkabaios gathered his forces together, to the number six thousand, and exhorted them not to be frightened by the enemy and not to fear the great multitude of nations, who were wickedly coming against them, but to fight nobly, keeping before their eyes the outrage that they had lawlessly committed against the holy place and the torture of the derided city and, besides, the destruction of the ancestral polity. For they trust to arms and acts of daring,” he said, “but we trust in the Almighty God, who is able with a single nod to strike down those who are coming against us and even, if necessary, the whole world.”

Moreover, he told them of the occasions when help came to their ancestors; how, in the time of Sennachereim, when one hundred and eighty-five thousand perished, and the time of the battle against the Galatians that took place in Babylonia, how they saw action, eight thousand of them in all, along with four thousand Macedonians; yet when the Macedonians were at a loss, the eight thousand, by the help that came to them from heaven, destroyed one hundred twenty thousand Galatians and took a great amount of booty.

With these words he filled them with courage and made them ready to die for the laws and the fatherland; then he divided his army into four parts. He appointed his brothers also, Simon and Iosepos and Jonathan, as leaders of each division, putting fifteen hundred men under each. Besides, he appointed Eleazaros to read aloud from the holy book and gave the watchword, “Divine Help”; then, leading the first maniple himself, he joined battle with Nikanor.

With the Almighty as their ally, they killed more than nine thousand of the enemy and wounded and disabled most of Nikanor’s army and forced them all to flee. They captured the money of those who had come to buy them as slaves. After pursuing them for quite some time, they returned because they were pressed for time.

It was the day before the sabbath, and for that reason they did not continue their pursuit. When they had gathered their own arms together and had stripped the arms off their enemies, they kept the sabbath, giving great praise and acknowledgement to the Lord, who had preserved them until this day and allotted it to them as the beginning of mercy. After the sabbath, they gave some of the spoils to those who had been tortured and to the widows and orphans and distributed the rest among themselves and their children. When they had done this, they made common supplication and implored the merciful Lord to be wholly reconciled with his slaves.

In encounters with the forces of Timothy and Bacchides they killed more than twenty thousand of them and very easily got possession of some exceedingly high strongholds, and they divided a very large amount of spoils, giving to those who had been tortured and to the orphans and widows and also to the aged shares equal to their own. Having gathered their armor together, and they carefully stored all of them in strategic places; the rest of the spoils they carried to Hierosolyma. They killed the commander of Timothy’s forces, a most wicked man, and one who had greatly troubled the Judeans. While they were celebrating the victory in the fatherland, they burned those who had set fire to the sacred gates and Callis-thenes, who had fled into one little house; so these received the proper reward for their impiety.

The thrice-accursed Nikanor, who had brought the thousand merchants to buy the Judeans, having been humble with the help of the Lord by opponents whom he regarded as of the least account, took off his splendid uniform and made his way alone like a runaway slave through the interior and reached Antioch, having succeeded chiefly in the destruction of his army! So who had taken it upon himself to secure tribute for the Romans by the capture of the people of Hierosolyma proclaimed that the Judeans had a Defender and that therefore the Judeans were invulnerable, because they followed the laws ordained by him.

About that time, as it happened, Antiochus had retreated in disorder from the region of Persia. He had entered the city called Persepolis and attempted to rob the temples and control the city. Therefore the people rushed to the rescue with arms and put him to flight, and it happened that Antiochus, having been put to flight by the inhabitants, beat a shameful retreat. While he was in Ecbatana, news came to him of what had happened to Nikanor and the forces of Timothy. Transported with rage, he conceived the idea of turning upon the Judeans the injury done by those who had put him to flight; so he instructed his charioteer to drive without stopping until he completed the journey. But the judgment of heaven rode with him! For in his arrogance he said, “When I get there I will make Hierosolyma a cemetery of Judeans.”

But the all-seeing Lord, the God of Israel, struck him with an incurable and invisible blow. As soon as he stopped speaking he was seized with a pain in his bowels for which there was no relief, and with sharp internal tortures—and that very justly, for he had tortured the bowels of others with many and strange inflictions. Yet he did not in any way stop his insolence but was even more filled with arrogance, breathing fire in his rage against the Judeans and giving orders to speed up the journey. And so it came about that he fell out of his chariot as it was rushing along and that, through the grievous fall, all the limbs of the body were racked. Thus he, who only a little while before had thought in his superhuman arrogance that he could command the waves of the sea and had imagined that he could weigh the high moun-pens in a balance, was brought down to earth and carried in a litter, making the power of God manifest to all, so that worms broke out of the unbeliever’s eyes, and while he was still living in anguish and pain, his flesh rotted away, and because of his stench the whole army felt revulsion at the decay. Because of the unbearable oppressiveness of the stench no one was able to carry the man who a little while before had thought that he could touch the stars of heaven. Then it was that, broken in spirit, he began to lose much of his arrogance and to come to his senses under the divine scourge, for he was tortured with pain every moment. And when he could not endure his own stench, he uttered these words, “It is right to be subject to God and that a mortal should not think haughtily.”

Then the abominable fellow made a vow to the Lord, who would no longer have mercy on him, stating that the holy city, which he was hurrying to level to the ground and to make a cemetery, was now declaring to be free, and the Judeans, whom he had not considered worthy of a grave but had planned to throw out with the neighbors of my kingdom keep watching for opportunities and waiting to see what will happen, I have appointed my son Antiochus to be king, whom I have often entrusted and commended to most of you when I hurried off to the upper provinces, and I have written to him what is written here. Therefore urge and implore you to remember the public and private services rendered to you and to maintain your present goodwill, each of you, toward me and my son. For I am sure that he will follow my policy and will accommodate himself to you mildly and with kindness.

So the murderer and blasphemer, having endured the most intense suffering, such as he had inflicted on others, came to the end of his life by a most pitiable fate among the mountains in a strange land. And Philip, who had been brought up with him, took his body home; then, fearing the son of Antiochus, he withdrew to Ptolemy Philometor in Egypt.

Now Makkabaios and his followers, the Lord leading them on, recovered the temple and the city; they tore down the altars that had been built in the public square by the allophyles and also destroyed the sacred precincts. And having purified the shrine, they made another altar of sacrifice; then, igniting flint stones and taking fire out of them, they offered sacrifices, after a lapse of two years, and they offered incense and put up lamps and set out the presentation of the loaves. When they had done this, they fell prostrate and implored the Lord that they might never again fall into such misfortunes, but that, if they should ever sin, they might be disciplined by him with forbearance and not be handed over to blasphemous and barbarous nations. It happened that on the same day on which the shrine had been profaned by allophyles the purification of the shrine took place, that is, on the twenty-fifth day of the same month, which was Chaseleu. They celebrated it for eight days with rejoicing, in the manner of coverts, remembering how not long before, during the feast of tents, they had been inhabiting the mountains and caves like wild animals. Therefore, carrying ivy-wreathed wands and beautiful branches and also fronds of palm, they offered hymns of thanksgiving to him who had given success to the purification of his own holy place. They decreed by public ordinance and by vote that the whole nation of the Judeans should observe these days every year.

Such then was the end of Antiochus, who was called Epiphanes.
tain peaceful relations with them. 13 As a result he was accused before Eupator by the king’s Friends. He heard himself called a traitor at every turn, because he had abandoned Cyprus, which Philometor had entrusted to him, and had gone over to Antiochus Epiphanes. Unable to execute his noble office honorably, he took poison and ended his life.

14 When Gorgias became governor of the region, he maintained mercenaries, and at every turn kept attacking the Judeans. 15 Besides this, the Idumeans, too, who had control of strategic strongholds, were harassing the Judeans; they received those who were banished from Hierosolyma and endeavored to keep up the war. 16 But Makkabaioi and his forces, after making solemn supplication and imploring God to fight on their side, moved towards the strongholds of the Idumeans. 17 Attacking them vigorously, they possessed gain of the places and beat off all who fought upon the wall and slaughtered those whom they encountered, killing no fewer than twenty thousand.

18 When at least nine thousand took refuge in two fortified towers exceedingly well equipped to withstand a siege, 19 Makkabaioi left Simon and Iosepos and also Zakchais and his troops, a force sufficient to besiege them, and he himself set off for places where he was more urgently needed. 20 But those with Simon, who were money-hungry, were bribed with silver by some of those who were in the towers, and on receiving seventy thousand drachmas, let some of them slip away. 21 When word of what had happened came to Makkabaioi, he gathered the leaders of the people and accused these men of having sold their kindred for money by setting free those who were hostile to them. 22 Then he killed these men who had turned traitor and immediately captured the two towers. 23 Having success at arms in everything he undertook, he destroyed more than twenty thousand in the two strongholds.

24 Now Timothy, who had been defeated by the Judeans before, having gathered a tremendous force of mercenaries and having collected the cavalry from Asia in so small number, came on, intending to take Judea by storm. 25 As he drew near, Makkabaioi and his men sprinkled dust on their heads and girded their loins with sackcloth in supplication to God, and 26 falling down at the foot of the altar, they implored him to be gracious to them and to be an enemy to their enemies and an adversary to their adversaries, as the law shows plainly. 27 And rising from their prayer, they took up their arms and advanced a considerable distance from the city, and when they came near the enemy, they halted. 28 Just as morning was breaking both attacked, the one having as pledge of success and victory not only their valor but also their recourse to the Lord, while the other made rage their leader in the fight.

29 When the battle became fierce, there appeared to the enemy from heaven five illustrious men on horses with golden bridles, and they were leading the Judeans. 30 Two of them took Makkabaioi between them, and shielding him with their own suits of armor and weapons, they kept him unharmed. They showered arrows and thunderbolts on the enemy so that, confounded by blindness, they fled in complete disorder. 31 Twenty thousand five hundred were slaughtered, besides six hundred cavalry.

32 Timothy himself fled to a stronghold called Gazar, especially well garrisoned, where Chaereas was commander. 33 Then Makkabaioi and his men were glad, and they besieged the fort for four days. 34 The men within, relying on the strength of the place, kept blaspheming terribly and uttering wicked words. 35 But at dawn of the fifth day, twenty young men of those who were with Makkabaioi, fired with anger because of the blasphemies, bravely stormed the wall and with savage fury cut down everyone they met. 36 Others who came up in the same way wheeled around against the defenders and set fire to the towers; they kindled fires and burned the blasphemers alive. Others broke open the gates and let in the rest of the force, and they captured the city. 37 They killed Timothy, who was hiding in a cistern, and his brother Chaereas and Apollophanes. 38 When they had accomplished these things, with hymns and thanksgivings they blessed the Lord who shows great kindness to Israel and gives them the victory.

11 Very soon after this, Lysias, the king’s guardian and kinsman, who was in charge of the government, being vexed at what had happened, 2 gathered about eighty thousand infantry and all his cavalry and came against the Judeans. He intended to make the city a home for Greeks and to levy tribute on the temple as he did on the other sacred precincts of the nations and to put up the high priesthood for sale every year. 4 He took no account whatever of the power of God but was elated with his ten thousands of infantry and his thousands of cavalry and his eighty elephants. 5 Invading Judea, he approached Baithsoura, which was a fortified place about five stadia from Hierosolyma, and pressed it hard.

6 When Makkabaioi and his men heard that he was besieging the strongholds, they prayed to the Lord, together with the masses, with lamentations and tears, to send a good angel to save Israel. 7 Makkabaioi himself was the first to take up arms, and he urged the others to run the risk, together with him, of aiding their brothers. Then they eagerly rushed off together. 8 And there, while they were near Hierosolyma, a horseman appeared as their leader, in a white garment, brandishing weapons of gold. 9 Together they all praised the merciful God and were strengthened in spirit, ready to assail not only humans but also the wildest animals or walls of iron. 10 They advanced in battle order, having their heavily ally, for the Lord had mercy on them. 11 They hurled themselves like lions against the enemy and laid low eleven thousand of them and sixteen hundred cavalry and forced all the rest to flee. 12 Most of them were preserved wounded and naked, and Lysias himself escaped by disgraceful flight.

13 As he was not without intelligence, he pondered over the defeat that had befallen him and realized that the Hebrews were invincible, because the mighty God fought on their side. So he sent to them and persuaded them to agree to all just conditions, since he would persuade the king, constraining him to be their friend. 14 Makkabaios, having regard for the common good, agreed to all that Lysias urged. For the king granted every request which Makkabaios delivered to Lysias in writing concerning the Judeans.

16 The letters written to the Judeans by Lysias were to this effect:

"Lysias to the multitude of the Judeans, greetings. 17 Ioannes and Abessalom, who were sent by you, have delivered your petition copied below and have implored about the matters indicated in it. 18 I have informed the king of everything that needed to be brought before him, and he has agreed to what was possible. 19 If you will maintain your goodwill toward the government, I will endeavour in the future to help promote your welfare. 20 And concerning details, I have commanded them and my members of staff to confer with you. 21 Farewell. The one hundred forty-eighth year, Dioscorinthius twenty-fourth."

22 The king's letter ran thus:

"King Antiochus to his brother Lysias, greetings. 23 Now that our father has gone on to the gods, we, desiring that the subjects of the kingdom be undisturbed in caring for their own affairs, hearing that the Judeans do not consent to our father's change to Greek customs but prefer their own way of living and implore that their own precepts be allowed them, thus choosing that this nation also should be free from disturbance, judge that their temple be restored to them and that they shall live according to the customs of their ancestors. 26 You will do well, therefore, to send word to them and give them pledges of friendship so that they may know our policy and be of good cheer and turn happily to the conduct of their own affairs."

27 To the nation the king's letter was as follows:

"King Antiochus to the senate of the Judeans and to the other Judeans, greetings. 28 If you are well, it is as we desire. We also are in good health. 29 Menelaus has informed us that you wish to return and look after your own affairs. 30 Therefore those who go home by the thirtieth of Xanthikos will have our pledge of friendship and safe conduct for the Judeans to enjoy their own way of living and laws, just as formerly, and none of them shall be molested in any way for errors made through ignorance. 32 And I have also sent Menelaus to encourage you. 33 Farewell. The one hundred forty-eighth year, Xanthikos fifteenth."

34 The Romans also sent them a letter, which read thus:

"Quintus Memmius, Titus Manius, envoys of the Romans, to the people of the Judeans, greetings. 35 With regard to what Lysias the Kinman of the king has granted you, we also give consent. 36 But as to the matters that he decided are to be referred to the king: Having considered them, send someone immediately so that we can outline how it would be appropriate for you, since we are on our way to Antioch. 37 Therefore make haste and send messengers so that we, too, may get to know what your viewpoint is. 38 Farewell. The one hundred forty-eighth year, Xanthikos fifteenth."

12 When these agreements had been reached, Lysias departed on his way to the king, and the Judeans went about their farming.

2 But some of the local governors, Timothy and Apollonius son of Gennais, as well as Hieronymos and Demophon, and in addition to these Nikanor the governor of Cyprus, would not let them live quietly and in peace. 3 And the Joppites did so ungodly a deed as this: they invited the Judeans who lived among them to embark, with their wives and children, on boats that they had provided, as though there were no ill will towards them, and this was done by public vote of the city. When they accepted, because they wished to live peaceably and suspected nothing, they drowned them as soon as they had gone out to sea, at least two hundred. 5 When Ioudas heard of the abomination inflicted on his compatriots, he gave orders to his men and, calling upon God the righteous judge, attacked the murderers of his kindred. He set fire to the harbor by night, burned the boats and massacred those who had taken refuge there.

7 Then, because the town was shut in its walls, he withdrew, intending to come again and root out the whole community of the Joppites. 8 But learning that the people in Jamnia, too, meant in the same way to wipe out the Judeans who were living among them, he attacked the Jamnites by night and set fire to the harbor and the fleet so that the gleam of the light was seen in Hierosolyma, two hundred and forty stadia distant.

10 When they had gone nine stadia from there, on their march against Timothy, Arabs attacked him, no fewer than five thousand with five hundred cavalry. 11 After a hard fight, Ioudas' men, with God's help, were successful, and the nomads, being defeated, implored Ioudas to grant them pledges of friendship, promising to give Ioudas and his men sheep and cattle and to help them in other ways. 12 Ioudas, realizing that they might indeed be useful in many ways, agreed to make peace with them, and after receiving his pledges, they went back to their tents.

13 He also attacked a certain town that was strongly fortified with earthen ramparts and enclosed by walls and inhabited by all sorts of nations. Its name was Kaspin. 14 Those who lived within, relying on the strength of the walls and on their supply of provisions, behaved most insolently toward Ioudas’ men, railing at them and even blasphemy and saying what is not lawful. 15 But Ioudas’ men, invoking the great Sovereign of the world, who without battering rams or engines of war overthrew Jericho in the days of lesous, rushed upon the walls like wild animals and took the town by the will of God and committed innumerable slaughters so that the adjoining lake, two stadia wide, appeared to be irrigated and filled up with blood.

17 When they had gone seven hundred and fifty stadia from there, they came to the fortification, to the Judeans who are called Toubiaeni. 18 They did not find Timothy in that region, however, for he had by then left the region without accomplishing anything, but a garrison, exceedingly strong, left behind by him in one place. 19 Dositheos and Sosipatros, from among the leaders who were with Makkabaios, marched out and destroyed those who had been left behind by Timothy in the stronghold, more than ten thousand men. 20 But Makkabaios arranged the army that was with him in cohorts and set men in command of the divisions and hurried after Timothy, who had with him one hundred twenty thousand infantry and two thousand five hundred cavalry. 21 When he learned of the approach of Ioudas, Timothy sent off the women and the children and also the other members of the household to a place called Karnion, for that place was hard to besiege and difficult of access because of the narrowness of all the approaches. 22 But when Ioudas’ first division appeared and terror and fear came over the enemies at the manifestation to them of him who sees all things, in their flight they rushed headlong in every direction so that often they were injured by their own men and pierced by the points of their own rapiers. 23 Ioudas pressed the pursuit with the utmost vigor, putting the sinners to the sword, and destroyed as many as thirty thousand.

24 Timothy himself fell into the hands of Dositheos and Sosipatros and their men and with great guile he implored them to let him go in safety, because he held the parents of most of them and the brothers of some to whom no consideration would otherwise be shown. 25 And when with many words he had confirmed his solemn promise to restore them unharmed, they let him go, for the sake of saving their kindred.

26 Then Ioudas marched against Karnion and the temple of Atargatis and slaughtered twenty-five thousand people. 27 After the rout and destruction of these, he marched also against Ephron, a fortified town where multitudes of people of all nationalities lived. 28 Stalwart young men took their stand before the walls and made a vigorous defence, and great stores of war engines and missiles were there. 29 But the Judeans called upon the Sovereign, who with power shatters the might of his enemies, and they got the town into their hands and killed as many as twenty-five thousand of those who were in it.
In the one hundred forty-ninth year word came to Ioudas and his men that Antiochus Eupator was coming with great numbers of soldiers against Judea, and with him Lysias, the guardian and chancellor, also a Greek force of one hundred ten thousand infantry, five thousand three hundred cavalry, twenty-two elephants and three hundred chariots bearing scythes.

3 Menelaus also joined them and with much hypocrisy urged Antiochus on, not to save the fatherland but because he thought that he would be established in government. But the King of kings aroused the anger of Antiochus against the sinner, and when Lysias informed him that this man was the originator of all the trouble, he ordered them to take him to Beroea and to put him to death by the method that is customary in that place. For there is a tower there, fifty cubits high, full of ashes, and it has a rim running around it that on all sides inclines precipitously into the ashes. There they all push to destruction anyone who is guilty of temple robbery or has committed an excess of other evils. By such a fate it came about that Menelaus the lawbreaker died without even burial in the earth, and this was eminently just; because he had committed many sins against the altar whose fire and ashes were holy, he met his death in ashes.

9 The king, who had become barbarous in his thinking, was coming to show the Judeans the worst things amongst those that had happened in his father’s time. But when Ioudas heard of this, he ordered the crowd to call upon the Lord day and night, now if ever to help those who were on the point of being deprived of the law and their country and the holy temple and not to allow the point of being deprived of the law and their country and the holy temple, realized that there was no way for him to be safe or to have access again to the holy altar and went to King Demetrius in the times of separation, realized that there was no way for him to be safe or to have access again to the holy altar and went to King Demetrius in the one hundred fifty-first year, presenting his men that Demetrius son of Seleucus had sailed into the harbour of Tripolis with a strong army and a fleet and had taken possession of the country, having made away with Antiochus and his guardian Lysias.

3 Now a certain Alcimus, who had formerly been high priest but had willfully defiled himself in the times of separation, realized that there was no way for him to be safe or to have access again to the holy altar and went to King Demetrius in about the one hundred fifty-first year, presenting to him a crown of gold and a palm and, besides these, some of the customary olive branches from the temple. During that day he kept quiet, but he seized the right moment for his own folly when he was invited by Demetrius to a meeting of the council and was asked in what condition and counsel the Judeans were he replied to this:

6 Those of the Judeans who are called Hasideans, whose leader is Ioudas Makkabaios, are keeping up war and stirring up sedition and will not let the kingdom attain stability. Therefore I have been deprived of my ancestral glory—I mean the high priesthood—and have now come here, first because I am genuinely concerned for the interests of the king, second because I have regard also for my compatriots. For through the folly of those whom I have mentioned earlier our whole people are now in no small misfortune.

9 Since you are acquainted, O king, with the details of this matter, may it please you to take thought for our country and our hard-pressed people as is commensurate with the affable kindness that you show to all. For as long as Ioudas lives, it is impossible for the government to find peace.”

13 After consulting privately with the elders, he determined to march out and decide the matter by the help of God before the king’s army could enter Judea and get possession of the city. So, committing the decision to the Creator of the world and exhorting those with him to fight bravely to the death for the laws, temple, city, fatherland and constitution, he pitched his camp near Modein. He gave his troops the watchword, “Divine Victory,” and with those young men judged best, he attacked the king’s pavilion at night and killed close to two thousand men in the camp and stabbed the lead elephant and its rider to death. In the end they filled the camp with terror and confusion and withdrew in triumph. This happened just as day was dawning, because the Lord’s shelter helped him.

18 The king, having had a taste of the daring of the Judeans, made an attempt on their positions through tricks. He advanced against Baithsoura, a strong fortress of the Judeans, was turned back, attacked again, was defeated. Joudas kept sending in to those inside whatever was necessary. But Rhodokos, a man from the ranks of the Judeans, gave secret information to the enemy; he was sought for and caught and put in prison. The king negotiated a second time with the people in Baithsoura, gave pledges, received theirs, withdrew, attacked Ioudas and his men, was defeated; he got word that Philip, who had been left in charge of the government in Antioch, had revolted; he was perturbed, called in the Judeans, yielded and swore to observe all their rights, settled with them and offered sacrifice, honored the shrine and showed generosity to the place. He received Makkabaios, left Hegemonides as governor from Ptolemais to Gerar and went to Ptolemais. The people of Ptolemais were indignant over the treaties. In fact, they were so furious that they wanted to annul their terms. Lysias took the rostrum, made the defence to the best of his ability, convinced them, appeased them, gained their goodwill and set out for Antioch. This is how the king’s attack and withdrawal turned out.

14 Three years later, word came to Ioudas and his men that Demetrius son of Seleucus had sailed into the harbour of Tripolis with a strong army and a fleet and had taken possession of the country, having made away with Antiochus and his guardian Lysias.

Friends, who were hostile to Ioudas, quickly inflamed Demetrius still more. 12He immediately chose Nikanor, who was the elephantarch, appointed him governor of Judea and sent him off with commands to do away with Ioudas, to scatter those with him, yet to install Alcimus as high priest of the greatest temple. 13And the nations throughout Judea, who had fled before Ioudas, met Nikanor in flocks, thinking that the misfortunes and calamities of the Judeans would mean prosperity for themselves.

15 When the Judeans heard of Nikanor’s coming and the gathering of the nations, they sprinkled dust on their heads and prayed to him who established his own people forever and always upholds his own heritage by manifesting himself. 16At the leader’s order, they set out from there immediately and met them at a village called Dessau. 17Simón the brother of Ioudas had encountered Nikanor but had temporarily stumbled because of the sudden perplexity caused by the adversaries.

18 Nevertheless Nikanor, hearing of the valor of Ioudas and his troops and their courage in battle for their country, shrank from deciding the issue by bloodshed. 19Therefore he sent Poseidonius, Theodotus and Mattathias to give and receive pledges of friendship. 20When they had been fully considered and the leader had informed the multitude and it had appeared that they were of one mind, they consented to the treaties. 21They set a day on which everyone was supposed to come to the same place by himself, and a chariot came forward from each side, and they set up seats of honor; 22Ioudas posted armed men in readiness at key places to prevent sudden treachery on the part of the enemy; so they duly held the consultation.

23 Nikanor stayed on in Hierosolyma and did nothing out of the way but dismissed the flocks of people that had gathered. 24And he kept Ioudas always in his presence; he was cordially attached to the man. 25He urged him to marry and have children; so Ioudas married, settled down, shared the common life.

26 But when Alcimus noticed their goodwill for one another, he took the treaties that had been made, went to Demetrius and told him that Nikanor was disloyal to the government, since he made plans to attack them with complete safety on the day of rest. 27The king became enraged and, provoked by the false accusations of that thoroughly depraved man, wrote to Nikanor, asserting that he was displeased with the treaties and commanding him to send Makkabaios to Antioch as a prisoner without delay.

28 When the news came to Nikanor, he was confounded and grieved that he had to annul the agreements when the man had done no wrong. 29Since it was not possible to oppose the king, he watched for a good opportunity to accomplish this by a stratagem. 30But Makkabaios, noticing that Nikanor was more austere in his dealings with him and conducted the customary meeting more rudi-savage and barbarously but show respect for the day that has been pre-eminently honored with holiness by him who sees all things," 3 the thrice-accursed wretch asked if there were a sovereign in heaven who had ordered the keeping of the sabbath day. 4 When they declared, "It is the living Lord himself, the Sovereign in heaven, who ordered us to observe the seventh day," 5 the other one said, "But I am a sovereign also, on earth, and I order you to take up arms and finish the king's business." Nevertheless, he did not succeed in carrying out his abominable design.

6 This Nikanor, showing off with all his boastfulness, had determined to erect a public monument of victory over loudas and his forces. 7 But Makkabaios did not cease to trust with all confidence that he would get help from the Lord. 8 He exhorted those with him not to fear the approach of the nations but to keep in mind the former times when help had come to them from heaven and so to look for the victory that the Almighty would give them. 9 Encouraging them from the law and the prophets and reminding them also of the struggles they had accomplished, he made them the more eager. 10 When he had aroused their courage, he issued orders, at the same time pointing out the perfidy of the nations and their violation of oaths. 11 He armed each of them not so much with confidence in shields and spears as with the encouragement of good words, and he cheered them all by relating a dream, a sort of vision, which was worthy of belief.

12 What he saw was this: Onias, who had been high priest, a beautiful and good man, of modest bearing and gentle manner, one who was well-spoken and had been trained from childhood in all that belongs to excellence, was praying with outstretched hands for the whole community of the Judeans. 13 Then in the same fashion another appeared, distinguished by his grey hair and appearance, and of marvelous and most glorious dignity. 14 And Onias spoke, saying, "This man is the one who loves his brothers, who prays much for the people and the holy city—Jeremias, the prophet of God." 15 Jeremias stretched out his right hand and gave to loudas a golden sword, and as he gave it he addressed him as follows: 16 "Take the holy sword as a gift from God with which you will strike down your adversaries."

17 Encouraged by the words of loudas, so noble and so effective in arousing valor and awakening courage in the souls of the young, they determined not to encamp but to attack bravely and to decide the matter by fighting hand to hand with all courage, because the city and the holy things and the temple were in danger. 18 Their concern for wives and children and also for brothers and relatives lay upon them less heavily; their greatest and first fear was for the consecrated shrine. 19 And those who were left behind in the city were in no small anxiety, being troubled over the attack in the open country.

20 When all were already looking forward to the imminent confrontation and the enemy was already coming near with the army drawn up in battle-order, the animals strategically stationed and the cavalry deployed on the flanks, 21 Makkabaios, observing the masses present and the varied supply of arms and the savagery of the elephants, stretched out his hands toward heaven and called upon the Lord who works wonders because he knew that it is not by arms, but as it seems good to God that he procures victory for those who are worthy. 22 He called upon him in this manner: "O Master, you sent your angel in the time of King Hezekias of Judea, and he killed fully one hundred eighty-five thousand in the camp of Sennacherim. 23 So now, O Sovereign of the heavens, send a good angel before us to inspire terror and trembling. 24 By the might of your arm may those who come with blasphemy against your holy people be struck down." With these words he ended.

25 Nikanor and his troops advanced with trumpets and battle cries, but loudas and his troops met the enemy with invocation and prayers. 26 So, fighting with their hands and praying to God in their hearts, they laid low no less than thirty-five thousand and were greatly gladdened by God's manifestation. 27 When the action was over and they were leaving with joy, they recognized Nikanor, lying dead, in full armor. 28 Then there was shouting and tumult, and they blessed the Sovereign in the language of the fathers. 29 Then the man who was ever in body and soul the defender of his people, the man who sustained his youthful goodwill toward his compatriots, ordered them to cut off Nikanor's head and his hand with his shoulder and carry them to Hierosolyma. 30 When he arrived there and had called his compatriots together and stationed the priests before the altar, he sent for those who were in the citadel. 31 He showed them the vile Nikanor's head and that profane man's arm, which he had boastfully stretched out against the holy house of the Almighty and, cutting out the tongue of the ungodly Nikanor, commanded it to be fed piecemeal to the birds and the rewards of his folly to be hung opposite the shrine. 32 And they all offered praise to heaven, blessed the manifest Lord, saying, "Blessed is he who has kept his own place undefiled!" 33 Loudas fastened Nikanor's head to the citadel, visible to all and an obvious sign of the help of the Lord. 34 And they all decreed by public vote never to let this day go unobserved but to have the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, which is called Adar in the Syrian language, marked, the day before Mardochaios' day.

37 This is how it went with Nikanor, and from that time the city has been ruled by the Hebrews. So I myself will here bring my story to a halt.

38 If it is well written and elegantly dispositioned, that is what I myself desired; if it is poorly done and mediocre, that was all I could manage. 39 For just as it is harmful to drink wine alone or, again, to drink water alone, while wine mixed with water produces a delightful taste, so also the style of the story delights the ears of those who read the composition. And here will be the end.

NETS has justly been described as the Göttingen Septuagint in English form, for this is true in two senses. Just as the Göttingen editor aims to recover the earliest form of the Greek through text critical means, NETS set itself the task of producing a translation of the text as it left the hands of its respective translator or author. Each book in the corpus is therefore based on the best available critical edition, which invariably means the Göttingen edition, where one is available. We may thus speak of an English Göttingen in this more literal sense as well.

For this translation, I have adhered as a rule to the fine edition of Robert Hanhart, Septuaginta: Vetus Testamentum Graecum Auctoritate Academiae Scientiarum Gottingensis editum IX.3: Maccabaeorum liber III (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1980), departing only twice. The text of 3 Makkabees is on the whole well preserved and presents few serious difficulties. Of the great uncials, it occurs only in Alexandrinus, but critical leverage is forthcoming from Codex Venetus and numerous cursive manuscripts of the Septuagint. Within the manuscript tradition there are significant variants but no major divergences. The book is extant in a Syriac and Armenian version, though it does not appear in the Vulgate. There are no references to 3 Makkabees in the extant Jewish sources, and what few quotations of the book that come down to us from antiquity are to be found almost exclusively in Christian writers of the East.

Both of my departures from Hanhart’s edition derive from the so-called Lucianic text, which, admittedly, is somewhat less than reliable. The first is due primarily to literary considerations. Quite simply, I elected to restore 2.1 to the text, which ascribes to the high priest Simon the prayer before the temple in Jerusalem (2.2–20), notwithstanding the fact that from a text critical perspective the verse is most readily explained as an addition. For while present in the Lucianic text, it is absent in both Alexandrinus and Venetus, and there is no obvious parablepsis to account for the omission (although with this amount of text the problem might have had more to do with the location of the verse on the page). On the other hand, 2.1 is hardly incidental to the scene. Without it, a lengthy and significant act of petitionary prayer must be attributed to a turbulent crowd, whose swelling cry is at once “painful and incessant” (1.28). This, to my knowledge, is without precedent. Rather the scene demands that a representative figure step forward and address God on behalf of the people in their hour of need. Such is the case at 3 Makkabees 6.1, where Eleazaros, “a man well known among the priests of the country,” prays for those gathered at the hippodrome as they face the elephants (6.2–15). The strong parallel drawn by the author between these two moments of national crisis and deliverance is fundamental to the dramatic structure of 3 Makkabees. So on literary grounds, there is considerable justification for including the reference to Simon at 2.1, his act of priestly intercession at the temple anticipating that of Eleazaros at the hippodrome. Yet, as I have indicated, the textual evidence would suggest that the verse is secondary. For this reason I decided to enclose 2.1 in square brackets, thereby indicating its questionable originality.

A rather different sort of problem arises at 5.31, where, in reference to the families of the king’s “Friends” (i.e., his peers), the Lucianic text has Ptolemy say, ἐσκευάσα αὐν δαψίλη θοίναυ, “this abundant feast would I have prepared (for wild beasts),” over against Alexandrinus and Venetus, which read, ἐσκευάσαν δαψίλη θοίναυ, “this abundant feast would they have prepared (for wild beasts).” Hanhart follows the reading of the uncials, but in this instance it is the Lucianic text that likely attests to the original form of the Greek. For, whereas on Hanhart’s reading it remains entirely unclear just what it was they would have prepared for the beasts (since there is no content for the θοίναυ or “feast”), the Lucianic text makes ready sense. Ptolemy is saying he would that he had prepared them (i.e., rather than the Jews) as a feast for wild beasts. It is also worth noting that the text forms an iambic line and is likely to be a poetic tag, a feature that is hardly secondary. Conversely, we would not expect the author of 3 Makkabees to have produced an incoherent text. The difference between the two readings, moreover, need be nothing more than a case of haplography or dittography. I thus follow both Emmett and Hadas in translating the Lucianic reading.
PROFILE OF THE GREEK

It is customary within an introduction to 3 Makkabees to decry the author's prose style or want thereof. I shall not entirely disappoint. At the same time, approbation must be given where it is due. The work was composed in Greek by a Jewish author steeped in his native tradition, yet one who had attained a high level of Greek literary education and who was undoubtedly a more than competent exponent of the classicizing style, which came into vogue in the late Hellenistic period. He draws upon a sizeable vocabulary, pressing into service rare and poetic words with great élan. He possesses a developed rhetorical skill. The texture and tone of his language very often suits the theme. But to a modern reader, at least, the result is hardly gratifying. The prose seems almost perversely bombastic at times, and while it must be conceded that it is no more so than that of others who indulged in the classicizing style, the fact remains that our author's efforts are somewhat labored. Or so it appears to this reader. How it was received by his intended audience is difficult to gauge, though I suspect they too found it florid.

As I have indicated, 3 Makkabees is clearly rooted in the Hebrew literary tradition, no doubt mediated to the author through its Greek translation. The two extended petitionary prayers of Simon (2.2–20) and Eleazaros (6.2–15) both echo the characteristic phrasing of Jewish scriptural translation. For the intended audience of 3 Makkabees, this would have marked the Greek of these prayers as a sacral language befitting the priestly role of the speakers. Such a technique underscores the literary competence of the author.

NETS has two competing objectives: firstly, to give as faithful a translation of the Greek as is possible, not only in terms of its meaning, but in terms of its mode of expression as well; secondly, to create a tool in English for the synoptic study of the Hebrew and Greek texts of the Bible. The overall aim of the translation is to capture the constitutive character of the Greek text, the incipit of its reception history, as it were. This aim is neatly realized in the so-called interlinear paradigm, which conceptualizes the relationship between the Greek text and its parent as an essentially formal one. On the assumption of interlinearity, the NETS translator attempts to capture in English the formal linguistic relationship that typically obtains between the Septuagint and its Hebrew parent. This is achieved through the use of the NRSV as a base text.

Obviously, since 3 Makkabees is an original composition, the interlinear paradigm is not applicable here. Hence my translation does not use the NRSV as a base text. Yet the broader aim of NETS, that of representing the Greek in terms of its constitutive manner of expression, is one to which I have closely adhered. Every effort has been made to reflect the linguistic features of the Greek. While it is difficult to know what a contemporary reader would have made of our author's style, we can be confident that the effect was undoubtedly less than felicitous in places, and this have I attempted to carry over into the English. Where the Greek seems repetitious and awkwardly constructed, where it is overwrought and florid, where the author's penchant for rare words and overwrought periods results in obscurity, this has not been smoothed over. Conversely, elegant turns of phrase and persuasive rhetorical figures, where they occur, are given their full due.

The target audience of NETS is biblically well-educated, on the assumption that such readers will have an interest in traditions other than their own. Some may even have studied the biblical languages at one point or another. With this in mind, the present translation is also intended to be of use to those who are working through the Greek text and require a companion. I have endeavored throughout to reflect the grammatical structure of the Greek to the extent that this is possible without doing violence to the English. Hence the translation is more literal than it would be if it were aimed at a popular audience. Yet this feature may prove appealing to those with no Greek at all, as it captures a little of the strangeness of a text written in accordance with literary sensibilities so very different from our own.

Translation is not undertaken in a vacuum but in conversation with other readers. While my aim has been to provide a fresh translation of the Greek based squarely on the principles of NETS, I have by no means ignored the work of earlier translators. For 3 Makkabees, I have learned much from the judicious M. Hadas, The Third and Fourth Books of Maccabees (Dropsie College Edition, Jewish Apocryphal Literature; New York: Ktav Publishing House, 1976 [1953]). And, like Hadas before me, I have benefited from C. W. Emmet's translation, in Charles, 115ff, published separately as The Third Book of Maccabees (Translations of Early Documents, Series II, Hellenistic-Jewish Texts; London: SPCK, 1918). My greatest debt of gratitude, however, is to Professor Albert Pietersma, my Doktor Vater and dear friend, who first introduced me to 3 Makkabees and has since proven my most trusted guide through the adventure of translating this fascinating text.
1 Now when Philopater learned from those who had escaped that the region under his control had been taken by Antiochus, he mobilized all his forces, both infantry and cavalry, and taking along his sister Arsinoe, he set out as far as the region near Raphia, where Antiochus and his cohort were encamped. 2 But a certain Theodotus, intent on carrying out the plot, took along the best of the Ptolemaic soldiers previously assigned to him and crossed over to Ptolemy’s tent by night in order to kill him single-handed and in this way put an end to the war. 3 But Ptolemy was taken out of harm’s way by Dositheus, called the son of Drimylus, a Judean by race who later changed his customs and became estranged from his ancestral beliefs. He made some insignificant person lie in the tent, who, as it happened, received Ptolemy’s punishment. 4 A fierce battle ensued and things began to fare considerably better for Antiochus, at which point Arsinoe let down her hair and began passing through the ranks, exhorting them with wailing and tears to come to the aid of both themselves, their children and their wives, boldly promising to give each of them two minas of gold should they be victorious. 5 So it turned out that their adversaries were decimated in close combat, and many captives were taken also. 6 Having prevailed against the plot, Ptolemy decided to go the round of the nearby cities and boost their morale. 7 By doing this, and by distributing gifts to their sacred precincts, he restored the confidence of his subjects.

8 As the Judeans had sent ahead members of their senate and elders to greet Ptolemy, to convey presents and to congratulate him on the turn of events, it turned out that he was all the more desirous of visiting them as soon as possible. 9 When he arrived in Hierosolyma, he sacrificed to the supreme God, bestowed favors and performed sacrifices. He made some insignificant person lie in the temple, who, as it happened, received Ptolemy’s punishment. 10 Admiring also the good order of the temple, he set his heart on entering the shrine. 11 He was told, however, that this would not be appropriate, since not even members of their own nation were permitted to enter, not even the priests, but only the high priest, the leader of all, and he but once a year. Nevertheless, he was not to be persuaded. 12 The law was read publicly, but not even then did he leave off insisting that he should enter, saying, “Even if those others are deprived of this honor, there is no need for me to be.” 13 He then inquired as to why it was that when he entered every other sacred precinct no one present had hindered him, 14 whereupon someone rashly declared that it was wrong to place any significance in that. 15 “But this being the case,” said he, “why shouldn’t I enter either way, whether they want me to or not?”

16 At that the priests in all their vestments fell prostrate and began imploring the supreme God to come to their aid in the present circumstances and divert the mad impulse of one so wickedly bent on seeing it through. As they filled the temple with a cry and with their tears, 17 those remaining in the city leapt up in a panic, uncertain as to what had happened. 18 Cloistered virgins in their chambers rushed out with their mothers, sprinkled their hair with ashes and began filling the streets with weeping and groaning. 19 Others who had just now dressed for their weddings abandoned the chambers appointed for the occasion, as well as the appropriate modesty, and made a mad dash through the city. 20 Newborn children were left here and there by their mothers and nurses, some at home, some in the streets, as the women began crowding together blindly in the all-surpassing temple.

21 Many and varied were the petitions of those who had gathered there over what was wickedly being plotted by Ptolemy. 22 Together with these people were the bolder of the citizens, those who were by no means content to see the king pressing his advantage and intent on carrying out his stated purpose. 23 Their cry to rush to arms and to die boldly on behalf of the ancestral law caused absolute turmoil in the place, and it was with some difficulty that they were turned back by the council and elders and assumed the same posture of supplication as the others. 24 The crowd, however, continued praying as before. 25 Meanwhile, the elders who were with the king persisted in their attempts to divert his arrogant mind from the plan he had conceived. 26 But he grew bold and dismissive and even now began making his approach, thinking to bring to a conclusion what he had forewarned to do. 27 When those around him saw these things, they joined together with us in calling upon the one possessing all might to come to our aid at this time and not to overlook such a lawless and arrogant act. 28 Beyond telling was the sound of the crowd’s swelling cry, at once painful and incessant; 29 for it seemed that not only the people, but even the walls and the entire edifice rang out, inasmuch as everyone would have given their lives then and there rather than see the place profaned.

2 So then Simon the high priest, facing the shrine, bent his knee, calmly stretched out his hands and formulated a petition such as this: 4 Lord, Lord, king of the heavens and sovereign of all creation, holy among the holy ones, sole ruler, almighty, hearken unto us, who are being oppressed by a vile and unholy man, grown insolent with presumption and power. 3 For you, the creator of all things and the governor of all, are a just ruler, and you judge those whose deeds are marked by pride and arrogance. 4 You destroyed those who in the past worked iniquity, among whom were also giants, who trusted in their might and courage, bringing down upon them water immeasurable. 5 You consumed with fire and brimstone the Sodomites, who practiced arrogance and were distinguished among men for their wicked deeds, making them an example for future generations. You made known your power when with many and diverse punishments you tried bold Pharaoh, when he had enslaved your people, holy Israel, at which time you made known your great might, and when Pharaoh pursued him with chariots and a horde of troops, you inundated them with the deep sea, but those trusting in you, who are the ruler of all creation, you brought to safety. Those also who witnessed works of your hand praised you as the almighty one. You, O King, when you created the boundless and immeasurable earth, you chose this city and consecrated this place for your name, though you lack nothing, and you distinguished it with your glorious manifestation, by establishing it for the glory of your great and honored name. Out of love for the house of Israel, you promised that if ever there be a crisis, and overwhelmed by distress we come to this place to beseech you, you will hearken to our prayer. Certainly you are faithful and true. Often times when our fathers were oppressed, you aided them in their humiliation and delivered them from great evils. And now, behold, Holy King, on account of our many and great sins we are oppressed, subject to our enemies and rendered powerless. And in our downfall, this vile and presumptuous man makes it his business to insult the holy place dedicated on the earth to the name of your glory. Of course, your dwelling place is the highest heaven, beyond the reach of human beings. But when you resolved that your glory should be among your people Israel, you consecrated this place. Do not punish us by the impurity of these men nor call us to account by their profanation, lest the arrogance of their speech, saying ‘We trample down the house of consecration, just as the houses of the abominables are trampled down.’ Expunge our sins; scatter our faults to the winds, and show your mercy at this hour. Let your mercy soon surprise us, and put words of praise on the lips of those who are downcast and crushed, putting our souls at peace.”

Just then God, who watches over all things, the primal one, holy among the holy, heeded their lawful entreaty and scourged him, who had become exceedingly puffed up with pride and presumption, and shook him this way and that like a reed in the wind so that he lay helpless on the floor, quite unable to speak and paralyzed in his limbs, bound up, as it were, by a just judgment. Seeing the swift correction which befell him, his friends and bodyguards grew frightened, and fearing for his life, they quickly dragged him off, utterly panic-stricken. Yet when he pulled himself together afterwards, he was not at all regretful for having been rebuked but rather went off making bitter threats.

When Ptolemy returned to Egypt, he only increased his acts of wickedness, through the influence of both his aforementioned drinking companions and comrades, men divorced from everything just. Not content merely with countless acts of lasciviousness, he reached such a degree of audacity that nasty rumours started in the rural districts. Many of the king’s friends studied his purpose and set about following his wishes. His intention being to cast blame on the nation publicly, he set up a stele on the tower at the court and inscribed the following: “Those who do not make public offerings are not to enter their sacred places, but all Judeans are reduced to a menial status and subject to enrollment; those who protest will be carried off forcibly for execution; those who are registered are also to be branded with the ivy-leaf emblem of Dionysus and assigned to their former status.” But lest he appear hateful to everyone, he wrote beneath, “If any of them should prefer to adopt the practices of those who have been initiated according to the rites, they will enjoy equal civic rights with the Alexandrians.”

Of course, there were some who, while outwardly detesting the means of their advancement, the religion of the city, quite readily offered themselves so that they might share some of the great glory that would come from being associated with the king. Most, however, prevailed with a noble spirit and did not separate from their religion. Trading their property in exchange for their lives, they fearlessly attempted to save themselves from the registration. They remained hopeful of obtaining support and loathed those who were withdrawing from them; they judged them to be enemies of the nation and began to exclude them from their common social life and from the benefits it provided.

When the ungodly one heard these things, he became so enraged that not only was he angry at those in Alexandria, but even more violently opposed to those in the country and ordered for them to be gathered together in haste and their lives brought to a most violent end. While these orders were being put into effect, a malicious rumor was circulated against the Judean race by persons conspiring to do them harm, the pretext being that they would prevent others from doing what was lawful. The Judeans, for their part, maintained their good will and unswerving loyalty towards the royal house; at the same time, they continued to revere God and live in accordance with his law and so kept themselves apart with respect to their diet, on account of which they appeared hateful to some. Yet, by adorning their mutual affairs with the good conduct of the just, they were highly esteemed by all people. While the good conduct of the race was thus the talk of everyone, it was not taken into account whatsoever by the allophyles, who instead kept going on about the differences in doing obeisance and diet, claiming that these people felt they owed allegiance neither to the king nor to his powers but were hostile and vehemently opposed to affairs of state; so it was no ordinary blame they attached to them. 8The Greeks in the city, who had suffered no wrong, began seeing unexpected trouble among the people and unforeseen stampedes happening, and while they were unable to offer assistance, for the situation was tyrannical, they nevertheless offered encouragement. Although they felt bad for the Judeans, they thought that things would change for the better; 9for such a community, faultless in every respect, would hardly be shown disregard. 10Even now, neighbors, friends and co-workers were quietly drawing some aside, assuring them that they would support them and do the utmost to help them.

11 Ptolemy prided himself in his present success, heedless of the might of the supreme God; rather, he went on assuming that he would persist in the same plan and wrote this letter against the Judeans:

12 “King Ptolemy Philopator extends greetings to his generals and soldiers in Egypt and its districts and bids them well. 13We ourselves are well, as are the affairs of state. 14Our recent expedition into Asia, of which you yourselves are aware, having been brought to its expected conclusion by the deliberate alliance of the gods, 15we thought it right to foster the nations inhabiting Coele-Syria and Phoenicia not by force of spear but with clemency and much beneficence and to show them kindness gladly. 16We allotted generous revenues to the temples of the various cities and were impelled also to go up to Hierosolyma and honor the temple of a people who are sinful and never refrain from folly. 17While they made a show of welcoming our visit, they were in fact insincere, and when we expressed our desire to enter their shrine and honor it with beautiful and extraordinary votive offerings, 18they, harboring an age long conceit, barred us from the entrance, and it was only on account of the beneficence that we show towards all people that they were spared the full force of our temper. 19They have made evident their enmity towards us. Unique amongst the nations in their haughtiness towards their kings and benefactors, they bear nothing gracefully. 20We for our part acceded to their folly and, when we crossed over into Egypt with victory, met all the nations with feasting was organized for the nations with shouts of joy, as their inveterate hatred, long felt, was now openly displayed. 21Yet among the Judeans there was indescribable grief and a mournful outburst of tears, their hearts altogether inflamed from groaning, as they bewailed the unforeseen destruction suddenly decreed for them.

Everywhere this ordinance reached, public feasting was organized for the nations with shouts of joy, as their inveterate hatred, long felt, was now openly displayed. 24Yet among the Judeans there was indescribable grief and a mournful outburst of tears, their hearts altogether inflamed from groaning, as they bewailed the unforeseen destruction suddenly decreed for them. 25We have ordered that directly upon the publication of this letter, those living amongst us, together with their wives and children, are to be conveyed to us with cruel and harsh treatment, bound hand and foot in iron chains, for the irremediable and ignoble slaughter befitting malcontents. 26For when these people have been punished once and for all, we believe that our affairs will in time become entirely stable and well ordered. 27But whosoever shelters any of the Judeans, from the old to the young, even infants, will be executed with degrading torments, along with their entire household. 28As for those who are willing to inform, they will receive the property of the one incurring the punishment, as well as a thousand drachmas from the royal treasury, and they will be honored with the crown of freedom. 29Any place where a Judean is discovered being sheltered in any way, however, is without exception to become untrodden and scorched; it will become altogether worthless to every mortal creature for all time.” 30The original of the letter was written in this manner.
amusement but rather in mourning, seeing the grave already lying before them. 9They were driven on board like beasts constrained with iron bonds, some being fastened at the neck to the yokes of the boats and others secured by their feet in unbreakable fetters; 10moreover, with solid planking fixed above, they were in total darkness and so received the treatment befitting traitors throughout the entire voyage.

11 They were brought to the place known as Schedia, and with the voyage now concluded, as had been ordained by the king, he ordered them to encamp in the hippodrome before the city, which was immense in circumference and well situated for making them an example to all those returning to the city as well as to those of them going abroad to the country so that they could neither communicate with his forces nor in any way claim the protection of the city walls. 12And when this happened, upon hearing that the same people leaving the city secretly lamented the shameful misery of their brothers, 13he became furious and ordered that they be treated in exactly the same way as the others, in no way whatsoever being spared the punishment meted out to those 14and that the whole race be registered by name, not for the exhausting manual labor briefly described above, but so that, having suffered the tortures which had been ordered, they might finally be destroyed in the space of a single day. 15Their registration thus proceeded in bitter haste and eager diligence from sunrise to sunset, yet was still incomplete when it ended forty days later.

16 The king, meanwhile, continued to be exceedingly joyful and went ahead organizing drinking parties in the presence of his idols, with a mind led far astray from the truth and a vile mouth, which praised that which is deaf and unable to speak or to assist itself, while uttering improprieties to the supreme God. 17Yet after the previously mentioned space of time, the scribes reported to the king that they could no longer carry on with the registration of the Judeans owing to their immense number; 18the majority were indeed still in the country, some still in their homes, others further afield, so it was impossible for all the generals in Egypt. 19At this he began to threaten them obstinately that they had been bribed to devise the escape, but it so happened that he himself became plainly convinced on the matter, 20when they proved to him that both the papyrus and writing reeds, which they had been using, had been spent. 21This, however, was the work of the invincible providence of the one who was aiding the Judeans from heaven.

5 Then the king, filled with violent anger and fury and altogether intractable, summoned Hermon, the person charged with the care of the elephants, 2and ordered him for the next day to give all the elephants, five-hundred in number, copious handfuls of frankincense and abundant un-mixed wine to drink and, once they had been driven wild by the copious supply of drink, to lead them in for the Judeans to meet their fate. 3When he had issued these orders, he turned to feasting, bringing together those amongst his friends and the army who were especially hostile towards the Judeans. 4Meanwhile Hermon, the elephantarch, began faithfully carrying out what had been commanded. 5That evening the officiants who were assigned to them came out and began binding the hands of the afflicted and through the night took further precautions for their security, believing that the race would meet its final destruction once and for all. 6But the Judeans, who to the nations seemed to be bereft of all defense on account of the constraint of their chains that confined them on every side, 7all called out with an irrepressible cry and with tears to the Almighty Lord, Ruler of every power, their merciful God and Father, beseeching him 8to overturn the ungodly plot against them and with a glorious manifestation to rescue them from the fate that lay ready before them. 9And so their entreaty continued to ascend fervently to the sky.

10 Hermon, having given the merciless elephants their drink so that they were filled with an abundant supply of wine and glutted with frankincense, presented himself at court early in the morning to inform the king concerning these things. 11But he a sent upon the king a portion of sleep, that good creature which from time immemorial has been bestowed night and day by the one who gives freely to all, whomsoever he wishes, 12and through the action of the master, he was overcome by a pleasant and deep slumber and thus disappointed in his wicked purpose and entirely cheated of his unbending calculation. 13The Judeans, having escaped the appointed hour, began praising their holy God and were once again entreating the one who is easily reconciled to show arrogant nations the might of his all powerful hand. 14It was now approaching the middle of the tenth hour, and the person who was in charge of the invitations, seeing that the invited guests had assembled, approached the king and gave him a nudge. 15With some difficulty he woke him up and informed him that the hour of the banquet was already slipping by, explaining the situation to him. 16Once he had given the matter some thought, the king turned to drinking and ordered those who had come for the banquet to recline opposite him. 17When this had been done, he began urging them, as they gave themselves over to feasting, to spend the present part of the banquet in merriment by celebrating all the more. 18After the party had been going for some time, the king summoned Hermon and with angry threats began questioning him as to why the Judeans had been permitted to survive a further day. 19But when he reported that the order had been carried out to the letter overnight, and his friends corroborated this, 20the king, with a savagery worse than that of

Phalaris, said that while they had today's sleep to be thankful for, “tonight without further delay prepare the elephants in the same manner for the destruction of the lawless Judeans.” 21 After the king had spoken, all those who were present at once readily consented with joy, whereupon each returned to his own house. 22 They did not, however, spend the duration of the night sleeping, so much as in devising every sort of mockery for those who appeared to be in such distress.

26 The rays of the sun were not yet scattered abroad, and the king was still receiving his friends, when Hermon arrived and began summoning them for the departure, indicating that the king's desire was in readiness. 27 Yet when he received the news and was dumbfounded by the unauthorized departure, possessed as he was by total ignorance, he began inquiring as to what was the business upon which this had been executed for him in such haste. 28 This was the working of God who is master of all things, for he had made the king forgetful as to the purpose of his former schemes. 29 Hermon and all his friends began to point out that the beasts and the forces were ready, “O king, in accordance with your express intention.” 30 But he was filled with violent anger at what was said, for by divine providence his whole impression of these things had been scattered, and with a threatening glare, he said, 31 "How ever many of your parents or young children had been present, this abundant feast would have prepared for wild beasts instead of the blameless Judeans, who have demonstrated complete and steadfast loyalty to my parents and myself. 32 And yet, but for the affection of a common upbringing and familiarity, you would have deprived of life instead of them." 33 So Hermon suffered an unexpected and dangerous threat and wore his humiliation both in his eyes and face.

34 One by one the king's friends began sullenly slipping out, and they released those who had gathered, each to his own affairs. 35 When the Judeans heard what the king had said, they began praising the manifest God, Lord, King of kings, wondering at his unstable mind, began to reproach him thus, 40 “O king, how long will you go on testing us unreasonably, like idiots, ordering us now for a third time to obliterate them and then in turn canceling your decrees on this business once again? 41 As a result the city is in an uproar with expectation and is already swarming with gangs and frequently in danger of being looted.” 42 Whereupon the king, who was in every respect a Phalaris and filled with madness, regarding as nothing the changes of heart taking place within him towards the visitation of the Judeans, swore a bootless oath that he would dispatch them to Hades without delay, tormented by the knees and feet of the beasts, 43 and thereupon march against Judea and swiftly level it with fire and spear, and that their shrine, "forbidden to us," would quickly topple-over in the fire and be rendered destitute of those performing sacrifices there for all time. 44 Then the Friends and Kinsmen went on their way overjoyed and faithfully set about posting the forces to those parts of the city most advantageous for keeping guard. 45 Meanwhile, the elephantarch, having brought the beasts, frightfully decked out in their gear, close to a state of madness, so to speak, with most fragrant drinks of wine mixed with frankincense, entered the court at about dawn, by which time the city had already filled up with innumerable crowds at the hippodrome, and began rousing the king to the matter at hand. 46 He, in turn, upon filling his ungodly mind full of violent rage, fiercely set out with the beasts, wishing to view with the very pupils of his eyes and an invulnerable heart the painful and miserable ruin of those mentioned beforehand. 48 As the elephants and the armed force accompanying them were going out around the gate, the Judeans both saw the dust of the passing throng and heard the roaring crowd and, believing this to be their last moment of life, the end of their wretched suspense, gave themselves over to lamentation and wailing and began kissing one another, embracing their relatives, falling upon their necks, parents their children, mothers their daughters and yet others holding newborn infants to the breast as they drew their last milk. 50 Nevertheless, when they considered all the help from heaven that had fallen to their share in the past, they threw themselves prostrate with one accord, parted their newborn from the breasts and called out to the ruler of every power with an exceedingly loud cry, entreatling him to show them mercy by making an appearance, they who stood even now at the gates of Hades.

Now a certain Eleazaros, a man well known among the priests of the country, who had already reached old age and been adorned with every virtue throughout his life, restrained the elders around him from calling upon the holy God and said the following prayer:

2 "O king, dread sovereign, most high, almighty God, who govern all creation with compassion,
And even the body of the king was a shudder, and the force of the opponents and filled them with confusion and dread and bound them fast with shackles, terrible to behold, and next to Hades, for what had been devised by him earlier. 22 Then the beasts turned upon the armed forces accompanying them and began trampling and destroying them.

22 The king’s anger now turned to pity and tears for what had been devised by him earlier. 23 For when he heard the cry and perceived them all lying prostrate for destruction, he wept and began threatening his friends angrily, saying, 24 “You are guilty of treason and have exceeded tyrants in cruelty, and now you are attempting to deprive even me, your benefactor, of both sovereignty and life, by secretly forming designs unbeneﬁcial to the kingdom. 25 Who was it that drove from their homes those who faithfully maintain our frontier fortresses and gathered every one of them together here? 26 Who was it that so lawlessly surrounded with outrages those who from the beginning have exceeded all nations in their goodwill towards us and have frequently taken the gravest human dangers upon themselves? 27 Loosen, undo unjust fetters, and send them off to their homes in peace, begging their pardon for what has been done before. 28 Set free the sons of the Almighty, heavenly, living god, who from our parents’ time until now has been providing uninterrupted and illustrious stability to our affairs.” 29 That then is what he said, and they were released instantly and began blessing the holy savior God, having just escaped death.

30 Thereupon the king withdrew to the city, summoned the overseer of revenues and ordered him to supply the Judeans with both wines and all else requisite for seven days of feasting, having decided that they would joyfully celebrate a festival of deliverance in the very place in which they had expected to meet destruction. 31 Then those who were once objects of contempt and next to Hades, or rather at it, united for a feast of deliverance rather than one of bitter and mournful doom, and filled with joy they apportioned to parties of revelers the place that had been prepared for their destruction and burial. 32 They left off the sad strain of their dirges and took up an ancestral song, praising the savior and wonder-working God, and having dispelled all wailing and lamentation, they began organizing dances as a sign of peaceful joy. 33 The king likewise assembled a substantial drinking party on account of these things and was offering thanks to heaven ceaselessly and profusely for the unexpected deliverance that had befallen him. 34 Those who just before had assumed that the Judeans would be destroyed and become carrion, and who had registered them with joy, groaned, as they themselves were now clothed in shame, their fiery courage ignobly extinguished. 35 The Judeans, as we said before, had organized the aforementioned dancing and feasting and were celebrating with cheerful acknowledgements and melodies. 36 They laid down for themselves a general rule concerning these matters for the entire duration of their residence as aliens throughout their generations, and they resolved to celebrate the aforementioned days in merriment, not for the sake of drink and gluttony, but for the deliverance that had accomplished. They brought them down cruelly, and the government would never be stable until this was accomplished, since they bear enmity toward all the nations, our Scythians. But for this we on our part violently tempted to destroy them, having fastened to them—any preliminary investigation and inquiry, at-length bound as slaves, or rather as traitors, and, without God protects the Judeans, as a father always covers his sons, and having taken charge whatsoever, and we have instructed all of them to return each to their own home in every place, with no one hurting them without exception, nor to reproach them for what has happened contrary to reason. For know that, should we devise any evil against these people or offend them at all, it will be no mere mortal but the one who is sovereign over every power, God most high, that we shall have forever set inescapably against us in everything to avenge the deed. Farewell."

10 Upon receiving this letter, they did not hurry straightaway to set about their departure but made a petition to the king, that those from the race of the Judeans who had freely disobeyed the holy God and God’s law should obtain their deserved punishment through them, insisting that those who had disobeyed the divine ordinances for the sake of their belly would never be favorably disposed towards the affairs of the king. He in turn acknowledged that they were speaking the truth, consented and granted them complete license to destroy openly those who had disobeyed God’s law throughout the whole of his dominion, without any express royal authorization or oversight. They then applauded him as was fitting; their priests and the entire multitude cried out the Hallelouia with joy, and they departed and thus set about punishing every defiled fellow national who fell in their path and slaying them as an example to all. On that day they slew more than three hundred men, a day which they also celebrated as one of merriment, seeing that they had overpowered the profane with joy. Then those who had held fast to God unto death, having received the complete reward of deliverance, shifted their quarters from the city, wreathed with every kind of fragrant flower, and with gladness and a shout they continued giving thanks to the God of their fathers, the eternal savior of Israel, with words of praise and hymns in every kind of melody.

17 Now when they arrived at Ptolemais—called "rose-bearing" on account of the characteristic feature of the place—where the fleet waited for them for seven days, according to their common plan, there they held a celebration of deliverance, the king having stoutly supplied them with everything for their transit, until each arrived at his own home. They landed peacefully with the appropriate acknowledgements, and there too they likewise resolved to celebrate also these days in merriment for the duration of their residence as aliens, and having dedicated these days and consecrated them for prayer on a stele by the place of the fleet waited for, they went on their way, unharmed, free and overjoyed, being preserved over land and sea and river by command of the king, each to his own home, and among their enemies they possessed a greater dominance than before, both honored and feared, and were abused of their belongings by no one. Everyone recovered all of their property in accordance with the registration so that those who held anything returned it to them with great fear, for the supreme God had performed mighty works entirely for their deliverance. Blessed be the rescuer of Israel for all time! Amen.
4 MAKKABEES
TO THE READER

EDITION OF THE GREEK TEXT
The NETS rendering of 4 Makkabees follows the Greek text of Alfred Rahlfs’ Septuaginta. Id est Vetus Testamentum graece iuxta LXX interpretes, 2 vols. (Stuttgart: Württembergische Bibelanstalt, 1935). Of the three manuscripts on which that edition is largely based (Vaticanus, Sinaïticus, and Alexandrinus), only the latter two include 4 Makkabees. Rahlfs does, however, cite other evidence as well, particularly that of the eighth or ninth century Codex Venetus (V), which, regrettably, lacks 5.11–12.1. A full-scale critical edition has yet to be prepared. Discussion of variant readings can be found in the footnotes to the German translation by Hans-Josef Klauck. Only rarely does the following translation depart from Rahlfs’ text; these instances are pointed out in the footnotes.

Since 4 Makkabees is an original composition in Greek, there is no need here to indicate the relationship between the Greek text and a Semitic parent text by maintaining a similar relationship between the NETS version and the NRSV. I have therefore departed from the latter translation freely in attempting to capture something of the flavor of the Greek original. That, however, is a task with significant challenges.

Our author writes not only very fluently in Greek but also, in striking contrast with the Jewish conservatism that marks the book’s message (the law of Moyses, in all its particularity, is to be faithfully observed in spite of pressures to assimilate to the surrounding Hellenistic environment), in a highly rhetorical and affected Greek style. To be noted is the extensive and often inventive vocabulary employed, a vocabulary that includes a number of rare and poetic terms and a seemingly endless stock of words pertaining to the instruments and inflicting of torture; a particular love of compound words, many apparently of our author’s own composition, and a number featuring verbs with a plurality of prefixed prepositions; a bent for finding a variety of ways in which to say the same thing (in the opening verses, for example, the translator is severely taxed to match in English the author’s diverse formulations of reason’s supremacy over the passions); a partiality for extended similes and metaphors; a penchant to apostrophize the characters of his narrative, their virtues, and sundry other abstractions; a predilection for conveying a point by inventing for his characters direct speeches, some explicitly imaginary; others purportedly delivered in the midst of such torments and at such proximity to a ghastly death as to make their deliberate and measured tone astounding; and a tendency in general to appeal to readers’ sense of pity and to arouse their horror. Readers disaffected by these characteristics of our text should bear in mind that our author was clearly reflecting the tastes of many of his contemporaries, nor, indeed, have the intervening centuries lacked periods in which the floridity of our author’s style was found both pleasing and impressive.

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL NOTE
Several English translations are available. Older renditions include those of R. B. Townsend in the second volume of Charles; C. W. Emmet (London: SPCK, 1918); and (together with a reproduction of Rahlfs’ Greek text) M. Hadas (New York: Dropsie College [Harper], 1953). In addition to the translation in the NRSV, the recent rendering by H. Anderson in the second volume of The Old Testament Pseudepigrapha edited by J. H. Charlesworth (Garden City, NY: Doubleday, 1985) should be noted. Nor should the French version of A. Dupont-Sommer (Paris: H. Champion, 1939) and the German version by H.-J. Klauck (Gütersloh: C. Mohn, 1989), both with extensive introductions and notes, be forgotten. Much can be learned from D. A. deSilva’s 4 Maccabees (Sheffield: Sheffield Academic Press, 1998), with bibliographies of other studies.

STEPHEN WESTERHOLM
Since I am about to discuss an eminently philosophical subject—whether pious reason is absolute master of the passions—I would duly advise you to attend diligently to the philosophy here set forth. For the subject is essential to the path to knowledge for everyone and, furthermore, embraces praise of the greatest virtue: I speak, of course, of prudence. If, then, it is apparent that reason prevails over the passions hindering self-control, namely, gluttony and lust, then it is also plainly apparent that it holds sway over the passions impeding justice, such as malice, and over the passions impeding courage, namely, anger, fear and pain. Some might perhaps ask, “How then, if reason overcomes the passions, does it not master forgetfulness and ignorance?” Their attempt at argument is ridiculous. For reason does not overcome its own passions but those opposed to justice, courage and self-control, and it overcomes these not so that it destroys them but so that one does not give way to them.

On the basis of many and diverse considerations I could show you that reason is absolute ruler of the passions, but I can demonstrate it much better from the bravery of those who died for the sake of virtue: Eleazaros, the seven brothers and their mother. All of these, in despising sufferings to the point of death, showed that reason has full control over the passions. It is fitting for me to praise for their virtues these men who, together with their mother, died for the sake of nobility of character in this season of the year, but I would also call them blessed for the honors accorded them. Having won, by their courage and endurance, the admiration not merely of all people but even of their abusers, they became the means by which the tyranny exercised against our nation was overthrown. They conquered the tyrant by their endurance so that through them our homeland was purified. But of this it will be possible for me to speak in a moment after I have begun, as I am accustomed to do, by stating my thesis, and then I shall turn to the story about them, giving glory to the all-wise God.

We inquire, then, whether reason is the absolute ruler of the passions. We must determine just what reason is and what passion is, how many kinds of passions there are, and whether reason prevails over all of these. Reason, then, is the mind preferring, with sound judgment, the life of wisdom. Wisdom, in turn, is the knowledge of things divine and human and of the causes of these. It amounts, moreover, to training in the law, training by which we learn divine matters reverently and human matters advantageously.

Now the kinds of wisdom are prudence, justice, courage and self-control. Supreme over all of these is prudence by which in fact reason prevails over the passions. Of the passions, the two most comprehensive types are pleasure and pain, and each of these pertains by nature both to the body and to the soul. There are many sequences of passions connected with pleasure and pain. Thus before pleasure comes desire, and after pleasure, delight. Before pain comes fear, and after pain, sorrow. Anger is a passion embracing pleasure and pain, if people reflect on how it affects them. In pleasure there exists as well a malevolent disposition, which, of all the passions, assumes the most varied forms. In terms of the soul, it is expressed in boastfulness, love of money, love of honor, love of strife and envy. With regard to the body, it is expressed in indiscriminate eating, gluttony and private gormandizing.

Just as pleasure and pain are two plants growing from the body and the soul, so there are many offshoots of these plants. By weeding, pruning, tying up, and in every way irrigating each of these, reason, the master cultivator, tames the jungles of habits and passions. For reason is the guide of the virtues but the absolute ruler of the passions.

Observe now, first of all, that reason is absolute master of the passions by virtue of the restraining powers of self-control. Self-control, then, is dominance over the desires. Of the desires, some pertain to the soul, others to the body, and it is apparent that reason prevails over both of these. Otherwise, how is it that when we are attracted to forbidden foods we turn ourselves away from the pleasures to be had from them? Is it not because reason is able to prevail over the appetites? I for one think so. Therefore when we crave seafood, fowl, quadrupeds and all sorts of foods that are forbidden to us by the law, we abstain because of the dominance of reason. For the passions of the appetites are restrained, checked by the temperate mind, and all the emotions of the body are bridled by reason.

And why should it be deemed amazing if the desires of the soul for the enjoyment of beauty are rendered powerless? It is on this account, certainly, that the temperate Joseph is praised, namely, that by his faculty of thinking he gained control over the urge for gratification. For when he was young and in his prime for intercourse, by his reason he rendered powerless the frenzied desire of his passions. It is apparent that reason prevails not only over the frenzied urge for gratification but also over every desire. For the law says, “You shall not covet your neighbor’s wife or anything that is your neighbor’s.” In fact, since the law has told us not to covet, I could persuade you all the more that reason is able to overcome the desires.

Just so it is with the passions that hinder justice.

Otherwise how is it that someone who is habitually a private gormandizer, a glutton, or even a drunkard is trained differently, unless reason is clearly master of the passions? As soon, indeed, as one adopts a way of life in accordance with the law, even though a lover of money, one overpowers one’s own bent, lending without interest to the needy and canceling the debt when the seventh year arrives. 9Even if one is stingy, one is overcome by the law through reason, neither gleaning the harvest nor gathering the last of the vineyards’ grapes.

Or in the case of acts that hinder self-control

And in all other matters it is possible to recognize this principle, that reason overcomes the passions. 10For the law overcomes even affection for parents, not betraying virtue on their account. 11It prevails over love for one’s wife, rebuking her for her transgression. 12It holds sway over love for one’s children, punishing them for wickedness, 13masters one’s relationship with friends, rebuking them for evil. 14And do not consider it paradoxical when reason, through the law, can prevail even over enmity, not cutting down the cultivated trees of foes but preserving the property of enemies from marauders and helping to raise up what has fallen.

15 It is apparent that reason overcomes even the more aggressive passions: love of power, vainglory, boasting, arrogance and envy. 16For the temperate mind repels all these malicious passions, just as it repels anger—for it masters even this. 17When Moyses was angry with Dathan and Abi- ron, he did nothing against them in anger but controlled his anger by reason. 18For, as I have said, the temperate mind is able to get the better of the passions, to alter some, and to render others powerless. 19Otherwise why did Iakob, our all wise father, censure the households of Symeon and Leui for slaughtering, contrary to reason, the Shechemites as an entire people, saying, “Cursed be their anger”? 20For if reason could not overcome anger, he would not have spoken thus. 21Now when God fashioned human beings, he planted in them their passions and habits, 22but at the same time he enthroned the mind among the senses as a sacred governor over them all, 23and to this mind he gave the law. The one who adopts a way of life in accordance with it will rule a kingdom that is temperate, just, good and courageous.

24 How is it, then, someone may ask, if reason is master of the passions, that it does not overcome forgetfulness and ignorance?

3 But this argument is entirely ridiculous, for it is apparent that reason prevails not over its own passions but over those of the body. 2No one of us can eradicate such desire, but reason can provide a way for us not to be enslaved by desire. 3No one of you can eradicate anger from the soul, but reason can help to deal with anger. 4No one of us can eradicate malice, but reason can fight at our side so that we are not overcome by malice. 5For reason is not an uprooter of the passions but their antagonist. 6Now this can be explained more clearly by means of the thirst of King Dauid. 7For when Dauid had been attacking the allophyles all day long, he, together with the soldiers of our nation, killed many of them. 8Then when evening fell, he came, sweating and extremely tired, to the royal tent, around which the whole army of our ances-

4 For a certain Simon was a political opponent of the noble and good man, Onias, who then held the high priesthood for life. When, though slandering him concerning the nation in every way, he was not able to injure him, he departed as a fugitive, intending to betray our homeland. 2So he came to Apollonius, governor of Syria, Phoenicia and Cilicia, and said, 3“Since I am loyal to the interests of the king, I have come to disclose that many tens of thousands of private funds are stored up in the treasuries of Hierosolyma that are not the property of the temple; these belong to King Se-leucus.” 4When Apollonius had learned the details of these matters, he praised Simon for his solicitude for the king, went up to Seleucus and informed him of the treasure of funds. 5Receiving authority to deal with these matters, he proceeded quickly to our homeland with the accrued Simon and a very strong military force. 6He said that he had come by the king’s commands in order to seize the private funds in the treasury. 7At this announcement the people complained bitterly and protested, considering that it would be outrageous if those who had entrusted deposits to the sacred treasury should be deprived of them. They tried as best they could to prevent him. 8But with threats Apollonius left for the temple. 9While the priests, with women and children, were imploring God in the temple to shield the sacred place that was being treated with contempt and while Apollonius was going up with his armed forces to seize the funds, angels on horseback appeared from heaven with lightning flashing from their weapons, instilling in them great fear and trembling. And Apollonius, falling down half-dead in the court of the temple that was open to all races, stretched out his hands toward heaven and with tears began to beg the Hebrews that they would pray for him and propitiate the heavenly army. For he said that he had sinned in such a way that he deserved to die and that, if he were delivered, he would praise the blessedness of the holy place before all people. Moved by these words, the high priest Onias, although otherwise he had scruples about doing so, prayed for him so that King Seleucus would not suppose that Apollonius had been overcome by human treachery and not by divine justice. When Apollonius, beyond all expectations, had been delivered, he went away to inform the king what had happened to him.

When King Seleucus died, his son Antiochus Epiphanes, an arrogant and terrible man, succeeded to the office. He deposed Onias from the high priesthood and appointed Onias’s brother Jason as high priest, agreeing to pay the high priesthood and appointed Onias’s brother Jason as high priest, 17Jason agreeing to pay the high priesthood and the leadership of the nation.

Jason changed the nation’s way of life and altered its form of government in complete transgression of the law so that he not only constructed a gymnasium on the very citadel of our homeland but also abolished the temple service. The divine justice, provoked by these acts, caused Antiochus himself to war against them.

For while he was waging war against Ptolemy in Egypt, he heard that a rumor had spread about his death and that the Hierosolymites had celebrated with all possible joy. He marched against them speedily, and when he had plundered them, he issued a decree that, if any of them were found living according to the ancestral law, they should die. When, by means of his decrees, he had not been able to subvert the people’s loyalty to the law in any way but saw that all his threats and punishments were being disregarded so that even women, because they circumcised their sons, were thrown down headlong together with their infants, though they had known beforehand that they would suffer this; when, then, his decrees were despised by the people, he himself tried through tortures to compel everyone in the nation to renounce Judaism by tasting defiling foods.

The tyrant Antiochus, sitting in state with his counselors on a certain high place and with his armed soldiers standing around him, ordered his bodyguards to drag in each and every Hebrew and to compel them to taste pork and food sacrificed to idols; if any were not willing to eat defiling food, they were to be broken on the wheel and killed. When many persons had been rounded up, one man, a Hebrew, Eleazaros by name, was brought as first of the company before him. He was a priest by birth, a lawyer by profession, advanced in age and known to many in the tyrant’s court on account of his age.

5 When Antiochus saw him he said, “Before I begin the tortures against you, old man, I would give you these words of advice, namely, that you save yourself by tasting pork, 7for I respect your age and your gray hairs. Although you have had your gray hairs for such a long time, you do not seem to me to be a philosopher, since you observe the religion of the Jews. Why should you abhor eating the very excellent meat of this animal when nature has provided it? For it is senseless not to enjoy delicious things that are not shameful and not right to decline the gifts of nature. But you seem to me to do what is even more senseless if, because you cherish a vain opinion concerning the truth, you continue to despise me at the cost of your own punishment. Will you not awaken from your silly philosophy, dispel the nonsense of your reasonings, and, adopting a mind worthy of your age, pursue a true philosophy of what is beneficial? Will you not have compassion on your old age by bowing to my humane advice? For bear in mind that, if indeed there is some power overseeing this religion of yours, it will excuse you for any transgression committed under duress.”

14 When the tyrant urged him in this fashion to eat meat unlawfully, Eleazaros asked to have a word. When he had received permission to speak, he began to address the people as follows: “O Antiochus, we who have been persuaded to adopt a way of life in accordance with divine law do not consider any compulsion more powerful than our ready obedience to the law. Therefore we do not deem it right to transgress the law in any way. Even if, as you suppose, our law were in truth not divine and we wrongly considered it to be divine, not even so would it be possible for us to invalidate our reputation for piety. Therefore do not suppose that it would be a petty sin if we were to eat defiling food. To transgress the law in matters small or great is of equal seriousness, for in either case the law is equally despised. You scoff at our philosophy as though our living by it were not sensible. But it teaches us self-control so that we overcome all pleasures and desires, and it also exercises us in courage so that we endure all pain willingly; it trains us in justice so that in all our dealings we act impartially, and it teaches us piety so that we worship the only living God in a way that befits his greatness.

25 Therefore we do not eat defiling food, for, believing that the law is divine, we know that the Creator of the world shows us sympathy by imposing a law that is in accordance with nature. He has permitted us to eat what will prove suitable for our souls, but he has forbidden us to eat...”
the flesh of what will prove contrary to us. 27It would be tyrannical to compel us not only to transgress the law but also to eat in such a way that you may deride us for this eating of defiling foods that is most hateful to us. 28But you shall not laugh this laugh at me, 29nor will I disregard the old age, partly because they were in sympathy of the sacred oaths of my ancestors concerning the keeping of the law, 30not even if you gouge out my eyes and melt down my entrails. 31I am not so old or so little of a man that I am not youthful in reason in defense of piety. 32So then, get your torture wheels ready and fan the fire more vehemently. 33I do not so pity my old age as to subvert the ancestral law by my own act. 34I will not play false to you, O law that trained me, nor will I renounce you, beloved self-control. 35I will not put you to shame, philosophical reason, nor will I deny you, honored priesthood and knowledge of our law code. 36aO kings, you shall not defile the honorable mouth of my old age nor the maturity of a law-observant life. 37My fathers will receive me as pure, as one who does not fear your tortures even unto death. 38You will melt down my entrails. 31I am not so old or so self-control. 35I have shown not only that I b would have borne the flesh of what will prove contrary to us. 27It would be tyrannical to compel us not only to transgress the law but also to eat in such a way that you may deride us for this eating of defiling foods that is most hateful to us. 28But you shall not laugh this laugh at me, 29nor will I disregard the old age, partly because they were in sympathy of the sacred oaths of my ancestors concerning the keeping of the law, 30not even if you gouge out my eyes and melt down my entrails. 31I am not so old or so little of a man that I am not youthful in reason in defense of piety. 32So then, get your torture wheels ready and fan the fire more vehemently. 33I do not so pity my old age as to subvert the ancestral law by my own act. 34I will not play false to you, O law that trained me, nor will I renounce you, beloved self-control. 35I will not put you to shame, philosophical reason, nor will I deny you, honored priesthood and knowledge of our law code. 36aO kings, you shall not defile the honorable mouth of my old age nor the maturity of a law-observant life. 37My fathers will receive me as pure, as one who does not fear your tortures even unto death. 38You will melt down my entrails. 31I am not so old or so

6 When Eleazaros in this manner had eloquently countered the exhortations of the tyrant, the bodyguards who were standing by dragged him violently to the instruments of torture. 2First they stripped the old man, though he remained adorned with the gracefulness that encompasses piety. 3Thereupon they tied his hands behind him on each side and scourged him with whips, 4while a herald opposite him cried out, “Obey the king’s commands!” 5But the lofty-minded and noble man, like a true Eleazaros, as though being tortured in a dream, was in no way swayed. 6Yet while he raised his eyes aloft toward heaven, the old man was being torn in his flesh by whips; he was dripping with blood and lacerated in his sides. 7Although he fell to the ground because his body could not bear the agonies, he kept his reason upright and unswerving. 8One of the cruel bodyguards leaped on him and kicked him in the side with his foot so that he would get up again after he fell. 9But he endured the pains, scorned the torture and persevered through the abuses. 10Like a noble athlete, the old man, while being beaten, conquered his torturers; 11in fact, as his face was sweating and he was gasping heavily for breath, he was admired by his torturers themselves for his courageous spirit.

12 Thereupon, partly because they pitted his old age, partly because they were in sympathy with him from their acquaintance with him and partly because they were in admiration of his perseverance, some of the king’s retinue approached him and said, 14Eleazar, why are you irrationally destroying yourself through these evil devices? 15We will set before you some cooked meat; save yourself by pretending to taste pork.” 16 But Eleazaros, as though more bitterly abused by this counsel, cried out: “Never may we, the children of Abraam, think so basely that we play the coward and feign a role unbecoming to us! 18For it would be irrational if, after we have lived life until old age in accordance with truth, and maintained, by observing the law, the reputation of such a life, we should now change our course and ourselves become a model of impiety for the young so that we should set a precedent for eating defiled food. 20It would be shameful if we should survive but a little while and during that time be a laughingstock to all for our cowardice; 21shameful if we were despoiled by the tyrant as unmanly and did not champion our divine law even unto death. 22So then, O children of Abraam, die nobly for the sake of piety! 23And you, bodyguards of the tyrant, why do you delay?” 24 When they saw that he displayed such loftiness of mind in the face of the tortures and that he remained unmoved by their pity, they brought him to the fire. 25There they burned him with maliciously contrived instruments, threw him down and poured stinking liquids into his nostrils. 26When he was now burned to his very bones and about to lose consciousness, he lifted up his eyes to God and said, 27“You know, O God, that though it is within my power to save myself, I die in fiery tortures for the sake of the law. 28Be merciful to your people, and be satisfied with our punishment on their behalf. 29Make my blood their purification, and take my life in exchange for theirs.” 30After he said this, the holy man died nobly in his torments; he stood firm even in tortures unto death, by virtue of reason, in defense of the law.

31 By common acknowledgement, then, pious reason is master of the passions. 32For if the passions had overcome reason, it would have borne testimony for them of their dominance. 33But now that reason has conquered the passions, we properly ascribe to it the power to govern. 34It is right for us to acknowledge the strength of reason when it prevails even over external agonies; otherwise it would be absurd. 35I have shown not only that reason has overcome agonies but also that it overcomes pleasures and in no respect yields to them.

7 For like a most skillful pilot, the reason of our father Eleazaros steered the ship of piety on the sea of the passions, 2and though buffeted by the stormings of the tyrant and overwhelmed by the mighty waves of the tortures, 3in no way did it turn the rudders of piety until it sailed into the haven of immortal victory. 4No city besieged by many and diverse war machines has ever held out as did that all-holy man. In his sacred soul he was set ablaze by abuses and torments, yet he conquered his besiegers through all-shielding reason that is rooted in piety. 5For in setting his mind firm like a jutting cliff, our father Eleazar broke the madly raging waves of the passions. 6O priest, worthy of the priesthood, you neither defiled your sa-

Lacking in Gk  bue = Ra  cGk uncertain  dOr reason that shielded his created teeth nor profaned your stomach, which had room only for godliness and purity, by eating defilng foods. 7O man in harmony with the law, philosopher of divine life! 8Such should be those whose office is to serve the law, shielding it with their own blood and noble sweat in sufferings even unto death. 9You, father, confirmed our loyalty to the law through the endurance that brought you glory; the sacred service that you solemnly avowed you did not subvert, and by your deeds you corroborated your words of divine philosophy. 10O aged man, more powerful than tortures, O elder, fiercer than fire, O supreme king over passions, Eleazar! 11For just as our father Aaron, armed with the censer, ran through the throng of his people and conquered the fiery angel, 12so the descendant of Aaron, Eleazar, though being consumed by the fire, remained unswayed in his reason. 13Indeed, what was most amazing was that, though he was an old man, the sinews of his body already loosed, his muscles relaxed, his nerves exhausted, he became young again 14in spirit
already loosed, his muscles relaxed, his nerves
exhausted, he became young again 14in spirit through reason, and by reason like that of Isaak he rendered the many-headed rack ineffective. 15O man of blessed age, venerable gray hair and lawobservant life, whom the faithful seal of death has perfected!

16 If, therefore, through piety an aged man despised tortures even unto death, by common acnowledgement pious reason is governor of the passions. 17Perhaps some may say, “Not all have full control of their passions, because not all have prudent reason.” 18But as many as attend to piety with a whole heart, these alone are able to overcome the passions of the flesh, 19since they believe that they do not die to God, even as our patriarcs Abraam, Isaak and Iakob did not die to God, but live to God. 20That some appear to be ruled by passion because of the weakness of their reason does not contradict this in any way. 21What person, who lives as a philosopher by the whole rule of philosophy and trusts in God 22and knows that it is blessed to endure every pain for the sake of virtue, would not gain full control of the passions with the help of godliness? 23For only the wise and courageous are masters of their passions.

8 This is why even the very young, by following a philosophy of reason rooted in piety, have prevailed over even harsher instruments of torture.
2For when the tyrant was patently defeated in his first attempt, being unable to compel an aged man to eat defiling foods, then in exceedingly violent passion he gave orders to bring others from the captives of the Hebrews, and if they ate defiling food, to set them free when they had eaten, but if they refused, to torture them still more cruelly.

3 When the tyrant had given these orders, seven brothers—handsome, modest, noble and accomplished in every way—were brought and stood before him along with their aged mother. 4When the tyrant saw them surrounding their mother in the middle as though they were a chorus, he was pleased with them. Struck by their fine appearance and nobility, he smiled at them, summoned them nearer and said, 5“Young men, with friendly feelings I admire each and every one of you. Greatly prizing the handsomeness and the goodly number of you brothers, so many as you are, I not only advise you not to display the same madness as that of the old man who has just been tortured but also encourage you to yield to me and take advantage of my friendship. 6Just as I am able to punish those who disobey my orders, so I can be a benefactor to those who obey me. 7Trust me, then, and, if you disown the ancestral law of your polity, you will receive leading positions in the affairs of my state. 8Enjoy your youth by embracing a Greek way of life and changing your mode of living. 9For otherwise, if you move me to anger by your disobedience, you will compel me to destroy each and every one of you with terrible punishments through tortures. 10Therefore have compassion on yourselves, you whom even I, your enemy, pity for your youth and becoming appearance. 11Will you not consider this, that, if you disobey, nothing awaits you but to die with torments?”

12 When he had said these things, he gave orders to set the instruments of torture before them so that he might persuade them to eat the defiling food out of fear. 13But when the bodyguards had placed before them wheels, joint-dislocators, racks, hooks, catapults, cauldrons, frying-panS, thumb-screws, iron claws, wedges and bellows, the tyrant resumed speaking: 14“Be fearful, young fellows;
the justice which you revere will be merciful to you if you transgress the law under duress.”

15 But when they had heard the inducements and saw the terrible devices, not only were they not fearful, but they also countered the tyrant with their own philosophy and by their good sense overthrew his tyranny. 16Yet let us consider if some among them had been fainthearted and unmanly, what sorts of arguments they might have used.
Would they not have been these? 17“How hapless we are and too, too foolish! When the king invites us to accept kindness treatment if we obey him, why do we cheer ourselves with vain resolves and venture upon a fatal disobedience? 19Men and brothers, shall we not fear the instruments of torture, take account of the threats of tortures and flee from this vanity and calamitous conceit? 20Let us have compassion on our youth and pity the old age of our mother. 21And let us keep in mind that if we disobey, we shall die. 22Divine justice will make allowance for us if we fear the king under duress. 23Why do we remove ourselves from this most pleasant life and deprive ourselves of this delightful world? 24Let us not test our strength against necessity nor cherish vain opinions at the cost of our own torment on the rack.
25Not even the law itself would readily condemn us to death for fearing the instruments of torture.
26How can it be that such contentiousness has aGk uncertain bAn instrument of torture taken hold of us and a fatal obduracy pleases us, when it is within our power to live undisturbed by obeying the king?"

27 But the young men, though about to be tortured, neither said nor considered any of these things, for they were disdainful of the passions and absolute rulers over agonies. 29As a result, as soon as the tyrant ceased advising them to eat defiling food, they all with one voice together, as though with the same soul, said,

9  "Why do you delay, O tyrant? We are ready to die rather than transgress our ancestral commandments. 2For we would cause our forebears to be ashamed with good reason, if we did not show ready obedience to the law and to Moyses our counselor. 3Counselor and tyrant of transgression, in your hatred for us do not pity us more than we pity ourselves. 4For we consider harsher than death itself the mercy you offer, which ensures our safety at the price of our transgression of the law. 5You are trying to intimidate us, threatening us with death by tortures, as though you did not learn from Eleazaros a short time ago. 6But if the old men of the Hebrews acted piously for the sake of piety even while enduring tortures, still more justly should we young men die, despising the tortures of your imposition, which the old man our teacher conquered. 7Therefore, tyrant, put us to the test, and if you take our lives because of piety, do not think that, by torturing, you hurt us. 8For we, through this suffering and endurance, shall gain the prizes accorded virtue and shall be with God, through this suffering and endurance, shall gain the prizes accorded virtue and shall be with God, through this suffering and endurance, shall gain the prizes accorded virtue and shall be with God, through this suffering and endurance, shall gain the prizes accorded virtue and shall be with God, through this suffering and endurance, shall gain the prizes accorded virtue and shall be with God, through this suffering and endurance, shall gain the prizes accorded virtue and shall be with God, through this suffering and endurance, shall gain the prizes accorded virtue and shall be with God, through this suffering and endurance, shall gain the prizes accorded virtue and shall be with God, through this suffering and endurance, shall gain the prizes accorded virtue and shall be with God, through this suffering and endurance, shall gain the prizes accorded virtue and shall be with God, through this suffering and endurance, shall gain the prizes accorded virtue and shall be with God, through this suffering and endurance, shall gain the prizes accorded virtue and shall be with God, through this suffering and endurance, shall gain the prizes accorded virtue and shall be with God.

10 When they had said these things, the tyrant was not only indignant, as at the ungrateful. 11Thereupon his armor-bearers, on receiving their orders, brought forward the oldest of them, tore off his tunic and bound his hands and arms with thongs on either side. 12When they had exhausted themselves by beating him with scourges, yet accomplished nothing, they hoisted him on the wheel. 13When the noble youth was stretched out around this, his limbs were dislocated. 14Broken in every limb, he began his denunciation: 15"Most abominable tyrant, enemy of heavenly justice, savage-minded, you maltreat me in this way not because I have murdered or acted impiously but because I have championed the divine law." 16And when the bodyguards said, "Agree to eat so that you may be released from the tortures," 17he said, "Your wheel is not so strong, O abominable henchmen, as to strangle my reason. Maim my limbs, burn my flesh, twist my joints; through all these tortures I will persuade you that children of the Hebrews alone are invincible in virtue's defense." 19When he said these things, they spread fire under him, and, while fanning the flames, tightened the wheel further. 20The wheel was stained on all sides with blood, the heap of coals being quenched by the drippings of body fluids, and pieces of flesh whirled around the axes of the machine. 21Although he had already had his skeleton severed, the lofty-minded youth, a true son of Abraam, did not groan, but as though transformed in the fire into immortality, he nobly endured the tortments. 22"I imitate me, brothers," he said. "Do not desert your post in my struggle nor renounce the brotherhood of good courage you share with me. 23Fight the sacred and noble fight for piety; for its sake the just Providence of our ancestors may become merciful to our nation and take vengeance on the accursed tyrant." 25When he had said these words, the saintly young man broke off his life.

26 All marveled at his strength of spirit. Then the bodyguards brought the brother second in age to him, and, after equipping themselves with iron hands with sharp claws, they bound him to the torture machine and catapulted. 27They inquired, before he was tortured, whether he was willing to eat, and they heard his noble decision. 28These leopard-like beasts tore at his sinews with their iron hands, ripped all his flesh off up to his chin and the skin off his head. But he steadfastly endured this agony and said, 29"How sweet is every form of death for the sake of the piety that we have inherited from our ancestors!" To the tyrant he said, 30"Do you not think, tyrant most savage of all, that you are being tortured more than I, as you see the arrogant reasoning of your tyranny defeated by our endurance for the sake of piety? 31I relieve my pain with the joys that come from virtue, but you suffer torture from the threats that hang over impiety. You will not escape, most abominable tyrant, the judgments of divine wrath."

32 When he too had endured a glorious death, the third was led in and was much urged by many to save himself by tasting the meat. 33But he cried out, "Do you not know that the same father begot me as well as those who died; the same mother bore me, and I was brought up on the same tenets? 34I do not renounce the noble ties of brotherhood." 35But they, taking the man's boldness literally, dislocated his hands and feet with their instruments of torture and dismembered him by prying his limbs from their sockets. 36They broke his fingers, arms, legs and elbows. 37Since they were not able in any way to suppress him, they tore off his skin and scalped him with their fingertips in the Scythian fashion. 38Then they immediately brought him to the wheel. On it he was disjoined at his backbone. He saw his own flesh torn all around and drops of blood flowing from his entrails. 39When he was about to die, he said, 40"We, most abominable tyrant, are suffering these things because of training and divine virtue. 41But you, because of your impiety and bloodthirstiness, will endure unceasing tortures." 42When he, too, had died in a manner worthy of his brothers, they dragged in the fourth, saying, 13"Do not display, you too, the same madness as your brothers, but obey the king and save yourself." 14But he said to them, “You do not have a fire for me so very hot that I should play the coward. 15By the blessed death of my brothers, the everlasting destruction of the tyrant and the everlasting life of the pious, I will not disown our noble brotherhood. 16Contrive tortures, tyrant, so that you may learn from them that I am a brother to those who have just now been tortured.” 17When he heard these words, the bloodthirsty, murderous and utterly abominable Antiochus gave orders to cut off his tongue. 18But he a said, “Even if you remove my organ of speech, God hears the silent as well. 19See, my tongue hangs loose already. Cut it off, for you will not cut off, beyond this, the tongue of our reason. 20Glady, for the sake of God, we let the limbs of our bodies be cut off. 21God will pursue you swiftly, for you are cutting off a tongue that has been melodious with divine hymns.” 22

11 When he too died, maltreated by the tortures, the fifth leaped up, saying, 2“Tyrant, I am not about to beg to be excused from torture for the sake of virtue. 3I have come of my own accord so that, by killing me too, you may incur punishment from the heavenly justice for more crimes. 4Hater of virtue, hater of humankind, what have we done that you destroy us in this way? 5Is it that we show devotion to the Creator of all and live by his virtuous law? 6But these deeds deserve honors, not tortures.” 7While he was saying such things, the bodyguards bound him and dragged him to the catapult. 8They tied him to it on his knees, and when they had fitted iron clamps on these, they bent his lower back round the circular wedge. When he was completely curled back round the wheel in the manner of a scorpion, he was dismembered. 9In this condition, gasping for breath and suffocating in body, 10he said, “Tyrant, you grant us splendid favors against your will, according us the opportunity to show our enduring loyalty to the law through yet more noble sufferings.” 11When he too had died, the sixth, a mere boy, was led in. When the tyrant inquired whether he was willing to eat and be released, he said, 12“In age I am younger than my brothers, but in mind I am their peer. 13Since we were born and brought up for the same purposes, we ought likewise also to die for the same causes. 14So if you are resolved to torture me for not eating defiling foods, torture!” 15When he had said these words, they led him to the wheel. 16He was stretched tight upon it with great diligence; his back was broken, and he was roasted from beneath. 17They heated sharp spits in the fire and applied them to his back, pierced his sides and burned his entrails. 18While he was being tortured, he said, “O contest befitting sanctity in which, for the sake of piety, so many of my brothers have been summoned to a school in sufferings, a contest in which we have not been defeated! 19For devout knowledge, O tyrant, is invincible. 20Armed with nobility of character, I too will die with my brothers, and I too will procure for you a great avenger, you inventor of tortures and foe of the truly pious. 21We six lads have overthrown your tyranny. 22For since you can neither sway our reason nor compel us to eat defiling food, is this not your overthrow? 23Your fire is frigid to us, the catapults painless, your violence unavailing. 24The bodyguards that govern us are not those of the tyrant but those of the divine law. That is why we hold our reason undefeated.”

12 When he too, thrown into a cauldron, had died in blessedness, the seventh and youngest of all came forward. 2The tyrant, though he had been vehemently denounced by his brothers, pitied him when he saw the fetters already on him. He summoned him nearer and tried to advise him: 3“You see the result of your brothers’ stupidity; they were tortured on the rack and died for their disobedience. 4You too, if you do not obey, will die, a tortured wretch, before your time. 5But if you obey, you will be my friend and will lead in the affairs of my kingdom.” 6When he had exHORTed him with these words, he summoned the boy’s mother, that he might show mercy to her after she had been deprived of so many sons and that he might urge on the remaining son to a ready obedience that would be his deliverance. 7But when his mother had spurred him on in the Hebrew language, as we shall relate a little later, 8he said, “Loose me, and let me speak to the king and to all his Friends who are with him.” 9Extremely pleased by the boy’s announcement, they quickly loosed him. 10Running to the nearest of the frying pans, 11he said, “Irreverent tyrant, most impious of all the wicked, were you not ashamed, when you have received good things and your kingdom from God, to kill his attendants and torture on the rack those trained in piety? 12For these deeds, justice will store up for you a fire more fierce and everlasting and tortures, which for all time will not release you. 13Though you are a man, most bestial one, you were not ashamed to cut out the tongues of those with feelings just like yours, who are made of the same elements, or to maltreat and torture them in this way. 14Whereas they, by dying nobly, fulfilled their duty of piety toward God, you will grievously lament that you killed without cause those champions of virtue.” 15Thereupon, when he too was about to die, he said, 16“I will not abandon the valor of my brothers. 17I call on the God of my ancestors that he may have mercy on our nation. 18But on you he will take vengeance both in this present life and when you are dead.” 19After he had uttered these imprecations, he flung himself into the frying pans and so gave up.

edged on all sides that pious reason is absolute master of the passions. 2For if they had been enslaved by the passions and had eaten defiling food, we would have said that they were defeated by them. 3Now, however, that is not the case, but through reason, which is commendable in God’s eyes, they overpowered the passions. 4It is impossible to overlook the mind’s supremacy over the passions, for they prevailed over both passion and pains. 5How, then, is it possible not to acknowledge the control of passion by good sense shown by those who gave no heed to the agonies caused by fire? 6For just as towers jutting out over harbors hold back the threats of waves and provide calm to those who sail into the haven, 7so the seven-towered good sense of the young men, by fortifying the harbor of piety, conquered the unruliness of the passions. 8For they constituted a holy chorus of piety and encouraged one another, saying, 9"Brothers, let us die like brothers for the sake of the law; let us imitate the three young men in Assyria who despised the same civic rights accorded us—in a furnace! 10Let us not be cowardly in our demonstration of piety." 11While one said, "Courage, brother," another said, "Bear up nobly," 12and another reminded them, "Remember whence you come and who the father was by whose hand Isaak submitted to be slaughtered for the sake of piety." 13Each of them and all of them together looked at one another, beaming and exceedingly bold, and said, "With our whole heart let us consecrate ourselves to the God who gave us our souls, and let us use our bodies as a bulwark for the law. 14Let us not fear him who thinks he is killing us, for great is the contest of the soul and the peril of everlasting torture awaiting those who transgress the commandment of God. 15Let us arm ourselves, then, with control of passion rooted in divine reason. 16For if we so die, Abraam, Isaak and Iakob will receive us, and all our fathers praise us." 18To each of the brothers who were being dragged away, those who remained said, "Do not shame us, brother, nor play false to our brothers who died before us!" 19You are not ignorant of the bonds of brotherhood, which the divine and all-wise Providence has allotted through fathers to their descendants, implanting them through their mother’s womb. 20In that womb brothers dwell an equal length of time and are shaped for the same time. They grow from the same blood, and from the same life-spring they are brought to mature birth. 21Born after an equal time of gestation, they drink milk from the same fountains by whose embraces minds filled with brotherly love are nourished together. 22They grow more robust through common nurture, daily companionship, other education and our discipline in divine law. 23So strong, indeed, is the sympathy of brotherly love. Yet the seven brothers felt still greater sympathy toward each other. 24For since they were trained in the same law, diligently practiced the same virtues and were brought up together in right living, they loved each other still more. 25Their common zeal for nobility of character intensified their goodwill toward one another and their oneness of mind, 26for with their piety they made brotherly love still dearer to themselves. 27But although nature, companionship and virtuous habits had combined to augment the bonds of brotherhood in their eyes, through their piety those who were left held firm while they saw their brothers maltreated and tortured even unto death.

Moreover, they even spurred them on to face the abuse so that they not only disdained the agonies but also overcame the passions of brotherly love.

2 O powers of reason, more royal than kings and freer than the free! 3O sacred and harmonious unanimity of the seven brothers in defense of piety! 4None of the seven youths played the coward or shrank back from death, 5but all hastened to meet death through the tortures as though running on the path to immortality. 6Just as the hands and feet are moved in harmony at the promptings of the soul, so those holy youths, as though moved by an immortal soul of piety, advanced in harmony to death for the sake of such piety. 7All-sacred band of seven, band of brothers in harmony! Just as the seven days of creation form a circle round piety, 8so the youths in chorus formed a circle round the seven-fold band, negating their fear of the tortures. 9Now, as we hear of those young men’s affliction, we shudder. For their part, not only did they see and not only did they hear the word of immediate threat, but they also suffered and endured, and that in pangs of fire. 10What could be more painful than that? For the power of fire is sharp and intense, and swiftly it destroyed their bodies.

approach their hive, and they defend it to the point of death. Yet sympathy for her children did not move the young men's mother, one in soul as she was with Abraam.

15 O reason of the children, tyrant over the passions! O piety, dearer to the mother than her children! 2When two alternatives lay before her—that of piety and that of the temporary preservation of her seven sons on the terms of the tyrant's promise—3the mother showed her greater love for piety that, according to divine promise, preserves to everlasting life. 4How can I characterize the passions involved in the love of parents for their children? We impress upon the tender nature of a child a remarkable likeness both of soul and of form; especially is this true of mothers, because they are more sympathetic in their feelings toward their offspring than fathers. 5For to the extent that mothers are of tender spirit and bear more children, so much the more attached are they to their children. 6But more than all other mothers, the mother of the seven boys was attached to her children. Through seven pregnancies she had implanted in herself tender love toward them, 7and though, because of the many birth pangs she suffered with each of them, she was bound to feel sympathy for them, 8because of the fear of God she despaired the temporary deliverance of her children. 9Not only so, but because of her sons' nobility of character and their ready obedience to the law, she felt a tender love toward them that was still greater. 10For they were just, self-controlled, courageous, lofty-spirited, full of brotherly love and of such love for their mother that they obeyed her and kept the ordinances even unto death.

11 Nevertheless, though so many factors related to maternal love drew the mother to sympathy, in the case of none of them were the various tortures strong enough to sway her reason; 12rather the mother urged each boy individually and all together on to death for the sake of piety. 13O sacred nature, parental affection, tender love toward offspring, nursing and indomitable maternal passions! 14Yet, though seeing each one tortured on the rack and burned, the mother, for the sake of piety, did not change her course. 15She watched the flesh of her children melt about the fire, their toes and fingers quiver on the ground, the flesh of their heads as far down as their chins exposed like masks.

16 O mother, tried now by pains more bitter than even the birth pangs you suffered for them! 17O woman, who alone gave birth to such perfect piety! 18Your firstborn breathed his last did not alter your resolution or your second born looking at you piteously in his tortures or your third expiring. 19Nor did you weep when you looked at the eyes of each one as they gazed boldly in their tortures at the same abusive treatment or saw in their nostrils the signs of their approaching death. 20When you saw the burning flesh of children lying upon the flesh of children, severed hands upon hands, scalped heads upon heads, corpses fallen upon corpses, and when you saw the place full of people on account of the tortures of your children, you did not shed tears.

21 Neither the songs of sirens nor the voices of swans so draw their hearers to fond listening as the voices of children calling to their mother in their tortures. 22How great and how many were the tortures with which the mother was then tortured as her sons were themselves being tortured on the wheel and with hot irons! 23But in the midst of these very passions, pious reason ended her heart with manly courage and strengthened her to disregard the immediate claims of parental love.

24 Although she witnessed the massacre of her seven children and the convoluted diversity of their torments, the noble mother undid the impact of all these things through her divine faith. 25It was as though, in the council chamber of her mind, the mother saw powerful counselors—nature, birth, parental love, the torments of her children—26and held two ballots concerning her children, one bringing death and one deliverance. 27She gave no heed to the deliverance that would preserve her seven sons for a short time, 28but, as his daughter, called to mind the perseverance of God-fearing Abraam.

16 If, then, a woman, aged and the mother of seven boys, endured seeing the tortures of her children unto death, by common acknowledgment pious reason is absolute ruler of the passions. 2Thus I have demonstrated that not only men overcame their passions, but also a woman disdained the greatest tortures. 3The lions surrounding Daniel were not so savage, nor was the furnace of Misael so ablaze with fiercest fire as the nature of her maternal love inflamed her when she saw her seven sons tortured in such diverse ways. 4But by the reason that is rooted in piety, the mother quenched passions so many and so great.

5 Consider this also: if the woman, although a mother, had been fainthearted, she would have mourned over them and perhaps spoken as follows: 6"O how wretched I am, thrice unhappy time and again! Though I bore seven boys, I have become a mother of none. 7In vain, my seven pregnancies, useless, my seven periods of gestation, unfruitful my nursings, wretched the nourishings at my breast. 8In vain, my boys, did I endure many birth pangs for you and the still more trying anxieties of your upbringing. 9Alas for my boys, some unmarried, others married to no purpose. I shall not see your children or have the happiness of being called grandmother. 10I, a woman with many and fair children, am a widow, alone, with much to lament. 11Nor when I die will I have any of my sons to bury me."

12 Yet the holy, God-fearing mother bewailed none of them with this lament and neither attempted to dissuade any of them from dying, nor, as they died, did she grieve. 13But as though she had a mind of adamant and was giving the full complement of her sons a new birth to life immortal, she rather implored and urged them on to death for the sake of piety. 14O mother, divine soldier in defense of piety, elder, woman! By perseverance you have conquered even a tyrant and proved stronger in deeds and words than a man.

18Remember that it is thanks to God that you have shared in the world and enjoyed life. 19Therefore you ought to endure all suffering for the sake of God, 20for whose sake our father Abraam made haste to sacrifice his son Isaak, a father of our nation; nor did Isaak flinch when he saw his father’s hand bearing a sword and descending upon him. 21Daniel the righteous was thrown to the lions. Hananias, Azarias and Misael were hurled into a furnace of fire and, for the sake of God, endured. 22Since, then, you have the same faith in God, do not be distressed. 23For it would be unreasonable for those who know piety not to withstand sufferings."

24 By means of these words the mother of the seven encouraged and persuaded each of her sons to die rather than transgress the commandment of God. 25And this they knew as well: that those who die for the sake of God, for God now live, as do Abraam, Isaak, Jakob and all the patriarchs.

17 Some of the bodyguards said that when she was about to be carried off to death, she threw herself into the fire so that no one might touch her body. 2O mother, who with your seven boys subverted the strength of the tyrant, frustrated his evil designs and showed the nobility of your faith! 3Like a roof nobly set upon the pillars of your boys, you endured, unmoved, the earthquake of the tortures. 4Take courage, then, holy-minded mother, as you keep firm your enduring hope in God. 5The moon in heaven with the stars is not so awesome as you. After lighting the path to piety for your seven star-like boys, you stand honored before God, firmly set in heaven with them. 6For your childbearing was from Abraam our father.

7 If it were possible for us to paint the story of your piety as on some surface, would not onlookers shudder when they saw the mother of the seven children enduring, for the sake of piety, diverse tortures even unto death? 8Indeed, it would be appropriate to inscribe the following words on their tomb itself as a reminder to the people of our nation:

9 "Here lie buried an aged priest, an aged woman and seven boys, victims of the violence of a tyrant who wished to destroy the polity of the Hebrews. 10They vindicated their nation, looking to God and enduring tortures even unto death."

11 Truly the contest carried on by them was divine, 12for then virtue, testing them for their perseverance, offered rewards. Victory meant incorruptibility in long-lasting life. 13Eleazar contended first; the mother of seven boys entered the fray, and the brothers contended. 14The tyrant was the antagonist; the world and human society looked on. 15Godliness won the victory and crowned its own athletes. 16Who did not marvel at the athletes contending for the divine law code? Who were not astonished?

17 The tyrant himself and all his council marveled at their endurance, 18for which they now stand before the divine throne and live the life of the blessed age. 19For Moyses says, "All the sanctified ones are under your hands." 20And these who have been divinely sanctified are honored not only with this honor, but also in that, thanks to them, our enemies did not prevail over our nation; 21the tyrant was punished, and the homeland was purified, since they became, as it were, a ransom for the sin of the nation. 22And through the blood of those pious people and the propitiatory of their death, divine Providence preserved Israel, though before it had been afflicted.

23 When the tyrant Antiochus saw the courage of their virtue and their endurance under the tortures, he proclaimed to his soldiers that they were an example for their own endurance. 24He made them2 noble and courageous for fighting on foot and for siege and pillaged and conquered all his foes.

18 O Israelite children, offspring of the seed of Abraam, obey this law, and act piously in every way, 2knowing that pious reason is master of the passions and of pains, not only of those from within but also of those from without.

3 Wherefore those who, for the sake of piety, gave over their bodies to sufferings were not only admired by human beings but also deemed worthy of a divine inheritance. 4Thanks to them the nation gained peace; by reviving loyalty to the law in the homeland, they pillaged their enemies. 5The tyrant Antiochus was punished on earth, and now that he has died, he continues to undergo chastisement. For when he was in no way whatever able to compel the Hierosolymites to become allophyles and change their way of life from their ancestral customs, he left Hierosolyma and marched against the Persians.

6 The mother of the seven boys spoke these righteous sayings to her children: 7 "I was a pure virgin and did not step outside my father’s house, but I kept watch over the built rib. 8 No seducer or corruptor on a desert plain corrupted me, nor did the seducer, the snake of deceit, defile the purity of my virginity. 9 At the time of my maturity I remained with my husband; when these sons came of age, their father died. Blessed was he, for he lived a life marked by the blessing of children and did not suffer the grief of the time of childlessness. 10 While he was still with you, he taught you the law and the prophets. 11 He read to you of Habel, who was murdered by Kain, of Isaak, who was offered as a whole burnt offering, of Ioseph in prison. 12 He told you of the zealot Phinees; he taught you about Hananias, Azarias and Misael in the fire. 13 He praised Daniel in the den of the lions and blessed him. 14 He reminded you of the scripture of Esaias, which says, 'Even if you should go through fire, the flame shall not consume you.' 15 He sang for you with words of the psalmist Davud when he says, 'Many are the afflictions of the righteous.' 16 For you he cited the proverb of Salomon when he says, 'He is a tree of life to those who do his will.' 17 He affirmed the words of Iezekiel when he says, 'Shall these dry bones live?' 18 For he did not forget to teach the song that Moyses taught which says, 19 'I will kill, and I will make alive; this is your life and the length of your days.' " 20 O bitter was that day—and yet not bitter—when the bitter tyrant of the Greeks quenched fire with fire in his cruel cauldron and with seething rage brought the seven boys of the daughter of Abraam to the catapult and again to his tortures, 21 pierced the pupils of their eyes, cut off their tongues and killed them with various tortures. 22 For these deeds divine justice has pursued and will pursue the accursed tyrant. 23 But the children of Abraam with their prizewinning mother are gathered together into the chorus of the fathers and have received pure and immortal souls from God, 24 to whom be glory forever and ever. Amen.

The NETS translation of the book of Psalms has been based primarily on the edition of Alfred Rahlfs, Psalmi cum Odís (Septuaginta: Vetus Testamentum Graecum Auctoritate Academiae Litterarum Gottingensis editum X [Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1967 (1931)]). Although Rahlfs is not a full-fledged critical edition of the Greek Psalter, it is the best available and as such an appropriate text with which to begin. The present NETS translation has been revised from its first appearance in a separately published fascicle.¹

At not a few places, Rahlfs enclosed within square brackets items of text, which, although they could not in his judgment justifiably be regarded as original, nevertheless have widespread support in the textual traditions. Since in all of these cases I agree with Rahlfs’ conclusion, I have taken the next step and have excluded these items from NETS without comment.

Further improvements to Rahlfs’ edition have been made in the light of additional textual information (chiefly II–V CE; especially the famous P. Bodmer XXIV [Rahlfs 2110]) and more recent study. All these, however, have been included in the footnotes to NETS. Nevertheless, there remains good reason to emphasize that a liturgical text such as the Psalter, with its long and intensive transmission history, can hardly be expected to have been fully restored as yet to its pristine purity. I have therefore followed Rahlfs’ lead and, in addition to changing his text, have placed within square brackets items whose originality I consider to be suspect. These may be eliminated altogether by a future editor more courageous than I or armed with additional evidence.

TRANSLATION PROFILE OF THE GREEK

General Character

There can be no doubt that the NETS paradigm of the Greek as an interlinear translation of the Hebrew is applicable to the book of Psalms. That is to say, the linguistic relationship of the Greek text to the Hebrew text is one of dependence and subservience. Yet within that model it has its own profile. Its translation is literal, if literalness is understood to refer to a high degree of consistency in one-to-one equivalence, including not only so-called content words but structural words as well. Thus literalness might be labeled its central characteristic.

Literalness may, however, be nuanced in several ways. The number of many-to-one Hebrew-Greek equations is relatively high. That is to say, the translator often selected a single Greek word (or root) for several Hebrew counterparts. This feature, semantic leveling, is fully compatible with the interlinear paradigm and for that reason should not be attributed to the translator’s lack of literary imagination. Included here are words and concepts that seem to have been his default stock-in-trade. Thus, for example, ἀντιλήμπτωρ (“supporter”) and βοηθός (“helper”) translate seven Hebrew words each, and their cognates further underscore the translator’s predilection for them. Obviously, these readily came to mind when the translator looked for suitable equivalents to the Hebrew. Similarly, Greek words that convey relatedness to the “law” (νόμος) such as “lawlessness” (ἀνομία), “lawless” (ἀνομος), “to act in a lawless manner” (ἀνομέω), “to transgress the law” (παρανυκτώ), “transgressor of the law” (παράνυκτος)—are prominent. Or again a concept like “injustice” (ἀδικία + cognates) receives an emphasis in the Greek disproportionate to the Hebrew. As a result, the reader of NETS will read more about God’s “supporting” and “helping” of humans, and similarly more about the law as a yardstick for “good,” “evil” and “injustice,” than will the reader of NRSV.

Not surprisingly perhaps the number of one-to-many Hebrew-Greek equations is relatively low. In such cases a single Hebrew word or root is translated by at least two or more Greek words. Some examples of such differentiation are “good” (גָּם) rendered by “good” (ἀγαθός) and “kind” (χρηστός), and  “servant/slave” (אָרָה) translated most often by “slave” (δουλός) but on a few occasions by “child/servant/slave” (παῖς). As might be expected, such differentiation of meaning happens with greater frequency on the verbal (more abstract) side of the language than on the nominal (more concrete) side. Hebrew “to turn” ((turn), for instance, is rendered by twelve different Greek verbs. Nonetheless, though a measure of differentiation occurs, it is typically rather restricted. Thus, in the example just cited, ἐπι- and στρέφω account for nearly two-thirds of all instances. Again, this phenomenon of limited and restricted differentiation or an overemphasis on word-centered meaning may be said to be at home in an interlinear linguistic environment.

The above does not preclude that leveling, and especially differentiation, cannot at times serve purely stylistic purposes, but given the general nature of the Greek translation of Psalms, leveling and differentiation are usually the better explanation.

An interesting example, which could be differentiation for purely stylistic reasons, is the equation of Hebrew “to answer” (עָזַב) with Greek “to listen to” (ἐπισκούω or εἰσκούω), when God is the subject. Though it is not difficult to discern something of a semantic shift from Hebrew to Greek, it is not certain that one should make a distinction in meaning between the two Greek words. Interestingly, εἰσκούω also translates Hebrew “to hear” (עָבַה), though ἐπισκούω does not. Thus, in part at least, here too a difference in the Greek echoes a difference in the Hebrew, and to that extent it is still expressive of literalness. For NETS I have opted for the synonyms “to listen” (εἰσκούω) and “to hearken” (ἐπισκούω) respectively.

Other aspects of literalness—or better isomorphism—at both the lexical and grammatical levels add further flavor to the Greek of Psalms. As noted, expressive of the interlinear model, our translator had a strong tendency to overemphasize the importance of individual words and formal details of the Hebrew, at the expense of communicating its coherent meaning. For example, in a number of passages he mechanically transferred the Hebrew gender of a pronominal, thereby presenting an exegetical challenge to anyone reading the text independent of the Hebrew: 26.3–4; 73.18; 80.6; 108.27; 117.23; 118.50; 131.6. (I have flagged such instances in the notes.) Indeed, the Greek translator’s starting point was at times almost directly opposite to that advocated by modern semanticists. Not infrequently, he began with the individual word and its supposed core meaning rather than with meaning as it is conveyed by the interrelationship of words in syntactic units. Differently put, one could say that he tends to maximize the individual word and to minimize the context in which it stands, rather than vice-versa.

Though at times the translator might be charged with throwing at his reader the Hebrew text in Greek guise, to call him a hack would be unfair. Instead, as has been suggested, his translating is heavily circumscribed by linguistic interlinearity, which informs his task. Indeed, from that perspective it clearly makes little sense to charge him with inadequate knowledge of Greek and lack of stylistic sensitivity. Even in the superscripts where no context comes to his assistance, he at times introduces an interpretive spin. One may note, for example, that although נָתַן (a type of song) is rather mechanically glossed by “understanding” (σοφία), usually the latter is interpretively put into the genitive case (31.1; 51.1; 52.1; 53.1; 54.1; 73.1; 77.1; 87.1; 88.1), with the result that the entire psalm in question might now be read as having to do with “understanding.” Yet, other such interpretive spins in the titles seem less transparent. When, for example, an individual composition is labeled both a psalm and song (in line with the parent text), he usually makes one an attributive of the other. So in Ps 29.1; 47.1; 66.1; 67.1; 74.1; 86.1; 91.1 we have a “psalm of a song” (ψαλμός ωδής) and in 65.1; 82.1; 87.1; 107.1 “a song of a psalm” (ωδή ψαλμός). Since ψαλμός refers in the first instance to instrumental music and ωδή to vocal music, it is not impossible, as has been suggested ad loc., that he had in mind the relative predominance of these two aspects. But what of “praise-song of a song” (?) (δίον ωδής) in 90.1; 92.1; 94.1, since both terms seem to have a vocal reference? Thus, it is clear that the translator often puts the form of the text above its meaning. Admittedly, he is kinder to his readers in the acrostic Ps 118, when he not only gives the names of the letters of the Hebrew alphabet, which mark the beginning of each alphabetic strophe, but also supplies a standard Greek numerical equivalent.

Understandably, it is especially idiomatized and figurative language that tends to suffer severely at the hands of a heavily word-based, interlinear mode of translation. When in 34(35).3 “to empty out the spear” (טַלַּת נָעַר) is translated by “to pour out the sword”—and a big sword at that!—(κλέψεω ρούμοριαν) we have decidedly unidiomatic Greek. NRSV translates idiomatically “draw the spear” and the Greek translator might have done likewise but did not.

To be sure, a modern translator, in the nature of the case, tends to overemphasize what is problematic about the work of an ancient translator and underemphasize what causes no problems. In spite of the translation model he used, most of what the Greek translator of Psalms did is intelligible—and that includes many passages in which the Hebrew text is less than clear—if not idiomatic. He will even at times introduce difference—where the Hebrew text is identical—perhaps for the sake of variation in style, though that is not the only available explanation. An instructive example is Ps 59:7–14 in comparison with Ps 107:7–14.

Indeed, one can even find some literary sparks, the exceptions that prove the rule of his regular mode. So at 48(49).3 where the Hebrew text speaks of "(sons of) man" (נַפְלִים נַפְלִים) and "(sons of) men" (נַפְלִים), the translator, rather than resorting to his standard equivalents, decided to render the first phrase by "earthborn" (γηγενεύς) (a word virtually unknown in the Septuagint) and neatly balanced the pair by a "both . . . and" conjunctive. In 10(11).2 the phrase "to shoot in the dark (אֲבֹדָה) at the upright in heart" becomes "to shoot in a moonless night (σκοτόμην) at the upright in heart," thus employing a picturesque word rare in Greek and unattested elsewhere in the Septuagint corpus. Or again, in 26(27).9 Hebrew "to forsake" (אָבֹדָה), elsewhere rendered simply as "to reject" (ἀποκεφάλω), is translated by the rare and graphic verb "to throw to the crows" (ἄποσκορακίζω), glossed in NETS by "to damn." Ps 109.3 features "morning-star" (ἐνυδαφόρος) for Hebrew "morning" (אָבֹדָה) rather than the less colorful "morning" (ὅραμα) he uses elsewhere. Such literary nuggets are admittedly not many, and one would scarcely expect them in a text whose evident purpose it is to point the reader away from itself, but they do exist, and they do add a dimension to our translator’s work. Yet, when all is said and done, it is the Psalter’s literality or isomorphism that establishes a baseline for translator and exegete alike.

Of Stereotypes, Calques and Isolates

The vast majority of words in the Psalms have standard Greek meanings, and that includes the so-called stereotypes, which, due to rigid equation with a single Hebrew counterpart, sometimes fit poorly into their context. Among these may be counted περασφορά ("to embitter") + cognates, θέλω ("to want") + cognates, είς τέλος ("completely"), στεφάρ ("fat" in a context where "prosperity" is needed), νεφρός ("kidney" in reference to the seat of the emotions), ψαλμός ("psalm"), ειρήμη ("peace" in reference to a person’s well-being).

Calques (Greek words with Hebrew meaning, institutionalized prior to the translation) can be found in Psalms as well. The clearest example is διαθήκη, a word that probably began its life in Jewish usage as a stereotype but that in the Psalter is clearly a calque and therefore appropriately translated by "covenant" (the stock meaning of Hebrew פְּרָע, rather than the "testament" of extra-biblical Greek). It is also possible that νόμος ("law") carries the added sense of "teaching," derived from נָבָר, its standard Hebrew counterpart but more likely represents a semantic shift of נָבָר by the third century BCE.

The Greek translator’s overemphasis on individual words and his preoccupation with the lower levels of constituent structure are most clearly noticeable in his isolate renderings. Typically, in such cases, etymology of the Hebrew word plays a central role. By way of illustration, in Ps 7.7 Hebrew נְבָר ("overflow/arrogance/fury") is translated via נְבָר = πέραν ("across") by πέρας ("end")—a word representing entirely different Hebrew lexemes elsewhere in Psalms—and the Greek line as a whole must mean something like: "be exalted at the deaths of my enemies." A glance at Ps 38.4 confirms that πέρας within the Psalter can indeed refer to the terminus of human life. Or does the line mean what Thomson thought it did: "Exalt Thyself in the borders of mine enemies"? Whatever the case, as a result of the translator’s adherence to interlinearity his text, on the one hand, means something quite different from MT and, on the other, is scarcely intelligible in Greek.

The Nets Translation of Psalms

General Approach

But if the Greek translator’s approach to his Hebrew text was all too often indeed what I have alleged it to be, namely, an isomorphic approach with a primary focus on representing the source text, not infrequently at the expense of coherent sense, what are the options of a NETS translator to render this “interlinear” Greek into English? Clearly as long as words are fully concordant with their context and the grammar is at least transparent, NETS can be expected to read relatively smoothly.

Though I have eschewed any rigid policy of one-to-one Greek-English equation, a reasonable effort has been made to reproduce word echoes in the Greek, which may or may not reflect echoes in the Hebrew. In passing it deserves to be mentioned that this effort has not infrequently meant that the reading of the NRSV has been replaced by a synonym in NETS.

By “reasonable effort” it should be understood that the more circumscribed a word’s meaning the better it lends itself to representation by a single English equivalent. Not surprisingly, therefore, there are many Greek terms, especially on the nominal (more concrete) side of the language, that have been given a single (or at least a default) English equivalent. Thus a word such as ὀρος (“mountain”) has been rendered throughout by “mountain,” even when NRSV, for literary reasons, had opted for “hill” to translate the identical Hebrew word ( הר). Similarly, ἀμορτολός (+ cognates), the standard equivalent for both מֵרָה and בֶּשְׁם, has been uniformly rendered “sinner.” Countless others have been treated in the same way.

When I have judged that the Greek translator differentiates vis-à-vis the Hebrew for semantic reasons, I have typically differentiated in NETS.

The highest level of one-to-one Greek-English consistency in Psalms will be observable within individual psalms.

Perhaps the lowest level of one-to-one consistency has been feasible with respect to relational words, notably prepositions, including phrases that function as prepositions. The obvious reason for this is that such words play a primarily structural role and as such carry little fixed meaning. (See further below.)

I have already touched on the problem of idiomatic and figurative language. Although in a replacement type of translation idioms and figurative expressions in the source language are typically lost in the process, others are often gained from the target language, thus producing a kind of equilibrium of loss and gain. In Septuagint translationese, however, one would hardly expect that to be the case, and especially in a poetic book such as Psalms we see a decidedly unilateral process. In fact, because of its highly literal approach, what is figurative in Hebrew frequently becomes an oddity in Greek. For example, although Hebrew מִשְׁמַר (‘keeper’) often figuratively refers to human emotions, σφος in Greek means only “kidney.” Therefore any figurative sense is imposed by the (translated) context. Because NETS has opted for a representative translation style, what is unidiomatic and nonfigurative in the Greek will often be the same in English.

The so-called superscriptions or titles to individual psalms cause a disproportionate grief to a translator, modern and ancient alike. The reason for this, in addition to frequent lexical obscurity, is that the words and expressions used are typically without context. Since there is reason to believe that the superscriptions grew in a piecemeal, atomistic fashion, I have treated them in NETS in an atomistic fashion even beyond the NRSV. The reader who is troubled by this may simply ignore the punctuation between discrete items and string them together.

The Greek translator’s word-based approach is as evident in the superscriptions as everywhere else. Yet within those parameters there is some evidence of differentiation, some of which has already been noted. Thus, for example, one encounters both nominatives and genitives without explicit warrant in the Hebrew, within those parameters there is some evidence of differentiation, some of which has already been noted. Thus, for example, one encounters both nominatives and genitives without explicit warrant in the Hebrew, and datives as well as accusative constructions reflecting Hebrew נ. All in all, whether as a result of differentiation or one-to-one equation with the Hebrew, there is a variety of words/phrases that may be labeled “expressions of general reference.” That is to say, they indicate without much specificity (partly due to lack of context) that x has something to do with y. Where the Greek differs in detail I have followed suit in NETS.

One of these “expressions of general reference” is τὸ Δαυιδ ( τὸ  Ασάφ et al.). Since the Greek translator clearly did not assign authorship per se to such Psalms, I have opted for the reasonably neutral phrase “Pertaining to David” ( et al.). Since the Greek translator clearly did not assign authorship per se to such Psalms, I have opted for the reasonably neutral phrase “Pertaining to David” ( et al.), since it allows for a range of perceived connections with the person(s) in question.

NRSV’s “Psalm” has for reasons of tradition been retained in the superscriptions. It is by no means certain, however, that Greek ψαλμος (“psalm”), at the time of the Greek translator, was already a technical term. As noted earlier, I have regarded it as stereotype, which means that it still had its chiefly instrumental rather than vocal sense and as such referred in the first instance to a tune being played on a stringed instrument (harp or lyre), which was then plucked (ψαλλω) with the fingers rather than struck with a plectrum. Along the same lines, διαψαλμα, which consistently renders Hebrew פסח (“Selah”), a word of uncertain meaning, has been interpreted to mean not simply an interlude but an interlude on strings and rendered accordingly in NETS. Evidently in recognition of the fact that it indicated a pause in the musical proceedings, the Greek translator did not represent “Selah” when it stood at the close of a psalm (3.9; 23.10; 45.12).

Another frequent item in the titles is ὁδηγός, the regular translation of מַשָּׁל (‘song’). Though “song” would have been defensible for NETS, I have opted, with some hesitation, for “Ode” instead. To be sure, ὁδηγός is the standard equivalent of מַשָּׁל (36x) and may be a calque, since it already occurs in the Greek Pentateuch as an equivalent for מַשָּׁל, on five occasions within Psalms (32.3; 39.4; 95.1; 97.1; 149.1) the translator opted for ςαμα ("song"). This may suggest that he meant to differentiate the two. The presence of καινόν ("new") with all five instances of ςαμα may further indicate that an ωδη was thought of as being more of a traditional song in distinction from a new and ad hoc composition. But the latter point can clearly not be pressed in light of ωδη καινόν ("new ode") in 143.9. Consequently, whatever the precise difference in the Greek, I have sought to mirror a difference in NETS by translating the terms as "Ode" and "song" respectively.

Since the Greek Psalter provides no evidence that the translator made any serious attempt at distinguishing between the divine names ὕψι ("Yahweh," including the short form "yah") and ὄνομα ("Adonai"), I have in accordance with NETS policy rendered all occurrences of κύριος, when representing either, by "Lord."

Hades, one of very few translations into Greek, which has not been translated into English, is probably a calque. If that is correct, to translate it simply by English "hell" would seem to be as inappropriate as rendering its Hebrew counterpart, Sheol, by that term.

There is reason to believe that the translator's chief reason for using σκήνωμα, and by extension κατασκήνω, is to reserve σκήνη for the Tabernacle, in line with Pentateuchal usage. Consequently, it appears unlikely that σκήνωμα is meant to carry any special nuance, apart from its general sense of non-permanence. In Psalms (and elsewhere in NETS), therefore, the noun has been rendered by "covert," and the verb by "encamp," in distinction from "tent" for σκήνη.

Greek δοῦλος in Psalms has been rendered, with some hesitation, by "slave." The hesitation stems purely from the connotation "slave" carries in modern English. The Greek Pentateuch translated Hebrew שָׁבָא ("servant"/"slave") almost exclusively by Greek παῖς, a word with a very similar semantic range. Leuitikon 25.44 and 26.13, where δοῦλος is found instead, confirm the difference between the two Greek terms. The translator of Psalms chose almost exclusively δοῦλος ("slave") (53x) with only four occurrences of παῖς. Esaias and Jeremias present a mix with Iezekiel inclining toward δοῦλος and the Minor Prophets completely in the latter camp. There is no evidence for arguing that δοῦλος in Psalms is a calque.

Since ἀναβασίας has no prior history within the LXX in the sense of "ascents," it can scarcely be called a calque (if indeed its Hebrew counterpart has that meaning?). Since both inside and outside the LXX, the word is used only in the sense of steps (of a stairway), it evidently carries its normal semantic range. What we seem to have, therefore, is a stereotype, which arose because the translator insisted on the equation οὗτος > ἀναβασίας. Why he did not choose ἀναβασίας instead—which occurs in 83.6, but for a different Hebrew root—may be surprising but suggests in any case that he was not thinking of "ascending/ascension" as such. Accordingly, NETS readers will read of Songs of the Steps rather than Songs of Ascents. Of interest is that according to Jewish exegetical tradition these psalms were recited by the Levites on the fifteen steps leading from the court of the men to that of the women in the temple.3

Some Problems of Grammar

Since the Psalms are poetic literature and furthermore typically do not tell a story with a timeline of its own, the Hebrew verbal categories of tense-aspect presented something of a problem to the Greek translator. Quite clearly he ended up by working with a set of default or unmarked equations. Thus Hebrew yiqtol forms are normally translated by the Greek future indicative, the qatal by the aorist indicative, and the participle often by the present indicative. It should be noted, however, that participles are also often translated by participles, even though that may produce either strained syntax in the Greek or an obvious change in syntax.

Though he had his default equivalents, apparent awareness of contextual sense brought about some flexibility. Nevertheless, the defaults produced a certain stiltedness and abruptness in the use and sequence of Greek tenses. In an effort to communicate at least some of this quality to the reader of NETS, I have typically rendered all Greek aorists by the English simple past, even when the NRSV has used the present perfect—which is not to say that the Greek aorist and the English simple past are linguistically identical.

A second grammatical item that occasioned some discomfort is the preposition. The primary function of prepositions is grammatical; that is to say, prepositions forge relationships between constituents of sentences. Nonetheless, like full words or lexemes but unlike lexically empty structural markers such as case endings, prepositions have some lexical content. They may appropriately be referred to as (semantically) bleached words or lexemes in distinction from (semantically) full words or lexemes. Once this is realized, it comes as no surprise that when prepositions are treated as though they were full lexemes with a set meaning, idiomatic usage tends to go out the window (cf. the earlier note on idiomatic language). Yet this is precisely what often happens in the Greek Psalms due to the fact that its translator often read the Hebrew text in an atomistic manner. The result is that each Hebrew preposition was typically given a default equivalent in Greek, and this default tended to be used irrespective of whether it produced idiomatic Greek. Since the issue here is frequently one of infelicity in Greek style (which is difficult to mimic in English) rather than change in meaning from the Hebrew, such instances have been largely ignored for the purposes of NETS, lest one produce senseless English! The rule of thumb has been to ignore all instances of default equations between Hebrew and Greek but to take seriously instances of non-default equations, the assumption being that when the translator deviated from his routine he did so for a reason.

Greek καί (“and”), the standard equivalent of Hebrew ḫ (“and”), has been rendered routinely by “and,” even where the NRSV suppresses ḫ.

Since Greek Psalms often lacks articles when they are not explicitly warranted by the source text, such absence has been taken seriously in NETS.

EDITORIAL DETAIL
Punctuation in Rahlfs’ edition of the Greek Psalter has been treated with respect but not regarded as normative.

Unlike “Selah” in the NRSV, its equivalent in NETS, “interlude on strings,” is consistently followed by an empty line on the grounds that any interlude signals a pause.

In their division of materials the Masoretic and the Greek Psalters do not completely agree. Since MT Psalms 9 and 10 are a single psalm in the Greek (9) and Greek Psalm 113 is two psalms in MT (114, 115), between these points the numbering of LXX is up by one from MT. Further, since LXX Psalms 114 and 115 equal MT 116.1–9 and 116.10–19 respectively, and MT 147.1–11 and 12–20 constitute LXX 146 and 147, between these points we have an identical number of Psalms, though their enumeration varies by one.

Versification in MT, LXX and NRSV is potentially more confusing. While MT and LXX coincide, the NRSV excludes the psalm titles from the numbering and as a result is out of step with both MT and LXX. NETS follows the Rahlfs numbering for chapters and verses but gives the NRSV numbers in parentheses.

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL NOTE
Apart from standard grammars and lexica, I have benefited from other English translations of the Greek Psalter such as those of Brenton (1844) and Thomson (1808) (see “TO THE READER OF NETS”), but particularly from the more recent renditions by A. Lazarus, The Holy Psalter from the Septuagint (Madras: Diocesan Press, 1966), by the Fathers of the Holy Transfiguration Monastery, The Psalter according to the Seventy (Boston, 1987), and by José M. de Vinck and Leonidas C. Contos, The Psalms Translated from the Greek Septuagint (Allendale NJ: Alleluia Press, 1993). A copy of the The Psalter acc. to the Seventy was kindly sent to me by Father Basil. It should be borne in mind, however, that the aim of NETS has been distinctly different from any of these. Among the more exegetical treatments, Martin Flashar’s “Exegetische Studien zum Septuagintpsalter” (ZAW 32 [1912] 81–116, 161–198, 241–268) has been invaluable, as has been F. W. Mozley, The Psalter of the Church (Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1905).

My graduate students in Septuagint at the University of Toronto, Cameron Boyd-Taylor, Paul McLean, Tony Michael, Marc Saunders, Tyler Williams, Jannes Smith and Wade White have been of great help. A special debt of gratitude I owe, however, to Cameron for his incisive and persistent critique, which has immeasurably improved the final product.

ALBERT PIETERSMA
BOOK I
(Psalms 1–40[41])

Psalm 1

1 Happy the man who did not walk by the counsel of the impious, and in the way of sinners did not stand, and on the seat of pestiferous people did not sit down.
2 Rather, his will is in the law of the Lord, and on his law he will meditate day and night.
3 And he will be like the tree that was planted by the channels of waters, which will yield its fruit in its season, and its leaf will not fall off. And in all that he does, he will prosper.
4 Not so the impious, not so! Rather, they are like the dust that the wind flings from off the land.
5 Therefore the impious will not rise up in judgment, nor sinners in the council of the righteous,
6 because the Lord knows the way of the righteous, and the way of the impious will perish.

Psalm 2

1 Why did nations grow insolent, and peoples contemplate vain things?
2 The kings of the earth stood side by side, and the rulers gathered together, against the Lord and against his anointed, against the Lord and against his anointed,
3 “Let us burst their bonds asunder and cast their yoke from us.”
4 He who resides in the heavens will laugh at them, and the Lord will mock them.
5 Then he will speak to them in his wrath, and in his anger he will trouble them. “But I was established king by him, on Sion, his holy mountain, by proclaiming the Lord's ordinance:
The Lord said to me, ‘My son you are; today I have begotten you.
Ask of me, and I will give you nations as your heritage, and as your possession the ends of the earth.
You shall shepherd them with an iron rod, and like a potter's vessel you will shatter them.’ “

Psalm 3

1 A Psalm. Pertaining to David. When he was running away from his son Absalom.
2(1) O Lord, why did those who afflict me multiply? Many are rising against me;
3(2) many are saying to me, “There is no deliverance for him in his God.”

Interlude on strings

4(3) But you, O Lord, you are my supporter, my glory, and one who lifts up my head.
5(4) With my voice I cried to the Lord, and he hearkened to me from his holy mountain.

Interlude on strings

6(5) I lay down and slept; I woke again, because the Lord will support me.
7(6) I shall not be afraid of ten thousands of people who are setting themselves against me all around.
8(7) Rise up, O Lord! Save me, O my God, because you are the one who struck all who are hostile to me for nothing: the teeth of sinners you shattered.
9(8) Deliverance is the Lord’s, and may your blessing be on your people!

Psalm 4

1 Regarding completion. Among psalms. An Ode. Pertaining to David.
2(1) When I would call, the God of my righteousness listened to me. In affliction you gave me room.

Interlude on strings

And now, O kings, be sensible; be instructed, all you who judge the earth.
Be subject to the Lord with fear, and rejoice in him with trembling.
Seize upon instruction, lest the Lord be angry, and you will perish from the righteous way, when his anger quickly blazes out.

Happy are all who trust in him.

Psalm 3

And now, O kings, be sensible; be instructed, all you who judge the earth.
Be subject to the Lord with fear, and rejoice in him with trembling.
Seize upon instruction, lest the Lord be angry, and you will perish from the righteous way, when his anger quickly blazes out.

1 Regarding completion. Over her that inherits. A Psalm. Pertaining to David.

2(1) To my words give ear, O Lord; take note of my cry.

3(2) Pay attention to the voice of my petition, my King and my God, because to you I will pray, (3)O Lord.

4 In the morning you will listen to my voice; in the morning I will present myself to you and will look on,

5(4) because you are not a god who wants lawlessness; one whom does evil will not sojourn with you.

6(5) Lawbreakers will not endure before your eyes; you hated all who practice lawlessness.

7(6) You will destroy all those who speak the lie; a bloodthirsty and deceitful man the Lord abhors.

8(7) But I, through the abundance of your mercy, I will enter into your house; I will do obeisance toward your holy shrine in awe of you.

9(8) O Lord, guide me in your righteousness for the sake of my enemies; make straight your way before me.

10(9) Because there is no truth in their mouths, their heart is vain; their throat is an opened grave; with their tongues they would practice deceit.

11(10) Judge them, O God; let them fall by their own schemes; in accordance with their many impieties cast them out, because they embittered you, O Lord.

12(11) And let all who hope in you be glad; forever they will rejoice, and you will encamp among them, and those who love your name will boast in you,

13(12) because you will bless the righteous; O Lord, you crowned us as with a shield of favor.

Psalm 6

1 Regarding completion. Among hymns. Over the eighth. A Psalm. Pertaining to David.

2(1) O Lord, do not rebuke me in your anger, nor discipline me in your wrath.

3(2) Have mercy on me, O Lord, because I am weak; heal me, O Lord, because my bones were troubled.

4(3) And my soul also was troubled very much, and you, O Lord—how long?

5(4) Turn, O Lord; rescue my soul; save me for the sake of your mercy,

6(5) because in death there is no one who makes mention of you, and in Hades who will acknowledge you?

7(6) I was weary with my moaning; every night I will bathe my bed; with my tears I will drench my couch.

8(7) My eye was troubled due to anger; I grew old among all my enemies.

9(8) Keep away from me, all you who practice lawlessness, because the Lord listened to the voice of my weeping.

10(9) The Lord listened to my petition; the Lord accepted my prayer.

11(10) May all my enemies be ashamed and be very much troubled; may they be turned back and, in a moment, be very much put to shame.

11 Righteous is my help from God, he who saves the upright in heart.

12 God is a righteous judge, i [and strong and patient j], one who does not bring on wrath every day.

13 If you do not turn back, he will make his sword gleam; his bow he bent and prepared it,

15 Look, he was in travail with injustice; he conceived toil and prepared forth lawlessness.

1 Regarding completion. Over the wine vats. A Psalm. Pertaining to David.

2 O Lord, our Lord, how admirable is your name in all the earth, because your magnificence was raised beyond the heavens.

3 Out of mouths of infants and nurslings you furnished praise k for yourself, for the sake of your enemies, to put down enemy and avenger,

4 because I will observe the heavens, works of your fingers—moon and stars—things you alone founded.

5 What is man that you are mindful of him or son of man that you attend to him?

6 You diminished him a little in comparison with angels; with glory and honor you crowned him.

7 And you set him over the works of your hands; you subjected all under his feet,

Psalm 17(18)

Regarding completion. Pertaining to David the servant of the Lord, what he said to the Lord, the words of this ode in the day in which the Lord rescued him from the hand of all his enemies and from the hand of Saul. And he said:

I will love you, O Lord, my strength. The Lord is my firmness and my refuge and my rescuer; my God is my helper, and I will hope in him, my protector and horn of my deliverance, my supporter.

When I praise, I will call upon the Lord, and from my enemies I shall be saved.

Pangs of death encompassed me, and wadis of lawlessness alarmed me; pangs of Hades encircled me; snares of death outran me.

And when I was being afflicted, I called upon the Lord, and to my God I cried. From his holy shrine he heard my voice, and my cry before him will enter into his ears.

And the earth shook and was atremble, and the foundations of the mountains were disturbed and shook, because God was angry with them.

Smoke went up in his wrath, and fire flamed from before him; coals were ignited by him.

And he sloped heaven and came down, and thick darkness was under his feet.

And he mounted upon cherubim and flew; he flew upon the wings of winds.

And he made darkness his hideaway; around him was his tent, dark water in clouds of air.

And the Lord thundered from heaven, and the Most High gave forth his voice.

And he sent out arrows and scattered them; lightnings he multiplied and confounded them.

And the springs of the waters appeared, and the foundations of the world were uncovered at your rebuke, O Lord, at the blast of the breath of your wrath.

He sent out from on high, and he took me; he took me to himself out of many waters.

He will rescue me from my powerful enemies and from those that hate me, because they were too stout for me.

And he brought me out into spaciousness; he will rescue me, because he wanted me.

And the Lord will reward me according to my righteousness, and according to the cleanness of my hands he will give back to me.

because I kept the ways of the Lord and did not impiously depart from my God, because all his judgments were before me and his statutes I did not put away from me.
24(23) And I shall be blameless with him, and I shall keep myself from my lawlessness.

25(24) And the Lord will reward me according to my righteousness and according to the cleanness of my hands before his eyes.

26(25) With the devout you will be deemed devout, and with the innocent man you will be innocent,

27(26) and with the select you will be select, and with the crooked you will pervert,

28(27) because it is you who will save a humble people, and the eyes of haughty you will humble,

29(28) because it is you who will light my lamp, O Lord—O my God, you will light my darkness—

30(29) because in you I shall be rescued from a pirate’s nest, and in my God I will scale a wall.

31(30) My God—blameless is his way, the sayings of the Lord, tried by fire; he is a protector of all who hope in him, 32(31) because, who is god except the Lord?

33(32) God who girded me with power, and he made my way blameless,

34(33) refitting my feet like a deer’s and setting me on the heights,

35(34) training my hands for battle, and my arms you made a bronze bow.

36(35) And you gave me protection for my deliverance, and your right hand supported me, and your instruction set me straight completely.

37(36) You made spacious my strides under me, and my footsteps did not weaken.

38(37) I will pursue my enemies and overtake them, and I will not turn away until they fail.

39(38) I will much afflict them, and they will not be able to stand; they shall fall under my feet.

40(39) And you girded me with power for battle; you shackled under me those who rise up against me.

41(40) And as for my enemies—you gave me their back, and those who hated me you destroyed.

42(41) They cried out, and there was no one to save, to the Lord, and he did not listen to them.

43(42) And I will pulverize them like dust before the wind; like the mire of streets I will grind them down.

44(43) You will rescue me from disputes with people;
you will appoint me as head of nations; a people whom I did not know was subject to me.

45(44) At the ear’s hearing, it obeyed me.

46(45) Sons of strangers lied to me.

47(46) The Lord lives! And blessed be my God, and let the God of my deliverance be exalted,

48(47) the God who gives me vengeance and subdues peoples under me,

49(48) my rescuer from my irascible enemies; from those who rise up against me you will lift me up;
you will rescue me from an unjust man.

50(49) Therefore I will acknowledge you among nations, O Lord, and make music to your name, 51(50) magnifying the acts of deliverance of his king and doing mercy to his anointed, to David and his offspring forever.

Psalm 18(19)

1 Regarding completion. A Psalm. Pertaining to David.

2(1) The heavens are telling of divine glory, and the firmament proclaims his handiwork.

3(2) Day to day spews forth utterance, and night to night proclaims knowledge.

4(3) There are no conversations, nor are there words, the articulations of which are not heard.

5(4) Their sound went out to all the earth, and to the ends of the world their utterances.

6(5) In the sun he pitched his covert, and he himself, like a bridegroom going forth from his bride’s chamber, will rejoice, like a giant, to run his course.

7(6) From the sky’s extremity is his starting point, and his goal is as far as the sky’s extremity, and there is no one that will be hid from his heat.

8(7) The law of the Lord is faultless, turning souls; the testimony of the Lord is reliable, making infants wise;

9(8) the statutes of the Lord are upright, making glad the heart; the commandment of the Lord is radiant, enlightening the eyes;

10(9) the fear of the Lord is pure,
Psalm 19(20)

1 Regarding completion. A Psalm. Pertaining to David.

2(1) May the Lord hearken to you in the day of your affliction!
   May the name of the God of Jacob protect you!

3(2) May he send you help from a holy place and support you from Sion.

4(3) May he remember your every sacrifice, and let your whole burnt offering increase.

Psalm 20(21)

1 Regarding completion. A Psalm. Pertaining to David.

2(1) O Lord, in your power the king shall be glad,
   and at your deliverance he shall rejoice greatly!

3(2) The desire of his heart you gave him,
   and of the wish of his lips you did not deprive him.

Psalm 21(22)

1 Regarding completion. Over the support at dawn. A Psalm. Pertaining to David.

2(1) My God, my God, attend to me; why did you forsake me?
   Far away from my deliverance are the words of my transgressions.

enduring forever and ever;
the judgments of the Lord are valid, justified altogether.

at things desired beyond gold and much precious stone and sweeter beyond honey and honeycomb.

Indeed, your slave guards them;
in guarding them there is great reward.

Transgressions—who shall detect them?
From my hidden ones clear me.

Also from strangers spare your slave!
If they will not exercise dominion over me,
then I shall be blameless and be cleansed from great sin.

And the sayings of my mouth shall become good pleasure,
and the meditation of my heart is before you always,
O Lord, my helper and my redeemer.

Psalm 19(20)

Psalm 20(21)

Psalm 21(22)
O my God, I will cry by day, and you will not listen, and by night, and it becomes no folly for me.

But you, the commendation of Israel, reside in a holy place.

In you our fathers hoped; they hoped, and you rescued them.

To you they cried and were saved; in you they hoped and were not put to shame.

But as for me, I am a worm and not human, a reproach of mankind and despised by people.

All who saw me mocked at me; they talked with the lips; they moved the head:

“He hoped in the Lord; let him rescue him; let him save him, because he wanted him,” because it was you who drew me from the belly, my hope from my mother's breasts.

On you I was cast from the womb, and from my mother's stomach you have been my God.

Do not keep away from me, because affliction is near, because there is no one to help.

Many bull calves encircled me; fat bulls surrounded me;

they opened their mouth at me, like a lion that ravens and roars.

Like water I was poured out, and all my bones were scattered; my heart became like wax melting within my belly;

my strength was dried up like a potsherd, and my tongue is stuck to my throat, and to death's dust you brought me down, because many dogs encircled me, a gathering of evildoers surrounded me.

They gouged my hands and feet;

I counted all my bones, but they took note and observed me;

they divided my clothes among themselves, and for my clothing they cast lots.

But you, O Lord, do not put my help far away! Attend to my support!

Rescue my soul from the sword, and from a dog’s claw my only life!

Save me from a lion’s mouth, and my lowliness from the horns of unicorns!

I will tell of your name to my kindred; in the midst of an assembly I will sing a hymn to you:

You who fear the Lord, praise him!

All you offspring of Jakob together glorify him;

let all the offspring of Israel fear him, because he did not despise or scorn the petition of the poor, nor did he turn away his face from me, and when I cried to him, he listened to me.

From you comes my commendation in a great assembly; my vows I will pay before those who fear him.

The needy shall eat and be satisfied, and those who seek him shall praise the Lord; their hearts shall live forever and ever!

All the ends of the earth shall remember and turn to the Lord, and all the paternal families of the nations shall do obeisance before him, because kingship is the Lord's, and it is he who is master over the nations.

All the fat ones of the earth ate and did obeisance; all who descend into the earth shall fall down before him.

And my soul lives for him, and my offspring will serve him; the coming generation will be announced to the Lord, and they shall announce his righteousness to a people to be born, because the Lord acted.

Psalm 22(23)

A Psalm. Pertaining to Daud.

The Lord shepherds me, and I shall lack nothing.

In a verdant place, there he made me encamp;

by water of rest he reared me;

my soul he restored.

He led me into paths of righteousness for his name’s sake.

For even if I walk in the midst of death’s shadow, I will not fear evil, because you are with me; your rod and your staff—they comforted me.

You prepared a table before me over against those that afflict me;

Psalm 23(24)

1 A Psalm. Pertaining to David.

(1) The Lord’s is the earth and its fullness,
the world and all those who live in it;
it is he that founded it on the seas and prepared it on the rivers.
3 Who shall ascend onto the mountain of the Lord?
And who shall stand in the place of his sanctuary?
4 One who is guiltless in hand and clean in heart;
he who did not occupy his soul with what is vain and did not swear deceitfully to his fellow.
5 He it is that will receive blessing from the Lord and mercy from his divine deliverer.
6 This is the generation of people who seek him, who seek the face of the God of Jakob.
Interlude on strings

7 Raise the gates, O rulers of yours!
And be raised up, O perpetual gates!
And the King of glory shall enter.
8 Who is this King of glory?
The Lord, strong and powerful,
the Lord, powerful in battle.
9 Raise the gates, O rulers of yours!
And be raised up, O perpetual gates!
And the King of glory shall enter.
10 Who is this King of glory?
The Lord of hosts,
he is the King of glory.

Psalm 24(25)

1 A Psalm. Pertaining to David.

(1) To you, O Lord, I lifted up my soul, (2) O my God.
2 In you I trust; may I not be put to shame, nor let my enemies deride me.
3 Indeed, none of those who wait for you shall be put to shame;
let those who are wantonly lawless be shamed.
4 Make known to me, O Lord, your ways,
and teach me your paths.
5 Guide me to your truth,
and teach me, because you are God, my deliverer,
and for you I waited all day long.
6 Be mindful of your acts of compassion,
O Lord,
and your mercies, because they are from of old.
7 The sins of my youth and my acts of ignorance do not remember;
you, according to your mercy, remember me,
for the sake of your kindness, O Lord!
8 Kind and upright is the Lord;
therefore he will set a law for people that sin in the way.
9 The meek he will guide in justice;
the meek he will teach his ways.
10 All the ways of the Lord are mercy and truth for those who seek his covenant and his testimonies.
11 For the sake of your name, O Lord—and you will expiate my sin, for it is great.
12 Who is the person that fears the Lord?
He will set a law for him in the way he chose.
13 His soul will abide in prosperity,
and his offspring shall inherit land.
14 The Lord is empowerment for those who fear him,
and his covenant is for making clear to them.
15 My eyes are ever toward the Lord, because it is he that will pull my feet out of a snare.
16 Look upon me and have mercy on me, because I am an only child and poor.
17 The afflictions of my heart were broadened;
bring me out of my narrow straits.
18 See my humiliation and my trouble,
and forgive all my sins.
19 See my enemies, that they multiplied, and with an unjust hatred they hated me.
20 O guard my soul, and rescue me;
may I not be put to shame, because I hoped in you.
21 The innocent and upright would attach themselves to me, because I waited for you.
22 Redeem Israel, O God, out of all its afflictions.

1. aPertaining to a Dauid.

(1) Vindicatob me, O Lord, because I walked in my guilelessness, and since I hope in the Lord, I shall not grow weak.

2. Prove me, O Lord, and try me; test my kidneys and my heart.

3. Because your mercy is before my eyes, and I was pleased in your truth.

4. I did not sit with a council of vanity, and with transgressors of the law I will not enter;

5. I hated the assembly of evildoers, and with the impious I will not sit.

6. I will wash my hands in innocence and go around your altar, O Lord,

7. to hear a voice of praise and tell all your wondrous deeds.

8. O Lord, I loved your house’s majesty and the spot of your glory’s covert.

9. Do not destroy my soul together with the impious and my life with men of blood, their right hand was filled with gifts.

10. But as for me, I walked in my guilelessness; redeem me, and have mercy on me.

11. My foot stood in uprightness; in assemblies I will bless you, O Lord.

Psalm 26(27)

1. aPertaining to a Dauid. d[Before he was anointed.]

(1) The Lord is my illumination and my deliverer; whom shall I fear? The Lord is my life’s protector; of whom shall I be in dread?

2. When wicked people would approach me to devour my flesh—those that afflict me and my enemies—they became weak and fell.

Psalm 27(28)

1. aPertaining to a Dauid.

(1) To you, O Lord, I cried; my God, do not pass me by in silence, lest you pass me by in silence and I shall be like those who go down into a pit.

2. Listen to the voice of my petition, as I petition you, as I lift up my hands toward your holy shrine.
Do not drag my soul away together with sinners; together with workers of injustice do not destroy me, those who speak peace with their fellows, but wrongs are in their hearts.

Give them according to their works, and according to the wickedness of their practices; according to the works of their hands give them; render them their due reward.

Because they took no notice of the works of the Lord and of the works of his hands, you will bring them down and build them up no more.

Blessed be the Lord, because he listened to the voice of my petition.

The Lord is my helper and my protector; in him my heart hoped, and I was helped and my flesh revived, and from my will I shall acknowledge him.

The Lord is empowerment for his people; he is a protector of the deliverance of his anointed one.

O save your people, and bless your heritage, and shepherd them, and lift them up forever.

Psalm 28(29)

1 A Psalm. Pertaining to David.

(1) Bring to the Lord, O divine sons, bring to the Lord glory and honor.

(2) Bring to the Lord glory for his name; do obeisance to the Lord in his holy court.

(3) The Lord's voice is over the waters; the God of glory thundered, the Lord over many waters,

(4) The Lord's voice in strength, the Lord's voice in magnificence.

(5) The Lord's voice, as he crushes cedars, and the Lord will crush the cedars of Lebanon.

(6) And he will pulverize them, as the bull calf, the Lebanon, and he that is beloved is like a son of unicorns.

(7) The Lord's voice, as he divides flames of fire.

(8) The Lord's voice, as he shakes a wilderness; the Lord will shake the wilderness of Kades.

(9) The Lord's voice, as he prepares deer, and he will uncover forests, and in his shrine every last one speaks of glory.

(10) The Lord will settle the flood, and the Lord will sit as king forever.

(11) The Lord will give strength to his people! The Lord will bless his people with peace!

Psalm 29(30)

1 dAe A Psalm. Of an Oded of the dedication of the house. Pertaining to David.

(1) I will exalt you, O Lord, because you upheld me and did not gladden my enemies over me.

(2) O Lord my God, I cried to you, and you healed me.

(3) O Lord, you brought up my soul from Hades; you saved me from those that go down into a pit.

(4) Make music to the Lord, O you his devout, and acknowledge the mentioning of his holiness,

(5) because wrath is in his fury and life in his will. Weeping will lodge for the evening, and rejoicing comes with the morning.

(6) But as for me, I said in my prosperity, “I shall never be shaken.”

(7) O Lord, by your will, you furnished my beauty with power, but you turned away your face, and I became troubled.

(8) To you, O Lord, I will cry, and to my God I will petition:

(9) “What profit is there in my blood, when I go down to corruption? Surely dust will not acknowledge you or tell of your truth?”

(10) The Lord heard and had mercy on me; the Lord became my helper.

(11) You turned my mourning into a dance for me; you tore my sackcloth and girded me with gladness

(12) so that my glory may make music to you and I shall not be stunned.

Psalm 30(31)

1 Regarding completion. A Psalm. Pertaining to David.

2(1) In you, O Lord, I hoped; may I never be put to shame; in your righteousness rescue me, and deliver me.

3(2) Incline your ear to me; be quick to deliver me. Become to me a protector-god and a house of refuge, to save me,

4(3) because you are my empowerment and my refuge, and for your name’s sake you will guide me and nourish me;

5(4) you will bring me out of this snare, which they hid for me, because you are my protector.

6(5) Into your hands I will entrust my spirit; you redeemed me, O Lord, God of truth.

7(6) You hated those who carefully guarded vanities uselessly, but as for me, I hoped in the Lord.

8(7) I will rejoice and be glad in your mercy, because you looked upon my humiliation;

9(8) and did not imprison me in an enemy’s hands; you set my feet in a spacious place.

10(9) Have mercy on me, O Lord, because I am being afflicted; my eye was troubled by vexation, my soul and my belly.

11(10) Because my life failed in pain and my years in sighing, my strength grew weak in poverty, and my bones were troubled.

12(11) With all my enemies I became a reproach, and to my neighbors, very much, and a fright to my acquaintances; those who would see me outside fled from me.

13(12) I passed out of mind like one who is dead; I became like a broken vessel, because I heard censure from many sojourning all around; when they gathered together against me, they plotted to take my soul.

14(13) But as for me, I hoped in you, O Lord; I said, “You are my God.”

15(14) My times are in your hands;

16(15) I will acknowledge you forever.

Psalm 31(32)

1 Pertaining to David. Of understanding.

1(1) Happy are those whose lawless behavior was forgiven and whose sins were covered over.

2 Happy the man whose sin the Lord will not reckon, and in his mouth there is no deceit.

3 Because I kept silence, my bones grew old from my crying all day long.

4 Because day and night your hand was heavy upon me, I was turned to wretchedness when a thorn was stuck in me.

5 My sin I made known, and my lawlessness I did not cover;

(1) Rejoice in the Lord, O you righteous.
Praise befits the upright.

2 Acknowledge the Lord with a lyre; with a harp of ten strings make music to
him.

3 Sing to him a new song;
make music skillfully, with shouting,
because upright is the word of the Lord,
and all his works are in faithfulness.

5 He loves mercy and justice;
the earth is full of the mercy of the Lord.

6 By the word of the Lord the heavens were made firm,
and by the breath of his mouth all their host,
as he gathers the waters of the sea like a wineskin,
as he puts the deeps in storehouses.

8 Let all the earth fear the Lord, and due to him let all the inhabitants of the world be shaken, because he it was that spoke, and they came to be;
he it was that commanded, and they were created.

10 The Lord scatters counsels of nations, and he frustrates thoughts of peoples and frustrates counsels of rulers.

11 But the counsel of the Lord remains forever,
thoughts of his heart to generation and 12 Happy is the nation of whom the Lord is God,

a people he chose as a heritage for 13 From heaven the Lord looked down;

and to keep them alive in famine.

20 Our soul waits for the Lord, because he is our helper and protector, because in him our heart will be glad,

19(18) The Lord is near to the brokenhearted, and the humble in spirit he will save.

20(19) Many are the afflictions of the righteous, and from them all he will rescue them.

21(20) The Lord will guard all their bones; not one of them will be crushed.

22(21) The sinners' death is wretched, and those who hate the righteous shall go wrong.

23(22) The Lord will redeem his slaves' souls; none of those who hope in him will go wrong.

Psalm 34(35)

1 Pertaining to David.

(1) Render judgment, O Lord, on those who do me wrong; fight against those who fight against me!

2 Take hold of (circular) shield and (oblong) shield, and rise up to help me!

3 Extend a sword, and block against my pursuers; say to my soul, “I am your deliverance.”

4 Let them be shamed and embarrassed who seek my soul.

Let them be turned back, rearwards, and be put to shame who devise evil against me.

5 Let them be like dust in front of the wind, and an angel of the Lord driving them on.

6 Let their way be darkness and slipperiness, and an angel of the Lord pursuing them, because without reason they hid for me their snare's destruction, without cause they cast reproach on my soul.

8 Let the snare he does not recognize come upon him. And let the chase, which he concealed, catch him, and in the snare—he shall fall in it.

9 But my soul shall rejoice in the Lord; it will delight in his deliverance.

10 All my bones shall say, “O Lord, who is like you in rescuing the poor from the hand of those too hard for him, both poor and needy from those who despoil him?”

11 When unjust witnesses rose up, they kept asking me about what I was not familiar with.

12 They would repay me evil for good, and my soul with barrenness.

13 But as for me, when they troubled me, I would put on sackcloth and would humble my soul with fasting, and my prayer shall return into my lap.

14 Like a fellow, like a brother of ours, so I would please them; as one grieving and sad, so I would humble myself.

15 And against me they were glad and gathered together; scourges gathered together against me, and I did not know; they were split apart and were not stunned;

16 they tried me; they mocked me with mocking; they gnashed their teeth at me.

17 O Lord, when will you take a look? Restore my soul from their ravages, from lions my only one!

18 I will acknowledge you in a large assembly; among a burdensome people I will praise you.

19 May those who unjustly are my enemies not be happy over me, those who hate me without cause and wink with the eyes, because as they were speaking peace to me, they were also devising treachery in wrath.

And they widened their mouth against me; they said, “Good, Good, our eyes saw.”

You saw, O Lord; do not pass by in silence! O Lord, do not be far from me!

Wake up! And pay attention to my trial, my God and my Lord, to my case!

Vindicate me, O Lord my God, according to your righteousness, and may they not be happy over me.

May they not say in their hearts, “Good I.e. him”
Nor may they say, “We swallowed him up.”

May those who are happy at my calamities be both shamed and embarrassed; let those who brag against me be clothed with shame and embarrassment.

May those who want my vindication rejoice and be glad, and let those who want the peace of his slave say ever more, “Let the Lord be magnified.”

And my tongue shall declaim your righteousness, all day long your commendation.

Psalm 35(36)

1 Regarding completion. Pertaining to the slave of the Lord, to David.

2(1) Says the transgressor of the law in himself, in order to sin: there is no fear of the divine before his eyes,

3(2) because he practiced deceit before him, that he might find lawlessness in him and hated.

4(3) The words of his mouth are lawlessness and deceit; he did not want to be sensible to do good.

5(4) Lawlessness he plotted on his bed; he was set on every way that was not good, and evil he did not treat with contempt.

6(5) O Lord, your mercy is in the sky, and your truth as far as the clouds.

7(6) Your righteousness is like divine mountains; your judgments are a great deep; humans and animals you will save, O Lord.

How you increased your mercy, O God!
But the sons of men will hope in the shelter of your wings.

They will be intoxicated with the fatness of your house, and you will give them drink from the wadi of your delights, because with you is life’s fountain, in your light we shall see light.

O prolong your mercy to those who know you, and your righteousness to the upright of heart!

Let the foot of arrogance not come to me, and may the hand of sinners not shake me.

There those who practice lawlessness fell; they were thrust out and will be unable to stand.

Psalm 36(37)

1 Pertaining to David.

Do not fret among wicked people, nor be envious of those that do lawlessness, because like grass they will quickly wither and like green herbs they will quickly fall off.

Hope in the Lord, and keep doing kindness, and encamp in the land, and you will be tended by its wealth.

Take delight in the Lord, and he will give you the requests of your heart.

Disclose your way to the Lord, and hope in him, and he will act.

And he will publish your vindication like light, and your judgment like noonday.

Submit to the Lord, and supplicate him; do not fret over the one that prospers in his way, over a person that commits transgression of the law.

Cease from wrath, and forsake anger. Do not fret so as to do evil, because the evil doers shall be destroyed, but those who wait for the Lord—they shall inherit lands.

And yet a little while, and the sinner will be no more, and you will seek his place and will not find.

But the meek shall inherit lands.

and take delight in an abundance of peace.

12 The sinner will closely watch the righteous and gnash his teeth at him, but the Lord will laugh at him, because he foresees that his day will come.

13 A sword the sinners drew; they bent their bow to bring down poor and needy, to slay the upright in heart.

14 May their sword enter into their own heart, and their bows be crushed.

15 Better is a little that the righteous has than the great wealth of sinners, because sinners’ arms shall be crushed, but the Lord upholds the righteous.

16 The Lord knows the ways of the blameless, and their heritage shall be forever; they shall not be put to shame in an evil time, and in days of famine they shall be fed, because the sinners will perish, and the enemies of the Lord, as soon as they are glorified and exalted, vanishing like smoke they vanished.

17 The sinner borrows and will not pay back, but the righteous is compassionate and keeps giving; because those that bless him shall inherit land, but those that curse him shall be destroyed.

18 A person’s steps are directed by the Lord, and his way by will.

19 Should he fall, he will not crash, because the Lord steadies his hand.

20 Younger I used to be; indeed, I have grown old, and I did not see a righteous one forsaken or his offspring begging bread.

21 All day long he is merciful and lends, and his offspring shall become a blessing.

22 Turn from evil, and do good, and encamp forever and ever.

23 But the lawless shall be chased away, and the offspring of the impious shall be destroyed.

24 Wait for the Lord, and keep to his way, and he will lift you up to inherit land; when he destroys sinners, you will look on.

25 I saw an impious one being highly lifted up and being raised up like the cedars of Lebanon.

26 And I passed by, and look, he was not, and I sought him, but his place was not found.

27 Mark innocence, and behold uprightness, because there is a residue for the peaceable person.

28 But transgressors of the law shall be destroyed together; the residue of the impious shall be destroyed.

29 But deliverance of the righteous is from the Lord, and he is their protector in a time of affliction.

30 And the Lord will help them and rescue them, and he will deliver them from sinners and save them, because they hoped in him.

Psalm 37(38)

1 A Psalm. Pertaining to David. As a reminder.

2(1) O Lord, do not rebuke me in your anger or discipline me in your wrath,

3(2) because your arrows were stuck in me and you clamped your hand on me.

4(3) There is no healing in my flesh from before your wrath; there is no peace for my bones from before my sins,

5(4) because my acts of lawlessness went over my head; like a heavy burden they weighed on me.

Psalm 39(40)

1 Regarding completion. Pertaining to Dauid. A Psalm.

2(1) Waiting, I waited for the Lord, and he paid attention to me and listened to my petition.

3(2) And he brought me up out of a pit of wretchedness and from miry mud, and he set my feet upon a rock and directed my steps.

4(3) And he put a new song into my mouth, a hymn to our God. Many will see and fear and put their hope in the Lord.

5(4) Happy the man, he whose hope is the name of the Lord, and he did not look toward vanities and mad delusions.

6(5) Many things you made, O Lord my God, your wonders. And as for your thoughts—there is none that will be like you.

7(6) Sacrifice and offering you did not want, but ears you fashioned for me. Whole burnt offering and one for sin you did not request.

8(7) Then I said, "Look, I have come; in a scroll of a book it is written of me.

9(8) To do your will, O my God, I desired—and your law, within my belly."

10(9) I told the glad news of righteousness in a great assembly; look, my lips I will not restrain; O Lord, you knew.

11(10) Your righteousness I did not hide in my heart; of your truth and your deliverance I spoke; I did not conceal your mercy and your truth from a large gathering.

12(11) But as for you, O Lord, do not distance your compassion from me; your mercy and your truth supported me always,

13(12) because evils encompassed me, of which there is no number, my acts of lawlessness overtook me, and I was unable to see; they multiplied beyond the hairs of my head, and my heart failed me.

14(13) Be pleased, O Lord, to rescue me; O Lord, pay attention to helping me.

Psalm 40(41)

15(14) May those be put to both shame and embarrassment who seek my soul to remove it; may those be turned back, rearwards, and embarrassed, who want my hurt.

16(15) Let those immediately be awarded shame, who say to me, "Good, Good!"

17(16) May all those rejoice and be glad in you, who seek you, O Lord, and let those who love your deliverance say continually, "Let the Lord be magnified!"

18(17) But as for me, poor I am and needy; the Lord will take thought for me. My helper and my protector you are; O my God, do not delay.

Psalm 40(41)

1 Regarding completion. A Psalm. Pertaining to Dauid.

2(1) Happy is he who considers poor and needy; in an evil day the Lord will rescue him.

3(2) May the Lord carefully guard him and quicken him and make him happy in the land, and may he not give him up into his enemy's hands.

4(3) May the Lord help him on his bed of pain; in his illness you turned his whole bed.

5(4) As for me, I said, "O Lord, have mercy on me; heal my soul, because I sinned against you."

6(5) My enemies spoke evil against me: "When will he die and his name perish?"

7(6) And if he came in to visit, he would speak to no good end; his heart gathered lawlessness to himself; he would go outside and talk.

8(7) Together all my enemies would whisper against me; against me they would devise evil for me.

9(8) A criminal phrase they put out against me: "Surely, he that lies down will not add to rise up?"

10(9) Indeed, the person at peace with me, in whom I hoped, he who would eat of my bread, magnified trickery against me.

11(10) But as for you, O Lord, have mercy on me, and raise me up, and I will repay them.

12(11) By this I knew that you want me: that my enemy shall not be happy over me.

BOOK II
(Psalms 41[42]–71[72])

Psalm 41(42)

1 Regarding completion. Regarding understanding. Pertaining to the sons of Kore.

2(1) Just as the doe longs for the springs of water, so my soul longs for you, O God.

3(2) My soul thirsted for the living God. When shall I come and appear to the face of God?

4(3) My tears became my food day and night, while it was said to me day after day, "Where is your God?"

5(4) These things I remembered, and I poured out my soul upon me, because I shall proceed to a place of a marvelous tent, as far as the house of God, with a sound of rejoicing and acknowledging, a noise of one who is feasting.

6(5) Why are you deeply grieved, O my soul, and why are you throwing me into confusion? Hope in God, because I shall acknowledge him; my God is deliverance (6) of my face.

7 My soul was troubled at myself; therefore I shall remember you from a land of Jordan and Hermoniim, from a small mountain.

8(7) Deep calls to deep at the sound of your cataracts; all your surges and your billows passed over me.

9(8) By day the Lord will command his mercy, and at night an ode is with me, a prayer to the God of my life.

10(9) I will say to God, “My supporter you are; wherefore did you forget me? Why must I walk about sullenly, as the enemy oppresses me?”

11(10) As my oppressors crushed my bones, they insulted me, while they say to me day after day, “Where is your God?”

Psalm 42(43)

1 A Psalm. Pertaining to Davud.

(1) Vindicat(e) me, O God, and defend my cause from a nation not devout; from a person, unjust and deceitful, rescue me!

2 Because you, O God, are my empowerment, why did you reject me? And why do I walk about sullenly as the enemy oppresses me?

3 O send out your light and your truth; these led me, and they brought me to your holy mountain and to your coverts.

4 And I will enter to the altar of God, to God who makes glad my youth. I will acknowledge you with a lyre, O God, my God.

5 Why are you deeply grieved, O my soul, and why are you throwing me into confusion? Hope in God, because I shall acknowledge him; deliverance of my face and my God he is.

Psalm 43(44)

1 Regarding completion. For the sons of Kore. Regarding understanding.

2(1) O God, we heard with our ears; our fathers reported to us a deed which you wrought in their days, in days of old:

3(2) your hand destroyed nations, and them you planted; you distressed peoples, and cast them out;

4(3) for not by their own sword did they inherit land, and their own arm did not save them; rather, your right hand and your arm, and the illumination of your countenance, because you delighted in them.

9(8) In God we shall be commended all day long, and in your name we shall acknowledge forever.

10(9) But now, you rejected us and put us to shame and will not go out among our hosts.
11(10) You turned us back rather than our enemies, and those who hate us kept snatching spoil for themselves.
12(11) You gave us like sheep for eating, and among the nations you scattered us.
13(12) You sold your people without price, and there was no abundance in their exchange.

14(13) You made us a reproach to our neighbors, a mockery and laughingstock to those around us.
15(14) You made us into an illustration among the nations, a moving of the head among the peoples.
16(15) All day long my embarrassment is before me, and the shame of my face covered me at the sound of one that reproaches and babbles, from before enemy and pursuer.
17(16) All this came upon us, and we did not forget you, and we did no wrong against your covenant.
18(17) And our heart did not stand back, and you diverted our paths from your way, because you humbled us in a place of ill-treatment and death’s shadow covered us.
19(18) If we had forgotten the name of our God and if we had spread out our hands to a foreign god, would not God search this out? For he it is that knows the secrets of the heart;
20(19) because you humbled us in a place of ill-treatment and death’s shadow covered us.

21(20) If we had forgotten the name of our God and if we had spread out our hands to a foreign god, would not God search this out? For he it is that knows the secrets of the heart;
22(21) because for your sake we are being put to death all day long, we were accounted as sheep for slaughter.
23(22) Wake up! Why do you sleep, O Lord? Arise, and do not reject us totally!
24(23) Why do you turn away your face? Why do you forget our poverty and our affliction?
25(24) Because our soul was humbled down to the dust, our stomach clung to the ground.
26(25) Rise up, O Lord; come to our help, and redeem us for the sake of your name.

Psalm 44(45)

1 Regarding completion. Over those that will be changed. Pertaining to the sons of Kore. Regarding understanding. An Ode. Over the beloved.
2(1) My heart erupts with a goodly theme; it is I that address my works to the king; my tongue is a pen of a swift scribe.
3(2) Youthful in beauty you are, beyond the sons of men; grace was poured on your lips; therefore God blessed you forever.
4(3) Gird your sword on your thigh, O powerful one, in your bloom and beauty, and draw, and prosper, and become king for the sake of truth and meekness and righteousness, and your right hand will guide you marvelously.
5(4) Your throne, O God, is forever and ever. A rod of equity is of your rule; you loved righteousness and hated lawlessness. Therefore God, your God, anointed you with oil of rejoicing beyond your partners.
6(5) Myrrh and myrrh oil and cassia wafted from your clothes, from ivory bastions, with which they made you glad; daughters of kings are in your honor; the queen stood at your right in gold-woven clothing, decked out in many colors.

2 God is our refuge and power, very much a helper in afflictions that befall us.

3 Therefore we will not fear, when the earth is troubled and mountains be transposed into hearts of seas.

4 Their waters roared and were troubled; the mountains were troubled by his force.

9 God became king over the nations; God is seated on his holy throne.

10 Rulers of peoples gathered with the God of Abram, because the strong of the earth are God’s. They were very much raised up.

Psalm 47(48)

1 A Psalm. Of an Ode. Pertaining to the sons of Kore.

2 Great is the Lord and very much praiseworthy in our God’s city, his holy mountain, since he planted it well, for the enjoyment of the whole earth. Mountains of Sion, the slopes of the north, the city of the great King—

3 within its bastions God is known, when he supports it,

4 because, look, the kings assembled; they came together.

6 They, when they saw it so, were astounded; they were troubled; they were shaken; trembling took hold of them there, pains as of one in labor.

8 With a violent blast you will shatter ships of Tharsis.

9 As we heard, so we saw in a city of the Lord of hosts, in a city of our God. God founded it forever!

Interlude on strings

10 We thought of your mercy, O God, in the midst of your shrine.

11 Like your name, O God, so also your praise is to the ends of the earth. Full of justice is your right hand.

12 Let Mount Sion be glad;
let the daughters of Judea rejoice, because of your judgments.

13(12) Surround Sion; embrace it; recount in its towers;
14(13) dispose your hearts for its power, and inspect its bastions, that you may recount to the next generation that this is God, our God forever, even forever and ever. He himself will shepherd us for ages.

Psalm 48(49)

1 Regarding completion. Pertaining to the sons of Kore. A Psalm.

2(1) Hear this, all you nations; give ear, all inhabitants of the world,
3(2) both the earthborn and the sons of men, rich one and needy one together.

4(3) My mouth shall speak wisdom and the meditation of my heart understanding.

5(4) I will incline my ear to an illustration; I will work out my problem with a harp.

6(5) Why should I fear on an evil day? The lawlessness at my heel will surround me—
7(6) those who trust in their power and boast of the abundance of their riches.

8(7) A brother does not ransom; shall anyone ransom? He will not give to God his atonement and the price for redeeming his soul.

9(8) And he toiled forever and will yet live completely; he will see corruption, (10)when he sees wise people die!

11 Fool and dolt will perish together and leave their wealth to strangers.

12(11) And their graves are their homes forever, their covets to generation and generation. They named their lands their own.

13(12) And a person held in honor did not understand. He resembled senseless beasts and became like them.

14(13) This way of theirs is a pitfall to them, and afterwards with their mouth they will express contentment.

15(14) Like sheep they were placed in Hades. Death shall be their shepherd, and the upright shall exercise dominion over them at dawn,

16(15) On the other hand, God will ransom my soul from Hades’ hand, when he receives me. Interlude on strings

17(16) Do not be afraid when a person becomes rich and when the glory of his house increases, 18(17) because, when he dies, he will take nothing, nor will his glory go down with him, 19(18) because in life his soul will be blessed; he will acknowledge you when you treat him well;
20(19) he will enter the company of his fathers; he will never again see light.

21(20) A person held in honor did not understand. They were comparable to beasts and became like them.

Psalm 49(50)

1 A Psalm. Pertaining to Asaph.

1(1) God of gods, the Lord, spoke and summoned the earth from the sun’s rising even to its setting.

2 Out of Sion is the splendor of his beauty; God will come conspicuously, our God—and he will not pass by in silence; a fire will burn before him, and all around him is a mighty tempest—very much.

3 He will summon the sky above and the earth, to judge his people discerningly.

4 Gather to him his devout, who make a covenant with him by sacrifices.

5 And the heavens will declare his righteousness, because God is judge. Interlude on strings

7 “Hear, O my people, and I will speak to you, O Israel, and I will testify against you. God, your God, I am.

8 Not for your sacrifices will I rebuke you; nay, your whole burnt offerings are continually before me.

9 I will not accept calves from your house nor young he-goats from your folds, because all wild animals of the forest are mine, beasts on the mountains and cattle.

11 I know all the birds of the air, and a field’s beauty is with me.

12 “If I am hungry, I will not tell you, for the world is mine and its fullness.
Surely, I shall not eat flesh of bulls or drink blood of he-goats?
Offer to God a sacrifice of praise,
and pay your vows to the Most High.
And call on me in a day of affliction, and I will deliver you, and you shall glorify me."

But to the sinner God said:
"Why do you recite my statutes and take my covenant on your lips?
Nay, you hated discipline,
and you cast my words behind you.
If you saw a thief, you would join him,
and with adulterers you would keep company.

"Your mouth increased evil,
and your tongue would wrap deceitfulness.
Sitting, you would speak against your brother, and you would place an obstacle against your own mother's son.
These things you did, and I kept silent;
you assumed lawlessness—that I would be like you.
I will disprove you and present against you.

"Mark this, then, you who forget God, or he will seize you, and there will be no one to rescue.
A sacrifice of praise will glorify me, and there lies a way by which I will show him the deliverance of God."

Psalm 50(51)

Regarding completion. A Psalm. Pertaining to David. When the prophet Nathan came to him, after he had gone into Bersabee.

Have mercy on me, O God,
according to your great mercy,
and according to the abundance of your compassion blot out my lawless deed.
Wash me thoroughly from my lawlessness,
and from my sin cleanse me, because my lawlessness I know and my sin is ever before me.
Against you alone did I sin,
and what is evil before you I did,
so that you may be justified in your words and be victorious when you go to law.
For, look, I was conceived in lawlessness,
and in sin did my mother crave for me.

For, look, you loved truth;
the unclear and secret aspects of your wisdom you made clear to me.
You will sprinkle me with hyssop, and I shall be cleansed;
you will wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow.
You will make me hear joy and gladness;
humbled bones will rejoice.
Turn away your face from my sins,
and all my lawless acts blot out.
A clean heart create in me, O God,
and an upright spirit renew within me.
Do not cast me away from your face,
and your holy spirit do not take from me.
Restore to me the joy of your deliverance,
and with a leading spirit support me.
I will teach lawless ones your ways,
and impious ones will return to you.
Rescue me from bloodshed, O God,
O God of my deliverance;
my tongue will rejoice at your righteousness.
O Lord, my lips you will open,
and my mouth will declare your praise, because if you had wanted sacrifice, I would have given it;
with whole burnt offerings you will not be pleased.
Sacrifice to God is a broken spirit;
a broken and humbled heart God will not despise.
Do good to Sion in your good pleasure, and let the walls of Jerusalem be built;
then you will delight in a sacrifice of righteousness,
in offerings and whole burnt offerings;
then they will offer calves on your altar.

8(6) And righteous ones will see and fear and will laugh at him and say, 9(7) “Look, a person who did not make God his helper but pinned his hopes on the abundance of his riches and was made powerful by his vanity!”

10(8) But I am like a fruitful olive tree in the house of God. I hoped in the mercy of God forever, even forever and ever. 11(9) I will acknowledge you forever, because of what you did, and I will wait for your name, because it is beneficial before your devout.

Psalm 52(53)

1 Regarding completion. Over Maeleth. Of understanding. Pertaining to Daudid.

2(1) A fool said in his heart, “There is no God.” They became corrupt and were abominable in lawless acts; there is no one who is doing what is good.

3(2) God peered down from the sky on the sons of men to see if there was any who had understanding or who sought after God.

4(3) All turned away; as well they became useless; there is no one who is doing what is good; there is not even one.

5(4) Shall they never learn, all those who practice lawlessness? Those who eat my people like eating bread did not call upon God.

6(5) There they were in great fear, where there was no fear, because God scattered bones of men-pleasers; they were put to shame, because God despised them.

7(6) Who shall give out of Sion the deliverance of Israel?

Psalm 53(54)

1 Regarding completion. Among hymns. Of understanding. Pertaining to Daudid. 2When the Ziphites came and told Saoul, “Look, Daud is in hiding among us.”

3(1) O God, in your name save me, and in your power you will judge me. 4(2) O God, listen to my prayer; give ear to the words of my mouth; 5(3) because strangers rose up against me and strong ones sought my soul; they did not set God before them. Interlude on strings

6(4) For, look, God helps me, and the Lord is supporter of my soul. 7(5) He will repay the harm to my enemies. With your truth, destroy them.

Psalm 54(55)

1 Regarding completion. Among hymns. Of understanding. Pertaining to Daudid.

2(1) Give ear, O God, to my prayer, and do not disdain my petition. 3(2) Attend to me, and listen to me; I was vexed in my pondering and was troubled 4(3) by the noise of an enemy and by the affliction of a sinner, because they tilted lawlessness against me, and in wrath they kept being indignant at me.

5(4) My heart was troubled within me, and death’s terror fell upon me. 6(5) Fear and trembling came upon me, and darkness covered me. 7(6) And I said, “Who will give me wings like a dove, and I shall fly away and be at rest?” 8(7) Look, I became a fugitive far away, and I lodged in the wilderness. Interlude on strings

9(8) I would welcome the one that would save me from faintheartedness and tempest.
Drown, O Lord, and confuse their speech, because I saw lawlessness and dispute in the city. Day and night they will encircle it at its walls; lawlessness and trouble are within it, and usury and deceit did not leave its streets. Because if an enemy had reproached me, I could have borne it, and if he that hates me had bragged against me, I could have hidden from him. But it is you, my fellow human, my leader and my familiar friend, who made food sweet together with me; in the house of God we walked in harmony. Let death come upon them; let them go down to Hades alive, because evils are in their sojournings, in their midst. I cried to God, and the Lord listened to me. Evening and morning and at noon I will recount; I will declare, and he will listen to my voice. He will redeem my soul in peace from those that approach me, because they were with me in great number. God will listen and will humble them, he who existed before the ages. For there is no change for them, and they did not fear God. He stretched out his hand when he paid back. They violated his covenant. They were divided due to the anger of his face, and his heart drew near; his words became smoother than oil, and they are missiles. Cast your care on the Lord, and he himself will nurture you; he will never give shaking to him who is righteous. But as for you, O God, you will bring them down into a well of corruption; men of blood and treachery shall not live out half their days. But as for me, I will hope in you, O Lord.

Psalm 55(56)
1 Regarding completion. Over the people that are removed far away from their holy things. Pertaining to Daudid. For a stele inscription. When the allophyles seized him in Geth.
2 Have mercy on me, O Lord, because a person trampled on me; all day long, while fighting, he afflicted me; my enemies trampled on me all day long, because many are they that fight against me from on high.
3 By day I shall be afraid; F will hope in you.
4 In God I will commend my words; in God I hoped; I will not fear what flesh may do to me.
5 All day long they would make my words loathsome; all their thoughts against me are for evil.
6 They will sojourn and hide; my heel they will watch, as they waited to have my soul.
7 On no account will you save them; in wrath you will bring down peoples, O God!
8 My life I proclaimed to you; you put my tears before you, as also by your promise.
9 My enemies will turn back in the day when I call upon you. Look, I knew that you are my God.
10 In God I will praise with a word; in the Lord I will praise with a statement.
11 In God I hoped; I will not fear what a person may do to me.
12 Inf me, O God, are the vows of praise to you, which I will pay, because you rescued my soul from death and my feet from slipperiness so that I may be pleasing before God in the light of the living.

Psalm 56(57)
1 Regarding completion. Do Not Destroy. Pertaining to Daudid. For a stele inscription. As he was running away from Saoul into the cave.
2 Have mercy on me, O God; have mercy on me, because in you my soul trusts and in the shadow of your wings I will hope until lawlessness passes by.
3 I will cry to God the Most High,
Psalm 57(58)

1 Regarding completion. Do Not Destroy.
Pertaining to David. For a stave inscription.
When Saul sent and watched his house to put him to death.

2(1) Deliver me from my enemies, O God,
and redeem me from those who rise up against me.

3(2) Rescue me from those who practice lawlessness, and from men of blood save me, 4(3) because look, they hunted my soul;
strong ones set themselves against me.
Neither my lawlessness nor my sin,
O Lord—
5(4) without lawlessness they ran straight on.

6(5) And you, Lord God of hosts, God of Israel, pay attention to visiting all the nations;
pity none of those who practice lawlessness.

Interlude on strings

7(6) Toward evening they will return and be famished like a dog and encircle a city.

8(7) They shall vanish like water that flows through;
he will bend his bow until they become weak.

9(8) Like wax that melts they will be removed;
fire fell, and they did not see the sun.

10(9) Before your thistles take note of the thorn-shrub, as if in anger it will bestormb you, as if alivea.

11(10) A righteous one will be glad when he sees vengeance done;
he will wash his hands in the blood of the sinner.

12(11) And a person will say, “If then there is a return for the righteous, then God exists, judging them on the earth.”

Psalm 58(59)

1 Regarding completion. Do Not Destroy.
Pertaining to David. For a stave inscription.

2(1) Do you then truly speak righteousness?
Do you judge fairly, O sons of men?

3(2) Indeed, in the heart you devise acts of lawlessness on the earth;
injustice your hands braid.

4(3) Sinners were estranged from the womb;
they erred from the belly; they spoke lies.

5(4) They have wrath in the likeness of the snake, like an adder, deaf and plugging its ears,
which will not listen to a voice of enchanters,
nor of a charm being administered by a wise man.

6(5) God crushed their teeth in their mouth;
the molars of lions the Lord shattered!

Do not kill them, or they may forget my people; scatter them by your power, and bring them down, O Lord, my protector—scatter of their mouth, a word of their lips, and let them be trapped in their pride.

And from curse and lie consummations will be noised abroad,
in wrath of consummation, and they will be no more. And they will know that God is master over Jakob, over the ends of the earth.

Toward evening they will return and be famished like a dog and encircle a city.

But as for me, I will sing to your power and will rejoice in your mercy in the morning, because you became my supporter and a refuge in my day of affliction;

my helper, I will make music to you, because you, O God, are my supporter, my God, my mercy.

Psalm 59(60)

Regarding completion. For those that shall yet be changed. For a stele inscription. Pertaining to Dauid. For teaching. When he set on fire Mesopotamia of Syria and Syria Soba, and Ioab returned and struck the Ravine of Salt, twelve thousand.

O God, you rejected us and brought us down; you became angry and had compassion on us.

You caused the land to quake and threw it into confusion; heal its fractures, because it was shaken.

You showed your people hard things; you gave us to drink wine of stupefaction.

You gave a signal to those who fear you, to flee out from before a bow.

In order that your beloved might be rescued, save with your right hand, and heed me.

God spoke in his holy place: "I will rejoice, and I will divide up Sikima, and the vale of the tents I will portion out.

Mine is Galaad, and mine is Manasse, and Ephraim is the strengthening of my head;

loudas is my king.

Moab is a cauldron of my hope; on Idumea I will put my sandal; to me allophyles were subjugated."

Who will bring me to a city of fortification? Who will guide me as far as Idumea?

Are you not the one that rejects us, O God? And you will not go out, O God, with our hosts.

Grant us help from affliction, and worthless is human deliverance.

In God we shall produce power, and he it is that will treat with contempt those that afflict us.

Psalm 60(61)

Regarding completion. Among hymns. Pertaining to Dauid.

Listen to my petition, O God; pay attention to my prayer.

From the ends of the earth I cried to you, when my heart was weary.

On a rock you exalted me.

You guided me, because you became my hope, a tower of strength from before an enemy.

I will sojourn in your covert forever, find shelter in the shelter of your wings.

Because you, O God, you listened to my vows, you gave a heritage to those who fear your name.

You will add days to a king's days, his years until days of generation and generation.

He will remain forever before God; his mercy and truth, who will seek out?

So I will make music to your name forever and ever, that I pay my vows day after day.

Psalm 61(62)

 Shall not my soul be subject to God?
For from him is my deliverance.

Indeed, he is my God and my Savior, my supporter; I shall be shaken no more.

How long do you assail against a person?
You commit murder, all of you, as by means of a wall that leans and a fence that slants.

But they planned to impugn my honor.
They ran with a lie; with their mouth they would bless and curse with their heart.

But to God be subject, O my soul, because from him is my endurance.

Because he is my God and my Savior, my supporter, I shall never be a fugitive.

With God is my deliverance and my glory; O God of my help—and my hope is with God.

Hope in him, all you congregation of people; pour out your hearts before him; God is our helper.

But the sons of men are vain; false are the sons of men, to do wrong with balances; they together are a from vanity.

Put no hope in wrong, and do not long for what is robbed; wealth, if it flows, do not b add heart b.

Once God spoke; these two things I heard: that might is God’s, and to you, O Lord, belongs mercy, because c you will repay to each according to his works.

Psalm 62(63)

A Psalm. Pertaining to Dauid. When he was in the wilderness of Judea.

O God, my God, early I approach you; my soul thirsted for you.

How many times did d my flesh 4thirst for you in a land, desolate and trackless and waterless?

So I appeared to you in the holy place, to behold your power and your glory.

Because your mercy is better than lives, my lips will commend you.

So I will bless you in my life; in your name I will lift up my hands.

As though with fat and creaminess may my soul be satisfied, and with lips of rejoicing my mouth will praise you.

If I made mention of you on my bed, in the early morning I would meditate on you, because you became my helper, and in the shelter of your wings I will rejoice.

My soul clung to you; your right hand upheld me.

But they sought my soul for no good reason; they shall enter into the deepest parts of the earth;

they shall be given over to a sword’s power; pray for foxes they shall be.

But the king shall be glad in God; every one who swears by him shall be commended, because the mouth of people speaking unjust things was stopped up.

Psalm 63(64)

Regarding completion. A Psalm. Pertaining to Dauid.

Listen to my voice, O God, when I petition; from fear of an enemy deliver my soul.

You sheltered me from a swarm of wicked people, from a crowd of people who practice lawlessness, who whetted their tongues like a sword, who bent their bow—a cruel act, to shoot in secret at a blameless one; suddenly they will shoot at him and will not fear.

They empowered each other with a wicked word; they talked in order to hide snares; they said, “Who can see them?”

They searched out acts of lawlessness; they left off conducting their search.

A person will come forward and his d heart is deep,

and God will be exalted.

A dart of infants their blows became, and against them their tongues became weak.

All who saw them were troubled.

And every person feared, and they proclaimed the works of God, and what he had done they perceived.

One who is righteous will be glad in the Lord and will hope in him.
And all the upright in heart shall be commended.
Psalm 64(65)

2(1) To you a hymn is due, O God, in Sion, and to you shall a vow be paid.

3(2) Listen to my prayer! To you all flesh shall come.

4(3) Words of lawlessness overpowered us, and our impieties you will expiate.

5(4) Happy is he whom you chose and took to yourself; he shall encamp in your courts. We shall be filled with the good things of your house; holy is your shrine, admirable in justice.

6(5) Hearken to us, O God, our savior, the hope of all the ends of the earth, and in a sea far away, as he prepares mountains by his strength, girded with dominance, he who stirs the hollow of the sea, roars of its waves. The nations will be troubled, and those who inhabit the limits will be awed by your signs. Goings-out of morning and evening you will cheer.

7(6) You visited the earth and intoxicated it; you multiplied enriching it; the river of God was filled with water; you prepared its nourishment, because so is your preparation.

11(10) Intoxicate its furrows! Multiply its crops; it will be glad with its drops, when it sprouts.

12(11) You will bless the crown of the year of your goodness, and your plains shall be filled with fatness.

13(12) The seasonable things of the wilderness will be made fat; with rejoicing the hills will gird themselves.

14(13) The rams of the flocks were clad, and the valleys multiply grain; they will cry out; indeed, they will sing a hymn.

Psalm 65(66)

1 Regarding completion. An Ode. Of a Psalm.

1(1) Make a joyful noise to God, all the earth; do make music to his name;

2 Give glory to his praise.

3 Say to God, “How awesome are your works! Because of your great power, your enemies will play false with you.

4 Let all the earth do obeisance to you and make music to you; let them make music to your name.”

5 Come, and see the works of God; he is awesome in his plans beyond the sons of men,

6 he who turns the sea back into dry land; in a river they will pass through on foot. There we shall be glad in him,

7 who rules the age in his dominance; his eyes keep watch on the nations, those that provoke—let them not be exalted in themselves.

8 Bless our God, O nations, and make heard the voice of the praise of him

9 who placed my soul in life and does not give my feet to wavering.

10 Because you, O God, tested us, you tried us as silver is tried.

11 You brought us into the snare; you laid afflictions on our back; you mounted persons on our heads; we went through fire and water, and you brought us out to revival.

13 I will enter into your house with whole burnt offerings I will pay you my vows, which my lips emitted and my mouth spoke in my affliction.

14 Fatted whole burnt offerings I will offer to you, with incense of rams; I will do for you cows with goats.

16 Come, hear, and I will tell, all you who fear God, what all he did for my soul.

17 To him I cried with my mouth, and I exalted beneath my tongue.

18 If I was contemplating injustice in my heart, let the Lord not listen.

19 Therefore God listened to me; he gave heed to the voice of my petition.

20 Blessed be God, who did not remove my prayer and his mercy from me.

Psalm 68(69)

Save me, O God,
because waters came as far as my soul.

I was stuck in deep mire,
and there is no foothold;
I came into the depths of the sea,
and a tempest overwhelmed me.

I grew weary of crying;

my throat was hoarse.
My eyes failed
from hoping in my God.

They multiplied beyond the hairs of my head,
those who hate me without cause;
my enemies who persecuted me unjustly became strong.

What I did not seize
I would then repay.

O God, you knew my folly, and the wrongs I did were not hidden from you.

May those who wait for you not be put to shame because of me,
O Lord, Lord of hosts;
may those who seek you not be embarrassed
because of me,
O God of Israel,

because for your sake I bore reproach;
embarrassment covered my face.

I became estranged from my brothers,
a visitor to the sons of my mother,
because the zeal for your house consumed
me,
and the reproaches of those who reproach you fell on me.

And I bent my soul with fasting,
and it became reproaches to me.

And I made sackcloth my clothing and became an illustration to them.

About me those who sit in a gate would gossip,
and against me those who drink wine would make music.

But as for me, with my prayer to you,
O Lord!
It is a time of favor, O God, in the abundance of your mercy.

Hearken to me with truth of your deliverance.

Save me from the mud so that I shall not get stuck;
may I be rescued from those who hate
me
and from the deep waters.

Do not let a tempest of water overwhelm
me
or a deep swallow me up or a cistern close its mouth over me.

Listen to me, O Lord, because your mercy is kind;
according to the abundance of your compassion look upon me.

Do not turn away your face from your servant;
because I am in affliction, quickly
hearken to me.

For you know my reproach and my shame and my embarrassment; before you are all those who afflict me.

Reproach my heart expected—and misery, and I waited for one that would sympathize, and none existed, and for comforters, but I did not find.

And they gave gall as my food, and for my thirst they gave me vinegar to drink.

Let their table become a trap before them, and a retribution and a stumbling block.

Let their eyes be darkened so that they cannot see, and bend their back permanently.

Pour out upon them your wrath, and may the anger of your wrath overtake them.

Let their stead ing become desolated, and let there be no one who lives in their coverts, because they persecuted him whom you struck, and to the pain of your wounded they added.

Add lawlessness to their lawlessness, and let them not enter in your righteousness.

Let them be blotted out of the book of the living, and let them not be enrolled among the righteous.

He will ascend like rain on a fleece,
and like drops dripping on the earth.

In his days righteousness will sprout,
and an abundance of peace, until the moon vanishes.

And he shall exercise dominion from sea to sea and from river to the world’s limits.

Before him Ethiopians will fall down,
and his enemies will lick dust.

Kings of Tharsis and the isles will present gifts;
kings of Arabs and Saba will bring gifts.

And all kings shall do obeisance to him;
all nations shall be subject to him.

Because he rescued a poor one from a mighty one and a needy one who has no helper, he will spare poor and needy,
and the souls of the needy he will save.

From usury and from injustice he will redeem their soul,
and precious is their name in his sight.

And he shall live long,
and there will be given to him of the gold of Arabia.
And they will pray for him continually,
and all day long they will bless him.

There will be sustenance in the land on the tops of the mountains;
its fruit will surpass Lebanon, and they will blossom forth from a city like the grass of the field.

Let his name be blessed through the ages;
his name shall endure longer than the sun.

And all the tribes of the earth will be blessed in him;
all the nations will pronounce him happy.

Blessed be the Lord God, the God of Israel, who alone does wondrous things.

And blessed be the name of his glory forever, even forever and ever,
and the whole earth will be filled with his glory.
May it be; may it be.

BOOK III
(Psalms 72[73]–88[89])

Psalm 72(73)

1 A Psalm. Pertaining to Asaph.

(1) How good is God to Israel, to the upright in heart!
2 But as for me, my feet were almost shaken; my steps nearly slipped,
3 because I was envious of the lawless, as I observed sinners’ peace,
4 because there is nothing negative in their death and no firmness in their scourge.
5 They are not in trouble of human beings, and with human beings they will not be scourged.
6 Therefore pride seized them; they clothed themselves with injustice and their impiety.
7 Their injustice will go forth as though from fat; they progressed according to their heart’s disposition.
8 They schemed and spoke with malice; injustice they spoke against the height.
9 They set their mouths against heaven, and their tongues ranged over the earth.
10 Therefore my people will return here, and full days will be found for them.
11 And they said, “How did God know?” and “Is there knowledge in the Most High?”
12 Look, these are sinners and bare flourishing; always did they possess wealth.
13 And I said, “So, in vain did I keep my heart just and washed my hands in innocence.
14 And I became scourged all day long, and my rebuke lasted till morning.”
15 If I said, “I will talk in this way,” look, I would have been faithless to the family of your sons.
16 And I thought how to understand this; a wearisome task was before me until I went into the sanctuary of God, and perceived their end.
17 But on account of deceits, you set for them; you brought them down, when they were raised up.
18 How they became desolate in a moment! They failed; they perished on account of their lawlessness.
19 Like a dream when one awakes, O Lord, in your city you will despise their phantom.
20 Because my heart was burnt up and my kidneys were changed
21 and I was of no account and ignorant, I became beastlike in your sight.
22 And I am continually with you; you seized my right hand.
23 With your counsel you guided me, and with glory you received me.
24 For what do I have in the sky, and from you what did I want on the earth?
25 My heart and my flesh failed; God is the God of my heart and is my portion forever,
26 because, look, those who distance themselves from you will perish; you destroyed every one who whored away from you.
27 But for me, to cling to God is good, to put my hope in the Lord, that I may tell of all your promises[d] in the gates of daughter Sion[e].

Psalm 73(74)

1 Of understanding. Pertaining to Asaph.

(1) Why did you reject, O God, totally; was your anger aroused against sheep of your pasture?
2 Remember your congregation, which you acquired long ago; you redeemed a rod of your heritage; you redeemed this Mount Sion, whereon you encamped.
3 Raise your hands against their acts of pride, totally, which evils the enemy committed among your saints.
4 And those who hate you boasted within your feast; they set up their emblems as emblems and did not know.
5 As though into the entrance above—
6 as though they were in a forest of trees, they felled its doors with axes;
7 together, with wood-cutter’s ax and stone-cutter’s chisel, they smashed it.
8 They set on fire your sanctuary with fire; to the ground they desecrated the covert of your name.
9 They said in their heart—the clan of them together— “Come, and let us burn all the feasts of God from off the land.”
10 Our emblems we did not see; there is no longer a prophet, and us he will know no longer.
11 How long, O God, will the enemy reproach,
Psalm 73(74)–75(76)

the opponent utterly provoke your name?

Why do you turn away your hand, and your right hand from within your bosom, totally?

11 yet God is our King from of old; he worked deliverance in the midst of the earth.

12 It was you who strengthened the sea by your power; you shattered the heads of the dragons upon the water.

13 It was you who crushed the heads of the dragon; you gave him as food to the Ethiopian peoples.

14 It was you who broke through springs and wadis; it was you who dried up streams of Etham.

15 Yours is the day, and yours is the night; it was you who established lighting and sun.

16 It was you who made all the bounds of the earth; summer and spring, it was you who fashioned them.

17 Remember this; an enemy reproached the Lord, and a foolish people provoked your name.

18 Do not deliver a soul that acknowledges you to the wild animals; the souls of your needy do not forget totally.

19 Have regard for your covenant, because the darkened ones of the land were filled with houses of lawlessness.

20 Let not a humbled one be turned away in shame; poor and needy will praise your name.

21 Rise up, O God; plead your cause; remember how you are reproached by the fool all day long.

22 Do not forget the voice of your suppliants; the pride of those who hate you went up to you continually.

Psalm 74(75)

2(1) We will acknowledge you, O God; we will acknowledge and call upon your name.

3 I will tell of your wondrous deeds, (2) when I seize an opportune moment;

4(3) I will judge with uprightness. The earth melted, and all who live in it; it was I who firmed up its pillars

Interlude on strings

5(4) I said to those who break the law, “Do not break the law,” and to those that sin, “Do not raise a horn;

6(5) do not lift up your horn on high; do not speak injustice against God,”

7(6) because neither from egresses nor from settings nor from desolate mountains—

8(7) because God is judge, this one he humbles and that one he exalts;

9(8) because there is a cup in the Lord’s hand, of pure wine, full of a mixture, and he tipped it from side to side, but its dregs were not emptied out; all the sinners of the earth shall drink.

10(9) But as for me, I will rejoice forever; I will make music to the God of Jakob.

11(10) And all the horns of sinners I will break off, and the horns of the righteous one shall be exalted.

Psalm 75(76)

2(1) God is known in Judea; in Israel his name is great.

3(2) And his place was in peace, and his place of settlement was in Sion.

4(3) There he crushed the power of the bows, shield and sword and war.

Interlude on strings

5(4) It is you who gives light marvelously from everlasting mountains.

6(5) All the stupid in heart were troubled; they slept their sleep and found nothing— all the men of wealth, with their hands.

7(6) At your rebuke, O God of Jakob, those mounted on horses became drowsy.

8(7) You—awesome you are! Who shall withstand you? From then is your anger.

9(8) From the sky you made judgment heard; earth feared and was still, when God rose up to establish judgment, to save all the meek of the earth.

12 Make vows, and pay to the Lord your God; all who are around him will bring gifts to the one who is awesome and who cuts off the spirit of rulers, awesome to the kings of the earth.

Psalm 76(77)

2 With my voice I cried to the Lord, with my voice to God, and he paid attention to me.

3 In a day of my affliction I sought God, with my hands, at night, before him, and I was not deceived; my soul refused to be comforted.

4 I thought of God, and I was glad; I pondered, and my spirit became discouraged.

Interlude on strings

5 With watches a my eyes were preoccupied; I was troubled and did not speak.

6 I considered days of old, and years of long ago I remembered and meditated;

7 at night I would commune with my heart, and b I would probe my spirit:

8 "Surely the Lord will not spurn forever and will not add to be well pleased any longer?

9 Or will he completely cut off his mercy from generation to generation?

10 Or will God forget to be compassionate? Or will he in his anger shut up his compassion?"

Interlude on strings

11 And I said, "Now I have begun: this change was of the right hand of the Most High!"

12 I called to mind the works of the Lord, because I will remember your wonders from of old.

13 And I will meditate on all your works, and among your practices I will ponder.

14 O God, your way is in cthe holy place c. What god is great like our God?

15 You are the God who works wonders; you made known your power among the peoples.

16 You redeemed your people with your strong arm, the sons of Iakob and Ioseph.

Interlude on strings

17 Waters saw you, O God; waters saw you, and they were afraid, and the deep was troubled, a great roaring of waters.

18 A voice the clouds gave forth; indeed, your arrows are passing through.

19 A voice of your thunder was in the circuit d; your lightnings gave light to the world; the earth shook and was set atremble.

20 In the sea was your way, and your paths in many waters, and your footprints will not be known.

21 You guided your people like sheep by the hand of Moyses and Aaron.

Psalm 77(78)

Of understanding. Pertaining to Asaph.

1 Pay attention, O my people, to my law; incline your ears to the words of my mouth.

2 I will open my mouth in a parable e; I will utter problems from of old,

3 things that we heard, and we knew them, and our fathers told us.

4 They were not hidden from their children to a next generation, as they kept telling of the praises of the Lord and of his dominance and of the wonders that he did.

5 He established a witness in Iakob and set a law in Israel, which he commanded our fathers to make them known to their sons,

6 that a next generation might know them, sons that will be born, and they shall rise up and tell them to their sons

7 so that they should set their hope in God and not forget the works of God and seek f out his commandments,

8 that they should not be like their fathers, a generation, crooked and embittering, a generation which did not set its heart aright, and its spirit was not faithful to God.

9 Ephraim’s sons, though bending and shooting their bows, were turned back on a day of war.

10 They did not keep the covenant of God, and in his law they did not want to walk.

11 And they forgot his benefactions and his marvels that he showed them in the sight of their fathers, which marvels he worked in the land of Egypt, in Tanis’ plain.

12 He broke asunder a sea and brought them through and made waters stand like a wineskin. And he led them with a cloud by day, and all night long with an illumination of fire. He broke asunder a rock in a wilderness and gave them drink as from a voluminous deep. And he brought out water from a rock and brought down waters like rivers. And they added still to sin against him; they embittered the Most High in a waterless land. And they tested God in their hearts by demanding food for their souls. And they spoke against God and said, “Surely, God will not be able to spread a table in a wilderness? Even though he struck a rock and waters gushed out and wadis deluged, surely, he cannot also give bread or spread a table for his people?” Therefore, the Lord heard and was put out, and a fire was kindled in Iakob, and anger mounted against Israel, because they had no faith in God nor did they hope in his saving power. And he commanded clouds above and opened heaven’s doors, and he rained down manna for them to eat, and heaven’s bread he gave them. Bread of angels man ate; provisions he sent them in abundance. He removed a south wind from heaven, and he led on, by his dominance, a southwest wind, and he rained upon them flesh like dust and winged birds like the sand of seas, and they fell in the midst of their camp, all around their coverts. And they ate and were well filled, and what they craved he brought them; they were not deprived of what they craved. While their food was still in their mouth, God’s wrath also rose against them, and he killed among their sleek ones, and the select of Israel he shackled. Amidst all these things they still sinned, and they did not believe in his marvels. And in vanity did their days end, and their years with haste. When he was killing them, they would seek him out; they would turn to God and be early. And they remembered that God was their helper and God the Most High was their redeemer. And they deceived him with their mouth; with their tongue they lied to him. And their heart was not upright with him, nor were they true to his covenant. Yet he is compassionate and will atone their sins and not destroy them, and he will increase to turn away his anger and not ignite all his wrath. And he remembered that they were flesh, a breath that passes and does not come again. How often they embittered him in the wilderness; they provoked him to anger in an arid land! And they turned about and tested God, and the Holy One of Israel they provoked. They did not keep in mind his hand, the day on which he redeemed them from an oppressor’s hand; how he displayed in Egypt his signs, and his wonders in Tanis’ plain. And he turned their rivers into blood, and their pools, so that they could not drink. He sent a dog-fly among them, and it devoured them, and a frog, and it destroyed them. And he gave their crops over to the rust, and their labors to the grasshopper. He killed their vine with hail and their mulberry trees with the hoarfrost. And he gave over their cattle to hail and their property to the fire. He sent among them his anger’s wrath, anger and wrath and affliction, a dispatch through wicked angels. He made a path for his wrath; he did not spare their souls from death, and their cattle he consigned to death. And he struck every firstborn in Egypt, first fruit of their labors in the coverts of Cham. And he removed his people like sheep and brought them up like a flock in a wilderness. And he guided them in hope, and they were not in dread, but their enemies a sea covered. And he brought them to a territory of his holy precinct, this mountain that his right hand acquired. And he threw out nations from before them, and he distributed to them shares by measuring line and made the tribes of Israel encamp in their coverts. And they tested and embittered God the Most High. And his testimonies they did not observe 57 and turned away and were faithless as also their fathers; they were twisted into a crooked bow.

58 And they provoked him to anger with their hills, and with their carved images they moved him to jealousy.
59 God heard and disdained, and he treated Israel with utter contempt.
60 And he rejected his tent at Selô, a covert where he encamped among human beings, and gave their strength over to captivity and their comeliness into an enemy’s hands.
62 And he consigned his people to a sword, and his heritage he disdained.
63 Their young men fire devoured, and their girls were not bewailed.
64 Their priests fell by sword, and their widows will not be lamented.
65 And the Lord awoke as one that sleeps, like a strong man intoxicated with wine.
66 And he struck his enemies backwards; everlasting disgrace he put them to.
67 And he rejected the covert of Ioseph, and the tribe of Ephraim he did not choose, and he chose the tribe of Ioudas, Mount Sion, which he loved.
68 And he built his holy precinct like that of unicorns, in the land—he founded it forever.
69 And he chose Daud his slave and took him from the sheepfolds; from behind the lambing ewes he took him to shepherd Iakob his people and Israel his inheritance.
70 And he shepherded them in the innocence of his heart, and by the cleverness of his hands he guided them.

Psalm 78(79)

1 A Psalm. Pertaining to Asaph.

(1) O God, nations came into your inheritance; they defiled your holy shrine; they made Ierousalem into a garden-watcher’s hut.
2 They placed the carcasses of your slaves as food for the birds of the air, the flesh of your devout for the wild animals of the earth.
3 They poured out their blood like water all around Ierousalem, and there was no one to bury.
4 We became a reproach to our neighbors, mockery and derision to those around us.

5 How long, O Lord, will you be utterly angry, will your jealousy burn like fire?
6 Pour out your wrath on nations that do not know you and on kingdoms that did not call on your name,
7 because they devoured Iakob and his place they laid waste.
8 Do not remember our lawless deeds of long ago; let your compassion speedily preoccupy us, because we became very poor.
9 Help us, O God our savior; for the sake of the glory of your name, O Lord, rescue us, and atone for our sins, for the sake of your name,
10 so that the nations may not say, “Where is their God?”—and let the avenging of the outpoured blood of your slaves be known among the nations before our eyes.
11 Let the groaning of the prisoners come before you; according to the greatness of your arm preserve the sons of those put to death.
12 Return sevenfold into the bosom of our neighbors their reproaching with which they reproached you, O Lord!
13 But we, your people and sheep of your pasture, will acknowledge you openly forever; to generation and generation we will recount your praise.

You made us a controversy to our neighbors, and our enemies mocked us.

A vine you transferred from Egypt; you threw out nations and planted it.

You cleared the way for it, and you planted its roots and filled the land.

Its shade covered mountains, and its tendrils the cedars of God; and as far as the river its shoots.

Why did you bring down its fence, and all who pass along the way pluck its fruit?

A boar from the forest ravaged it, and a lone wild beast fed on it.

O God of hosts, do bring back; look down from heaven, and see this vine, and restore that which your right hand planted—

Burnt with fire and dug up it was; at the rebuke of your face they will perish.

Let your hand be upon the man at your right hand, and upon a son of man, whom you made strong for yourself.

And we will never turn away from you; you will revive us, and we will call on your name.

1 An Ode. Of a Psalm. Pertaining to Asaph.

2(1) O God, who shall be likened to you?
Do not keep silent nor be appeased,
O God,

3(2) because, look, your enemies made a tumult,
and those who hate you raised their
head.

4(3) Against your people they laid villainous plans,
and they conspired against your saints.

5(4) They said, "Come, and let us destroy them

6(5) because they conspired together with one accord;
against you they made a covenant—
7(6) the coverts of the Idumeans and the Ismaelites,
Moab and the Hagarites,

8(7) Gebal and Ammon and Amalek, and allophyles with the inhabitants of Tyre;

9(8) indeed, even Assour came along with them;
they came as support for sons of Lot.

10(9) Do to them as to Madiam and to Sisara, as Iabin was at Wadi Kison!

11(10) They were destroyed at Aendor;

5(4) I was counted among those who go down into a pit; I became like a helpless person, free among corpses,
6(5) like casualties lying asleep in a grave, whom you remembered no more, and they were thrust away from your hand.
7(6) They put me in a very deep pit, in dark places and in death’s shadow.
8(7) Upon me your anger was fixed, and all your billows you brought upon me.

Interlude on strings

9(8) You distanced my acquaintances from me; they made me an abomination to themselves.
I was handed over and could not walk away;
10(9) my eyes grew weak through poverty.
I cried out to you, O Lord, all day long; I spread out my hands to you.
11(10) Surely, you shall not work wonders for the dead?
Or will physicians raise up, and they acknowledge you?

Interlude on strings

12(11) Surely, no one will declare your mercy in a grave and your truth in the ruin?
13(12) Surely, your wonders will not be known in the darkness, and your righteousness in a land forgotten?

14(13) And I, O Lord, I cried out to you,
and in the morning my prayer will anticipate you.
15(14) Why, O Lord, do you cast off my soul,
do you turn away your face from me?
16(15) Poor I am and in troubles from my youth, and after being exalted I was humbled and became perplexed.
17(16) Your wrath swept over me;

your five fears threw me in disarray.
18(17) They surrounded me like water all day long;
they closed in on me at once.
19(18) You distanced from me friend and fellow and my acquaintances due to misery.

Psalm 88(89)

1 Of understanding. Pertaining to Aithan the Israelite.

2(1) Of your mercies, O Lord, I will sing forever;
to generation and generation I will proclaim your truth with my mouth,
3(2) because you said, “Forever mercy will be built.”
In the heavens your truth will be prepared.

4(3) “I made a covenant with my chosen ones;
I swore to David my slave:
5(4) ‘Forever I will provide offspring for you and will build your throne for generation and generation.’ ”

Interlude on strings

6(5) The heavens will acknowledge your wonders, O Lord, indeed, your truth in an assembly of holy ones,
7(6) because who in the clouds shall be deemed equal to the Lord?
And who among divine sons shall be compared with the Lord?
8(7) God is glorified in a council of holy ones, great and awesome to all that are around him.
9(8) O Lord God of hosts, who is like you?
You are powerful, O Lord, and your truth is around you.
10(9) It is you who rule the might of the sea, and the surge of its waves you calm.
11(10) It is you who brought low a proud one like one wounded;
with the arm of your power you scattered your enemies.
12(11) Yours are the heavens, and yours is the earth;
the world and all that is in it you founded.
13(12) The north and seas you created;
Thabor and Hermon will rejoice in your name.
14(13) Yours is the arm with dominance;
let your hand be strong;
let your right hand be exalted.
15(14) Righteousness and judgment are a provision of your throne;
mercy and truth will go in front of you.

Happy are the people who know a shout for joy;
O Lord, in the light of your countenance they will walk,
and in your name they will rejoice all day long,
and in your righteousness they will be exalted, because you are the boast of their power and by your favor our horn shall be exalted, because support is of the Lord and of the Holy One of Israel, our king.
Then you spoke in a vision to your devout ones and said:
"I added help to one who is powerful;
I exalted one chosen from my people.
I found David my slave; with my holy oil I anointed him.
Indeed, my hand shall sustain him; my arm also shall strengthen him.
An enemy shall not profit by him, and a son of lawlessness shall not add to harm him.
And I will crush his enemies from before him, and those who hate him I will rout.
And my truth and my mercy shall be with him, and in my name his horn shall be exalted.
And I will set his hand in a sea, and in rivers his right hand.
He shall call upon me, 'My Father you are, my God and supporter of my deliverance!'
I will keep my mercy for him, and my covenant with him will stand firm.
And I will establish his seed forever and ever and his throne is like the sun before me, and like the moon, established forever.
And the witness in heaven is faithful."
But you, you spurned and rejected; you put off your anointed.
You renounced the covenant with your slave, you defiled his sanctity in the dust.
You broke down all his defenses; you reduced his strongholds to cowardice.
All the way-farers plundered him; he became a reproach to his neighbors.
You exalted the right hand of his enemies; you made glad all his enemies.
You turned away the help of his sword, and you did not support him in battle.
You dismissed him from purification; his throne you smashed to the ground.
You diminished the days of his time; you covered him with shame.

How long, O Lord? Will you turn away completely?
Will your wrath burn like fire?
Remember what my substance is. For, surely, you did not create all the sons of men in vain?
Who is the person who shall live and not see death, shall rescue his soul from the power of Hades?

Lord, where are your mercies of long ago, which you swore to David by your truth?
Remember, O Lord, the reproach against your slaves, which I bore in my bosom, from many nations, with which your enemies reproached, O Lord, with which they reproached what had been exchanged for your anointed.
Blessed be the Lord forever. May it be; may it be.

BOOK IV

Psalm 89(90)

A Prayer.

Lord, you became a refuge to us in generation and generation.
Before mountains were brought forth and the earth and the world were formed, and from everlasting to everlasting you are.

Do not turn man away to humiliation. And you said, "Return, you sons of men,"

because a thousand years in your sight are like the day of yesterday that passed and a watch in a night.

Years shall be the objects of their scorn;
in the morning may it pass like young growth;
in the morning may it flourish and pass;
in the evening may it fall, become hard and wither.

Because we expired by your wrath and by your anger we were troubled, you set our lawless deeds before you;
our lifetime became an illumination of your face.

Because all our days expired and by your wrath we expired our years would ponder like a cobweb.
The days of our years—in them are seventy years,
but if in acts of dominance eighty years,
and the greater part of them is toil and trouble, because meekness came upon us, and we shall become disciplined.

Who knows the might of your wrath,
and your anger from your fear?
Make thus known to reckon up your right hand and those fettered in heart by wisdom.
Bring back, O Lord! How long?
And be consoled over your slaves!
In the morning we were filled with your mercy,
and we rejoiced and were glad in all our days.
We were glad as many days as you humbled us,
years as we saw evil.
And look upon your slaves and upon your works,
and guide their sons.
Let the splendor of the Lord our God be upon us and prosper upon us the work of our hands.

Psalm 90(91)

A laudation. Of an Ode. Pertaining to Dauid.
(1) He who lives by the help of the Most High,
in a shelter of the God of the sky he will lodge.

He will say to the Lord, “My supporter you are and my refuge;
my God, I will hope in him," because it is he who will rescue me from a trap of hunters and from a troublesome word;

with the broad of his back he will shade you,
and under his wings you will find hope;
with a shield his truth will surround you.
You will not be afraid of nocturnal fright,
of an arrow that flies by day,
of a deed that travels in darkness,
of mishap and noonday demon.

At your side a thousand will fall,
and ten thousand at your right,
but it will not come near you.
Only with your eyes will you perceive,
and the requital of sinners you will see.

Because you, O Lord, are my hope,
the Most High you made your refuge.
No evil shall come before you,
and no scourge shall come near your covert, because he will command his angels concerning you to guard you in all your ways;
upon hands they will bear you up so that you will not dash your foot against a stone.
On asp and cobra you will tread,
and you will trample lion and dragon under foot.

Because in me he hoped, I will also rescue him;
I will protect him, because he knew my name.
He will call to me, and I will listen to him;
I am with him in trouble;
I will rescue them and glorify him.
With length of days I will satisfy him and show him my deliverance.

Psalm 91(92)

A Psalm. Of an Ode. Regarding the day of the sabbath.
(1) It is good to acknowledge the Lord and to make music to your name, O Most High, in order to declare your mercy in the morning and your truth every night on a ten-stringed harp,
with an ode on a lyre,
because you, O Lord, made me glad by your work,
and at the deeds of your hands I will rejoice.

How were your deeds extolled, O Lord!
Your thoughts reached great depth!
A foolish man cannot know, and a stupid one will not understand these things.
When sinners sprang up like grass also all who practice lawlessness popped up so that they may be destroyed forever and ever.
But you are most high forever, O Lord, because, look, your enemies, O Lord, because, look, your enemies shall perish and all those who practice lawlessness shall be scattered.

Psalm 92(93)

1 A Psalm. Pertaining to Dauid. Pertaining to Dauid.

(1) The Lord became king; he was robed in majesty; the Lord was robed in power and girded himself. Indeed, he made firm the world, that it shall not be shaken;
your throne is prepared from then on; from everlasting you are.

The streams lifted up, O Lord; the streams lifted up their voices.
Due to the voices of many waters wondrous are the billows of the sea; wondrous on high is the Lord!
Your testimonies were made very sure; sanctity befits your house, O Lord, unto length of days.

Psalm 93(94)

1 A Psalm. Pertaining to Dauid. Pertaining to the fourth day of the week. [Pertaining to the fourth day of the week.]

(1) The Lord is God of vengeance; the God of vengeance spoke openly!
Be exalted, O you who judge the earth; give to the proud what they deserve!
How long shall sinners, O Lord, how long shall sinners boast, shall they utter and talk injustice, shall they talk—all those who practice lawlessness?
Your people, O Lord, they humbled, and your heritage they wronged. Widow and guest they killed, and orphans they murdered, and they said, “The Lord will not see, nor will the God of Jakob understand.”

Do understand, O fools among the people, and, O stupid ones, think for once!
He who planted the ear, does he not hear? Or he who formed the eye, does he not perceive?
He who disciplines nations, will he not chastise, he who teaches man knowledge?
The Lord knows the thoughts of human beings, that they are vain.

Happy the person whom you discipline, O Lord, and teach him out of your law, to calm him due to wicked days until a hole is dug for the sinner, because the Lord will not reject his people and his heritage he will not abandon until justice turns into judgment, and with all the upright in heart clinging to it.

Who will rise up for me against wicked people? Or who will stand with me against people that practice lawlessness?
If it had not been that the Lord had helped me, my soul would virtually have sojourned in Hades.
If I were to say, “My foot has been shaken,” your mercy, O Lord, would help me.
According to the multitude of my pains in my heart your consolations loved my soul.
Surely a throne of lawlessness shall not be in your presence, he who shapes mischief by ordinance?
They will hunt down the soul of a righteous one, and innocent blood they condemn.
And the Lord became to me a refuge, and my God my hoped-for helper.
And he will repay them for their lawlessness, and according to their wickedness
the Lord our God will wipe them out.

and a great King over all the gods,

4 because in his hand are the ends of the earth
and the heights of the mountains are his,

5 because his is the sea and he made it and the dry land his hands formed!

6 O come, let us do obeisance and prostrate ourselves before him, and let us weep before the Lord, who made us,

7 because he is our God and we are people of his pasture and sheep of his hand!

Today if you hear his voice, do not harden your hearts, as at the emittering,
like the day of the trial in the wilderness,
where your fathers tried me;
they put me to the proof and saw my works.

10 For forty years I loathed that generation,

Psalm 100(101)

1 Pertaining to David. A Psalm.

(1) Of mercy and of justice I will sing to you, O Lord;
2 I will make music and take note of a blameless way.
   When will you come to me?
3 I would walk in my innocence of heart within my house.
4 People who practice transgression I hated; a crooked heart did not cling to me.
When the wicked kept turning away from me,
I would no longer know him.

5 The one who was secretly slandering his fellow, him I would chase away.
With a haughty eye and insatiate heart—with him I would not eat.

6 My eyes would be on the faithful in the land
so that they might sit with me.
If one walked in a blameless way,
he would minister to me.

7 No one who practiced haughtiness would live in my house;
no one who uttered injustice would prosper before my eyes.

8 Morning by morning I would kill all the sinners in the land in order to destroy from the Lord’s city all who practice lawlessness.

Psalm 101(102)

1 A prayer. Pertaining to the poor one. When he is weary and pours out his petition before the Lord.

2(1) O Lord, listen to my prayer, and let my cry come to you.

3(2) Do not turn away your face from me.
In the day when I am afflicted, incline your ear to me;
in the day when I call upon you,
listen to me speedily,

4(3) because my days vanished like smoke and my bones were burnt up like firewood.

5(4) My heart was stricken like grass and it withered, because I forgot to eat my bread.

6(5) Due to the sound of my groaning,
my bone clung to my flesh.

7(6) I resembled a desert pelican,
I became like a long-eared owl on a building-site.

8(7) I lay awake,
and I became like a lone sparrow on a housetop.

9(8) All day long my enemies would reproach me,
and those who used to commend me
would swear against me,

10(9) because I ate ashes like bread and would mix my drink with weeping.

11(10) from before your wrath and your anger, because when you had lifted me up you dashed me down.

12(11) My days faded like a shadow, and I, like grass, I withered away.

13(12) But you, O Lord, remain forever, and the mention of you to generation and generation.

14(13) When you rise up you will have compassion on Sion, because it is the appointed time to have compassion on it, because the appointed time has come,

15(14) because your slaves held its stones dear and on its dust they will have compassion.

16(15) And the nations will fear the name of the Lord, and all the kings of the earth your glory,

17(16) because the Lord will build up Sion, and he will be seen in his glory.

18(17) He regarded the prayer of the lowly and did not despise their petition.

19(18) Let this be recorded for another generation, and a people, which is being created, will praise the Lord,

20(19) because he peered down from his holy height,
the Lord from heaven looked at the earth,

21(20) to hear the groaning of the prisoners,
to set free the sons of those put to death,

22(21) so that the name of the Lord might be declared in Sion, and his praise in Jerusalem,

23(22) when peoples gather together,
and kingdoms, to be subject to the Lord.

24(23) He answered him in the way of his strength,
"Tell me the paucity of my days.

25(24) Do not take me away at the mid-point of my days, while your years are in generation of generations!"

26(25) At the beginning it was you, O Lord, who founded the earth, and the heavens are works of your hands.

27(26) They will perish, but you will endure,
and they will all become old like a garment.

28(27) But you are the same,
and your years will not fail.

2 Bless the Lord, O my soul,
Psalm 103(104)

1 Pertaining to David.

(1) Bless the Lord, O my soul.
O Lord my God, you were greatly magnified.
With acknowledgment and splendor you were clothed, wrapping yourself in light as in a garment, stretching out the sky like a skin.
He who covers his upper stories with waters,
who makes cloud masses his step-up,
who walks about on wings of winds.
He who makes spirits his messengers,
and flaming fire his ministers.

5 He founded the earth on its stability;
it will never ever be tilted.
6 The deep like a garment is his clothing;
above the mountains the waters will stand.
7 At your rebuke they will flee;
at a voice of your thunder they will cower with fright.
8 Mountains ascend, and plains descend to a spot that you founded for them.
9 A boundary you set that they shall not pass, or shall they return to cover the earth.
10 He who makes springs gush forth in ravines;
between the mountains they will flow.
11 They will give drink to all the animals of the field;
onagers will receive for their thirst.
12 On them the birds of the air will encamp;
from among the rocks they will give forth sound.
13 When he waters mountains from his upper stories, with the fruit of your work the earth shall be fed,
when he causes grass to grow for the cattle,
and plants for the service of human beings,
to bring forth bread from the earth.
14 And wine gladdens a human heart,
to brighten a face with oil,
and bread sustains a human heart.
15 The trees of the plain shall be fed,
the cedars of Lebanon, which he planted.
16 There sparrows will build their nests;
the home of the heron leads them.
17 The high mountains are for the does;
a rock is a refuge for the hares.
18 He made a moon for seasons;
the sun knew its setting.
19 You set darkness, and it became night;
in it all the animals of the forest will pass through,
the whelps roaring to seize and to seek their food from God.
The sun rose, and they gathered,
and in their dens they will lie down.
A person will go out to his work and to his labor until the evening.

How magnified were your works, O Lord!
In wisdom you made them all;
the earth was filled with your acquisition.
This great and wide sea;
there creeping things innumerable,
living things, small with great.
There ships travel,
this dragon that you formed to mock at him.
All look to you
to give them food in due season;
when you give to them, they will gather,
and when you open your hand,
all things together will be filled with kindness.
But when you turn away your face, they will be dismayed;
you cancel their spirit, and they will fail and return to their dust.
You will send forth your spirit, and they will be created,
and you will renew the face of the ground.

Let the glory of the Lord be forever.
The Lord will be glad at his works—
he who looks on the earth and makes it tremble, he who touches the mountains and they smoke.
I will sing to the Lord in my life;
I will make music to my God while I have being.
May my conversation be pleasing to him,
and I will be glad in the Lord!
May sinners fail from the earth,
and the lawless, so that they be no more.
Bless the Lord, O my soul.

Psalm 104(105)

Hallelouia.

1 Acknowledge the Lord, and call on his name;
announce his deeds among the nations.

2 Sing to him, and make music to him;
tell of all his wonderful things.

3 Be commended in his holy name;
let the heart of people that seek the Lord be glad.

4 Seek the Lord and be strengthened;
seek his face continually.

Remember the wonderful things which he did,
his miracles and the judgments of his mouth,
O offspring of Abraam, his slaves, sons of Iakob, his chosen.
The Lord himself is our God;
in all the earth are his judgments.
He remembered his covenant forever,
a word that he commanded for a thousand generations
—that he pledged to Abraam—
and his oath to Isaak
And he established itc for Iakob as an ordinance and for Israel as an everlasting covenant, saying, "To you I will give the land of Chanaan as a parcel for your inheritance."
When they were small in number,
very few and resident aliens in it,
they also passed from nation to nation,
from kingdom to another people.
He allowed no person to do them wrong,
and he rebuked kings on their account,
"Do not touch my anointed ones,
and among my prophets do no harm."
And he summoned famine against the land,
and every sustenance of bread he crushed;
he sent a person ahead of them;
Joseph was sold as a slave.
They debased his feet with fetters;
his soul passed through iron until what he had said came to pass;
the saying of the Lord purified him.
A king sent and released him,
a ruler of peoples, and set him free.
He made him lord of his house and ruler of all his possessions, to educate his officials to be like himself and to teach his elders wisdom.
And Israel entered into Egypt,
and Iakob lived as a resident alien in Cham’s land.
And he6 increased his people very much and made them strong beyond their enemies.
He changed their hearts to hate his people,
to deal craftily with his slaves.
He sent out Moyses, his slave,
Aaron, him whom he chose.
In them he placed the words of his signs and wonders in Cham’s land.
He sent darkness, and it grew dark,
and they embittered his words.
He changed their waters into blood and killed their fish.

And he struck their vines and their fig trees and shattered a tree of their territory.
He spoke, and the grasshopper came, and locust larva without number, and they devoured all the vegetation in their land and devoured the fruit of their land.
And he struck down every firstborn in their land, first fruit of all their toil.
And he brought them out with silver and gold, and there was no one among their tribes who was weak.

2 Who shall speak of the acts of dominance of the Lord, make heard all his praises?
3 Happy are those who observe justice and do righteousness at every opportunity.
4 Remember us, O Lord, in the good pleasure of your people; regard us in your deliverance, that we may look at the kindness of your chosen ones, that we may be glad in the gladness of your nation, that we may be commended with your heritage.

6 We sinned together with our fathers; we acted lawlessly; we committed injustice.
7 Our fathers in Egypt did not consider your wonderful works; they did not remember the abundance of your mercy and embittered, when going up at the Red Sea.
8 And he saved them for his name’s sake, to make known his dominance.
9 And he rebuked the Red Sea, and it became dry, and he guided them in the deep as in a wilderness.
10 And he saved them from the hand of people that hate and redeemed them from an enemy’s hand.
11 And water covered those that afflicted them; not one of them was left.
12 And they believed in his words, and they sang his praise.
13 They were quick to forget his works; they did not wait for his counsel.
14 And they craved with craving in the wilderness and put God to the test in a waterless region, and he gave them their request and sent surfeit into their souls.
15 And they angered Moyses in the camp, Aaron, the holy one of the Lord.
17 The earth opened and swallowed up Dathan and covered the company of Abiron.
18 And fire broke out in their company; a flame burned up sinners.
19 And they made a calf at Choreb and did obeisance to the carved image.
20 And they exchanged their glory for a likeness of a bull calf that eats grass.
21 They forgot the God who was saving them, who did great things in Egypt, wondrous works in Cham’s land and awesome things by the Red Sea.
22 And he spoke in order to destroy them—had not Moyses, his chosen one, stood in the breach before him, to turn away his wrath from destroying.
24 And they despised a desirable land; they had no faith in his word.
25 And they grumbled in their coverts; they did not listen to the voice of the Lord.
26 And he raised his hand against them, to cast them down in the wilderness.

and to cast down their offspring among the nations and scatter them in the lands.

And they were initiated to Beelphegor and ate sacrifices of the dead, and they provoked him with their practices,
and the falling broke out among them.
And Phinees stood and made atonement,
and the breach abated.
And it was reckoned to him as righteousness to generation and generation forever.

And they angered him at a water of contention,
and it went ill with Moyses on their account,
because they made his spirit bitter,
and he spoke rashly.

They did not destroy the nations, which the Lord told them,
and they mingled with the nations and learned their works.
And they were subject to their carved images,
and it became to them a stumbling block.

And they sacrificed their sons and their daughters to the demons, and they poured out innocent blood, blood of their sons and daughters whom they sacrificed to the carved images of Chanaan,
and the land was rendered lifeless with blood.
And it was defiled by their acts,
and they played the prostitute in their practices.

And the Lord became furiously angry with his people,
and he abhorred his heritage,
and he gave them into the hands of nations,
and those who hated them ruled over them.
And their enemies oppressed them,
and they were brought low under their hands.
Many times he rescued them,
but they embittered him by their purposes and were brought low by their lawlessness.
And he regarded them when they were being afflicted,
when he listened to their petition.
And he remembered his covenant and showed regret according to the abundance of his mercy.
And he gave them over to be pitied before all who took them captive.

Save us, O Lord our God, and for his wonderful works to the sons of men, because he shattered bronze gates and iron bars he crumpled.

He aided them from their lawless way, for on account of their lawless acts they were brought low; any kind of food their soul loathed, and they drew near to the gates of death. And they cried to the Lord when they were being afflicted, and from their anguish he saved them; he sent out his word and healed them and rescued them from their destruction. Let them acknowledge the Lord for his mercies and for his wonderful works to the sons of men.

And let them sacrifice a sacrifice of praise and tell of his deeds with rejoicing.

Those who used to go down to the sea in ships, doing business on many waters—it was they who saw the deeds of the Lord and his wondrous works in the deep. He spoke and the tempest's blast stood, and its waves were raised on high. They mount up as far as the heavens, and they go down as far as the depths; their soul would melt away in calamity; they were troubled; they staggered like the drunkard, and all their wisdom was gulped down. And they cried to the Lord when they were being afflicted, and out of their anguish he brought them, and he ordered the tempest, and it subsided to a breeze, and its waves became silent. And they were glad, because they had quiet, and he guided them to a haven of their want. Let them acknowledge the Lord for his mercies and for his wonderful works to the sons of men.

Let them exalt him in an assembly of people and in a session of elders praise him.

He turned rivers into a wilderness and channels of water into thirst, a fruitful land into a salt marsh, due to the evil of its inhabitants. He turned a wilderness into pools of water and a parched land into channels of water. And there he settled hungry ones, and they established a city for settlement, and they sowed fields and planted vineyards and produced a fruit of a yield. And he blessed them, and they were multiplied greatly, and their cattle he did not decrease. And they were diminished and maltreated through affliction, wrong and sorrow. Contempt poured down on rulers, and he a made them wander in an impassable and trackless region, and he helped a needy one out of poverty and made their paternal families like sheep.

The upright will see it and be glad, and all lawlessness will stop its mouth. Who is wise and will keep these things—and will they take note of the mercies of the Lord?

1 aAn Ode. Of a Psalm a. Pertaining to Dauid.
2(1) Ready is my heart, O God; ready is my heart; I will sing and make music in my glory.
3(2) Awake, O harp and lyre! I will awaken at dawn.
4(3) I will acknowledge you among peoples, O Lord, and I will make music to you among nations,
5(4) because great above the heavens is your mercy, and as far as the clouds is your truth.
6(5) Be exalted to the heavens, O God, and over all the earth your glory.
7(6) In order that your beloved might be rescued, save with your right hand, and heed me. 8(7) God spoke in his holy place: "I will be exalted, and I will divide up Sikima, and the vale of the tents I will portion out. 9(8) Mine is Galaad, and mine is Manasse, and Ephraim is the support of my head; Ioudas is my king. 10(9) Moab is a cauldron of my hope; on Idumea I will hurl b my sandal; to me allophyles were subjugated." 11(10) Who will bring me c as far as a strong city? Who will guide me as far as Idumea? 12(11) Are you not the one that rejects us, O God? And you will not go out, O God, with our armies.

Psalm 108(109)

1 Regarding completion. Pertaining to David. A Psalm.

(1) O God, do not pass over my praise in silence,
2 because a sinner's mouth and a deceiver's mouth—it was opened against me; they spoke against me with a deceitful tongue.
3 And they surrounded me with words of hate and made war on me without cause.
4 In return for my love they would slander me, but I, I would pray.
5 And they rewarded me evil for good and hatred for my love:
6 “Appoint a sinner against him, and let a slanderer stand on his right.
7 When he is tried, may he come out condemned, and let his prayer be counted as sin.
8 Let his days become few, and may another seize his position.
9 Let his sons become orphans, and his wife a widow.
10 As they totter, let his sons wander about and beg; let them be driven out of their homesteads.
11 Let a creditor scrutinize all that he has; let strangers plunder his toils.
12 Let there be no one to support him nor anyone to pity his orphans.
13 Let his children go to destruction; in one generation let his name be blotted out.
14 May the lawlessness of his fathers be remembered before the Lord, and may the sin of his mother not be blotted out.
15 Let them be before the Lord continually, and may their memory be destroyed from earth,
16 since he did not remember to do mercy and pursued to death a person needy and poor and stunned in heart.
17 And he loved cursing, and it shall come on him. And he did not want blessing, and it shall be put far away from him.
18 And he clothed himself with cursing as his coat, and it entered into his inwards like water and like oil in his bones.
19 Let it be like a coat that he wraps around himself and like a belt that he always wears.”
20 aThis is the work from the Lord against those that slander me and those that speak evil against my soul.
21 And you, O Lord, Lord, do mercy with me for your name’s sake, because your mercy is kind.
22 Rescue me, (22) because poor and needy I am, and my heart is troubled within me.
23 Like a shadow when it fades, I was erased; I was shaken off like grasshoppers.
24 My knees became weak from fasting, and my flesh was changed because of oil.
25 And I, I became a reproach to them; they saw me; they shook their heads.
26 Help me, O Lord, my God! Save me according to your mercy.
27 And let them know that this is your hand, and you, O Lord, you did it.
28 They will curse, but you will bless. Let my opponents be put to shame, but your slave will be glad.
29 Let those who slander me be clothed with embarrassment and let them be wrapped in their own shame as in a double cloak.
30 I will greatly acknowledge the Lord with my mouth, and in the midst of many I will praise him, 31 because he stood at the right of a needy one, to save my soul from those that keep pursuing.

Psalm 109(110)

1 Pertaining to David. A Psalm.

(1) The Lord said to my lord, “Sit on my right until I make your enemies a footstool for your feet.”
2 A rod of your power the Lord will send out from Sion. And exercise dominion in the midst of your enemies!
3 With you is rule on a day of your power among the splendors of the holy ones. From the womb, before Morning-star, I brought you forth.
4 The Lord swore and will not change his mind, “You are a priest forever according to the order of Melchisedek.”
5 The Lord at your right shattered kings on a day of his wrath.
6 He will judge among the nations, will make full with corpses; he will shatter heads on the land of many.
7 From a wadi by a road he will drink; therefore he will raise head high.

Psalm 110(111)

1 Hallelouia.

(1) I will acknowledge you, O Lord, with my whole heart, in a council of upright and a congregation.
2 Great are the works of the Lord; sought out are his wants regarding all things.
3 Acknowledgment and magnificence are his work, and his righteousness endures forever and ever.
4 He made mention of his wonderful deeds; merciful and compassionate is the Lord.
5 Food he provided for those who fear him; he will be ever mindful of his covenant.
6 Strength of his works he proclaimed to his people, to give them heritage of nations.
7 Works of his hands are truth and justice; trustworthy are all his commandments, fixed forever and ever, made in truth and uprightness.
8 Redemption he sent to his people; he commanded his covenant forever. Holy and awesome is his name.
9 Fear of the Lord is wisdom’s beginning; a good understanding belongs to all who practice it. His praise endures forever.

Psalm 111(112)

1 Hallelouia.

(1) Happy the man who fears the Lord; in his commandments he will greatly want.
2 Powerful in the land his offspring will be; a generation of upright will be blessed.
3 Glory and riches are in his house, and his righteousness endures forever and ever.
4 In darkness light dawned for the upright ones; merciful and compassionate and righteous is he.
5 Kind is the man who is compassionate and lends; he will manage his words with discretion.
6 Because he will never be shaken, a righteous person will be remembered forever.
7 Of evil tidings he will not be afraid; prepared is his heart to hope in the Lord.
8 Firm is his heart; he will never be afraid until he looks on his enemies.
9 He scattered; he gave to the needy; his righteousness endures forever and ever; his horn will be exalted in glory.
A sinner will see it and be angered; he will gnash his teeth and melt away; sinners’ desire will come to nothing.

Psalm 112(113)

1 Hallelouia.

(1) Praise the Lord, O servants; praise the name of the Lord.
2 May the name of the Lord be blessed from now on and forevermore.
3 From the sun’s rising to its setting, praise the name of the Lord!
4 High is the Lord to all nations; to the heavens is his glory.
5 Who is like the Lord our God, who resides on high, and looks upon that which is lowly in the sky and on the earth?
6 It is he who raises a poor one from the ground, and from a trash heap he lifts a needy one, to make him sit with rulers, with rulers of his people.
9 It is he who establishes a barren one in a home, a gladdened mother of children.

Psalm 113(114, 115)

1 Hallelouia.

(1) At Israel’s exodus from Egypt, of Iakob’s house from a barbarian people, Judea became his holy precinct, Israel his seat of authority.
3 The sea saw it and fled; Jordan was turned backwards.
4 The mountains skipped like rams, and the hills like lambs of sheep.
5 Why was it, O sea, that you fled? And why was it, O Jordan, that you withdrew backwards?
6 O mountains, that you skipped like rams? O hills, like lambs of sheep?
7 From before the Lord, the earth was shaken, from before the God of Jakob, who turned the rock into pools of water and the flint into springs of water.

Not to us, O Lord, not to us, rather to your name give glory,
for your mercy and your truth,
lest the nations say,
"Where is their God?"

But our God is in the sky above,
in the heavens and on the earth;
whatever he wanted he did.
The idols of the nations are silver and gold,
works of human hands.
A mouth they have and will not speak;
eyes they have and will not see.
Ears they have and will not hear;
nostrils they have and will not smell.
Hands they have and will not feel;
feet they have and will not walk about;
they will not articulate in their throats.
May those who make them become like them,
and all who trust in them!
Israel's house hoped in the Lord.
Their helper and their protector is he.
Aaron's house hoped in the Lord.
Their helper and their protector is he.
Those who fear the Lord hoped in the Lord.
Their helper and their protector is he.
The Lord was mindful of us and blessed us;
he blessed the house of Israel;
he blessed the house of Aaron;
he blessed those who fear the Lord,
the small with the great.
May the Lord add to you,
to you and your sons.
Blessed are you to the Lord,
who made the sky and the earth.
The sky of the sky belongs to the Lord,
but the earth he gave to the sons of men.
The dead will not praise you, O Lord,
nor will all who go down to Hades.
But we that are alive will bless the Lord,
from now on and for evermore.

Psalm 114(116.1–9)

Praise the Lord, all you nations!
Commend him, all you peoples,
because his mercy became strong toward us,
and the truth of the Lord endures forever.

Psalm 117(118)

Acknowledging the Lord, because he is good,
because his mercy is forever.
Do let Israel's house say that he is good,
because his mercy is forever.
Do let Aaron's house say that he is good,
because his mercy is forever.
Do let all those who fear the Lord say that he is good, because his mercy is forever.

In affliction I called on the Lord, and he hearkened me into spaciousness.

The Lord is a helper to me; I will not fear what a person may do to me.

The Lord is a helper to me, and I, I shall observe my enemies.

It is better to trust in the Lord than to trust in a person.

It is better to hope in the Lord than to hope in rulers.

All nations surrounded me, and in the name of the Lord I fended them off!

In surrounding they surrounded me, and in the name of the Lord I fended them off!

They surrounded me like bees a honeycomb, and they blazed like a fire among thorns, and in the name of the Lord I fended them off!

Pushed hard I turned to fall, and the Lord supported me.

My strength and my celebration is the Lord; he became deliverance for me.

There is a voice of rejoicing and deliverance in the righteous’ tents: “The Lord’s right hand produced power; the Lord’s right hand exalted me; the Lord’s right hand produced power.”

I shall not die, but I shall live and recount the deeds of the Lord.

In disciplining the Lord disciplined me, and to death he did not surrender me.

Open to me gates of righteousness; when I enter in them, I will acknowledge the Lord.

This is the gate of the Lord; righteous ones shall enter in it.

I will acknowledge you because you hearkened to me and became deliverance for me.

A stone which the builders rejected, this one became the chief cornerstone.

This was from the Lord, and it is marvelous in our eyes.

This is the day that the Lord made; let us rejoice and be glad in it.

Ah Lord, do save! Ah Lord, do give success!

Blessed is the one who comes in the name of the Lord.

We bless you from the house of the Lord.

The Lord is God, and he showed us light.

Arrange a feast with the thick ones, up to the horns of the altar.

My God you are, and I will acknowledge you;

my God you are, and I will exalt you.

I will acknowledge you because you hearkened to me and became deliverance for me.

Ah Lord, do save!

Ah Lord, do give success!

Psalm 118(119)

2 Happy are those who search out his testimonies; wholeheartedly they will seek him.

3 For those who practice lawlessness did not walk in his ways.

4 It is you who commanded your commandments to keep diligently.

5 O that my ways may be directed to keep your statutes!

6 Then I shall not be put to shame, as I regard all your commandments.

7 I will acknowledge you with uprightness of heart, when I have learned the judgments of your righteousness.

8 Your statutes I will observe; do not utterly forsake me.

2 How shall the young keep his way straight? By observing your words!

10 With my whole heart I sought you; do not thrust me aside from your commandments.

11 In my heart I hid your sayings so that I may not sin against you.

12 Blessed are you, O Lord; teach me your statutes.

13 With my lips I declared all the judgments of your mouth.

14 In the way of your testimonies I delighted as much as in all riches.

15 In your commandments I will ponder and put my mind to your ways.

16 In your statutes I will meditate; I will not forget your words.
Psalm 118(119)

21 You rebuked arrogant ones;
accursed are those who deviate from your commandments;
take away from me reproach and contempt,

22 Indeed, rulers sat and kept railing at me,
but your slave would ponder in your statutes.

23 Indeed, your testimonies are my meditation, and your statutes are my counsels.

28 My soul was drowsy from exhaustion;

29 Injustice’s way put far from me,

30 Truth’s way I chose;
your judgments I did not forget.

31 I clung to your testimonies;
O Lord, do not put me to shame.

32 I ran the way of your commandments, when you made my heart spacious.

37 Turn my eyes from looking at vanity;

39 Take away my scorn, which I suspected, for your judgments are kind.

40 See, I longed for your commandments;
in your righteousness quicken me.

6 ouau.
And may your mercy come upon me,
O Lord,
your deliverance according to your saying.

42 And I shall have a word for those who reproach me, because I hoped in your words.

43 And do not remove a word of truth utterly from my mouth, because I pinned my hopes on your judgments.

44 And I will keep your law continually, forever and forever and ever.

45 And I would walk in spaciousness, because your commandments I sought.

46 And I would speak of your testimonies before kings, and I was not ashamed.

47 And I would meditate on your commandments, which I loved very much.

48 And I raised my hands to your commandments, which I loved,
and I would ponder in your statutes.

52 I remembered your judgments from of old,

53 Despondency beset me due to sinners,
those who keep forsaking your law.

54 Your statutes were musical to me

55 I remembered your name at night, O Lord,

56 This fell to me, because I sought your statutes.

8 heth.
You are my portion, O Lord;
I said that I should keep your law.

58 I implored your face with all my heart;

59 Your ways I considered, and I turned my feet to your testimonies;
I was prepared and not troubled to keep your commandments.

60 Cords of sinners ensnared me,
and your law I did not forget.

62 At midnight I would rise to acknowledge you, because of your righteous judgments.

63 I am a partner with all who fear you and with those who keep your commandments.

64 The earth, O Lord, is full of your mercy;

You practiced kindness with your slave,
O Lord, according to your word.
Kindness and discipline and knowledge

Before I was humbled I was in error;

You are kind, O Lord, and in your kindness
teach me your statutes.
Injustice of the arrogant filled out against
me, but I, with my whole heart, I will examine your commandments.
Their heart was curdled like milk,
but I, on your law I meditated.
It was good for me that you humbled me
so that I might learn your statutes.
Better to me is the law of your mouth than thousands of gold and silver.
Your hands made and fashioned me;
give me understanding, and I will learn

Those who fear you shall see me and be because on your words I pinned my hopes.

I knew, O Lord, that your judgments are righteousness
and that with truth you humbled me.
Do let your mercy come to comfort me
according to your saying to your slave.
Let your compassion come to me, and I

Let arrogant ones be put to shame, because they acted unjustly and lawlessly

My eyes failed for your saying, saying, “When will you comfort me?”
Because I became like a wineskin in hoarfrost, your statutes I did not forget.
How many are the days of your slave?
When will you do me right against those who persecute me?
Transgressors of the law told me tales,
but not so your law, O Lord.
All your commandments are truth;
unjustly did they persecute me; help me!
They almost made an end of me on the earth, but as for me, I did not forsake your commandments.
In your mercy quicken me, and I will keep the testimonies of your

Forever you are, O Lord;
your word endures in the sky,
your truth to generation and generation;
you founded the earth, and it endures.
By your arrangement the day endures, because all things together are slaves of

If it were not for the fact that your law was your meditation,
then I would have perished in my humiliation.
Your statutes I will never forget,
because by them you quickened me.
Yours I am; save me,
because your statutes I sought.
Sinners waited for me to destroy me;
your testimonies I considered.
I saw a limit to all perfection;
your commandment is exceedingly spacious.
Oh, how I loved your law, O Lord!
All day long it is my meditation.
Wiser than my enemies you made me regarding your commandment, because it is mine forever.
More than all who were teaching me, I derstood,
because your testimonies were my meditation.
More than the aged, I understood,
because I sought out your commandments.
From every way of evil I held back my feet
in order to keep your words.
From your judgments I did not deviate, because you legislated for me.
How sweet are your sayings to my throat, beyond honey and honeycomb to my mouth!
Due to your commandments, I understood;
therefore I hated every way of injustice.
Your word is a lamp to my feet
and a light to my paths.
I have sworn an oath and confirmed,
to observe your righteous judgments.
I was deeply humbled;
O Lord, quicken me according to your word.
With the freewill offerings of my mouth do and your judgments teach me.

133 Direct my steps according to your saying, and do not let any lawlessness exercise dominion over me.
134 Redeem me from extortion of human beings, and I will keep your commandments.
135 Make your face shine upon your slave, and teach me your statutes.
136 My eyes shed streams of water, since your law was not kept.
137 Righteous you are, O Lord, and upright is your judgment.
138 You commanded your testimonies to be righteousness and truth, very much.
139 Zeal for you wasted me, because my enemies forgot your words.
139 Your saying was well tried, and your slave loved it.
140 Rather young I am and of no account; your statutes I did not forget.
142 Your righteousness is righteousness forever, and your law is truth.
143 Affliction and anguish found me; your commandments are my meditation.
144 Your testimonies are righteousness forever; give me understanding, and I shall live.
145 I cried with my whole heart; hearken to me, O Lord.
146 Your statutes will I seek.
147 I cried for you; save me, and I will observe your testimonies.
148 I got a head start at an unseemly hour, and I cried; on your words I pinned my hope.
149 My eyes got a head start at dawn, that I may meditate on your sayings.
150 Those who persecute me with lawlessness drew near, but they were put far from your law.
151 You are near, O Lord, and all your commandments are truth.
152 Long ago I learned from your testimonies that you established them forever.
153 Look on my humiliation, and deliver me, because your law I did not forget.
154 Plead my cause, and redeem me; because of your word quicken me.
155 Deliverance is far from sinners, because they did not seek your statutes.
156 Your compassion is great, O Lord; by your judgment quicken me.

Many are those who persecute and afflict me; from your testimonies I did not deviate. I looked at faithless ones and wasted away, because they did not keep your sayings. See how I loved your commandments; O Lord, by your mercy quicken me. The beginning of your words is truth, and forever are all the judgments of your righteousness.

Rulers persecuted me without cause, and my heart was in dread of your words. I will rejoice at your sayings like him who finds much spoil. Injustice I hated and abhorred, but your law I loved. Seven times a day I praised you for the judgments of your righteousness. I kept waiting for your deliverance, O Lord, and your commandments I loved. My soul kept your testimonies, and I loved them exceedingly. I kept your commandments and your testimonies, because all my ways were before you, O Lord.

Let my petition come before you, O Lord; according to your saying give me understanding. May my request come before you; according to your saying rescue me. May my lips pour forth a hymn, when you teach me your statutes. May my tongue articulate your saying, because all your commandments are righteousness.

Let your hand be ready to save me, because your commandments I chose. I longed for your deliverance, O Lord, and your law is my meditation. My soul shall live and praise you, and your judgments will help me. I went astray like a lost sheep; seek your slave, because I did not forget your commandments.

Psalm 119(120)

1 An Ode of the Steps.

(1) When I was being afflicted, I cried to the Lord, and he listened to me: “O Lord, rescue my soul from unjust lips and from a deceitful tongue.”

Psalm 120(121)

Psalm 122(123)

1 An Ode of the Steps. (1) To you I lifted up my eyes, you who reside in the sky. 2 Look, as slaves’ eyes look to their masters’ hands, as a maid’s eyes to her mistress’ hands, so our eyes look to the Lord our God until he has compassion on us. 3 Have mercy upon us, O Lord; have mercy upon us, because we have more than our fill of contempt. 4 Our soul has had more than its fill. Reproach is for those who are prosperous, and contempt for the proud!

Psalm 123(124)

1 An Ode of the Steps. aPertaining to David. (1) If it had not been that the Lord was among us —do let Israel say— 2 if it had not been that the Lord was among us, when people rose up against us, 3 then they would have swallowed us up alive, when their anger was kindled against us; 4 then the water would have drowned us; through a wadi our soul would have passed; 5 then our soul would have passed through the irresistible water. 6 Blessed be the Lord who did not give us as prey to their teeth. 7 Our soul was rescued like a sparrow from the snare of the fowlers; the snare was crushed, and we were rescued. 8 Our help is in the Lord’s name, who made the sky and the earth.

Psalm 124(125)

1 An Ode of the Steps. 2 Mountains are around Jerusalem, he who inhabits Jerusalem will never be shaken. 3 But those who turn aside to strangulations the Lord will lead away with those that practice lawlessness. Peace be upon Israel!

Psalm 125(126)

1 An Ode of the Steps. (1) When the Lord returned the captivity of Sion, we became like people comforted. 2 Then our mouth was filled with joy, and our tongue with rejoicing; then they will say among the nations, "The Lord did great things for them." 3 The Lord did great things for us, and we became people gladdened.

Psalm 126(127)

1 An Ode of the Steps. Pertaining to Solomon. (1) Unless the Lord builds a house, those who build it labored in vain. Unless the Lord guards a city, the guard kept awake in vain. 2 It is in vain for you to rise up early, to get up after sitting down, O you who eat bread of pain, when he gives sleep to his beloved ones. 3 Look, the heritage from the Lord are sons, the wage of the fruit of the womb. 4 Like arrows in the hand of a powerful one, so are the sons of those expelled. 5 Happy the person who will satisfy his desire with them. They shall not be put to shame when they speak with their enemies in a gate.

Psalm 127(128)

1 An Ode of the Steps.

(1) Happy are all who fear the Lord, who walk in his ways.
2 The labors of your crops you shall eat; happy you are, and it shall be well with you.
3 Your wife is like a thriving vine on the sides of your house; your sons are like shoots of olives around your table.
4 Look, thus shall a person be blessed who fears the Lord.
5 May the Lord bless you from Sion, and may you see the good of Jerusalem all the days of your life.
6 And may you see your sons’ sons. Peace be upon Israel!

Psalm 128(129)

1 An Ode of the Steps.

(1) “Often they made war against me from my youth”—do let Israel say—
2 “often they made war against me from my youth; indeed, they did not prevail against me.
3 On my back the sinners were practicing their skill; they prolonged their lawlessness.”
4 The righteous Lord cut up necks of sinners.
5 Let all who hate Sion be put to shame and turned backward.
6 Let them become like grass on rooftops that withered before it was pulled out, with which no reaper filled his hand and a gatherer of sheaves the fold of his garment.
7 And those who were passing by did not say, “The blessing of the Lord be upon you! We have blessed you in the name of the Lord!”

Psalm 129(130)

1 An Ode of the Steps.

(1) Out of depths I cried to you, O Lord.
2 Lord, listen to my voice! Let your ears become attentive to the voice of my petition!
3 If you mark lawlessness, O Lord, Lord, who shall stand?—because with you there is atonement.
4 For the sake of your law (5) I waited for you, O Lord.
5 My soul waited for you.
6 My soul hoped in the Lord from morning watch until night; from morning watch, (7) let Israel hope in the Lord, because with the Lord there is mercy and much redemption is with him.
7 And it is he who will redeem Israel from all its acts of lawlessness.

Psalm 130(131)

1 An Ode of the Steps. Pertaining to David.

(1) O Lord, my heart was not exalted, nor were my eyes raised too high, nor did I occupy myself with great things, nor with marvelous things beyond me.
2 If I was not humble-minded but exalted my soul, like the weaned child against its mother, like a requital it is, against my soul.

Psalm 131(132)

1 An Ode of the Steps.

(1) O Lord, remember David and all his meekness,
2 how he swore to the Lord; he vowed to the God of Jacob,
3 “If I will enter into a covert of my house, if I go up on a bed of my spreading,
4 if I will give sleep to my eyes and slumber to my eyelids and rest to my temples,
5 until I find a place for the Lord, a covert for the God of Jacob!”
6 Look, we heard of ita in Ephratha; we found ita in the plains of the forest.
7 “We shall enter into his coverts; we shall do obeisance at the place where his feet stood.”
8 Rise up, O Lord, into your rest, you and the ark of your sanctityb!
9 Your priests will clothe themselves with righteousness, and your devout will rejoice.
10 For your slave David’s sake do not turn away the face of your anointed one.
11 The Lord swore to David the truth, and he will never annul it: “Of your belly’s fruit
I will set on your throne.

If your sons keep my covenant and these my testimonies that I shall also their sons, forevermore, shall sit on your throne.”

Because the Lord selected Sion,
he chose it as a habitation for himself:
“This is my repose forever and ever;
here I will reside, because I chose it.
Its pursuits I will bless when blessing;
its poor I will feed with bread.
Its priests I will clothe with deliverance,
and its devout will rejoice with rejoicing.
There I will cause a horn to sprout up for Dauid;
I prepared a lamp for my anointed one.
His enemies I will clothe with disgrace, but on him my sanctity will blossom.”

Psalm 136(137)

1 By the rivers of Babylon—there we sat down, also wept
when we remembered Sion.
2 On the willows in its midst
we hung up our instruments, because there our captors asked us for words of odes, and those who led us away
for a hymn,
“Sing us some of the odes of Sion!”
3 How could we sing the Lord’s ode in a foreign land?
4 If I forget you, O Jerusalem, may my right hand be forgotten!
5 May my tongue stick in my throat,
if I do not remember you,
if I do not set Jerusalem at the beginning of my joy.
6 Remember, O Lord, against the sons of Edom,
the day of Jerusalem,
how they said, “Clear out! Clear out!
As long as its foundation is in it!”
7 O daughter Babylon, you wretch!
Happy shall he be who will requite you with the requital
with which you requited us!
8 Happy shall he be who will grab your infants and dash them against the rock!

Psalm 137(138)

1 Pertaining to David.
2 I will acknowledge you, O Lord, with my whole heart,
because you heard the words of my mouth,
and before angels I will make music to
you.
3 I will do obeisance toward your holy shrine and acknowledge your name for your mercy and your truth, because you magnified your saying upon every name.
4 In the day I call upon you, hearken to me quickly;
you will care for me with power in my soul.
5 Let all the kings of the earth acknowledge you, O Lord, because they heard all the words of your
mouth.
6 And let them sing in the ways of the Lord, because great is the glory of the Lord, because the Lord is high and he regards things that are lowly and things that are high he perceives from far away.

7 If I walk in the midst of affliction, you will quicken me; against wrath of my enemies you stretched out your hand, and your right hand saved me.

8 The Lord will repay on my behalf; O Lord, your mercy is forever. The works of your hands do not disregard.

Psalm 138(139)

1 Regarding completion. A Psalm.

2(1) O Lord, you examined me and knew me. It was you who knew my sitting down and my rising up; it was you who discerned my thoughts from far away.

3 My path and my miles you tracked and all my ways foresaw, because there was no word on my tongue—

4 look, O Lord; it was you who knew all things, the last and the first. It was you who shaped me and placed your hand upon me.

5 Your knowledge was made wonderful from me; it became strong; I can never attain to it.

6 Where should I go from your spirit? And from your face where should I flee?

7 If I ascend to the sky, you are there; if I descend to Hades, you are present.

8 If I were to take my wings at dawn and make my covert at the farthest limits of the sea, indeed, there your hand shall guide me, and your right hand shall hold me fast.

11 And I said, "So then, darkness shall trample me, and night be illumination in my delight," because darkness will not be made dark due to you, and night will be illumined as day; as its darkness, so also its light.

13 Because it was you who procured my kidneys, O Lord, you supported me from my mother's womb.

14 I will acknowledge you, for I was made awesomely wonderful. Wonderful are your works, and my soul knows very well.

15 My frame was not hidden from you, which you made in secret, and my substance in the deepest parts of the earth.

16 My unwrought state your eyes beheld, and in your book all shall be written; in a day they will be formed and no one among them.

17 But to me your friends were very much prized, O God. Their beginnings were much strengthened.

18 I shall count them, and they will be multiplied beyond sand; I awoke—I am still with you.

19 If you kill sinners, O God— O men of blood, depart from me!

20 Because you will speak against contriving, they will take your cities into vanity.

21 Did I not hate those who hate you, O Lord? And at your enemies was I not wasting away?

22 I would hate them with perfect hatred; I counted them my enemies.

23 Examine me, O God, and know my heart; test me, and know my paths.

24 And see if there is a way of lawlessness in me, and guide me in a way everlasting.

  In the very way in which I would walk, they hid a trap for me.

5(4) I would look to my right and would observe that there was no one who recognized me; escape vanished from me, and there was no one to seek out my soul.

6(5) I cried to you, O Lord; I said, “You are my hope, my portion in the land of the living.”

7(6) Pay attention to my petition, because I was brought very low.

Rescue me from those that persecute me, because they became too strong for me.

8(7) Bring my soul out of prison so that I may acknowledge your name. Righteous ones will wait for me until you requite me.

Psalm 147

6(18) He will send out his word and will melt them;
7(19) he will blow his breath, and waters will flow.
8(20) In declaring his word to Iakob,
9 his statutes and judgments to Israel,
10 he did not deal thus with every nation,
11 and his judgments he did not explain to them.

Psalm 148

1 Halleluia.
2 Praise the Lord from the heavens;
3 praise him in the highest heights!
4 Praise him, all his angels;
5 praise him, all his hosts!
6 Praise him, sun and moon;
7 praise him, all the stars and the light!
8 Praise him, you heavens of heavens and you water above the heavens!
9 Let them praise the name of the Lord, for he spoke, and they came to be; he commanded, and they were created.
10 He established them forever and forever and ever; an ordinance he issued, and it will not pass away.
11 Praise the Lord from the earth, you dragons and all deeps, 12 fire, hail, snow, ice, tempest blast, those things that do his word!
13 The mountains and all the hills, fruit trees and all cedars!
14 The wild animals and all the cattle, creeping things and winged birds!
15 Kings of the earth and all peoples, rulers and all judges of earth!
16 Young men and unmarried women, old with young!
17 Let them praise the name of the Lord, because the name of him alone was exalted; acknowledgement of him is in earth and sky.
18 He will exalt his people's horn; a hymn belongs to all his devout, the sons of Israel, a people drawing near to him.

Psalm 149

1 Halleluia.
2 Sing to the Lord a new song; his praise is in an assembly of devout.
3 Let Israel be glad in the one who made it, and let the sons of Sion rejoice in their king.
4 Let them praise his name with a dance; with drum and harp let them make music to him, because the Lord takes pleasure in his people, and he exalts the meek with deliverance.
5 The devout will boast in glory, and they will rejoice on their beds.
6 The exaltations of God are in their throats, and two-edged swords in their hands, to execute vengeance among the nations, rebukes among the peoples, to bind their kings with fetters and their nobles with iron handcuffs, to execute among them a judgment inscribed. This glory is for all his devout.

Psalm 150

1 Halleluia.
2 Praise God among his saints; praise him in the firmament of his power!
3 Praise him for his acts of dominance; praise him according to the abundance of his greatness!
4 Praise him with trumpet sound; praise him with harp and lyre!
5 Praise him with drum and dance; praise him with strings and instrument!
6 Praise him with tuneful cymbals; praise him with loud clashing cymbals!
7 Let all breath praise the Lord! Halleluia.

PRAYER OF MANASSES

(Rahlfs Ode 12)

1 O Lord Almighty,
   God of our fathers,
   of Abraam and Isaak and Jakob and of their righteous offspring, 2 you who made the sky and the earth together with all their order, you who shackled the sea by the word of your ordinance,
3 you who shut up the deep and sealed it with your awesome and notable name,
4 at whom all things shudder and tremble from before your power, 5 because the magnificence of your glory cannot be borne,
   and the wrath of your threat against sinners cannot be withstood;
6 both immeasurable and inscrutable is the mercy of your promise, 7 because you are Lord Most High, compassionate, slow to anger and abounding in mercy
   and repenting at ills of human beings.
8 So you, O Lord God of the righteous, you did not appoint repentance for righteous ones, for Abraam and Isaak and Jakob, who had not sinned against you, but you appointed repentance for me, the sinner, 9 because I sinned beyond the number of the sand of the sea.
   My acts of lawlessness multiplied, O Lord,
   they multiplied,
   and I am not worthy to gaze at and see the height of the sky,
   due to the multitude of my injustices.
   Bent down I am by many a fetter of iron,
   for me to say, “No,” over my sins.
   And I find no relief, because I provoked your anger and did what was evil before you, having set up abominations and having multiplied objects of wrath.
10 And now I bend my heart's knee, begging for kindness from you.
11 I have sinned, O Lord; I have sinned, and my lawless acts I know.
12 I plead, begging you;
   relieve me, O Lord; relieve me!
   Do not destroy me together with my acts of lawlessness
   nor be angry forever and retain evil for
   me
   nor condemn me in the deepest places of the earth,
   because you, O Lord, are the God of those who repent,
13 and in me show your goodness, because, though unworthy, you will save
   me
   according to your abundant mercy, and I will praise you always throughout the days of my life,
   because all the host of the heavens will sing
   a hymn to you,
   and yours is the glory forever. Amen.
EDITION OF THE GREEK TEXT
The NETS translation of Proverbs follows the Greek edition by Alfred Rahlfs, which is at present the best available (Septuaginta. Id est Vetus Testamentum graece iuxta LXX interpretes [Stuttgart: Württembergische Bibelanstalt, 1935]). The fact that this book has not yet been edited for the Götttingen Septuagint series (editio maior) poses a problem. In some chapters (chap. 20, for example) a large percentage of text (vv. 14–22) is absent from Rahlfs, but to some extent corresponds to additions in v. 9. Whether their absence is due to deliberate omission, transposition or simply to inner-Greek corruption is not clear. Issues of transmission, although important, have not been addressed in this translation but must wait for the commentary (SBLCS).

TRANSLATION PROFILE OF THE GREEK

General Character
The Septuagint of Proverbs represents translation with certain unique features. Many textual phenomena that occur only occasionally in other books are well attested in Proverbs. So, for example, it has a rather large number of pluses vis-à-vis the Masoretic Text and other textual witnesses, though minuses are to be noted as well. Furthermore, differences in the order of chapters from chapter 24 onward are paralleled most closely in Jeremiah (Jeremias). Lastly, the translation reflects an atypical approach to the parent text. Elsewhere,3 I have characterized its modus operandi as often extremely free, while in other cases the parent text was rendered in a rather literal way. Hence its approach might be described as characterized by both diversity and uniformity to be observed at various levels. On a lexical level, one sees extensive differentiation but at the same time strict correspondence. Although this phenomenon is difficult to quantify, the translator’s flexible attitude to his subject matter is most conspicuous.

Some Specifics
In light of the above, it is not possible to speak of a high level of translational predictability. The translator’s4 penchant for both consistency and diversity affords him plenty of leeway for following his own instinct in individual instances. Thus, he may or may not render a specific Hebrew word by the same Greek word. A case in point is ἀσθενής, which appears in 1.7 for יָפָה, in 1.10 for רָשָׁה, in 1.22, 32 for מִשְׁגַּשְׁגָּה, and in 2.22 etc. for חָסִיךְ. It occurs 92x in Proverbs, and it represents Hebrew יָפָה 67x. This is 73% of the total occurrences. Though at first glance this seems to be a case of stereotyping, a different picture emerges when the individual equivalents are analysed. Practically all the deviations from this pattern appear in Proverbs 1, namely, in 1.7 (יָפָה); 1.10 (רָשָׁה); 1.22, 32 (מִשְׁגַּשְׁגָּה). Whereas the Hebrew refers to three categories of people—the fool, the sinner, and the ignorant—the LXX has reduced them to one category, namely, the impious. It is therefore clear that stereotyping is not the whole story. In this case, the broader picture of Proverbs 1 needs to be taken into account.

Exegetical Interest
The translator of Proverbs, unlike many of his Septuagintal colleagues, had a marked interest in exegeting his source text. Elsewhere5 I have delineated three aspects of that interest: (1) his emphasis on the positive aspect of religion, that is to say, his underscoring of righteousness and the righteous, etc.; (2)...

1 I hereby acknowledge the financial assistance of various institutions towards the preparation of this translation. Firstly, I should like to thank the NWO for their financial support. Secondly, the South African NRF and the University of Stellenbosch. In the same vein I need to express my gratitude towards the Van Ewijkstigting in Cape Town. Without this assistance I would not have been able to complete this research.
4 The use of the singular is not intended to preclude more than one translator.
its corollary, namely, his strong disapproval of evil; and, as a result of this juxtaposition, the Greek text (3) contains more contrasts than its parent text.

First, the translator frequently adds references to “righteousness.” In 3.9 “labors” are not merely “labors” (= MT) but “just labors,” and “fruits” (= MT) are typified as “firstfruits of righteousness.” Verse 16 contains two extra stichs that likewise refer to righteousness and two of its concomitants: “… out of her mouth righteousness comes forth, and she carries law and mercy upon her tongue.” Other examples are: 10.18 where “lying lips conceal hatred” becomes “righteous lips conceal enmity.” Similarly in 10.22, whereas in MT the blessing of the Lord simply leads to riches, in the Greek it does so via “the head of a righteous person.” Thus the Greek amplifies the theme of the context—v. 20–25—in which the righteous and the wicked are contrasted. A similar amplification can be found in 12.25 when the generous person of MT (τὸς ἀλμήος) becomes a righteous man in the Greek (ἀλμήος δικαιου). In 13.2 fruits “of justice” are specifically noted, even though MT provides no warrant for this. The same is true for v. 11 in MT where the Greek adds: “A just person is compassionate and lends.” The theme continues in chapter 15. In v. 27 an additional stich speaks of acts of mercy and faithfulness as means to purge sins (the sin in context being bribery). Though MT of 15.28 already contains a contrast between the righteous and unrighteous, the translator adds that the ways of the righteous are acceptable to the Lord. Other examples are 15.29; 16.7, 11; 17.14, 26; 20.8, 28; 23.31.

Second, corresponding to an emphasis on righteousness and the righteous is a commensurate highlighting of unrighteousness and the unrighteous. Proverbs 1.18 amplifies this negative side of the equation, and v. 19 pointedly refers to lawless deeds (τὰ ἁνωματα) and impiety (σοβετδια) in v. 22 the innocent (δικασκαι) are linked to righteousness, but the fools (ἀδήρομες) are described as impious. In v. 28 the subject is made explicit by the addition of “evil people” (κοκοί). Madame wisdom is described in 3.15, where (contra MT) it is also stated that nothing evil (οὐδεν πονηρων) will withstand her. Proverbs 6.3 introduces “the hands of evil” without explicit warrant in the Hebrew. Chapter 8.13 shows that the translator’s ideological interests are capable of producing literary felicity, whether by inadvertence or design. By rendering ἣν ζητεῖ δικαιοσύνην ("perverted speech") as διεστραμμένας ὀδοὺς κακῶν ("perverse ways of evil people"), he creates the parallel phrases ὀδοὺς πονηρῶν (13b) and ὀδοὺς κακῶν (13c), which includes an end rhyme. In 10.15 the Hebrew noun ἄσθια ("poor") is made into “the impious” (σοβετίαν) in the Greek. In 10.26 “the lazy” (ἐλασάτα) is linked to “lawlessness”; in 11.18 the works of the wicked (τὰ βασιλείαν) are glossed as “unjust works” (ἐργα ἀδικα), and in 13.16 folly (πλάστα) is associated with evil (κοκοί). Furthermore, 14.22 elaborates on the perpetration of evil beyond MT, and 15.18 contains a prominent plus, “A man slow to anger will extinguish disputes, but an impious person stirs them up exceedingly.” Proverbs 15.23 is rewritten with “the evil person” as subject, whereas MT is quite secular. In 19.6 ἡ σήμερον ("friend") is perhaps deliberately read with different vowelings as ἡ σήμερον ("the evil person"). This is an apt example of a different interpretation based upon an unpointed Hebrew text. As in 10.26 “the lazy” is understood as an unjust person in 19.24. In 21.22 the impious (οἱ σοβετίς) are identified as the opponents of the wise man, and the arrogant of v. 24 is likened to “a transgressor of the law” (παράνομως). Proverbs 24.22 interprets the people who are punished by God and the king as being “the impious.” Perhaps the most convincing example of this trend to interpret exegetically occurs in 30.11–14. On all four occasions Hebrew וֶּלֶד ("posterity") is translated by ἐγκυνοκακοῦν ("wicked progeny"). וֶלֶד appears only in these verses (apart from a Qere reading in 27.24), and its rendering by ἐγκυνον is unique in the LXX. More importantly, κοκού has no counterpart in the Hebrew, even though it may be said to render explicitly what in the source is implicit.

Third, there is the phenomenon of direct contrast, that is to say, antithetical arrangements of religious and ethical categories. Proverbs has many of those, a case in point being chapter 11, where already in the Hebrew we have a number of them. In v. 1 a false balance is compared with an accurate one. Pride and humility are contrasted in v. 2, as are the merciful and the merciless in v. 17. Moreover, the pious and the impious are contrasted in many verses (3, 5, 6, 8, 9, 10, 11, 18, 19, 21, 23, 31). Elsewhere I have demonstrated that the translator of Proverbs amplifies the use of such antithetical statements, to the extent that it can be taken as characteristic of his translation style.6 As an example one might cite 2.11 “good counsel” (βουλή καλή) and 2.17 “bad counsel” (κακή βουλή)—the chiasm is of added interest—13.19a “pious” (εὐσεβῶν) and 13.19b “impious” (ἀσεβῶν), 13.23a “just” (δικαίον) and 13.23b “unjust” (ἀδίκον). 15.29α “with justice” (μετὰ δικαιοσύνης) and 15.29β “with injustice” (μετὰ ἀδίκους), 17.6α “the faithful” (τοῦ πιστοῦ) and 17.6αβ “the faithless” (τοῦ ἀπιστοῦ). Needless to say, not all such cases can with certainty be attributed to the translator.

Style and Syntax

The preceding paragraph has provided a suitable transition to the present section, since antithetical arrangement, while having an influence on substance, at the same time has an impact on style. A further indication of the translator’s interest in style is the use he makes of particles, particularly when the Hebrew offers no explicit warrant for their employment, a case in point being γαρ as a standard gloss for Hebrew יק and other conjunctions, including zero equivalent. Another one is the particle τε that appears occasionally in this book, e.g., in 1.2, 3, 4, 6; 3.3 (sub +); 6.8, 8a, 33; 7.21; 8.13; 15.3; 23.20. This seems to be characteristic of a freer translation style, and as such is what one would expect in Proverbs. Claude Cox has demonstrated that the same occurs in LXX Job.7 There is thus some evidence to suggest that the translator of Proverbs, like the Job translator, worked much more at the discourse level than did most others within the LXX corpus.

The same, freer approach can be observed at the level of syntax. Whereas the translator of Gen 1.20–33 followed the syntax of the Hebrew to a large extent but often construed individual clauses in a typically Greek linguistic manner, Proverbs pays comparatively little attention to the minutiae of Hebrew syntax. Perhaps the most drastic intervention by the translator in his source text is his reordering and rearranging of chapters towards the end of the book (24–31), seemingly for thematic and other reasons.8 Yet, what he did there is hardly incompatible with his penchant for inserting new proverbs into his book along the way as he thought fit, many apparently without Hebrew base.

A Conspicuous Case

We close this section with a specific verse that graphically illustrates what the translator of Proverbs was capable of doing to his source at a number of different levels. Due to limitations of space, I will refrain from a full discussion of 1.22 in the context of 1.20–33.

To be sure a certain transparency to the source text is retained, but the deviations from the Hebrew stand in bold relief. On the syntactic level the temporal clause in the first stich in MT is changed into the protasis of a conditional sentence, with the apodosis (οὐκ ἀισχυνθήσονται) supplied de novo. On a semantic level the first stich is revamped from positive to negative. That is to say, “the simple-minded/foolish” of the Hebrew (יָטֶפֶל) is remodeled as “the innocent who hold on to righteousness” of the Greek, and along the way many unpredictable Hebrew-Greek equivalences are forged. On the discourse level, v. 22 retains its role as the incipit of Wisdom’s call, but it sets an entirely different tone for what follows.

The NETS Translation of Proverbs

All these phenomena together make translating LXX Proverbs a problematic but at the same time an intriguing endeavor. The freedom with which the translator approached his parent text naturally does not mean that the translator should also render his text freely. Trying to relate this translation to the NRSV proved impossible in many instances.

Finally I need to express my gratitude towards various persons who assisted me with this research. First and foremost there is Albert Pietersma, who acted as corrector for my translation. I benefited immensely from his vast experience and expertise. During the initial stages of the project, Arie van der Kooij read parts of my translation, and Detlev Krige, one of my former students, helped with the preparation of the Greek and Hebrew texts.

Johann Cook
and be filled with their own impiety, for, because they would wrong the simple, they will be murdered and an inquiry will ruin the impious.

But he who hears me will encamp in hope and will be at ease without fear of any evil."

My son, if, when you accept the saying of my commandment, you hide it with yourself, your ear will be attentive to wisdom, and you shall incline your heart to understanding; yes, you shall incline it to the admonition of your son.

For if you call upon wisdom and raise your voice for understanding, as well as seek perception with a loud voice, and if you seek it like silver and search for it like treasures, then you will understand the fear of the Lord, and you will find divine knowledge.

Because the Lord gives wisdom, also from his presence come knowledge and understanding, and he stores up salvation for those who succeed; he will shield their journey to guard the ways of righteous deeds, and he will protect the way of the ones who revere him.

Then you will understand righteousness and judgment, and you will make all good courses straight.

For if wisdom comes into your mind and perception seems pleasing to your soul, good counsel will guard you, and holy insight will protect you in order that it can rescue you from an evil way and from a man who speaks nothing reliable.

Oh, those who abandon straight ways, to walk in ways of darkness, who rejoice in evil and are happy about evil perverseness, whose paths are crooked and their courses are bent in order to remove you far from the straight way and to make you a stranger to a righteous opinion.

My son, do not let bad counsel overtake you, that which forsakes the teaching of youth and has forgotten the divine covenant; for it has set her house near death and its courses by Hades with the shades; all those who walk in her will not come back, nor will they seize straight paths, for they are not being seized by years of life.

For if they were walking good paths, they would have found the smooth paths of righteousness.

The kind will be inhabitants of the earth, and the innocent will be left in it, because the upright will encamp on the earth and the holy will be left in it; the ways of the impious will perish from the earth, and the transgressors will be banished from it.

My son, do not forget my ordinances, but let your heart keep my sayings; for longevity and years of life, as well as peace, they will add to you.

Let acts of charity and loyalty not fail you; rather fasten them on your neck, and you will find favor, and think of what is noble in the sight of the Lord and of people.

Trust in God with all your heart, and do not be excited by your wisdom. In all your ways make her known, that she may make straight your ways, [and your foot will not stumble].

Be not clever in your own eyes, but fear God, and turn away from every evil. Then it will be a healing to your body and treatment for your bones.

Honor the Lord from your just labors, and offer him of your firstfruits of righteousness in order that your storerooms may be filled with an abundance of grain and that your vats may gush with wine.

My son, do not belittle the Lord's discipline nor break down when you are reproved by him; for whom the Lord loves, he disciplines, and he punishes every son he accepts.

Happy is the person who has found wisdom, and the mortal who perceived insight; for it is better to trade in her than in treasures of gold and silver. And she is more precious than precious stones; nothing evil shall resist her; she is well-known to all those who draw near to her, and nothing valuable is worthy of her;

for longevity and years of life are in her right hand, and in her left hand are riches and repute; out of her mouth righteousness comes forth, and she carries law and mercy upon her tongue. Her ways are good ways, and all her paths are peaceful. She is a tree of life to all those who lay claim to her, and she is steadfast to those who lean upon her, as on the Lord. God by wisdom founded the earth, and he prepared the heavens by prudence. By perception the deeps were broken open, and the clouds poured dew. My son, do not break away, but keep my counsel and insight so that your soul may live and that there may be grace round your neck. And it shall be healing to your flesh and treatment for your bones, that you may walk all your ways confidently in peace and that your foot will not stumble. For if you sit down, you will be without fear, and when you lie down, you will sleep pleasantly. And you shall not be afraid of intimidation when it comes, nor of attacks of the impious, when they approach. For the Lord will be over all your ways and he will support your foot in order that you may not be unsettled. Do not withhold to do good to the needy, when your hand can help. Do not say, “Go, come back, and tomorrow I will give,” when you are able to do good, for you do not know what the next day will bring. Do not plan evil against your friend when he lives besides you and trusts in you. Do not quarrel with anyone without a cause, lest he does some harm to you. Do not acquire the disgrace of evil men, and do not strive after their ways for every transgressor is impure before the Lord, and he does not sit in council among the righteous. A divine curse is in the homes of the impious, but the abodes of the just are blessed. The Lord resists the arrogant, but he gives grace to the humble. The wise will inherit glory, but the impious have exalted disgrace.

Listen, children, to a father’s discipline, and pay attention, that you may come to know insight, for I present to you a good gift; do not abandon my law. For I became a son, and I am obedient to my father and beloved in the eyes of my mother, who would speak and instruct me: “Let our word become fixed in your heart. Keep the commandments; do not forget nor disregard the saying of my mouth. Nor abandon her, and she will cleave to you; love her, and she will guard you. Secure her, and she will exalt you; honor her, that she may embrace you in order that she may grant your head a garland of graces and may protect you with a garland of delight.”

Listen, my son, and accept my words, and the years of your life shall be increased, that the ways of living may become many for you, for I teach you the ways of wisdom and I put you in straight tracks. For if you walk, your steps will not be hemmed in, and if you run, you will not grow weary. Take hold of my discipline; do not let go, but keep her for yourself for your life. Do not enter the ways of the impious, and do not covet the ways of transgressors. Wherever they put up camp, do not enter there, but turn from them, and pass by, for they will not sleep, unless they have done wrong; their sleep has been taken away, and they do not fall asleep, for these people eat the bread of impiety and they get drunk with illicit wine. But the ways of the righteous shine like a light; they proceed and give light until the day is fully dawned. The ways of the impious, however, are dark; they do not know how they stumble. My son, pay attention to my saying, and incline your ear to my words. So that your fountains may not fail you, keep them within your heart, for it is life to those who find them and healing to all their flesh. Keep your heart with all vigilance, for from these things are the issues of life. Remove from yourself a crooked mouth, and thrust unjust lips far away from you. Let your eyes look straight, and let your eyelids incline to just things. Make straight tracks for your feet, and straighten your ways.
27 Do not incline to the right or to the left; rather turn away your foot from an evil way, 27a for God knows the ways on the right, but those on the left are twisted.
27b But it is he who will make your tracks straight, and he will guide your journeys in peace.

5 My son, pay attention to my wisdom, and incline your ear to my words, that you may keep insight, and I shall command perception of my lips unto you.
3 Pay no attention to a worthless woman, for honey drips from the lips of a prostituting woman, who for a period pleases your palate.
4 Later, however, you will find it more bitter than gall and sharper than a two-edged dagger; for the feet of folly bring down those who deal with her, to Hades with death, and her footprints are not being established,
5 for she does not come to the ways of life, but her courses are slippery and unfamiliar.

7 Now then, my son, listen to me, and do not make my words invalid.
8 Make your way far from her; do not go near the doors of her houses in order that you will not give away your life to others and your living to the merciless, lest strangers be filled with your strength and your labors go into the homes of strangers.
11 You, however, will repent at the end, when the flesh of your body is consumed, 12 and you will say, “How I hated discipline, and my innermost turned away reproofs! I would not listen to the voice of one instructing me and teaching me, nor did I incline my ear.
13 I was almost in every evil situation, in the midst of an assembly and congregation.”

15 Drink water from your vessels and from the cisterns of your well.
16 Let not the waters out of your well overflow for you; rather let your waters flow into your streets.
17 Let them be at the disposal of you alone, and let no stranger share with you.
18 Let your well of water be solely your own, and rejoice with the woman from your youth.
19 Let the fawn of your love and the foal of your favors consort with you, and let her be considered your very own and be with you on every occasion, for while indulging in her love you will be increased immeasurably.

20 Do not be for long with a strange woman, nor be held in the arms of someone not your own;
21 for the ways of a man are before the eyes of God, and he observes all their courses.
22 Transgressions ensnare a man, and each one is bound by the ropes of his own sins.
23 He comes to an end with the uninstructed, and he was cast forth from the abundance of his own sustenance and perished through folly.

6 My son, if you stand security for your friend, you will surrender your hand to an enemy, for a man’s own lips are a strong snare, and he is caught by the lips of his own mouth.
3 My son, do what I command you and save yourself, for through your friend you have fallen into the hands of evil; go; do not falter; rather spur on even your friend for whom you stood security.
4 Give your eyes no sleep, nor slumber with your eyelids in order to rescue yourself like a gazelle from a noose and like a bird from a snare.

6 Go to the ant, O lazybones, and zealously observe its ways, and become wiser than it;
7 for without having any cultivated land nor anyone that forces it nor being under any master, it prepares its food in summer, and it makes its provision plentiful in harvest time.
8a Or go to the bee, and learn how industrious she is and how seriously she performs her work whose products kings and commoners use for their health.
8b Yes, she is desired by all and honored.
8c Although she is physically weak, by honoring wisdom she was promoted.
9 How long, lazybones, will you lie? And when will you be roused from your sleep?
10 Indeed you sleep a little, and you sit a little, and you slumber a little, and you fold your arms over your breast a little.
11 Then poverty will come upon you like an evil traveler, and want like a good runner.
If, however, you are diligent, your harvest will arrive like a fountain, and want will desert you like a bad runner.

A foolish and lawless man walks roads that are no good, and he winks with his eye and makes a sign with his foot, and he teaches with motions of his fingers.

And with a perverse heart he plans evil at every opportunity; such a person concocts upheavals for a city.

Therefore his destruction arrives suddenly, calamity and ruin beyond repair, for he rejoices in everything that the Lord hates; yes, he is ruined by impurity of soul.

An eye of an insolent one, an unjust tongue, hands that shed blood of a righteous person and a heart that plans wicked schemes and feet that hurry to do evil.

A false witness kindles falsehood and sows discord among kindred.

My son, keep your father's laws, and do not forsake your mother's precepts. But always bind them upon your soul, and make them a collar on your neck, when you walk, bring it, and let it be with you, in order that it may communicate with you when you awake, for the law's commandment is a lamp and a light and a way of life, reproof and discipline, to keep you from a married woman and from the slander of a strange tongue.

Let not her desire for beauty conquer you, nor be captured by your eyes; neither be captivated by her eyelashes, for the price of a prostitute is just about as much as a loaf of bread and a men's lady hunts for precious souls. Can anyone put fire in his lap and not burn his clothes? Or can anyone walk on coals of fire and not scorch his feet? So is he who goes in to a married woman. He shall not be held guiltless, nor anyone who touches her.

It is not to be marveled at if someone is caught stealing, for he steals in order to fill himself when he is hungry. Yet, if he is caught, he will pay sevenfold, and he will rescue himself by surrendering all his possessions.

But the adulterer procures destruction to himself through lack of sense.

He experiences both pain and disgrace, and his dishonor will never be wiped out; for filled with jealousy is the anger of her husband; he will show no constraint in the day of judgment; neither will he take any compensation as exchange for his hate, nor will he at all be reconciled by many gifts.

My son, keep my words, and hide my commandments with yourself. My son, honor the Lord, and you will grow strong, and fear no other but him.

Guard my commandments, and you will live, and my words like the apples of your eyes.

And bind them on your fingers, and engrave them on the surface of your heart.

Say that wisdom is your sister, and secure prudence as an intimate friend for yourself, that she may keep you from a strange and sinful woman, if she should assail you with words to charm; for from a window out of her house she peeps into the streets, at whom she may observe of the foolish children, a youngster lacking sense, passing by the corner in the passages of her dwellings and conversing in the evening twilight, when there happens to be nocturnal quiet and gloom.

Then the woman meets him, looking like a prostitute, who causes the hearts of young men to flutter. And she is excited and debauched, and her feet cannot stay at home; for some time she roams outside, and at another time she lies in wait in the streets, at every corner.

Then she seized and kissed him, and with a shameless face addressed him: "I have a peace offering; today I am paying my vows; therefore I came out to meet you, longing for your face; I have found you. With coverings I have spread my couch, and with double tapestry from Egypt I have decked it.

I have sprinkled my bed with saffron
Come, and let us enjoy love until the early morning; come here, and let us embrace in love, for my husband is not at home but has gone on a long journey, since he took a bag of money with him, after many days he will return to his house.”

And with a lot of chatting she seduced him, and with the snares of her lips she compelled him. And he followed her, ensnared; like an ox he is led to slaughter, and like a dog towards chains or like a deer shot with an arrow in the liver, and he hurries like a bird into a trap, not realizing that he is running for his life.

Now then, my son, listen to me and pay attention to the words of my mouth. Do not let your heart incline to her ways, for many she has wounded and laid low and innumerable are those whom she has slain.

Roads of Hades are her house, leading down to the chambers of death.

You will proclaim wisdom in order that prudence may be obedient to you; for on the highest tops she is, and between the paths she has taken her stand; for beside the gates of rulers she takes her seat, and at the entrances she sings hymns: “You, O people, I exhort, and I lift my voice to the sons of men. O innocent ones, be aware of trickery, and you uneducated take heart. Listen to me, for I will talk about serious things, and I will bring forth from my lips what is right; for my throat will declaim truth, but false lips are abominable to me. With righteousness are all the words of my mouth; in them nothing is twisted nor crooked. They are all straightforward to those who understand and upright to those who find knowledge.

Take discipline and not silver, and knowledge rather than choice gold; yes, choose perception instead of pure gold, for wisdom is better than costly stones, and nothing valuable is worthy of her.

I, wisdom, I encamped with counsel, and knowledge and insight I summoned.” The fear of the Lord hates injustice, also pride and arrogance and the ways of the wicked; yes, it is I who hate the perverse ways of evil people.

Mine are counsel and security, mine prudence and mine strength. Through me kings rule, and rulers prescribe justice. Through me nobles are magnified, and tyrants through me rule the earth. It is I who am fond of those who love me, and those who seek me find me. Wealth and honor are at my disposal, and the acquisition of many things and justice. To enjoy my fruits is better than gold and precious stone, and my yield better than choice silver.

I walk in ways of justice, and along paths of what is right I wander in order that I may apportion possessions to those who love me and fill their treasuries with good things. If I report to you the things that happen daily, I will remember to enumerate the things of old.

The Lord created me as the beginning of his ways, for the sake of his works. Before the present age he founded me, in the beginning. Before he made the earth and before he made the depths, before he brought forth the springs of the waters, before the mountains were established and before all the hills, he begets me. The Lord made countries and uninhabited spaces and the habitable heights of that beneath the sky.

When he prepared the sky, I was present with him, and when he marked out his own throne on the winds.

When he made strong the clouds above and when he made secure the springs beneath the sky, when he made strong the foundations of the earth, I was beside him, fitting together; it is I who was the one in whom he took delight. And each day I was glad in his presence at every moment, when he rejoiced after he had completed the world and rejoiced among the sons of men.

Now then, my son, listen to me. Happy is the man who will listen to me... and the person who will guard my ways, keeping watch at my doors daily, protecting the posts of my entrances.

For my egressions are the egressions of life, and the incentive is prepared by the Lord. But those who sin against me treat their own souls with impiety, and those who hate me love death.

Wisdom built herself a house and supported it with seven pillars. She slaughtered her own sacrificial victims; she mixed her own wine in a mixing bowl, and she prepared her own table. She sent out her slaves, summoning with a stately proclamation to the drinking feast, saying:

“Come, eat of my bread, and drink wine, which I have mixed for you. Abandon folly, and you will live, and seek prudence in order that you may live, and erect understanding with knowledge.”

He who instructs evil people will gather disgrace unto himself, and he who rebukes an impious person will find fault with himself. Do not rebuke evil people, lest they should hate you; rebuke a wise person, and he will love you. Give a wise person an opportunity, and he will become wiser; inform a just person, and he will continue to receive. The beginning of wisdom is the fear of the Lord, and counsel of the saints is understanding. for to know the law is the sign of a sound mind; for in this way you will live a long time, and years of your life will be added to you. My son, if you become wise for yourself, you will be wise for your neighbors as well; however, if you turn out evil, you will bear the evil alone. He who supports himself with lies will as well herd winds, and the same person will pursue flying birds, for he has forsaken the ways of his vineyard and has caused the axles on his own farm to go astray.

Yes, he travels through an arid wilderness and a land destined to drought and gathers barrenness with his hands. A foolish and audacious woman who knows no shame comes in need of a morsel of food. She sat at the doors of her own house, on a seat, openly in the streets, inviting those who are passing by and who are keeping straight in their ways. "He of you who is most foolish, let him turn aside to me, and to those that are in need of prudence I urge, saying, ‘Take secret bread gladly, and sweet water of theft.’ ” But he does not know that the shadesa perish with her, and he meets up with a springboard of Hades. On the contrary, run away; do not linger in the place; neither fix your eye upon her, for so you will cross strange water and pass through a strange river. However, abstain from strange water, and do not drink from a strange well, that you may live for a long time and years of life may be added to you.

A wise son makes a father glad, but a foolish son is a mother’s grief. Treasures shall not profit the lawless, but righteousness shall deliver from death. The Lord will not let a righteous person starve, but the life of the impious he will ruin. Poverty makes a man humble, but the hands of the vigorous enrich. A son who is instructed shall be wise, and he will use the fool as a servant. An intelligent son was rescued from heat of the day, but a transgressing son is blasted by the wind in harvest time. The blessing of the Lord is upon the head of the righteous, but the mouth of the impious will conceal untimely sorrow. The memory of the righteous comes with eulogies, but the name of the impious is extinguished. A wise of heart will accept commandments, but he who is unable to keep his mouth shut, being crooked, will be tripped up. He who walks in integrity walks confidently, but he who perverts his ways will be found out.

aI.e. dead
10 He who winks with his eyes deceitfully garners grief for men,
but he who reproves openly makes peace.

11 A spring of life is in the hand of a righteous person, but destruction covers the mouth of the impious.

12 Hatred stirs up strife,
but friendship covers all who are not fond of strife.

13 He who produces wisdom from his lips strikes a heartless man with a rod.

14 The wise will conceal perception, but the mouth of the reckless brings ruin near.

15 The possessions of the rich are a strong city,
but poverty is the ruin of the impious.

16 The deeds of the righteous produce life
but the fruits of the impious sins.

17 Discipline guards the ways of a righteous life,
but unchastened instruction leads astray.

18 Righteous lips conceal enmity,
but they who utter slander are most foolish.

19 By a multitude of words you will not escape sin, but if you restrain your lips, you will be intelligent.

20 The tongue of the righteous is choice silver,
but the heart of the impious will fail.

21 The lips of the righteous are versed in sublime things, but fools die in want.

22 The blessing of the Lord is upon the head of a righteous person;
it enriches, and grief of heart will not be added to it.

23 With laughter a fool practices evil,
but wisdom gives birth to prudence for a man.

24 An impious person is engulfed in destruction,
but the desire of a righteous person is acceptable.

25 When the tempest passes, an impious person vanishes, but a righteous person, since he turned aside, is saved for ever.

26 As unripe grapes are harmful to the teeth, and smoke is to the eyes, so transgression is to those that practice it.

27 The fear of the Lord adds days, but the years of the impious will be few.

28 Gladness lingers with the righteous,
but the hope of the impious will perish.

29 The fear of the Lord is a stronghold for the devout, but ruin for those who do evil.

30 The righteous will never give up, and the impious will not inhabit the land.

31 The mouth of the righteous drips wisdom,
but the tongue of the unjust will perish.

32 The lips of the righteous drip charm,
but the mouth of the impious turns people away.

11 False balances are an abomination before the Lord,
but a just weight is acceptable to him.

2 Where pride enters, there will also be disgrace,
but the mouth of the humble attends to wisdom.

3 When a righteous person died, he left regret,
but destruction of the impious is at hand, and joyous.

5 Righteousness cuts out blameless paths,
but impiety is beset with injustice.

6 The righteousness of upright men rescues them,
but transgressors are taken captive by their destruction.

7 When a righteous man dies, hope does not perish,
but the boast of the impious perishes.

8 A righteous person eludes from a chase, and the impious is handed over in his stead.

9 In the mouth of the impious is a snare to citizens, but the perception of the righteous is free from difficulties.

10 By the good deeds of the righteous a city succeeded,
but by the mouths of the impious it was leveled.

12 A person who lacks sense scorns citizens,
but an intelligent man keeps quiet.

13 A double-tongued man discloses counsels in a meeting,
but a person loyal in spirit conceals matters.

14 They who have no direction fall like leaves,
but in much counsel there is safety.

15 A wicked person does evil whenever he mingles with a righteous person, and he hates the sound of security.

16 A gracious wife procures honor for her husband,
but a seat of dishonor is a woman who hates justice.

17 A merciful man does good to his own self,
but the merciless person destroys his body.

18 An impious person performs unjust works, but the seed of the just is a reward of truth.

19 A righteous son is born to life,
but the pursuit of the impious leads to death.

20 Crooked ways are an abomination to the Lord, but acceptable to him are all who are blameless in their ways.

21 One who unjustly joins hands will not go unpunished, but he who sows righteousness will receive an assured reward.

22 Like a ring in a pig's snout, so is beauty to an imprudent woman.

23 All the desire of the righteous is good,
but the hope of the impious will perish.

24 There are those who by distributing their livelihood increase it, and there are others who gather, yet have less.

25 Every totally sincere person is blessed,
but an ill-tempered man is not respected.

26 May he who withholds grain leave it to the nations, and may a blessing be on the head of him who shares it.

27 He who devises good seeks good favor, but as for him who seeks out evil, it will overtake him.

28 As for him who puts his trust in wealth, he will fall, but as for him who supports the righteous, he will flourish.

29 He who does not deal graciously with his own household will be satisfied with food, but those who pursue vanities lack sense.

30 From the fruit of righteousness grows a tree of life, but the souls of transgressors are cut off untimely.

31 If the righteous is scarcely saved,
where will the impious and the sinner appear?

12 He who loves discipline loves perception,
but he who hates reproofs is a fool.

2 He who finds favor with the Lord is superior,
but a lawless man will be passed over in silence.

3 No person will prosper from what is lawless, but the roots of the just will not be removed.

4 A courageous wife is a crown to her husband, but like a worm in wood, so a mischievous wife destroys a man.

5 The thoughts of the just are judgments,
but the impious guides treachery.

6 The words of the impious are crafty,
but the mouth of the upright will deliver them.

7 Wherever the impious turns, he disappears,
but the households of the righteous endure.

8 The mouth of an intelligent person is praised by a man,
but the slow-on-the-uptake is mocked.

9 Better is a man in dishonor, being a slave to himself, than one who confers honor upon himself while he lacks food.

10 A just person takes pity on the lives of his cattle, but the feelings of the impious are without mercy.

11 He who tills his own land shall be satisfied with food,
but those who pursue vanities lack sense.

11a He who enjoys himself in banquets of wine shall leave behind disgrace in his own strongholds.

12 The desires of the impious are evil,
but the roots of the pious are in secure places.

13 Through the sin of his lips a sinner falls into snares, but a just person escapes from them.

13a He who looks gentle will be pitied,
but he who contends in the gates will afflict souls.

14 From the fruit of the mouth a man's soul will be filled with good,
and the rewards of his lips shall be given to him.

15 The ways of fools are right in their own eyes,
but a wise man listens to advice.

16 A fool expresses his anger at once,
but the prudent hides his own disgrace.

17 A just person proclaims trust as it is,
but the witness of unjust things is deceitful.

18 Some, when they speak, wound with a dagger,
but the tongues of wise men heal.

19 Truthful lips establish testimony,
but a hasty witness has a dishonest tongue.

20 Deceit is in the heart of him who devises evil,
but those who intend peace will rejoice.

21 Nothing unjust will be pleasing to the just,
but the impious will be filled with evil.

22 False lips are an abomination to the Lord,
but he who acts faithfully is acceptable to him.

23 An intelligent man is a seat of perception,
but the heart of fools will meet with curses.

24 The hand of the elected will easily govern,
but the deceitful will become a prey.

25 Terrifying news troubles the heart of a just man,
but a good message cheers him up.

26 A just arbiter will be his own friend,
but the opinions of the impious are unfair.

Evil will pursue those that sin,
and the way of the impious shall lead them astray.

aI.e. assists in the making of false pledges
The deceitful will obtain no game, but a pure man a valuable possession.

In the ways of justice there is life, but the ways of those who bear grudges lead to death.

A smart son is obedient to his father, but a disobedient son is on course to destruction.

A good person will eat of the fruits of justice, but the souls of transgressors will perish untimely.

He who guards his own mouth keeps his own life, but he who is rash with his lips will bring terror upon himself.

Every lazy person has desires, but the hands of the courageous are diligent.

A just person hates an unjust word, but the impious is ashamed and will have no confidence.

Justice guards the innocent, but sin makes the impious worthless.

There are some who, while having nothing, enrich themselves, and there are others who humble themselves in much wealth.

A man's own wealth is the ransom of his soul, but the poor does not experience threat.

The just always have light, but the light of the impious is extinguished.

Crafty souls go astray in sins, but just people are compassionate and have pity.

An evil person does evil with pride, but they that are judges of themselves are wise.

Property gotten hastily with lawlessness is diminished, but he who gathers for himself with piety will be increased.

A just person is compassionate and lends.

Better is he that begins to help heartily than he that promises and leads another to hope, for a good desire is a tree of life.

He who despires a matter will be despised by it, but as for him who fears the commandment, he is healthy.

To a crafty son nothing will be good, but a wise domestic will have prosperous business, and his way shall be guided.

The law of a wise man is a fountain of life, but he who is stupid will die by a snare.

Sound discretion wins favor, and to know the law is the sign of a sound mind, but the ways of scorners end in destruction.

Every smart person acts with knowledge, but the fool displayed his own evil.

A rash king will fall into evil, but a reliable messenger will deliver him.

 Discipline removes poverty and disgrace, and he who rebukes will be honored.

The desires of the pious sweeten his soul, but the deeds of the impious are far from knowledge.

He who walks along with the wise will be wise, but he who walks along with fools will be known as one.

Evil will pursue sinners, but good will overtake the just.

A good man will leave an inheritance for his sons' sons, and the wealth of the impious is stored up for the righteous.

The just will spend many years in wealth, but the unjust will perish suddenly.

He who spares the staff hates his son, but he who loves him carefully disciplines him.

A just man when eating satisfies his appetite, but the appetites of the impious are deficient.

Wise women built homes, but a foolish one tore it down with her hands.

He who walks uprightly fears the Lord, but he who is devious in his ways will be dishonored.

From the mouth of fools comes a staff of pride, but the lips of the wise preserve them.

Where there are no oxen, the cribs are clean, but where there is much produce, the strength of an ox is apparent.

A faithful witness does not lie, but an unjust witness kindles falsehoods.

You may seek wisdom with evil men and will not find it, but perception is easily available among the clever.

All things are against a foolish man, but wise lips are the weapons of perception.

The wisdom of the smart will become familiar with their ways, but the folly of fools misleads.

The homes of transgressors are subject to cleansing, but the homes of the just are acceptable.

A man's heart is sensitive; his soul is grieved, and when he rejoices, he does not mingle with pride.

The homes of the impious will be destroyed, but the tents of the upright will stand.

There is a way that seems to be right among people, but its end reaches to the bottom of Hades.

13 Grief mingles not with mirth, and joy in the end comes to sorrow.

14 A bold-hearted person will be filled with his own ways, and a good man with his own thoughts.

15 The innocent believes every word, but the smart comes to a change of mind.

16 A wise man feared and turned away from evil, but the fool trusts in himself and associates with the lawless.

17 A passionate person acts with thoughtlessness, but a sensible man endures many things.

18 Fools will partake of evil, but the smart will lay hold of perception.

19 The evil will fall down before the good, and the impious will serve at the gates of the just.

20 Friends will hate poor friends, but the friends of the rich are many.

21 He who dishonors the needy sins, but one who pities the poor is deemed most happy.

22 They who go astray devise evil, but the good devise pity and truth. The planners of evil do not understand pity and loyalty, but acts of mercy and of loyalty are with planners for good.

23 With everyone who is careful there is abundance, but the hedonist and indolent shall have want.

24 A crown for the wise is a smart man, but the pastime of fools is evil.

25 A faithful witness will rescue a soul from evil, but a deceitful person kindles falsehoods.

26 In the fear of the Lord is hope in strength, and he leaves his children support.

27 An ordinance of the Lord is a fountain of life, and it causes people to turn away from the snare of death.

28 In a populous nation is a king's glory, but in the failing of people is the ruin of a ruler.

29 A man slow to anger is abundant in prudence, but an impatient man is extremely foolish.

30 A meek-spirited man is a healer of hearts, and a sensitive heart a moth a cause of decay in the bones.

31 He who cheats the needy upsets his maker, but he who honors him pities the poor.

32 The impious will be driven away by his evil, but he who is secure in his own piety is just.

33 There is wisdom in the good heart of a man, but in the heart of fools it is not discerned.

34 Justice lifts up a nation, but sins diminish tribes.

35 A thoughtful subordinate is acceptable to a king, and by his own good behavior he removes disgrace.

15 Anger destroys even the prudent; yet a submissive answer turns away wrath, but a harsh word stirs up anger.

2 The tongue of the wise understands what is good, but the mouth of the foolish will proclaim evil.

3 The eyes of the Lord are in every place, beholding both the evil and the good.

4 A tongue's healing is a tree of life, and he who keeps it will be filled with spirit.

5 A fool scorns his father's discipline, but he who keeps commandments is smarter.

6 In abounding righteousness is great strength, but the impious will be removed root and branch from the earth. In the homes of the righteous there is much strength, but the fruits of the impious will perish.

7 The lips of the wise are devoted to perception, but the hearts of fools are not steadfast.

8 The sacrifices of the impious are an abomination to the Lord, but the prayers of the upright are acceptable to him.

9 The ways of the impious are an abomination to the Lord, but he loves those who pursue righteousness.

10 The discipline of the innocent is known by passersby, but those who hate rebukes die disgracefully.

11 Hades and destruction are manifest to the Lord; how much more also human hearts!

12 An uninstructed person will not like those who rebuke him, and neither will he associate with the wise.

13 When the heart rejoices the countenance is cheerful, but when it is in sorrow, the countenance is sad.

14 An upright heart seeks perception, but the mouth of the uninstructed will know evil.

aI.e. a cause of decay
The eyes of the wicked are continually expecting evil, but the good are always quiet.

Better is a small portion with the fear of the Lord than great treasures without fear.

Better is entertainment of vegetables with friendliness and kindness than a serving of calves with enmity.

A passionate man stirs up fights, but he who is slow to anger appeases even an incipient one.

A man slow to anger will extinguish disputes, but an impious person stirs them up exceedingly.

The ways of the idle are strewn with thorns, but those of the courageous are beaten.

A wise son gladdens his father, but a foolish son scorns his mother.

The paths of the foolish are void of sense, but the prudent man proceeds in a straight course.

They who do not honor councils delay deliberations, but counsel prevails in the hearts of those giving advice.

The evil person will not heed it; neither will he say anything appropriate or good for the public.

The thoughts of the intelligent person are ways of life in order that one turn aside and escape from Hades.

The Lord tears down the homes of the insolent, but he established the border of the widow.

An unjust thought is an abomination to the Lord, but the sayings of the pure are solemn.

A receiver of bribes destroys himself, but he who hates the receiving of bribes is saved.

By acts of mercy and by faithfulness sins are purged, but by the fear of the Lord everyone turns away from evil.

The hearts of the righteous ponder faithfulness, but the mouth of the impious answers evil things.

The ways of righteous persons are acceptable to the Lord, and through them even enemies become friends.

God is far from the impious, but he hears the prayers of the righteous.

Better is a small intake with righteousness than abundant produce with injustice.

Let the heart of a man think righteous things, that his steps may be directed by God.

The eye that observes good things rejoices the heart, and good news refreshes the bones.

He who rejects discipline hates himself, but he who heeds rebukes loves his soul.

Fear of God is discipline and wisdom, and the beginning of glory will respond to it.

All the works of the humble are manifest with God, but the impious shall perish in an evil day.

Everyone who is arrogant is impure with God, and he who unjustly joins hands will not be deemed innocent.

The beginning of a good way is to do righteous things, and they are more acceptable with God than to bring sacrifices.

He who seeks the Lord will find knowledge with righteousness, and they who seek him rightly will find peace.

All the works of the Lord are done with righteousness, but the impious is kept for an evil day.

There is an oracular shrine upon the lips of a king, and his mouth will not err in judgment.

The tipping of the scale is righteousness with the Lord, and his works are righteous measures.

An evildoer is an abomination to a king, for the throne of government is established by righteousness.

Righteous lips are acceptable to a king, and he loves right words.

The anger of a king is a messenger of death, but a wise man will pacify him.

The son of a king is in the light of life, and they that are acceptable to him are like a late cloud.

The young of wisdom are more desirable than gold, and the young of prudence more desirable than silver.

The paths of life turn away from evil, and the ways of righteousness are length of existence.

He who receives discipline will prosper, and he who heeds rebukes will become wise.

He who heeds his ways preserves his own soul, and he who loves his life will spare his mouth.

Pride goes before ruin, and malice before a fall.

I.e. assists in the making of false pledges
Better is a person of gentle mind with humility than he who divides spoils with the proud. One who is capable in business is a discoverer of good things, but he who trusts in God is most fortunate. Some call the wise and intelligent worthless, but they who are pleasant in speech will be heard more. Insight is a fountain of life to its possessors, but the discipline of fools is evil. The heart of the wise will consider what comes from his own mouth, and on his lips he will bear prudence. Noble words are honeycombs, and its sweetness a healing for the soul. There are ways that seem to be right for a man, but their ends look towards Hades’ depth. A man at labor labors for himself and fences off his own destruction, but the crooked carries destruction in his own mouth. A foolish man digs up evil for himself, and treasures fire on his own lips. A crooked man spreads evil and will kindle with evil a torch of deceit, and he separates friends. A man who transgresses makes trial of friends and leads them in ways that are not good. He who fixes his eyes considers perverse things, and he marks out with his lips all evil; he is a furnace of evil. Old age is a crown of boasting; however, it is gained in the ways of righteousness. A man who is slow to anger is better than the mighty, and he who controls his temper better than one who captures a city. Righteous rule gives power to words, but sedition and strife precede want. He who judges the unjust just and the just unjust is unclean and abominable with God. Why should fools have money? For the heartless will not be able to buy wisdom. He who makes his own house high is looking for ruin, and the one who is too crooked to learn will fall into evil. You should have a friend for every season, but let brothers be supportive in distress, for on this account are they born. A foolish man applauds and rejoices over himself; as well, he who pledges himself ought to answer for his own friend. A lover of sin rejoices in fights, but the hard-hearted does not meet up with good things. A man who is fickle of tongue will fall into evil, and the heart of a fool is grief to its possessor. A father does not rejoice over an uninstructed son, but a prudent son gladdens his mother. A cheerful heart promotes well-being, but the bones of a depressed man dry up.
23 The ways of one who unjustly receives bribes in his pocket do not prosper, and the impious perverts the ways of righteousness.

24 The face of a wise person is intelligent, but the eyes of the fool are on the ends of the earth.

25 A foolish son is a cause of anger to his father and a grief to her who bore him.

26 It is not good to punish a righteous man, nor is it pious to plot against righteous rulers.

27 He who is careful to utter a harsh word is discreet, and a patient man is sensible.

28 Wisdom will be imputed to a silly person who asks after wisdom, but someone who keeps himself speechless will seem to be sensible.

18 A man who wishes to separate from friends is looking for excuses, but he will be liable to reproach at all times.

2 A person lacking in sense feels no need for wisdom, for he is much more led by folly.

3 When the impious comes into a depth of evils, he shows contempt, but disgrace and reproach come upon him.

4 A word in the heart of a man is deep water, and a river and a fountain of life spring forth.

5 It is not good to respect the person of the impious, nor is it pious to pervert justice in judgment.

6 A fool's lips bring him into troubles, and his bold mouth calls upon death.

7 A fool's mouth is his ruin, and his lips are a snare to his soul.

8 Fear casts down the timid, and the souls of the effeminate will suffer hunger.

9 He who does not cure himself by his labor is akin to him who injures himself.

10 The name of the Lord is of majestic strength, and the righteous, when they run to it, are exalted.

11 The substance of a rich man is a strong city, and its glory casts a huge shadow.

12 Before ruin a man's heart is exalted, but before honor it is humble.

13 He who gives an answer before listening—it is folly and reproach to him.

14 A sensible attendant calms a man's anger, but who can endure a faint-hearted man?

15 The heart of the sensible acquires perception, and the ears of the wise seek insight.

16 A person's gift gives him space and seats him among the powerful.

17 The righteous accuses himself in his introduction, but when he attacks, the adversary is refuted.

18 Casting the lot puts an end to disputes and decides between the powerful.

19 A brother helped by a brother is like a fortified and lofty city and is as strong as a firmly founded palace.

20 With the fruits of his mouth a man fills his belly, and with the fruits of his lips he will be satisfied.

21 Death and life are in the power of the tongue, and they who control it will eat its fruits.

22 He who has found a good wife has found favors and has received cheerfulness from God.

22a He who rejects a good wife rejects the good, but he who keeps an adulteress is foolish and impious.

19 3A man's folly corrupts his ways; yet in his heart he blames God.

4 Wealth adds many friends, but the poor is deserted even by the only friend he has.

5 A false witness will not go unpunished, and he who accuses unjustly will not escape.

6 Many render service to the persons of kings, but every evil one becomes a reproach to a man.

7 Every one who hates a poor brother will also be far from friendship. Insight will draw near to them who know it, and a prudent man will find it. He who does much evil perfects wickedness, and he who uses provoking words will not be saved.

8 He who procures prudence loves himself, and he who guards prudence will find good.

9 A false witness will not go unpunished, and whosoever will kindle evil will perish by it.

10 It is not fitting for a fool to have delights, nor if a domestic should begin to rule with hubris.

11 A merciful man is long-suffering, and his boast comes upon transgressors.

12 The threat of a king is like the roaring of a lion, but as dew on grass, so is his cheerfulness.

13 A foolish son is a disgrace to his father, and vows from the price of a prostitute are not pure.

14 Fathers distribute house and substance to their children, but a woman is joined to a man by God.

Timidity restrains the effeminate, and the soul of the idle will suffer hunger.

He who keeps a commandment preserves his own soul, but he who despises his own ways will perish.

He who has compassion on the poor lends to God, and he will repay him according to his gift.

Discipline your son, for thus he will be hopeful, but do not be roused in your soul to hubris.

A malicious man will be severely punished, and if he causes injury, he will even add his soul.

My son, listen to the discipline of your father, that you may become wise for the future.

There are many thoughts in a man’s heart, but the counsel of the Lord remains forever.

Compassion is a profit for a man, and a poor righteous person is better than a rich liar.

The fear of the Lord becomes life for a man, and he who is without fear will stay in places where knowledge does not keep watch.

He who unjustly hides his hands in his bosom will never ever bring them to his mouth.

When a pestiferous person is being whipped, a fool will become more crafty, but if you reprove a prudent man, he will gain perception.

He who disgraces his father and drives away his mother will be put to shame and will become rebuked.

The son who stops keeping the discipline of his father will contemplate evil sayings.

He who gives surety for a foolish child will insult what is deemed right, and the mouth of the impious will devour judgments.

Lashes are prepared for the intemperate, and flogging for the backs of the foolish.

Wine is an intemperate thing, and strong drink is something insolent, and everyone who mixes with it will not be wise.

The threat of a king does not differ from the rage of a lion, and he who provokes him sins against his own life.

It is good repute for a man to refrain from strife, but every fool is entangled in such things.

Though the lazy is reproached, he is not ashamed; likewise also to the one who borrows grain in harvest.

The counsel in a man’s heart is deep water, but a sensible man will extract it.

Humankind is something great, and a compassionate man something precious, but to find a faithful man is a chore.

He who dwells blameless in righteousness will leave his children happy.

When a righteous king sits on his throne, he does not oppose anything wicked with his eyes.

Who can boast that he keeps his heart pure? Or who can declare confidently that he is pure from sins?

The lamp of one who curses father or mother will be extinguished, and the pupils of his eyes will see darkness.

A portion quickly acquired at first will not be blessed in the end.

Do not say: I will repay my enemy, but wait for the Lord that he may help you.

A large and a small weight, and double measures, are impure in the eyes of the Lord—both of them, and he who makes these will be shackled by his practices.

A young man in the company of a pious person—straight indeed will be his way.

The ear hears, and the eye sees; both are works of the Lord.

Do not love calumny, lest you be destroyed; open your eyes, and be filled with bread.

An ambiguous weight is an abomination to the Lord, and a false balance is not a good thing before him.

A man’s steps are directed by the Lord, and a mortal—how could he understand his ways?

Quickly to consecrate something of his own is a snare to a man, for after making a vow a change of mind can happen.

A wise king is a winnower of the impious, and he will put a wheel on them.

The light of the Lord is the breath of humans, he who searches the innermost parts of the belly.

Compassion and truth are a guard to a king, and they will encircle his throne with righteousness.

Wisdom is an ornament to young men, and grey hair the glory of the aged.

Bruises and wounds befall evil men,
and plagues in the innermost parts of the belly.

21 Like a stream of water, so is the heart of a king in God’s hand. Wherever he decides to turn it, thither he inclines it.

2 Every man seems righteous to himself; however, the Lord directs hearts.

3 To do right and to be truthful is more pleasing with God than blood of sacrifices.

4 An arrogant person is bold-hearted in hubris, and sin is the lamp of the impious.

5 He who obtains treasures by a lying tongue pursues vanity into the snares of death.

6 Ruin will be entertained by the impious, because they do not want to do what is just.

7 To the crooked God sends crooked ways, for his works are pure and upright.

8 To the crooked God sends crooked ways, for his works are pure and upright.

9 It is better to live in a corner in the open than in plastered quarters and in a shared house with injustice.

10 The soul of the impious will not receive compassion from anybody.

11 When the intemperate is punished, the innocent becomes more wily, but a wise man understands he will gain knowledge.

12 A righteous person understands the heart of the impious and despises the impious because of their evil.

13 He who blocks his ears so as not to hear the weak will himself also call, and there will be nobody who listens.

14 A secret gift averts anger, but he who is sparing with gifts arouses fierce wrath.

15 It is a joy to the righteous to do justice, but according to evildoers a devout person is impure.

16 A man who strays from the path of righteousness will rest in the gathering of giants.

17 A needy man loves joy; he likes wine and oil in abundance.

18 And a lawless person is the refuse of a righteous one.

19 It is better to live in a desert land than with a quarrelsome and talkative and irritable wife.

20 A desirable treasure will rest in the mouth of the wise, but foolish men will swallow it.

21 A way of righteousness and compassion will find life and honor.

22 A wise person attacked strong cities and demolished the strongholds in which the impious trusted.

23 He who guards his mouth and tongue keeps his soul out of trouble.

24 The bold and audacious and pretentious is called a pest, and he who contemplates evil is a transgressor of the law.

25 Desires kill the lazy, for his hands choose not to do anything.

26 The impious longs for wicked desires all day long, but the righteous has compassion and pity unsparingly.

27 The sacrifice of the impious is an abomination to the Lord, for they even offer them unlawfully.

28 A false witness will perish, but an obedient man will speak cautiously.

29 An impious man impudently resists with his face, but the upright—he understands his ways.

30 There is no wisdom; there is no courage; there is no counsel against the impious.

31 A horse is prepared for the day of battle, but assistance is from the Lord.

22 A good name is a better choice than great wealth, and good favor is above silver and gold.

2 The rich and the poor have encountered each other, but the Lord has made them both.

3 When the clever sees the wicked severely punished, he himself is being educated, but the fools passed by and were penalized.

4 The offspring of wisdom is the fear of the Lord as well as riches and honor and life.

5 Thorns and snares are in crooked ways, but he who guards his own soul will keep far from them.

6 The rich rule over the poor, but domestic will lend to their own masters.

8 He who sows what is cheap will reap what is bad and will complete the impact of his deeds.

8a God blesses a cheerful and generous man, but he will bring to an end the vanity of his deeds.

9 He who has compassion over the poor will himself be nourished, because he gave his own food to the poor.

9a He who hands out gifts secures victory and honor;
moreover, he takes away the soul of those who have possessions.

10 Expel from the council an irritating person and strife will exit with him, for when he takes a seat in the council, he disgraces all.

11 The Lord loves devout hearts, and all the blameless are acceptable to him. A king herds with his lips.

12 Now the eyes of the Lord keep watch over perception, but the transgressor holds words cheap.

13 A lazy person makes excuses and says: “There is a lion on the roads and murderers in the streets!”

14 The mouth of the transgressor is a deep hole, and he who is hated by the Lord will fall into it.

14a There are bad ways before a man, and he prefers not to avoid them, even though he should avoid a crooked and bad way.

15 Folly clings to the heart of a young boy, but the rod and discipline are far away from him.

16 He who oppresses the needy makes many things his own, yet gives to the rich to make it less.

17 Incline your ear to the words of the wise, and hear my word, and apply your heart, that you may know that they are good.

18 And if you take them to heart, they will also give you pleasure on your lips in order that your hope be upon the Lord and that he may reveal to you his way.

19 Now then, copy them for yourself three times over, for counsel and knowledge on the surface of your heart.

20 Therefore I teach you a true word and good knowledge to heed in order that you may answer words of truth to them who question you.

21 Do not treat the needy with violence, for he is poor, nor disgrace the weak at the gates.

22 For the Lord will judge his case, and you shall rescue your life inviolate.

23 Be no companion of a fierce man, nor associate with a passionate friend, lest you learn from his ways and take snares to your soul.

24 Do not give yourself as surety because you feel shame before a person; for if you have nothing with which to pay, they will take the bed that is under your side.

25 Do not remove ancient borders which your fathers set up.

26 A man with vision and skilled in his work should serve before kings and should not serve slothful men.

23 If you sit down to eat at the table of rulers, observe carefully what has been set for you, and extend your hand, since you know that you will have to prepare such things.

28 And if you are rather insatiate, do not desire his delicacies, for these pertain to a fake life.

29 If you are poor, do not measure yourself with the rich, but be restrained by your own insight.

30 If you set your eyes upon him, he will disappear totally, for he has been equipped with wings as of an eagle and he returns to the house of his master.

31 Do not dine with a malicious man, nor should you desire his food.

32 For in the same manner as one swallows a hair so he eats and drinks.

33 Do not bring him in to you, nor eat your morsel with him, for he will vomit it up and will spoil your noble words.

34 Say nothing in the ears of a fool, lest he despise your judicious words.

35 Do not relocate ancient borders, nor enter the possession of orphans, for the Lord who redeems them is strong and he will plead their case with you.

36 Give your heart to discipline, and prepare your ears for words of perception.

37 Do not refrain from disciplining a child, for if you beat him with a rod, he will not die; for indeed you shall beat him with a rod and will rescue his soul from death.

38 My son, if your heart is wise, you will gladden my heart as well.

39 And your lips will hold conversation with my lips, if they are upright.

40 Let your heart not envy sinners, but be in the fear of the Lord throughout the day.

41 For if you keep these things you will have progeny, and your hope will not be removed.

42 Listen my son, and become wise, and direct the insight of your heart.

43 Be not a winebibber, nor prolong in shared meals or at the purchasing of meat.

44 For every drunkard and glutton will become poor, and every sluggard will clothe himself with tatters and rags.

22 Listen, my son, to your father who begot you, and do not despise her when your mother gets old.

24 A righteous father raises well, and his soul rejoices in his wise son.

25 Let father and mother be glad over you, and let her who bore you rejoice.

26 My son, give me your heart, and let your eyes observe my ways.

27 For a pierced cask is a strange house, and a strange well is narrow.

28 For it will quickly perish, and every transgressor will be destroyed.

29 Who has woe? Who has trouble? Who has strife?
Who has vexations and squabbles?
Who has wounds without reason?
Who has blood-shot eyes?

30 Are they not those who linger long over wine, who frequent places where drinking takes place?

31 Do not get drunk from wine; rather converse with righteous people, and converse in public places; for if you give your eyes to saucers and goblets, you will afterwards walk around more naked than a pestle.

32 But finally he stretches himself out like one struck by a snake, and venom is diffused in him as by a horned serpent.

33 When your eyes see a strange woman, then your mouth will speak perversely.

34 And you will lie as in the heart of the sea and like a navigator in a large wave.

35 Then you will say: "They struck me, but I felt no pain, and they insulted me, but I did not realize it. When will it be morning, that I may go and seek with whom I will go together?"

7 Wisdom and insight are to be found in the gates of the wise, and the wise do not turn away from the mouth of the Lord.

8 But they caucus in the assemblies; death meets the uninstructed, and a fool dies by sin, and a pestilent man will be polluted by impurity in an evil day and a day of affliction until he deceases.

11 Rescue them who are led to death, and buy back those who are to be slaughtered; do not delay!

12 If you say: “I do not know this person,” be aware that the Lord is familiar with the heart of everyone, and he who formed breath for all, he knows everything, he who will render to each according to his deeds.

13 My son, eat honey, for the honeycomb is good, that your palate may be sweetened.

14 Thus you shall perceive wisdom with your soul, for if you find it, your end will be good and hope will not forsake you.

15 Do not lead the impious to the pastures of the righteous; also do not be misled by a full stomach.

16 For the righteous may fall seven times, but he will rise again, but the impious will be powerless in evil.

17 If your enemy falls, do not rejoice over him, nor be elated by his stumbling;

18 for the Lord will observe it, and it will not please him, and he will turn away his anger from him.

19 Do not rejoice over evildoers, nor envy sinners.

20 For progeny of the wicked will not continue, and the lamp of the impious will be extinguished.

21 My son, fear God and the king, and disobey neither of them, for they will unexpectedly punish the impious and who shall know their punishments?

22a A son who keeps the word will be far removed from destruction, for he received it willingly.

22b Let no falsehood be spoken to the king from the tongue, and no falsehood will proceed from his tongue.
The tongue of the king is a dagger and not of flesh, and whoever is handed over will be destroyed;

for if his anger is sharpened it kills people with thongs, and it devours the bones of people and consumes them like a flame so that they are not food for young eagles!

My son, fear my words, and repent when you receive them; this is what the man says to those who believe in God:

Now I stop, for I am the most foolish of all people and I have not the prudence of people.

God has taught me wisdom, and I have gained knowledge of holy things.

Who has ascended to heaven and come down? Who has gathered the wind in his bosom? Who has wrapped the water in his garment? Who has taken control of all the ends of the earth? What is his name? Or the name of his children that you may know them?

All divine words are tried by fire, and he himself shields those who revere him.

Do not add to his words, lest he rebuke you and you become a liar.

Two things I ask of you; do not remove my favor before I die.

Put far from me a vain word and lies, and give me neither riches nor poverty, but order what is necessary and sufficient for me, lest I be filled and become a liar and say: "Who sees me?" Or lest I become poor and steal and swear by the name of God.

Do not deliver a domestic in the hands of a master, lest he curse you and you vanish.

Wicked progeny curses its father and does not bless its mother.

Wicked progeny judges itself righteous but did not wash off its anus.

Wicked progeny has lofty eyes, and it raises its eyebrows.

Wicked progeny has daggers for teeth and knives for molars in order to destroy and to consume the humble from the earth and their needy from among mankind.

"It is not good to be in awe of a person in judgement."

He who says of the impious "He is righteous" will be cursed by peoples and be hateful to nations.

But those who rebuke will appear better, and a good blessing will come upon them.

And they will kiss lips that answer good words.

Prepare your work for your departure, and be fully prepared for the field; also follow behind me, and you will rebuild your house.

Do not be a false witness against your fellow citizen, nor overstate with your lips.

Do not say: "I will use him in the same way as he has used me, and I will punish him for the injustice he did to me."

A foolish man is like a tilled field, and a person lacking sense is like a vineyard.

If you leave it alone, it will become barren and will be totally overrun by weeds and neglected, and its stone fences will be broken down.

Thereafter I repented; I looked around in order to glean discipline.

I doze a little; then I slumber a little, and I fold my arms over my breast a little.

But if this is what you do, poverty will come over you, when it advances, and want like a good courier.

The leech has three lovingly beloved daughters, but these three did not satisfy her, and the fourth was not pleased to say, "It is enough."

Hades and love of a woman and Tartarus and earth not filled with water, water and fire also will never say, "It suffices."

An eye that derides a father and scorns the old age of a mother—may ravens from the ravines peck it out, and may the young eagles devour it.

Now there are three things impossible for me to understand, and with the fourth I am not familiar:

The tracks of a flying eagle and the ways of a snake on a rock and the paths of a ship passing through the sea and the ways of a man in his youth.

20 Such is the way of an adulterous woman who, when she has performed the act, will wash herself and say that she has done nothing improper.

21 Through three things the earth is shaken,
and the fourth it is not able to bear:
If a domestic becomes king and if a fool is filled with food, also a female domestic if she throws out her mistress,
and a hateful woman if she finds a good husband.

24 There are also four things on earth that are very small;
yet they are wiser than the wise:
The ants, which, though they are not strong,
do prepare their food in summer;
the hedgehogs are also not a strong species,
who made their homes in the rocks;
the grasshopper is without a king:
yet they march orderly at the command of one;
and the lizard, though dependent on its hands and being easily caught,
it lives in the king's fortresses.

29 There are indeed three things which move easily, and the fourth which walks well:
a lion's whelp, strongest of the animals, which does not back-off nor fears any animal,
also a cock strutting courageously among the hens,
and the he-goat leading the herd,
and a king making a speech in a nation.

32 If you lose yourself in merriment and stretch out your hand in a fight,
you will be disgraced.

33 Press out milk, and there will be butter,
and if you squeeze nostrils, blood will come out,
and if you extort words, quarrels and fights will ensue.

31 My words have been spoken by God, the oracular response of a king, whom his mother instructed.

2 What, my child, will you keep? What?
Divine sayings.
My firstborn, I speak to you, my son.
What, child of my womb?
What, child of my vows?

3 Do not give your wealth to women and your mind and life to remorse.

4 Do everything with counsel;
drink wine with counsel.

Those in power are wrathful,
but let them not drink wine, lest they drink and forget wisdom and will not be able to judge the powerless rightly.

6 Give strong drink to those who are in pain and wine to drink to those in sorrow, that they may forget their poverty and not remember their labor any more.

8 Open your mouth with a divine word, and judge all fairly.

9 Open your mouth, and judge justly,
and plead the cause of the poor and weak.

25 These are the miscellaneous systems of education of Salomon, which the friends of Hezekias, king of Judea, copied.

2 Divine glory conceals a matter,
but the glory of a king honors action.

3 Heaven is high, and earth is deep,
and a king's heart is unfathomable.

4 Strike the unrefined silver, and everything pure will be purified.

5 Cut off the impious from the presence of the king, and his throne will be established in righteousness.

6 Do not boast in front of the king;
and do not linger in the places of rulers,
for it is better that it be said to you: "Come to me"
than to humiliate you in the presence of a ruler.

What your eyes have seen say.

8 Do not get involved in a fight quickly in order that you may not regret it in the end.

9 When your friend reproaches you, withdraw; do not show contempt, lest your friend reproach you and your quarrel and enmity will not end but will be tantamount to death.

10 Favor and friendship bring freedom;
keep them for yourself, that you may not be subject to reproach,
but guard your ways with fair dealing.

11 As an apple of gold in a necklace of Sardian stone,
so it is to speak a word.

12 A costly Sardian stone is fastened to a golden earring—a wise word to an obedient ear!

13 As snowfall during harvest is beneficial against the heat, so is a faithful messenger to those who sent him,
for he benefits the souls of those who make use of him.

14 As winds and clouds and rains are exceedingly apparent, so are they who boast over a false gift.
With patience a king has a safe journey, and a soft tongue breaks bones.

If you find honey eat just enough, lest you be sated and vomit.

Lead your foot sparingly to your own friend, lest he get too much of you and hate you.

Pointed is a nail and a dagger and an arrow; so also is a man who bears false witness against his friend.

The ways of an evil person and the foot of a transgressor will be destroyed in an evil day.

As vinegar is harmful to a wound, so a calamity that befalls the body pains the heart.

As a moth is to a garment and a worm is to wood, so a man’s pain hurts the heart.

If your enemy is hungry, nourish him; if he is thirsty, give him to drink.

For by doing this you will heap coals of fire on his head, and the Lord will reward you with good things.

The north wind raises clouds, and an impudent face provokes the tongue.

It is better to live in the corner of a room than with an abusive wife in a shared house.

As cold water is soothing to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far away land.

Just as, if one should block a fountain and destroy an outlet of water, so it is unseemly that a righteous person fall before the impious.

It is not good to eat much honey, but it is necessary to honor notable words.

As a city is with its walls cast down and unfortified, so is a man who does everything without counsel.

Like dew in harvest and like rain in summer, so honor is impossible to the fool.

As birds fly—and sparrows, so a vain curse will not come upon anyone.

Like a whip for a horse and a goad for a donkey, so is the rod for a lawless nation.

Do not answer a fool in accordance with his folly, lest you become like him.

But answer a fool according to his folly, lest he appear to be wise to himself.

He who sends a message through a foolish messenger, from his own feet he will imbibe reproach.

As it is to take away traveling from legs, so is a proverb from the mouth of fools.

He who ties down a stone in a sling is like him who gives glory to a fool.

Thorns grow in the hand of the drunkard, and slavery in the hand of fools.

All flesh of fools is much exposed to winter cold, for their trances are being shattered.

Like a dog, when he returns to his vomit, also becomes the more hated, so is a fool, when by his own wickedness, he returns to his own sin.

There is a sense of shame that leads to sin, and there is a sense of shame that is glory and grace.

I have seen a man who thought himself to be wise, but there is more hope for a fool than for him.

A lazy person being sent on a journey says: “There is a lion on the road.”

As a door turns on its socket, so is a lazy person on his couch.

When a lazy person hides his hand in his bosom, he will not be able to bring it to his mouth.

A lazy person to himself seems wiser than he who, with satisfaction, returns a message.

Like one grabbing a dog’s tail, so is he who champions a cause not his own.

As those who are being treated propound tales to people and he who encounters the tale will be the first to be tripped up, so are all who trick their own friends, and when they are discovered, they say: “I did it in jest.”

With much wood a fire is fueled, but where there is no agitator strife ceases.

A hearth is for coals, and wood for fire, and an abusive man is for stirring up strife.

The words of knaves are soft, but they strike into the deepest of one’s inwards.

Silver given with deceit must be considered like a potsherd; smooth lips conceal a heart that causes sorrow.

A weeping enemy consents to everything with his lips, but in his heart he devises deceit.

If an enemy begs you with a loud voice, do not be convinced, for there are seven iniquities in his soul.

He who conceals enmity contrives deceit, but he exposes his own sins, being well-known in the councils.

\[a\text{I.e., with a wife}\]
27 He who digs a hole for his neighbor will fall into it, and he who rolls a stone rolls it on himself.

28 A false tongue hates truth, and an unguarded mouth works instability.

27 Do not boast about tomorrow, for you do not know what the next day will bear.

2 Let someone near to you praise you and not your mouth, a stranger, and not your lips.

3 A stone is heavy and sand is weighty, but the rage of a fool is heavier than both.

4 Wrath is merciless and anger is passionate, but jealousy can bear no one.

5 Better is open rebuke than hidden love.

6 More trustworthy are the wounds of a friend than the spontaneous kisses of an enemy.

7 A soul in plenitude scorns honeycombs, but to the needy soul even bitter things appear sweet.

8 Like when a bird flies down from its nest, so a person becomes a slave when he is driven from his own place.

9 With ointments and wines and perfumes the heart is delighted, but through misfortunes the soul is torn to pieces.

10 Do not forsake your friend nor the friend of your father, and do not go to the house of your brother when you have bad luck.

A friend nearby is better than a brother who lives far away.

11 My son, be wise that my heart may be gladdened, and remove from you reproachable words.

12 When evils approached, a clever person hid, but fools proceed and will pay the penalty.

13 Remove his garment, for he passed by—an insolent person who destroys what belongs to others.

14 Whoever blesses a friend early in the morning with a loud voice will seem not to be different from one who is cursing.

15 Drops on a rainy day drive a person from his house, likewise also an abusive wife, from his own house.

16 The north wind is a harsh wind, even though it is called by an auspicious name.

17 Iron sharpens iron, and one man spurs on the person of his fellow.

18 He who plants a fig tree will eat its fruit, and he who guards his own master will be honored.

19 As faces are not similar to other faces, so neither the hearts of people.

20 Hades and destruction are never satisfied; likewise insatiable are the eyes of people.

20a An abomination to the Lord is a person who fixates his eye, also the uneducated, unable to control their tongue.

21 Burning is a test for silver and gold, but a man is tested by the mouth of them who praise him.

21a The heart of a lawless person seeks out evil, but an upright heart seeks out knowledge.

22 If you beat a fool when he is disgraced in the council, you will never remove his folly.

23 You shall know well the souls of your flock, and you shall fasten your heart to your herds,

24 for a man’s power and strength do not last forever; neither can he transmit it from one generation to another.

25 Take care of the greens on the plain, and you will cut grass; also gather the fodder from the hills, that you may have sheep for clothing.

26 Value a plain that you may have lambs.

27 My son, you have sayings from me powerful for your life and for the life of your attendants.

28 The impious flees when no one is pursuing, but the righteous is confident like a lion.

2 By the sin of the impious disputes arise, but a clever man will quell them.

3 A bold man blackmails the poor with impious acts.

4 so those who forsake the law praise impiety, but those who love the law build a wall around themselves.

5 Evil men will not consider judgment, but those who seek the Lord will understand in everything.

6 Better is a poor person who walks in truth than a rich liar.

7 An intelligent son keeps the law, but he who feeds debauchery disgraces his father.

8 He who increases his wealth with interest and excess gathers it for him who has empathy for the poor.

9 He who turns away his ear not to listen to the law—he too has made his prayer abominable.
10 He who misleads the upright into an evil way will himself fall into destruction. And the lawless will pass through good things but will not enter into them.

11 A rich man is wise in his own eyes, but an intelligent poor person will see through him.

12 For helping the righteous there is great honor, but in the places of the impious people are trapped.

13 He who conceals his own impiety will not prosper, but he who expounds reproofs will be loved.

14 Happy is the man who reveres everything with discretion, but he who is hard of heart will fall into evil.

15 A hungry lion and a thirsty wolf is he who rules a needy nation while he himself is poor.

16 A king deficient in revenues is a great swindler, but he who hates injustice will live for a long time.

17 He who acts as surety for a man charged with murder will be a fugitive but not in safety.

17a Instruct a son, and he will love you, and he will give your soul an ornament. You shall not obey a lawless nation.

18 He who walks righteously has been helped, but he who walks in crooked ways will get entangled.

19 He who tills his own land will have plenty of bread, but he who pursues idleness will have plenty of need.

20 A trustworthy man will be much praised, but the evil will not go unpunished.

21 He who does not feel shame before the person of the righteous is not good; such a person will hand over a man for a piece of bread.

22 An envious man is in a hurry to get rich and he does not know that one who is merciful will prevail over him.

23 He who rebukes the ways of man will have greater favor than he who has a flattering tongue.

24 He who rejects father and mother and thinks that he does not sin, he is indeed the partner of an impious man.

25 A greedy man judges rashly, but he who trusts in the Lord will be attentive.

26 He who trusts in a bold heart, such a one is a fool, but he who walks in wisdom will be saved.

27 He who gives to the poor will not have want, but he who turns a blind eye will be in dire straits.

28 In the places of the impious the righteous groan, but by the destruction of them the righteous will be multiplied.

29 A man who reproves is better than a stubborn man, for, when he is suddenly set on fire, there is no healing.

2 When the righteous are praised, the people will rejoice, but when the impious rule, men groan.

3 When a man loves wisdom, his father is glad, but he who cherishes prostitutes will squander wealth.

4 A righteous king raises up a land, but a lawless man undermines it.

5 He who prepares a net before the face of his own friend spreads it for his own feet.

6 For a man who sins there is a great snare, but a righteous person will have joy and mirth.

7 The righteous knows how to judge for the needy, but the impious will not understand knowledge, and the poor person does not have a discriminating mind.

8 Pestilent men set a city aflame, but the wise turned away wrath.

9 A wise man judges nations, but when a worthless man is angry he ridicules and has no fear.

10 Men who are partakers in bloodshed will hate the devout, but the upright will seek out his soul.

11 A fool declares his whole anger, but the wise reserves it in part.

12 When a king listens to an unjust word, all under him are lawless.

13 When creditor and debtor meet each other, the Lord makes an inspection of both.

14 If a king judges the poor with truthfulness, his throne will be established as a testimony.

15 Blows and reproofs bring wisdom, but a boy going astray disgraces his parents.

16 When the impious multiply, sins become many, but when these stumble, the righteous become cautious.

17 Instruct your son, and he will give you rest, and he will give your soul an ornament.

18 A lawless nation has no interpreter, but he who keeps the law is most happy.
19 A stubborn domestic will not be instructed by words, for even if he understands, he will nonetheless not obey.
20 If you see a man hasty in speech, be sure there is more hope for a fool than for him.
21 He who lives luxuriously from his childhood will be a domestic, but in the end he will be grieved over himself.
22 A passionate man digs up strife, and a quick-tempered man digs out sins.
23 Pride humbles a man, but the Lord supports the humble-minded with glory.
24 He who shares with a thief hates his own soul, and if, having heard an oath proposed, they do not disclose it, since they were afraid and felt shame before people, they were tripped up. But the one who trusts in the Lord will be gladdened. Impiety gives a man a stumble, but he who trusts in his master will be saved.
26 Many show deference to the persons of leaders, but from the Lord a man obtains that which is right.
27 An unjust man is an abomination to the righteous, and the direct way is an abomination to the lawless.

[30.1–14 precedes 24.23 and 30.15–31.9 follows 24.34]

31 10 Who can find a courageous wife? Yes, such a one is more precious than valuable jewels.
11 The heart of her husband is confident about her; such a one will have no need of good spoils, 12 for she toils for the benefit of her husband all her life.
13 After spinning wool and flax, she made it useful with her hands.
14 She became like a ship that sails from afar, and it is she who gathers a livelihood.
15 And she got up in the night and supplied food for her household and work for her attendants.
16 After considering a field, she bought it, and with the fruits of her hands she planted the purchase.
17 After strongly girding her loins, she strengthened her arms for work.
18 She experienced that it was good to work, and her lamp is not extinguished the whole night.
19 She extends her forearms to what is profitable, and she strengthens her hands at the spindle.
20 And she opens her hands to the needy and reaches out her fruit to the poor.
21 Her husband has no concern for his household, when he spends time somewhere, for all that are hers are being clothed.
22 She duplicated cloaks for her husband, and for herself clothes of fine linen and purple.
23 And her husband is admired in the gates, when he sits in the council with elderly inhabitants of the land.
24 She made linen garments and sold them, and girdles for the Chananites.
25 She opened her mouth cautiously and legitimately and reined in her tongue.
26 She is clothed in strength and dignity, and she was happy in her last days.
27 The way she ran her household was careful, and she did not eat the bread of idleness.
28 And she opens her mouth wisely and lawfully, and her compassion built up her children, and they became rich, and her husband praised her:
29 “Many daughters have obtained wealth; many did mighty things, but you, you have surpassed and transcended all.”
30 Allurements are false, and the beauty of a woman is vain, but an intelligent woman is spoken well of; yes, let her praise the fear of the Lord.
31 Give her of the fruits of her hands, and let her husband be praised in the gates!

EDITION OF THE GREEK TEXT

The NETS translation is based on the edition of Alfred Rahlfs (Septuaginta. Id est Vetus Testamentum graece iuxta LXX interpretes, 2 vols. [Stuttgart: Württembergische Bibelanstalt, 1935]), since at present no fully critical text is available, though one is in progress.

In one case I have deviated from Rahlfs’ edition. In 1.17 Rahlfs has παραβολάς (“comparisons,” “analogies,” or “parables”), a reading supported by all Greek manuscripts (La = errores = α., cf. Vulg.). This is contrary, however, to the translation technique of the Greek translator. The Hebrew word being translated in 1.17 is מִיאַס (“madness”). This is rendered by περιφορά in 2.12 and 7.25 and also by περιφέρεια, a cognate noun, in 9.3. Similarly, מִיאַס (“madness”) is rendered by περιφέρεια in 10.13 and מִיאַש (“mad”) by περιφορά in 2.2. Conversely, the Greek translator uses παραβολή for the only occurrence of מִיאַס (“comparison,” “proverb”) in 12.9. Therefore, the original text at 1.17 was probably περιφορά for which παραβολάς represents an error of hearing and sight occurring so early that it dominated the textual tradition that has come down to us. Earlier proposals are περιφορά (Grabe) and παραφορά (R. Gordis, “Ecclesiastes 1.17—Its Text and Interpretation,” JBL 56 (1937) 323–330 = θ’ 248mg).

TITLE OF THE BOOK

The title for this book in NETS requires some explanation. In the English versions it is called “Ecclesiastes,” a title adopted from the Latin Vulgate and derived originally from the Greek Ἠκκλησιαστῆς. The title in Hebrew reads “The Words of Qoheleth, the son of David, king in Jerusalem,” or just “Qoheleth” (Eccl 1.1). “Qoheleth” occurs only seven times in the book and nowhere else in the canonical Hebrew writings. It may be construed as a feminine singular active participle of the verb ἑκλησιάζεται, which has the basic meaning of “assembling.” Analogous forms are found in the list of the “Servants of Solomon” in Ezra and Nehemiah to designate public officials. For example, “Hassophereth” in Ezra 2.55 and Nehemiah 7.57 may mean “Official Scribe,” and “Pokereth-Hazzebaim” in Ezra 2.55 and Nehemiah 7.59 may mean “Gazelle-Warden.” If this analysis is correct, Qoheleth could perhaps designate the “Officer of the Qahal” or “Master of Ceremonies of the Assembly,” a role similar to the Speaker of the House of Representatives. The Greek translator related this term to the noun ἐκκλησία, “assembly” and translated rather than transliterated the word by an agent noun in Greek which means “one who participates in a popular assembly.” Jerome interpreted this in Latin by the use of the term consionator, or “speaker before an assembly,” a meaning unattested in Greek prior to the Greek translation. It was from this meaning that the English concept of “Preacher” was derived. The English equivalent used here is Ecclesiast. Since the term is known in English, it is spelled here accordingly, though its intended meaning is “member of an assembly.”

TRANSLATION PROFILE OF THE GREEK

The Greek translation of Ecclesiast is characterised by extreme formal equivalence, so much so that scholars have suggested that it is the work of Aquila himself, a revisor of the Septuagint who flourished c. 120 CE.1 While the identity of the translator is still uncertain and undetermined according to the most recent research, the character of the translation reveals that in fact some patterns are identical to those considered classical Aquila, while others are clearly not Aquila.

The approach of the translator to his task is one where faithfulness is defined and measured by the degree of quantitative alignment between Greek translation and Hebrew original. As a result, the text is dif-

1 This is not an appropriate forum to debate whether or not Ecclesiast represents the work of Aquila either as an early edition or an edition in final form, and in any case the most recent research suggests the verdict is nol liquet. See John Jarick, “Aquila’s Koheleth,” Textus 15 (1990) 131–139 and bibliography in his footnotes for earlier contributions to the debate.
ficult to read in places and almost incomprehensible at times from the point of view of the native speaker of Hellenistic Greek who had no knowledge of or recourse to the source text. The attempt of the translator to align his translation with the source language and text affects both lexical and syntactic choices in Greek. Choosing the same lexeme in Greek for every occurrence of a particular lexeme in the Hebrew regardless of the contextual meaning results in a high degree of stereotyping. Few calques or isolate renderings, however, are to be found. Like Aquila, then, consistency and uniformity in Hebrew-Greek equivalents is extremely rigid. Unlike Aquila, however, we do not see a set of Hebrew-Greek equivalents that is so highly refined and specialized that distinct equivalents are employed for each Hebrew lexeme, nor does the translator attempt to represent the root system of Hebrew by forming a set of equivalents from a single Greek stem to be used for nouns and verbs derived from a single root. Even more than in lexical equivalents, it is in the morpho-syntactic structures that the attempt to align the Greek and the Hebrew is most apparent and also where the results are so awkward or even absurd. One obvious and outstanding example is the rendering of ἀριθμός by σών (1.14; 2.12, 17, 18; 3.10, 11bis, 17bis; 4.1, 2, 3, 4bis, 15; 5.3, 6; 7.14, 15, 18, 26, 29; 8.8, 9, 15, 17bis; 9.1bis, 15; 10.19, 20; 11.5, 7; 12.9, 14). That σών is found with the dative in 9.11 is normal (σών προσώπων αὐτοῖς); that it is found, however, with the genitive (9.15) or accusative (rel.) to mark the direct object is contrary to Greek grammar. This characteristic may be further illustrated. In 2.1 ἐπίστασαι is rendered by κατά τι ἐν συμβολαῖς. In cases like 2.1, discussed earlier, no attempt is made to represent rigidly the preposition in Greek with its formal equivalent in the English language, even where the verb is already marked for first person, carefully reproduced by NETS. Another example is the frequent use of the independent pronoun αὐτός in 12.1 is rendered by ἐντὸς ἄνθρωπον ἡμᾶς τῆς κοινᾶς. With the negative μη, the result is awkward but not necessarily impossible Greek. Elsewhere the rigid approach of the translator is carried over more cleverly. Hebrew בֵּן (1.17; 2.1, 7, 8, 14, 15bis, 19, 21, 23, 24, 26; 3.11; 4.4, 8tris, 11, 14, 16bis, 16; 5.9, 16, 18; 6.5, 9; 7.14, 21, 22bis; 8.10, 12, 14, 16; 9.1bis, 6bis, 12, 13; 10.20; 12.5) or בֵּית is (1.11; 3.13; 5.15; 6.3; 7.7, 18; 8.17; 9.3; 11tris; 10.3; 11.2) is always rendered by καίγεσθε or καίγετε except in a double translation in 7.22b where the equivalent is simply καί. Nonetheless, the equivalence בֵּית/בֵּית = καίγε, while illustrating the spirit of the Greek translator, is unlikely to have originated with him. Here the translator extends and perpetuates a tradition. Clearly, then, the Greek translator of Ecclesiastes belongs to the so-called καίγε tradition of translators.

THE NETS TRANSLATION

An attempt has been made to capture and represent in the NETS translation something of the approach, characteristics, and spirit of the Greek translation. Naturally, English that is ungrammatical is avoided. Formal equivalence, however, is frequently given higher priority than idiomatic English.

In some cases, formal equivalence in the Greek vis-à-vis the Hebrew is possible or has been reproduced where the English would be ungrammatical. The representation of ἀριθμός by σών, for example, must be ignored in NETS. Another example is the frequent use of the independent pronoun αὐτός in the Hebrew where the verb is already marked for first person, carefully reproduced by NETS. This has only been represented in NETS in 1.12. In cases like 2.1, discussed earlier, no attempt is made to represent rigidly the preposition in Greek with its formal equivalent in the English language, even though that is what the Greek translator has done in order to represent the Hebrew exactly.

The attempt to follow a model of translation similar to that of the Greek translator has occasionally created clashes with the NRSV. For example, in 5.9 NRSV has a dynamic and idiomatic rendering of the Hebrew: “But all things considered, this is an advantage for a land: a king for a plowed field.” The Greek renders the same Hebrew in extreme literalism. The differences between NETS and NRSV are due partly to the fact that the Greek translation interprets the Hebrew differently but are also due partly to the fact that the literalism is reproduced in NETS.

Aligning NETS with NRSV has been difficult not only where NRSV is more dynamic than the Greek in rendering the same text. On occasion the gender inclusive language policy of NRSV must be abandoned.

2 2.12 and 9.11 are included against Ra; see J. Ziegler, “Die Wiedergabe der nota accusativi ‘et,’ ‘aet- mit su/n,” ZAW 100 Sup (1988) 222–233. This, of course, does not affect the NETS translation.

The words of the Ecclesiast, son of David, king of Israel in Jerusalem.

Vanity of vanities, said the Ecclesiast, vanity of vanities! All things are vanity.

What surplus exists for people in all their toil at which they toil under the sun?

A generation goes, and a generation comes, and the earth stands forever.

The sun rises, and the sun goes down and draws along to its place.

When it rises there, it goes to the south and circles to the north. It circles, going in circles—so proceeds the spirit, and on its circuits the spirit returns.

All the wadis go to the sea, and the sea will not be full; to the place where the wadis go, there they turn back to go.

All words are worn out; a man will not be able to speak; the eye will not be satisfied with seeing, and the ear will not be filled with hearing.

What is that which has happened? It is that which will happen! And what is that which has been done? It is that which will be done. And there is nothing novel under the sun.

As for the person who will speak and say, “See, this is new!”—it has already happened in the ages that have been before us.

There is no remembrance of earlier people, indeed, of those born later—there will not be a remembrance of them with those who will be born at the last.

I, the Ecclesiast, was king over Israel in Jerusalem. And I applied my heart to seek out and to examine by wisdom concerning all things that happen under heaven, for an unhappy occupation God has given to human beings with which to be preoccupied.

I saw all the deeds that have been done under the sun, and see, all are vanity and preference of spirit.

Something crooked will not be able to be set in order, and what is lacking will not be able to be counted.

I spoke in my heart by saying, “As for me, see, I have become great and have added wisdom to all who were before me in Jerusalem, and my heart saw many things regarding wisdom and knowledge.” And I applied my heart to know wisdom and knowledge; derangements and understandings I understood, that, indeed, this is preference of spirit.

For in a great quantity of wisdom is a great quantity of knowledge, and those who increase knowledge will increase suffering.

I said in my heart, “Come now; let me test you with enjoyment; see in good!” And see, indeed, this was vanity. 2Of laughter I said, “Madness,” and of enjoyment, “Why are you doing this?”

3I looked about in my heart whether to draw my flesh into wine—and my heart guided in wisdom—and whether to lay hold on folly until I might see what kind of thing is good for human beings to do under the sun, the number of the days of their life.

4I made my work great; I built houses for myself; I planted vineyards for myself. 5I made myself gardens and parks, and I planted in them every fruit tree. 6I made myself pools of water to water from them a grove sprouting trees. 7I acquired male and female slaves, and I had homebred; indeed, I had great possessions of herds and flocks, more than all who had been before me in Jerusalem. 8I gathered for myself, indeed, silver and gold and valued possessions of kings and of the territories; I got male singers and female singers and the delights of human beings, a cupbearer and pitchers.

9And I became great and increased more than all who were before me in Jerusalem; indeed, my wisdom stood firm for me. 10Anything for which all who were before me in Jerusalem; indeed, my authority over all my toil at which I toiled and be- he will be wise or foolish? And he will have au-

11And I looked at all my works that my hands had done and at the toil wherein I toiled to do it and see, all were vanity and preference of spirit, and there is no surplus under the sun.

12And I looked to see wisdom and madness and folly, for who is the person who will come to follow the plan in as many things as he made it. 13And I saw that wisdom excels folly as light excels darkness.

14As for the wise, their eyes are in their head, and the fool goes in darkness,

And I know, indeed I, that one eventuality will befall them all. 15And I said in my heart, “As it befalls the fool, indeed, it will befall me, and why have I become wise?” I then spoke excessively in my heart, because a fool will speak from excess, that, indeed, this is vanity. 16For there is no remembrance ever of the wise with the fool, inasmuch as already the coming days, even all things, are forgotten, and how will the wise die with the fool? 17And I hated life, because the work that is done under the sun was grievous to me, for all things are vanity and preference of spirit.

18I hated all my toil in which I am toiling under the sun, because I am leaving it to the person being born after me 19—and who knows whether he will be wise or foolish? And he will have authority over all my toil at which I toiled and became wise under the sun; indeed, this is vanity. 20And I turned to bid farewell with my heart to all the toil at which I toiled under the sun. 21For there is a person whose toil is with wisdom and knowledge and manliness, and a person who did not toil at it: he will give him his portion; indeed, this is vanity and a great evil. 22For what happens to mortals in all their toil and in the preference of their heart with which they toil under the sun?

23For all their days are days of pains, and their pre-occupation is of anger; indeed, at night their heart does not sleep. Indeed, this is vanity.

24It is not good in humans what they will eat and what they will drink and what they will show to their soul as good in their toil. Indeed, this, I saw, is from the hand of God. 25For who will eat and who will refrain from eating apart from him? 26For to the one who is good before him he gave wisdom and knowledge and enjoyment, and to the sinner he gave a preoccupation to add and to gather, to give to the one who is good before God, because, indeed, this is vanity and preference of spirit.

3For everything there is a time, and a right time for every matter under heaven:

a right time to love, and a right time to hate;

a right time to give birth, and a right time to die;

a right time to plant, and a right time to pluck up what is planted;

a right time to kill, and a right time to heal;

a right time to tear down, and a right time to build;

a right time to weep, and a right time to laugh;

a right time to mourn, and a right time to dance;

a right time to throw stones, and a right time to gather stones;

a right time to embrace, and a right time to be far from embracing;

a right time to seek, and a right time to lose;

a right time to keep, and a right time to throw away;

a right time to tear, and a right time to sew;

a right time to keep silence, and a right time to speak;

a right time to love, and a right time to hate;

a right time for war, and a right time for peace.

9What surplus has the maker in what he toils? 10I saw all the preoccupation which God has given to humans to be preoccupied with. 11He made everything fine in its right time; indeed, he granted eternity in their heart so that they should not find the work that God has done from the beginning even to the end. 12I know that there is no good in them except to be glad and to do good in their life.

13Indeed, everyone who will eat and drink and should see good in their toil—it is a divine gift. 14I know that everything that God has done—it will be forever; to it there is nothing to add, and from it there is nothing to take away; God has done this so that all should stand in awe before him. 15That which happened, already is, and what is to happen, already took place, and God will seek out the one being pursued.

16Moreover, I saw under the sun the place of justice—the impious was there, and the place of...
4 And I turned, and I saw all the extortions that take place under the sun. Look, the tear of the oppressed—and there is no one to comfort them! From the hand of those oppressing them is strength—and there is no one to comfort them. 2And I praised the dead, who have already died, more than the living who are living until now. 3And better than both is whoever has not yet been, who has not seen the grievous work that is done under the sun.

4 And I saw all toil and all manliness of work, that it is a man's envy of his companion. Indeed, this is vanity and preference of spirit.

5 Fools folded their hands and consumed their own flesh.

6 Better is a handful of repose than two handfuls of toil, and preference of spirit.

7 And I turned and saw vanity under the sun: there is one, and there is no second; indeed, he has neither son nor brother, and there is no end to his days; indeed, his eye is not satisfied with riches. "For whom do I toil and deprive my life of bread?" Even this is vanity and an unhappy preoccupation.

9 Better are two than one, because they have a good reward in their toil. 10For if they fall, the one will raise his partner up, and woe to the one, when he falls, and there should be no second to raise him up. 11Indeed, if two sleep, they also have warmth, and the one, how should he be warmed? 12Even if the one should prevail, two will stand against him. A threefold cord will not be broken.

13 Better a child poor and wise than a king old and foolish, who did not know to give heed any longer; 14for from the house of prisoners he will come out to reign, for, indeed, in his kingdom he was born poor. 15I saw all the living, who were walking about under the sun, with the second youth, who will stand in his place. 16There is no end to all the people, to all who were born before them; indeed, those who came later will not rejoice in him, for, indeed, this is vanity and preference of spirit. 17(5.1) Guard your foot, whenever you go to the house of God and are near to hear. Above a gift of fools is your sacrifice, for they do not know how to do evil.

5 (2) Never be in a hurry with your mouth, nor let your heart be quick to utter a word before God, for God is in heaven and you upon earth; therefore let your words be few.

(3) For a dream comes with a great amount of distraction, and a fool's voice with a great quantity of words.

(4) Whenever you make a vow to God, do not delay to fulfill it, for there is no will in fools. Whatever you vow, pay up. 4(5) It is better that you do not vow than that you vow and do not pay up. 5(6) Do not allow your mouth to lead your flesh into sin, and do not say before God, "It is ignorance," in order that God should not be angry at your utterance and destroy the works of your hands.

(7) For with a great quantity of dreams are both vanities and many words; so fear God!

(8) If you see in a territory the extortion of the poor and the snatching away of justice and right, do not be amazed at the matter, for there is a high one to watch over a high one and higher ones over them. 8(9) And the surplus of the land in everything is a king over the worked field.

(9) One who loves money will not be satisfied with money. And who loved produce in a great quantity of them? Indeed, this is vanity.

(10) With an abundance of goodness, eaters of it were increased. And what is manliness to him who has it, except to see with his eyes?

(11) Sweet is the sleep of a slave, whether he eats little or much, and for the person filled full with being rich, there is no sending him away to sleep.

(12) There is an illness that I saw under the sun: riches being kept by him who has them to his misfortune. 13(14) And those riches will be lost in an unhappy preoccupation, and he begot a child, and there is nothing in his hand. 14(15) Just as he came out from his mother's womb naked, he will return to go as he came, and he will not take anything for his toil that may go in his hand. 15(16) Indeed, this is a grievous ill: for as he arrived, so also he will go away, and what is his surplus, at which he toils for wind? 16(17) Indeed, all his days are in darkness and mourning, and with much anger and sickness and bitterness.

(18) See what I saw as good, what is fine: to eat and to drink and to see goodness in all his toil and to see the sun, the light of the eye and heath, the good and the bad, and what comes to be under the sun: riches being kept by him who has them to his misfortune. 19(20) Indeed, all to whom God has given to them wealth and possessions and they have authority over them to eat from it and to take their portion and to enjoy themselves in their toil—this is a divine gift. 19[20] For not in many respects will they remember the days of their lives, because God keeps them preoccupied with the merriment of their hearts.

6 There is an evil that I have seen under the sun, and it is great upon humankind: 2there is a man to whom God will give to him wealth and possessions and honor, and he is not lacking with respect to his soul from all things that he desires, and God does not give authority to him to eat from it, because a stranger will eat it. This is vanity and a grievous illness. 3If a man begets a hundred children and will live many years and a great number is what will be the days of his years and his soul will not be satisfied with goodness, indeed, he has no burial; I said: A miscarriage is better than he. 4For it came in vanity, and it goes in darkness, and in darkness its name will be covered; 5indeed, it did not see the sun and did not know; this one has more rest than he. 6Even if he lived recurrences of a thousand years and he did not see goodness—do not all things go to one place?

7 All toil of humankind is for their mouth; indeed, their soul will not be satisfied. 8For what do not all things go to one place?

8 Better is the end of words than its beginning; better is a patient person than one proud in spirit.

9 Do not be hasty in your spirit to become angry, for anger will rest in the bosom of fools.

10 Do not say, “Why did it happen that the former days were better than these?” For it is not with wisdom you have asked concerning this.

11 Wisdom is good with distribution of land, and a surplus to those who see the sun.

12 For wisdom, in its shade, is like the shade of money, and a surplus of knowledge of wisdom will give life to the one who has it.

13 Consider the works of God; who will be able to set in order whomever God has made crooked?

14 In a day of prosperity live in prosperity, and in a day of misfortune, consider; indeed, the one in proportion to the other God has made concerning speech so that mortals may not find anything after them.

15 I saw all things in my days of vanity; there are righteous people perishing in their righteousness, and there are impious people remaining in their wickedness. 16Do not be very righteous, and do not be excessively wise, lest you be horrified. 17Do not be very ungodly, and do not become hard so that you should not die when it is not your time. 18It is good that you hold on to the one; indeed, do not let your hand go from the other, for the one who fears God will go forth in all things.

19 Wisdom will give help to the wise more than ten having authority over those who are in the city.

20 For as to humanity, there is not a just person in the earth who will do good and will not sin.

21 Indeed, to all the words that people will speak do not give your heart so that you do not hear your slave cursing you, 22for frequently he will do you evil and many times he will bring hurt to your heart as, indeed, you have cursed others.

23 All these things I tested by wisdom; I said, “I will become wise,” and it was far from me, far beyond what was, and a deep depth, who will find it? 23[1—in fact my heart—went full circle to know and to examine and seek wisdom and a reckoning and to know the folly of the impious and hardness and madness. 24And I find more bitter than death the woman who is hunted prey, and her heart is hunting-nets; her hands are letters; one who is good before God will be delivered from her, and one sinning will be taken by her. 25]—in fact my heart—went full circle to know and to examine and seek wisdom and a reckoning and to know the folly of the impious and hardness and madness. 26And I find more bitter than death the woman who is hunted prey, and her heart is hunting-nets; her hands are letters; one who is good before God will be delivered from her, and one sinning will be taken by her. 27]—in fact my heart—went full circle to know and to examine and seek wisdom and a reckoning and to know the folly of the impious and hardness and madness. 28which my soul still sought but did not find. One man from a thousand I found, and a woman among all these I did not find. 29Albeit, see, this I found what God made:

1 Or premature stillbirth
2 Or courage
3 Or settle
4 Possibly inheritance
Who knows the wise? And who knows the interpretation of what is said? A person's wisdom will illuminate his face, and one without shame in his face will be hated.

2 Keep a king's utterance, and do not be hasty about the expression of a sacred oath. 3 From his presence you will go; do not stand still because of painful words, for all that he wants he will do. 4 Just as a king will speak having authority, and who will say to him, "What will you do?" 5 Whoever keeps a command will not know anything harmful, and the heart of the wise knows the right time of decision. 6 For to every matter there is a right time and decision, for the knowledge of mortals is great upon them. 7 For they do not know what is going to be, for who will tell them just how it will be? 8 There is no one having authority over the spirit to restrain the spirit, and there is no authority over the day of death; there is no discharge from the battle, and impiety will not deliver those at home with it. 9 All this I observed, and I gave my heart to every work that is done under the sun—things that one person exercised authority over another to hurt them.

10 Then I saw the impious carried into tombs; they went from the holy place, and they were praised in the city that they did so. Indeed, this is vanity. 11 Because a refutation of those doing evil there does not happen quickly—on account of this the heart of humans was fully convinced in them to do evil. 12 He who sinned did what was evil in all that is done under the sun, that one comes against it and surround it and would build a great palisaded camp against it, 15 and he would find in it a poor wise man, and he himself will deliver the city by his wisdom. And no one remembers that poor man. 16 And I said, "Better is wisdom than might, and the poor man's wisdom is despised, and his words are not being heard."

For all this I gave to my heart, and my heart saw all this: how the righteous and the wise and their deeds are in the hand of God; indeed, love and, indeed, hate there is no person in the know; all things are before them; 2 vanity is in all things. One eventuality is for the righteous and the impious, for the good and for the evil, for the clean and for the unclean, for the one who sacrifices and for the one who does not sacrifice. As are the good, so are the sinners; so are those who swear, just as those who fear an oath. 3 This is an evil in all that is done under the sun, that one eventuality is for all. Indeed, the heart of humans was filled with evil; madness is in their heart while they live, and after them they go to the dead. 4 For who are they who have a part with all the living? There is hope, because a living dog is better than a dead lion. 5 For the living will know that they will die, and the dead are not knowing anything; they have no more reward, because their memory is forgotten. 6 Indeed, their love and their hate and their jealousy have already perished, and they have no further portion forever in all that is done under the sun.

7 Go, eat your bread with enjoyment, and drink your wine with a good heart, for God has already approved your works. 8 At every time let your garments be white; do let not oil be lacking upon your head. 9 See life with the wise 'whom you loved', all the days of your life of vanity that are given to you under the sun—all your days of vanity, because it is your portion in your life and in your toil at which you toil under the sun. 10 Whatever your hand finds to do, as is your might, do! For there is no work and reasoning and knowledge and wisdom in Hades, where you are going.

11 I turned, and I saw under the sun that the race is not to the nimble, nor the battle to the strong, nor, indeed, bread to the wise, nor, indeed, riches to the intelligent, nor, indeed, favor to those who are perceptive, because time and chance will happen to them all. 12 For, indeed, no one knows their time. Like fish being taken with a pernicious net and like birds being caught in a snare, like them mortals are snared at a time of ruin, when it suddenly falls upon them. 13 Indeed, this I saw as wisdom under the sun, and it was great according to me. 14 There was a little city and few men in it, and a great king would come against it and surround it and would build a great palisaded camp against it, 15 and he would find in it a poor wise man, and he himself will deliver the city by his wisdom. And no one remembered that poor man. 16 And I said, "Better is wisdom than might, and the poor man's wisdom is despised, and his words are not being heard."

the shouting of those exercising authority in follies.

Wisdom is better than instruments of war, and one sinner will destroy much good.

Deadly flies will make a preparation of aromatic oil give off a foul odor; a little wisdom is of more worth than honor derived from great folly.

The heart of the wise is to his right, and the heart of the fool is to his left.

Indeed, when a fool walks on the road, his heart will be lacking, and all he will consider is foolishness.

If the spirit of the one holding authority rises against you, do not leave your place, for healing will put a stop to great offenses.

There is an evil, which I saw under the sun, like an involuntary offense, which proceeded from the one in authority: a fool was allowed in great heights, and the rich will sit in a low place. I have seen slaves upon horses and rulers walking on the ground like slaves.

The one digging a hole will fall into it, and the one who demolishes a wall—a snake will bite him.

One who lifts stones will be hurt by them; one who splits trees will be endangered by them.

If the iron tool fails, he himself has also troubled his face, and he will put power into his efforts, and the extra of being a man is skill.

If the snake bites when there is no whispering, in fact there is no surplus to the charmer.

The words of the mouth of the wise are grace, and the lips of the fool will plunge him into the sea.

The beginning of the words of his mouth is foolishness, and the last of his speech is wicked madness, and the fool multiplies words. No one knows what has happened, and what will be after them who can tell them?

The toil of fools will weary them—one who did not know how to go into the city.

Alas for you, O city, whose king is young, and your rulers eat in the early morning!

Happy are you, O land, whose king is the son of freemen, and your rulers at the proper time will eat in strength, and they will not be ashamed.

Through hesitations the roofing will be deteriorated, and in idleness of hands the house will drip.

They make bread for laughter; wine gladdens the living and will obey money in all respects.

Indeed, in your consciousness do not curse the king, and in your bedrooms do not curse the rich, for a bird of heaven will carry off your voice, and one having wings will bring back word.

Send out your bread upon the face of the water, for in a great number of days you will find it.

Give a portion to seven, indeed, to eight, for you do not know what bad condition will be upon the earth.

If the clouds are full of rain, upon the earth they will pour out; whether a tree falls to the south or to the north, in the place where the tree will fall, there it will be.

One who watches the wind will not sow, and one who looks at the clouds will not reap.

When one does not know what the way of the spirit is, like bones in the belly of the pregnant woman, so you will not know the works of God, whatever he will do.

In the morning, sow your seed, and to the evening do not let your hand be slack, for you do not know what sort will fit, whether this or that and whether the two are good together.

Light is sweet, and it is good for the eyes to see the sun.

For even if a person will live many years, in them all he will be merry, and he will remember the days of darkness, because they will be many.

All that is coming is vanity.

Rejoice, young man, in your youth, and let your heart do you good in the days of your youth. Walk in the ways of your heart and by the sight of your eyes, and know that for all these things God will bring you into judgment.

Put away anger from your heart, and divert pain from your body, for youth and lack of understanding are vanity.

Remember your creator in the days of your youth, before the days of trouble come and the years arrive in which you will say, “I have no wish for them.” Before the sun and the light and the moon and the stars are darkened and the clouds return after the rain; \(3\) in the day when the guards of the house shake and the strong men are twisted, and the women who grind ceased working, because they are few, and those who look through the windows will be dimmed, \(4\) and they will lock the doors in the market, because of the weakness of the sound of the woman who grinds, and one will rise up at the sound of the sparrow, and all the daughters of song will be brought low. \(5\) Indeed, they will see from heights, and terrors will be in the road; when the almond tree blossoms, the grasshopper becomes fat, and the caperberry is scattered, because mortals went to their eternal home, and the mourners circled in the market; \(6\) before the cord of silver\(a\) is ruined and the blossom of gold is crushed and the pitcher is broken at the fountain and the wheel at the cistern races together \(7\) and the dust returns to the earth as it was and the spirit returns to the God who gave it. \(8\) Vanity of vanities, said the Ecclesiast; all is vanity.

\(9\) Beyond the fact that the Ecclesiast was wise, he also taught the people knowledge, and an ear will track out an arrangement of parables. \(10\) The Ecclesiast sought many ways to find the words he wanted, even something written of straightforwardness, words of truth.

\(11\) The words of the wise are like ox-goads and like nails firmly planted; those from the collections were given from one \(b\) shepherd and a surplus of them. \(12\) My son\(b\), beware of making many books; there is no end, and much study is a wearying of the flesh.

\(13\) The end of the message; all is heard. Fear God, and keep his commandments, for this is every person. \(14\) For God will bring every work in judgment, in everything overlooked, whether good or whether evil.

SONG OF SONGS

TO THE READER

Edition of the Greek Text
This translation of the Song of Songs follows the critical Greek text provided in my study, Lost Keys: Text and Interpretation in Old Greek Song of Songs and its Earliest Manuscript Witnesses (Ph.D. Dissertation, University of Pennsylvania, 1996). Apart from punctuation, this Greek text is substantially the same as that of Alfred Rahlfs’ edition (Septuaginta. Id est Vetus Testamentum graece iuxta LXX interpretes, 2 vols. [Stuttgart: Württembergische Bibelanstalt, 1935]). Footnotes mark the points where the two texts vary.

General Character
Old Greek Song of Songs (hereafter, Greek Song) is a consistently literal (word-for-word) translation rather than a literary (sense-for-sense) translation. It is a formal-equivalence translation. Its register is very much that of a study aid to a text in another language. The Song of Songs is one of the Old Greek translations that most closely fits the paradigm of an interlinear translation, as the NETS project uses that term. In comparison with other Old Greek translations, Greek Song is among the most consistent in its interlinear representation of Hebrew. In trying to be completely faithful to its Hebrew source, Greek Song represents each separable piece (word or morpheme) of the Hebrew with a formal equivalent in Greek, and to the extent possible, it puts the Greek equivalents in the same order as the Hebrew originals.

In addition, the Greek translator very often translates atomistically rather than contextually. In other words, he or she (see below) tends to choose a Greek word whose meaning corresponds to the meaning (or a presumed etymological meaning) of the Hebrew word rather than to its meaning in the context. The translator occasionally brings a clever mastery of Greek vocabulary or even a flash of brilliance to the task but more often provides a wooden pony for understanding the Hebrew.

Unfortunately, a pony is often inadequate for this Hebrew text, which is figurative and polyvalent, often enigmatic and sometimes obscure. Very frequently the Hebrew uses words that are unique or rare, and some of these are unfamiliar to our translator. He guesses their meanings from context, from etymology, and from their use in other books. Sometimes he apparently coins new words, such as καλλιώτιο and καρδιώτιο (in 4.9–10) and ἐκλοξίζω (in 5.10). Sometimes he makes a Greek word serve as it was never meant to serve. When all else fails, he transliterates. He is so focused on formal fidelity to the original text and so committed to his interlinear approach that his translation is sometimes difficult to understand as Greek.

Hebrew Text and Vocalization
The presumed Hebrew Vorlage of Greek Song varies quantitatively from the Masoretic Text about 29 times. In addition, the Greek translator assumes a vocalization different from the traditional vocalization of the Masoretic Text about 23 times. We may give one example that long influenced other translations, such as the Vulgate. In five places (Song 1.2, 4; 4.10; 6.11; 7.13), the Hebrew word דָּדִים is rendered as if vocalized דָּדִים (“breasts”) instead of דָּדִים (“loving”), which is the preferable reading found in the Masoretic Text.

2 See Pietersma. "Paradigm."
3 It ranks with Routh and Ecclesiast in its consistent representation of all elements of all Hebrew words without addition or subtraction, in its consistent representation of Hebrew words in the same order, and in its consistent representation of Hebrew words by the same stereotyped Greek words. For this analysis, see Chapter 2 of Benjamin G. Wright III, No Small Difference: Sirach’s Relationship to its Hebrew Parent Text (SBLSCS 26; Atlanta, Georgia: Scholars Press, 1989).
4 Greek Song provides a translation based on a presumed etymology about 25 times, according to The Parallel Aligned Hebrew-Aramaic and Greek Texts of Jewish Scripture (Computer Assisted Tools for Septuagint Studies, at Hebrew University and The University of Pennsylvania, under the direction of Emanuel Tov).
5 The original translation was revised toward a changing Hebrew text several times, most famously in Origen’s Hexapla. The evidence suggests at least five slightly different forms of the Hebrew text.
6 According to The Parallel Aligned Hebrew-Aramaic and Greek Texts of Jewish Scripture.
In a failure to understand the parallelism of 1.10, the rare word ḫɔdɔθɔj (“turn, plait”) is translated as if it were ḫɔdɔθɔ (“turtledove”), which appears in 2.12. In 1.11, ομοιώματα (“images, likenesses”) renders the same root, apparently read as ἀπεικόνισις (“appearance”). Reading ḫɔdɔθɔ (“and teeth”) instead of ḫɔdɔθɔ (“of the sleepers”) made a very difficult passage (Song 7.10) less difficult.

Occasional odd readings in Greek Song may be attributed to dividing words differently from the Masoretic Text. In 5.14, for example, the Greek translator may have read ἐπὶ τὸ μέταλλον (“encrusted”) as ἐπὶ τὸ μέταλλον (“on a piece”), rendered ἐπὶ τὸ θίθη (“on a . . . stone”). Word division may also serve in part to explain how the relatively simple "from the desert”) in 8.5 might turn into λελευκανθηςμένη (“made white”).

Semantic Adequacy

The Greek translator sometimes had difficulty rendering the particularly large number of hapax legomena and other rare and obscure words in Hebrew Song of Songs. For example, he uses κολωμάτων to translate the obscure hapax legomenon, ἔναρµα (“meaning uncertain”) in 2.17. In 4.1 and 6.5, the root ἱλή ("go up, go down"), found nowhere else, is treated as if it were ἱλή (“to uncover”). In 7.2, he renders the hapax λειάζω (“rhythms, forms”), probably based on the context.

In 7.6, the Greek translator encountered the rare word ἀλαζόνα (“elsewhere, "watering trough"; here, something like “tress”). He takes his cue from Aramaic ʿalazôn (= Heb. יַדְרֵב, “run”) and translates using παράδρομη, a Greek word that usually means something like “a running beside or across, traversal, passage, attendant.” Readers ever after have been left to guess what this isolate translation might mean in this context.

One of the more interesting renderings recurs in the adjuration formula in 2.7; 3.5; 5.8; 8.4. The Hebrew nouns (אָסָס, “female gazelles”; ἡλιοσύνη, “female deer”; ἡμέρα, “field”) resemble divine epithets (אָסָס, “hosts”; ἡλιοσύνη, “gods, goddesses”; ἡμέρα, “Shaddai”) in an invocation of divine beings. The OG rendering, ἐν ταῖς δυνάμεσιν καὶ ἐν ταῖς ἱσχύσεσιν τοῦ ἄγου ("by the powers and by the forces of the field") does little to tone down the implied polytheism.

Another recurring oddity of Greek Song is its translation of οἰκουμένη (“veil”) as σιωπηρίας (“taciturnity”) in 4.1, 3; 6.7. This rendering, which is not easy to understand contextually, seems to be based on misunderstanding the root of this rare noun to be ἀλαζόνα (“to silence”).

Semantic Leveling

Although Greek Song has a strong tendency to use the same Greek word to translate a given Hebrew word, it also occasionally shows a slight tendency to semantic leveling (that is, using the same Greek word to express more than one Hebrew word). Examples include ἐκλεκτὸς for ἀλάζω in 5.15 and for ἀλαζόνα in 6.9, 10, and θομὸς for ἀλαζόνα in 3.8 and for ἀλαζόνα in 6.4, 10.

Transliteration

At several points, we observe the last device of a desperate translator: the transliteration of an otherwise untranslatable term. ἡμέρα (“an obscure hapax legomenon translated “courses” in NRSV) is transliterated as θελιπόθι in 4.4. ἡλιοσύνη (“aloes”) is transliterated ὀλυθ in 4.14. ἱλή (“field”) does little to tone down the implied polytheism. The OG rendering, ἐν ταῖς δυνάμεσιν καὶ ἐν ταῖς ἱσχύσεσιν τοῦ ἄγου (“by the powers and by the forces of the field”) does little to tone down the implied polytheism.

Another recurring oddity of Greek Song is its translation of οἰκουμένη (“veil”) as σιωπηρίας (“taciturnity”) in 4.1, 3; 6.7. This rendering, which is not easy to understand contextually, seems to be based on misunderstanding the root of this rare noun to be ἀλαζόνα (“to silence”).

Idioms

Idioms do not lend themselves easily to interlinear translation. For example, the idiomatic expression "it went" in Song 2.11 becomes ἐπορεύθη ἐαυτῷ ("it went on its own") and "I will go" in 4.6 is rendered πορεύομαι ἐαυτῷ ("I will go on my own"). Unlike the Greek rendering of the similar expression "go!" in Gen 12.1, Greek Song renders these idioms in interlinear mode. A similar idiom occurs in 1.8, where ἰπτ πορεὺς σεαυτόν ("if you do not know yourself"), which creates a misleading resonance with the ancient Greek adage, γνωθί σεαυτόν ("Know yourself").

Relation to Kaige Translations

Greek Song shares some family resemblances with the even more mechanical translational practices of the καίγε group of translations identified by Barthélemy, but it does not exhibit all of the characteristics of the group. Like the καίγε group, Greek Song (in 3.8; 8.11) translates μακρά (with the idiomatic meaning 'each') with the wooden ἄνω ("man"), instead of ἐκατός ("each"), the more usual OG rendering for this meaning. Greek Song uses both καί γέ ("and indeed," 1.16; 8.1) and adverbial πρό ("as well," 1.16; 7.14) as alternate, synonymous translations of both μακρά ("also, even") and καί ("also").

Date

Greek Song may represent a transitional stage on the way to consistent καίγε practice—or it may simply represent a partial acceptance of some of the principles of the καίγε revisers. At any rate, its similarity to the καίγε translators may suggest that it was created at a similar time, somewhere in the first century before or after the turn of the era. Some of the forms of Greek words may also suggest a time of translation after 100 BCE.

THE NETS TRANSLATION OF SONG OF SONGS

General Approach

The purpose of NETS is to represent (to the extent possible) the original meaning of the Greek translation. Most of its ancient and medieval readers, scribes and interpreters found rather different meanings in it, but these are not our concern in the present work.

Our method takes the NRSV to represent the Hebrew text so that differences between NRSV and NETS often correspond to differences between Hebrew and Greek. However, similarities between NRSV and NETS can be misleading, because the NRSV sometimes follows the Greek text instead of the Masoretic Text. For example, the NRSV follows the Greek text at two points where the Masoretic Text contains nothing: namely, the last line of 3.1, and the third line of 8.2. The Masoretic Text contains these lines, not in these points, but in parallel passages (for 3.1 see 5.6; for 8.2 see 3.4).

Differences between NRSV and NETS can also be misleading. Many of the differences between NRSV and NETS result from the fact that the Greek gives a very literal, word-for-word translation and the NRSV gives a more contextual, meaning-for-meaning translation of the same text. I have attempted to preserve some contextual translations of the NRSV, except where the mechanical nature of the Greek would be misrepresented in the process. Because Greek Song is a mechanical and atomistic translation, this NETS translation is often deliberately mechanical and atomistic rather than contextual. As a result, the reader will no doubt find the NETS translation wooden and awkward in comparison to the NRSV. Wondering what a NETS passage means will be similar to the experience a reader would have with Greek Song.

I have often substituted words in the same semantic domain when the NRSV picks up a sense of the Hebrew that the Greek does not necessarily carry, except perhaps by connotation; e.g., NRSV has "make haste" for δραμοῦμεν (NETS "run") in 1.4 and for φυγε (NETS "flee") in 8.14.

For the sake of making literary echoes clearer, I have often provided translations used elsewhere in NETS. For example, in 5.7, I have translated θεριστροφ as "light summer garment," to show a resonance with the same word in Gen 24.65 and 38.14. Within NETS Song, I have been able to give consistent renderings for certain Greek words; for example, ὄρος is consistently translated as "mountain"; καὶ γε as "and indeed"; adverbial πρός as "as well"; and δυνατοί (translating בְּדִיָּן) as "mighty men."

Articles, Simple Conjunctions and Prepositions

In several cases, the presence or absence of articles, simple conjunctions and common prepositions is governed by English usage or by an attempt to follow a contextual translation of the NRSV, rather than an effort to show presence or absence in Greek or to show differences between Hebrew and Greek. A frequent case deserves mention. In Hebrew the first noun of a "construct" (шмиיקה) expression does not have an article; for example, בְּנֵי רָעָה, literally, "song of the songs." Following his Hebrew model, the translator of the OG does not use an article for the first noun, even when good Greek usage would call for an article. The NETS translation retains this article only in cases where the English seems to require it; for example, "the fragrance of your anointing oils" (1.3, 4).

Selected Words and Phrases

Greek Song, because it represents the Hebrew mechanically, often feels awkward or strange. For example, in Song 2.2, οἱ κόρες ("the daughters") is translated literally as τῶν δυνατέων ("the daughters"), but the NRSV translation "maidens" fits the context better. In Song 7.9, the NRSV translates τὸ σῶμα τῷ λουθρῷ contextually and metonymically: "and the scent of your breath." Greek Song translates mechanically: καὶ ὁ σμήν πνεύμον σου ("and your nose's fragrance"). Similarly and even less fittingly, in 7.5(4) where γῆ is likened to a tower, Greek Song translates on μυστήριον ("nostril").

One of the least felicitous renderings in the book occurs in 4.9c, where we read: ἐν μιᾷ, ἐνθέματι προσάχηλων σου. This line is a mechanically atomistic translation of Hebrew, at the sacrifice of a translation that easily makes sense in Greek. First, the feminine μιᾷ ("one") leaves the reader to wonder what feminine Greek substantive might be implied—certainly not the neuter ἐνθέματι. Then, the use of the word ἐνθέματι ("thing put in or on," often understood by early exegetes either contextually as "ornament" or allegorically as "yoke") is no easier to understand. Finally, the Greek translates πατραδέλφοι (a hapax legomenon, apparently meaning "necklaces") as if it were πατραδέλφοι ("father's brother"). NETS renders the line atomistically ("in one, with an emplacement of your necks") and with a footnote suggests one of several ways in which an ancient reader might have made sense of it in context.

The Greek word ληβάνος translates both πατραδέλφοι ("frankincense") and λίβανο ("Lebanon"). Until modern editors began capitalizing ληβάνος when it is a proper noun, no reader of Greek could have distinguished between the meanings "frankincense" and "Lebanon" except by context. NETS Song translates as the OG translator would have understood the Hebrew, but Greek readers could well be uncertain. For example, in 4.14, ξύλων τοῦ ληβάνου could be understood either as "trees of Lebanon" (as in Rahlfs) or as "woods of frankincense" (as in Hebrew).

Two Terms of Endearment

In the Hebrew text, the female lover is frequently addressed as נְבֵין ("my companion, my friend, my fellow," translated by the NRSV as "my love"). The Old Greek translates ναβίν fairly literally as η πλείστῳ μου ("the one near me, my neighbor, my companion"), and our NETS translation of Greek Song consistently renders this term into English as "my mate."17

In the Hebrew, the male lover is frequently addressed as נְנֵיו (translated by the NRSV as "my beloved"). The term ננֵי can be used either as a term of endearment (like "sweetheart" or "true love") or to denote a family relationship (such as "father's brother" as in 1 Sam. 10.14). Greek Song translates the term with ἀδελφός ("little brother").18 I have found no evidence that ἀδελφός was used outside Greek Song (and later commentary on it); it appears that our OG translator coined this diminutive form of ἀδελφός ("brother"). Its use in 5.9 and in 8.1, where it translates πάτρα ("brother"), shows that Greek Song is using this diminutive as a term of endearment. Its use may suggest that the translator was a woman. Because ἀδελφός must have sounded unusual in Greek ears, the NETS translation consistently renders it with a formal equivalent that sounds unusual in English: "brotherkin."

16 The translator's Hebrew text apparently varies slightly from the Masoretic Text, even in its qere reading.
17 The translation "mate" is also used for πλείστῳ in 5.1 and for the male πλείστῳ μου in 5.16.
18 Judges 10.1 (A and B); 2 Rgns 23.9, 24, and 1 Suppl (1 Chr) 27.32 use πατραδέλφος "father's brother" to translate dwd. In Song, Aquila uses πατραδέλφος μου, Symmachus uses ὁ ἀγαπητός μου ("my beloved"), and Quinta uses ὁ ἐταῖρος μου ("my companion").
Adjectives

Hebrew does not have a separate form for adjectives in the comparative and superlative degrees. Greek Song consistently puts adjectives in the unmarked, positive form, even when the context clearly calls for a comparative or superlative form. In 1.2, for example, מִיתָנָה יִבְרָאָל (“better than wine”) is translated ἀγαθόν ὑπὲρ τούτον (“good beyond wine”). Again, in 1.8, ἡ γυναῖκα τῶν ἁλίκων (“O fairest among women”) becomes ἡ καλὴ ἐν γυναιξίν (“O fair one among women”). The NRSV translates the adjective contextually. NETS preserves some of the awkwardness of the Greek.

Tense and Mood

The Greek translator usually renders Hebrew verbs in the imperfect tense by Greek verbs in the future tense and renders the Hebrew perfect tense by the imperfect or aorist in Greek. I have used the English present perfect for past tenses that seem contextually to apply to the present or very recent past; e.g., ἐργίσασθαι for ἔργαθη in 2.7; 3.5; 5.8.

The Greek translator’s stereotyped rendition of tenses becomes particularly awkward when future tenses are used, as in 7.9; 8.1–3, to express a wish or an unreal condition that we would normally expect a subjunctive or an imperfect to convey. In some of these cases, I have bowed to context and used modals such as “would” in the NETS translation rather than violate common English usage.

Gender and Number

In the Song of Songs, gender-neutral language can confuse the reader. Because Song of Songs is largely composed of dialogues between male and female lovers and their companions, the language is often necessarily gender-specific. The Hebrew text often depends on gender-specific and number-specific verbal cues to signal when speakers change; for example, when a woman addressing a man stops speaking and the man replies to the woman. There are fewer of these cues in Greek and even fewer in English. This can make it difficult to follow dialogue. Greek readers soon solved this problem by adding rubrics to many of their manuscripts of Song of Songs; the rubrics clarified who was speaking to whom at various points in the text. Without a similar aid for the reader in English, it is sometimes difficult to tell who is speaking to whom or even whether an addressee (“you”) is singular or plural.

In most instances, of course, there is no difference between the Hebrew and Greek on matters of gender or number. In 8.13, however, the addressee is female in the Masoretic Text and male in the Old Greek.

Editorial Detail

This translation follows the versification used in Rahlfs, which is almost identical to that in the Masoretic Text. Where NRSV verse numbers differ, they appear in parentheses.

Old Greek manuscripts appear to show a tradition of breaking lines according to sense. This NETS translation attempts to preserve these ancient sense-breaks, which occasionally differ from those of the NRSV. In addition, blank space separates both new sections and new speakers.

Bibliographical Note

Especially at difficult points, I have consulted several translations of the Greek text, including especially the Old Latin translations (in Donatien De Bruyne, "Les Anciennes versions latines du Cantique des cantiques," Revue Bénédictine 38 [1926] 97–122) and the English translations of Thomson and Brenton. At numerous points, Albert Pietersma’s insightful consultation and expertise in the theory and practice of translating OG texts improved this translation substantially.

Song of Songs, which is Salomon’s.

Let him kiss me from his mouth’s kisses!
For your breasts are good beyond wine, and the fragrance of your anointing oils
beyond any spice.
Your name is perfume poured out;
therefore maidens loved you,
drew you.
We shall run after you into the fragrance of your anointing oils.
The king has brought me into his chamber.
Let us exult and rejoice in you;
we will love your breasts beyond wine.
Uprightness has loved you.

I am black and beautiful,
O daughters of Jerusalem,
like covert of Kedar,
like Salomon’s skins.

Do not look at me, because I am darkened, because the sun has looked down on
me.
My mother’s sons fought with me;
they made me a keeper in vineyards.
My own vineyard I have not kept!

Tell me, you whom my soul loved,
where you pasture your flock,
where you lie down at noon,
lest I become like one who wraps herself up by your companions’ flocks.

If you do not know yourself,
O fair one among women,
go forth in tracks of the flocks,
and pasture your kids
by the shepherds’ coverts.

I have compared you, my mate,
to my mare among Pharaoh’s chariots.
How beautiful your cheeks have become,
like turtle-doves,
your neck like necklaces.
We will make you images of gold,
with points of silver.

While the king was on his couch,
my nard gave forth its fragrance.
My brotherkin is to me a bag of myrrh;
he shall spend the night between my breasts.
My brotherkin is to me a cluster of henna
in vineyards of En-gaddi.
Look, you are beautiful, my mate;
look, you are beautiful;
your eyes are doves.
Look, you are beautiful, my brotherkin,
and indeed lovely.
As well, our couch is shaded;
our houses’ beams are cedars;
our coffered panels are cypresses.

I am a flower of the plain,
a lily of the valleys.

As a lily among brambles,
so is my mate among the daughters.
As an apple tree among the trees of the wood,
so is my brotherkin among the sons.
I yearned and sat in his shadow,
and his fruit was sweet in my throat.

Bring me into a house of wine;
array love over me.
Support me with raisin-cakes;
bolster me with apples,
for I am wounded with love.
His left hand will be under my head,
and his right will embrace me.
I have adjured you, O daughters of Jerusalem, by the powers and by the forces of the field that you do not stir up or awaken love until it wish!

My brotherkin’s voice!
Look, he has come,
leaping upon the mountains,
bounding over the hills.
My brotherkin is like the gazelle or a fawn of stags on the mountains of Baithel.
Look, here he stands behind our wall,
peering through the windows,
peeping through the lattices.
My brotherkin responds and says to me:
"Arise, come, my mate,
my fair one, my dove;
for look, the winter is past;
the rain has left; it went on its own.
The flowers have appeared on the earth;
pruning time has come;
the turtledove’s voice
has been heard in our land.
The fig tree has put forth its figs;
the vines are in blossom;
they have given forth fragrance.
Arise, come, my mate,
my fair one, my dove.
And come, my dove, in the rock’s shelter near the outer wall.
Show me your face;
let me hear your voice,
for your voice is sweet,
and your face is lovely."
Catch us foxes,
little ones that ruin vineyards—
and our vines are in blossom!

Or Until
I.e. array love (as a signal) over me; or array love (as an army) against me
My brotherkin is mine, and I am his, who pastures his flock among the lilies.

Until the day breathes and the shadows stir, turn, my brotherkin; be like the gazelle or a fawn of stags on mountains with glens.

Upon my bed at night I sought him whom my soul loved; I sought him but found him not; I called him, but he answered me not.

“I will rise now and go about in the city, in the market-places and in the streets, and I will seek him whom my soul loved.”

I sought him but found him not.

The sentinels who go about in the city found me. “Have you not seen him whom my soul loved?”

Scarcely had I passed from them until I found him whom my soul loved.

I took hold of him and would not let him go until I brought him into my mother’s house and into a chamber of her who conceived me.

I have adjured you, O daughters of Jerusalem, by the powers and by the forces of the field, that you do not stir up or awaken love until it wish!

Who is this coming up from the wilderness, like columns of smoke, perfumed with myrrh and frankincense, of all the perfumer’s powders?

Look, it is the couch of Solomon! Around it are sixty mighty men of Israel’s mighty men, all holding a sword and expert in war—a man, his sword at his thigh because of terror by night.

King Solomon made himself a palanquin from Lebanon’s trees.

He made its posts silver, its back gold, its step purple; its interior was inlaid with stone, love from Jerusalem’s daughters.

Come out, and look at King Solomon, at the crown with which his mother crowned him on the day of his wedding and on the day of his heart’s gladness.

Look, you are beautiful, my mate; look, you are beautiful!

Your eyes are doves—apart from your taciturnity.

Your teeth are like flocks of shorn ewes that have come up from the washing, all of which are bearing twins, and not one among them is barren.

Your lips are like a scarlet thread, and your speech is lovely.

Your cheek is like a rind of pomegranate, apart from your taciturnity.

Your neck is like David’s tower, built into thalpioth; on it hang a thousand shields, all the mighty men’s javelins.

Your two breasts are like two fawns, twins of a gazelle, that feed among the lilies.

Until the day breathes and the shadows stir, I will go on my own to the mountain of myrrh and to the hill of frankincense.

You are altogether beautiful, my mate; there is no flaw in you.

Come here from Lebanon, O bride; come here from Lebanon. You shall come and pass through from the beginning of Faithfulness, from the head of Sanir and Hermon, from lions’ dens, from leopards’ mountains.

You heartened us, O my sister bride; you heartened us with one from your eyes, in one, with an emplacement of your necks.

How beautiful your breasts have become, my sister bride! How beautiful your breasts have become, above wine, and your garments’ fragrance, beyond all spices!

Your lips distill honeycomb, O bride; honey and milk are under your tongue, and your garments’ fragrance is like Lebanon’s fragrance.

A garden locked is my sister bride, a garden locked, a fountain sealed.

Your scents are an orchard of pomegranates with fruit of fruit-trees, henna with nard, nard and saffron, calamus and cinnamon.

The NETS translation of Iob is based on the critical edition prepared by Joseph Ziegler (Septuaginta: Vetus Testamentum Graecum Auctoritate Academiae Scientiarum Gottingensis editum XI.4: Iob [Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1982]). There are a few divergences from this edition, following suggestions made by A. Pietersma in his review of Iob and by P. Gentry in "Proposed Corrections to the Lemma of Ziegler's Edition," Appendix D in his The Asterisked Materials in the Greek Job. Departures from Ziegler are signaled in textual notes except for four of Gentry's five corrections to the presentation of the Origenian asterisk tradition (2.1d, 13a; 9.3b; 12.21b—27.19a is retained as Old Greek in NETS).

Translation Profile of the Greek

General Character

Though the Hebrew text of Iob has, for the most part, been composed in poetry, it includes three sections in prose as well, namely, 1.1–2.13; 32.1–5 and 42.7–17. In the Greek, the entire book is in prose, even though arranged stichometrically, in the manuscript tradition. Ziegler reflects the Greek manuscripts, but NETS follows the NRSV, except when the Greek text demands otherwise.

The Old Greek (OG) Iob is a work of good literary quality. Absent are the usual "Hebraisms" that are the tell-tale signs of translation Greek in much of the Septuagint corpus. For example, at 1.5 we find the common construction "and it happened" in the Hebrew text. This is commonly translated in the LXX by καὶ ἐγένετο "and it came to pass." Most modern English translations disregard this Hebraism, as does the NRSV. The OG translator is not satisfied with it either, choosing to begin the sentence with καὶ "And when." Similarly, in the previous verse, 1.4, the Hebrew conjunction (usually "and") + verb . . . + verb . . . + verb is rendered by participle + deì ("and") . . . verb . . . participle—the last two Hebrew verbs folded into a single participle. The participial constructions represent standard Greek style. The NRSV translation of v. 4 is "[And] his sons used to go and hold feasts . . . and they would send and invite"; that of NETS is "Now his sons used to gather . . ., and hold a feast . . . they used to take along their three sisters." Many other examples could be cited, but the point is that OG Iob stands as a clear foil to the interlinear paradigm of translation.

A cursory overview of the OG text of Iob reveals that it is substantially shorter than the MT, the form of the Hebrew text which appears to have been its parent text. This abbreviation increases as one reads through the book. Gray calculated that the proportion of omissions grows as follows: 4% until chapter 15; 16% of chapters 15–21; 25% of chapters 22–31; 35% of chapters 32–37; 16% of chapters 38–42 (Ixxv; repeated in Dhorme, ccii–cciii). The shorter Greek text seems to be rooted in at least two characteristics of the Hebrew text. First, the meaning of the Hebrew is sometimes obscure; second, the argumentation in the book is repetitious. A third consideration may have made abbreviation acceptable: Iob may not have carried the same authority as other books of the Hebrew Scriptures. Abbreviation also extends to the "micro-level" where it can involve the reduction of two lines to one—something we might call paraphrasing.

It has sometimes been suggested that Greek Iob is based upon an equally shorter Hebrew parent text. However, on the basis of what we can establish about the translator’s technique, i.e., his rather free, even paraphrastic approach, it seems more likely that the shorter text is to be attributed to the time of translation.

The usual categories of characterizing a translation fail us when we assess Iob. It is not just free or paraphrastic, it is also something of an epitome of the longer and often difficult original. OG Iob is one of a kind in the Septuagint corpus. We can typify it as among the least literal, both in its attitude toward abbreviating the parent text and in the way the translator worked with that portion of the text for which we have a translation.

While the text as a whole reveals conscious shortening, there are various additions made along the way. The major ones are: the diatribe of Iob's wife in 2.9a–d—though this may be a later addition.
Another general characteristic of the translation consists of transferring passages from elsewhere in Job or from other parts of the Septuagint into the translation. This practice was detected by Dhorme and Ziegler and has been the subject of a study by Heather, who calls it “the anaphoric translation technique.” For example, 4.21a = 40.24b; 22.2 = 21.22a; 33.1a = 34.15b; “[W]hence too he was formed” is a gloss that derives from Gen 3.19; 36.5a = 8.20a.

Finally, the translator’s use of particles of all kinds should be noted. As Kitto says, “Greek is well stocked with little words, conjunctions that hunt in couples or in packs, whose sole function is to make the structure clear. They act, as it were, as signposts” (27). This seems to be the translator’s intent in Job, i.e., to give the rather loosely linked Hebrew text a connectedness. So the translation is heavily salted with particles: “and, “but,” “now,” “because,” “for,” “really?,” “on the one hand . . . on the other,” “however,” “therefore,” “rather,” “again,” “or” and others. None of these is more striking than the multi-particle oun de ὁλλο “but; nonetheless; to the contrary” (2.5a; 5.8a; 12.6a; 13.3a; 17.10a; 21.17a; 27.7a; 33.1a; 34.36a). The interest in structure seems evident, for example, in chapter 9 where γερ—commonly “for”—is added eighteen times: vv. 2b, 3a, 4a, 13a, 15a, 18a, 19a, 20a, 21a, 24a, 27a, 28b, 30a, in addition to its use as translation at vv. 32a, 35b, or at 22.5b–9 where each line begins with δὲ “and; but,” ὀν δὲ “but not; nor” (7a) or ὁλλὸ “but” (7b) to form a list and to add connectors to the Hebrew for vv. 7a and 9a. In short, unlike most other Septuagintal translators, Job uses particles more in accord with standard Greek discourse.

Specific Comments on the Old Greek Translation

We must imagine the Hebrew text in front of the translator. It was an unvocalized text—that is, it had only the consonants and there may have been no divisions between the words (on this issue: Tov, 117–121); there was no versification. The lack of vowel markings permitted the text to be vocalized, and therefore understood, in more than one way sometimes—though there was doubtless a tradition of vocalization. A different vocalization helps to explain some instances where the English translation of the Greek appears to be rather different from the NRSV. For example, at 24.18b ἥξυ was vocalized not as ἥξυ (not) but as ἥξυ (Let”).

The translator was responsible for dividing the text into small segments according to sense. Sometimes this results in a somewhat different division than is reflected in the MT. For example, the words “with you” at 36.4b have been taken with v. 5 (paraphrased as “But know that”—so Dhorme).

Some letters of the Hebrew alphabet are easily confused in the manuscript tradition, and Greek Job reflects this. Indeed, it might even be that the translator, aware of these confusions, bore them in mind as he tried out various possibilities for producing a translation. Numerous examples can be cited. First, in Hebrew manuscripts the ꝕ (daleth) and ꝙ (resh) can be confused because they look alike. For example, we find ꝕ read as ꝕ at 21.22b (so “murders” instead of “those that are on high”); 40.11a (“messengers” instead of “overflowings”); ꝕ read as ꝕ at 41.14b (NRSV 22b) (“runs” instead of “dances”). Second, the consonants y (yod) and ꝕ (waw) can be confused: so we find y for ꝕ (twice) at 26.13a (“bars of” instead of “By his wind”). Third, Ꝛ (sin) and Ꝛ (shin) share the same consonant: so Ꝛ appears to have been read instead of Ꝛ at 41.22a (NRSV 30) (“sharp” rather than “potsherds”).

Sometimes the translator re-orders the Hebrew consonants for example, ἠπείρω for ἀπείρω (19.20a—where ꝕ is also read for ꝕ, therefore “rotted” instead of “cling”); possibly ἑβαλεῖν for ἑβαλεῖ (39.4a[Greek 3a], “did you rear” rather than “become strong”); ἔδωκα for ἔδωκε (21.10b, “falter” instead of “miscarries”); μισθὸς (41.1b[NRSV 9b], “what is said” instead of “the sight of it”). Indeed, the translator sometimes changes consonants: for example, ἔγραφον for ἔγραψε (32.13b, “[we] contributed it” instead of “[God] may vanquish him”); iiτὶ for γιὺς (41.26b[NRSV 34b], “that are in the waters” instead of “that are proud”); ἔρευνα for ἔρευνσι (22.23a, “[you] humble yourself” rather than “you will be restored”). It seems that these changes result from a particular approach to the Hebrew text, one that goes to considerable lengths to make a certain sense of it, even to the extent of changing and rearranging letters of words to do so.

An awareness of these aspects of the translator’s work helps one to understand why an English translation of the OG looks quite different from a translation of the Hebrew text.

The Ecclesiastical Text

OG Job is about one-sixth shorter than the MT. That shorter text, without the fragments of Theodotion, is attested only in the Sahidic version and some Old Latin quotations. Except for these witnesses the entire textual tradition has been accommodated to the work of the third century CE text critic Origen in his massive project we call “the Hexapla.”

The designation “Hexapla” is given to a presumed six-columned book—only fragments are extant—in which Origen compared the Septuagint and several other translations with the traditional Hebrew text of his day. From the left, the six columns were: the Hebrew, the Hebrew in Greek transliteration, Aquila’s translation, Symmachus’ translation, the Septuagint, and Theodotion’s translation. The texts were reproduced word-by-word or phrase-by-phrase down the page and, by following the columns across, one could compare the texts at a glance. Origen’s primary interest was in the first and fifth columns, that is, the Hebrew and the Septuagint.

Now the Septuagint is not always of the same length as the Hebrew, and in the book of Job that is dramatically the case. Where the OG is longer than the Hebrew, Origen marked what makes it longer with an obelus (†) in front and a metobelus (‡) at the end; where the OG was shorter than the Hebrew, he added to it, typically from Theodotion, in order to make it the same length as the Hebrew and marked it with an asterisk (*) and a metobelus. (The translation we designate “Theodotion” is associated with the name of a translator or reviser who lived at the end of the second century CE. It is a literal translation and even includes some transliterations, as at Job 37.12; 39.13.)

The consequences of Origen’s work on Job are chiefly two: first, two entirely different translations are now intermingled; second, since the OG translator sometimes uses only one line to render two lines of Hebrew, the “ecclesiastical” text produces a translation where some lines of the Hebrew are represented twice, once in the OG and again in Theodotion. For example, the OG translator omitted 18.9a and translated only 18.9b, but Origen’s mechanical approach led him to add 18.9b from Theodotion. This means that 18.9b has two renderings in the ecclesiastical text, though 18.9a is not represented at all. Similarly, 23.14 was not part of the OG, but what Origen added from Theodotion is v. 15. As a result, v. 15 appears twice in the ecclesiastical text, in the OG as v. 15ab and from Theodotion under the asterisk as v. 15cd. There is no translation of v. 14.

Both Rahlfs’ provisional edition (1935) and Ziegler’s critical edition reproduce the text that Origen conflated, and the two translations are punctuated as if they were one translation. The NETS translation follows the OG text but, as an aid to readers, includes Theodotion, inserted into the appropriate places but not integrated. Not only have the intrusive fragments of text been duly marked, they also lack initial uppercase, as well as closing punctuation. The English translation of Theodotion’s work seeks to be more “literal” than that of OG Job, reflecting the nature of its parent text.

The NETS Translation of Job

The Hebrew text of Job presents such a level of difficulty in translation that those who work on it have often made recourse to the OG translation. This is reflected in the notes that accompany translations into English, including the NRSV. Therefore, readers of NETS Job will find occasional points of contact between the NRSV and NETS that are due to the NRSV adopting an understanding of the Hebrew that is dependent upon the OG.

The NETS translation of Job aspires to the same economy of expression that is true of the NRSV, which makes the translator’s interest in “connector words” all the more apparent.

Readers of NETS will often note a difference in the tense of verbs from what is found in the NRSV. Usually this has resulted from the rendering of the Hebrew prefixed conjugation into Greek by an aorist (“simple past”) tense. It appears that the translator understood these prefixed forms as preterites, i.e., as expressions of the simple past. Normally the aorist tense in NETS Job is rendered by an English simple past, though at times a present perfect is used when the context seems to require it.

Gender Specific Language in NETS Job

The NRSV usually accomplishes gender inclusivity by rendering masculine singular forms as plurals. The NETS Job differs from the NRSV in this respect, for the following reason. The change the NRSV incorporates is most noticeable in passages that involve either “the life of a mortal” (e.g., 10.4–5; 14.5–6) or groups of people, usually the impious or wicked (the most extensive passage is 15.20–35). In the NRSV these all become plural for the sake of inclusivity. But in the former case, involving “the life of a mortal,” the remarks, on Job’s lips, have “a person like me” sense and on his opponents’ “a person like you” sense, and the edge is taken away if one uses the plural. The same holds true for passages about the impious or wicked. Here the opponents and Job argue back and forth. The fact that the opponents speak of the wicked in the singular might lead one to think that they do not have “the wicked” in general in view, but Job; the same holds true when Job responds using the singular: he has his immediate oppo-
There was a certain man in the land of Ausitis, whose name was Iob, and that man was genuine, blameless, righteous, religious, staying away from every evil thing. Now there were born to him seven sons and three daughters. And his livestock was: seven thousand sheep, three thousand camels, five hundred yoke of oxen, five hundred she-donkeys at pasture; as well he had very many servants and extensive activities in the land, and that man was well-born among those of the east. His sons used to gather with one another and hold a feast each day; they used to take along their three sisters as well, to eat and drink with them. And when the feast days had run their course, Iob used to send and purify them, rising early in the morning, and he used to offer a sacrifice on their behalf, according to their number, and one bull calf as a sin offering for their souls—for Iob said, "Perhaps my sons thought bad things in their mind toward God." So this is what Iob would always do.

And when the set day came, then, look, the angels of God came to present themselves before the Lord, and the slanderer came with them. And the Lord said to the slanderer, "Where have you come from?" And the slanderer answered the Lord, "I have come, after going round the earth and walking about what lies beneath heaven." And the Lord said to him, "Did you give thought to my servant Iob—because there is no one of those on the earth like him, a man who is blameless, genuine, religious, staying away from every evil thing?"

Finally, it has been an experience full of insights to have had Albert Pietersma work closely with me on revising my translation of OG Iob for publication. The resulting translation is vastly improved and our extended conversation always stimulated my thinking about OG Iob, in connection with both its text and its message.

what is within his household as well as what is outside of all that belongs to him, all around? You blessed the works of his hands, and his livestock you increased on the earth. 11But stretch out your hand, and touch all that he has; surely he will bless you to your face! 12Then the Lord said to the slanderer, “Look, all that he has I am giving into your power, but do not touch him.” So the slanderer went out from the Lord.

13So it was, when it was the set day, Iob’s sons and daughters were drinking wine in their eldest brother’s house. 14And, look, a messenger came to Iob and said to him, “The yokes of oxen were plowing, and the she-donkeys were feeding beside them, 15and marauders came and carried them off, and they killed the servants with daggers, but when I alone escaped, I came to tell you.” 16While he was still speaking, a further messenger came and said to Iob, “Horsemen formed three columns against us, and they encircled the camels and carried them off and killed the servants with daggers, but I alone escaped, and I came to tell you.” 17While he was still speaking, a further messenger came and said to Iob, “Fire fell from heaven and burned up the sheep, and it likewise consumed the shepherds, and when I alone escaped, I came to tell you.” 18While he was still speaking, another messenger came, saying to Iob, “As your sons and daughters were eating and drinking at their elder brother’s, 19suddenly a great wind came from the wilderness and struck the four corners of the house, and the house fell on your children, and they died, but I alone escaped, and I came to tell you.”

2Now it happened, when it was the set day and the angels of God came to present themselves before the Lord, the slanderer also came among them. [1*to present himself before the Lord][2] 2And the Lord said to the slanderer, “Where are you coming from?” Then the slanderer said before the Lord, “I have come, after traversing what lies beneath heaven and walking about everything.” 3Then the Lord said, “So did you notice my attendant Iob—that there is no one of those on the earth like him, an innocent, genuine, blameless, religious man, staying away from all wrong? And he still maintains his innocence, though you said to destroy his possessions for no reason.” 4Then the slanderer continued and said to the Lord, “Skin for skin; whatever a person has he will use to pay for his life. 5However, stretch out your hand, and touch his bones and his flesh; surely he will bless you to your face!” 6Then the Lord said to the slanderer, “Very well, I am handing him over to you; only spare his life.”

9Then after a long time had passed, his wife said to him, “How long will you persist and say, 9a‘Look, I will hang on a little longer, while I wait for the hope of my deliverance?’ 9bFor look, your legacy has vanished from the earth—sons and daughters, my womb’s birth pangs and labors, for whom I wore myself with hardships in vain. 9cAnd you? You sit in the refuse of worms as you spend the night in the open air. 9dAs for me, I am one that wanders about and a hired servant—from place to place and house to house, waiting for when the sun will set, so I can rest from the distresses and griefs that now beset me. 9eNow say some word to the Lord and die!” 10But Iob looked up and said to her, “You have spoken like one of the foolish women. If we received the good things from the Lord’s hand, shall we not bear the bad?” In all these things that happened to him Iob did not sin at all with his lips before God.

11Now when his three friends heard of all the troubles that had come upon him, they came to him, each one from his own country—Eliphaz the Tenaimite, 11bBaldad, the tyrant of the Thaimanites, 11cBaldad the son of Tahan, the king of the Thaimanites, Baldad, the tyrant of the Taanachites, Sophar, the king of the Minites. And they came to him of one accord, to comfort and to visit with him. 12But when they saw him from a distance, they did not recognize him, and they cried out with a loud voice and wept; each of them tore his robe, and they sprinkled themselves with dust. 13They sat with him seven days, [13*and seven nights][2] and none of them spoke, for they saw that the calamity was dire and very great.

3After this Iob opened his mouth and cursed his day, 2saying:

3“My day perish in which I was born, and the night in which they said, ‘Look, a man-child!’

4May that day be darkness!
And may the Lord above not seek it, or light come to it.

5But may darkness and deathly shadow seize it.
May gloom come upon it.

6May that day and night be cursed; may darkness carry it away!
May it not exist among the days of the year or be numbered among the days of the months.

7Rather, may that night be anguish, and may gladness and joy not come upon it.

8 Rather, may he who curses that day curse it—he who is about to subdue the great sea-monster.
9 May the stars of that night be dark;
    may it remain so and not be lit up,
    and may it not see the morning-star rising—10 because it did not shut the gates of my mother’s womb,
    for it would have put away trouble from my eyes.

“For what reason did I not die in the womb or come forth from the belly and not perish at once?
Why then did knees meet me?
Why then did I suck breasts?
Now I would have lain down quiet and in sleep would have been at rest, with kings, counselors of the earth,
who used to act proudly thanks to rapiers, or with rulers, who had much gold,
who had filled their houses with silver.
Or why was I not like a premature birth that comes from a mother’s womb or like infants that did not see the light?
There the impious have kindled a terrible wrath;
there the very weary have found rest for
the body,
and those of old, together,
have not heard the voice of the tax-gatherer.
Small and great are there,
and the attendant who lived in fear of his master.

"Why then is light given to those in bitterness,
and life to souls in pain,
who long for death and do not find it, though they are digging for it as for treasures?
Yet they would be very joyful,
if they were successful.
Death is rest for such a man,
for God shut him in.
For sighing comes before my food,
and I cry, gripped by fear.
For fear—which was my worry—came to
me,
and the fear I dreaded befell me.
I was neither at peace, nor did I have quiet,
nor was I at rest, but anger came to me.”

Now Eliphaz the Thaimanite said in reply,

Have you often been addressed when in distress?
But who can endure the force of your words?
So what, if you instructed many and encouraged the hands of the weak one,

lifted up the weak with your words and wrapped feeble knees in courage—but now distress has come upon you and touched you, and you acted in haste.
Is your fear not based on a lack of sense, so too your hope and the innocence of your way?

“Think now, who, being pure, perished,
or when did the true perish root and all?
For instance, I saw those who plow wrongs, and those who sow them reap torments for themselves.
By the command of the Lord they will perish,
and by the breath of his anger they will disappear.
The strength of the lion and the voice of the lioness and the pride of dragons was extinguished;
the ant lion perished for lack of food,
and lions’ whelps abandoned one another.
But if there had been anything truthful in your words,
nothing bad in them would have met
you.

"Will my ear not receive remarkable things
from him?
Now there was awe and a ringing sound in the night—
an awe falling on mortals;
then shuddering fell upon me, and a trembling,
and my bones shook mightily.
And a spirit came upon my face,
and my hair and flesh quivered.
I stood up,
and I did not recognize it.
I looked, and there was no shape before my eyes,
though I heard a breeze and a voice:
‘What? Can a mortal be pure before the Lord,
or a man be blameless in his actions?’
Whether he believes charges against his servants, ewho knowse, but he took note of any crookedness in his angels.
But as for those that inhabit houses of clay—
being their offspring, we ourselves too are of the same clay—
he struck them like a moth!
And so between morning and evening they ceased to exist;
they perished, because they were not able to help themselves.

That is, he breathed on them, and they withered; they perished, because they did not possess wisdom.

"But call, if anyone will respond to you or if you will see any of the holy angels. To be sure, anger kills the fool, and jealousy slays the one misled.

Now, I have seen fools taking root, but at once their way of living was devoured.

May their children be far from safety, and may they be derided at the doors of their inferiors, and there will be no one to deliver them.

For what they gathered, the upright shall eat, and they will not be excepted from harmful things; may their strength be drained.

For hardship shall not come from the earth, nor will trouble sprout from mountains, but a human being is born to hardship, whereas the vulture’s young soar on high.

"Nonetheless, I will entreat the Lord, and I will call on the Lord, the master of all, who does great and inscrutable things, things both glorious and extraordinary, without number, who gives rain on the earth, sending water on what is under heaven, who sets on high those that are lowly and lifts up those that are in ruin, frustrating the schemes of the crafty— and their hands shall not produce what is genuine, he who takes the wise in their cleverness— and he subverted the scheming of the wily.

Darkness will meet them in the daytime, and may they grope at noonday as in the night.

And may they perish in war, and may the powerless escape from the hand of the mighty.

So may the powerless have hope, but the mouth of the unjust be shut.

"But happy is the one whom the Lord reproved, and do not reject the admonition of the Almighty, for he makes one suffer and restores again; he struck, and his hands healed.

Six times he will deliver you from troubles, and the seventh time no harm shall touch you.

In famine he will rescue you from death, and in war he will free you from a blade's power.

He shall hide you from the scourge of the tongue, and you shall not fear harmful things that come.

At the unjust and lawless you shall laugh, and you shall not fear wild animals—for wild animals shall be at peace with you.

Next, you shall know that your household will be at peace, and the livelihood of your tent shall not fall short.

And you shall know that your descendants will be many, and your offspring shall be as the grass of the field.

And you shall come to your grave like ripe grain, harvested at the right time, or as a heap on the threshing floor, gathered in its season.

Look, these things we traced to be so. These are the things we have heard, but do know for yourself whether you have done anything."

Now Iob said in reply:

"If someone really sets about to weigh what angers me and to put my sorrows together in a balance, then indeed they will be heavier than the sand of the seashore, but as it seems, my words are careless.

For the arrows of the Lord are in my body; their wrath drinks my blood; when I begin to speak, they pierce me.

Why, will the wild ass bray for no reason? Is it not rather looking for grain? Yes, and will an ox break into lowing at its manger when it has food?

Can bread be eaten without salt? And is there any taste in empty words?

So my life cannot cease, for I loathe my food like the smell of a lion.

"O that he were willing, and my request proceed, and the Lord would grant my hope.

Let the Lord begin by wounding me, but let him not kill me outright.

And may my city, whose walls I used to leap upon, be my grave— I will not spare myself, for I did not belie the holy words of my God.

For what is my strength, that I endure, or what is my lifespan, that my life sustains itself?"
12 Is my strength the strength of stones, or is my flesh bronze?
13 In truth, did I not trust in him? But help is far from me.
14 “Mercy has renounced me, and the visitation of the Lord has disregarded me.
15 My nearest kin did not look at me; like a wadi running dry or like a wave they passed by me.
16 Those who held me in respect have now fallen on me like snow or like solid ice.
17 Just as, melted, with heat coming on, it was not recognized for what it was, so I too was abandoned by all, and I perished and became homeless.
18 Look at the roads of the Thaimanites, the paths of the Sabeans, you who see so clearly.
19 They also will incur shame, who put their confidence in cities and wealth.
20 But yet you too trod on me without mercy; so now that you have seen my hurt, be afraid.
21 What? Did I ask anything of you? Or, am I in need of your strength to save me from enemies or to rescue me from the hand of the powerful?
22 “Teach me, and I will shut up; if I have gone wrong in any way, show me. Rather, it seems that the words of one who is genuine are careless, so I do not seek strength from you.
23 Not even your reproof with words will make me stop, nor indeed will I endure the sound of what you say.
24 Fact is, you fall on an orphan and jump on your friend.
25 “But now that I have looked into your faces I will not lie. Do sit down, and may no wrong be done, and gather again with him who is just.
26 For there is nothing at all unjust on my tongue—or does my throat not endeavor understanding?
27 "Is not the life of a human being on earth a trial, and is not his life like that of a day-laborer? Or like an attendant who fears his master and finds shadow, or like a wage-earner waiting for his wages?
28 I too spent empty months in this way, and nights of pain have been apportioned to me.
29 If I lie down, I say, ‘When will it be day?’ But when I get up, again I say, ‘When will it be evening?’ And I am full of pain from evening until morning.
30 As well, my body is defiled with the rot of worms, and I dissolve, scraping away lumps of dirt with the pus.
31 Again, my life is lighter than talk, and it has perished in an empty hope.
32 "Remember then that my life is a breath, and my eye will never come to see good again—
33 the eye of one who beholds me will not look around for me;
34 your eyes are upon me, and I am no more like a cloud, cleared from the sky. For if a mortal goes down to Hades, he does not come up again, and he shall never return to his house, nor does his place know him any more.
35 “That said, however, I will not be sparing with my mouth; I will speak, though I am in anguish; I will open up the bitterness of my soul, though I am in dire straits.
36 Am I Sea or Dragon, that you placed a guard over me? I said, ‘My couch will comfort me,’ and ‘I will have a word with myself privately on my bed.’
37 You scare me with dreams and terrify me with visions. You will release my soul from my spirit and my bones from death.
38 For I will not live forever, or I would be patient. Let me alone, for my life is empty.
39 What then is a human being, that you made so much of him or that you turn your attention to him, or will visit him until the morning and scrutinize him until he goes to rest?
40 How long are you going to restrict me and not let go of me, until I swallow my spittle in pain?
41 If I did sin, what can I do to you, you knower of the mind of humans? Why did you make me your accuser, and why am I a burden on you?
42 Why did you not assign my lawlessness to oblivion and my sin to purging? But now I shall depart to the ground, and early in the morning I shall be no more.”
43 Now Baldad the Sauchite said in reply:
44 "How long will you say these things?
They are a wordy wind of your mouth!

Will the Lord act unjustly when he judges, or will the maker of all things pervert what is right?

If your children sinned before him,
he sent them off by force of their lawlessness.

But you, quickly approach the Lord Almighty in prayer.

If you are pure and genuine, he will hear your entreaty and restore to you a righteous way of life.

Then, though your first things be few,
your last things will be unspeakably many.

"For inquire of an earlier generation, and trace it out through a line of ancestors;
for we are of yesterday and we know nothing,
for our life is a shadow on the earth.

Really, will they not teach you and declare and bring forth words from the heart?

"Does papyrus grow without water, or sedge become tall without drink?

While it is still on the root, it will in no way be harvested;
no plant becomes dry, in preference to drinking!

Such indeed will be the end of all who forget the Lord,
for the hope of the impious shall perish.

For his house will be uninhabited,
and his tent will prove to be a spider’s web.

If he props up his house, it will not stand,
and when he lays hold of it, it will not remain,

for he is languid beneath the sun and his shoot will spread forth out of his rottenness.

He goes to sleep on a gathering of stones,
and he will live among rubble.

If it swallows him up, the place will deny him;
you have not seen such things,
because such is the ruin of the impious,
but from the soil something else will sprout up.

"For the Lord will not reject the blameless person,
but no gift will he accept from the impious.

But he will fill the mouths of the sincere with laughter and their lips with confession, but their enemies will clothe themselves with shame, and the way of life of the impious will be no more."

Now Iob said in reply:

"Of a truth I know that it is so,
for how can a mortal be right before the Lord?

For if one wishes to go to law with him,
he will not even answer him,

for he is clever in mind, both powerful and big—who, though being unyielding, has endured against him?—

he who ages mountains, and they do not know it,
who overturns them in anger,
who speaks to the sun, and it does not rise,
and seals up the stars,

who makes Pleiades and Venus and Arcturus and the chambers of the south, who does great and inscrutable things,

things both glorious and extraordinary, without number.

If he passed over me, I would certainly not see him, and if he went by me, I would not even know.

If he takes away, who will put back?
Or who will say to him, ‘What did you do?’

"For he has not turned away from anger;
the sea-monsters under heaven were bowed down by him.

But if he has me respond,
he will surely judge my words with discernment.

For if I am in the right, he will not listen to me;

I will entreat his judgment!

and if I call and he responds,
I am not going to believe that he has given ear to me.

Would he really crush me with gloom?

But he has made my wounds many without cause.

For he does not let me get my breath,

but he has filled me with bitterness.

Because, for one thing, he really prevails by force, who then can withstand his judgment?

For instance, should I be right, my mouth will turn out impious!

And should I be blameless, I will prove to be perverse!

For even if I acted impiously, I do not know it within myself—

*aUnder * = Zi
except that my life is being taken away.
Therefore I said, ‘Anger destroys the great and powerful,
because the worthless do exceptionally well
in death,
but those in the right are laughed to scorn—
for they have been given over into the hands of the wicked.’

"Now, my life is swifter than a runner;
they fled away, and they saw nothing.
Is any trace at all left of a way taken by ships or of an eagle flying in search of prey?
For if in fact I say, ‘I will forget about speaking,’
with my face bowed down, I will groan.
I quiver in all my limbs, for I know you will not let me be innocent.
But since I am impious, why have I not died?
For if I wash myself with snow and cleanse myself with pure hands, you have plunged me fully in filth,
and my robe abhorred me.
For you are not a mortal like me, with whom I would contend,
that we should agree to come to trial.
Would that there were an arbiter for us and an investigator
and one to hear the case between us two.
Let him remove the rod from me,
and let not the fear of him distract me—then I will not be afraid, but I will speak; for as it is, I am baffled.
"Weary within,
I will let loose my words upon him in groans;
I will speak, tormented by the bitterness of
my soul,
and I will say to the Lord, Do not teach me
to be impious,
and why did you judge me like this?
Does it seem good to you, if I be in the wrong,
that you despise the work of your hands
but favored the advice of the impious?
Do you see as a mortal sees?
Is your life human,
or your years those of a man?
Because you sought out my lawlessness and tracked down my sins.
For you know that I did not act impiously, but who is there to deliver from your hands?
Your hands fashioned me and made me;
then you did an about face and struck
me.

Remember that you fashioned me as clay, and you are going to return me again to
earth.
Did you not pour me out like milk
and curdle me like cheese?
You clothed me with skin and flesh and knitted me together with bones and sinews.
Then you granted me life and mercy,
and your care preserved my spirit.
Since you have these things in you, I know that you can do anything,
and nothing is impossible for you.
For two things: should I sin, you watch me,
and you have not acquitted me of lawlessness.
For if I be impious, alas!
If I be righteous, I cannot lift up my
head,
for I am filled with disgrace.
To wit, I am hunted like a lion for killing, and again, you make an about face and destroy me terribly.
You renewed your scrutiny of me and treated me with great anger and brought trials on me.
"Why then did you bring me out of the womb?
And why did I not die and no eye see me and I be as if I had not been?
For why was I not carried from the womb to the grave?
Is not the length of my life short?
Let me rest a little before I go whence I will not return,
to a land, dark and gloomy,
to a land of perpetual darkness, where there is no light
and no glimpse of human life."

Now Sophar the Minite said in reply:
"He who says much will also listen in turn,
or does he who is eloquent think he is right?
Blessed is the short-lived offspring of woman.
Do not become talkative,
for there is no one to contend with you.
For example, do not say, ‘I am pure in my actions
and blameless before him.’
In that case, how could the Lord speak to
you?
Then he will disclose to you the power of wisdom,
because it will be double what you have.
And then you will know that what has come upon you from the Lord is equal to your sins.

*I.e. the days of my life
7 “Can you find the Lord’s footprint, or have you reached the limits that the Almighty made?
8 Heaven is high, and what will you do?
And there are deeper things than in Hades; what do you know?
9 Or are they not more extensive than the measure of the earth or the breadth of the sea?
10 And if he overturns all that is,
who will say to him, ‘What did you do?’
11 Indeed he knows the deeds of the lawless, and when he sees wrongs, he will not look aside.
12 On the other hand, a human keeps afloat with words,
and a mortal, born of woman, is like a desert ass.
13 “For if you have made your heart pure,
and you lift up your hands toward him—14 if anything lawless is in your hands, put it far away from you,
and let no injustice lodge in your dwelling.
15 For in this way your face will shine again like pure water,
and you will put away defilement, and
you shall not fear.
16 And you will forget trouble like a passing wave and not be terrified.
17 And your prayer will be as the morning star,
and at midday life will dawn for you.
18 You will be confident, because there is hope for you;
as well, out of worry and care peace will appear clearly for you, 19 for you will be at rest, and there will be no one to fight you;
instead, many will do an about face and entreat your favor.
20 But deliverance will fail them,
for their hope is destruction, and the eyes of the impious will waste away.”

12 Now Iob said in reply:
2 “So you alone are human beings;
surely wisdom will die with you.
3 For one thing, I too have a heart, just like
you.
4 A just and blameless man, you see, has become a laughingstock.
5 To be sure, he had been ordained to fall under others for a set time and that his houses be plundered by the lawless.
6 Nonetheless, let the wicked not trust that he will be guiltless—
as many as provoke the Lord—
as if indeed there will be no scrutiny of them.

7 “But, do ask the quadrupeds, if they should speak to you,
and the birds of the air, if they should declare to you,
and tell the earth in detail, if it should expound to you.
8 Who among all these did not know that the hand of the Lord made these things?
9 Is not the life of all living things in his hand,
and the breath of every human being?
10 For it is the mind that discerns words
but the throat that tastes food.
11 Wisdom comes with much time,
and knowledge with much living.
12 “With him are wisdom and power; counsel and understanding are his.
13 If he tears down, who can rebuild?
14 If he shuts out people, who can open?
15 If he withholds the water, he will dry up the
earth,
but if he lets it loose, he has destroyed it completely.
16 With him are strength and power;
knowledge and understanding are his.
17 Leading counselors away captive,
he maddened earthly judges.
18 Seating kings upon thrones, sending away priests captive,
he overthrew earth’s mighty ones.
19 Disrupting the lips of the faithful, he found out the understanding of eders
pouring dishonor on rulers.
20 b but healed the humble.
21 Revealing deep things out of darkness,
he brought death’s shadow to light.
22 Changing the hearts of earthly rulers, he made them wander by a way that they did not know: ‘May they grope in the dark without light, and may they wander about like a drunkard.’

13 “Look, my eye has seen these things, and my ear has heard them,
and I know what you too understand and am no less intelligent than you.
3 Nonetheless, I will speak to the Lord and argue my case before him, if he wishes.
4 But you are injurious physicians and healers of wrong things, all of you.
5 But oh that you would be quiet and wisdom be yours as a result.
6 Hear the reasoning of my mouth,
and give heed to the argument of my lips.

aI. e. the Lord   bUnder $= Zi
Are you not speaking before the Lord and uttering deceit before him?
Really? Will you prevaricate?
Go ahead; become judges yourselves!
It would indeed be good, if he traced your footsteps;
for if, in doing everything you can, you will join yourselves to him, he will convict you nonetheless.
And even if secretly you will show partiality, will not his terrors distract you and fear from him assail you?
Your arrogance, however, will turn out to be like ashes,
and your body made of clay.
"Be quiet! so I may speak and be relieved of rage.
Having taken my flesh in my teeth,
I will put my life in my hand.
Though the Mighty One overpower me—inasmuch as he has begun—certainly I will speak and argue my case before him.
And this for me will prove to be salvation, for deceit cannot enter before him.
Hear, hear my words, for I will declare, while you listen.
Look, I am near my trial; I know that I will be shown to be in the right.
For who is there that will find fault with me?
[19 because now I will be quiet and expire]
But you shall indulge me in two things:
[20 then I will not hide myself from your face] withdraw your hand from me, and let fear of you not terrify me.
Then you will call, and I will answer you, or you will speak, and I will give you a response.
How many are my sins and my acts of lawlessness?
Teach me what they are.
Why do you hide from me and regard me your opponent?
Will you really be wary of one that is like a windblown leaf, or do you oppose me, one like windborne grass?—
because you wrote harmful things against me and surrounded me with the sins of my youth.
And you put my foot in a hobble and watched all my actions, and you reached to the bottoms of my feet.
A worn out thing, like a skin, aI am, or like a moth-eaten garment.
"For a mortal, born of woman, is short-lived and full of aggravation or, like a flower that has bloomed, drops off and flees like a shadow and will not halt.
Of him did you not in fact take account and make him enter into judgment before you?
For who can be pure from filth? None, not one!
Even if his life on the earth be but one day and his months be counted out to him, you have set a time, and he shall not go beyond it.
Depart from him, that he may have quiet and enjoy life, like a wage-earner!
"For there is hope for a tree; for if it is cut down, it will sprout again, and its branch will not fail.
For, if its root grow old in earth and the crown of its root die in a rock, at the scent of water it will sprout and produce a crop like one newly planted.
But a man, once dead, is gone, and a mortal, once fallen, is no more.
For a sea with time diminishes, and a river, laid waste, is dried up, but a person, once lying down, shall never rise again until the sky become unstitched.
O that you had kept me in Hades and had concealed me until your anger had ceased, and you had set me a time, when you would remember me.
For, if a person died, then would live again, when he has completed the days of his life, I would endure until I would be born again.
Presently you would call, and I would answer you—only do not reject the works of your hands.
But you tabulated my pursuits, and not one of my sins will pass by you, and you have sealed up my lawless acts in a pouch and marked down if I had somehow transgressed inadvertently.
[18 but even a falling mountain will crumble away, and a rock will be worn out of its place.
Waters made stones smooth, and roiling waters eroded the mound of earth, and you destroyed human endurance.]
“You thrust him aside completely, and he was gone; you set your face against him and sent him away. And though his sons become many, he does not know, and if they become few, he is not aware. Ah, but his flesh suffered pain, and his soul grieved.”

Now Eliphaz the Thaimanite said in reply:

1 "Will a wise man give an answer of windy insight, and did he satisfy the ache in his belly—arguing with statements that are beside the point, with words that are of no benefit? Have you not as well set aside fear and exhausted such statements before the Lord? You are guilty by the statements of your mouth and did not discern statements of the mighty. May your mouth refute you, and not I, and your lips will testify against you.

7 "What? Were you the first of the human race to be born? Or were you established before the dunes? Did you hear the plan of the Lord, and did wisdom reach only you? For what do you know that we do not know? Or what do you understand that we do not as well?

You have been scourged for but few of your sins; you have spoken wildly extravagantly. What did your heart dare, or what did your eyes set themselves upon, that you burst forth in rage before the Lord and brought out such remarks from your mouth? For who, being mortal, can be blameless, or who can be in the right, born of woman? If he places no faith in his holy ones, then heaven is not pure before him. But aha, abominable and impure, a man drinking injustices like a drink!

17 "But I will declare to you; hear me; indeed, what I have seen I will declare to you— what sages will say and did not hide from their ancestors; to them alone the earth was given, and no alien came upon them. The entire life of the impious is spent in anxiety, and the years given to the mighty are numbered. And the dread of him is in his ears; just when he thinks he is at peace, his destruction will come. Let him not believe he will return from darkness, for he has already been consigned to a blade’s power; moreover, he has been allocated as food for vultures, and he knows within himself that he remains as a carcass. And a dark day will whirl him around, and distress and anguish will take hold of him; he will be like a general falling in the front rank. Because he lifted his hands against the Lord and stiffened his neck against the Lord Almighty and ran against him with insolence, then may he lodge in desolate cities and enter uninhabited houses, and what they prepared, others will carry away. Neither shall he ever become rich, nor shall his possessions last. He shall not cast a shadow upon the ground, nor shall he escape darkness. May the wind dry up his bud, and may his blossom fall off. Let him not believe that he will endure, for emptiness will turn out to be his lot. His stump will perish before its time, and his branch will provide no cover. But may he be picked like unripe grapes, before his time, and fall off, like an olive blossom. For the testimony of the impious is death, and fire will burn the houses of bribe-takers. And he will conceive sorrows, and his lot will turn out to be emptiness, and his belly will carry deceit.”

26 with the thickness of the back of his shield,

if your life were in fact in the place of mine;
then I would jump at you with words and shake my head at you.

But may there be strength in my mouth—
then I shall not spare you the moving of my lips!

For if I speak, I shall not aggravate my wound, but even if I remain silent, how shall I be wounded less?

"But as it is, he has made me worn out, a fool, wasted away.

Acting in wrath, he has thrown me down;
he has gnashed his teeth at me;
his brigands' arrows fell on me.

With darts from his eyes he dashed at me;
he struck me on the cheek with something sharp,
and they ran at me with one accord.

For the Lord delivered me into the hands of the unjust and cast me to the impious.

When I was at peace, he scattered me;
he seized me by the hair and pulled it out;
he set me up like a target.

They surrounded me with spears, hurling them into my kidneys, without sparing;
they poured out my gall on the ground.

They threw me down, fall upon fall;
they rushed at me powerfully.

I sewed sackcloth upon my skin,
and my strength was extinguished in dust.

My belly is aflame from weeping,
and there is a shadow on my eyelids.

But there was nothing unjust in my hands,
and my prayer was pure.

"O earth, do not cover up the blood of my flesh,
nor may there be a place for my cry.

Even now, look, my witness is above,
and my corroborator is on high.

Now Baldad the Sauchite said in reply:
"How long before you stop?
Hold back, so that we too can speak.

Why have we, like quadrupeds, been silent before you?

Anger has used you.
What? If you die, will what is under heaven be uninhabited?
Or will mountains be overthrown from their foundations?

"Yes, the light of the impious will be put out,
and their flame will not do well.

His light is darkness in his dwelling,
and his lamp will be put out on him.

May those of least account chase down his possessions,
and may his counsel trip him up.

But his foot has been thrust into a snare;
may he be entangled in a net,
and may snares come upon him!

No, strangers have stolen my possessions, who is this? Let him join hands with me.

Because you have hid their heart from intelligence,
therefore you shall not exalt them.
He will report evils to the party of and my eyes have dissolved over my children.

"And you have made me a byword among nations,
and I have become a laughing-stock to them,
for my eyes have turned to stone from anger;
I am greatly besieged by all.

Wonder at this has seized the truthful,
and may the just rise up against the transgressor,
and the faithful hold to his own way,
and may one with pure hands take courage.

Nonetheless, you all keep pressing hard,
for I find nothing true in you.

My days have passed in a roar,
and my heartstrings were broken.

They have made night into day; light is near from before darkness.

If I last, Hades is my house,
and my bed lies spread in gloom.

I called on death to be my father and decay to be my mother and sister.

Where then is yet my hope?
Shall I see my goods?

or shall we go down of one accord to the grave?

or shall we go down with me to Hades?"
[9] he will strengthen those who thirst against him;
[10] his rope is hid in the ground,
[11] and the means of his capture upon paths;]
[12] May pains destroy him on every side, and may many beset him in severe famine.
[13] But an extraordinary fall has been prepared for him—
[14] may the digits of his feet be devoured, and death will consume his maturity.
[15] And may healing be torn from his dwelling, and may duress take hold of him by royal charge.
[16] It will encamp in his tent in his night; his lovely things will be sown with brimstone;
[17] his roots will be dried up beneath, and his crop will fall off above;]
[18] May pains destroy him on every side, and may many beset him in severe famine.
[19] He will no longer be known among his people, nor will his house be preserved on what is under heaven; rather, others will live in what is his.
[20] The last groaned over him, and wonder seized the first.
[21] These are the houses of the unjust, and this is the place of those that do not know the Lord.”

Now Iob said in reply:

1 How long will you make my soul weary and destroy me with words?
2 Know only that the Lord treated me this way; you speak against me; shamelessly you press upon me.
3 Yes indeed, I have truly erred, and error lodges with me—to have spoken a word that was not fitting, and my words err and are inappropriate.
4 But alas, it is because you magnify yourselves against me and jump at me with reproach.
5 Know then that it is the Lord who troubles me, and he raised up his stronghold against me.
6 Look, I laugh at reproach, and I will not speak; I will cry out, and nowhere is there judgment.
7 I am hemmed in all around and cannot get out; he has placed darkness upon my face. And he has stripped my glory from me and taken the crown from my head.
8 He totally isolated me, and I was gone, and he has cut down my hope like a tree.
9 And he has dealt with me terribly in anger and has counted me as an enemy.
10 And with one accord his gangs of brigands came against me; they encircled me on my paths, lying in ambush.
11 “And my brothers turned away from me; they recognized strangers rather than me. And friends of mine became merciless.
12 My nearest kin disowned me, and those who knew my name forgot me.
13 As for neighbors next door and my servant girls— I became an alien to them.
14 I called my attendant, and he did not respond; yet my mouth kept pleading.
15 I also repeatedly implored my wife, and, using flattery, I kept summoning sons of my concubines, but they rejected me for all time; when I rise, they talk against me.
16 My acquaintances abhorred me, and those I had loved rose up against me.
17 My flesh rotted under my skin, and my bones are held in my teeth.
18 Pity me; pity me, O my friends, for it is the Lord’s hand that has touched me.
19 But why do you pursue me just as the Lord does, and why are you not satisfied with my flesh?
20 “For who would grant that my words be written and that they be put in a book forever with an iron and lead pen, or be carved in rock?
21 To be sure, I know that he who is about to undo me on earth is everlasting.
22 May my skin, which patiently endures these things, rise up; for these things have been accomplished on me by the Lord—
23 things I am conscious of in myself, things my eye has seen and no other, and all of them have come to an end for me in my bosom.
24 But even if you say, ‘What shall we say before him?’
25 Do as well be afraid of a cover-up, for wrath will come upon the lawless, and then they will find out where their substance is.”

I.e. the Lord
Now Sophar the Minite said in reply:

"I did not suppose that you would counter these things so, and surely the rest of you have gained no better understanding than I—

*I will hear instruction of my shame,
*and a spirit from understanding answers me.

Did you not know these things before now? not since mortals were placed on the earth!

For the merriment of the impious ends in an extraordinary fall, and the enjoyment of transgressors in destruction, even if his gifts go up to heaven and his sacrifices touch the clouds.

For just when he thinks he is firmly established, at that point he will be utterly destroyed, and those who saw him will say, 'Where is he?'

Like a dream that has taken to flight, he shall not be found, but he has flown away like a nocturnal apparition!

*an eye caught a glimpse and will not continue, and his place will observe him no longer.

May his inferiors do away with his sons, and his hands kindle pains.

*his bones were filled with his youth, and it will lie down with him on a burial mound.

If evil is sweet in his mouth, he will hide it under his tongue; he will not spare it and will not leave it behind and will hold it in the middle of his throat.

And he shall not be able to help himself.

The venom of an asp is in his belly.

Wealth being gathered unjustly will be disgorged; a messenger will drag it out of his house. And may he suck the wrath of dragons, and may a snake's tongue kill him. May he not see the milk of pastures nor pasturage of honey and butter. Vainly and foolishly he has toiled for wealth of which he will not taste; it will be like something tough, unchewable, impossible to swallow. For he has broken down the houses of many who are powerless, and he has seized a dwelling, though he did not build it.

His possessions hold no security for him;

in his desire he will not escape.

There is nothing left of his provisions; therefore his goods will not flourish.

But just when he thinks he has fully satisfied himself, he will be afflicted, and every distress will come upon him.

May he send on him fierce wrath; may he wash pains on him. And he shall not escape a blade's power; may a bronze bow wound him. Yes, may an arrow pass through his body, and may lightning bolts strut about in his dwellings.

Then may utter darkness await him; unquenchable fire will devour him—and may a stranger afflict his house. And may heaven uncover his acts of lawlessness and earth rise up against him. May destruction drag his house to an end; may a day of anger come upon him. This is the portion of an impious person from the Lord, and possession of his things is from the Overseer."

Now Iob said in reply:

"Listen, listen to my words, lest this be your consolation for me. Lift me up, and I will speak; then you will not laugh me to scorn. What? My argument is not with a mortal, is it? Or, why should I not be angry? Look at me, and marvel, laying your hand on your cheek. For even when I remember, I am in haste, and pains seize my flesh. Why do the impious live on and grow old, even in wealth? Their progeny are according to their pleasure, and their children in their sight. Their houses prosper without any fear, and no scourge from the Lord is upon them. Their cow did not miscarry, and their pregnant one came through safely and did not falter. Vainly and foolishly he has toiled for wealth of which he will not taste; it will be like something tough, unchewable, impossible to swallow. And they finished their life in prosperity and lay down in the repose of Hades. But he says to the Lord, 'Stay away from me; I do not wish to know your ways.'

*aI.e. God  bI.e. the impious and what profit is there that we should approach him.

For their good things were in their hands, but he does not regard the works of the impious.

“Nonetheless, the lamp of the impious shall also be put out, and destruction shall come upon them, and sharp pains shall seize them, because of anger.

And they shall be as chaff before the wind or as dust that the whirlwind has sucked up.

May his possessions fail his sons.

Is it not the Lord who teaches understanding and knowledge?

But he will discerningly judge murders.

And his inwards are full of fat, and his marrow is being dispersed.

The light has proved to be darkness for you, and water has covered you while you slept.

Does not he who dwells on high observe, and has he not humbled those borne along by pride?

And who will declare his way to his face, and he acted, who will repay him?

and who will reply him?

And he has been carried away to the graves, and he has watched over the bier.

The pebbles of the wadi were sweet to him, and every mortal will follow after him, and those before him are innumerable.

How then will you comfort me with emptiness? And I have no rest at all from you.”

Now Eliphaz the Thaimanite said in reply:

Is it not the Lord who teaches understanding and knowledge?

For what does it matter to the Lord if you were blameless in your actions?

or is it an advantage that you will make your way simple?

Though he makes an account of you, will he reprove you, and will he go to trial with you?

Is your evil not abundant, and are your sins not without number?

Yes, you used to take your brothers in pledge for no reason and took away the clothing of the naked.

Nor did you give water to the thirsty to drink but withheld a morsel from the hungry.

And you made favorites of some and settled them on the land, but you sent away widows empty and mistreated orphans.

Therefore snares have encircled you, and an extraordinary conflict has hurried you.

The light has proved to be darkness for you, and water has covered you while you slept.

“Does not he who dwells on high observe, and has he not humbled those borne along by pride?

Clouds are his hiding-place, and he will not be seen, and he will pass through the circle of heaven.’

Will you keep the ageless way that unjust men trod who were seized before their time? Their foundations are a flooding river.

Those who say, ‘What will the Lord do to us?’ or, ‘What will the Almighty bring against us?’— yet he it was who filled their houses with good things, though the counsel of the impious is far from him.

Those in the right laughed when they saw it, and the blameless mocked.

except their substance vanished, and fire will consume what of theirs is left.

‘Do be unyielding, if you would endure; then your fruit will prosper. And accept an utterance from his mouth, and take up his words in your heart. And if you turn and humble yourself before the Lord, you have put what is unjust far from your dwelling.

I.e. the Lord as for his inwards, he is full of fat = Zi Eliphas = Zi
Therefore I am in haste about him, and when I was admonished, I gave heed to him.

But the Lord enfeebled my heart, and the Almighty hurried me.

For I did not know that darkness would come upon me, but gloom has fallen as a covering before my face.

"But why did times escape the notice of the Lord, and the impious overstepped the limit, when they seized flock with shepherd? They led away the orphans’ beast of burden and took the widow’s ox in pledge. They turned aside the powerless from the righteous way.

"The meek of the earth have hidden of one accord.

The eye of the adulterer watched for darkness,

Omitezi, Perhaps Let me i.e. the powerless d.I.e. the Lord

Therefore the Almighty will be your help from enemies, and he will render you pure as silver tried by fire.

Then you will speak frankly before the Lord, looking up to heaven cheerfully.

And when you pray to him, he will listen to you and give to you to pay your vows.

Yes, he will restore to you a righteous way of life, and there will be light on your ways."

Because he humbled him, and you will say, 'He acted arrogantly.'

And he will save one bent forward with the eyes;

he will deliver the innocent and be preserved by your pure hands.
iob 24–27

"saying, 'No eye will observe me,'
and he placed a concealment of his face.
In the dark he dug through houses;
by day they sealed themselves up;
they did not know light,
because with one accord the morning is death’s shadow to them, because he will recognize the troubles of death’s shadow.
He is nimble on the face of the water.
May their earthly portion be cursed,
and may their plants on earth appear withered,
for they seized the orphans’ armful.
Then his sin was remembered,
and he disappeared like a dewy mist,
but may what he did be paid back to him,
and may every unjust person be crushed
lke an incurable tree!

"For he did not treat well the barren woman and had no pity on the weak woman.
And in wrath he overthrew the powerless.
Therefore, when he has risen up,
he will not feel secure about his own life.
When he is sickly, let him not hope to regain health;
rather, he will fall by disease.
For his loftiness harmed many, but he shived away like a mallow in the heat or as an ear of corn, fallen off the stalk of itself.
But if it is not so, who is there to say that I speak what is false?"

Now Baldad the Sauchite said in reply:
"Why, what preamble or fear is there with him,
he who on high keeps making the entire
earth?
For would there be anyone who thinks there is respite for brigands?
And upon whom will not come ambushes from him?
For how can a mortal be right before the Lord?
Or who, born of woman, could purify himself?
If he instructs the moon, then it does not shine,
and the stars are not pure before him.
But alas, a human being is rot!"

Now Iob said in reply:
"To whom are you devoted, or to whom are you about to provide help?
Is it not to him who has much strength and a strong arm?
With whom have you taken counsel?
Is it not with him who has all wisdom?
Or whom will you follow?
Is it not he who has the greatest power?
To whom did you utter words?
And whose breath is it that comes forth
from you?

*Or sin remembered him

Now Iob, yet further to his preamble, said:
"The Lord lives, who has judged me so,
and the Almighty, who has embittered
my soul—
indeed, while my breath is still within me and a divine puff of air is what remains in my nostrils,
my lips will not speak lawless things,
nor will my soul ponder injustices.
Far be it from me to declare that you are right, until I die,
for I will not relinquish my innocence.
But holding fast to righteousness, I will ever let it go, for I am not conscious within myself of having done anything amiss.
Nonetheless, may my enemies be like the ruin of the impious, and those who rise up against me like the destruction of the transgressors.
To be sure, what hope does the impious have that he hangs on?
When he trusts in the Lord, will he be saved?
Will the Lord listen to his petition?
Or when distress comes upon him, does he have any confidence before him? Or as he calls upon him, will he listen to him?

Well then, I will declare to you what is in the Lord’s hand; what is with the Almighty, I will not falsify.

Look here, all of you know that you are piling nothing upon nothing.

“This is the portion of an impious person from the Lord, and the possession of the powerful will come from the Almighty upon them.

Now if his sons be many, they shall be for slaughter, and if perchance they reach manhood, they shall be beggars.

And those of his who survive will end in death, and no one will pity their widows.

If he gathers silver like dirt and prepares gold like clay, all these the righteous will gain, and his money the truthful will possess.

And his house turned out like moths and like a spider’s web.

Though he lies down rich, he will not in fact add to it.

Pain came upon him like water, and gloom carried him off by night.

And it will winnow him from his place.

It will strike their hands against them and hiss him from his place.

For silver has a place from which it comes, and gold a place from where it is sifted.

For whereas iron comes out of the earth, copper is quarried like stone.

He imposed order on darkness, and he searches out every limit;

stone is darkness and death’s shadow,

cleft of a wadi, away from dust.

and those of mortals who kept forgetting the righteous way became weak.

as for the earth—out of it will come bread;

under it, it was turned about like fire.

Its stones are the place of lapis lazuli, and its mound has gold.

The path—no bird has known it, and the vulture’s eye has not glanced at it.

The sons of braggarts have not trodden it; the lion has not passed over it.

He stretched out his hand with sharp rock;

And he overturned mountains from their roots and broke whirlpools of rivers—and my eye saw every precious thing.

And he uncovered rivers’ depths and showed his own power to the light.

“But wisdom—where was it found? And of what sort is the place of knowledge?

No mortal knows its way, nor will it ever be discovered among human beings.

the deep said, ‘It is not in me,’ and the sea said, ‘It is not with me.’

He will not give a confinement in its place, and silver cannot be weighed in exchange for it.

And it cannot rank with the gold of Ophir, with precious onyx and lapis lazuli.

Gold and glass cannot equal it, nor is its exchange a gold vessel.

Celestial objects and gabisa cannot be mentioned, and draw wisdom above what is innermost.

The topaz of Ethiopia will not be equal to it; with pure gold it cannot be compared.

“But wisdom—where was it found? And of what sort is the place of knowledge?

It has escaped notice by any human, and was hidden from birds of the air.

but we have heard of its renown.

God has established well its way, and he himself knows its place, for he observes all that is under heaven, since he knows all the earth contains, that which he made—the weight of winds and the measures of water!

When he had done so, he looked and made a count; and a way in the shaking, noises;

then he saw it and declared it.

since he prepared them, he kept track of them.

And he said to humankind, ‘Look, the worship of God is wisdom, and to stay away from evil is knowledge.’ ”

Now Job, yet further to his preamble, said: Who might put me in a month of former days, when God watched over me, as when his lamp would shine over my head, when by his light I strode in darkness, when I was pressing on my ways,
    when God would pay a visit to my house, when I was very much a person of substance
and my children were around me, when my roads were flowing with butter and my hills flowed with milk!—
when I would go out early in the city and my seat was placed in the squares.

 4 When young men saw me, they hid,
 5 and the aged, all of them stood,
 6 and prominent men stopped talking, putting a finger to their mouth.
 7 And those who heard counted me happy,
 8 [10 *and their tongues stuck to their throat.]
 9 *Because the ear heard and pronounced me happy]/ 10 and the eye that saw me averted its glance,
 11 for I delivered the poor from the hand of the powerful,
    and the orphan, who had no helper, I 12 helped,
[13 *may the blessing of the one perishing come upon me/]
 13 and the widow's mouth blessed me.
 14 Yes, I put on righteousness and was clothed with justice like a cloak.
 15 I was the eye of the blind and the foot of the lame.
 16 And I broke the molars of the unjust and tore prey from between their teeth.
 17 And I said, 'My manhood will see old age;
    I shall live a long while, like the trunk of a palm tree.'
[19 *the root has opened out upon water,
 20 *and dew will lodge on my crop.
 21 *My glory is fresh with me,
 22 *and my bow will go in its hand/]
 21 "When they heard me, they took heed and fell silent at my counsel.
 22 And they did not add to what I said but became overjoyed whenever I spoke to them.
 23 As thirsty earth welcomes the rain,
    so these welcomed what I said.
 24 If I smiled toward them, they would not believe it.
[24 *and the light of my face did not fade.
 25 *I chose their way and sat as ruler,
 26 *and I used to encamp like a king among light-armed men,
 27 *as one comforting mourners/]
 28 "But now they have laughed me to scorn;
    now the least of them reprove me in turn—[1 *whose fathers I used to disdain/] whom I did not deem worthy of my shepherd dogs!

 2 *indeed, the strength of their hands—what is it to me?
 3 *Completion perished upon them.
 4 *In want and hunger, he was childless,
 5 *those who yesterday were fleeing an arid place,
 6 *dismay and misery,
 7 *those who break off saltwort at one making a sound/]
 8 Who indeed! Saltwort was their food, and they were without honor and disparaged, in want of everything good,
    who also chewed on tree roots out of great hunger.
 9 Thieves have risen up against me,
 10 whose houses were caves in the rocks,
[11 *among pleasant sounds they will cry out/] 11 who spent their lives under wild bushes—12 sons of fools and of people dishonored in name,
    and a reputation quenched from earth.
[7 *and have cast off the restraint of my 8 presence.
 9 *On the right of offspring they rose up;
 10 *they stretched out their foot 11 and leveled out upon me paths of their destruction.
 12 *My paths were erased/]
 13 for he took off my robe.
 14 He shot me down with his arrows;
    he has treated me as he wishes; I am a jumble of pain.
 15 My pains are returning;
    my hope has gone away like a puff of air,
    and my safety like a cloud.
[16 *and now my soul will be poured out upon me/]
 16 *And days of pain seize me, 17 while at night my bones are inflamed,
    and my sinews are dissolved.
 18 With great force he took hold of my robe.
[18 *he encircled me like the collar of my tunic/]
 19 *And you have treated me like clay;
    my lot is in dust and ashes.
 20 But I have cried to you, and you do not listen to me.
[20 *they stood and observed me/]
 21 Yes, you fell upon me without mercy; with a strong hand you have scourged
    me,
 22 and you arrayed me in pains.
[22 *and you cast me away from deliverance/]

Or his  bI.e. God
You see, I know that death will crush me, for earth is home to every mortal.

"Oh that I might be able to lay hands on myself or, at least, entreat another, and he will do this for me.

But I, I wept over every powerless person, and I groaned when I saw a man in dire straits.

But I, when I was intent on good, look, days of evil met me all the more.

I have gone about, groaning without restraint, and I have stood in the assembly, crying out.

I have become a brother of sirens and a companion of ostriches.

As well, my skin has blackened greatly, and my bones, from heat.

Yes, my lyre has been turned into mourning, and my melody into weeping for me.

[†I made a covenant with my eyes, and I will not take note of a virgin.]

And what has God apportioned from above, and is there an inheritance of the Sufficient One from on high?

Does not destruction belong to the unrighteous, and alienation to those who do lawlessness?

Will he not see my way, and all my steps be counted?]

"But if I had walked with jesters and if too my foot hurried to deceit, then may he place me in a just balance—but the Lord knows my innocence.

If my foot has turned aside from the way and if too my heart followed my eye and if too I touched gifts with my hands, then may I sow and others eat, and may I become without root on earth.

"If my heart followed another man’s wife, if in fact I lay in wait at her doors, then may my wife too be pleasing to another, and may my children be humiliated.

For a fit of passion is uncontrollable, namely, the defiling of a man’s wife; for a fire is set burning in all parts, and wherever it has gone, it has destroyed root and branch.

"And if too I have disparaged the case of my male or female attendant when they bring a complaint against me, what then shall I do, if the Lord puts me under scrutiny?

And if too he pays a visit, what answer shall I give?

Just as I was conceived in the belly, were not they also?

Yes, we were conceived in the same cavity.

"But as for the powerless, what need they had—I did not miss it, and the eye of the widow I did not let waste away.

And if too I ate my morsel alone and did not share with the orphan,

[‡because from my youth I nurtured like a father and from my mother’s womb I gave guidance.]

and if too I overlooked a naked person, perishing, and did not clothe him, and as for the powerless, if they did not bless me—yet their shoulders were warmed with the fleece of my lambs—

if I raised a hand against an orphan, confident that I have much help at my disposal, then may my shoulder separate from its socket and my arm be crushed from the elbow. To be sure, fear of the Lord controlled me.

[‡and because of his load I shall not endure.]

"And if too I trusted in a precious stone and if too I rejoiced when much wealth accrued to me and if too I placed my hand on things without number—indeed do I not see the shining sun setting, and the moon waning? For they do not have it in them.

[‡and if my heart was secretly enticed.]

And if too I placed my hand on my mouth and kissed it, then may this too be reckoned to me as the greatest lawlessness, because I played false before the Lord Most High.

"And if too I was gratified at my enemies’ fall, and my heart said, ‘Good!’—then may my ear hear a curse against me; yes, then may I be gossipped about by my people as one afflicted.

And if too my female attendants often said, ‘Who might grant us to be filled with his flesh?’ though I was very kind—and no stranger would lodge outside, but my door stood open to everyone that came,
and if too, having sinned haplessly, I hid my sin—for I was not deterred by the populous multitude from speaking out before them—and if too I permitted the powerless to leave my door with empty pockets, and if I had not feared the hand of the Lord,
then the writ that I had against someone I would have placed on my shoulders as a chaplet and read it aloud, and if I did not tear it up and hand it back,
then may nettles come forth to me instead of wheat,
and a bramble instead of barley.”

And Iob ceased speaking.

Now too, his three friends gave up taking issue with Iob any longer, for Iob was righteous before them. But Elious the son of Barachiel, the Bouzite, of the kindred of Ram in the region of Ausitis, became angry, but he was very angry with Iob, because he declared himself in the right before the Lord. But he was very angry also with the three friends, because they were unable to give Iob counter-argument, and they made him out to be impious. Yet Elious waited to give an answer to Iob.

I will speak again, for I am full of words;
for my gastral spirit is killing me and my belly is like a bound wineskin of new wine in ferment or like a burst bellows of a blacksmith.
I will speak, that I may find relief when I open my lips, for I will not be in awe of a human being;
to the contrary, I will have no regard for any mortal,
for I do not know how to show respect;
if that is not so, moths will also eat me!

Nonetheless, O Iob, hear my words, and give ear to what I say.
For look, I have opened my mouth,
and my tongue has spoken.
My heart will be seen pure by my words,
and the thought of my lips pure by my interpretation.
It is the divine spirit that has made me and the Almighty’s breath that teaches me.
Give me an answer to these things, if you can;
wait, take a stand against me, and I against you.
You have been fashioned from clay, even as I am;
we have been fashioned from the same thing.
No fear of me will send you spinning,
nor will my hand be heavy on you.

“I have heard the sound of your words, that you say, ‘I am pure, since I have done no wrong,
and I am blameless, for I did not act lawlessly.
But he found a basis for complaint against me
and has reckoned me as an adversary, and he put my foot in the stocks and watched all my paths.’

a Or lord
b I.e. Iob
“How then do you say, ‘I am righteous, and he has paid no heed to me?’ for he that is above mortals is everlasting. But you say, ‘Why has he not heeded one word of my case?’ For may the Lord speak just this once, and the second time, through a dream or during reflection by night—as when a fearful dread falls on people, while they slumber on their bed. Then he lays bare the human mind; he frightened them with such scary apparitions, to turn a person from injustice, and he saved his body from a fall. And he has spared his soul from death and from his falling in battle. Then again, he reproved him with sickness upon his bed, and a great many of his bones grew stiff. and he shall not be able to take any edible bit of food and his soul will long for food. until his flesh rots and he shows his bones to be bare. Yes, his soul drew near to death, and his life was in Hades. If there be a thousand death-bearing angels, not one of them shall wound him; if he purpose with his heart to turn to the Lord and declare to a person his own fault and reveal his folly, he will provide support so that he does not fall into death and renew his body like paint does a wall and fill his bones with marrow and will make his flesh soft like an infant’s and restore him full-grown among people. And when he makes vows to the Lord, they will also be acceptable to him, and he will enter with a pure look, with a declaration, and he will repay people with righteousness. After that, the same person will chastise himself, saying: ‘Given the kinds of things I was doing, he has not even tried me commensurate with my sin! Deliver my soul so that it may not go to corruption, and my life shall see the light. Look, the Strong One works all these things, three ways with a man.] Rather, he delivered my soul from death, that my life may praise him in the light.’ Give ear, O Iob, and keep hearing me.”

Now Elious resumed and said:

12 “Hear me, you wise men; O you who know, give ear to what is good—because the ear tries words and the throat tastes food. Let us choose judgment for ourselves; let us know among ourselves what is good because Iob has said, ‘I am righteous; the Lord dismissed my case and played false in my judgment, my arrow is violent, though I am without injustice. What man is like Iob, drinking mockery like water. seeing that I have not sinned or acted impiously or shared a way with doers of lawless acts, to walk with the impious.’ For do not say, ‘There will be no visitation of a man’—when there is visitation to him from the Lord!

13 Therefore, you intelligent of heart, hear me: far be it from me to act impiously before the Lord and before the Almighty, to pervert what is right. Rather, he repays a person according to what each of them does. Now, do you think the Lord will do what is amiss? Or will the Almighty pervert justice, he who created the earth? And who is it that sustains what is under heaven and all it contains? For if he should wish to confine and to keep his spirit with himself, all flesh will die together, and every mortal return to dust, whence too he was formed.

14 “But lest he rebuke you, hear these things; give ear to the sound of my words. Look then at him that hates lawless acts and destroys the wicked, since he is forever just. Impious is he who says to a king, ‘You are acting lawlessly,’—to rulers, ‘O most impious!’ he who felt no reticence before a person of worth nor knows how to accord honor to the prominent 20 But crying out and begging, a man will prove to be of no use to them, for they used people lawlessly, when the powerless were being turned aside.

21 "For he is one that views human deeds, and nothing of what they do has escaped him, nor will there be a place to hide for those that do lawless acts. [because he will not put upon a man any longer]

23 For the Lord observes all people—he who comprehends inscrutable things, things both glorious and extraordinary, without number,

25 he who reveals their deeds

29 and he will furnish quiet, and who can condemn?

31 *Because he that is saying to the Strong One, ‘I have seized; I will not take a pledge;

32 ‘I will look apart from myself; do show me!

33 ‘If I have practiced injustice, I will not add.’

34 ‘Will he exact it from you?

36 Now Elious added still more and said: *Wait for me a little longer so that I may teach you, for there is still more speech in me. Having fetched my knowledge from afar, yes, in my efforts I will speak what is just, in truth, and not unjust words; you understand wrongly!

35 *But know that the Lord will not reject the innocent;

36 *powerful in strength of heart,

37 *he will never make alive the impious

38 *and will grant the judgment of the poor.

39 *He will not remove his eyes from the righteous, and with kings on the throne,
and he will seat them in victory, and they will be exalted.

8 And if, having been bound with handcuffs,
they will be held in the cords of poverty.
then he will declare to them their works and their transgressions, that they will prevail.
rather, he will listen to the righteous.

10 and he said that they should turn from injustice.
11 If they hear and are subject, they will complete their days in good things and their years in splendor.

12 But the impious he does not deliver, because they do not wish to know the Lord and because, when they were being admonished, they were unresponsive.

13 and hypocrites in heart will marshal wrath;
they will not shout, because he has bound them.

14 "Well then, may their soul die in youth,
and their life, being wounded by messengers,
because they afflicted the weak and powerless,
but he will expose judgment against the meek.

16 and besides, he enticed you out of the enemy's mouth, a deep, an affusion beneath it,
your table came down, full of fatness.

17 "Yes, justice will not be wanting for those in the right, but wrath will fall on the impious on account of the impiety of gifts they would receive for injustices.

19 Let not your mind purposely turn you aside from the petition of the powerless when they are in distress.

20 and all that strengthen might.
21 Do not draw out the night
so that peoples may go up in place of them.

21 Rather, be careful that you do no wrongs;
for you chose for this one because of poverty.

22 See, the Strong One will prevail by his power for who is a mighty one like him?

23 And who is it that examines his works, or who is it that states, 'He has done injustice'?

24 "Remember that his works are great,
over which men ruled.
Every human saw in himself
however many mortals are being wounded.

26 see, the Strong One is abundant, and we will not know him;
the number of his years is also boundless.

27 But to him raindrops are numbered, and they will be poured out by rain into a cloud.

28 Things grown old will flow and clouds cast a shadow on untold mortals.
He appointed a time for cattle,
and they know their schedule for rest.
Is your mind not amazed at all these things,
and does your heart not take leave of your body?

29 even if he understands the spreading out of a cloud,
the proportions of his tent,
look, he stretches out edoc against him
and has covered the root-masses of the sea, for by them he will judge peoples;
he will give food to him that has strength.

30 He has covered light on his hands and commanded concerning herd in one that meets.

31 He will report his friend concerning it;
there is acquisition too concerning injustice.

32 And at this my heart was troubled and dropped from its place.

33 Hear a report in the anger of the Lord's wrath,
and a discourse will come out of his mouth.
Under all of heaven is his rule,
and his light is upon the wings of the earth.

34 Behind him a voice will cry out;
he will thunder with a voice of his insolence,
and he will not exchange them, because he will hear his voice.

35 The Strong One will thunder wondrous things with his voice.
For he did great things that we did not know, instructing the snow, 'Come upon the earth!'" and winter, rain and winter of rains of his dominance.

38 In the hand of every human he seals up so that every human being may know his own weakness.

39 But the wild animals came in under shelter and were quiet upon their lair.

40 From their chambers whirlwinds come,
and cold from the peaks.

41 and from the breath of the Strong One frost will give.
And he steers the water as he wishes—
a cloud plasters over a choice thing:
his light will scatter the cloud.

For they are in a state of fear in their lairs, and they crouch in the woods, lying in wait.

And who prepared food for the raven?
For its young have cried to the Lord as they wander about, searching for food.

“If you knew the birthing season of the wild goats of the rock
And did you protect the birth pangs of the deer?

And did you check off their months full of pregnancy,
and did you relieve their birth pangs?

And did you rear their young without fear?
Will you send away their birth pangs?
Their young will break forth;
they will be multiplied with offspring;
they will go forth and never return to them”

“Indeed, was it you that endowed the horse with power and clothed its neck with terror?

And did you endow it with full armor and the majesty of its breast with courage?

Pawing at the plain, it bears itself proudly, and it goes forth in strength.

Meeting up with an arrow, it laughs in scorn and will never turn back from a blade.

Upon it exult the bow and dagger, and in rage it will stamp out the ground and will not steady itself until the trumpet sounds.

But when the trumpet sounds, it says,
‘Good!’

and from afar it scents battle with leap and cry.

“And who is he that let the wild ass go free,
and its bonds—who loosed them?

Yes, I made its home the wilderness, while it laughs to scorn the city’s crowds and hears not the chiding of the tax-gatherer.

“Who is the rain’s father?
And who is it that has given birth to the dew’s nuggets?

And from whose womb does the ice come forth?
And who has given birth to freezing rain in the sky that descends like flowing water?
And who froze the face of the deep?

“And did you understand the bond of Pleiades,
and did you open the barrier of Orion?

And do you know heaven’s changes or the corresponding events under heaven?

“And will you summon a cloud by voice, and will it obey you with a violent burst of water?

And will you send out thunderbolts—and will they go?
And will they say to you, ‘What is it?’

And who gave to women skill in weaving or knowledge of embroidery?

And who is he that numbers the clouds in wisdom
and inclined the sky to the earth?

And dust has been poured out like soil, but I have cemented it, like a block to a stone.

“But will you protect the birth pangs of the deer?

And did you check off their months full of pregnancy,
and did you relieve their birth pangs?

And did you rear their young without fear?
Will you send away their birth pangs?
Their young will break forth;
they will be multiplied with offspring;
they will go forth and never return to them”

40 [※ and the Lord God answered Iob and said:

3 Now Iob said in reply to the Lord:

And I, what answer shall I give to these things?

I will lay my hand on my mouth.
5 I have spoken once, but I will not add to a second time.”

6 Now yet again the Lord said in reply to Iob from the mass of cloud:
7 “No, but gird up your loins like a man,

8 Do not shrug off my judgment.

15 “This is the chief of what the Lord created, made to be mocked at by his angels.

※I.e. the nether world
and its eyes have the look of the morning star.

From its mouth proceed flaming torches, and fiery braziers are being cast forth.

From its nostrils proceeds smoke of a furnace burning with the fire of coals.

Its soul is coals, and a flame proceeds from its mouth.

And in its neck lodges power; destruction runs before it.

And the flesh of its body cleaves together.

[it will flow down on it; it will not be shaken]

Its heart is solid like stone, and it stands like an unyielding anvil.

And when it turns, fear takes hold of the quadrupeds jumping upon the earth.

If spears meet it, they will do nothing, for it regards iron as chaff and bronze as rotten wood.

A bronze bow will never wound it; it regards a catapult as grass and mallets were reckoned as stubble.

and laughs to scorn the waving of a firebrand.

Its bed is sharp points, and all the sea's gold under it is like untold clay.

It makes the deep boil like a caldron and regards the sea as a pot of ointment and Tartarus of the deep as a captive.

[it reckoned the deep for a promenade]

There is nothing on earth like it, made to be mocked at by my angels.

Everything high it sees, and it is king over all that are in the waters.

7 Now it happened, after the Lord spoke all these words to lob, that the Lord said to Eliphaz the Thaimanite: “You have sinned, and your two friends, for you have spoken nothing true in my presence, as has my attendant lob. Now then, take seven calves and seven rams, and go to my attendant lob, and he will make offerings for you, and lob, my attendant, will pray for you, [because only his face will I accept] for, if not for him, I would have destroyed you; for what you spoke against my attendant lob is not true.” 9Then Eliphaz the Thaimanite went, and Baldad the Sauchite and Sophar the Minite, and they did as the Lord instructed them, and he absolved them of their sin on lob's account.

And the Lord gave lob increase, and when he also prayed for the friends, he forgave them their sin, and the Lord gave lob twice as much as he had before so that he had double.

Now all his brothers and his sisters heard about all that had happened to him, and they came to him, and all, as many as had known him from the first. Now when they ate and drank with him, they comforted him and wondered at all that the Lord had brought upon him, and each gave him a lamb and a four-drachma weight of gold bullion. Yes, the Lord blessed the last years of lob more than the ones before, and his livestock was: fourteen thousand sheep, six thousand camels, a thousand yoke of oxen, a thousand female donkeys at pasture. And there were born to him seven sons and three daughters.

14and he called the first Day and the second Cassia and the third Horn of Amaltheia. And there were not found women more excellent than lob's daughters beneath heaven, and their father gave them an inheritance along with their brothers. 16aNow lob lived after his calamity one hundred and seventy years, 16band all the years he lived were two hundred and forty-eight years. 17aAnd it is written that he will rise again with those the Lord raises up. 17b This man is interpreted from the Syriac book as living in the land of Ausitis, on the borders of Idumea and Arabia, and previously his name was lobab; 17cnow he took an Arabian wife and fathered a son, whose name was Ennon, and he in turn had as father Zare, a son of the sons of Esau, and as mother Bosorra, so that he was the fifth from Abraam. 17dAnd these are the kings who reigned in Edom, which country he too ruled: first Balak the son of Beor, and the name of his city was Dennaba, and after Balak, lobab, who is called lob, and after him Hasom, who was a leader from the Thaimanite country, and after him Hadad son of Barad, who cut down Madiam in the plain of Moab, and the name of his city was Geththaim. 17eNow the friends who came to him were: Eliphaz, of the sons of Esau, king of the Thaimanites, Baldad, the tyrant of the Sauchites, Sophar, the king of the Minites.

EDITION OF THE GREEK TEXT

The NETS translation of the Wisdom of Solomon (WisSal) is based on the edition of Joseph Ziegler, Sapientia Salomonis (Septuaginta: Vetus Testamentum Graecum Auctoritate Academiae Scientiarum Gottingensis editum XII.1, 2 [Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1962 (durchgesehene Auflage, 1962)]). This fully-fledged critical edition is based primarily on the evidence of the major Greek witnesses, Codex Vaticanus (B) and Codex Sinaiticus (S), which Ziegler believed to be related, and Codex Alexandrinus (A), but it also draws on the evidence of all the other Greek witnesses and of the versions, particularly the Old Latin. This (the Old Latin) dates from the second half of the second century and is of particular importance because it is based on Greek manuscripts earlier than any still extant. In addition to Ziegler’s edition, I have consulted the manual edition of the Septuagint edited by Alfred Rahlfs (Septuaginta. Id est Vetus Testamentum graece iuxta LXX interpretes, 2 vols. [Stuttgart: Württembergische Bibelanstalt, 1935]), which was used as the basis of the NRSV of the Wisdom of Solomon (Solomon).

I have diverged from the critical text established by Ziegler in only six cases. In two of these, Ziegler adopted into his text readings based on the evidence of the Old Latin: in 2.9 I read ἡμῶν, which is attested by most of the Greek witnesses, and not λειμών (= pratum of the Old Latin), and in 18.23 I read τὴν ὀργήν, attested by all the Greek witnesses, and not τὴν ὄρμην (= Old Latin impetum). In 12.5 I follow an old conjecture and read φονός in place of φονέας. In 7.1 I read ϑυπότος with B*-S, not ϑυπήτος ἀνθρωπός, and in 15.14 I read οἱ καταδυσαστώσαντες, which is attested by many Greek manuscripts and seems to be required by the sense, not καταδυσαστώσαντες. Finally, in 15.17 I read ὁθ’ ών with S and other Greek witnesses, not ών. In all six cases the reading I have adopted corresponds to that followed by the NRSV.

CHARACTER OF THE GREEK

There is widespread recognition that the WisSal was composed in Greek, and the few suggestions that have been made for composition in Hebrew or Aramaic and for translation into Greek have found little support. The book is an example of a protreptic work (προτρεπτικὸς λόγος), an exhortation to adopt a particular philosophy, and it deploys literary genres familiar from Hellenistic rhetorical texts including the diatribe (1.1–6.11 + 6.17–20; 11.15–15.19), the “problem” genre (6.12–16 + 6.21–10.21), and the comparison (σύγκρισις, 11.1–14 + 16.1–19.22). Correspondingly, as Reese in his important study of the literary style and vocabulary of WisSal has shown, the book is written in a good Greek style and shows none of the characteristics of translation Greek. The author does adapt his style to the point that he makes use of parallelismus membrorum, which is a characteristic feature of Hebrew verse, but he also employs “the features of florid Greek rhetorical prose.” The author uses a full range of Hellenistic stylistic devices, and this is evident particularly in his very frequent use of hyperbaton, both hyperbaton involving the separation of the article from its substantive and hyperbaton not linked to an article. A common type of the latter in Wisdom is the placing of a verb form between a noun and its modifier, e.g., παροιμίαν τε μιμοῦται αὐτὴν (4.2). The very frequent use of hyperbaton is obvious even on a casual reading of the Greek of the WisSal. But the rhetorical character of the Greek is likewise evident in the frequent occurrence of different types of wordplay, such as assonance and alliteration. The author also employs various figures of speech that are typical of Hellenistic Greek, of which the sorites of 6.17–20 is merely the best known example.

The vocabulary of the WisSal is quite distinctive within the context of the Septuagint and reflects the Hellenistic milieu in which the book was composed, as Reese has demonstrated. On the one hand, the author uses a number of words familiar from the Septuagint but with their normal meaning in Greek. For example, the word ἀνάγκη occurs in 17.17 and 19.4 in the sense familiar from Greek of "necessity, fate," but when it is used in the Septuagint in books translated from Hebrew, it always has the meaning "distress, anguish" (e.g., Ps 106[107].6). On the other hand, the author uses 335 words (out of a total vocabulary of 1734 different words) that do not occur in any other canonical book of the Septuagint, and Reese has shown that many of these are characteristic of Hellenistic religious, philosophical, ethical, and psychological vocabulary. The use of Hellenistic religious vocabulary in the WisSal is pervasive and includes such words6 as ἄρχωσις ("reflection," 7.26) and πάρεδρος ("sitting by," hence "throne-partner," 9.4, cf. 6.14), both used to describe wisdom, or ἀνόμωσις ("nameless," 14.27) and ἀδίστορος ("lifeless," 13.17; 14.29), both used in the description of idols, or στέφανογόρος ("wearing a crown," 4.2), used of the virtuous but childless believer. The use of Hellenistic philosophical vocabulary within the WisSal is illustrated by some of the terms applied to wisdom in 7.22–24, such as ἀκόλουθος ("unhindered") and ἐνεργεικός ("beneficent"), or by the words that describe Salomon's relationship with wisdom, νυμφή ("bride," 8.2) and ἐρωστής ("enamored," 8.2), which are not used in a metaphorical sense in the Septuagint. Examples of Hellenistic ethical vocabulary are to be found in the terms used for virtues and vices in WisSal, such as άνεξακορία ("longsuffering, forbearance," 2.19) or ἐπιορκία ("perjury," 14.25, one of a whole list of vices in 14.25–26), and examples of psychological vocabulary are to be found in the terms used to describe the fear that gripped the lawless Egyptians (17.3–19), such as ἑνδοματά ("phantoms," 17.3) or δείματα ("terrors," 17.8), or in such terms as ἄπότωμος ("stern, severe," 5.20; 6.5; 11.10; 12.9; 18.15).

Finally it may be observed that the author quotes from the Septuagint in a number of places (cf. e.g., 2.12 and Esa 3.10; 11.22 and Esa 40.15; 16.22 and Ex 9.24).

The NETS Translation of the Wisdom of Solomon

The translation for NETS of a book composed in Greek is manifestly a different kind of enterprise from the translation of a book composed in Hebrew and translated into Greek. The NRSV already provides a translation of the Greek text of WisSal and is based on a Greek text that differs to only a limited extent from the one used for the present translation. That there should, nonetheless, be a need for a NETS translation of WisSal different from that of the NRSV derives from the different aims of the two translations and from the different needs of the audiences at which they are directed. Thus whereas the NRSV "is intended for use in public reading and congregational worship, as well as in private study, instruction, and meditation,"8 NETS "is aimed primarily at . . . a biblically well-educated audience"9 and is intended in the first instance as an aid to scholarly study. With this in mind, I have tried to keep to the following principles for the translation of WisSal for NETS: (1) the general principle "as literal as possible, as free as necessary;" (2) consistency in English translation equivalents so far as is compatible with the meaning of the sentence being translated; (3) in the light of these two principles, the NRSV as the default translation. In addition, my aim has been to provide as clear a translation as possible and to err on the side of literalness, rather than to try to reproduce in English the rhetorical character of the Greek.

With regard to details, I have used gender-inclusive language except in passages where the cultural context seemed to require otherwise (e.g., 14.1, 8). In most such passages, the NRSV gives a similar translation but not in the case of the passage concerning the potter (15.7–13). I have usually translated ἄνθρωπος by "human being" or "mortals," occasionally by other words, and have only translated it by "man" in the one passage (9.5) where the context required it.

Editorial Detail

The chapter and verse divisions follow those given by Ziegler in the Göttingen edition of WisSal and correspond almost without exception to those given in the NRSV. But in one or two cases (e.g., 4.14–15) there are minor differences from the NRSV affecting the verse division.

---

5 The examples that follow are taken from Reese, Hellenistic Influence, 3–25.
6 Except where otherwise indicated, none of the following words occurs elsewhere in the Septuagint.
7 ἰδιάλιμα also occurs in Ier 27(50).39 with the meaning "phantoms."
8 See the preface in the NRSV by B. M. Metzger addressed "To the Reader."
The division of the text into paragraphs also follows Ziegler’s edition of WisSal, but differs in some respects from the arrangement of the text in the NRSV. However, I have not felt it necessary in all cases to follow Ziegler’s punctuation of the Greek text.

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL NOTE
In addition to the NRSV and to standard grammars, lexica and concordances, I have consulted the translations by David Winston (The Wisdom of Solomon [AB 43; Garden City, New York: Doubleday, 1979]) and by S. Holmes (“The Wisdom of Solomon,” in Charles I.518–568). I have also found it helpful on occasions to consult the Revised Version (the revision of the Apocrypha appeared in 1895) and the German translation by Johannes Fichtner (Weisheit Salomos [Handbuch zum Alten Testament: II.6; Tübingen J. C. B. Mohr Paul Siebeck, 1938]), which includes some brief notes on the Greek text.

Michael A. Knibb

1 Love righteousness, you who judge the earth; think about the Lord in goodness, and seek him with sincerity of heart; because he is found by those who do not test him, he reveals himself to those who do not distrust him.

2 For crooked thoughts separate from God, and his power, when it is tested, convicts the foolish, because wisdom will not enter a soul that plots evil or reside in a body involved in sin.

3 For a holy and disciplined spirit will flee from deceit and depart from senseless thoughts and be ashamed when unrighteousness approaches.

4 For wisdom is a kindly spirit, but it will not hold blasphemers free of the guilt of their words, because God is a witness of their inner feelings and a true overseer of their hearts and a hearer of their tongues.

5 Because the spirit of the Lord fills the world and that which holds all things together has knowledge of what is said, therefore those who utter unrighteous things will not escape detection, and justice, when it convicts, will not pass them by.

6 For there will be an inquiry into the intrigues of the impious, and a report of their words will come to the Lord to convict them of their lawless deeds, because a zealous ear hears all things and the noise of grumbling is not hidden. Beware then unprofitable grumbling, and keep your tongue from slander, because no word uttered in secret will go without effect, and a mouth uttering falsehood destroys the soul.

7 Do not zealously seek death by the error of your life or bring destruction on yourselves by the deeds of your hands, because God did not make death nor does he delight in the destruction of the living.

8 For he created all things that they might exist, and the generative forces of the world are wholesome, and there is no destructive poison in them, nor is the kingdom of Hades on earth. For righteousness is immortal.

9 But the impious by their deeds and words summoned it; considering it to be a friend, they wasted away and made a covenant with it, because they are worthy to belong to its party.

10 For they did not reason rightly and said among themselves: "Short and sorrowful is our life, and there is no remedy when a human being dies, and no one is known who has returned from Hades. Because we came into being by chance and hereafter we shall be as though we had never existed, because the breath in our nostrils is smoke and reason is a spark within the beating of our hearts, when it is extinguished, the body will turn to ashes," and the spirit will be dispersed as thin air. And our name will be forgotten in time, and no one will remember our deeds; our life will pass away as the traces of a cloud and will be scattered as mist that is chased by the rays of the sun and weighed down by its heat. For our allotted time is the passing of a shadow, and there is no putting back of our death, because it has been sealed and no one turns it back.

“Come, therefore, let us enjoy the good things that exist, and let us make good use of the creation as in youth; let us take our fill of costly wine and perfumes, and let no flower of spring pass us by. Let us crown ourselves with rosebuds before they are withered.

Let no one of us be without share in our revelry; everywhere let us leave signs of enjoyment, because this is our portion and this our lot. But let our strength be the standard of what righteousness is, for what is weak is proved to be useless.

“Let us lie in wait for the righteous man, because he is inconvenient to us, and he opposes our actions and reproaches us for sins against the law and ascribes to us sins against our training. He professes to have divine knowledge and calls himself a servant of the Lord; he has become a reproof to us of our thoughts; he is a burden to us even to see, because his life is unlike that of others and his behavior is different. We are considered by him to be base, and he keeps distant from our ways as from uncleanness. He calls the last end of the righteous happy and boasts that God is his father. Let us see if his words are true, and let us test what will happen at the end of his life; for if the righteous man is a divine son, he will help him and will rescue him from the hand of those who oppose him. Let us afflict him with insult and torture, that we may learn how reasonable he is and may put his forbearance to the test.

Let us condemn him to a shameful death, for, according to his words, he will be watched over.”

Thus they reasoned, but they were led astray, for their wickedness blinded them, and they did not know divine mysteries nor hoped for the wages of holiness nor recognized the reward for blameless souls. Because God created human beings for incorruption and made them the image of his own nature, but through the envy of the devil death entered the world, and those who belong to his party experience it.

But the souls of the righteous are in the hand of God, and no torment will ever touch them. In the eyes of the foolish they seemed to have died, and their departure was considered to be suffering, and their going from us to be destruction, but they are at peace. For even if in the sight of human beings they were punished, their hope is full of immortality, and having been disciplined a little, they will be greatly benefited, because God tested them and found them worthy of himself; as gold in the furnace, he tested them, and as a sacrificial whole burnt offering, he accepted them. And in the time of their visitation they will shine out, and as sparks through the stubble, they will run about. They will judge nations and rule over peoples, and the Lord will be king over them for ever. Those who trust in him will understand truth, and the faithful will remain with him in love, because grace and mercy are upon his holy ones, and he watches over his chosen ones. But the impious will receive punishment in accordance with the way they reasoned, those who neglected the righteous person and revolted from the Lord— for the one who disdains wisdom and instruction is wretched—and their hope is vain, and their labors are unprofitable.
and their deeds useless; their wives are foolish, and their children evil; their offspring accursed. Because blessed is the barren woman who is undefiled, she who has not known intercourse that involved transgression, for she will have fruit at the visitation of souls.

And blessed is the eunuch who has done no lawless deed with his hands nor thought evil things against the Lord, for special favor will be given him for his faithfulness, and a very delightful lot in the shrine of the Lord.

For the fruit of good labors is renowned, and the root of understanding does not fail.

But the children of adulterers will not reach maturity, and the offspring of unlawful intercourse will perish. Even if they live long, they will be held of no account, and finally their old age will be without honor; if they die early, they will have no hope nor comfort on the day of decision, for the end of an unrighteous generation is grievous.

Better is childlessness with virtue, for in the memory of it is immortality, because it is recognized both by God and by human beings. When it is present, they imitate it, and they long for it when it has gone, and through all time it marches wearing the crown, having won the victory in the contest for the prizes that are undefiled.

But the prolific brood of the impious will be of no use, and illegitimate seedlings from them will not strike deep root or take firm hold; for even if for a time they sprout and produce branches, growing unstable, they will be shaken by the wind, and by the force of the winds uprooted. The branches will be broken off before they come to maturity, and their fruit will be useless, too unripe to eat and fit for nothing.

For children born of unlawful intercourse are witness of evil against their parents when they are examined.

But the righteous, even if they die prematurely, will be at rest.

For an honored old age does not consist in length of time, nor is it measured by number of years, but understanding is gray hair for human beings, and a spotless life is ripe old age.

One who became well-pleasing to God was beloved, and, while living amongst sinners, was taken; he was seized in order that wickedness should not affect his understanding or guile deceive his soul. For the fascination of wickedness obscures the things that are good, and roving desire undermines an innocent mind.

But being perfected in a short time, he fulfilled long years; for his soul was pleasing to the Lord, therefore he hastened from the midst of evil.

But the peoples saw and did not understand nor take such a thing to heart, [that grace and mercy are upon his chosen ones and he watches over his holy ones.]

But the righteous who are dead will condemn the impious who are living, and youth that is quickly made perfect, the prolonged old age of the unrighteous.

for they will see the end of the wise and will not understand what the Lord planned for them and for what he kept them safe. They will see and will be contemptuous, but the Lord will laugh them to scorn. And after this they will become dishonored corpses and an object of outrage amongst the dead for ever, because he will dash them speechless to the ground and shake them from the foundations, and they will be left utterly dry and barren and will be in anguish, and the memory of them will perish.

And they will come with dread at the reckoning of their sins, and their lawless deeds will convict them to their face.

Then the righteous will stand with great confidence in the presence of those who have afflicted them.
and those who make light of their labors.
When they see them, they will be troubled with terrible fear and will be amazed at the unexpected salvation of the righteous.

Repenting, they will say amongst themselves (and through distress of spirit will groan):

"These are they whom we once held in derision and as a byword of reproach—we fools! We thought their life to be folly and their end to be without honor.

How have they been counted amongst divine sons, and how is their lot amongst the holy ones?

Surely we strayed from the way of truth, and the light of righteousness did not shine on us, and the sun did not rise on us.

We were entangled in the thorns of lawlessness and destruction and journeyed through trackless wastes, but the way of the Lord we did not know.

What has our arrogance profited us? And what good has our boasted wealth brought us?

"All those things have passed away like a shadow and like a rumor that runs by, like a ship that passes through the billowy water, of which, when it is has gone by, no trace can be found, no track of its keel in the billows, or, as when a bird flies through the air, no evidence of its passage is found, but the light air, lashed by the beat of its pinions and pierced by its violent rush, is traversed by the movement of its wings, and afterwards no sign of its coming is found there, or as, when an arrow is shot at a target, the air, thus cut through, immediately comes together so that no one knows its pathway, so we, as soon as we were born, ceased to be, and we had no sign of virtue to show but were consumed in our wickedness."

Because the hope of the impious is as dust that is carried by the wind and as light frost that is driven away by a hurricane, and it is scattered like smoke by the wind and passes like the remembrance of a guest who stays for only one day.

But the righteous live for ever, and in the Lord is their reward, and the care of them with the Most High. Therefore they will receive a glorious crown and a beautiful diadem from the hand of the Lord, because with his right hand he will protect them and with his arm he will shield them. He will take his zeal as his whole armor and make creation his weapons for vengeance on his enemies; he will put on righteousness as a breastplate and wear impartial justice as a helmet; he will take holiness as an invincible shield and will sharpen stern anger for a sword, and creation will fight with him against those without sense. Well-aimed shafts of lightning will fly out and from the clouds, as from a well-drawn bow, will leap to the target, and hailstones full of wrath will be hurled as from a catapult; the water of the sea will rage against them, and rivers will overwhelm them relentlessly; a mighty wind will rise against them and like a hurricane will winnow them away. And lawlessness will make the whole earth a desert, and evil-doing will overturn the thrones of rulers.

Hear therefore, you kings, and understand; learn, you judges of the ends of the earth; give ear, you that have dominion over multitudes and boast of many nations, because your dominion was given you from the Lord and your dominance from the Most High. He will examine your deeds and inquire into your counsels, because, being servants of his kingdom, you did not judge rightly or keep the law or walk according to the counsel of God. Terribly and swiftly he will come upon you, because a severe judgment falls on those in high places.

For the least may be pardoned in mercy, but the mighty will be mightily tested, for the Sovereign Lord of all will not give way to anyone or have regard for greatness, because he himself made small and great and takes thought for all alike, but a strict inquiry awaits the powerful.

To you therefore, you princes, my words are addressed, that you may learn wisdom and not fall into error.
For those who have observed holy things in holiness will be made holy, and those who have been taught them will find a defense.

Set your desire therefore on my words; long for them, and you will be instructed.

Wisdom is radiant and unfading and is easily discerned by those who love her and found by those who seek her; she anticipates those who set their desire on her to make herself known in advance.

Those who rise early for her will not have to labor, for they will find her sitting at their gates.

For to fix one’s thought on her is perfect understanding, and those who lie awake on her account will quickly be free from care, because she goes about seeking those worthy of her and graciously appears to them in their paths and meets them in every thought.

For her true beginning is the desire for instruction, and concern for instruction is love of her, and love of her is keeping her laws, and paying attention to her laws is confirmation of incorruption, and incorruption brings one near to God; so the desire for wisdom leads to a kingdom.

If therefore you take delight in thrones and scepters, you princes of peoples, honor wisdom that you may reign for ever.

What wisdom is and how she came into being I will declare, and I will hide no mysteries from you, but I will trace her out from her first beginning and bring knowledge of her into the open, and I shall not pass by the truth.

Nor indeed will I travel in the company of consumptive envy, because this can have no fellowship with wisdom.

A multitude of wise people is the salvation of the world, and a sensible king is the stability of a people.

Therefore be instructed by my words, and you will profit.

I myself also am mortal like everyone, and a descendant of the first-formed individual born on earth, and in the womb of a mother I was molded into flesh, within the period of ten months being compacted of blood, from the seed of man and the pleasure that accompanies intercourse.

And I myself, when I was born, drew in the common air and fell upon the kindred earth, with the same first sound crying like everyone.

In swaddling clothes I was nursed, and with care.

For no king has had a different beginning of existence, but there is for all one entrance into life and the same way out.

Therefore I prayed, and understanding was given to me; I called on God, and a spirit of wisdom came to me.

I preferred her to scepters and thrones, and wealth I considered nothing in comparison with her.

Neither did I compare any priceless gem to her, because all gold in her sight is a little sand, and silver will be counted as clay before her.

I loved her more than health and beauty and chose to have her rather than light, because the radiance from her never rests.

But all good things came to me together with her and in her hands uncounted wealth.

I rejoiced in them all because wisdom leads them, but I did not know that she was their mother.

I learned without guile, and I impart without grudging; I do not hide her wealth, for it is an unfailing treasure for human beings; those who get it obtain friendship with God, commended for the gifts that come from instruction.

May God grant to me to speak with judgment and to think thoughts worthy of what has been given to me, because he himself is the guide even of wisdom and the corrector of the wise.

For both we and our words are in his hand, both all understanding and skill in crafts.

For he himself gave me an unerring knowledge of the things that exist, to know the constitution of the world and the activity of the elements, and all things, both what is secret and what

22 for she that is the fashioner of all things taught me, namely\(^b\) wisdom.

For there is in her a spirit that is intelligent,
invest, unique, of many parts, subtle,
free-moving, lucid, unpolluted, distinct, invulnerable, loving the good,
sharp,
unhindered, beneficent, loving towards

For wisdom moves more freely than any movement;
she pervades and penetrates all things
because of her pureness.

For she is a breath of the power of God and an emanation of the pure glory of the Almighty;
therefore nothing defiled gains entrance into her.

For she is a reflection of eternal light and a spotless mirror of the activity of God and an image of his goodness.

Although she is one, she can do all things, and while remaining in herself, she renews
all things,

for God loves nothing except the person who lives with wisdom,
for she is more beautiful than the sun
and above every constellation of stars.
Compared with the light, she is found to be more radiant;
for this is succeeded by the night,
but against wisdom wickedness does not and the Sovereign Lord of all loves her, for she is an initiate in the knowledge of God

5 If riches are a desirable possession in life, what is richer than wisdom which makes all things?

6 And if understanding is productive, who more than she is the fashioner of the things that exist?

7 And if anyone loves righteousness,
the fruits of her labors are virtues, for she teaches self-control and understanding,
righteousness and courage;
nothing is more useful in life than these for human beings.

8 And if anyone longs for wide experience, she knows the things of old and infers the things to come;
she understands the subtleties of speech and
the solutions of riddles;
she has foreknowledge of signs and wonders and the outcomes of seasons and times.

9 I determined then to take her to live with
me,
knowing that she would be a good counselor for me
and a comfort in cares and grief.

10 Because of her, I will have glory among the multitudes
and honor in the presence of elders, although I am young.

11 I will be found quick in judgment and in the sight of rulers will be admired.
When I am silent, they will wait,
and when I speak, they will pay attention,
and if I talk at greater length,
they will place a hand on their mouth.

12 Because of her, I will have immortality and will leave behind an everlasting memorial for those who come after
me.

13 I will govern peoples, and nations will be subject to me;
dread princes will fear me when they hear among the multitude I will show myself noble, and in war courageous.

16 When I enter my house, I will find rest with
her;
for companionship with her has no

and in the labors of her hands unfailing wealth and in training in intimate companionship with her understanding and great renown in conversing with her, I went about seeking how I might take her to myself.

I was a naturally clever child, and I obtained a good soul as my lot, or rather, being good, I entered an undefiled body.

But knowing that I would not otherwise gain possession of her unless God gave her to me—and it was a mark of understanding to know in whose gift it was—
I made supplication to the Lord and besought him, and with my whole heart I said,

"God of the fathers and Lord of mercy, who made all things by your word and by your wisdom formed human beings to rule over the creatures that were made by you and to manage the world in holiness and righteousness and to pronounce judgment in uprightness of soul, give me wisdom that sits by you on your throne,
and do not reject me from amongst your children, because I am your servant and the son of your handmaid, a weak and short-lived man, with limited understanding of judgment and laws;
for even if someone is perfect amongst human beings, if the wisdom that comes from you is absent, they will be considered to be nothing.

You preferred me as king of your people and judge of your sons and daughters;
you said that I should build a shrine on your holy mountain, an altar in the city of your encamping, a copy of the holy tent that you prepared beforehand from the beginning.

With you is wisdom, which knows your works and was present when you made the world and understands what is pleasing in your eyes and what is right according to your commandments.

Send her out from the holy heavens, and from your glorious throne send her, that, being present with me, she may labor with me and that I may learn what is well-pleasing before you, for she knows all things and understands them and will guide me prudently in my actions and guard me with her glory.

Then my deeds will be acceptable, and I will judge your people justly and be worthy of the throne of my father.
For what human being can learn divine counsel?
Or who can conceive what the Lord wills?
For the thoughts of mortals are worthless, and our inventions liable to fail.
For a corruptible body burdens the soul, and the earthly tent weighs down a mind full of cares.

With difficulty we make inferences about what is on earth, and what is at hand we find with labor, but who has traced out what is in the heavens?

Who has learned your counsel unless you gave wisdom and sent your holy spirit from on high?
And thus the ways of those on earth were set right, and human beings were taught what is pleasing to you and were saved by wisdom."

She carefully guarded the first-formed father of the world, when he alone was created, and delivered him from his own transgression;
she gave him strength to rule over all things.

But when an unrighteous man departed from her in his anger, he perished through his fratricidal rage.

When because of him the earth was flooded, wisdom again saved it, piloting the righteous man by a worthless piece of wood.

She also, when nations, collaborating together in wickedness, were put to confusion, recognized the righteous man and preserved him blameless with God and kept him strong in the face of compassion for his child.

She rescued a righteous man, when the impious were perishing, as he fled from the fire descending on the Five Cities.

As testimony of their evil a smoking waste still remains, and plants bearing fruit that does not ripen, and a stele of salt standing as a monument to an unbelieving soul.

aOr sharing her words  bLacking in Gk  cOr servants  dOr thoughts  eOr before it is ripe For, having passed wisdom by, they not only were hindered from recognizing the things that are good,
but also left behind for human life a reminder of their folly in order that in the things in which they failed they would not be able to escape detection.

But wisdom rescued from troubles those who served her.

When a righteous man fled from his brother’s anger,
she guided him on straight paths;
she showed him a divine kingdom and gave him knowledge of holy things;
she prospered him in his toils and increased the fruits of his labor.

When in their greed men were trying to prevail over him,
she stood by him and made him rich;
she carefully guarded him from his enemies, and from those who lay in wait for him she kept him safe;
and in his arduous contest she decided in his favor,
that he might learn that piety is more powerful than everything.

She did not abandon a righteous man who had been sold
but rescued him from sin;
she went down with him into the dungeon, and when he was in chains, she did not leave him until she had brought him the scepter of a kingdom and authority over those who ruled over
him.
Those who had found fault with him she showed to be false
and gave him everlasting glory.

A holy people and a blameless race
she rescued from a nation of oppressors;
she entered into the soul of the Lord’s attendant and withstood terrible kings with wonders and signs.

She paid to holy people a reward for their labor;
she guided them on a marvelous way and became a covering for them by day and a blaze of stars by night.

She led them across the Red Sea and brought them through deep water, but their enemies she drowned,
and from the bottom of the deep she cast them up.

Therefore the righteous spoiled the impious;
they sang hymns, O Lord, to your holy name
and praised with one accord your hand that vindicated them, because wisdom opened the mouth of the dumb
and made the tongues of infants articulate.

She prospered their actions by the hand of a holy prophet.

They journeyed through an uninhabited
wilderness
and in trackless places pitched their tents;
they withstood their adversaries and defended themselves against their enemies.

They thirsted and called upon you,
and water was given them out of flinty rock,
and a remedy for their thirst out of hard
stone.

For through the very things by which their enemies were punished, they themselves were benefited in their need.

Instead of the perennial spring of a river, stirred up with defiled blood in rebuke for the decree to kill the infants, you unexpectedly gave them abundant water, having shown by their thirst at that time
how you punished their opponents.

For when they were tested, although they were being disciplined in mercy, they learned how the impious, being judged in anger, were tormented.

For these you put to the test like a father giving a warning,
but the others you examined like a stern
king passing sentence.

Whether far away or near, they were alike distressed,
for a double grief took hold of them,
and a groaning at the memory of what had occurred.

For when they heard that through their own punishments
the others were being benefited, they took notice of the Lord.

For they mockingly disowned the one who long before had been cast out and exposed,
but at the end of events they marveled at
him, having thirsted in a way not like the righteous.

In return for their senseless and wicked thoughts through which they were led astray to worship irrational reptiles and worthless vermin,
you sent on them a multitude of irrational creatures to take vengeance in order that they might learn that a person is punished by the very things by which the person sins.

For your all-powerful hand, which created the world out of formless matter, was not at a loss to send out on them a multitude of bears or bold lions or newly-created unknown monsters, full of fury, either breathing out blasts of fiery breath or belching forth smoke or flashing terrible sparks from their eyes, which were able not only to wipe them out by the harm they did but even to destroy them by their terrifying appearance alone.

Even without these they could have fallen by a single breath, being pursued by justice
and scattered by the breath of your power, but by measure and number and weight you ordered all things.

For it is always in your power to show great
strength,
and who can withstand the might of your arm?

Because the whole world before you is like a speck that tips the scales and like a drop of dew that falls on the ground in the morning.

You have mercy on all, because you can do
all things,
and you overlook the sins of human beings
that they may repent.

For you love all things that exist and detest none of the things that you have made,
for you would not have formed anything if you had hated it.

How would anything have endured if you had not willed it?
Or how would anything not called into existence
by you have been preserved?

You spare all things, because they are yours,
O Sovereign Lord, you who love
human beings.

For your incorruptible spirit is in all things.
Therefore you reprove little by little those who fall into error, and by reminding them of the things through which they sin you warn them
in order that, being freed from wickedness, they may believe in you, O Lord.

For even the ancient inhabitants of your holy land, because you hated them for practicing the most detestable things—
deeds of sorcery and unholy rites, merciless slaughters of children, sacrificial feasting on human flesh and blood—
those initiates from the midst of a pagan ceremony
and parents who murder helpless lives, you willed to destroy by the hands of our fathers in order that the land that is the most precious of all before you might receive a worthy colony of servants of God.

But even these you spared as being human beings,
and you sent wasps as forerunners of your army
in order to destroy them little by little.

It was not that you were unable to give the impious into the hands of the righteous in battle or to wipe them out at a stroke by terrible beasts or by your stern word, but judging them little by little you gave them an opportunity to repent, though you were not unaware that their origin was evil
and their wickedness inborn and that their way of thinking would never change.

For they were an accursed race from the beginning,
and it was not through fear of anyone that you granted them pardon for the things in which they sinned.

For who will say, "What have you done?"
Or who will withstand your judgment?
Who will accuse you for the destruction of nations that you made?
Or who will come before you to plead as an advocate for unrighteous human beings?

For neither is there any god beside you,
whose care is for all,
to whom you must prove that you did not act unjustly, nor can any king or prince look you in the face concerning those whom you have punished.

But being righteous, you manage all things righteously,
considering it alien to your power to condemn anyone who does not deserve to be punished.

For your strength is the beginning of
righteousness,
and your sovereignty over all causes you to spare all.

For you show your strength when people doubt the completeness of your power,
and you rebuke any insolence among those who know it.
Although you are sovereign in strength, you judge with fairness, and with great forbearance you govern us, for you have the power to prevail whenever you choose.

You taught your people by such acts as these that the righteous ought to be loving towards human beings, and you have made your sons hopeful, because you give repentance for sins.

For if you punished with such great care and indulgence the enemies of your servants and those deserving of death, giving them time and opportunity in which to free themselves from their wickedness, with how great carefulness have you judged your sons to whose fathers you gave oaths and covenants of good promises!

While therefore you chastise us, you scourge our enemies ten thousand times more in order that, when we judge, we may think about your goodness and, when we are judged, we may look for mercy.

Hence those who lived unrighteously in a life of folly you tormented through their own abominations.

For they went far astray on the paths of error, taking as gods the most despised and loathsome of animals being deceived like foolish infants. Therefore, as though to unreasoning children, you sent your judgment as a mockery. But they, not taking warning from a playful rebuke, will experience the deserved divine judgment.

For through those animals at which in their suffering they became incensed, which they had thought to be gods, being punished by means of them, they saw and recognized as the true God the one whom before they denied knowing; therefore the utmost condemnation came upon them.

For all human beings who were ignorant of God were foolish by nature, and from the good things that are seen they were unable to know the one who is, nor, though paying attention to his works, did they recognize the craftsman, but either fire or wind or swift air or the circle of the stars or turbulent water or the luminaries of heaven, rulers of the world, they thought to be gods that rule the world.

If it was through delight in their beauty that they took these things to be gods, let them know how much better than these is their Sovereign Lord, for the first author of beauty created them. And if they were amazed at their power and working, let them perceive from them how much more powerful is the one who formed them.

For from the greatness and beauty of created things is their Creator correspondingly discerned. But nevertheless little blame attaches to these, for perhaps they go astray while seeking God and wishing to find him.

For being conversant with his works, they make their search and are persuaded by the sight, because the things that are seen are beautiful. But again, not even they are to be pardoned; for if they had the power to know so much that they could investigate the world, how is it that they did not more quickly find the Sovereign Lord of these things.

But wretched, with their hopes set on dead things, are those who designated as gods the work of human hands, gold and silver fashioned with skill, and representations of animals or useless stone, the work of an ancient hand.

If some carpenter saws down a tree that is easy to handle, skillfully strips off all its bark and, working it in an attractive way, forms a useful vessel that serves life's needs and uses up the cast-off pieces of his work for the preparation of his food and has his fill and, taking a cast-off piece of wood from them, a stick crooked and full of knots, carves it with care in his idle moments and shapes it with skill gained in leisure, it is this he forms into the image of a human being or makes like some worthless animal, smearing it with vermillion and coloring it red with paint and smearing over every blemish in it, and having made for it a niche worthy of it, he sets it in a wall and secures it with iron. Thus he takes thought for it that it may not fall down, knowing that it is unable to help itself, for it is an image and has need of help. But when he prays about his possessions, his marriage and his children, he is not ashamed to address a lifeless object, and for health he calls upon that which is weak; for life he prays to that which is dead; for aid he supplicates that which is utterly inexperienced; for a good journey that which cannot take a step; for means of livelihood and work and success with his hands, he asks strength of that which has no strength at all in its hands.

Again, one preparing for a voyage and about to travel over raging waves calls upon a piece of wood more fragile than the ship that carries him. For it was longing for gain that planned it, and wisdom the craftsman that built it, but it is your providence, Father, that pilots it, because you have made a way in the sea and a safe path in the waves, showing that you can save from everything so that even a person who lacks skill may put to sea. It is your will that the works of your wisdom should not be without effect; therefore human beings trust their lives even to the smallest piece of wood and passing through the billows on a raft come safely through. For even in the beginning, when arrogant giants were perishing, the hope of the world fled for refuge on a raft and, piloted by your hand, left to the world the seed of a new generation. For blessed is the wood through which righteousness comes, but the handmade idol is accursed, and the one who made it, because he worked it, and the corruptible thing was named a god. For equally hateful to God are the impious and their impiety, for what was done will be punished together with the one who did it. Therefore there will be a visitation also upon the idols of the nations, because, though part of the divine creation, they have become an abomination, a stumbling-block for the lives of human beings and a trap for the feet of the foolish.

For the invention of idols was the beginning of fornication, and the discovery of them the corruption of life. For they did not exist from the beginning, nor will they last forever. For through human conceit they entered the world, and because of this a speedy end was planned for them. For a father, tormented by untimely grief, having made an image of the child who had been quickly taken away, now honored as a god what was once a dead human being and handed on to his dependants mysteries and sacred rites.

Then, when the impious custom had grown strong with time, it was kept as a law, and at the command of princes carved images were worshipped. When people could not honor them in their presence because they lived far off, they imagined their appearance from afar and made a visible image of the king whom they honored, that through diligence they might flatter the absent one as though present. But the ambition of the craftsman impelled even those who did not know the king to a higher pitch of worship. For he, perhaps wishing to please his ruler, skillfully forced the likeness into a more beautiful form, but the multitude, drawn by the charm of his work, now counted as an object of worship the one whom a little before had been honored as a human being.

And this became a trap for human life, because people, enslaved either by misfortune or tyranny, bestowed on objects of stone and wood the incommunicable name. Then it was not enough to go astray concerning the knowledge of God, but though living in great strife through ignorance, they call such great evils peace. For whether performing ritual murders of children or secret mysteries or frenzied revels connected with strange laws, they no longer keep either their lives or their marriages pure, but they either kill one another by treachery or grieve one another by adultery. And all things are an overwhelming confusion of blood and murder, theft and deceit, corruption, unfaithfulness, tumult, perjury, turmoil of those who are good, forgetfulness of favors, defilement of souls, sexual perversion, disorder in marriages, adultery and debauchery.

For the worship of idols that may not be named is the beginning and cause and end of every evil. For they either rave in a state of euphoria or prophecy lies or live unrighteously or readily commit perjury, for because they trust in lifeless idols, when they swear wicked oaths, they expect to suffer no harm. But on both accounts justice will pursue them: because they thought wrongly about God through devoting themselves to idols and in deceit swore unrighteously through despising holiness.

For it is not the power of those by whom they swear, but justice for those who sin that always pursues the transgression of the unrighteous.

But you, our God, are kind and true, longsuffering and ordering all things with mercy. For even if we sin, we are yours, knowing your might, but knowing we are considered yours, we will not sin; for to know you is perfect righteousness, and to recognize your might is the root of immortality. For neither has the artful inventiveness of human beings led us astray, nor the fruitless toil of painters, a figure stained with varied colors, whose appearance arouses yearning in fools so that they long for the unbreathing form of a dead image. Lovers of evil things and worthy of such objects of hope are those who make or long for or worship them.

For a potter, laboriously kneading soft earth, molds each single article for our service, but out of the same clay he fashions both the vessels that serve clean uses and the contrary ones, all alike, but what shall be the use of each of them of either sort the worker in clay decides. And, toiling perversely, he molds a futile god out of the same clay, he who a little before came into being out of the earth and after a short while returns whence he was taken, when the soul, which was lent him is demanded back.

But his concern is not that his health is likely to fail or that his life is brief, but he sets himself up against goldsmiths and silversmiths and imitates molders of bronze and considers it a glorious thing that he molds counterfeit.

His heart is ashes, his hope cheaper than earth, his life more ignoble than clay, because he did not know the one who molded him and infused him with an active soul and breathed into him a life-giving spirit, but he considered our life to be a game, and our existence a festival held for profit, for, he says, one must make money wherever one can, even by evil. For this man more than any knows that he sins when, from earthly material, he makes fragile vessels and carved images.

But most foolish, and with lives more miserable than that of an infant, are all the enemies of your people who oppressed them, because they even thought all the idols of the nations were gods, although they have neither the use of eyes for seeing nor nostrils for drawing breath nor ears to hear nor fingers for feeling, and their feet are of no use for walking. For a human being made them, and one whose spirit is borrowed molded them; for no human has the power to mold a god like himself, but, being mortal, he makes a dead thing with lawless hands, for he is better than the objects of his worship in that he had life, but they never.

And they worship the most detestable animals;
for, when compared for lack of intelligence, they are worse than all others, 19 nor, viewed as animals\(^a\), are they beautiful so that one would desire them, but they have escaped both the approval of God and his blessing.

16 Therefore they were deservedly punished through similar creatures\(^b\) and were tormented by swarms of vermin. Instead of which punishment you benefited your people and prepared quails for food, a delicacy to satisfy the desire of appetite, in order that those people\(^b\), when they desired food, might reject even the demands of appetite because of the hideousness of the creatures sent among them, but these, \(^b\) your people\(^b\), having suffered want for a short time, might partake of delicacies.

3 For it was necessary that upon those who ruled as tyrants inescapable want should come and that to these it should only be shown how their enemies were tormented.

4 For even when the terrible rage of wild animals came upon them and they were perishing through the bites of twisted snakes, your anger did not continue to the end; for a short while they were troubled as a warning, possessing a symbol of salvation to remind them of the command of your law.

5 For the one who turned was not saved because of what was beheld, but because of you, the savior of all.

6 For the bites of grasshoppers and flies killed them, and no remedy was found for their life, because they deserved to be punished by such animals\(^b\), but not even the teeth of venomous dragons conquered your sons, for your mercy came to their help and healed them.

7 For they were stung to remind them of your oracles and were quickly delivered in order that they might not fall into deep forgetfulness and might not be distracted from your kindness.

12 For it was neither herb nor poultice that cured them, but your word, O Lord, that heals all things. For you have authority over life and death and you lead down to the gates of Hades and bring back up again.

13 A person kills in his wickedness but cannot bring back the departed spirit or set free the soul that has been taken.

15 To escape from your hand is impossible; for the impious, denying that they knew you, were scourged by the strength of your arm, pursued by unusual rains and hail and relentless storms, and utterly consumed by fire.

16 For, what was most unexpected, in water that quenches all things the fire had still greater effect, for the world fights on behalf of the righteous; for at one time the flame was restrained, that it might not consume the creatures sent against the impious, but that seeing this\(^b\) they might know that they were being pursued by divine judgment; at another time, even in the midst of water, it burned beyond the power of fire, that it might destroy the produce of an unrighteous land.

18 Instead of which you fed your people with the food of angles and untiringly supplied them from heaven with bread ready \(^b\) to eat\(^b\), able to meet every pleasure and suited to every task.

19 For your sustenance manifested your sweetness towards your children and, serving the desire of the one who took it, \(^c\) was transformed\(^c\) to what anyone wished.

22 But snow and ice survived the fire and did not melt, that they might know that fire destroyed the fruits of their enemies, blazing in the hail and flashing in the rains, and again this fire\(^b\), in order that the righteous might be fed, forgot even its own power.

24 For creation, serving you who made it, strains itself for punishment against the unrighteous and relaxes in kindness on behalf of those who trust in you.

25 Therefore at that time also, changed into all forms\(^b\), it served your all-nourishing bounty according to the wish of those who \(^d\) were in need\(^d\) in order that your sons, whom you loved, O Lord, might learn

\(^a\) Or living creatures \(^b\) Lacking in Gk \(^c\) Or transformed itself \(^d\) Or made supplication that it is not the varieties\textsuperscript{a} of fruits that nourish human beings, but your word preserves those who trust in you.

27 For what was not destroyed by fire melted away when simply warmed by a faint ray of the sun in order that it might be known that one must rise before the sun to give you thanks and make petition to you at the dawning of the light;

28 for the hope of an ungrateful person will melt away like the winter’s frost and will flow away like waste water.

17 For great are your judgments and hard to explain\textsuperscript{b}; therefore uninstructed souls have gone astray.

2 For when lawless people thought to oppress a holy nation, they themselves lay as captives of darkness and prisoners of long night, shut in under their roofs, fugitives from eternal providence.

3 For thinking that in their secret sins they were unobserved behind a dark veil of forgetfulness, they were scattered, terribly alarmed and greatly troubled by apparitions.

4 For not even the deep recess that held them protected them from fear, but sounds rushing down crashed all around them, and dismal phantoms with gloomy faces appeared.

5 And no fire had force enough to give light, nor did the brilliant flames of the stars avail to illumine that horrible night.

6 Only a terrifying self-kindled burning mass glowed through to them, and becoming terrified, they considered the things that were seen to be worse than that sight that was not visible.

7 The delusions of their magic art were ineffective, a contemptuous rebuke of their boasted intelligence.

8 For those who promised to drive away terrors and troubles from a sick soul were sick themselves with ridiculous fear.

9 For even if nothing disturbing frightened them, yet scared by the passing of vermin and the hissing of reptiles they perished in trembling fear, refusing to look even at the dark haze, which nowhere could be avoided.

10 For wickedness, condemning itself\textsuperscript{c}, testifies to its innate cowardice, and when afflicted by conscience, it always exaggerates the difficulties.

12 For fear is nothing but a giving up of the help that comes from reason, and inner expectation, being weaker, prefers ignorance of what causes the torment.

14 But they, throughout the night that was in reality powerless and came upon them from the recesses of powerless Hades, sleeping the same sleep, now were plagued by monstrous phantoms, now were paralyzed by their souls’ surrender, for sudden and unexpected fear poured over them.

16 So then whoever was there fell down and was held bound, shut up in a prison without bars; for whether they were farmers or shepherds or workers whose toils were in the wilderness, they were overtaken and awaited the inescapable fate;

18 for with one chain of darkness they were all bound.

(18) Whether it was a whistling wind or the melodious sound of birds in wide-spread branches or the rhythmic movement of violently rushing water or the harsh crash of rocks hurled down or the unseen running of leaping animals or the sound of the most savage roaring beasts or an echo reverberating from a hollow of the mountains, it paralyzed them with terror.

20 For the whole world shone with brilliant light and went about its work unhindered; only over them heavy night was spread, an image of the darkness that was destined to receive them, but still heavier than darkness were they to themselves.

18 But for your holy ones there was very great light. They\textsuperscript{d}, hearing their voices but not seeing their form, counted them happy, because they had not suffered, and were thankful that they did not harm them\textsuperscript{e} though having previously been wronged, and they begged their forgiveness for having been at variance with them.

3 In contrast you provided a burning pillar of fire as a guide for an unknown journey,

\textsuperscript{a}Or production \textsuperscript{b}Or describe \textsuperscript{c}Or being condemned \textsuperscript{d}I.e. their enemies \textsuperscript{e}Lacking in Gk a harmless sun for a glorious residence abroad.

4 But those deserved to be deprived of light and imprisoned in darkness who had kept your sons shut up, through whom the incorruptible light of the law was to be given to the world.

5 When they had resolved to kill the infants of the holy ones and one child had been exposed and saved, in punishment you took away a multitude of their children and destroyed them all together by a mighty flood.

6 That night was made known in advance to our fathers in order that, having sure knowledge, they might rejoice in the oaths in which they had trusted.

7 The salvation of the righteous and the destruction of their enemies were expected by your people; for by the same means by which you punished our opponents you called us to yourself and glorified us.

8 For in secret holy children of good people offered sacrifices and with one accord established the divine law that the holy ones should share alike the same blessings and dangers, while already singing the praises of the fathers.

9 But the discordant cry of their enemies echoed back, and the piteous sound of lamentation for their children was spread abroad.

10 Slave with master were together punished with the same penalty, and commoner suffered the same as king, and together, from the same form of death, they all had corpses too many too count. For the living were not sufficient even to bury them, since in a single moment their most precious offspring had been destroyed.

11 For although they disbelieved everything because of their magical practices, at the destruction of their firstborn, they acknowledged your people to be a divine son.

12 For while peaceful silence enveloped all things and night was in the middle of its own swift course, from heaven, from the royal throne, your all-powerful word leapt as a stern warrior into the midst of the land marked for destruction,

13 bearing your irrevocable command as a sharp rapier; standing, it filled all things with death, and while it touched heaven, it stood on the earth.

14 Then at once apparitions in terrible dreams greatly troubled them, and unexpected fears came upon them, and one here and another there, hurled down half-dead, revealed why they were dying; for the dreams that disturbed them forewarned them of this, that they might not perish without knowing why they suffered terribly.

15 But the experience of death touched the righteous also, and a plague came upon the multitude in the wilderness, but the divine anger did not long continue.

16 For a blameless man hastened to act as their champion, bringing the weapon of his own ministry, prayer and propitiation by incense; he withstood the wrath and set an end to the disaster, showing that he was your attendant.

17 He overcame the bitter anger, not by bodily strength, nor by force of arms, but by his word he subdued the chastiser, calling to mind the oaths and covenants given to the fathers.

18 For when the dead had already fallen on one another in heaps, he intervened, held back the anger and cut off its way to the living.

19 For on his full-length robe the whole world was depicted, and the glories of the fathers were engraved on the four rows of stones, and your majesty was represented on the diadem on his head.

20 From these the destroyer withdrew; these he feared, for merely the experience of anger was enough.

21 But merciless wrath assailed the impius until the end; for he knew in advance what was to happen in respect of them, how, having given permission to be away and having eagerly sent them on their way, they would change their minds and pursue them.

22 For while they were still engaged in mourning and were lamenting at the graves of the dead, they adopted another foolish plan and pursued as fugitives those whom, with urgent request, they had driven out.

4 For the fate they deserved drew them on to this end and made them forget the things that had happened in order that they might fill up the punishment that their torments still lacked and that your people might experience an incredible journey, but they themselves might find a strange death.

5 For the whole creation was fashioned again in its original nature, serving your commands in order that your children might be kept unharmed.

6 The cloud was seen overshadowing the camp, and dry land emerging out of what before was water, and an unhindered way out of the Red Sea, and a grassy plain out of the violent surge, through which those protected by your hand passed as one nation, after gazing on marvelous wonders.

7 For like horses they grazed bat large, and like lambs they skipped about, praising you, O Lord, who rescued them.

8 For they still remembered the events of their sojourn in a foreign land, how instead of producing animals the earth brought forth gnats, and instead of fish the river vomited up a mass of frogs.

9 But later they also saw a new kind of birds, when, driven by desire, they asked for luxurious delicacies, for, to comfort them, quails came up from the sea for them.

10 But the punishments did not come upon the sinners without signs being given beforehand in the violence of the thunders, for they suffered justly for their wicked acts, for they practiced a more bitter hatred of strangers.

11 For others refused to welcome those who did not know them when they visited, but these made slaves of guests who were their benefactors.

12 And not only so—but while there will be a visitation of some sort on the former, since they received foreigners with hostility, the latter afflicted with terrible hard labor those whom they had received with feasting and who had already shared the same rights. They were stricken also with loss of sight—just as were those at the doors of the righteous man—when, surrounded by thick darkness, each tried to find the way through their own doors.

13 For as on a harp the notes vary the nature of the rhythm, while each note always keeps to its sound, so the elements changed places with one another, as may be accurately inferred from the sight of the things that happened.

14 For land animals were transformed into watery creatures, and creatures that swim moved over to the land;

15 fire even in water retained its normal power, and water forgot its fire-quenching nature; flames, on the contrary, did not consume the flesh of perishable creatures that walked among them, nor did they melt the ice-like kind of heavenly food that melted easily.

16 For in all things, O Lord, you magnified your people and glorified them and did not disregard them, standing by them in every time and place.
THE EDITION OF THE GREEK TEXT

The book of Sirach actually has three different titles, depending on the language of its transmission or the religious tradition that reads it. In Hebrew the book is known as The Wisdom of Joshua (Jesus) Ben Sira. In the Vulgate, the book is called Ecclesiasticus (the church’s book). In the Jewish-Greek scriptures and for NETS, the title is that given above, Sirach. For Sirach, I have used the Göttingen edition of Joseph Ziegler (Septuaginta: Vetus Testamentum Graecum Auctoritate Academiae Litterarum Gottingensis editum XII.2: Sapientia Iesu Filii Sirach [Göttingen: Vandenhoek & Ruprecht, 1965]). In his critical text, Ziegler places verses from a later Greek recension (GKII; see below) in smaller typeface, and I have followed his judgments as to what constitutes GKII. As a result, I have punctuated the entire consecutive text, including the GKII. In some cases, if the reader skips over the GKII, the punctuation might not make the best English sense, since it relies on the presence of the additional verses. All the Greek manuscripts extant for Sirach contain a textual displacement in which the order of 30.25–33.13a and 33.13b–36.16a is reversed. Ziegler has placed the Greek in the correct order. The NRSV along with Patrick W. Skehan’s and Alexander Di Lella’s Anchor Bible commentary follow Ziegler in giving the text in its proper order. In the NETS translation, I have followed suit, and I give the chapter and verse numbers following the correct order with the chapter and verse numbers of the Greek in its displaced order in parentheses.

One feature of Ziegler’s edition is the frequency of reconstructions of an original Greek text that nowhere exists in the Greek manuscript tradition. Usually Ziegler takes his cue from Alfred Rahlfs or Rudolph Smend in deciding that the entire Greek tradition is a corruption of a no-longer-extant Greek original. I have followed Ziegler in almost every case. For example, NETS for Sir 3.17 reads, “Child, in gentleness conduct your affairs, and you will be loved more than a person who gives,” which reflects Ziegler’s text, υπερ ἀνθρώπων δότην, instead of the majority of the Greek tradition, which reads ύπο ἀνθρώπου δεκτοῦ “by an acceptable person.” Ziegler has adopted this conjecture from Smend, who, based on the Hebrew texts and the Latin version, concluded that the Greek manuscript tradition preserved a corruption. The NRSV seems to depend here on the Greek manuscript tradition, although it has glossed the verse, apparently to wring some meaning out of it.

THE HEBREW AND GREEK TEXTS OF BEN SIRA

The textual situation of the Wisdom of Ben Sira, notably the often confused and fragmentary state of the Hebrew manuscripts, created some unique difficulties for this translation. Hebrew texts of Ben Sira are extant for about two-thirds of the book. Portions of chapters 39–44 survive in the Masada manuscript, which dates from the first century BCE. 2Q18 contains the remains of several lines, and 11QPa preserves a number of verses from chapter 51. The most extensive extant Hebrew sections are found in the six fragmentary manuscripts (designated A–F) discovered in the Cairo Geniza. On occasion the contents of these manuscripts overlap, but more often only one manuscript preserves any given passage from Ben Sira in Hebrew. The Hebrew manuscripts do, however, seem, in their essentials, to preserve the Hebrew of Ben Sira but not without numerous mistakes, additions and corruptions. The ultimate effect of this situation on the NETS translation is simply to make comparison between the Hebrew and Greek for matters such as vocabulary consistency, lexical choice and other elements of translation technique much more difficult to isolate and characterize.

As a result of the Hebrew textual situation, I have had to approach the translation of this book more from the perspective of a book like 1 Maccabees, which was translated from Hebrew but for which no Hebrew survives into modernity. Part of the reason for this approach is the inconsistency of the translator for various aspects of his work. The practical impact on the reader is that my translation differs from the NRSV quite frequently, probably more than for those books that have the MT as a basis of comparison. Moreover, whereas the NRSV attempts to present the reader with, as much as possible, an Ur-Text of the book, NETS is interested solely in its Greek translation. The Hebrew texts become relevant only to the extent that the source text can arbitrate between competing readings and interpretations of the target text and can, furthermore, account for the kind of Greek found in the translation.

One additional matter that both the NETS translation of Ben Sira and the NRSV had to deal with was the presence of the later Greek recension. In the process of the textual transmission of the Greek, a number of proverbs were added to the book, and this recension is usually designated GKII. For the most part, the NRSV puts readings from this Greek recension in footnotes leaving in the main text only GKI (= OG), that is, the translation of the author’s grandson, who rendered the Hebrew text into Greek. In the NETS translation, I have worked in analogous fashion both to Ziegler and to how NETS has handled similar cases elsewhere. GKII passages appear in the running text where they should be located. I have set them off by (a) marking them with square brackets at the beginning and end of each line and (b) by placing them in italics. Manuscript 248, one of the most important manuscript witnesses for GKII, contains an alternative prologue to the original translation, which Ziegler places in smaller typeface following the prologue of Ben Sira’s grandson. The alternative prologue is not included in NETS. The decision to exclude it was based on several factors. First, it only appears in Ms 248 and in no other Greek text. Second, although of considerable importance, Ms 248 does not contain all of the GKII readings for Sirach. Consequently, this prologue was probably not intended to introduce any GKII “recension.” Finally, according to Ziegler (66), the prologue stems from a work entitled Synopsis Scripturae Sacrae, falsely attributed to the Egyptian church father Athanasius.

When one compares the Greek of the Prologue with that of the translation, one will see a tremendous difference between the two. The Prologue is written in good, literary style. The translation, on the other hand, looks to have been executed in a generally isomorphic manner, and it thus mirrors many aspects of its Hebrew source text. I hope that the qualitative difference between the Greek of the Prologue and the frequently unidiomatic, even awkward Greek of the translation will be readily apparent to the NETS reader. In general, the conclusions that I gave concerning the relationship between the Hebrew and Greek of Sirach in my 1989 study of translation technique (No Small Difference: Sirach’s Relationship to Its Hebrew Parent Text [SBLSCS 26; Atlanta: Scholars, 1989]) still hold, it seems to me.

Here I make some general remarks about the Greek translation that illustrate its character. First, the isomorphic approach of the grandson to the process of translation means that he, like most of the translators of the LXX/OG corpus, does try to keep close to the Hebrew word order and, for the most part, he maintains a quantitative parity with his parent text. One finds in this translation, then, a number of aspects of the translation that suggest that the translator was working essentially in an interlinear way; that is, the Greek could be seen as a kind of “pony” to the Hebrew, since the translator often reproduces many aspects of the grammatical form of the Hebrew in the translation. In some cases, however, a perfectly acceptable feature of Greek might also serve the agenda of isomorphism. One example illustrates the case well. The Hebrew of Ben Sira uses several circumlocutions for possession, most of which involve some use of the dative. So, 3.22b reads in Hebrew (Ms A), כְּפִּי אְדָמָה מְצָרַת לְךָ “You have no business with hidden things.” Rather than take the clause as a whole and render the Hebrew idiom for possession, יֵצָא, by using some standard Greek verb such as ἐξελθω, the translator simply follows the Hebrew word-for-word, οὗ γὰρ ἐστὶν οἱ χρεία τῶν κρυπτῶν. While one might be tempted to translate this Greek with something like “For there is for you no need for hidden matters,” Greek can also indicate possession through the use of a dative with the verb to be, the so-called dative of possession. As a result, according to NETS principles (see “TO THE READER OF NETS”) normal Greek idiom means normal English idiom. Thus, I have translated cases like this one using the normal English verb “have,” and 3.22 appears in NETS as “for you have no need of hidden matters.”

Second, the translator’s word-by-word approach to his work also means that various parts of speech get transferred from Hebrew directly into Greek. The result is that Hebrew participles generally become Greek participles; Hebrew prepositions become Greek prepositions, etc. The most common difficulty produced by this translational practice is that prepositions will oftentimes get used in ways that are foreign to their uses in standard Greek, and often they can be found in strange contexts. They frequently appear as part of an object complement to a verb for which they are not suited in standard Greek, or they get used in non-Greek contexts. ὑπὲρ, for example, often renders the Hebrew preposition ḫɔ in places where in Hebrew the preposition functions to indicate the comparative, even though it does not normally have that function in Greek. In 7.19 the Greek ἡ χαρία ὑπὲρ τὸ χρυσίου “her grace is beyond gold” renders ἡ χαρία ὑπὲρ “grace more than pearls.” Other than the lexical shift from “pearls” to “gold,” the translator has employed ὑπὲρ in a context for which it is not normally used outside of the LXX/OG corpus.

TO THE READER OF SIRACH
Third, even though the translator worked in essentially a word-for-word manner, he does not exhibit a tendency to confine one Greek lexeme to the same Hebrew lexeme. So, for instance, the noun ἀγάλλιάμα "joy, exultation" renders three different Hebrew terms—יהוה (31.26), הָרָאשִׁים (6.31) and רָאשִׁים (30.23). On the other side of the coin, one Hebrew word might have several different Greek equivalents. In fact, there is enough semantic differentiation that one can rarely reconstruct, on the basis of the existing Hebrew-Greek equivalences, what the Hebrew lexical items in the parent text were in those sections of Sirach where Hebrew does not survive. Illustrative is the Hebrew verb בָּאָב, "withhold, hold back," which is never rendered twice with the same word. The various Greek equivalents are: αὐτολομάω (12.7), ἀποκολύω (7.33), ἀφυστέρεω (14.14), εἰμποδίζω (32.3), κολύο (4.23), παρέλκω (4.3), στερέω (7.21) and συνέχω (14.4).

Within the translator’s general policy of isomorphism, there are occasionally times when he seems to engage in an interpretive move. In most cases, he is confronting a text that seems to baffle him. For example, in 49.2, part of the section about Josias (Josiah), the grandson apparently did not understand the clause "for he was sickened/grieved at our apostasies." Although the resulting Greek has an almost one-to-one correspondence with the Hebrew on a purely formal level, it looks like the translator recognized the root בָּאָב in the word "βασιλεύσας" as coming from the Hebrew verb meaning "return, turn back." He thus interpreted the entire clause, probably on the basis of his identification of בָּאָב, as αὐτός κατευθύνθην ἐν ἐπιστροφή λαοῦ "He prospered in turning around the people." The Greek, although it does not accurately translate the Hebrew, makes good contextual sense in a passage about Josiah.

Given the examples above, it should not be a surprise to note that the Greek does not contain a high number of calques or even thoroughly stereotyped renderings, although some cases do present difficulties for the NETS translator. One particularly interesting case is the Greek-Hebrew equivalence καύχημα – הָרָאשִׁים. The Greek translates the Hebrew five times (9.16; 10.22; 44.7; 45.8; 50.11) and the related noun καύχημα translates the Hebrew term once (31.10). Both Greek words indicate some kind of “boasting.” Yet, the primary lexical meaning of הָרָאשִׁים is “splendor, beauty, glory,” and only as a subsidiary meaning related to “glory” does the Brown-Driver-Briggs Hebrew lexicon list “boasting.” Even though the Greek-Hebrew equivalence seems fixed for the translator, there does not seem to be any warrant for ascribing the meaning of “splendor” or “beauty” to the two related Greek words. As far as Sirach is concerned, they retain their Greek meaning, and they are translated in NETS as “boast” and “boasting.”

The Greek representations of the Hebrew וָּאָב present a more difficult case, particularly when it is used in Hebrew with a personal pronoun to mean “him/her/itself”—so, for instance, וָּאָב “himself.” The Greek translator usually prefers to give a rather awkward and wooden rendering into Greek, ψυχή συτού, “his soul.” The Greek phrase, although it represents each element in the Hebrew phrase, does not normally mean “himself” in Greek, although the word ψυχή can have the sense of one’s “self.” Hence in the NETS translation of Sirach, I render this wooden representation of the Hebrew “his/her/their soul.” The translator did have at his disposal a perfectly good and idiomatic Greek word to indicate the reflexive, ἑαυτόν, which he, in fact, uses in 37.8c, where ἑαυτόν translates וָּאָב. There are quite a number of individual instances of Hebraistic renderings such as this in the Greek translation and almost none take on the meaning of the Hebrew. They are simply overly wooden renderings. Sir 35.12 offers another prime example of a normal Hebrew idiom being rendered into a stilted and essentially meaningless Greek. Here the verb ψηφίζω “with generosity” becomes quite woodenly in Greek ἐν ἐγκαθέσθη ὁθουλίμῳ “with a good eye.”

Interestingly, one of the terms that is clearly a calque in almost the entirety of the Jewish-Greek translation corpus, διαθήκη “covenant” as a translation of הָרָאשִׁים, is not one for the translator of Ben Sira, who uses the word for both הָרָאשִׁים and הָרָאשִׁים (in both technical and non-technical contexts). This situation presents some difficulty for the English translator. Ben Sira’s grandson has leveled the meanings of the two Hebrew words. He has used the same Greek for both Hebrew nouns, for which he intended the meaning “covenant,” and NETS reflects that meaning in all the cases of the Greek noun. In some cases, however, the use of διαθήκη changes the sense of the underlying Hebrew. Sirach 11.20 encourages the student to "stand by your agreement," הָרָאשִׁים. The Greek στήσα ἐν διαθήκῃ σου “stand by your covenant” might suggest that the translator understood the Greek term in its usual sense of "testament," or he simply uses the now technical Greek term in a non-technical context. In 42.2, however, διαθήκη as a translation of הָרָאשִׁים seems more definitely to change the sense of the Hebrew parent text. As part of a list of things that should not cause shame for the student, the Hebrew has הָרָאשִׁים וָּאָב וָּאָב "of the law of the Most High and of the statute." The Greek, περὶ νόμου ψήφιστον καὶ διαθήκης "of the law of the Most High and covenant," broadens the focus considerably—from some unspecified statute to the entirety of God’s covenant with Israel. Finally, 44.20, in the section on Abraam (Abraham), διαθήκη renders both לְבָרֵךְ and בְּחַנָּה, thus, at the least, masking the intention of the Hebrew original.

Hebrew (Ms B and Masada): חָכָּה נַעֲמַת מְפֹרֵשָׁה בַּרְבִּים לְחָכָּה
Translation: “And he [God] entered into a covenant with him; in his flesh he made for him a statute.”

Greek: καὶ ἐγένετο ἐν διαθήκῃ μετ’ αὐτοῦ ἐν σαρκί αὐτοῦ ἐξῆκεν διαθήκην NETS: “and he entered in a covenant with him; in his flesh he established a covenant.”

In this verse, the “statute” almost certainly means the law of circumcision for all of Abraam’s descendants. The Greek, however, completely levels the semantic difference of the Hebrew between the “covenant” that God makes and the “statute” that God establishes “in his flesh.”

The NETS Translation of Sirach
Since elsewhere in the NETS corpus, the English translators have worked with the general dictum vis-à-vis the NRSV “Change what you must, and keep what you can,” several specific comments on the relationship of NETS Sirach to the NRSV are in order. There are a number of ways that the NETS translation of Sirach differs routinely from that in the NRSV. Many of the differences between NETS and NRSV result from the different purposes of the translations. The NRSV intends to produce a faithful translation in nicely idiomatic and fluid English—a purpose it accomplishes well. Sirach, however, is also somewhat unique among the NRSV translations. The NRSV “Old Testament” is translated from Hebrew, the original language of the various books, into English, but the NRSV Sirach, because of its transmission history, is already, in large part, a translation of a translation. The NRSV cannot translate the Hebrew, because it is incomplete and the text is frequently corrupt, and the Greek, which it does translate for the most part, is itself a translation. This approach produces two results that affect the NETS translation. First, although it primarily relies on the Greek, the NRSV uses an eclectic approach to the text. That is, the translator is interested in using the best, most original text possible. For Sirach, that might mean a preference for the Latin or the Syriac or the Hebrew rather than for the Greek. In places where the NRSV relies on the Hebrew or one of the other daughter translations, NETS will almost certainly be different, since it translated the best Greek text available. Second, in giving a fluid English translation, the English of the NRSV necessarily in many cases erases the awkwardness of the Greek. NETS, which is more intent on reflecting the translationese character of the Greek, requires a different approach, and in many cases I attempt to retain the awkwardness of the Greek that the NRSV has smoothed over. Moreover, exegetical openness, that is, rendering the Greek text as carefully as possible for what it says, is deemed in and of itself a virtue.

My basic approach in the NETS translation of Sirach is to provide the English reader with as much information about the character of the Greek and the relationship between the Hebrew (where it exists) and its Greek translation. Essentially, what this means for the reader of NETS is that my translation of Sirach is more independent of the NRSV than is the case for other NETS translations. The following paragraphs explain my approach to selected aspects of the NETS translation, and in these ways NETS will typically depart from the NRSV.

(a) For the most part, where possible, I have tried to represent the poetic form of the verses as much as possible. The Greek, by trying to represent the Hebrew word order, often reproduces the poetic structure of the Hebrew text. That is, if two Hebrew cola have the structure, verb-subject-object, subject-verb-object, the Greek will very often keep that order. I have tried to do the same in NETS where the rules of English permit and where no hardship for the reader results. This often results in an English word order different from NRSV. Thus, for example, NETS at 1.27, “For wisdom and education are the fear of the Lord, and his delight is fidelity and gentleness,” differs from NRSV, “For the fear of the Lord is wisdom and discipline, fidelity and humility are his delight” because the Greek (which most likely represents the Hebrew word order) has the parallelism A:B:B’:A’, which I have kept in NETS. This procedure does not represent dissatisfaction with NRSV; I operate this way in order to provide the English reader of NETS as much information about the relationship between the Greek and Hebrew texts as possible.

(b) The reader of NETS will find that the vocabulary choices in many places differ from the NRSV. Although a high level of stereotyping does not characterize the translation of Sirach, the translator does not have the possibility of prescribing his own vocabulary entirely. NETS, however, reflects the translationese character of the Greek, which is more intent on reflecting the translationese character of the Greek. In these ways NETS will typically depart from the NRSV.

seem to have a corpus of words that he uses consistently for particular Hebrew words. In such cases, I have maintained that consistency as much as possible in NETS. Sometimes the translator will maintain a high level of lexical consistency in individual poetic units. Where such consistency occurs, NETS is also consistent in its use of English vocabulary. On the other hand, where the NRSV uses the same English word for different Greek words in a poetic unit, I have used English synonyms to indicate to the reader that the Greek words are not the same.

(c) As I noted above, in many instances the Greek translator tries hard to maintain a one-for-one translation of the Hebrew. This technique produces several different results. Sometimes one encounters one word in Greek for one word in Hebrew. In those places where the Greek translator appears to be concerned about this type of lexical representation, I have tried to be as well. This usually means translating a single Greek word by a single English word. The translator, however, might also try to reproduce on a one-to-one basis the word order or even the grammatical form of the Hebrew. So, for example, the relationship between verbal tenses grates against the ear, or the lack of the definite article where one would expect it in standard Greek produces a strange sounding phrase. The resulting Greek is frequently stilted and awkward. In such cases I have tried as best I can within the bounds of acceptable English to represent in NETS the awkwardness of the Greek of Sirach. A couple of short examples will illustrate the nature of the case. In 13.22, the first stich of the verse uses the present tense to describe the help given to a rich person, πλούσιον σφαλέντος πολλοί αντιλήμνοι “when a rich person staggers, many are his helpers.” Yet, the second switches to the aorist, rendered into the past tense in English, ἔλαλησεν ἀπόρρητα καὶ ἐδικαίωσεν αὐτὸν “he spoke things not to be spoken, and they justified him.” With respect to the article, the Greek translation very frequently employs anarthrous nouns, which creates at best some ambiguity and at worst some real difficulty. So, for instance, in Simon II’s temple service described in chapter 50, we read καὶ σὺν ἑστὼς παρ’ ἐσχάρα βωμοῦ “when he stood by altar’s (or “an altar’s”) hearth.” It seems clear that the altar in the Jerusalem temple is intended, but the lack of the article here introduces some awkwardness and ambiguity that the definite article would have easily resolved.

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL NOTE

Benjamin G. Wright
For in the thirty-eighth year, in the reign of Euergetes the king, when I had arrived in Egypt and stayed a while, when I had discovered an exemplar of no little education, (30) I myself too made it a most compulsory task to bring some speed and industry to the translating of this tome, meanwhile having contributed much sleeplessness and skill, with the aim of bringing the book to completion and to publish it also for those living abroad if they wish to become learned, preparing their character to live by the law.

1 All wisdom is from the Lord, and with him it exists forever.
2 Sand of seas and drops of rain and days of eternity—who shall enumerate?
3 The sky’s height and earth’s breadth and abyss and wisdom—who will track?
4 Before all things wisdom has been created, and understanding of prudence is from eternity.
5 Wisdom’s spring is God’s word in the highest, and her journeys are everlasting commandments.
6 Wisdom’s root—to whom was it revealed? And her wondrous feats—who knew?
7 Wisdom’s skill—to whom was it manifested? And her great experience—who has understood it?
8 One who is wise, greatly feared, seated upon his throne.
9 The Lord, he created her, and he saw and enumerated her and poured her out upon all his works, among all flesh according to his giving, and he furnished her abundantly to those who love him.
10 Among wisdom’s treasures there is illustration of intelligence, but godliness is an abomination to a sinner.
11 Fear of the Lord is reputation and boasting and gladness and a garland of rejoicing.
12 Fear of the Lord will delight the heart, and it will give gladness and joy and length of days.
13 For the one who fears the Lord, it will be well at the end, and in the day of his death he will be blessed.
14 Wisdom’s beginning is to fear the Lord, and with the faithful in the womb—she was created together with them.
15 Among human beings she built her nest as an eternal foundation, and among their offspring she will be trusted.
16 Wisdom’s fullness is to fear the Lord, and she inebriates them with her fruits.
17 Their every house she will fill with desirable things, and the a reception halls a from her produce.
18 Wisdom’s garland is fear of the Lord, sprouting peace and well-being for healing.
19 [And both are gifts of God for peace, and boasting creates space for those that love him.]
20 Wisdom’s root is to fear the Lord, and her branches are length of days.
21 The fear of the Lord repels sins, and when it endures, it will turn away all wrath.
22 Unjust anger can never be justified, for the weight of his anger is his downfall.
23 Until the right time a patient person will restrain himself, and afterwards gladness will pay him back.
24 Until the right time he will hide his words, and the lips of many will tell of his discernment.
25 Among wisdom’s treasures there is illustration of intelligence, but godliness is an abomination to a sinner.
26 If you desire wisdom, keep the commandments, and the Lord will furnish her abundantly to you.
27 For wisdom and education are the fear of the Lord, and his delight is fidelity and gentleness.
28 Do not disobey the fear of the Lord, and do not approach him c with a double heart.
29 Do not be a hypocrite in the mouths of humankind, and with your lips pay heed.
30 Do not exalt yourself, lest you fall and bring dishonor to your soul, and the Lord will reveal your secrets, and in the midst of a gathering he will overthrow you, because you did not approach in the fear of the Lord and your heart was full of deceit.

a Perhaps storehouses  b I.e. the person who suffers from it  c Or it Child, if you come to be subject to the Lord, prepare your soul for testing.
Set straight your heart, and be steadfast, and do not be hasty in a time of distress.
Cling to him, and do not stand aloof so that you may be strengthened at your end.
Anything that might happen to you accept, and in the vicissitudes of your humiliation be patient, because with fire gold is tested, and acceptable people in the furnace of humiliation. [In sickness and in poverty have trust in him.]
Have faith in him, and he will support you, and make straight your ways, and hope in him.
You who fear the Lord, wait for his mercy, and do not turn away, lest you fall.
You who fear the Lord, have faith in him, and your wage will not be forfeited.
You who fear the Lord, hope for good things and for everlasting gladness and mercy, [because his repayment is an everlasting gift with joy.]
Look to ancient generations, and see; who had faith in the Lord and was put to shame? Or who has held fast to fear of him and was forsaken? Or who called upon him, and he despised him? For compassionate and merciful is the Lord, and he forgives sins and saves in a time of affliction.
Woe to timid hearts and to slack hands and to a sinner when he treads on two paths.
Woe to a faint heart, because it does not have faith; therefore it will not be sheltered.
Woe to you who have lost endurance. And what will you do when the Lord makes his reckoning?
Those who fear the Lord will not disobey his words, and those who love him will preserve his ways.
Those who fear the Lord will seek his favor, and those who love him will be filled with the law.
Those who fear the Lord will prepare their hearts, and before him they will humble their souls.
We shall fall into the hands of the Lord and not into the hands of human beings! For as his majesty is, so also is his mercy.
Listen to a father’s reproof, children, and act accordingly so that you may be safe.
For the Lord has glorified father over children, and he has confirmed a mother’s judgment over sons.
He who honors father will atone for sins, and like one who lays up treasure is he who glorifies his mother.
He who honors father will be gladdened by children, and in the day of his prayer he will be heard.
He who glorifies father will prolong his days, and he who listens to the Lord will give rest to his mother. [He who fears the Lord will honor his father,] and among those who begot him he will act as a slave to masters.
By deed and word honor your father so that a blessing from him might come upon you.
For a father’s blessing supports children’s houses, but a mother’s curse uproots foundations.
Do not glorify yourself by your father’s disgrace, for you have no glory in a father’s disgrace.
For a person’s repute comes from his father’s honor, and a mother in ill repute is a reproach to children.
Child, support your father in old age, and do not grieve him during his life.
But if he fails in comprehension, excuse him, and do not dishonor him in the fullness of your strength.
For charity for a father will not be forgotten, and it will be credited to you against sins.
In a day of affliction it will be remembered of you; as fair weather upon frost, so will your sins be dissolved.
Like a blasphemer is the one who neglects a father, and cursed by the Lord is the one who angers his mother.
Child, in gentleness conduct your affairs, and you will be loved more than a person who gives.
The greater you are, the more you should humble yourself, and before the Lord you will find favor.

because great is the dominance of the Lord and by the humble he is glorified.
Things too difficult for you do not seek,
and things too strong for you do not scrutinize.
The things that have been prescribed for you, think about these,
for you have no need of hidden matters.
With matters greater than your affairs do not meddle,
for things beyond human understanding have been shown to you.
For their presumption has led many astray,
and their evil fancy has diminished their understanding.

If you have no pupils, you will be at a loss for light,
and when you want for knowledge, do not profess it.
A hard heart will fare badly at the end,
and he who loves danger will perish in it.
A hard heart will be weighed down by troubles,
and the sinner will add sin to sins.
For the misery of the arrogant there is no healing,
because a plant of wickedness has taken root in him.
The heart of the intelligent will think of an illustration,
and a hearer's ear is the desire of the wise.
A blazing fire water will extinguish,
and charity will atone for sins.
He who repays favors gives thought to what comes after,
and at the moment of a fall he will find support.

Child, the life of the poor do not defraud,
and do not put off needy eyes.
A hungry soul do not grieve,
and do not anger a man in his difficulty.
An angry heart do not trouble,
and do not delay giving to one in need.
A suppliant in distress do not keep rejecting,
and do not turn your face away from the poor.
From one who begs do not turn away an eye,
and do not give him occasion to curse you.
For if one curses you in bitterness of his soul,
the one who made him will hear his petition.
Make yourself beloved to a gathering,
and for a nobleman bow your head.

Incline your ear to the poor,
and answer him peaceably with gentleness.
Deliver the wronged from the hand of the wrongdoer,
and do not be faint-hearted when you render judgment.
Be like a father to orphans and instead of a husband to their mother, and you will be like a son of the Most High,
and he will love you more than does your mother.
Wisdom will exalt her sons and lays hold of those who seek her.
He who loves her loves life,
and those who turn to her early will be filled with gladness.
He who holds her fast will inherit a reputation,
and where he enters, the Lord blesses.
Those who serve her will minister to one holy,
and those who love her the Lord loves.
He who obeys her will judge nations,
and the one who gives heed to her will dwell in confidence.
If he has faith, he will inherit her,
and his descendants will be in possession of her.
Because at first she will travel with him though he twist and turn,
fear and dread she will bring upon him,
and she will torment him with her training until she has faith in his soul,
and she will test him with her statutes.
And again she will return straight back to him and will make him glad and will reveal to him her secrets.
If he goes astray, she will abandon him
and hand him over to the grip of his fall.
Watch for an opportune time, and beware of evil,
and about your soul do not be ashamed.
For there is a shame that brings on sin,
and there is a shame that is glory and favor.
Do not receive a person against your soul,
and do not feel embarrassment to your fall.
Do not hinder speech in a time of need,
and do not hide your wisdom in comeliness.
For by speech will wisdom be known,
and education through a word of the tongue.
Do not speak against the truth,
and concerning your lack of education feel shame.

Lacking in Gk
Do not be ashamed to acknowledge your sins, and do not try to force a river’s flow.

Do not become rash with your tongue or sluggish and remiss in your deeds.

Exert yourself to the death for the truth, and the Lord God will do battle for you.

Do not become fearful concerning atonement, to add sin upon sins.

Do not wait to turn back to the Lord, and do not postpone it day after day; for suddenly the wrath of the Lord will go forth, and in the time of punishment you will perish.

Do not be occupied with ill-gotten money, for it will not be of benefit in a day of distress.

Do not winnow in every wind, and do not go on every short cut; thus is the double-tongued sinner.

A pleasant throat will multiply its friends, and a well-speaking tongue will multiply courtesies.

Let those who are at peace with you be many, but let your advisors be one in a thousand.

If you acquire a friend, acquire him through testing, and do not have faith in him hastily.

For there is a friend when it suits him, and he will not remain in a day of affliction.

And there is a friend who turns to enmity, and he will disclose strife to your disgrace.

And there is a friend who is a table companion, and he will not remain in a day of affliction.

And among your goods he will be as you are, and he will speak boldly to your domestics.

If you are brought low, he will be against you, and he will hide himself from your face.

From your enemies, keep your distance, and with your friends pay heed.

A loyal friend is a sturdy shelter, and he who finds him has found a treasure.

A loyal friend is priceless, and no one can weigh his worth.

A loyal friend is life’s drug, and those who fear the Lord will find him.

17 He who fears the Lord directs his friendship aright, because like him, so also is his fellow.

18 Child, from your youth welcome education, and until gray hairs you will find wisdom.

19 Like him who plows and him who sows approach her, and wait for her good fruits; for in cultivation of her you will toil little, and you will soon eat of her produce.

20 How harsh is wisdom to the uneducated, and the cowardly will not remain with her.

21 Like a formidable stone of testing she will be upon him, and he will not delay to cast her aside.

22 For wisdom is like her name, and she is not conspicuous to many.

23 Listen, child, and accept my opinion, and do not reject my counsel.

24 Put your feet into her fetters, and into her collar, your neck.

25 Offer your shoulder, and carry her, and do not be offended at her bonds.

26 With all your soul approach her, and with all your might keep her ways.

27 Trace, and seek, and she will become known to you, and when you get a firm hold, do not let her go.

28 For in the end you will find her repose, and she will be changed into gladness for you.

29 And her fetters will be a shelter of strength for you, and her collars a robe of glory.

30 For a golden ornament is upon her, and her bonds are a blue thread.

31 You will wear her as a robe of glory, and you will put her on like a garland of joy.

32 If you are willing, child, you will be instructed, and if you surrender your soul, you will be clever.

33 If you love to listen, you will receive, and if you incline your ear, you will be wise.

34 Stand in a crowd of elders, and cling to their wisdom.

35 Be willing to listen to every godly discourse, and do not let proverbs of understanding escape you.

36 If you see an intelligent person, turn to him early, and let your foot wear out the thresholds of his doors.

37 Exercise your thought in the Lord's ordinances, and on his commandments continually meditate. It is he who will make your heart firm, and the desire for wisdom will be given to you.

7 Do not do evil things, and an evil will not overtake you.

2 Stay away from wrong, and it will turn away from you.

3 Do not sow in the furrows of injustice, and you will not reap them\textsuperscript{a} sevenfold.

4 Do not seek from the Lord authority or from a king a seat of honor.

5 Do not assert righteousness before the Lord, and with a king do not display wisdom.

6 Do not seek to become a judge; you might not have the strength to get rid of injustice, lest you have trepidation in the presence of one powerful, and you shall erect an obstacle to your uprightness.

7 Do not sin against a city's multitude, and do not throw yourself down in a crowd.

8 Do not bind up a sin twice, for in one you will not be innocent.

9 Do not say, “He will have regard for the multitude of my gifts, and when I bring a gift to the Most High God, he will accept it.”

10 Do not be fainthearted in your prayer, and do not neglect to practice charity.

11 Do not deride a person when he is embittered in spirit, for there is one who humbles and exalts.

12 Do not cultivate a lie against your brother or do the same to a friend.

13 Do not consent to concoct any lie, for the continuation of it results in no good.

14 Do not babble in a great number of elders, and do not repeat a word in your prayer.

15 Do not hate toilsome labor and tillage created by the Most High.

16 Do not reckon yourself among the multitude of sinners; remember that wrath will not delay.

17 Humble your soul greatly, because the punishment of the impious is fire and worm.

18 Do not exchange a friend for cash or a real brother for gold of Souphir.

19 Do not fail a wise and good wife, for her grace is beyond gold.

\textsuperscript{a}Probable antecedent, evil things (7.1)
Do not abuse a domestic when he truly works or a laborer when he gives his soul.
Let your soul love an intelligent domestic;
do not deprive him of freedom.

Do you have cattle? Look after them, and if they are useful to you, let them remain with you.
Do you have children? Educate them,
and bend their neck from youth.
Do you have daughters? Give heed to their body, and do not brighten your face towards them.
Give a daughter in marriage, and you will have completed a great task, and present her to an understanding man.
Do you have a wife like your soul? Do not divorce her,
and do not entrust yourself to her when she is hated.
With your whole heart honor your father,
and a mother's birth pangs do not forget.
Remember that you were born through them—
and how will you repay them what they have done for you?

With your whole soul, revere the Lord,
and admire his priests.
With your whole might, love him who made you,
and his ministers do not neglect.
Fear the Lord, and honor a priest, and give him his portion, as it has been commanded of you:
first fruits and a gift of forerarms and sacrifice of sanctification and first fruits of holy things.
And stretch out your hand to a poor person in order that your blessing may be complete.
The kindness of something given is before everyone alive,
and do not hinder kindness for a corpse.
Do not lag behind those who weep,
but mourn with those who mourn.
Do not hesitate to visit a sick person,
for because of such deeds you will be loved.
In all your words, remember the end,
and you will not ever sin.

Do not contend with a powerful person,
lest you fall into his hands.
Do not quarrel with a rich person, lest he counter your weight;
for gold has ruined many
and has perverted hearts of kings.
Do not contend with a garrulous person,
and do not heap wood on his fire.
Do not make fun of the uneducated, lest your ancestors be insulted.
Do not reproach a person when he is turning away from sin;
remember that we all are subject to rebuke.
Do not disdain a person in his old age,
for some of us, too, are growing old.
Do not rejoice over a corpse;
remember that we all pass away.
Do not disregard a discourse of the wise,
and turn to their proverbs, because from them you will learn instruction and how to minister to noblemen.
Do not miss out on the discourse of the aged,
for even they themselves learned from their fathers, because from them you will learn understanding and how to give an answer in time of need.

Do not stoke a sinner's coals;
do not be set afire by the fire of his flame.
Do not vacate your seat before an insolent person,
lest he sit down as an ambush to your mouth.
Do not lend to a person stronger than you,
and if you do lend, be as one who has lost.
Do not give surety beyond your ability, and if you do give surety, regard it as a paying back.
Do not go to law with a judge,
for according to his status will they judge in his favor.
With a reckless person do not travel on the road,
lest your troubles weigh you down;
for he will travel as he wants to,
and by his folly you will perish as well.
With a quick-tempered person do not pick a fight,
and do not traverse the desert with him, because bloodshed is as nothing in his eyes,
and where there is no help, he will cast you down.
With a foolish one do not consult,
for he cannot cover up a secret.
In the presence of a stranger do not do something secret,

for you do not know what he will bring forth.

19 Do not expose your heart to any person, and do not let him return a favor to you.

9 Do not be jealous of the wife of your bosom, nor teach an evil lesson against yourself.

2 Do not give your soul to a woman, to let her trample upon your strength.

3 Do not meet with a female escort, lest you fall into her snares.

4 With a female strummer do not dally, lest you become caught in her endeavors.

5 Do not ogle a maiden, lest you be made to stumble in her rebukes.

6 Do not give your soul to whores, lest you lose your inheritance.

7 Do not look around in city alleyways, and in its deserted places do not wander.

8 Turn an eye from a shapely woman, and do not ogle beauty belonging to another; by a woman's beauty many have gone astray, and from it fondness flares up like a fire.

9 With a married woman do not sit down at all, and do not feast with her at wine, lest your soul incline to her and by your blood you slip into destruction.

10 Do not abandon an old friend, for the recent one is not his equal; a new friend is like new wine; if it ages, you will drink it with merriment.

11 Do not envy a sinner's good repute, for you do not know what his undoing will be.

12 Do not delight in the success of the impious; remember that they will not be deemed righteous until Hades.

13 Keep far from a person who has authority to kill, and you will not be apprehensive of the fear of death, and if you approach him, do not make a mistake, lest he take your life. Recognize that you are treading in the midst of snares, and you are walking about on a city’s battlements.

14 According to your strength take stock of your fellow, and consult with the wise.

15 Let your discussion be with intelligent people, and all your exposition in the law of the Most High.

16 Let righteous men be your dinner companions, and let your boast be in the fear of the Lord.

17 In the hand of artisans a work will be praised, and the people's leader is wise by his word.

18 Feared in his city is a garrulous man, and he who is reckless in his speech will be hated.

10 A wise judge will educate his people, and the rule of an intelligent person will be orderly.

2 As the people's judge is, so also are his officials, and as the ruler of the city is, are all its inhabitants.

3 An uneducated king will destroy his people, and a city will be populated by the intelligence of its rulers.

4 In the Lord's hand is the governance of the earth, and he will raise up over it the person useful for the time.

5 In the Lord's hand is a man's success, and to a scribe's face he will add his reputation.

6 For every wrong do not be angry with your neighbor, and do not do anything with acts of insolence.

7 Hateful before the Lord and humans is pride, and to both injustice is wrong.

8 Dominion is transferred from nation to nation on account of injustice and insolence and money.

[For there is nothing more lawless than love of money;]
[for this person even makes his own soul a commodity.]

9 How can earth and ashes behave arrogantly?—

b because in life I hurled his entrails.

10 A long illness mocks a physician; today a king, and tomorrow he will die.

11 For when a person dies, he inherits creeping things and beasts and worms.

14 Thrones of rulers the Lord brought down,
and he seated the gentle in their place.
15 Roots of nations the Lord plucked up,
and he planted the humble in their place.
16 Lands of nations the Lord ruined, and he destroyed them as far as earth’s foundations.
17 He removed some people and destroyed them,
and he erased their memorial from earth.
18 Pride was not created for human beings,
nor violent anger for what is born of women.

20 In the midst of kin their leader is honorable,
and those who, in his eyes, fear the Lord.
[21 The beginning of acceptance is fear of the Lord,
but the beginning of rejection is obduracy and arrogance.]
22 Guest and stranger and poor person—their boast is fear of the Lord.
23 It is not right to dishonor an intelligent poor person, and it is not proper to glorify a sinful man.
24 Noble and judge and ruler will be glorified, but none of them is greater than he who fears the Lord.
25 Free persons will attend to a wise domestic,
and a knowledgeable man will not grumble.
26 Do not craftily perform your task,
and do not extoll yourself in your time of difficulty.
27 Superior is a person who works and excels in all things to one who struts about extolling himself

28 Child, in meekness give repute to your soul, and give it value according to its worth.
29 Him who errs against his own soul—who will vindicate?
And who will give repute to him who devalues his own life?
30 A poor person has repute because of his knowledge, and a rich person has repute because of his wealth.
31 He who has repute in poverty, how much more also in wealth?
And he who is held in disrepute in wealth, how much more also in poverty?

11 A humble person’s wisdom will raise up his head,

5 Many tyrants have sat on the ground,
but one not expected to was wearing a diadem.
6 Many dynasts have been utterly dishonored,

a Lacking in Gk
and the eyes of the Lord looked upon him for good, and he restored him from his low estate and raised up his head, and many marveled at him.

Good things and bad, life and death, poverty and wealth are from the Lord.

Wisdom and skill and knowledge of the law are from the Lord, [affection and the ways of good works are from him.]

Error and darkness have been created with sinners, [and evil things grow old along with those who take pride in evil.]

The Lord's gift remains with the pious, and his favor will bring success forever.

There exists one who becomes rich from his diligence and miserliness, and this is the portion of his recompense.

When he says, "I have found rest, and now I will eat of my good things," even he does not know how time will pass by, and he will leave them to others and will die.

Stand by your covenant, and attend to it, and in your work grow old.

Do not wonder at the works of a sinner, but have faith in the Lord, and continue your labor, because it is easy in the eyes of the Lord quickly, suddenly, to make a needy person rich.

The Lord's blessing is in the wage of a pious person, and in a short time his good pleasure flourishes.

Do not say, "What is my need? And what will be my good things from now on?"

Do not say, "I have enough, and what distress will I suffer from now on?"

In a day of prosperity, adversity is forgotten, and in a day of adversity, prosperity will not be remembered, because it is easy with the Lord in a day of death to give back to a person according to his ways.

An hour's misery engenders forgetfulness of luxury, and a person's end is a disclosure of his deeds.

Before death call no one happy, and in his children a man will be known.

Do not bring every person into your home, for many are the ambushes of the deceitful.

A decoy partridge in a cage, so is the heart of an arrogant person, and like a spy he observes a downfall.

For he lies in ambush turning good things into bad, and among choice things he adds disgraced.

From a spark of fire coals are multiplied, and a sinful person lies in ambush for blood.

Beware of a scoundrel—for he devises wicked things—lest he deliver to you disgrace forever.

Welcome a stranger, and he will twist you around in confusion and alienate you from your own.

If you do good, know for whom you do it, and there will be gratitude for your good deeds.

Do good to a pious person, and you will find repayment, and if not from him, then from the Most High.

There is no good for him who persists in evil and for him who does not willingly offer charity.

Give to the pious person, but do not assist the sinner.

Treat the humble well, and do not give to an impious person; hold back loaves of bread, and do not give to him, lest by them he prevail over you; for you will get twice as many bad things for all the good things that you might do for him, because also the Most High hated sinners, and on the impious he will render punishment.

[And he is keeping them for the day of their punishment.]

Give to the good person, and do not assist the sinner.

The friend will not be punished in good things, and the enemy will not be hidden in evil things.

In a man's good things, his enemies are in pain, and in his evil things, a friend also will be separated.

Never trust your enemy; for just as copper corrodes, so does his wickedness.

And if he is brought low and walks stooped,
trust your soul, and be on guard against him,
and you shall be to him as one who wipes a mirror,
and you shall know that it was not completely tarnished.

Do not stand him next to you,
lest, having overthrown you, he stand in your place;
do not seat him at your right,
lest he seek your seat,
and at last you will understand my words and be pricked by my sayings.

Who will pity a charmer bitten by a snake, or all who approach wild beasts?—
so the one who goes near a man who sins and one who gets mixed up in his sins.
For a time he will remain with you,
and if you falter, he will not be steadfast.
With his lips the enemy will speak sweetly, and in his heart he will plan to throw you into a trench.
With his eyes the enemy will weep,
and if he finds an opportunity, he will not be sated with blood.

If harm meets you, you will find him there ahead of you,
and pretending to help, he will trip your heel.
He will shake his head and clap his hands and whisper many things and alter his face.

He who touches pitch will become dirty, and he who associates with a proud person will become like him.

Do not lift what is too heavy for you,
and do not associate with one stronger and richer than you.
How will a clay pot associate with a cauldron?
The former will strike against, and the former will be smashed.

A rich person did wrong, and he was angry to boot;
a poor person has been wronged, and he will plead.

If you are useful, he will work with you,
and if you are in want, he will abandon you.

If you have something, he will live with you,
and he will clean you out, and he will not suffer.

He has need of you and will deceive you and will smile at you and will give you hope;
he will speak nice things to you and say, “What do you need?”

He will shame you with his foods until he cleans you out two or three times, and at last he will mock you;
after these things, he will see you and leave you and will shake his head at you.

Take care that you are not led astray,
and do not be humiliated by your folly.

When a powerful person invites you, be reserved,
and he will invite you so much more.

Do not be forward, lest you be rejected,
and do not stand far off, lest you be forgotten.

Do not aim to speak as an equal with him,
and do not put faith in his rather many words;
for with much talk he will test you,
and as though smiling he will be examining you.

Merciless is he who does not guard words, and he will not spare you from doing bad and imprisonment.

Be on guard, and pay attention,
because you are walking about with your own downfall.

Every living thing loves what is like to it,
and every person his fellow.

All flesh congregates according to kind,
and with one like himself will a man cleave.

What will a wolf have in common with a lamb?—
so is a sinner to a pious person.

What peace is there between a hyena and a dog?
And what peace between a rich person and a needy person?
The prey of lions is onagers in the desert;
thus the poor are the fodder of the rich.
An abomination to a proud person is humility;
thus an abomination to a rich person is a poor person.

When a rich person totters, he is supported by friends, but when a humble person falls, he is pushed away by friends.

When a rich person staggers, many are his helpers;
he spoke things not to be spoken, and they justified him.
A humble person staggered, and in addition they rebuked him;
he uttered sense, and no place was given to him.

A rich person spoke, and all kept silent,
and they exalted his word up to the clouds.

A poor person spoke, and they said, "Who is this?"
And if he should stumble, they will even overturn him.

Wealth in which there is no sin is good,
but in the mouths of an impious person poverty is wicked.

A person's heart changes his face,
whether for good things or bad.

A heart's footstep in good things is a cheerful face,
and the invention of illustrations is conversations along with toils.

14 Happy is the man who did not slip with his mouth and was not stabbed with the pain of sins.

2 Happy the one whose soul has not condemned him and who has not lost his hope.

3 For a petty man wealth is not good,
and to a begrudging person—why is there money?

4 He who constrains his appetite collects for others,
and with his goods others will live luxuriously.

5 He who is evil to himself, to whom will he be good?
And he will never be gladdened by his money.

6 There is none worse than he who begrudges himself, and this is repayment for his evil.

7 Even if he acts well, he does it with forgetting,
and in the end he reveals his evil.

8 Wicked is the one who is grudging with the eye,
when he turns away his face and overlooks souls.

9 The eye of the greedy is not satisfied with a portion,
and wicked injustice withers the soul.

10 An evil eye is envious over bread, and it is lacking on his table.

11 Child, even as you have, treat yourself well, and bring offerings to the Lord worthily.

12 Remember that death will not tarry, and the covenant of Hades has not been shown to you.

13 Before you die, treat a friend well, and, according to your strength, reach out, and give to him.

14 Do not withdraw from a good day,
and do not let a share of a good desire pass you by.

15 Will you not leave behind your toils to another and your toils to division by lot?

16 Give, and take, and deceive your soul,
because in Hades there is no seeking of luxury.

17 All flesh becomes old like a garment, for the covenant of old is, "By death you shall die!"

18 Like a sprouting leaf on a thickly leaved tree, some it sheds, but others it puts forth;
so is a generation of flesh and blood,
the one dies and the other is born.

19 Every decaying deed ceases, and the one who does it will pass away with it.

20 Happy is the man who will meditate on wisdom and who will converse with his understanding.

21 He who considers her ways in his heart also will reflect on her obscurities.

22 Go out after her like a tracker, and in her entranceways lie in wait!

23 He who peers through her windows also will listen at her doorways.

24 He who lodges near her house also will pitch a peg in her walls.

25 He will set his tent according to her hand, and he will lodge in a lodging place of good things.

26 He will place his children in her shelter, and under her boughs he will encamp.

27 He will be sheltered by her from heat, and in her glory he will lodge.

15 He who fears the Lord will do it, and he who has a hold on the law will lay hold of her.

2 And she will come to meet him like a mother, and like a woman of maidenhood, she will welcome him.

3 She will feed him bread of understanding, and water of wisdom she will give him to drink.

4 He will be propped up on her and will not lie down, and he will attend to her, and he will not be put to shame.

5 And she will exalt him above his fellows, and in the midst of an assembly she will open his mouth.

6 Gladness and a garland of rejoicing and an everlasting name will he inherit.

7 Witless people will never lay hold of her,
and sinful men will never see her.

8 She is far from arrogance, and lying men will never remember her.

9 A song of praise is not proper in the mouth of a sinner, because it has not been apportioned by the Lord.

10 For in wisdom a song of praise will be uttered, and the Lord will make it prosper.

11 Do not say, “On account of the Lord I fell away,” for what he hates, he will not do.

12 Do not say, “It was he who led me astray,” for he has no need of a sinful man.

13 Every abomination the Lord hated, and it is not beloved to those who fear him.

14 It was he who from the beginning made humankind, and he left him in the hand of his deliberation.

15 If you want to, you shall preserve the commandments, and to keep faith is a matter of good pleasure.

16 He has set aside for you fire and water;
to whichever you want, you shall stretch out your hand.

17 Before humans are life and death, and whichever one he desires will be given to him, because great is the wisdom of the Lord; he is mighty in dominance and one who sees everything.

18 And his eyes are on those who fear him,
and he will know every human deed.

19 He did not command anyone to be impious, and he did not give anyone leave to sin.

20 Do not desire a multitude of useless children, and do not be glad over impious sons.

2 If they multiply, do not be glad over them unless the fear of the Lord is with them.

3 Do not have faith in their life,
and do not be intent on the multitude of them.

[For you will groan in untimely mourning,]
[and suddenly you will know of their end.]

4 For by one intelligent person a city will be peopled, but a tribe of lawless people will be left without.

5 Many such things has my eye seen,
and more mighty things than these has my ear heard.

6 In a gathering of sinners a fire will blaze out,
and in a disobedient nation wrath has blazed out.

7 He did not propitiate for the ancient giants,
those who revolted in their strength.

8 He did not spare the neighbors of Lot whom he loathed on account of their arrogance.

9 He did not have mercy on a nation of destruction, those carried away by their sins.

[All these things he did to hard-hearted nations,]
[and by the multitude of his holy ones he was not entreated]

10 even so six hundred thousand foot soldiers, those assembled in their hardness of heart.

[In flogging, showing mercy, striking, healing,]
[the Lord watched closely with compassion and instruction.]

11 Even if there might be one stiff-necked person, it would be a wonder if he would go unpunished;
for mercy and wrath are with him,
a dynast of propitiations and pouring out wrath.

12 According to his great mercy, so also is his reproof;
he will judge a man according to his deeds.

13 A sinner will not escape with booty,
and the endurance of the pious will never fail.

14 He will make a place for every act of charity;
each will get according to his deeds.

15 The Lord hardened Pharaoh so that he did not know him
[so that his actions might be known to what lies beneath the sky.]

16 To all creation is his mercy manifest,
[and his light and darkness he apportioned to Adam.]

17 Do not say, “I will be hidden from the Lord—and from on high who will remember me?”

Among a great many people I will not be known;
for what is my soul in an immeasurable creation?

18 Look, the sky and the sky of the sky, abyss and earth will totter at his visitation.

[The entire world, past and present, is in his will.]

19 At once the mountains and the foundations of the earth are being shaken together with trembling when he looks at them.

20 And to them the heart will give no thought—aI.e. abomination  bI.e. without a city and his ways who has pondered?

And a tempest there is, which person shall not see—
and most of his deeds are in secret.
Acts of justice who will announce,
or who will await? For the covenant is far off.
[And an examination for all is at the end.]
One who is lacking in heart thinks these things, and a foolish and misled man thinks foolish things.

Listen to me, child, and learn knowledge,
and to my words apply your heart.
I will disclose instruction by fixed standard,
and with accuracy I will declare knowledge.

In the Lord’s creation are his works from the beginning, and from the making of them he defined their portions.
He put in order their tasks forever and their rule for their generations;
they neither hungered, nor did they grow weary,
and they did not abandon their tasks.
Each one did not crowd its fellow,
and they will not ever disobey his dictum.
And after these things, the Lord looked upon the earth,
and he filled it with his good things.
With the soul of every living thing he covered its face,
and into it is their return.

The Lord created a human being out of earth,
and he returned him into it again.
He gave them days in number and a fixed time,
and he gave them authority over the things upon it.
He clothed them in a strength like himself,
and in his image he made them.
He placed the fear of him upon all flesh,
even to have dominion over beasts and birds.
[They received use of the five faculties of the Lord,]
[but, apportioning a sixth, he gave to them the gift of mind,]
[and the seventh, reason, the interpreter of his faculties.]
Deliberation and a tongue and eyes, ears and a heart for thinking he gave them.
With knowledge of understanding he filled them,
and good things and bad he showed to them.
He put the fear of him upon their hearts,
to show them the majesty of his works.
[He allowed that they boast of his wonders through ages.]
And they shall praise a name of holiness in order to recount the majesties of his works.
He set before them knowledge,
and a law of life he allotted to them
[in order to be mindful that those who exist now are mortal.]
A perpetual covenant he established with them,
and his judgments he showed to them.
Majesty of glory their eyes saw,
and the glory of his voice their ear heard.
And he said to them, “Be on guard against all wrong,”
and he commanded each of them concerning his fellow.
Their ways are before him always;
they will not be hidden from his eyes.
Their ways from youth are upon evil things,
[and they were not strong enough to make their hearts of flesh]
[rather than of stone.]
[For in the division of the nations of the entire earth,] for each nation he appointed a leader, and the Lord’s portion is Israel, [whom, being the firstborn, he nurtures with instruction,]
[and allotting the light of love, he does not neglect him.]
All of their works are before him like the sun, and his eyes are continually upon their ways.
Their injustices were not hidden from him,
and all their sins are before the Lord.
[But the Lord, being kind and knowing his formation,] [neither neglected them nor forsook sparing them.]
A man’s charity is like a signet with him, and a person’s kindness he will preserve like the apple of his eye, [apportioning repentance to his sons and daughters.]
After these things he will arise and repay them,
and their repayment he will deliver upon their head.
Except to those who repented he granted a return,
and he exhorted those who were abandoning hope.
Turn back to the Lord, and leave sins behind;

I.e. the first human petition in person, and minimize the offense.

26 Return to the Most High, and turn away from injustice, [for he will guide out of darkness into the light of health,] and intensely hate abomination.

27 Who will sing praises to the Most High in Hades instead of the living and those who give thanks?

28 From a corpse, since it does not exist, acknowledgement has perished; a living and healthy person will praise the Lord.

29 How great is the charity of the Lord and his propitiation to those who turn back to him.

30 For not all things are able to be among humans, because a son of man is not immortal.

31 What is brighter than the sun? Even this thing fails.
And flesh and blood will ponder evil.

32 It is he who reviews the power of the sky's height, and all human beings are earth and ashes.

18 He who lives forever created everything in common.

2 The Lord alone will be justified, [and there is no other beside him,] he who steers the world with the span of his hand, [and all things obey his will,] for he is king of all things by his power, [separating among them holy things from profane.]

4 He has permitted no one to announce his works— and who can search out his majestic deeds?

5 The power of his greatness who will enumerate? And who will add to recount his mercies?

6 It is impossible to diminish or to increase them, and it is impossible to search out the wonders of the Lord.

7 When a person finishes, then he is beginning, and when he stops, then he will be at a loss.

8 What is a human being, and what is his use? What is his good, and what is his evil?

9 The number of a person's days is as many as a hundred years, [but indeterminable by all is the sleep of each one.] Like a drop of water from the sea and a grain of sand, so are a few years in a day of eternity.

11 For this reason the Lord was longsuffering with them, and he poured out his mercy upon them.

12 He saw and knew their end, that it is grievous; for this reason he multiplied his propitiation.

13 A person's mercy is upon his fellow, but the mercy of the Lord is upon all flesh, when he corrects and instructs and teaches and turns as a shepherd does his flock.

14 He shows mercy to those who accept discipline and who hasten to his judgments.

15 Child, do not allow reproach among good deeds nor pain of words with every giving.

16 Does not dew mitigate scorching heat? So better a word than a gift.

17 Look! Does not a word exceed a good gift? And both are with a man who has been favored.

18 A foolish person will upbraid ungraciously, and the giving of a grudging person melts eyes.

19 Before speaking, learn, and before illness, take care of yourself.

20 Before judgment, examine yourself, and in the hour of scrutiny you will find propitiation.

21 Before you fall ill, humble yourself, and in a time of sinful actions demonstrate repentance.

22 Do not be hindered from repaying a vow appropriately, and do not wait until death to be vindicated.

23 Before making a vow, prepare yourself, and do not be like a person who tempts the Lord.

24 Be mindful of wrath in days of death and of a time of vengeance in the turning away of a face.

25 Be mindful of a time of hunger in a time of plenty, of poverty and want in days of wealth.

26 From morning until evening opportunity changes, and all things are swift before the Lord.

27 A wise person will be cautious in everything, and in days of sins he will take heed against error.

28 Every intelligent person recognized wisdom, and to him who finds her shed will give acknowledgment.

29 Persons who are intelligent with words also became wise themselves, aLacking in Gk  bOr when he turns away (his) face  cPerhaps fleeting  dPossibly he and they poured forth apt proverbs.

[Better is confidence in a single master]
[than clinging with a dead heart to a dead one.]

SELF CONTROL

30 After your desires do not go, and from your appetites restrain yourself.
31 If you furnish your soul with consent for desire, it will make you a laughingstock of your enemies.
32 Do not be glad in great luxury; do not be made needy by its contact.
33 Do not become poor by feasting out of borrowing, and you have nothing in your pocket.
[For you will be plotting against your own life.]

19 A drunken worker will not become rich, and he who despises few things will fall little by little.
2 Wine and women will mislead intelligent men, and he who joins himself to prostitutes will be more reckless.
3 Decay and worms will take possession of him, and a reckless soul will be carried off.
4 He who trusts quickly is light in heart, and he who sins will do wrong to his soul.
5 He who is gladdened by wickedness will be condemned, [but he who withstands pleasures crowns his life.]
6 [He who controls the tongue will live without strife,] and he who hates discussion will be lacking in heart.
7 Never repeat a word, and nothing will be lacking to you.
8 Among friend and foe do not describe, and unless it is a sin for you, do not disclose.
9 Suppose he has heard you and kept watch on you and in time will hate you.
10 Have you heard a word? Let it perish along with you.
Be brave! It will never make you burst.
11 From a word, a foolish person will go into labor pains, as does she who is giving birth from a babe to be born.
12 An arrow stuck in a thigh of flesh, so is a word in the gut of a foolish person.
13 Question a friend; perhaps he didn’t, and if he did something, lest perchance he add.

14 Question your fellow; perhaps he didn’t say, and if he has said, lest he repeat.
15 Question a friend, for oftentimes it becomes slander, and do not believe every word.
16 There exists one who slips, and it is not bfrom the soul b— and who has not sinned with his tongue?
17 Question your fellow before threatening, and give a place to the law of the Most High.
[18 Fear of the Lord is the beginning of acquisition,] [and wisdom secures affection from him.]
[19 Knowledge of the Lord’s commandments is education for life,] [and those who do things pleasing to him will enjoy the fruits of the tree of immortality.]
20 All wisdom is fear of the Lord, and in all wisdom there is doing of the law [and knowledge of his omnipotence.]
[21 When a domestic says to a master, “I will not do what pleases you,”] [if after these things he does, he angers him who supports him.]
22 There is no wisdom that is knowledge of wickedness, and there is no prudence in advice of sinners.
23 There is cleverness that is also an abomination, and there is a fool lacking in wisdom.
24 Better is a fearful person inferior in intelligence than one superior in prudence and transgressing the law.
25 There exists exact cleverness that is also unjust, and there is one who perverts a favor in order to produce a judgment, [and he who deems righteous is wise in judgment.]
26 There is one who acts wickedly, bent down with blackness, and what is inside him is full of treachery.
27 As he lowers face and feigns deafness, when no one observes, he will outrun you.
28 And if by lack of strength he is prevented from sinning, if he finds opportunity, he will do evil.
29 From appearance a man will be recognized, and from a meeting in person a rational person will be recognized.
30 A man’s clothing and a laughter of teeth and a person’s gait will announce things about him.

*a.e. friend or foe   b.e. intentional   c.e. toothy laugh
There is questioning that is not timely, and there is one who keeps silent, and he is prudent.

How good it is to question rather than to be angry.

And he who admits freely will be kept from disparagement.

A eunuch’s desire to violate a girl—thus is he who makes judgments by force.

There exists a person who keeps silent, who is found to be wise, and there is one who is hated from much talk.

There exists one who keeps silent, for he does not have an answer, and there is one who keeps silent, since he knows the proper time.

A wise person will be silent until a proper time, but the swaggerer and fool overstep a proper time.

He who is excessive with speech will be loathed, and he who pretends to authority will be hated.

How good that when one is rebuked, one shows repentance, for thus shall you escape willful sinning.

A man has success in evil things, and there is a windfall resulting in loss.

There exists giving that will not profit you, and there exists giving of which the repayment is double.

There exists loss for the sake of reputation, and there exists a person who from a low estate raised his head.

There exists a person who buys much for a little and pays for it seven times.

The wise person will make himself beloved in a few things, but favors of foolish ones will be poured out.

A gift of a fool will not profit you, and likewise also that of a grudging person on account of his compulsion, for his eyes are many instead of one. He will seldom give and reproach often, and he will open his mouth like a herald; today he will lend and ask back tomorrow; such a person is hateful.

A foolish person says, “I do not have a friend, and there is no gratitude for my good deeds.” Those who eat his bread are mean in tongue.

How often and how many will ridicule him?

[For he has not received what he has with true feeling, and what he does not have similarly is indifferent to him.]

A slip on the ground rather than of the tongue; so the downfall of evil persons will come speedily.

An ungracious person, an untimely story, it will persist in the mouth of the uneducated.

An illustration from the mouth of a foolish person will be rejected, for he will not tell it at its proper time.

There exists a person who is prevented from sinning by indigence, and in his rest he will not be bewildered.

There exists a person who destroys his life through shame, and he will destroy it due to a fool.

There exists a person who promises to a friend a favor out of shame and made him an enemy to no purpose.

A lie is an evil blemish on a person; it will persist in the mouth of the uneducated.

Preferable is a thief over one who persists in a lie, but both will inherit destruction.

A lying person’s character is dishonor, and his shame is constantly with him.

The wise person will apply himself in few things, and a prudent person will please nobles.

He who tills the soil will raise up his heap, and he who pleases nobles will atone for injustice.

Friendly gift and presents blind the eyes of wise persons, and like a muzzle on a mouth they turn away reproofs.

Hidden wisdom and unseen treasure, what profit is there in both? Better is a person who hides his foolishness than a person who hides his wisdom.

Better is implacable endurance in seeking the Lord than a spurious charioteer of one’s own life.

Child, you sinned; do not add any longer, and concerning your former ones petition. As from before a snake, flee from sin, for if you approach, it will bite you; its teeth are lion’s teeth, destroying people’s lives.

aLacking in Gk  bOr bribes
3 All lawlessness is like a two-edged sword; for its wound there is no healing.
4 Consternation and insolence will desolate wealth; so an arrogant person’s house will be uprooted.
5 A poor person’s petition is from the mouth to his ears, and his judgment comes speedily.
6 One who hates reproof is in the footsteps of a sinner, and he who fears the Lord will turn with the heart.
7 Known from afar is he who is mighty in tongue, but he who is sensible knows when he makes a slip.
8 He who builds his house with others’ money is like one who gathers his stones for a burial mound.
9 A gathering of the lawless is bundled flax, and a flame of fire is their end.
10 A way of sinners is leveled out of stones, and at its end is a hole of Hades.
11 He who keeps the law gains mastery over the object of his thought, and consummation of the fear of the Lord is wisdom.
12 He who is not clever shall not be instructed, but there is a cleverness that increases bitterness.
13 A wise person’s knowledge will increase like a flood, and his counsel is like a spring of life.
14 The inward parts of a foolish person are like a broken vessel, and he will not master any knowledge.
15 A wise word—if one who understands hears it, he will praise it and will add to it. He who lives luxuriously heard and was dispensed with it, and he turned it aside behind his back.
16 A foolish person’s explanation is like a burden on a journey, but upon the lips of an intelligent person grace will be found.
17 The mouth of a prudent person will be sought in an assembly, and his words they will ponder in their heart.
18 Like a house that has been razed, so is wisdom to a foolish person, and an ignorant person’s knowledge is meaningless words.
19 On a thoughtless person’s feet education is fetters,
20 and like manacles on one’s right hand.
21 A foolish person raises his voice in laughter, but a clever man will scarcely smile in silence.
22 Like a golden ornament is instruction to a prudent person, and like a bracelet on the right arm.
23 A foolish person’s foot is quick into a house, but an experienced person will feel restraint in front.
24 A fool peeks into a house from a door, but an educated man will stand outside.
25 It is lack of education for a person to listen at a door, but a prudent person will be weighed down by dishonor.
26 Lips of strangers will tell tales with these things, but the words of prudent persons will be placed on a scale.
27 In the mouth of foolish persons is their heart, but in the heart of wise persons is their mouth.
28 A sluggard has been compared to a filthy stone, and everyone will hiss at his dishonor.
29 A sluggard has been compared to cow dung of dunghills; everyone who picks it up will shake off his hand.
30 A father’s shame is in engendering an ineducable son, but a daughter is born at a loss.
31 A prudent daughter will obtain a husband of her own, and she who is put to shame is as a grief for a begetter.
32 The impudent woman shames father and husband, and she will be held in dishonor by both of them.
33 Untimely narration is music during mourning, but whips and instruction are wisdom at any time.
34 Children who have a rearing in a good life will hide the lowly birth of their own begetters.
35 Children who take pride in contempt and lack of instruction sully the good birth of their own family.
He who teaches a foolish person is one gluing together a potsherd, one arousing a sleeper out of a deep sleep.

He who recounts to a foolish person is recounting to one who is drowsy, and at the conclusion he will say, “What is it?”

Weep over a corpse, for he has left the light,
  and weep over a foolish person, for he has left understanding behind.
  Weep sweetly over a corpse, because he died, but the life of the foolish person is a sorry plight beyond death.

Mourning for a corpse is for seven days, but for a foolish and impious person, it is all the days of his life.

Do not increase speech with a fool,
  and do not go to an unintelligent person; [for when a person is without sense, he will bring to nothing everything of yours;]
  keep away from him, lest you have trouble, and you will not be sullied by his shaking off;
  stay clear of him, and you will find rest, and you will never be wearied by his madness.

What will be heavier than lead?
  And what name does he have but “foolish person”?

Sand and salt and a lump of iron are easier to bear than an unintelligent person.

A tie-beam fastened into a building will not be loosed by an earthquake;
  so a heart firmly set upon a thought from counsel will not be afraid at any time.

A heart fixed upon thoughtful understanding is like an engraved ornament on a smooth wall.

Pebbles lying on a high surface will never endure against a wind;
  so a heart in dread at the thought of a foolish person
  will never endure against any fear.

He who pricks an eye will draw down tears,
  and he who pricks a heart brings to light feelings.

He who throws a stone at birds scares them
  off,
  and he who insults a friend dissolves a friendship.

If you draw a sword on a friend,
  do not despair, for a way back is possible.

If you open your mouth against a friend, be not concerned, for reconciliation is possible—
  with the exception of reproach and arrogance and revealing a secret and a treacherous blow—
  in these cases any friend will flee.

Gain your fellow’s trust in poverty so that in his prosperity you may be filled
  as well;
  in a time of distress stay with him so that in his inheritance you may be a joint heir.
  [For one should not always despise the outline,] [nor is a rich person admirable when he has no purpose.]

Preceding a fire there are a furnace’s vapor and smoke;
  so preceding bloodshed there are abuses.

I will not be ashamed to shelter a friend,
  and from before him I will never hide.

And if bad things will happen to me on his account,
  everyone who hears will guard against
  him.

Who will grant a guard upon my
  mouth
  and a shrewd seal upon my lips, lest I fall because of them
  and my tongue destroy me?

O Lord, Father and Master of my life,
  do not abandon me to their design,
  and do not let me fall among them.

Who will set whips upon my thought and discipline of wisdom upon my heart
  so that they might not spare my faults of ignorance
  and he shall not let their sins go?— that my acts of ignorance may not be multiplied,
  and my sins may increase,
  and I will fall before my adversaries,
  and my enemy will rejoice over me.
  [Far from them is the hope of your mercy.]

O Lord, Father and God of my life, do not give me a lifting up of eyes,
  and turn desire away from me.

Let not the belly’s appetite and sexual intercourse seize me,
  and do not give me over to a shameless
  soul.

Listen, children, to discipline of the
  mouth,
  and he who observes it will never be caught.

By his lips a sinner will be seized, and an abusive person and an arrogant person will be made to stumble by them.

9 Do not accustom your mouth to an oath, and do not become used to the naming of the Holy One.

10 For just as a domestic who is constantly scrutinized will not be wanting for a bruise, so also he who swears and always speaks the name will never be cleansed from sin.

11 A man of many oaths will be full of lawlessness, and a scourge will not depart from his house; if he errs, his sin is upon him, and if he disregards it, he has sinned doubly, and if he swore in vain, he will not be justified, for his house will be full of distress.

12 There is a way of speaking that compares with death; let it not be found in the inheritance of Iakob; for all these things shall stand away from the pious, and they shall not wallow in sins.

13 Do not let your mouth become used to lewd want of education, for there is in it a word of sin.

14 Remember your father and mother, for you sit in council among nobles, lest you forget yourself before them and act foolishly by your habit, and you will wish that you were never born, and you will curse the day of your birth.

15 A person who is accustomed to words of reproach, in all his days, will never be instructed.

16 Two kinds multiply sins, and a third will bring on wrath. A hot temperament like a burning fire will never be quenched until it is consumed; a person who is sexually promiscuous with a|e. his own flesh and blood will never cease until a fire burns out.

17 To a sexually promiscuous person all bread is sweet; he will never grow weary until he dies.

18 There is a person who transgresses against his bed, saying in his soul, "Who will see me? Darkness surrounds me, and the walls will hide me, and no one will see me. Why am I discreet? The Most High will never remember my sins."

19 And people’s eyes are his fear, and he was unaware that the eyes of the Lord are ten thousand times brighter than the sun, as they look upon all the ways of human beings and as they look into obscure parts.

20 Before all things were created, they were known to him, so also after they were completed.

21 This one will be punished in the streets of the city, and when he did not suspect it, he will be seized.

22 So also a woman when she leaves her husband and presents an heir by another.

23 Now, first, she disobeyed the law of the Most High, and second, she committed a wrong against her husband, and third, she committed adultery by an illicit act and presented children by another man.

24 She herself shall be brought out into an assembly, and there will be a visitation on her children.

25 Her children will not spread out into a root, and her branches will not bear fruit.

26 She will leave behind her memory for a curse, and her reproach will not be blotted out.

27 And those who are left behind will know that nothing is better than fear of the Lord, and nothing is sweeter than to heed commandments of the Lord.

28 It is a great glory to follow God, [and for you to be received by him is length of days.]

PRAISE OF WISDOM

24 Wisdom will praise her soul, and in the midst of her people she will boast.

2 In an assembly of the Most High she will open her mouth, and before his power she will boast.

3 "I came forth from the mouth of the Most High, and like a mist I covered earth. I encamped in the heights, and my throne was in a pillar of cloud.

5 A circle of sky I encircled alone, and in the deep of abysses I walked. In the waves of the sea and in all the earth and in every people and nation I led.

7 With all these I sought repose, and in whose inheritance I would settle.

"I.e. his own flesh and blood
8 “Then the creator of all commanded me, and he who created me put down my tent and said, ‘Encamp in Jakob, and in Israel let your inheritance be.’

9 Before the age, from the beginning, he created me, and until the age I will never fail. In a holy tent I ministered before him, and thus in Sion I was firmly set.

10 In a beloved city as well he put me down, and in Jerusalem was my authority. And I took root among a glorified people, in the portion of the Lord is my inheritance.

11 Like a cedar I was raised up in Lebanon, and like a cypress in the mountains of Aeron. Like a palm I was raised up in Aiggada, and like rosebushes in Jericho, like a good-looking olive tree in a plain, and I was raised up like a plane tree.

12 Like cinnamon and camel’s thorn for spices, and like choice myrrh I gave forth a fragrance, like galbanum and onycha and stacte and like the vapor of frankincense in a tent.

13 I, like a terebinth, spread out my branches, and my branches were branches of glory and grace. I, like a vine, budded forth favor, and my blossoms were the fruit of glory and wealth.

14 I am a mother of love that is beautiful, and of reverence and of knowledge and of devout hope, and I give it together with all my children; they are ever-generating, to those who are picked by him.

15 "Come to me, you who desire me, and from my produce be filled. For the memory of me is sweet beyond honey, and the inheritance of me beyond a honeycomb of honey. Those who eat me will hunger for more, and those who drink me will thirst for more. He who obeys me will not be ashamed, and those who work with me will not sin."

16 All these things are the book of the covenant of the Most High God, a law that Moyses commanded us, an inheritance for the gatherings of Jakob.

17 Do not cease to be strong in the Lord, and cling to him so that he might strengthen you. The Lord Almighty alone is God, and there is no savior beside him. It fills wisdom like Phison and like Tigris in days of new things. It supplies understanding like Euphrates and like Jordan in days of harvest, It shines forth education like light, like Geon in days of vintage.

18 The first man did not complete knowing her, and so the last one did not track her out; for her thought was filled from the sea, and her counsel from the great abyss.

19 And I, like a canal from a river and a water channel, issued forth into an orchard. I said, "I will water my garden, and I will drench my flower bed." And look! The canal turned into a river for me, and my river turned into a sea.

20 Still I will again make education enlighten like dawn, and I will shine them forth to far off. Still I will again pour out teaching like prophecy, and I will leave it behind for generations of eternity.

21 See that I have not toiled for myself alone but for all who seek it out.

22 My soul found passion in three things, and these are beautiful before the Lord and human beings: harmony of brothers and friendship of fellows and a wife and husband who accommodate each other.

23 But three kinds my soul hates, and I was offended at their life: an arrogant poor person and a rich liar, an old adulterer lacking in understanding.

24 If in youth you have not gathered, how then in your old age could you find?

25 How beautiful a thing is judgment in gray-haired women, and to discover counsel in elderly men, and thought and counsel in venerable persons.
A garland of aged persons is great experience, and their boast is fear of the Lord.

Nine suppositions I deem happy in my heart, and a tenth I will speak with my tongue: a person who is glad over children, who lives and looks at the downfall of his enemies.

Happy is he who dwells with a sensible wife and who did not slip with the tongue and who did not become a slave to one unworthy of himself.

Happy is he who found prudence, and he who recounts to the ears of people who listen.

How great is he who finds wisdom, but there is none above him who fears the Lord.

Fear of the Lord surpassed everything; he who possesses it—to whom shall he be compared?

Fear of the Lord is the beginning of loving him, but faith is the beginning of clinging to him.

Any wound, and not a wound of the heart, and any wickedness, and not the wickedness of a woman; any attack, and not the attack of those who hate, and any vengeance, and not the vengeance of enemies.

There is no head beyond a snake’s head, and there is no anger beyond a woman’s anger.

I shall be content to live with lion and dragon, rather than to live with a wicked woman.

A woman’s wickedness alters her appearance, and it darkens her face like a bear.

Among his neighbors her husband will recline and involuntarily groaned bitter things.

Any evil is small touching a woman’s evil; may a sinner’s lot of befall her.

A sandy ascent for the feet of an elderly man, so is a garrulous woman to a quiet husband.

Do not fall down upon a woman’s beauty, and do not yearn after a woman.

Wrath and shamelessness and great disgrace is a wife if she provides for her husband.

A dejected heart and a sullen face and a wound of the heart is a wicked wife; slack hands and weakened knees are from a woman who does not make her husband happy.

From a woman is the beginning of sin, and because of her we all die.

Do not give water an outlet nor freedom of speech to a wicked wife.

If she does not walk according to your hands, ‘cut her off from your flesh’.

Happy is the husband of a good wife, and doubled is the number of his days.

A courageous wife gladdens her husband, and he will fulfill his years in peace.

A good wife is a good portion; she will be given as a portion to the one who fears the Lord.

When rich or poor, a good heart, at every moment a cheerful face!

Of three things was my heart wary, and in the face of a fourth I was frightened: a slander by a city, an assembly of a mob and false accusation, all miserable beyond death!

Pain of heart and sorrow is a woman who is a rival to a wife, and a lash of a tongue is she who shares with everyone.

A chafing ox-yoke is a wicked wife; he who holds her is like him who grasps a scorpion.

A great wrath is a drunken wife, and her shameful conduct she will not hide.

A wife’s fornication is in her eyes’ haughty looks, and it will be recognized in her eyelids.

Over a wanton daughter keep strict watch, otherwise when she discovers release for herself, she will use it, After an impudent eye watch out, and do not be surprised if she does wrong to you.

When a traveler is thirsty, he will open his mouth and will drink from any water that is near, she will sit opposite every staked and she will open quiver to arrow.

A wife’s charm will delight her husband, and her skill will put fat on his bones.

A gift from the Lord is a silent wife, and there is no exchange for her disciplined soul.

Charm upon charm is a modest wife, and there is no standard weight good enough for a self-controlled soul.

When the sun rises in the heights of the Lord—also a good wife’s beauty, an ornament of her home.

When a lamp shines forth upon a holy lampstand—
also beauty of face upon stable age.

Golden pillars upon a silver base—
also beautiful legs upon well-balanced feet.

Child, preserve intact the prime of your adulthood,
and do not give your strength to strangers.

When you have sought out a fertile plot of an entire plain,
sow your own seed confident in your excellent descent.

Thus, your offspring, surrounding you and having the confidence of excellent descent, will become great.

A hired woman will be regarded as equal to spittle, but a married one will be regarded as a tower of death to those who use her.

An impious woman will be given as a portion to a lawless man, but a pious woman is given to him who fears the Lord.

A shameless woman will exhaust dishonor,
but a decorous daughter will revere even her husband.

A wanton wife will be regarded as a dog,
but she who has shame will fear the Lord.

A woman who honors her own husband will appear wise to everyone, but she who dishonors him with arrogance will be known to all as impious.

Happy is the husband of a good wife,
for the number of his years will be double.

By two things has my heart been grieved,
and by a third anger came upon me:
a warrior wanting on account of indigence and intelligent men when they are treated contumuously:
a person brought from righteousness to sin,
the Lord will prepare him for the sword.

A merchant will scarcely be delivered from wrongdoing,
and a retailer will not be innocent of sin.

Many have sinned on account of cash,
and he who seeks to increase will avert an eye.

Between joints of stones a peg will be driven,
and between selling and buying sin will be wedged.

If one does not hold fast in fear of the Lord, quickly, with speed, his house will be overthrown.

With a shaking of a sieve, refuse remains—so a person’s offal in his reasoning.

A kiln tests a potter’s vessels, and a person’s test is in his deliberation.

Its fruit brings to light a tree’s cultivation—so reasoning notions of a person’s heart.

Before reasoning do not commend a man, for this is the test of people.

If you pursue what is just, you will take hold and wear it like a full-length robe of glory.

Birds will nest with those like them, and truth will come back to those who practice it.

A lion lies in wait for prey, so sin for people who practice injustices.

The narrative of a pious person is always wisdom, but the fool changes like the moon.

In the midst of unintelligent persons watch closely for occasion, but in the midst of thoughtful persons keep going.

The narrative of foolish persons is an offense, and their laughter is in wantonness of sin.

Talk with much swearing will make the hair stand on end, and their strife is a stopping up of ears.

A shedding of blood is the strife of the arrogant, and their railing is miserable to hear.

He who reveals secrets has destroyed trust and will never find a friend for his soul.

Show a friend affection, and keep faith with him, but if you reveal his secrets, do not follow after him.

For just as a person destroyed his corpse, so you destroyed your fellow’s friendship.

And as you let a bird go free from your hand, so you let go of your fellow, and you will not catch him.

Do not pursue him, because he has withdrawn far off,

\textsuperscript{a}Lacking in Gk \textsuperscript{b}Gk uncertain and he has escaped like a gazelle from a 21 trap.

Because it is possible to bind up a wound,
there is also reconciliation for abuse, but he who revealed secrets was without hope.

22 One who winks an eye devises evil things, and he who knows him will turn away
from him.

23 Before your eyes his mouth will be sweet,
and at your words he will be amazed,
but later he will distort his mouth, and with your words he will give offense.

24 I hated many things, and I did not become like him,
and the Lord will hate him.

25 He who throws a stone high up throws on his head,
and a treacherous blow will open up wounds.

26 He who digs a hole will fall into it, and he who sets a trap will get caught in it.

27 He who does wickedness—it will be rolled on to him,
and he will never recognize whence it has come to him.

28 Mocking and reproach belong to an arrogant person,
and vengeance, like a lion, will lie in wait
for him.

29 Those who are glad at the fall of pious persons will get caught in a snare, and sorrow will consume them before their death.

30 Ire and anger, these also are abominations, and a sinful man will have possession of
them.

28 He who avenges will discover vengeance from the Lord, and when he observes carefully, he\textsuperscript{a} will carefully observe his sins.

2 Forgive your neighbor a wrong, and then, when you petition, your sins will be pardoned.

3 A person harbors wrath against a person—and will he seek healing from the Lord?

4 Does he not have mercy on a person like himself
and petition concerning his sins?

5 His being flesh maintains ire—who will make atonement for his sins?

6 Remember the end things, and cease to be at enmity;
remember\textsuperscript{b} corruption and death, and cleave to the commandments.

7 Remember commandments, and do not be irate with your fellow, and remember\textsuperscript{c} the covenant of the Most High, and overlook a mistake\textsuperscript{d}.

8 Refrain from strife, and you will reduce sins, for a hot-tempered person will kindle strife.

9 and a sinful man will disturb friends,
and among people at peace he will cast slander.

10 In proportion to a fire’s wood, so will it burn,
and in proportion to the obstinacy of strife, it will increase;
in proportion to a person’s strength, will his anger be,
and in proportion to his wealth, he will raise up his wrath.

11 A quarrel being hastened kindles a fire,
and strife in a hurry sheds blood.

12 If you blow on a spark, it will flame up, and if you spit on it, it will be extinguished,
and both will proceed out of your
mouth.

13 Curse a slanderous and double-tongued
person,
for he has destroyed many who are at peace.

14 \textsuperscript{d}A third tongued has shaken many and separated them from nation to nation
and demolished strong cities and overturned the houses of nobles.

15 \textsuperscript{d}A third tongued has cast out courageous women
and deprived them of their labors.

16 He who pays heed to it will never find rest, nor will he encamp with quiet.

17 A whip’s blow produces a welt,
but a tongue’s blow will break bones.

18 Many have fallen by a dagger’s edge, but not like those who have fallen because of a tongue.

19 Happy is the one protected from it,
who has not endured in its anger,
who has not dragged its yoke
and with its fetters has not been bound.

20 For its yoke is a yoke of iron,
and its fetters are fetters of bronze.

21 A wicked death is its death,
and Hades is more advantageous than it.

22 It will never prevail over pious persons,
and in its flame they will not be burned.

23 Those who forsake the Lord will fall into it, and in them it will burn, and it will never be extinguished;
it will be sent after them like a lion,
and like a leopard it will injure them.

24b Lock up your silver and gold,
and make for your words a balance and a weight.
25b Take heed lest you slip by it;
do not fall before one who lies in wait.

29 He who does mercy will lend to his fellow,
and he who prevails with his hand keeps the commandments.
2 Lend to your fellow in his time of need,
and again pay back your fellow at the proper time.
3 Firmly establish a word, and be trustworthy with him,
and on every occasion you will find what you need.
4 Many regarded a loan as a windfall,
and they caused trouble for those who helped them.
5 Until he receives it, he will kiss his hands,
and about his fellow's money he lowers his voice, and at the moment for repayment he will delay for time
and will pay back words of apathy, and he will blame the time.
6 If he is capable, he will recover scarcely half,
and he will consider that as a windfall;
but if not, he has defrauded him of his money,
and he has needlessly made him an enemy;
curses and insults he will repay him,
and instead of glory he will repay him dishonor.
7 Many turned away not because of wickedness;
they were wary of being defrauded needlessly.
8 Nevertheless, with a lowly person be patient, and do not make him wait for charity.
9 On account of the commandment, assist a needy person, and according to his need do not turn him away empty.
10 Lose silver for the sake of a brother and a friend, and do not let it corrode under the stone unto destruction.
11 Dispose of your treasure according to the commandments of the Most High,
and it will profit you more than gold.
12 Store up charity in your treasuries, and it will deliver you from every affliction.
13 More than a shield of might and more than a spear of weight, it will fight against your enemy on your behalf.

14 A good man will give surety for his fellow,
and he who lost shame will abandon him.
15 A guarantor's kindness do not forget,
for he gave his soul on your behalf.
16 A guarantor's goods a sinner will ruin, and an ungrateful person will intentionally abandon one who rescues.
17 Surety destroyed many who were prosperous and tossed them about like a wave of the sea;
powerful men it exiled,
and they wandered among foreign nations.
18 A sinner will fall into surety, and as he pursues profit-taking, he will fall into lawsuits.
19 Assist your fellow according to your ability,
and take care for yourself that you do not fall.
20 Life's beginning is water and bread and clothing and a house for hiding indecency.
21 Better is the life of a poor person under a shelter of rafters than splendid foods among strangers.
22 With little or much have contentment, and you will never hear reproach for being a sojourner.
23 It is a miserable life going from house to house,
and where you will be a sojourner, you shall not open your mouth.
24 You will entertain and provide drink for no thanks, and besides, you will hear bitter words such as these, 26 “Come here, sojourner; prepare a table, and if there is something in your hand, feed me.” 27 “Go away, sojourner, because of good repute;
my brother came to me for a visit; I need the house.”
28 These are hard things for a person with pride, criticism about being a sojourner and reproach from a money-lender.

CONCERNING CHILDREN

30 He who loves his son will persist in whipping him so that he may be glad at his outcome.
2 He who instructs his son will profit by him,
and among acquaintances he will boast about him.
3 He who teaches his son will make his enemy envious, and before friends he will exult in him.
4 His father passed away and is as though he did not die, for he left behind him a person like himself.
5 In his life he saw and was glad, and at his end he was not grieved.
6 Against enemies he has left behind an avenger and one who repays a kindness to friends.

7 When one cherishes a son, one will bind up his wounds, and with every cry one’s insides will be troubled.
8 An unbroken horse turns out stubborn, and a son when given free reign turns out rash.
9 Coddle a child, and it will terrorize you; play with him, and he will grieve you.
10 Do not laugh together with him, lest you suffer together, and in the end you will gnash your teeth.
11 Do not give him license in his youth, and do not overlook his ignorances.

12 Bend his neck in youth. Bruise his sides while he is an infant, lest, when he becomes stubborn, he will obey you, and you will have distress of soul from him.

13 Instruct your son, and work with him, lest by his disgraceful behavior you become offended.

14 Better a poor person healthy and strong in constitution than a rich person scourged in his body.
15 Health and vigor are better than any gold, and a robust spirit than boundless worldly weal.

CONCERNING FOODS
16 There is no wealth better than health of body, and there is no gladness beyond joy of heart.
17 Better death than a bitter life, and eternal repose than chronic sickness.
18 Good things poured out on a mouth that is shut are offerings of food set on a grave.

19 Of what use is a fruit offering to an idol? For it will neither eat nor smell.

20 So is he who is banished by the Lord.
21 Whoever sees with the eyes and groans is like a eunuch who embraces a maiden and groans.
[Thius is he who makes judgments by compulsion.]
22 Do not give your soul to grief, and do not afflict yourself by your design.
23[24] Deceive your soul, and comfort your heart, and remove grief far from you.
24[25] For many has grief destroyed, and there is no advantage in it.
25[26] Jealousy and anger lessen days, and before the proper time anxiety brings old age.
26[27; 33.13b] A cheerful and good heart at meats will take care of its food.

31[34] Wakefulness over wealth wastes away flesh, and anxiety about it removes sleep.
2 Anxiety over wakefulness will remove sleepiness, and a severe illness will carry off sleep.
3 A rich person toiled at the accumulation of money, and in rest he fills himself with his delicacies.
4 A poor person toiled for a diminution of life, and in rest he becomes needy.

5 He who loves gold will not be justified, and he who pursues profits will be led astray by them.
6 Many were given over to ruin because of gold, and their destruction has happened in front of them.
7 It is a block for stumbling for those who are possessed by it, and every fool will be taken captive by it.
8 Happy is a rich person who was found blameless and who did not go after gold.
9 Who is he and shall we call him happy? For he did wonders among his people.
10 Who has been tested by it and been made perfect? And it will be as a boast for him. Who was able to transgress and did not transgress, and to do evil and did not do so?
11 Therefore his good things will be confirmed, and his acts of charity an assembly will recount.

12 Were you seated at a great table? Do not open your throat at it.
13 And do not say, “Indeed how many are the things on it!”

14[15] Remember that a wicked eye is an evil thing. What was created more wicked than an eye? Therefore it sends tears from a whole face.

16[17] Do not extend a hand for whatever you see, and do not crowd for it at a bowl.
15(18) Consider the things of your fellow \textsuperscript{a}from yourself, and about every matter be thoughtful.
16(19) Eat like a human being the things set before you, and do not chomp, lest you be hated.
17(20) Be the first to stop, due to your training, and do not be gluttonous, lest you give offense.
18(21) And if you sat among rather many, do not extend your hand before they do.

19(22) For the person of education the little is as enough, and upon his bed he does not gasp for breath.
20(24) A sleep of health due to a moderate bowel! He rose early and his soul with him.
21(25) And if you were overpowered by foods, get up, and vomit a distance away, and you will have rest.
22(26) Listen, child, and do not scorn me, and in the end you will acquire my words;
27 in all of your works be skillful, and no illness will ever come upon you.
23(28) Lips will bless a person munificent with respect to bread, and trustworthy is the testimony to his fine quality.
24(29) The city will murmur about a wicked one for bread, and accurate is the testimony to his wickedness.

25(30) With wine do not be macho, for wine has destroyed many.
26(31) A furnace tests steel by dipping; thus wine tests hearts in strife of the proud.
27(32) Equal to life is wine for human beings, if you drink it in its measure.
33 What is life to one who lacks wine?
35 And it was created from the beginning for gladness.
28(36) Joy of heart and gladness of soul is sufficient wine drunk at the proper time.
29(39) Bitterness of soul is much wine drunk amid provocation and stumbling.
30(40) Drunkenness increases a fool’s temper for hurt, since it reduces strength and adds wounds.
31(41) At a banquet of wine do not reprove your fellow, and do not scorn him in his gladness;
32 do not speak to him a word of reproach, and do not distress him with demanding repayment.

3(4) Speak, O elderly person, for it is fitting for you, with accurate knowledge, and do not interrupt the music.
4(6) Where there is entertainment, do not pour out talk, and do not be smart at an inopportune moment.
5(7) A ruby seal on a gold ornament is a concert of music at a banquet of wine.
6(8) An emerald seal in a gold setting is a melody of music with sweet wine.
7(10) Speak, O young person, if you have need, only twice if you were asked;
11 Summarize your speech; in a few things there are many; be as one who knows and at the same time one who is silent.
9(13) In the midst of nobles do not exercise authority, and where there are old men, do not prate about many things.

11(15) Awaken in time, and do not bring up the rear; depart for home, and do not be idle.
12(16) There play, and do the things you desire, and do not sin by arrogant speech.
13(17) And in addition, bless the one who made you and intoxicates you with his good things.
14(18) He who fears the Lord will accept instruction, and those who rise early will find approval.
15(19) He who seeks the law will be filled with it, and he who is hypocritical will stumble on it.
16(20) Those who fear the Lord will get a verdict, and they will kindle right acts like a light.
17(21) A sinful person will turn away reproof, and according to his will, he will find a judgment.
18(22) A man of deliberation will never overlook a thought;
the stranger and the arrogant will not cower from fear.

19(24) Do nothing without deliberation, and do not feel regret when you have acted.

20(25) On a path of stumbling do not go,
and do not stumble on rocky ground.

21 Do not trust an unexplored road,
and guard against your children.

22(26) In every deed trust your soul, for this as well is a means of keeping the commandments.

23(27) He who has faith in the law attends to the commandments, and he who trusts in the Lord will not suffer loss.

33 (36)1 No evil will befall him who fears the Lord,
but in a test he will also be delivered in turn.

2 A wise man will not hate the law,
but he who is hypocritical with it is like a boat in a storm.

3 An intelligent person will trust in a word, and the law for him is as trustworthy
as an inquiry of the clear ones.

4 Prepare a speech, and so you will be heard;
consolidate instruction, and reply.

5 The emotions of a foolish person are like a wheel of a wagon, and his argument is like a turning axle.

6 A horse for breeding is like a mocking friend;
underneath anyone who sits on him, he whinnies.

7 Why is a day superior to a day, when all the light of a day of a year is from the sun?

8 By the Lord’s knowledge they were marked off, and he made seasons and feasts different.

9(10) Some of them he exalted and hallowed, and some of them he established for a number of days.

10 And all human beings are from the ground, and out of earth Adam was created.

11 In fullness of knowledge the Lord marked them off and made their ways different.

12 Some of them he blessed and exalted,
and some of them he hallowed and brought near to himself;
some of them he cursed and brought low and turned them out of their position.

13 Like a potter’s clay in his hand, to fashion it according to his liking,
so are human beings in the hand of him who made them,
to repay them according to his judgment.

14(15) Good is opposite evil,
and life is opposite death;
so a sinner is opposite a pious person.

15 And so look at all of the works of the Most High,
two by two, one opposite the other one.

16 As a last one, it was I who kept vigil,
as one who gleaned after the grape-pickers.

17(25) By the blessing of the Lord I arrived first,
and like one who picks grapes I filled a wine vat.

18(26) Consider that I have not labored for myself alone
but for all those who seek instruction.

19(27) Listen to me, nobles of the people,
and leaders of the assembly, give ear.

20(28) To son and wife, to brother and friend do not give authority over you in your lifetime, and do not give your property to another,
lest you change your mind and ask for it.

21(29) While you are still alive and there is breath in you, do not exchange yourself with any flesh.

22(30) For it is better that your children ask of you than that you should look to the hands of your sons.

23(31) In all your works be one who excels;
do not bring a stain on your reputation.

24(32) In the day of the completion of the days of your life and at the moment of death, distribute an inheritance.

25(33) Fodder and a rod and burdens for a donkey;
bread and instruction and work for a domestic.

26(34) Work with instruction, and you will find rest;
let loose his hands, and he will seek freedom.

27(35) A yoke and a thong will bow a neck,
and for a wicked domestic there are racks and tortures.

28(36) Put him to work so that he might not be unoccupied, 29(37) for lack of work has taught much evil.

30(38) Set him to work as is fitting for him,
and if he does not obey, make his fetters heavy.
And do not be excessive over any flesh,
and without judgment do not do anything.

31(39) If you have a domestic, let him be like you, because with blood you acquired him;
if you have a domestic, treat him like a brother, because you will need him like your own soul.

If you do him evil and he departs and runs away, on which road will you seek him?

A senseless man has empty and false hopes, and dreams excite fools.

Like one who grasps a shadow and pursues wind, so is he who pays heed to dreams.

An appearance in dreams is a likeness of a face opposite a face. Of an unclean thing what will become clean? And of a false thing what will be true?

Divinations and omens and dreams are vain, and as of a woman in labor the heart fantasizes.

Unless it has been sent from the Most High by a visitation, do not give your heart to them.

For dreams have deceived many, and persons who hope in them have fallen.

Without falsehood the law will be accomplished, and wisdom in a trustworthy mouth is completeness.

Since a man roamed, he knew many things, and he who is experienced will tell with understanding.

He who had no experience knows few things, but he who has roamed will increase cleverness.

I have seen many things in my wandering, and more than my words is my understanding.

Frequently I was in danger of death, and I was saved because of these things.

The spirit of people who fear the Lord will live, for their hope is in the one who saves them.

He who fears the Lord will be timid in nothing, and he will never be cowardly, because he is his hope.

Happy is the soul of one who fears the Lord. Upon whom is he intent? And who is his support?

The eyes of the Lord are upon those who love him, a shield of dominance and a support of strength, a shelter from the burning heat and shade from midday, a guard against stumbling and a help against falling.

one who uplifts the soul and enlightens eyes, gives healing of life and blessing.

When one sacrifices from someone unjust, it is a blameworthy offering, and the gifts of lawless persons are not for approval.

The Most High is not pleased with the offerings of impious persons, nor by a multitude of sacrifices does he forgive sins.

One who slaughters a son in front of his father is he who brings a sacrifice from the property of the needy.

Bread is life for the poor when they are destitute; he who withholds it is a person of blood.

One who murders his fellow is he who takes away a way of living, and one who pours out blood is he who deprives the wages of a hired worker.

One builds, and one tears down—what did they gain more than hard labors?

One prays, and one curses—to whose voice will the master listen?

When one bathes due to a corpse and when one touches it again—what did he gain by his washing?

So is a person when he fasts for his sins and goes again and does the same things; who will listen to his prayer, and what did he gain by humbling himself?

He who keeps the Law multiplies offerings.

One who makes a sacrifice for deliverance is he who pays heed to the commandments.

One who repays a kindness is one who offers the finest flour, and he who does an act of charity is one who makes a sacrifice of praise.

A good pleasure to the Lord it is to withdraw from wickedness, and it is atonement to withdraw from injustice.

Do not be seen empty in the presence of the Lord, for all these things are for the sake of a commandment.

Possibly a reflection bI.e. God cI.e. life
8 An offering of a righteous person enriches the altar, and its pleasing odor is before the Most High.
9 A righteous man's sacrifice is acceptable, and its memorial will not be forgotten.
10 With a good eye glorify the Lord, and do not belittle the first fruit of your hands.
11 With every act of giving brighten the face, and with gladness consecrate a tithe.
12 Give to the Most High according to his giving and with a good eye according to that found at hand, because the Lord is the one who repays, and he will repay you sevenfold.
13 Do not offer a bribe, for he will not accept it, and do not be intent on an unrighteous sacrifice, because the Lord is judge, and with him there is no reputation of person.
16 He will not receive a person against a poor person, and he will listen to the petition of one who is wronged.
17 He will never ignore an orphan's supplication, nor a widow, if she pours out speech.
18 Do not a widow's tears run down upon her cheek, and is not her cry against the one who drew them down?
19 One who serves with goodwill will be accepted, and his petition will reach to the clouds.
20 A humble person's prayer passed through the clouds, and until it draws near, it will never relent, and it will never desist until the Most High takes notice.
22 And he will adjudicate for righteous persons and will execute judgment. And the Lord will never be slow, nor will he ever be patient regarding them until he crushes the loins of unmerciful persons and will repay vengeance upon the nations, until he removes the multitude of insolent persons and will shatter the scepters of unrighteous persons, until he repays a person according to his deeds and the works of human beings according to their notions, until he judges the case of his people and will gladden them with his mercy.
25 \textsuperscript{36} (33.1) Have mercy on us, O Master, the god of all, and cast the fear of you upon all the nations.
26 \textsuperscript{36} (36.16) Gather all the tribes of Iakob, and give them an inheritance, as from the beginning.
27 Have mercy on a people, O Lord, who have been called by your name, and on Israel, whom you likened to a first born.
28 Fill Sion with a celebration of your mighty acts, and your shrine with your glory.
29 Give testimony to your creations in the beginning, and raise up prophecies that were in your name.
30 Give a reward to those who wait for you, and let your prophets be found trustworthy.
31 Hear, O Lord, a petition of your domestics according to your good will concerning your people, and all who are upon the earth will know that you are the Lord, the God of the ages.
32 Any food will the stomach eat, but there exists food finer than food.
33 The throat makes proof of foods from a hunt; so an intelligent heart of false words.
34 A perverse heart will give grief,
but an experienced person will pay him back.

26 A woman will accept any male, but there exists a daughter better than a daughter.

27 A woman’s beauty brightens a face, and it surpasses a person’s every desire.

28 If mercy and gentleness are upon her tongue, her husband is not like the sons of human beings.

29 He who acquires a wife makes a beginning of a possession, a helper corresponding to him and a pillar of rest.

30 Where there is no fence, property will be plundered, and where there is no wife, he will groan as he wanders.

31 For who will trust an unencumbered robber as he bounds from city to city?—likewise a person who does not have a nest and who lodges wherever night falls.

37 Every friend will say, “I, too, have been a friend,” but there is a friend who is a friend in name only.

2 Will not grief approach unto death, when companion and friend turns into an enemy?

3 O evil notion, how were you involved, to cover the dry land with deceit?

4 A friend’s companion delights in gladness, and in a time of distress he will be opposite.

5 A companion suffers together with a friend for his stomach’s sake, and in the face of battle he will take up a shield.

6 Do not forget a friend in your soul, and do not be unmindful of him in your money.

7 Every counselor exalts advice, but there is one who counsels for himself.

8 Against a counselor guard your soul, and know beforehand what is his need, for he, too, will give advice for himself—lest he cast a lot against you and say to you, “Your way is fair,” and he will stand aside to see what will happen to you.

9 Do not consult with him who views you with suspicion, and from those who are envious of you hide deliberation:

10 with a woman about her rival and with a cowardly person about war, with a merchant about business and with one who buys about a sale, with a slanderer about gratitude and with an unmerciful person about generosity of heart, with an idle person about any work and with an annual laborer about finishing, with an idle domestic about a large task. Do not pay heed to these for any advice.

12 But rather persevere with a pious man whom you know to be one who keeps commandments, who in his soul is like your soul, and if you stumble, he will suffer with you.

13 And stand by your heart’s counsel, for there is nothing more faithful to you than it.

14 For a man’s soul is accustomed to inform at times more than seven sentinels sitting high up on a look-out.

15 And above all these, beseech the Most High so that he may make straight your way in truth.

16 The beginning of every deed is discourse, and before every action is counsel.

17 The track of change is the heart.

18 Four destinies appear, good and evil, life and death, and that which continually is lord over them is the tongue.

19 There exists a clever man who is an instructor of many, and to his own soul he is useless.

20 There exists a person skilled in words who is hated; this one will be lacking any luxury.

21 For charm has not been granted to him by the Lord, because he is deprived of any wisdom.

22 There exists a person wise in his own soul, and the fruits of his good sense are evident to all to see.

23 A wise man will instruct his own people, and the fruits of his understanding are reliable.

24 A wise man will be full of blessing, and all who see him will deem him happy.

25 A man’s life is in a number of days, and the days of Israel are without number.

26 The wise person among his people will inherit honor, and his name will live forever.

27 Child, during your life test your soul, and see what is bad for it, and do not give it.

28 For not everything confers benefit to everyone, and every soul is not pleased by everything.

29 Do not be greedy for every delicacy, and do not give yourself up to foods.

30 For in much food there is illness, and gluttony will bring one near to cholera.

31 Because of gluttony, many have died, but he who pays attention will add to life.

38 Honor a physician for his services, for indeed the Lord created him.

2 For healing is from the Most High, and he will receive a gift from a king.

3 A physician’s skill will put up his head, and in the presence of nobles he will be admired.

4 The Lord created remedies out of the earth, and a prudent man will not ignore them.

5 Was not water made sweet from wood in order that his strength might be known?

6 And it was he that gave skill to human beings in order to be glorified in his marvelous deeds.

7 By them he cured and took away his pain.

8 He who prepares unguents will make a compound with them, and his works will never be finished, and peace from him is upon the surface of the earth.

9 Child, in your illness do not look elsewhere, but pray to the Lord, and he will heal you.

10 Withdraw from error, and direct your hands, and from all sin cleanse your heart.

11 Give a sweet-smell and a memorial of fine flour, and enrich an offering.

12 And give a physician a place, for indeed the Lord created him, and do not let him withdraw from you, for indeed there is need of him.

13 There is a time when success is in their hands as well.

14 For they will also petition the Lord, that he might grant them success with rest and healing for the maintenance of life.

15 He who sins before him who made him, may he fall into a physician’s hands.

16 Child, let your tears fall over a corpse, and as one suffering terribly begin a lament, but in accordance with his decision lay out his body, and do not neglect his burial.

17 Make the weeping bitter and the beating fervent, and make mourning according to his dignity, for one day and two for the purpose of slander, and be comforted for the sake of grief.

18 For from grief issues death, and grief of the heart will cripple strength.

19 In misery grief too endures, and a poor person’s life is a curse of the heart.

20 Do not give your heart over to grief; withdraw from it, when you remember the end.

21 Do not forget, for there is no return, and him you will not benefit, and yourself you will harm.

22 Remember his judgment, because so is yours also.

23 In the resting of the corpse, put to rest his memorial, and be comforted by it in the departure of his spirit.

24 A scribe’s wisdom is in the opportunity for leisure, and he who does less business, it is he who will become wise.

25 How shall he who takes hold of a plow and boasts in the shaft of a goad become wise, when he drives cattle and is engaged in their tasks and his talk is about the offspring of bulls?

26 He will give his heart to producing furrows, and his sleeplessness is regarding fodder for heifers.

27 So every artisan and master-artisan, who keeps going by night as by day, those who cut signets of seals, and his patience is to diversify ornamentation; he will give his heart to making a painting lifelike, and his sleeplessness is to complete the work.

28 So a smith sitting near an anvil and examining closely works of iron; the vapor of the fire will melt his flesh, and with the heat of a furnace he will struggle; a hammer’s sound will renew his ear, and his eyes are against the pattern of the object; he will give his heart to completing works, and his sleeplessness is to decorate upon completion.
So a potter sitting at his work and turning a wheel with his feet, who always lies down in anxiety about his work, and every work of his is taken into account. With his arm he will mold clay and in front of his feet he will bend its strength; he will give over his heart to completing the glazing, and his sleeplessness is about cleaning the kiln. All of these relied on their hands, and each is skilled in his work. Without them a city will not be inhabited, and they will neither sojourn nor walk about, but they will not be sought for a council of the people. And they will not leap up in the assembly. On the judge’s seat they will not sit, and disposition of a legal decision they will not understand, and they will never shed light on instruction and judgment, and in illustrations they will not be found, but they will support the foundation of an age, and their need is in the execution of a craft.

Save for him who devotes his soul and who thinks about the law of the Most High!

He will seek out the wisdom of all the ancients, and he will be occupied with prophecies. He will preserve the narrative of famous men, and he will penetrate into the twists of illustrations. He will seek out the obscurities of proverbs, and he will be engaged with the riddles of illustrations. He will serve among nobles, and he will appear in front of rulers. He will travel in the land of foreign nations, for he has tested the good and bad things in people. He will devote his heart to rise early towards the Lord who made him, and he will petition in front of the Most High, and he will open his mouth in prayer, and concerning his sins he will petition.

If the great Lord wants, he will be filled with a spirit of understanding. He will pour forth words of his wisdom, and in prayer he will acknowledge the Lord.

He will direct counsel and knowledge, and on his hidden things he will think. He will illuminate the instruction of his teaching, and in the law of the Lord’s covenant he will boast. Many will praise his understanding, and it will never be blotted out; his memorial will not depart, and his name will live for generations of generations. Nations will narrate his wisdom, and an assembly will proclaim his praise. If he abides, he will leave behind a name greater than a thousand, and if he rests, it will favorable for him. Yet being so disposed, I will tell in detail, and I was filled like the full moon. Listen to me, O devout sons, and blossom like a rose growing by a watery stream. Like incense send out a sweet fragrance, and send forth a blossom like a lily. Spread abroad a voice, and praise together, and bless the Lord for all his works. Give majesty to his name, and acknowledge with praise of him, with songs on the lips and with cymbals, and in this manner you will speak with acknowledgement.

“All the works of the Lord, that they are very good, and every ordinance will occur in its time. It is not possible to say, ‘What is this? To what end is this?’ For everything will be sought out in its time. By his word water stood as a heap, and by an utterance of his mouth, reservoirs of water. By his ordinance is all good pleasure, and there is no one who will diminish his salvation. The works of all flesh are before him, and it is not possible to hide from his eyes. From age to age he watched, and nothing is a wonder before him. It is not possible to say, ‘What is this? To what end is this?’ For all things have been created for their uses.

*His blessing has covered over like a river, and like a flood it has drenched dry land.

Thus his anger will inherit nations as when he changed waters into salt water.

His ways are straight for the devout; so for the lawless there are pitfalls.

Good things have been created from the beginning for the good; so for sinners, evil things.

The beginning of every necessity for a human being’s life is water and fire and iron and salt and fine wheat flour and milk and honey, blood of a grape and oil and clothing.

All these things belong to the pious for good; so for sinners they will be turned into evil.

“There exist winds that have been created for vengeance, and in their wrath they made firm their scourges; at a time of consummation they will pour out strength, and the wrath of him who made them they will abate.

Fire and hail and famine and death, all these have been created for vengeance.

Teeth of wild beasts and scorpions and vipers and a sword taking vengeance on impious people for destruction.

In his commandment they will be gladdened, and they will be prepared for service on the earth, and at their times they will not transgress a word.”

Therefore from the beginning I was determined, and I thought, and I left it in writing.

The works of the Lord, all are good, and every need he will supply in its hour.

And it is not possible to say, “This is worse than this,” for all things will be highly esteemed at a right time.

And now with a whole heart and mouth sing hymns, and bless the name of the Lord.

A great engagement was created for every person, and a heavy yoke is on Adam’s sons from the day of their exit from their mother’s womb until the day of return to the mother of all: their considerations and fear of heart—thought of apprehension, day of death.

From the one sitting on a splendid throne, even to one humbled in earth and ashes, from one wearing blue and a garland, even to the one clothed in coarse linen—there are wrath and envy and confusion and unrest and fear of death and fury and strife. Even at the moment of rest upon a bed, sleep at night confuses his knowledge.

There is as little as nothing in rest, and he grows weary of that in his sleep as he does in the day, having been troubled by a vision of his heart, like one who has escaped from before war.

At the moment of his need, he awoke, even marveling at fear for nothing.

With all flesh, from human to animal, and upon sinners seven times more than these are death and blood and strife and sword, calamities, famine and ruin and scourge.

For the lawless all these things were created, and because of them the flood occurred.

Everything that is of earth reverts to the earth, and everything of water returns to the sea.

Every gift and injustice will be blotted out, but good faith will stand forever.

The money of the unjust will dry up like a river, and like loud thunder in a rain storm they will crash.

When he opens his hands, he will be glad; so those who transgress will fail at the end.

The offspring of impious persons will not multiply branches, and they are foul roots upon a sheer rock.

A reed by any water and river bank will be plucked up before any grass.

Kindness is like an orchard with blessings, but an act of charity will endure forever.

The life of a self-reliant and a hard-working person will be sweet, and above both is he who finds a treasure.

Children and the building of a city firmly fix a name, and above both is a wife considered blameless.

Wine and music gladden a heart, and above both is love of wisdom.

Flute and harp make sweet melodies, and above both is a pleasant tongue.

Grace and beauty the eye will desire, and above both are the first shoots of seed.

Friend and companion meet at the right moment,

Or spirits bLacking in Gk and above both is a wife with a husband.

Brothers and aid are for a time of distress, and more than both an act of charity will rescue.

Gold and silver make a foot firm, and above both counsel is highly esteemed.

Money and strength will lift up a heart, and above both is fear of the Lord; there is no want in the fear of the Lord, and with it there is no reason to seek aid.

Fear of the Lord is like an orchard of blessing, and more than any glory it covers him.

Child, a life of begging do not live; it is better to die than to beg.

When a man looks to a table belonging to another, his manner of living is not by reckoning a life; he will pollute his soul with food belonging to others, but a man who is intelligent and who has been instructed will be on guard.

In the mouth of a shameless person begging will be sweet, and in his belly a fire will burn.

O death, how bitter is the remembrance of you to a person at peace with his possessions, to a man undistracted and prospering in everything and still having strength to welcome a luxury.

O death, your judgment is good to a person who is needy and lacking strength, who is in extreme old age and is anxious about everything and who is disobedient and has lost hope.

Do not be wary of death’s judgment; remember those before you and the last ones.

This is the judgment from the Lord for all flesh—and why should you reject the good pleasure of the Most High? Whether ten or a hundred or a thousand years, in Hades there is no reproving of life.

Abominable children are children of sinners, and living together in the enclaves of impious persons.

The inheritance of the children of sinners will perish, and disgrace will continually be with their seed.

Children will blame an impious father, because on his account they will be reproached.

Woe to you, impious men, who have forsaken the law of the Most High.

[For if you multiply, it is for destruction,] and if you are born, you will be born for a curse, and if you die, you will be apportioned a curse.

Everything that is from the earth will go back into the earth; so impious persons are from a curse to destruction.

The grief of human beings is in their bodies, but a no-good name of sinners will be blotted out.

Have regard for a name, for it will endure for you rather than a thousand great treasures of gold.

Of a good life there is a number of days, but a good name will endure forever.

Maintain instruction in peace, children, but hidden wisdom and invisible treasure—what profit is in either?

Better is a person who conceals his foolishness than a person who conceals his wisdom.

Therefore show respect for my judgment, for it is not good to guard against every shame, and not everything will be approved by all with confidence.

Be ashamed before father and mother, of sexual immorality, and before leader and dynast, of falsehood, before judge and magistrate, of error, and before a gathering and people, of lawlessness, before partner and friend, of injustice, and before a place where you sojourn, of theft, before divine truth and covenant and before planting an elbow for bread, before damning in receiving and giving and before people who greet, of silence, before a look at a female escort and before turning away from the face of a relative, before taking away a portion and a gift and before ogling a married woman, before meddling with his servant girl—and do not come upon her bed—before friends, of words of reproach—and after giving, do not reproach, before repeating a word of hearsay and before disclosing secret words, and you will be truly modest and finding favor before every human.

Do not be ashamed of these things, and do not receive a face in order to sin:

2 of the law of the Most High and covenant and of giving an inheritance of others, of accuracy with scale and weights and of acquiring much or little, of profit from business of merchants and of much discipline of children and to draw blood from the side of a wicked domestic.

In the case of a wicked wife, a seal is excellent, and where there are many hands, lock up.

Whatever you hand over—by number and weight and giving or receiving—put everything in writing.

Do not be ashamed of discipline for the stupid and foolish and for the aged guilty of sexual immorality, and you will have truly been trained and will have been approved before every living person.

A daughter is a hidden sleeplessness to a father, and anxiety about her takes away sleep—in her youth, lest she become past her prime, and having married, lest she be hated, in virginity, lest she be defiled and she become pregnant in her father’s house, being with a man, lest she transgress, and having married, lest she be barren.

Over a wanton daughter keep strict guard, lest she make you a laughingstock to enemies, common talk in the city and summoned by the people, and she shame you in a multitude of many.

Do not look at any person in terms of beauty, and in the midst of women do not deliberate.

For from garments proceeds a moth, and from a woman, woman’s wickedness. Better the wickedness of a man than a well-doing woman and a woman bringing shame to the point of reproach.

I will indeed remember the works of the Lord, and what I have seen, I will narrate; by the words of the Lord are his works, [and judgment happens by his good will.]

The shining sun looked down upon everything, and its work is full of the glory of the Lord.

He did not permit the holy ones of the Lord to recount all his wonders that the Lord the Almighty established so that the universe might stand firm in his glory.

Abyss and heart he searched out, and he considered their wonderful feats; for the Most High knew all knowledge, and he saw into the sign of the age, relating the things that passed and the things that will be and revealing tracks of hidden things.

No thought eluded him, and not one word was hidden from him.

He set in order the splendors of his wisdom; since he is one before the age and forever, he was neither added to nor diminished, and he needed no one as a counselor.

How desirable are all his works, and they are like a spark to behold. All these things live, and they remain forever, in all functions, and all obey. Everything is in pairs, one opposite one, and he did not make anything deficient.

One firmed up the good things of the other—and who will be filled when he sees his glory?

Exultation of height, firmament of elegance, the form of the sky in a vision of glory!

The sun in an appearance proclaiming in going out, a wondrous object, a work of the Most High!

At its noontide, it parches land—and before its burning heat who will endure?

When one blows a furnace in works of burning heat, threefold is the sun when it burns up mountains.

When it breathes out fiery vapors and when it shines forth rays, it blinds eyes.

Great is the Lord who made it, and at his words it hastened on its journey.

And the moon stands in its season, a proclamation of times and an everlasting sign.

From the moon is a sign for a feast,
a luminary that wanes upon completion.

A month is according to its name, increasing marvelously in changing,
an object on high for armies, shining in the firmament of the sky.

The glory of the stars is the beauty of the sky,
an ornament giving light in the heights of the Lord.

By words of the Holy One they will stand according to decree,
and they will never fail in their watches.

See the rainbow, and bless him who made it exceedingly beautiful in its brightness.

It ringed the sky in a circle of glory;
the hands of the Most High stretched it out.

By his ordinance he urges on snow and speeds the lightnings of his judgment.

Therefore storehouses were opened,
and clouds flew out like birds.

In his majesty he made clouds strong,
and stones of hail were broken apart.

The voice of his thunder caused the earth to be in travail,
and at his appearance mountains will be shaken.

By his will the south wind will blow,
also a storm from the north and a whirlwind.
Like birds flying down he sprinkles snow,
and like a locust alighting is its descent.

An eye will marvel at the beauty of its whiteness,
and a heart will be amazed by its rain.

And frost, like salt, he pours upon the earth,
and when it freezes, points of thorns occur.

A cold north wind will blow,
and ice will freeze on water;
upon every gathering of water it will settle,
and like a breastplate the water will put it on.

He will consume mountains and will burn up wilderness,
and he will extinguish grass like fire.

A mist hastens healing for all things;
a dew that comes out will refresh from the heat.

By his reasoning he abated the abyss,
and he planted islands in it.

Those who sail the sea describe its danger,
and we marvel at the reports of our ears.

The incredible and amazing works are there,
a variety of every living thing, a creation of sea monsters.

Because of him, his messenger succeeds,
and by his word all things hold together.

Many things we might say, and we would never arrive, and the consummation of words is “He is the all.”

Where shall we find the strength to glorify?
For he is the great one, beyond all of his works.

Awesome is the Lord and very great,
and marvelous is his dominance.

Glorify the Lord, and exalt him as much as you can,
for he will surpass even still,
and exalt him, and increase in strength;
do not grow weary, for you will never arrive.

Who has seen him and will describe him?
And who will magnify him as he is?

Many things hidden are greater than these,
for few of his works we have seen.

For the Lord made all things, and to the pious he gave wisdom.

A HYMN TO THE FATHERS

Let us now praise famous men and our fathers by descent.

The Lord created much glory,
his majesty from eternity.

When they ruled in their kingdoms, men also became noteworthy through power;
when they counseled with their intelligence,
when they announced through prophecies, when they led people by deliberations and with understanding of a people’s scribal art—wise words there are in their instruction—when they searched out musical tunes and set out verses in writing—rich men well endowed with strength, being at peace in their dwelling-places—
all of these were glorified in generations and in their days were a boast.

There were some of them who left behind a name
so that their praises might be told in detail.

And of others there is no memorial,
and they perished as though they had not existed,
and they became as those who had not been born,
and their children after them.

These, on the other hand, were men of compassion, whose righteous deeds were not forgotten.

With their seed it will remain;
a good inheritance is their offspring.

In the covenants their seed stood,
and their children for their sake.

Forever will their seed remain, 44–45

and their glory will not be blotted out. Their bodies were buried in peace, and their name lives for generations.

Peoples will recount their wisdom, and an assembly will proclaim their praise.

Henoch pleased God, and he was changed, an example of repentance for generations. Noe was found perfect, righteous; in a time of anger he became an exchange; because of him, there was a remnant for the earth, when a flood occurred.

Covenants of eternity were added to him lest all flesh be blotted out by a flood.

Abraam was a great father of a multitude of nations, and no blemish was found on his glory, who kept the law of the Most High, and he entered in a covenant with him; in his flesh he established a covenant, and in a trial he was found faithful. Therefore he established by means of an oath with him that nations would be blessed by his seed, that he would multiply him as the dust of the earth and like the stars to exalt his seed and to give them an inheritance from sea to sea and from the river to the end of the earth.

And with Isaak he likewise established, on account of Abraam his father. A blessing for all humankind and a covenant he put down upon the head of Iakob; he acknowledged him with his blessings, and he gave to him by an inheritance, and he divided his portions, and he allotted among twelve tribes.

And he brought out of him a man of mercy, who found favor in the eyes of all flesh, who was loved by God and human beings, Moyses, whose memorial is accompanied by blessings.

He made him equal to the glory of holy ones, and he made him great by terror for enemies.

By his words he hastened signs; he glorified him in front of kings; he gave him commands for his people, and he showed him his glory. In faithfulness and meekness he consecrated him; he chose him out of all flesh.

He caused him to hear his voice, and he led him into the deep darkness, and he gave him commandments face-to-face, a law of life and knowledge, to teach Iakob a covenant and Israel his judgments.

He exalted Aaron, a holy person like him, his brother from the tribe of Leui. He established him as an everlasting covenant and gave him a priesthood of the people; he pronounced him happy with decorum, and he girded him with a cloak of glory.

He clothed him with perfection of boasting, and he crowned him with the implements of strength, breeches and a full-length robe and shoulder-strap.

And he encircled him with pomegranates, with very many golden bells all around, to send forth a sound at his steps, to make an audible sound in the shrine for a memorial for the sons of his people, with the sacred vestment, with gold and blue and purple, a work of an embroiderer, with the oracle of judgment, for manifestations of truth, with twisted scarlet, a work of an artisan, with costly stones of an engraved seal in a setting of gold, a work of a jeweler, for a memorial in inscribed writing according to the number of the tribes of Israel, a crown of gold upon a turban, a carving of a seal of holiness, a boast of honor, a work of strength, objects of desire for the eyes, adorned. Before him such beautiful things did not exist. Until eternity, no alien put them on except his sons alone and his descendants in perpetuity. His sacrifices shall be wholly burned, twice each day continually.

Moyses filled his hands and anointed him with holy oil; it became for him an everlasting covenant and in his seed for the days of the sky, to minister to him and at the same time to be a priest and to bless his people in the name.

He chose him out of everyone alive to offer a fruit sacrifice to the Lord, incense and a pleasing odor for a memorial, to make atonement for the people.

By his commandments he gave him authority in covenants of judgments, to teach Iakob the testimonies and with his law to enlighten Israel.

18 Strangers conspired against him, and they envied him in the wilderness, the men with Dathan and Abiron and the gathering of Kore in wrath and anger.

19 The Lord saw and was not well pleased, and they were destroyed by wrath of anger; he performed wonders among them, to consume them in the fire of his flame. And he added glory to Aaron, and he gave him an inheritance; the first fruits of first products he allotted to him; bread with the first things he prepared in abundance.

20 For also they shall eat sacrifices of the Lord, which he gave both to him and to his seed. But in the land of the people he will have no inheritance, and he has no portion for him among the people, for he is your portion and inheritance.

21 And Phinees son of Eleazar is third in glory, since he was zealous in the fear of the Lord and since he stood firm in the turning of the people, in the goodness of the eagerness of his soul; he also made atonement for Israel.

22 Therefore there was established with him a covenant of peace to be in charge of holy things and of his people so that he and his seed might have the magnificence of the priesthood forever. Also a covenant with David son of Iessai from the tribe of Iouda, an inheritance of the king for son from son only; Aaron’s inheritance is also for his seed.

23 And Phinees son of Eleazar is third in glory, since he was zealous in the fear of the Lord and since he stood firm in the turning of the people, in the goodness of the eagerness of his soul; he also made atonement for Israel.

24 Therefore there was established with him a covenant of peace to be in charge of holy things and of his people so that he and his seed might have the magnificence of the priesthood forever.

25 May he grant to you wisdom in your heart, to judge his people in righteousness so that their good things might not vanish and their glory be to their generations.

26 Mighty in war was Iesous son of Naue and a successor of Moyses in prophecies, who was, like his name, great for the salvation of his elect, to take vengeance on enemies when stirred up, so that he might give Israel an inheritance.

2 How he was glorified when he lifted up his hands and when he extended a sword against cities!

3 Who before him stood so? For it was he who led the wars of the Lord.

4 Was it not by his hand that the sun was shackled, and one day became as two?

5 He called upon the Most High, mighty one, when enemies pressed him all around, and the great Lord heard him with stones of hail of mighty power.

6 He rushed down upon a nation in battle, and on a slope he destroyed those who resisted so that nations might know his armament, because their battle was against the Lord, for indeed he followed after a mighty one.

7 And in the days of Moyses he did mercy, he and Chaleb son of Iephonne, to oppose an assembly, to restrain people from sin and to still grumbling of wickedness.

8 And these were the two that escaped out of the six hundred thousand infantry to lead them into an inheritance, into a land flowing with milk and honey.

9 And the Lord gave Chaleb strength, and until old age it remained with him so that he went up to the height of the land and his seed obtained an inheritance in order that all the sons of Israel might see that it is good to walk behind the Lord.

10 And the judges, each with his own name, whose heart did not commit fornication and who did not turn away from the Lord, may their memorial be for blessings.

11 May their bones sprout anew out of their plot and their name be traded; may it be renowned among the sons of humankind.

12 Having received glory of human beings, beloved by his Lord was Samouel; a prophet of the Lord, he established a kingdom and anointed rulers over his people.

13 By the law of the Lord he judged a gathering, and the Lord watched over Iakob.

14 By his faithfulness he was made accurate as a prophet, and the trustworthiness of his vision was known in his words.

15 And he called upon the Lord, a mighty one, when his enemies pressed all around, with an offering of a suckling lamb.

17 And the Lord thundered from the sky, with a great sound he made his voice heard.

18 And he wiped out leaders of the Tyrians and all rulers of the Phylistiim.

19 And before the time of eternal sleep he bore witness before the Lord and his anointed one, “No property, not even a pair shoes, have I taken from any flesh.”
And no person accused him.

20 And after he fell asleep, he prophesied, and he showed the king his end,
and he raised up his voice out of the ground in prophecy to blot out the lawlessness of the people.

47 And after this one Nathan rose up to prophecy in the days of Dauid.

2 Just as fat set apart from deliverance, so was Dauid from Israel’s sons.

3 He played with lions as with young goats and with bears as with lambs of the flocks.

4 In his youth, did he not kill a giant and take away reproach from the people by raising his hand with a sling's stone and by striking down the arrogance of Goliath?

5 For he called upon the Lord, the Most High,
and he gave strength by his right arm,
to remove a person able in war,
to exalt his people's horn.

6 So among the tens of thousands they glorified him, and they praised him with blessings of the Lord
by bringing to him a diadem of glory.

7 For he wiped out enemies all around,
and he treated with contempt the Phylistiim, his adversaries,
and he broke their horn until this day.

8 In every deed of his he gave acknowledgement to the Holy One, the Most High, with a word of glory;
with his whole heart he sang hymns,
and he loved him who made him.

9 He established harp-singers before the altar also to make sweet melodies with their ringing sounds,
[
and every day they will praise with their songs.]

10 He gave dignity at the feasts, and he arranged seasons until completion,
when they were praising his holy name,
and from early morning the holy precinct was resounding.

11 The Lord took away his sins, and he exalted his horn forever,
and he gave him a covenant of kings and a throne of glory in Israel.

12 After this one arose a knowledgeable son,
and because of him, he lodged in spaciousness.

13 Salomon reigned in days of peace, to whom God gave rest all around so that he might establish a house to his name and prepare a holy precinct forever.

14 How wise were you in your youth,
and you were filled like a river with understanding.

15 Your soul covered the earth, and you were full with illustrations of riddles.

16 To far-off islands did your name reach,
and you were beloved in your peace.

17 For songs and proverbs and illustrations and for explanations countries marveled at you.

18 In the name of the Lord God, who is called God of Israel,
you gathered gold like tin and amassed silver like lead.

19 You bent your flanks for women,
and you were brought into subjection by your body.

20 You gave disgrace on your glory,
and you defiled your seed,
to bring wrath upon your children and to cause bewilderment by your folly so that sovereignty became divided, and a disobedient kingdom originates from Ephraim.

21 But the Lord will never abandon his mercy and never caused any of his words to perish, and he will never blot out the descendants of his chosen one,
and he will never take away the seed of the one who loved him,
and he gave a remnant to Iakob,
and to Dauid a root out of him.

22 And Salomon rested with his fathers, and he left behind himself some of his seed,
folly of the people and one lacking understanding, Roboam, who caused the people to revolt
because of his plan,
and Ieroboam son of Nabat, who made Israel sin,
also gave Ephraim a path of sin.

23 And their sins multiplied greatly to remove them from their land.

24 And they sought out every wickedness until vengeance came upon them.
48 And Elias rose up, a prophet like fire, and his word was burning like a torch, who brought a famine upon them and by his zeal made them few.

2 By a word of the Lord he shut up the sky; he thus brought down fire three times.

3 How you were glorified, Elias, in your wondrous deeds! And who will boast as you can?

4 He who raised a corpse from death and out of Hades by a word of the Most High.

5 He who brought down kings to destruction and those who had been glorified from their bed.

6 He who heard a rebuke at Sina and at Choreb judgments of vengeance.

7 He who anointed kings for the purpose of retribution and prophets as successors after him.

8 He who was taken up in a whirlwind of fire and in a chariot of fiery horses.

9 He who was recorded ready for the times, to calm anger before wrath, to turn the heart of a father to a son and to restore the tribes of Jacob.

11 Happy are those who saw you and those fallen asleep in loving, for we too shall live by life.

12 It was Elias who was enveloped in a whirlwind, and Elisaie was filled with his spirit, and in his days he did not tremble before any ruler, and no one oppressed him.

13 No word surpassed him, and in sleep his body prophesied.

14 In his life he performed wonders, and in death his deeds were marvelous.

15 In all these things, the people did not repent, and they did not withdraw from their sins until they were carried off from their land and they were scattered in all the earth.

16 And the people were left few in number, and a ruler in the house of David.

17 Some of them did what was pleasing, but others multiplied sins.

18 Hezekias fortified his city, and he brought water into its midst; he tunneled a rock with iron, and he built wells for water.

19 In his days Sennacherim came up, and he sent Rapsakes and departed, and he raised up his hand against Sion and made great boasts in his arrogance.

Then their hearts and hands were shaken, and they were in travail like women in labor.

20 And they called upon the Lord who is merciful, spreading out their hands to him. And the Holy One quickly heard them from the sky, and he redeemed them by the hand of Esaias.

21 He struck down the camp of the Assyrians, and his holy angel wiped them out.

22 For Hezekias did what was pleasing to the Lord, and he prevailed in the ways of David, his father, which Esaias the prophet commanded; he was great and reliable in his vision.

23 In his days the sun stepped back, and he added to life for the king.

24 By his great spirit he showed what would be, forever, and he comforted those who mourned in Sion.

25 And to eternity he showed the things that will be and the hidden things before they even happened.

49 Iosias’s memorial becomes a compounding of incense, prepared by the work of a perfumer; like honey in every mouth it will be sweet, and like music at a banquet of wine.

2 He prospered in turning around the people, and he removed abominations of lawlessness.

3 He directed his heart toward the Lord; in days of lawless people he strengthened piety.

4 Except for David and Hezekias and Iosias, all committed error, for they abandoned the law of the Most High; the kings of Judea failed,

5 for they gave their horn to others and their glory to a foreign nation.

6 They set fire to the chosen city of the holy sanctuary and made desolate its streets by the hand of Jeremiah.

7 For they mistreated him, and he was hallowed a prophet in the womb, to uproot and to ruin and to destroy, likewise to build and to plant.

8 There was Ezekiel who saw a vision of glory that he showed to him upon the chariot of Cherubin.
9 Indeed he remembered his enemies in a thunderstorm, and to do good to those who make straight their ways.
10 And may the bones of the twelve prophets sprout anew out of their place, for they comforted Jakob and they redeemed them in confidence of hope.
11 How are we to magnify Zorobabel? He too was like a signet on the right hand, 12 so Iesous son of Iosedek, who, in their days, built a house and raised a holy shrine to the Lord, prepared for everlasting glory.

13 And the memorial of Neemias is lasting, he who raised our walls, which had fallen, and set up gates and bars and raised up our buildings.

14 No one was created on the earth such as Henoch, for he too was taken up from the earth.

15 Nor has there been born a man like Ioseph, a leader of brothers, a support of the people, and they watched over his bones.

16 Sem and Seth were glorified among human beings, and above every living thing in creation was Adam.

50 Simon son of Onias was the great priest, he who in his life repaired a house and in his days fortified a shrine.

2 And by him the height of the courtyard was founded, a high retaining structure of the temple enclosure.

3 In his days a cistern for water was quarried, a reservoir like the circumference of a sea.

4 He who gave heed to his people out of calamity and strengthened the city in a siege, how he was glorified as he spun around the shrine, as he exited from the house of the veil.

5 Like a morning star in the midst of a cloud, like the full moon in the days of a feast, like the sun shining on the shrine of the Most High, like the rainbow gleaming in clouds of glory,

6 like a blossom of roses in days of new thingsb, like lilies at exits of water, like a new shoot of Lebanon in days of summer,

9 like fire and incense in a fire-pan, like a gold vessel of beaten metal, adorned with every precious stone,

10 like an olive tree sprouting forth fruit and like a cypress towering in the clouds.

11 When he put on a robe of glory and when he put on himself with the perfection of a boast, in ascending the holy altar, he glorified the enclosure of the holy precinct.

12 But as he received portions from priests' hands and when he stood by the altar's hearth, all around him was a garland of brothers like a growth of cedars on Lebanon, and they surrounded him like trunks of palm trees.

13 And all Aaron's sons were in their glory, and the Lord's offering was in their hands before the entire assembly of Israel, and as he was ministering a conclusion upon the altars, to arrange an offering for the Most High, the Almighty, 14 he stretched out his hand to a libation bowl and made a libation of grape blood; he poured at the foundations of the altar an odor of fragrance to the Most High, the King of All.

16 Then the sons of Aaron cheered; they sounded on trumpets of beaten metal; they made heard a great sound as a memorial before the Most High.

17 Then all the people hurried with one accord, and they fell face down on the ground, to do obeisance to their Lord, the Almighty, God Most High.

18 And the harp-singers sang praises with their voices; a melody was made sweet with a full tone.

19 And the people dpetitioned the Lord Most Highd with prayer before the Merciful One until the Lord's arrangement was completed and they finished his ministrations.

20 Then as he descended, he raised up his hands over the entire assembly of Israel's sons, to give a blessing of the Lord from his lips and to boast in his name.

21 And they repeated an act of obeisance, to receive the blessing from the Most High.

22 And now bless the God of all things, him who does great things everywhere, him who exalts our days from the womb and does with us according to his mercy.

23 May he give us gladness of heart, that there also be peace in our days in Israel according to the days of the age.

24 May he entrust with us his mercy, and in our days let him redeem us.

25 My soul was offended at two nations, and the third is not a nation: those who settled on Mount Samaria and Phylistiim and the foolish people who live in Sikima.

27 Instruction of understanding and knowledge I have inscribed in this book, Iesous son of Sirach, Eleazar the Hierosolymite, who poured forth wisdom from his heart.

28 Happy is he who is engaged in these things, and when he has placed them on his heart, he will be wise.

29 For if he does them, he will have strength for anything, because his route is the fear of the Lord, [and to the pious he gave wisdom.]

A PRAYER OF IESOUS SON OF SIRACH

51 I will acknowledge you, O Lord and King, and I will praise you as God my Savior. I acknowledge your name, because you have been my protector and helper, and you have redeemed my body from destruction and from a trap of a slanderous tongue, from lips that fabricate a lie, and against those who stand by you have been a help, and you have redeemed me, according to an abundance of mercy and your name, from nooses prepared for food, from the hand of persons seeking my soul, from rather many troubles, which I had, from a choking of a pyre all around and from the midst of fire, which I did not kindle, from the deep of Hades’ belly and from an unclean tongue and a lying word and a missile of a tongue of an unrighteous person. My soul drew near to death, and my life was on the brink of Hades below. They surrounded me on every side, and there was no one who helped; I looked for assistance from human beings, and there was none.

8 And I remembered your mercy, O Lord, and your beneficence from of old, because you raise up those who wait for you and you save them from the hand of wicked persons.

9 And I raised up my supplication from the earth, and I begged for deliverance from death.

10 I called upon the Lord, Father of my lord, not to forsake me in days of affliction, in a time of helplessness from acts of arrogance.

11 “I will praise your name continually, and I will sing hymns with acknowledgement.” And my petition was heard, for you saved me from destruction and delivered me from an evil time. For this reason I will acknowledge and praise you, and I will bless the name of the Lord.

13 When I was still young, before I wandered, I sought wisdom plainly in my prayer. Before the shrine I asked for her, and until the final things I will seek her.

15 When the grape was putting out flowers to the point of ripening, my heart was glad in her; my foot stepped in rectitude; from my youth I would track her.

16 I inclined my ear a little, and I received, and I found for myself much instruction. I made progress in her; to him who gives me wisdom I will give glory.

18 For I intended to practice her, and I sought the good, and I will never be ashamed. My soul has grappled with her, and in the performance of the law I was exacting.

19 I spread out my hands on high, and I thought about ignorance of her. I directed my soul to her, and in purification I found her. I acquired a heart with her from the beginning. For this reason I will never be forsaken, and my belly was stirred to seek her out; for this reason I gained a good possession.

21 The Lord gave a tongue to me as my wage, and with it I will praise him.
23 Draw near to me, you who are uneducated, and lodge in a house of instruction.
24 Why are you still lacking in these things, and your souls thirst greatly?
25 I opened my mouth, and I said, "Acquire for yourselves without money.
26 Place your neck under a yoke, and let your soul receive instruction. It is near to find it."

27 See with your eyes that I labored little, and I found for myself much rest.
28 Partake of instruction with a great sum of silver, and you will acquire much gold by it.
29 May your soul be glad in his mercy, and may you never be ashamed in his praise.
30 Accomplish your work in good time, and he will give your wage in his time.
PSALMS OF SALOMON
TO THE READER

Edition of the Greek Text
Since no critical edition of the Psalms of Salomon’s (PsSal) Greek text is available at the present time, the NETS translation is based on the edition of Alfred Rahlfs (Septuaginta. Id est Vetus Testamentum graece iuxta LXX interpretes, 2 vols. [Stuttgart: Württembergische Bibelanstalt, 1935]). Rahlfs’s text is, for the most part, a reprint of the edition of Oscar von Gebhardt (Die Psalmen Salomo’s zum ersten Male mit Benutzung der Athoshandschriften und des Codex Casanatensis [Leipzig: J. C. Hinrichs, 1895]). Rahlfs frequently incorporated many of von Gebhardt’s conjectural emendations, which are referred to in Rahlfs’ text by the siglum “Gebh.” The remaining conjectural emendations included in Rahlfs’ Greek text are largely derived from the edition of Henry B. Swete (The Psalms of Solomon with the Greek Fragments of the Book of Enoch [Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1899]) and are indicated in Rahlfs’ notes by the siglum “Sw.” This book is basically a reprint of Swete’s earlier edition of the Greek text of PsSal (The Old Testament in Greek According to the Septuagint [vol. 3; Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1894] 765–787), but it incorporates readings from three new manuscripts that were included in von Gebhardt’s text. In one instance (17.32), Rahlfs adopted the suggestion first proposed in 1870 by A. Carrière (De Psalterio Salomonis disquisitionem historico-criticam scriptit [Strasbourg]) that χριστοῦ κυρίου should be emended to χριστοῦ κυρίου. All departures from Rahlfs’ text are indicated in the notes to the present translation.

Since the publication of Rahlfs’ edition of the LXX, three new Greek manuscripts of PsSal have been discovered (MSS 655, 659, and 3004). These manuscripts contain no major textual variants. Robert Hann has prepared a full listing of all readings from PsSal’s eleven Greek manuscripts (The Manuscript History of the Psalms of Solomon [SBLSCS 13; Chico: Scholars Press, 1982]). Robert Wright has recently completed the first critical edition of PsSal that includes these newly discovered manuscripts along with all the Syriac witnesses (The Psalms of Solomon: A Critical Edition of the Greek Text [New York: T & T Clark/Continuum, forthcoming]). Wright’s eclectic text, despite his incorporation of readings from all eleven Greek manuscripts, is for the most part similar to Rahlfs’ text. Rahlfs’ edition, despite the discovery of additional manuscripts, is still the best edition of the Greek text currently available to use as the basis for the NETS of PsSal.

Unfortunately, PsSal lacks a Hebrew text. This makes it difficult to determine precisely how the translator adhered to the Hebrew Vorlage. PsSal is also extant in five Syriac manuscripts, none of which preserves the entire composition. The Syriac version contains several Greek loanwords and differs from the Greek in only sixty-two, approximately 10%, of PsSal’s verses. Because it is largely a literal reproduction of the Greek, most scholars believe that the Syriac version was made from the Greek translation and not from the Hebrew Vorlage. The Syriac is, therefore, of minimal value for understanding the relationship between the Greek and PsSal’s lost Hebrew Vorlage. In several places where the Greek text is difficult to understand, the Syriac translation gravitates toward Greek MS 253, which preserves the earliest form of PsSal’s Greek text. The Syriac version and this particular Greek manuscript appear to stem from a common textual ancestor. In passages where the Greek is difficult, however, the Syriac translator frequently sought to smooth them. While it may contain some passages that likely reflect the Old Greek more accurately than our surviving Greek textual witnesses, the Syriac is nevertheless problematic for understanding the Greek text, since it frequently represents what its translator thought the Greek text meant. W. Baars (“Psalms of Solomon,” in The Old Testament in Syriac According to the Peshitta Version [Part 4, Fascicle 6; Leiden: E. J. Brill, 1972] 1–27) has prepared a critical edition of the Syriac translation. Because the Syriac version essentially supports Rahlfs’ Greek text, no readings from the Syriac have been included in the present translation.

Title of the Book
The title ascribes the collection to King Salomon, who was famous as a writer of poems and proverbs (3 Rgns 5.12 [MT 5.12; RSV 4.32]). The attribution likely derives from the phrase “son of David” in 17.21, apparently thought by some scribe to mean Salomon. Superscripts of individual psalms too are generally thought to be secondary. Whether they were already in the translator’s Hebrew source text is not at all clear.

Some manuscripts title the collection “Psalms of Salomon,” whereas others give the name as “Solomon.” In manuscript 253 (XI/XII CE), which contains the best and earliest text, has “Solomon” in the title, but “Salomon” in all but three of the superscripts. Other Greek manuscripts vary widely.
The earliest attestation to a title is in Codex Alexandrinus (V CE), which reads (ΨΛΛΜΟΪ ΣΟΛΟΜΟΝ ΝΤΟΣ).
Since this listing is nearly five centuries later than PsSal’s presumed first century BCE date of composition, it does not resolve the debate over the correct spelling of the name. The spelling of Codex Alexandrinus appears in many later Christian canon lists, such as those of Pseudo-Athenaius (early VI CE) and Nicephorus (IX CE), suggesting that “Solomon” was the preferred spelling during the Christian period. Although Rahlfs’ text consistently uses the spelling “Salomon” for the superscripts, he titled the collection “Psalms of Solomon.” Because the LXX of Reigns uses the spelling “Salomon,” this was likely the spelling used in the Old Greek—if indeed it had any title at all—and is used throughout NETS of PsSal.

Translation Profile of the Greek

Because we do not possess PsSal’s Hebrew Vorlage, it is difficult to attempt to reconstruct its original text.
It is, moreover, impossible to determine with any certainty whether the Greek translator remained faithful to the original text or sometimes expanded or paraphrased the Hebrew. In some instances the Greek translator may have improperly vocalized his Hebrew text or closely adhered to Hebrew syntax, which sometimes resulted in an awkward style.

In keeping with the philosophy of NETS, the present English translation of PsSal has attempted to focus on the Greek translator’s intent rather than on the perception of the original audience. In other words, the English has tried to adhere to the NRSV’s maxim to be “as literal as possible, as free as necessary.” Where the Greek translator likely did not understand the original Hebrew, or possibly mis-translated what was likely the Vorlage, the English translation seeks to convey the ambiguity of the Greek.

Translation Profile of the Greek

Because we do not possess PsSal’s Hebrew Vorlage, it is difficult to attempt to reconstruct its original text.
The Greek text of PsSal frequently changes tenses and focuses on the Greek translator’s intent rather than on the perception of the original audience. In other essary.” Where the Greek translator likely did not understand the original Hebrew, or possibly mis-

The NETS Translation of the Psalms of Salomon

Because there is no Hebrew text of PsSal to compare with the Greek, it is difficult to comment in detail on the Greek translator’s methods. PsSal’s relatively limited Greek vocabulary suggests that the translator rarely departed from a fixed list of Hebrew-Greek equivalents. It appears that the translator frequently used the same word, such as δόσις and εἴλος, to represent a given Hebrew word even in instances when another Greek word would have been more appropriate. This lexical stereotyping often resulted in a rather stilted translation, which in many cases likely reflects the appearance of the Hebrew Vorlage. PsSal’s Greek text also contains renderings in which the translator apparently attempted to express the meaning of the Hebrew at the expense of achieving a clear Greek reading. In some instances, such as αὐθανάσις (18.5) and ἀναληψις, the exact Hebrew to Greek equivalent is uncertain. There is some evidence that later Christian scribes introduced errors into the text. In 17.32, for example, the original genitive κύριος was likely erroneously rendered as a nominative by a later Christian scribe resulting in two anarthrous nominatives (κριστος κυριος). This same reading is also found in the LXX of Lam 4.20. These examples likely reflect messianizing changes that were later made to the LXX in the Christian era. In the absence of PsSal’s Hebrew Vorlage, it is impossible to know for certain how extensively later scribes altered its original text.

In several places it appears that PsSal’s translator has either confused the Hebrew consonants or misunderstood Hebrew grammar. In 2.25, for example, the translator apparently misread an original τῆς ἐν ὑπέριν στύτου (“to change, turn”) as τῶν ἐν (“to say”). Likewise, in 2.26 the text reads τῆν ὑπέριν στύτου (“his insolence”). The Greek translator may have misread “his body,” ἡ ἡμικοινικός (possibly written ἡμικοινικός), as ἡνικοινικός.
In other instances, the text apparently reflects the translator’s mistaken understanding of the Hebrew syntax. In 4.12, for example, the Greek εν ταύτη is feminine and likely presupposes a specific antecedent. The Hebrew Vorlage was likely ויהי, which was intended as a marker of general reference and meant “in this manner.” The translator, however, did not render this by a corresponding Greek neuter pronoun but slavishly rendered it as a feminine, thereby creating a problematic Greek text with no clear antecedent, although it perhaps refers to ἤπειροιο. The Greek text of PsSal frequently changes tenses without any clear change implied in the action of the verbs (3.7–8a; 17.6b–9). These examples suggest that the translator did not fully understand the Hebrew Vorlage. In such cases where the translator likely misunderstood the Hebrew, the present translation seeks to reproduce the ambiguity of the Greek text.

The superscripts in PsSal are of unknown date and provenance. They are frequently difficult to translate because their words and expressions are often used without any context and frequently do not relate to the accompanying text. The punctuation, content, and orthography of these titles vary in the manuscript tradition. I have simply followed Rahlfs’ text, but have at times deviated from his punctuation.

The present translation has attempted to follow the gender-inclusive language of the NRSV. Inclusive third-person plurals have been introduced only when allowed by the Greek. In some passages gender specific language has been introduced when it is clear that the Greek translator understood the Hebrew to be gender specific. When, for example, the Greek word ἀνήρ appears to be gender specific, it is so translated. If the translator’s pronouns seem to refer to a specific man (4.1–5, 13.5), the English is also rendered in gender specific language.

EDITORIAL POLICY

There is no standard versification of the Psalms of Solomon. The present translation follows Rahlfs’ numbering. Because Rahlfs’ punctuation reflects his personal decision, I have on occasion departed from it. I have consulted photographs of all eleven of PsSal’s surviving Greek manuscripts in preparing the NETS translation. These have at times assisted in determining the punctuation of the text.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Albert Pietersma generously devoted much time to reviewing earlier drafts of this translation. His probing questions and suggestions greatly improved my work. Any errors in this translation are entirely my own. I am also thankful to Robert B. Wright, who kindly provided me with an advance copy of his forthcoming critical Greek text and color photographs of all the Psalms of Solomon’s Greek and Syriac manuscripts.

Psalm 1

1 I cried to the Lord when I was completely distressed, to God when sinners attacked.
2 Suddenly the cry of war was heard before me: he[a] will listen to me, for I was full of righteousness.
3 I thought in my heart that I was full of righteousness, when I prospered and had become rich in children.
4 Their wealth was spread over the whole earth, and their glory to the end of the earth.
5 They were exalted to the stars; they said they would not fall.
6 But they became insolent in their prosperity, and they did not bring.
7 Their sins were in secret, and I had no knowledge of them.
8 Their acts lawlessness surpassed those of the nations before them; they profaned with profanities the sanctuary of the Lord.

Psalm 2

1 When the sinner became proud, he struck down fortified walls with a battering-ram, and you did not prevent him.
2 Foreign nations went up to your altar; in pride they trampled it with their sandals,
3 because the sons of Jerusalem had defiled the sanctuary of the Lord, had profaned the gifts of God with acts of lawlessness.
4 Because of these things he said, "Cast them[b] far from me; I take no pleasure in them."
5 The beauty of her glory was despised before God; it was completely dishonored.
6 The sons and daughters were in harsh captivity, their neck in a seal, with a mark among the nations.
7 According to their sins he dealt with them, for he abandoned them into the hands of those who prevail.
8 He[c] turned away his face from pitying them, young and old and their children once again,

And I did not wait long until God showed me his insolence,

Discourse of Salomon. Pertaining to the men-pleasers.

Why do you sit, profaner, in the council of the devout,
and your heart is far removed from the Lord,

And his hand is the first upon him as if in zeal, and he himself is guilty of various sins and self-indulgence.

His eyes are upon every woman without distinction; his tongue is false when he makes a contract with an oath.

At night and in secret he sins as though unseen; with his eyes he speaks to every woman in evil assignation; he is quick to enter every house cheerfully as though innocent.

May God remove those who live in hypocrisy with the devout, with corruption of his flesh and his life with poverty.

May God reveal the works of men, of men-pleasers, his works with derision and contempt.

And may the devout justify the judgment of their God, when sinners are removed from the presence of the righteous, the man-pleaser who speaks the law with deceit.

And their eyes are upon a stable house of a man, as a serpent to destroy each other's wisdom with words of those who transgress the law.

His words are deceptions to accomplish his desire for injustice; he did not cease until he had succeeded in scattering them as orphans.

He devastated a house on account of his desire for transgressing the law; he deceived with words, because there is no one who sees and judges.

At this he was filled with transgressing the law, and his eyes are upon another house, to destroy it with clamorous words.

His soul, like Hades, is not satisfied with all these things.

May his portion, O Lord, be dishonored before you; may his going out be with groaning, and his coming in with a curse.

May his life be in anguish and poverty and anxiety, O Lord; may his sleep be with grief, and his waking with anxiety.

May sleep be taken from his temples at night; may he fail dishonorably in all the work of his hands.

May he enter his house empty-handed, and may his house lack everything with which he might satisfy his soul.

May his old age be spent in loneliness without children right up to his being taken up.

May the flesh of the men-pleasers be scattered by wild beasts, and may the bones of the transgressors of the law lie before the sun in dishonor.

May ravens peck out the eyes of hypocrites, for they have devastated many houses of men in dishonor, and they scattered them in desire.

And they have not remembered God, and they did not fear God in all these things, and they provoked and angered God.

May he remove them from the earth, because with pretense they have deceived the souls of the innocent.

Happy are those who fear the Lord in their innocence; the Lord will save them from deceitful men and sinners, and he will save us from every stumbling block of the transgressor of the law.

May God remove those who arrogantly do all injustice; for the Lord our God is a great and mighty judge in righteousness.

May your pity, O Lord, be upon all those who love you.

Psalm 5

A Psalm. Pertaining to Salomon.

O Lord God, I will praise your name with joy in the midst of those who have knowledge of your righteous judgments.

For you are kind and merciful, the refuge of the poor; when I cry out to you, do not pass me by in silence.

For no one will take booty from a strong man, and who shall take of all that you have made, unless you give it?

For man and his portion are before you in the balance; he cannot increase it beyond what you have prescribed, O God.

When we are distressed we will call upon you for help, and you will not turn back our petition, because you are our God.
6 Make not your hand heavy upon us, lest, from distress, we sin.
7 And if you do not return us, we will not stay away, but we will come to you.
8 For if I hunger, I will cry to you, O God, and you will give to me.
9 You feed the birds and the fish, when you give rain to wildernesses that green grass may spring up.
10 You have provided fodder in the wilderness for every living thing, and if they hunger, they will lift their face to you.
11 You feed kings and rulers and peoples, O God, and who is the hope of the poor and needy, unless it be you, O Lord?
12 And you will listen—for who is kind and forgiving but you?—making glad the soul of the humble by opening your hand in pity.
13 Man's kindness is grudgingly, and tomorrow, and if he repeat it without complaining, you would even marvel at this.
14 But your gift is great in kindness, and rich, and he whose hope is in you will not be sparing with a gift.
15 Your pity, O Lord, is upon the whole earth in kindness.
16 Happy is the man whom God remembers in due proportion to sufficiency; if man has too much, he sins.
17 Sufficient is a moderate provision with righteousness, and in this is the blessing of the Lord for abundance with righteousness.
18 May those who fear the Lord rejoice in good things, and your kindness be upon Israel in your kingdom.
19 Blessed is the glory of the Lord, for he is our king.

Psalm 6

In hope. Pertaining to Salomon.

1 Happy is the man whose heart is prepared to call on the name of the Lord; when he remembers the name of the Lord, he will be saved.
2 His ways are directed by the Lord, and the works of his hands are protected by the Lord, his God.
3 His soul will not be disturbed with the sight of evil dreams;

when he crosses rivers and when the seas swell, he will not be terrified.
4 He arose from his sleep and blessed the name of the Lord. In firmness of heart he sang a hymn to the name of his God.
5 And he entreated the face of the Lord for his entire household, and the Lord listened to the prayer of everyone in fear of God.
6 And the Lord fulfills every request of the soul that hopes in him. Blessed is the Lord who works pity for those who love him in truth.

Psalm 7

Pertaining to Salomon. Of returning.

1 Remove not your dwelling from us, O God, lest they attack us, those who hated us without cause.
2 For you have rejected them, O God; let their foot not trample upon the inheritance of your holy precinct.
3 Discipline us by your will, and do not give us to the nations.
4 For if you send death, you will command it concerning us.
5 For you are full of pity, and you will not be angry enough to destroy us completely.
6 While your name dwells in our midst, we shall find pity, and no nation will prevail against us.
7 For you are our protector, and we shall call upon you, and you will hearken to us;
8 For you will have compassion upon the race of Israel forever, and you will not reject it,
9 and we are under your yoke forever, and the whip of your discipline.
10 And you will direct us in the time of your help, showing pity to the house of Yakob on the day you promised them.

Psalm 8

Pertaining to Salomon. Regarding victory.

1 My ear heard distress and the sound of war, the sound of a trumpet announcing slaughter and destruction.
2 The sound of many people is like that of an exceedingly great wind, like a hurricane with mighty fire sweeping through the wilderness.
3 And I said in my heart, "Where, then, will God judge him?"

aPerhaps give generously  bPerhaps and provides for his needs in moderation
I heard a sound in Jerusalem, city of a holy precinct.

My lower back was crushed from the report;
my knees weakened; my heart was afraid;
my bones were shaken like flax.

I said, "They will direct their ways in righteousness."

I considered the judgments of God since the creation of heaven and earth;
I justified God in his judgments from eternity.

God exposed their sins before the sun;
all the earth knew the righteous judgments of God.

In secret places under the earth were their transgressions of the law
a in provocation;
they committed incest, son with mother and father with daughter.

They committed adultery, every man with his neighbor's wife.
They concluded compacts by oath with one another concerning these things.

They would plunder the sanctuary of God,
as though there was no heir who redeems.

They would trample the altar of the Lord because b of all kinds of uncleanness, and with menstrual blood they defiled the sacrifices as if they were profane meat.

They left no sin, which they did not do more than the nations.

Therefore God mixed for them a spirit of confusion;
gev them a cup of undiluted wine to drink,
that they might become drunk.

He brought him from the end of the earth,
who strikes mightily;
hed declared war against Jerusalem and her land.

The rulers of the land met him with joy;
they said to him, "Welcome is your way;
come, enter in peace."

They leveled the rough roads before his entry;
they opened the gates to Jerusalem; they crowned her walls.

He entered, as a father the house of his sons,
with peace;
he set down his feet with great security.

He captured her towered strongholds and the wall of Jerusalem, for God led him with security while they went astray.

20 He killed their rulers and everyone wise in counsel;
he poured out the blood of the inhabitants of Jerusalem like the water of uncleanness.

21 He led away their sons and daughters whom they had begotten in defilement.

22 They did according to their uncleanness, just as their fathers;
they defiled Jerusalem and the things that had been sanctified to the name of God.

23 God was justified in his judgments among the nations of the earth, and the devout of God are like lambs innocent in their midst.

24 Worthy to be praised is the Lord who judges all the earth in his righteousness.

25 See, O God, you have shown us your judgment in your righteousness;
our eyes have seen your judgments, O God.

26 We have justified your name that is honored forever, for you are the God of righteousness,
judging Israel with discipline.

27 Turn, O God, your pity upon us,
and have compassion upon us.

28 Gather together the dispersion of Israel with pity and kindness, for your faithfulness is with us.

29 And we stiffened our neck,
and you are the one who disciplines us.

30 Overlook us not, our God, lest the nations swallow us up, as though there were no redeemer.

31 And you are our God from the beginning, and upon you is our hope, O Lord.

32 And we shall not depart from you,
for your judgments upon us are kind.

33 Upon us and our children is your good will forever;
O Lord, our savior, we shall never more be shaken.

34 Worthy to be praised is the Lord for his judgments by the mouth of devout ones, and blessed is Israel by the Lord forever.

Psalm 9

Pertaining to Salomon. Regarding rebuke.

1 When Israel was led away in exile to a foreign land, when they fell away from the Lord who redeemed them,
they were expelled from the inheritance,
which the Lord had given them.

a Possibly committed in provocation  b Or as a result
The dispersion of Israel was among every nation, according to the word of God, that you may be justified, O God, in your righteousness by reason of our acts of lawlessness; for you are a righteous judge over all the peoples of the earth.

For none that does injustice shall be hidden from your knowledge, and the righteous acts of your devout are before you, O Lord, and where shall a human being hide himself from your knowledge, O God?

Our works are in the choosing and power of our soul, to do righteousness or injustice in the works of our hands, and in your righteousness you visit human beings.

The one who practices righteousness stores up life for himself with the Lord, and the one who practices injustice is responsible for the destruction of his own soul, for the judgments of the Lord are in righteousness for each man and household.

To whom will you show kindness, O God, if not to them that call upon the Lord? You will cleanse a soul from sins when he will confess, when he acknowledges; for shame is upon us and our faces on account of all these things.

And to whom will you forgive sins, except to those who have sinned? You shall bless the righteous and not straighten them for the sins they have committed, and your kindness is upon sinners in repentance.

And now, you are our God, and we are the people whom you have loved. Look, and be compassionate, O God of Israel, for we are yours, and remove not your pity from us, lest they attack us.

And you chose the offspring of Abraam above all the nations, and you placed your name upon us, O Lord, and you will not reject us forever.

You made a covenant with our fathers concerning us, and we shall hope in you when we return our souls toward you.

The mercy of the Lord is upon the house of Israel forever and ever.

Psalm 10

Among hymns. Pertaining to Salomon.

Happy is the man whom the Lord remembers with reproving and who is fenced from the evil road by a whip, that he may be cleansed from sin, that it may not increase.

He who prepares his back for lashes shall be cleansed, for the Lord is kind to those who endure discipline.

For he will straighten the ways of the righteous and will not turn them aside by discipline, and the pity of the Lord is upon those who love him in truth.

And the Lord will remember his slaves in pity, for the testimony is in the law of the everlasting covenant, the testimony of the Lord for the ways of humankind at his visitation.

Our Lord is righteous and devout in his judgments forever, and Israel shall praise the name of the Lord with joy.

And the devout shall acknowledge in the assembly of the people, and God will show pity upon the poor to the joy of Israel.

For God is kind and full of pity forever, and the congregations of Israel shall glorify the name of the Lord.

The salvation of the Lord is upon the house of Israel for everlasting joy.

Psalm 11

Pertaining to Salomon. Regarding expectation.

Trumpet in Sion with a signal trumpet to summon the holy ones; proclaim in Jerusalem the voice of one who brings good news; for the God of Israel has shown pity in his visitation of them.

Put on, O Jerusalem, the garments of your glory; prepare the robe of your sanctity, for God has spoken good concerning Israel forever and ever.

May the Lord do what he has spoken concerning Israel and Jerusalem; may the Lord raise up Israel by his glorious name.

The pity of the Lord is upon Israel forever and ever.

Psalm 12

Pertaining to Solomon. Against the tongue of the transgressors of the law.

O Lord, deliver my soul from the man who is a transgressor of the law and wicked, from the tongue that transgresses the law and is slanderous and that speaks lies and deceits.

The words of the tongue of the wicked man are twisted in many ways, like fire among a people which burns up its beauty.

His sojourn—to set on fire households with a lying tongue—to cut down trees of joy that sets the transgressors of the law on fire, to confound households in warfare by means of slanderous lips.

May God remove far from the innocent the lips of the transgressors of the law with anxiety, and may the bones of slanderers be scattered far from those who fear the Lord; may the slanderous tongue perish in flaming fire far from the devout.

Psalm 13

The right hand of the Lord covered me; the right hand of the Lord spared us.

The arm of the Lord saved us from the sword that passes through, from famine and the death of sinners.

Evil wild animals rushed upon them; with their teeth they tore their flesh, and with their molars they crushed their bones.

But from all these things the Lord delivered us.

The pious man was troubled on account of his transgressions, lest he should be taken away along with the sinners.

For the destruction of the sinner is terrible, but not one of all these things shall touch the righteous.

For not the same is the discipline of the righteous in ignorance and the destruction of the sinners.

The righteous is disciplined with distinctness so that the sinner may not rejoice over the righteous.

For he will admonish the righteous as a beloved son, and his discipline is as that of a firstborn.

For the Lord will spare his devout and will wipe away their transgressions with discipline.

For the life of the righteous is forever, but sinners shall be taken away into destruction, and their memorial shall never be found.

But the pity of the Lord is upon the devout, and his pity is upon those who fear him.

Psalm 14

A Hymn. Pertaining to Solomon.

Faithful is the Lord to those who love him in truth, to those who endure his discipline, to those who walk in the righteousness of his ordinances, in the law which he commanded us that we might live.

The devout of the Lord shall live by it forever; the orchard of the Lord, the trees of life, are his devout.

Their planting is rooted forever; they shall not be pulled up all the days of heaven;

Possibly holy precinct for the portion and the inheritance of God is Israel.

But not so are the sinners and transgressors of the law, who loved a day in the companionship of their sin.

Their desire was for the briefness of corruption, and they have not remembered God.

For the ways of human beings are known before him at all times, and he knows the storerooms of the heart before they come to pass.

Therefore their inheritance is Hades and darkness and destruction, and they shall not be found in the day when the righteous obtain pity.

But the devout of the Lord shall inherit life with joy.

Psalm 15

A Psalm. Pertaining to Salomon. With an Ode.

When I was in distress, I called upon the name of the Lord; I hoped for the help of the God of Israel and was saved, for you are the hope and the refuge of the poor, O God.

For who, O God, is strong except to confess to you in truth? And wherein is a person mighty except in confessing to your name?

A new melody with an ode in gladness of heart, the fruit of the lips with the tuned instrument of the tongue, the first fruit of the lips from a devout and righteous heart—

he who does these things shall never be shaken by evil; the flame of fire and the wrath against the unrighteous shall not touch him, when it goes forth from the face of the Lord against sinners, to destroy all the substance of sinners;

For the mark of God is upon the righteous for salvation.

Famine and sword and death shall be far from the righteous; for they shall flee from the devout as those pursued by war, but they shall pursue sinners and overtake them, and those who do lawlessness shall not escape the judgment of the Lord; they shall be overtaken by those experienced in war, for the mark of destruction is upon their forehead.

And the inheritance of sinners is destruction and darkness, and their acts of lawlessness shall pursue them to Hades below.

Their inheritance shall not be found for their children, for sins shall lay waste the houses of sinners.

And sinners shall perish forever in the day of the Lord’s judgment, when God visits the earth with his judgment.

But those who fear the Lord shall find mercy on it, and they shall live by the mercy of their God, but sinners shall perish forever and anon.

Psalm 16

When my soul slumbered, away from the Lord, I slipped for a short time, in the lethargy of those that sleep far from God.

For a short time my soul was poured out to death, close to the gates of Hades with the sinner, when my soul separated from the Lord, God of Israel, except that the Lord helped me with his pity forever.

He pricked me, like a goad for a horse, that I might awaken unto him; my savior and protector at all times saved me.

I will acknowledge [to] you, O God, for you helped me to salvation, and you did not count me with sinners for destruction.

Remove not your pity from me, O God, nor your remembrance from my heart until death.

Rule over me, O God, from wicked sin and from every evil woman who causes the foolish to stumble.

And let not the beauty of a woman who transgresses the law deceive me, nor of anything that is subject to useless sin.

Direct the works of my hands in your place, and guard my steps in your remembrance.

Protect my tongue and my lips with words of truth; anger and unreasoning wrath put far from me.

Grimbling and faint-heartedness in affliction keep far from me, when, if I sin, you discipline me to return
me.

12 Support my soul with goodwill and cheerfulness;
when you strengthen my soul, what is given will be sufficient for me.

13 For if you do not give strength, who will endure discipline in poverty?

14 When a soul is rebuked in the hand of his corruption,
your testing is in his flesh and in the affliction of poverty.

15 If the righteous endures in all these, he shall receive pity from the Lord.

offspring forever,
that his palace would never fail before
you.

5 And, because of our sins, sinners rose up against us;
they attacked us and thrust us out, to whom you did not promise;
they took possession by force, and they did not glorify your honorable name.

6 They set up in glory a palace corresponding to their loftiness;
they laid waste the throne of Dauid in arrogance leading to change.

7 But you, O God, will overthrow them and will remove their offspring from the
earth,
when there rises up against them a person
that is foreign to our race.

8 According to their sins you will repay them,
O God,
that it may befall them according to their works.

9 God showed them no pity;
he has sought out their offspring and let not one of them go free.

10 Faithful is the Lord in all his judgments, which he performs on the earth.
and he shall judge the tribes of the people that has been sanctified by the Lord, his God.

27 And he shall not allow injustice to lodge in their midst any longer, nor shall there dwell with them any person who knows evil; for he shall know them, that all are their God's sons.

28 And he shall distribute them according to their tribes upon the land, and no resident alien and alien shall sojourn among them any longer.

29 He shall judge peoples and nations in the wisdom of his righteousness.

Interlude on strings

30 And he shall have the peoples of the nations to be subject to him under his yoke, and he shall glorify the Lord in the marka of all the earth, and he shall purify Jerusalem in holiness as it was at the beginning so that nations may come from the end of the earth to see his glory, bringing as gifts her sons who are exhausted, and to see the glory of the Lord with which God has glorified her.

31 And he shall be a righteous king, taught by God, over them, and there shall be no injustice in his days in their midst, for all shall be holy, and their king the anointed of the Lord.

32 For he shall not put his hope in horse and rider and bow, nor shall he multiply for himself gold and silver for war, nor shall he gather hopes from a multitude of people for the day of war.

33 The Lord himself is his king, the hope of him who is strong through hope in God, and he shall have pity on all the nations before him in fear.

34 For he shall strike the earth with the word of his mouth forever; he shall bless the people of the Lord in wisdom with joy.

36 And he himself shall be pure from sin so that he may rule a great people, that he may rebuke rulers and remove sinners by the strength of his word.

37 And he shall not weaken in his days, relyingb on his God; for God has made him strong in the holy spirit

38 And the blessing of the Lord shall be with him in strength, and he shall not weaken.

39 His hope shall be in the Lord, and who can prevail against him?

40 He shall be strong in his works and mighty in fear of God, shepherding the flock of the Lord faithfully and righteously, and he shall not let any among them become weak in their pasture.

41 And he shall lead all of them in equity, and there shall be no arrogance among them, that any one of them should be oppressed.

42 This is the majesty of the king of Israel, which God knew, to raise him up over the house of Israel to discipline it.

43 His words will be more refined than costly gold, the finest. In the congregations he will discerningly judge the tribes of a sanctified people; his words are as words of the holy in the midst of sanctified peoples.

44 Happy are those who shall live in those days, to see the good things of Israel that God shall accomplish in the congregation of the tribes.

45 May God hasten his pity upon Israel; may he deliver us from the uncleanness of profane enemies.

46 The Lord himself is our king forever and ever.

Psalm 18

A Psalm. Pertaining to Salomon. Again of the anointed of the Lord.

1 O Lord, your pity is over the works of your hands forever; your goodness is over Israel with a rich gift.

2 When your eyes gaze upon them, then none of them shall be in want; your ears listen to the hopeful petition of the poor.

3 Your judgments are over the whole earth with pity, and your love is upon the offspring of Abraam, the sons of Israel.

4 Your discipline is upon us as on a firstborn, an only son, to turn back the obedient soul from ignorant stupidity.

5 May God cleanse Israel for the day of pity with blessing.
for the day of election when he brings up his anointed one.

6 Happy are those who shall live in those days,
to see the good things of the Lord, which he will perform for the coming generation.

7 Under the rod of discipline of the Lord's anointed in fear of his God, in wisdom of spirit and of righteousness and strength,

8 to direct a man in works of righteousness in fear of God,
to establish them all before the Lord—
a good generation in fear of God in the days of pity.

9 Interlude on strings

10 Great is our God, and glorious, dwelling in the highest,
who appointed the lights in their course for the determining of seasons from day to day,
and they did not turn aside from the path
you commanded them.

11 Their path each day is in the fear of God, from the day God created them and forever.

12 And they have not wandered since the day
he created them;
since the generations of old they have not turned aside from their paths, except when God commanded them through the injunction of his slaves.
The Twelve Prophets

To the Reader

Edition of the Greek Text

For initial aspiration of Greek words (primarily names), I have relied on the edition of H. B. Swete, The Old Testament in Greek according to the Septuagint (vol 3; Cambridge: University Press, 1894).

Translation Profile of the Greek

General Character

The Greek rendition of the Hebrew Minor Prophets is typical translation Greek. For this reason, the English translation is often less than idiomatic English. Difficulties in the translation, both in content and style, are caused by difficulties in the Greek.

As for the faithfulness of the translation to the original, if we use the Masoretic Text (= MT) as a standard, the Greek is sometimes distant from the base text and sometimes close to it. Hosea, for example, is quite different from the MT in many verses. The first three chapters of Micah are also quite different. Nahum usually corresponds to the MT in sense, but not word for word or clause for clause. Habakkuk deviates considerably from the traditional Hebrew.

Amos, on the other hand, is quite close to the traditional Hebrew, in spite of the translator’s apparent lack of some vocabulary. Joel is also close to the traditional Hebrew. Jonah is perhaps closest to the traditional Hebrew among the Twelve. Abdias, Sophonias, Haggaios, Zacharias and Malachia are all reasonably close to the MT.

There are reasons why some passages within these twelve Greek books vary from the MT: (1) The Hebrew text used by the translator sometimes appears to have been corrupt and difficult to render. For this reason, the translator sometimes rendered his text according to its general meaning, not according to the exact wording of the Hebrew. (2) The Hebrew parent text read by the translator sometimes actually differed from the MT, or the translator, for some reason, misconstrued the Hebrew in such a way as to view it differently from the MT. Although both these reasons, on occasion, are valid, one should probably not look to a different parent text as the cause for most differences. Emanuel Tov put the situation into correct perspective when he wrote, “Although there are thousands of differences between [MT] and the translations, only a fraction of them was created by a divergence between [MT] and the Vorlage of the translation. Most of the differences were created by other factors that are not related to the Hebrew Vorlage.” (Textual Criticism of the Hebrew Bible [Minneapolis: Fortress Press, 1992] 123).

In order to present a clearer picture of how the Greek Minor Prophets differ from the MT, I give below a partial outline, characterizing the Greek text as it is compared to the MT.

Literalness in Rendering

Sometimes the Greek is a very literal representation of the Hebrew, to the point of being un-Greek. An example is Am 4.7. The MT reads "... מִזְרָחָה לֹּא הָרָעָה, "and the field on which it did not rain" (NRSV). The Greek renders this, καὶ μέρις, ἐφ᾽ ἑαυτῷ ἀνάμεσα στὸν δάκτυλον, "and a part which I will not rain on." The translator captures the meaning of the Hebrew idiom מִזְרָחָה but bungles his translation by rendering this idiom twice, making the Greek correspond quantitatively to the Hebrew at the end of the clause.

Another example is Am 5.5. The MT reads, "... בָּאָר שֵׁם לָא חַמּוּרָה, "Do not cross over to Beer-sheba." The Greek translates, καὶ ἐπὶ τὸ φρέαρ τοῦ ὀρκοῦ μὴ δισαβείτε, "And stop crossing over to the well of the oath." As we will see, the literal rendition of Beer-sheba in this passage is possibly due to a general ignorance of place names on the part of the translator. (The correct rendering of this same place name in 8.14 is perhaps caused by a corrector or correctors who worked, haphazardly at best, on the Greek text after its initial rendition. For more on this, see below.) In some instances, the translator of the Minor...
Prophets seems to have had a limited knowledge of both Palestinian geography and the Hebrew language in general.

Translational Freedom

One should not assume that literalness is the most characteristic style of the translator. Normally, the translator shows a creative freedom that allows him considerable elasticity in his work. Sometimes he is very free but at other times very literal probably for the same reason—ignorance of what the Hebrew means. Thus the Hebrew of Mich 1.14 reads, “Therefore you shall give parting gifts to Moresheth-gath; the houses of Achzib shall be a deception to the kings of Israel” (NRSV). The translator renders this, “Therefore you shall give worthless houses—ones being dispatched—as far as the inheritance of Geth. It became meaningless to the kings of Israel.” Such striking differences between the Greek and the Hebrew may suggest a variant Hebrew parent text behind the Greek. In my judgment, however, this is not necessarily the case. The Greek translator may have employed his creative freedom in this instance to render a difficult passage.

In his quest for a clear text, the translator shows few qualms in making textual adjustments. He often uses what could be called tricks of the trade to make the text understandable, changing plurals to singulars and singulars to plurals, passives to actives and, though less frequently, actives to passives. He feels free to alter the wording in other ways. In Am 1.3 the Hebrew reads, “because they have threshed Gilead with threshing sledges of iron” (NRSV). The Greek renders, “because they were sawing pregnant women of those in Galaad asunder with iron saws.” The general statement “threshed Gilead” is made into a more specific crime, perhaps more understandable to the translator and his readers, though the end result was basically the same. There is no way to predict when such variations will occur. The text is altered whenever the translator sees the need.

Interpretational Difference

Some variations between the Hebrew and the Greek are caused by the Hebrew having more than one meaning. In Hos 10.13 the MT reads, “You have plowed (ְדֵנַּד) wickedness, you have reaped injustice” (NRSV). The word דֵנַּד can mean either “to plow” or “to be silent.” The Greek translator, apparently wishing to employ the sense of “silence,” rendered, “Why did you pass over impiety in silence (παρειηστητε) and reap its injustice?”

In Am 1.8 the MT reads, “I will cut off the inhabitants from Ashdod, and the one who holds the scepter (בְּגֶדֶת) from Ashkelon” (NRSV). The word בְּגֶדֶת can mean either “scepter/rod” or “tribe.” The Greek translator, wishing to employ the latter meaning, renders, “I will utterly destroy inhabitants from Azotus, and a tribe (φυλη) shall be removed from Ascalon.”

In Soph 1.11 the MT reads, “For all the people of Canaan have perished” (המקון). The word מִקְוֹן can mean either “to perish” or “to be like.” Wishing to use the latter meaning, the Greek translator renders the passage, “because all the people were made like [וֹמְמָה חֲנָנָן] Chanaan.”

Differences in Hebrew Vocalization

It is well known that manuscripts of the Hebrew Bible sometimes vary from each other because of differences in vocalization. This is true for manuscripts within the MT tradition as well as for manuscripts among the Dead Sea Scrolls, which differ from the MT sometimes by use of consonantal vowels or maτres lectionis. The principle is also to be seen in the second column of Origen’s Hexapla in which the Hebrew text of Scripture is recorded in Greek transliteration. It is not surprising, then, to see that a number of differences between the Greek Minor Prophets and the MT are due to variant vocalizations. Here are some examples:

In Mich 7.18 the MT reads, “He does not retain his anger forever” (NRSV). The Greek renders, “And he did not retain his anger for a witness.” The difference is apparently caused by the translator vocalizing מִלֶּשֶת as ‘for a witness’ instead of ‘forever.’ In Hab 3.5 the MT reads, “Before him went pestilence” (NRSV). The Greek translates, “A report shall proceed before him.” The variation appears to go back to the translator vocalizing רְבֵי as “report/word” rather than as “pestilence.” In Hag 1.11 the MT reads, “And I have called for a drought on the land” (NRSV). The Greek translates, “And I will bring a sword on the land.” The variation appears to go back to the translator vocalizing רְבֵי as “report/word” rather than as “drought.” In Zach 9.10 the MT reads, “his dominion shall be from sea to sea” (NRSV). The Greek translates, “he shall reign over the waters as far as the sea.” The variation suggests a vocalization of מְדֶשׁ as “waters as far as the sea” rather than as “from sea to sea.”
Differences in Hebrew Consonantal Text

There are some variations between the Greek and the MT that go back to the translator reading different consonants from those that appear in the MT. He either read a Hebrew text variant to the MT or he misread the Hebrew. It is not always easy to determine which of these actually occurred.

Several variations occur involving the interchange of ‘daleth (daleth)’ and ‘resh (resh),’ look-alike letters that notoriously were confused by ancient scribes. In Hos 9.2, for example, the MT reads, “shall feed them” (עלֵפֹת). The Greek translates, “know them” (ἐγνώσατε αὐτούς), apparently reading ἐπιλύσει. In Am 4.5 the MT reads, “thank offering” (θυσίαν). The Greek translates, “law” (νόμος), a reflection of the Hebrew word נַחֳלָה. In Soph 3.9 the MT reads, “pure” (δόξα). The Greek renders, “in its generation” (εἰς γενεάν αὐτής), a reflection of תְּהִי דּוֹחַ.

Sometimes a metathesis of Hebrew letters is involved. An example is Zach 12.10. There the MT reads, “they have pierced” (תָּהַךְ). The Greek translates, “they have danced” (κατωχήσαντο). The Greek appears to go back to תָּהַך. Another example is Am 2.16. The MT reads, “And the stout of heart” (יִתְנָבְךָ). The Greek translates, “And shall find his heart” (καὶ εὕρησεν τὰν καρδιὰν αὐτοῦ). The Greek appears to be a reading of הָלַל rather than יִתְנָבְךָ.

Other variations between the Greek and the traditional Hebrew are traceable to a different consonantal text. In Zach 5.1 the Hebrew reads, “Again I looked up and saw a flying scroll” (NRSV). The Greek reads, “And I turned and lifted my eyes and saw and behold, a flying sickle.” The Greek reflects the word "sickle" rather than "scroll." In Na 1.3 the MT reads, “His way is in whirlwind.” The Greek reads, “His way is in consummation.” The Greek translator possibly read חֲצִיבָה rather than חֲצִיבָה as found in the MT. In Mich 5.4(3) the MT reads, “and he shall feed” (עֶשֶׂה). The Greek renders this, “and he shall see and tend.” The translator appears to have rendered הָנָהוּ דְּבָרָה, a doublet based on look-alike Hebrew words, one with aleph, the other with ayin.

In none of these instances is there any assurance that the Septuagint translator actually had before him a different parent text from the MT. In haste and carelessness, he may have misread the Hebrew, construing it into the type of text now reflected by the Greek.

Longer or Shorter Text

Sometimes the Greek differs from the MT by reading a longer or shorter text. In Hos 13.4 the MT reads, “I am the Lord your God from the land of Egypt.” The Greek includes these words plus others in the middle: “I am the Lord your God who makes heaven firm and creates earth, whose hands created all the host of the sky. And I did not display them for you to follow after them. And I brought you up from the land of Egypt.” Conceivably, the short reading of the Greek was caused by the translator’s eyes jumping from the words, “for I am with you, says the Lord of host,” to the parallel phrase, “my spirit is present among you,” leaving out the intervening words.

The converse is true in Hag 2.4b–5. The MT reads, “for I am with you, says the Lord of hosts, according to the promise that I made you when you came out of Egypt. My spirit abides among you; do not fear” (NRSV). This time the Greek has a shorter text. It reads, “for I am with you, says the Lord Almighty, and my spirit is present among you; have courage.” Conceivably, the short reading of the Greek was caused by the translator’s eyes jumping from the words, “for I am with you, says the Lord of host,” to the parallel phrase, “my spirit is present among you,” leaving out the intervening words.

Unfamiliarity with Names

The Greek translator of the Minor Prophets was lacking in his knowledge of place names. In Hos 5.8; 9.9; 10.9, instead of “Gibeah” he renders “hill(s).” In Hos 5.8 “Ramah” becomes “high places.” In Am 2.2 “Kerioth” becomes “its cities.” In Zach 12.11 “as the mourning for Hadad-rimmon in the plain of Megiddo,” becomes “like the mourning for a pomegranate orchard cut down in the plain.” Occasionally, the translator inserts place names where the Hebrew lacks them. In Soph 3.3 the MT reads, “its judges are evening wolves”; the Greek translates, “its judges are like wolves of Arabia.” The translator was also ignorant of personal names. In Zach 6.10 the MT reads, “from Heldai, Tobijah, and Jedaiah.” The Greek renders this, “from the rulers and from its useful people and from those who are familiar with it.”

The Translator’s Perspective

Occasionally it appears that the Greek differs from the MT because of a changed historical or theological perspective on the part of the translator. In Am 6.1 the MT reads, “Alas for those who are at ease in Zion” (NRSV). When the Minor Prophets were rendered into Greek, the religious and political climate in Jerusalem had changed from that of the eighth century, so the warning becomes, “Alas for those who count Sion as nothing.”
Again, in Zach 13.2 the MT reads, “and also I will remove from the land the prophets (יִבְשָׁמְנֵה) and the unclean spirit.” The Septuagint translator, apparently finding the removal of the prophets from the land an unsavory idea, renders the passage, “also I will remove from the land the pseudo-prophets (ψευδοσηφήτως) and the unclean spirit.”

In Hag 2.9 the MT reads, “The latter splendor of this house shall be greater than the former, says the LORD of hosts; and in this place I will give prosperity, says the LORD of hosts” (NRSV). The Septuagint renders these words, then adds, “even peace of mind for a possession to everyone who creates, to raise up this shrine.” The addition is perhaps due to the heightened perspective of the translator regarding what sort of prosperity the prophet has in mind and to whom it is to be given.

Unity of the Greek Translation

Based upon style variation, some have questioned the unity of the translation of this part of the Greek Bible. In the Schweich Lectures of 1920, H. St. John Thackeray (The Septuagint and Jewish Worship [London: British Academy, 1921]) asserted the unity of the Greek of the Minor Prophets, suggesting that it was done by one translator who was probably to be identified with the translator of Ezekiel (Iezekiel) chapters 28–39 (Thackeray’s Ez ß section). Three years later, Johannes Herrmann and Friedrich Baumgärtel (Beiträge zur Entstehungsgeschichte der Septuaginta [Berlin: W. Kohlhammer, 1923]) took exception to Thackeray’s assertion, arguing that the Greek Minor Prophets had been done by two translators, the first rendering Hosea, Amos, Micah, Joel, Obadiah and Jonah, the second rendering Habakkuk, Zephaniah, Haggai, Zechariah and Malachi. Nahum, positioned between the two sections, appeared to belong to both sections and could not be assigned exclusively to either.

In 1934, Joseph Ziegler (Die Einheit der Septuaginta zum Zwölfprophetenbuch [Braunsberg, 1934]) challenged the conclusions of Herrmann and Baumgärtel. Ziegler emphasized the similarities between the two sections in the Greek Minor Prophets and argued that the variations in style do not necessarily imply different translators. He explained the variations on the basis of a versatile translator who felt no urgency to use the same correspondent consistently for a given Hebrew word or phrase.

Two years later, Sherman Johnson (“The Septuagint Translators of Amos” [Unpublished Doctoral Dissertation, University of Chicago, 1936]), in an elaborate investigation of the linguistic style of the Greek Amos, concluded that the translation divided itself into three groups, i.e., chapters 1–4, 5–6, and 7–9. For him the differences between these groups were sufficient to demand a hypothesis of a different translator for chapters 5–6 which separated themselves radically from the rest of the work.

In 1970, I suggested that the Greek Amos was rendered by two translators, one who did sections A (1.1–8.11) and C (9.11–15) and another who did section B (8.12–9.10) (“Some Notes on the Septuagint Translation of Amos,” VT 20 [1970] 108–112). Among other things, I argued that the variation in the renditions of the place name בֵּרֵשִׁית (to φρέαρ τοῦ ορκου “the well of the oath” in Am 5.5; Βηροσάβει “Bersabee” in Am 8.14) bore the stamp of different translators.

T. Muraoka (“Is the Septuagint Amos VIII 12–IX 10 a Separate Unit?” VT 20 [1970] 496–500) explained the differences in style in Amos on the basis of context and the versatility of the translator, a position similar to Ziegler’s, whose study Muraoka considered to be of prime importance for the issue.

In 1976, Emanuel Tov argued that the Greek Minor Prophets was so similar to Jeremiah a’ (chapters 1–28) and Ezekiel that the same translator (or perhaps a group of translators) was responsible for all three (The Septuagint Translation of Jeremiah and Baruch [Harvard Semitic Monographs; Missoula: Scholars Press, 1976] 149). Tov hinted again at this conclusion in 1981 in his text critical work on the Septuagint (The Text-Critical Use of the Septuagint in Biblical Research [Jerusalem: Simor, 1981] 48).

In 1988, C. Robert Harrison, Jr., reviewed the issue and concluded that those who argue for one translator for the Minor Prophets, or for one group of translators, use flawed logic in their methodologies. He concluded, “In light of these facts, the uncritical assumption of translational unity within the collection which comprises the twelve minor prophets must be rejected . . . Some evidence is contradictory; perhaps a quite complicated redactional history may emerge for the Septuagint translations of the Minor Prophets” (“The Unity of the Minor Prophets in the Septuagint: A Reexamination of the Question,” BIOSCS 21 [1988] 55–72 [quotation from p. 71]).

The issue is difficult since there are some anomalies in style within the Greek Minor Prophets that appear to go beyond the versatility of one translator. A case in point is the divine epithet “. . . of hosts.” In Hosee and Amos (Hos 12.5; Am 3.13; 4.13; 5.27; 9.5) the phrase is always rendered, “the Almighty” (ὁ παντοκράτωρ), employing the article, while generally elsewhere it is rendered, “Almighty” (παντοκράτωρ). Exceptions are Na 3.5 and Soph 2.10 where “the Almighty” (ὁ παντοκράτωρ / τον παντοκράτορα) occurs. In each of these instances, however, variant readings also occur.
In my revised judgment, although the differences in style within the Greek Minor Prophets are sometimes striking, they do not necessarily suggest that more than one translator was at work. An exception is Habbakoum 3, in which the text found in a small number of manuscripts appears to be a different translation (in some respects) from the majority text; see further below. Leaving aside this one exception, I doubt that a complicated redactional history is necessary to understand the nature of the Greek Minor Prophets. The stylistic differences can be explained by the assumption that a corrector went through the original document, perhaps soon after it was finished, and made some revision. In his haste, the corrector did a haphazard job, leaving the text as it now exists with some stylistic inconsistencies.

Variant Translations of Habbakoum 3

The Greek translation of the Hebrew Bible occasionally exists in more than one rendition or recension. Examples are the A and B texts of the Book of Judges and the B/A and S texts of Tobit. Similarly Habbakoum 3 exists in two versions, one represented by the majority text, the other by a small group of manuscripts: codd. V II-86-407 (according to Ziegler’s notation). This minority version is otherwise known as the Barberini text of Habbakoum 3. A number of scholars consider the Barberini text to predate the version of the Old Greek found in the majority manuscripts. A few scholars believe that it dates after the Old Greek. Since Ziegler’s edition includes both texts, NETS has followed suit.

The NETS Translation of the Twelve

In the English translation I have attempted to be faithful to the Greek without deviating radically from the NRSV. My success in this endeavor will have to be judged by my readers. When the Greek and the Hebrew diverge, I have always chosen to remain faithful to the Greek. The end result is a mixture of styles, sometimes NRSV-like, but often different from the NRSV.

In order to bring out word echoes from the Greek to the English and to set the appropriate mood for the prophets, I have established a number of default translations for Greek words and Greek roots, especially for those that have a strong moral or ethical tone. Thus δικαιος and cognates are rendered by “just/justice” (not “righteous/righteousness”); ἁσβεία is rendered by “injustice,” ὅμορφον by “impiety,” ἄνομοι by “lawlessness.”

I have given special attention to gender, rendering gender-inclusive words gender-inclusive, and gender-specific words gender-specific. Thus ἄνθρωπος is rendered “person/someone”; τέκνον is rendered “child.” On the other hand, ἄνδρα is translated “man/male”; γυνή “son.” In a few instances, words that are usually taken as masculine are designated in Greek as feminine. In Hos 2.8; 13.1; Soph 1.4 “Baal” is preceded by the feminine article, thus: τῇ / τῆς Βασιλ. I have rendered this by, “the goddess Baal.” In Mich 7.8, 10 “my adversary” has a feminine ending and is preceded by a feminine article, thus ἡ ἔχθρα μου. In both instances I have rendered the phrase by “my lady adversary.”

A few special words and phrases need some explanation. The word ἀλλόφυλος has consistently been rendered by “allophyles” in NETS. Though used to gloss “Philistines,” it does not actually mean “Philistines” and has therefore been given a generic sense. The Greek construction of the participle plus the finite verb of the same root, standing for the Hebrew infinitive absolute plus the finite verb of the same root, is rendered here emphatically, not intensively. Thus for Mich 2.12 συναγωγέως συναγωγεῖται Ἰακώβ ... ἐκδεχόμενος ἐκδέχομαι τοὺς καταλύοντος τοῦ Ἰσραήλ is translated, “When Jakob is being gathered, he will be gathered ... Receiving I will receive those remaining of Israel.” The important name, Judah, in Am 2.4 passim (Ἰούδα - Ιουδα) appears always to be inflected and is thus rendered “loudas” throughout.

Bibliographical Note

In addition to the standard grammars and lexica, I have benefited much from the lexicon of the Greek Minor Prophets prepared by T. Muraoka, A Greek-English Lexicon of the Septuagint. Twelve Prophets (Leuven: Peeters, 1993). I have consulted on occasion the earlier English translations of Thomson and Brenton with benefit. My students in Greek and Hebrew throughout the years have indirectly contributed much to my understanding of the Greek Minor Prophets.

George E. Howard
HOSEE

1 A word of the Lord that came to Hosee the son of Beeri in the days of Kings Ozias and Ioatham and Achaz and Hezekias of loudas and in the days of King lerooboam son of loas of Israel.

2 The beginning of the word of the Lord in Hosee. And the Lord said to Hosee, “Go, take for yourself a wife of whoredom and children of whoredom, for the land in committing whoredom will commit whoredom from behind the Lord.”

3 And he went and took Gomer daughter of Debelaim, and she conceived and bore him a son.

4 And the Lord said to him, “Call his name Iezrael, for in yet a little while I will also avenge the blood of Iezrael on the house of Ieou, and I will turn away the kingdom of the house of Israel.

5 And it shall be on that day, I will break the bow of Israel in the valley of Iezrael.”

6 And she conceived again and bore a daughter. And he said to him, “Call her name Not Pitied, for I will not any longer have pity on the house of Iouda, but will set myself in opposition, I will oppose them.

7 But I will have pity on the sons of loudas, and I will save them by the Lord, their God, and I will not save them by bow or by sword or by war or by chariots or by horses or by horsemen.”

8 And she weaned Not Pitied and conceived again and bore a son. And he said, “Call his name Not My People, for you are not my people and I am not your ‘I am.’ ”

9 And the number of the sons of Israel was like the sand of the sea, which shall not be measured nor numbered, and it shall be, in the place where it was said to them, “You are not my people,” they too shall be called, “sons of a living god.”

10 And the sons of loudas and the sons of Israel shall be gathered together, and they shall set up for themselves one realm, and they shall go up from the land, for great shall be the day of Iezrael.

2 Say to your brother, My People, and to your sister, Pitied.

2 Contend against your mother, contend —for she is not my wife, and I am not her husband— and I will put away her whoring from before me and her adultery from between her breasts,

3 that I might strip her naked and restore her as the day of her birth, and I will make her like a wilderness and render her as a parched land and kill her with thirst.

4 And upon her children also I will have no pity, because they are children of whoredom.

5 For their mother played the whore; she who bore them acted shamefully. For she said, “I will go after my lovers, who give me my bread and my water and my clothes and my linen cloth and my oil and all the things proper for me.”

Therefore, behold, I am hedging up her way with thorns and will build up her ways, and she will not find her path.

7 And she shall pursue her lovers and not overtake them, and she shall seek them and shall not find them. And she shall say, “I will go and return to my former husband, for it was well with me then rather than now.”

8 And she did not know that I had given her the grain and the wine and the oil and had multiplied silver to her. But she made the silver and the gold for the goddess Baal.

9 Therefore I will return and carry off my grain in its time and my wine in its season, and I will take away my garments and my linen cloth, that she may not cover her shame.

10 And now I will uncover her impurity before her lovers, and no one shall rescue her out of my hand.

11 And I will turn away all her mirth, her feasts and her new moons and her sabbaths and all her public assemblies.

12 And I will annihilate her vine and her fig trees of which she said, “These are my pay, which my lovers have given to me.” And I will make them a witness, and the beasts of the field and the birds of the sky and the things that creep upon the earth shall devour them.

13 And I will avenge the days of the Baalim on her, when she used to sacrifice to them and put on her earrings and her necklaces and go after her lovers but forgot me, says the Lord.

14 Therefore, behold, I will deceive her and bring her down into the wilderness and speak to her heart.

15 And from there I will give her her estates and the valley of Achor, to open up her understanding. And there she will be brought low as in the days of her infancy and as in the days of her coming up out of the land of Egypt.

16 And it shall be on that day, says the Lord, she will call me “My husband” and no longer call me “Baal-im.” And I will remove the names of the Baalim from her mouth, and their names will be remem-
And I will make for them a covenant on that day with the animals of the field and with the birds of the sky and with the creeping things of the ground, and I will break bow and sword and war from the land, and I will make you dwell in hope. And I will betroth you to myself forever, and I will betroth you to myself in justice and in judgment and in mercy and in compassion. And I will betroth you to myself in faithfulness, and you shall know the Lord. And it shall be on that day, says the Lord, I will give heed to heaven, and it shall give heed to the earth, and the earth shall hear the grain and the wine and the oil, and they will give heed to Iezrael, and I will sow her for myself in the land. And I will have pity on Not Pitied, and I will say to Not My People, “You are my people,” and he shall say, “You are the Lord my God.”

And the Lord said to me, “Go again, and love a woman who loves evil things and is an adulteress, just as God loves the sons of Israel, but they turn their attention to foreign gods, and they like cakes with raisins.” So I hired her to myself for fifteen pieces of silver and a gomer of barley and a nebel of wine. And I said to her, “For many days you will sit with me, and you will not play the whore, nor will you be with a man, and I will be with you.” For the sons of Israel shall sit many days without king and without ruler and without sacrifice and without altar and without priestly office and without clear ones. And after these things, the sons of Israel shall return and seek the Lord their God and Dauid their king, and they shall stand in awe at the Lord and his good things in the last days.

Hear a word of the Lord, O sons of Israel, for the Lord has a dispute with the inhabitants of the land. For there is no truthfulness or mercy or knowledge of God in the land. Imprecation and lying and murder and stealing and adultery are poured out upon the land, and they mix blood with blood. Therefore the land shall mourn with all those who inhabit it, with the animals of the field and with the reptiles of the earth and with the birds of the air; even the fish of the sea shall fail, that no one either go to law or accuse. But my people will be like a priest being contradicted. And you shall be weak by day, and the prophet also shall be weak with you.

For the like of a frenzied heifer, Israel went into a frenzy.

aHeb 1 homer = 220 liters  bHeb = skin  cPossibly explaining devices
Now the Lord will feed them like a lamb in a broad place.

Ephraim, an associate of idols, placed stumbling blocks against himself.

He chose Chananites; fornicating they committed fornication. They loved dishonor because of its insolence.

You are a gust of wind in its wings, and they will be ashamed because of their altars.

Hear this, O priests! And give heed, O house of Israel! And give ear, O house of the king! For the judgment pertains to you, because you have become a snare to the lookout and like a net stretched over it by the game hunters firmly set. But I am one that disciplines you.

I knew Ephraim, and Israel is not far from me; for now Ephraim has gone after whores; Israel has been defiled.

Their deliberations did not grant them to turn to their God, because a spirit of whoredom is within them, and they did not know the Lord.

And Israel’s pride will be brought low against him, and Israel and Ephraim will become weak in their injustices. And Judas also will become weak with them.

With sheep and calves they shall go to seek the Lord, and they will not find him, because he has turned away from them, because they abandoned the Lord, because foreign children were born to them. Now the rust will devour them and their allotments.

Trumpet with the trumpet on the hills; make a blast on the high places; announce in the house of On: Benjamin became amazed.

Ephraim has become an annihilation in the days of reproof; among the tribes of Israel, I have demonstrated things that are sure.

The rulers of Judas have become like those who remove landmarks; on them I will pour out my onslaught like water.

Ephraim has overpowered his opponent; he has trampled judgment, because he began to go after the vain things.

And I am like confusion to Ephraim and like a goad to the house of Judas.

And Ephraim saw his sickness, and Judas his pain. And Ephraim went to the Assyrians and sent ambassadors to King Larym. And he was not able to cure you, and pain will not desist from you.

For I am like a panther to Ephraim and like a lion to the house of Judas. And I will plunder and go and take, and no one will rescue.

I will go and return to my place until they are annihilated, and they will seek my face.

In their distress they will approach me early, saying, “Let us go and return to the Lord our God, because it is he who has torn, and he will heal us; he will strike down, and he will bind us up. After two days he will make us healthy; on the third day we will rise up and live before him and have knowledge. We will press on to know the Lord; we will find him ready as dawn, and he will come to us like the early and the latter rain to the earth.”

What shall I do with you, O Ephraim? What shall I do with you, O Judas? Your mercy is like a morning cloud and like morning dew when it goes away.

Therefore I cut off your prophets; I killed them by the words of my mouth, and my judgment will go forth as light.

For I want mercy and not sacrifice, and knowledge of God rather than whole burnt offerings.

But they are like a person transgressing a covenant; there he despised me.

Galaad is a city working vain things, stirring up water.

And your strength is that of a man, a brigand; priests have hidden the way; they have murdered Sikima, because they did lawlessness.

In the house of Israel I saw a horrible thing: Ephraim’s whoredom there; Israel has been defiled.

Begin to reap for yourself when I return the captivity of my people, 7 when I heal Israel.
And the injustice of Ephraim will be revealed,
and the wickedness of Samaria,
because they have performed lies.
And a thief will come in to him,
a bandit plundering in his way.
I have remembered all their wickedness.
Now their deliberations have surrounded them;
they came before my face.
They are all adulterers, like an oven being heated by a flame for the baking of rest, from the kneading of dough until it is leavened.
As for the days of our kings—the rulers began to be enraged with wine;
he stretched out his hand with pestilent persons.
For their hearts were fired up like an oven as they broke into pieces;
all night long Ephraim was filled with sleep;
morning came; he was fired up like a flame of fire.
All were heated like an oven, and they devoured their judges.
All their kings have fallen; none among them was calling upon me.
Ephraim was mixing himself with the peoples.
Ephraim has become a loaf not turned.
Foreigners have devoured his strength, but he did not know it, and gray hairs have sprouted on him, but he did not know it.
And Israel’s pride will be humbled against him; yet they have not returned to the Lord their God and have not sought him in all this.
And Ephraim was like a dove, silly without heart; he would call upon Egypt, and they went to the Assyrians.
As they go, I will cast my net over them; I will bring them down like the birds of the air; I will discipline them by the report of their affliction.
Woe to them, for they have run away from me!
Wretched are they, because they have acted impiously against me.
But I redeemed them, and they spoke lies against me.

8 Into their bosom like earth, like an eagle over the house of the Lord, because they transgressed my covenant and acted impiously against my law.
They will clamor for me, “O God we have known you.”
Because Israel has spurned good things, they have pursued an enemy.
They made a king for themselves, and not through me; they ruled and did not inform me. They made their silver and gold into idols for themselves, that they might be destroyed utterly.
Get rid of your bull calf, O Samaria; my anger was provoked against them. How long will they be incapable of purification in Israel?
And an artisan made it, and it is not a god.
For your bull calf, O Samaria, was a deceiver.
Because they sowed things blasted by the wind, their destruction shall also await them—a sheaf unable to produce meal, and even if it should do so, foreigners will devour it.
Israel was swallowed up; now they have come to be among the nations as a useless vessel, because they went up to the Assyrians.
Ephraim sprouted anew by himself; they loved gifts.
Therefore they will be delivered up among the nations. Now I will take them in, and they will abate, for a little while, from anointing king and rulers.
Because Ephraim multiplied altars, beloved altars became sins to him.
I shall engrave for him a multitude, even his precepts;

aHeb = sabbath bread  bOr sense  cOr soil  dPerhaps Because Ephraim multiplied altars to expiate sins, they became to him beloved altars Stop rejoicing, O Israel!
And stop exulting as the peoples do,
for you have played the whore from your God.
You have loved gifts on every threshing floor of grain.

Threshing floor and wine vat did not know them,
and the wine deceived them.

They did not settle in the land of the Lord;
Ephraim settled in Egypt,
and among the Assyrians they shall eat unclean things.

They made no libation of wine to the Lord,
and they did not please him.
Their sacrifices are to them like bread of grief;
all who eat them shall be defiled,
for their loaves for their souls shall not enter the house of the Lord.

What will you do on the day of a public festival and on the day of the feast of the Lord?
Therefore, behold, they go from the wretchedness of Egypt, and Memphis will receive them,
and Machmas will bury them.
Destruction will inherit their silver;
thorns shall be in their encampments.

The days of punishment have come;
the days of your recompense have come,
and Israel will be afflicted as the deranged prophet,
as the spirit-crazed person.
Your madness has increased by the multitude of your injustices.
Ephraim is a watcher with God, a prophet,
a twisted snare upon all his ways.
They firmly pitched madness in the house of God.
They were corrupted according to the days of the hill;
he will remember their injustice;
he will punish their sins.

Like grapes in a wilderness
I found Israel.
And like an early watchman in a fig tree
I saw their fathers.
They came to Beel-phegor
and were shamefully estranged, and the detestable became like the beloved.
Ephraim flew away like a bird.
Their glories are from childbirth and birth pang and conception.
For even if they bring up their children,
they will be bereaved of people.
For also woe is to them,
my flesh from them.
Ephraim, as I saw, presented their children for prey
—even Ephraim—to lead out his children for piercing.
Give them, O Lord
—what will you give them?
Give them a childless womb and dry breasts.
All their evils are at Galgal,
because there I came to hate them.
Because of the wickedness of their deeds,
I will drive them out of my house.
I will not add to love them;
all their rulers are disobedient.
Ephraim has suffered;
he has dried up at his roots;
he shall no longer bear fruit.
For even if they give birth,
I will kill the objects of desire of their womb.
Because they have not listened to him,
God will reject them,
and they shall become wanderers among the nations.

Israel is a well-growing vine; fruit thrives on it.
According to the multitude of its fruits,
he increased altars;
according to the good things of his land,
they built steles.
It divided their hearts.
Now they will be annihilated;
he will break down their altars;
their steles will suffer distress.
For now they will say,
"We have no king,
for we did not fear the Lord,
but the king—what will he do for us?"
Uttering words, false excuses, he will make a covenant;
judgment will spring up like grass upon a dry clot of a field.
The inhabitants of Samaria will dwell near the bull calf of the house of On, because his people mourned for him. And as they provoked him, they will rejoice over his glory, for it had been deported from him.

And they carried him wrapped to the Assyrians as friendly gifts to King Iarim. Ephraim will accept with a gift, and Israel will be shamed by his counsel.

Samaria threw out her king like firewood upon the face of the water. And altars of On, the sins of Israel, shall be destroyed. Thorns and thistles shall grow up on their altars. And they shall say to the mountains, Cover us, and to the hills, Fall on us.

From which time the hills were, Israel has sinned; there they stood. A war will not overtake them in the hill, against the children of injustice. I have come to discipline them, and peoples shall be gathered against them, as they are disciplined for their double injustice.

Ephraim is a heifer taught to love contention. So I shall come against the fairest part of her neck; I shall mount Ephraim; I shall pass over Judas in silence —Iacob will prevail over him.

Sow for yourselves unto justice; reap unto the fruit of life; enlighten yourselves with the light of knowledge. Seek the Lord until the produce of justice comes to you.

Why did you pass over impiety in silence and reap its injustice, ate a false fruit? Because you hoped in your chariots, in the multitude of your force!

And ruin shall rise up against your people, and all your walled places shall disappear, as the ruler Salaman from the house of Ierobaal, in the days of battle, dashed a mother to the ground with her children.

Thus will I do to you, O house of Israel, because of your evil deeds.

At dawn they were cast out; Israel’s king was cast out.

(1) For Israel was an infant, and I loved him, and out of Egypt I recalled his children. As I recalled them, so they went from me; they kept sacrificing to the Baalim and offering incense to carved idols.

And it was I who bound the feet of Ephraim, took him upon my arm; and they did not know that I had healed them.

Amidst the ruin of people, I stretched them out with the bands of my love. And I will be to them like a person slapping his cheeks. And I will watch him attentively; I will prevail with him.

Ephraim settled in Egypt, and Assour himself was his king, because they did not want to return. And the sword was weak in his cities and ceased to work in his hands. And they shall eat from their schemes.

And his people are hanging from his dwelling place, and God will be angered at his precious things and will not lift him up.

How am I to deal with you, O Ephraim? Shall I shield you, O Israel? How am I to deal with you? Shall I make you like Adama and like Seboim? My heart was changed together; my sense of regret was disturbed.

I will not do according to the anger of my wrath; I will not abandon Ephraim to be wiped out; for I am divine and not human, holy in your midst, and I will not enter into a city.

I will go after the Lord; he will roar like a lion. Because he will growl, even the children of waters shall be amazed.

And they shall be amazed like a bird from Egypt and like a dove from the land of the Assyrians, and I will restore them to their homes, says the Lord.

Ephraim has surrounded me with a lie, and the house of Israel and Judas with impiety;

\( ^a \text{Gk = ðômos} \quad ^b \text{Or from the fruit of their schemes} \) now God has come to know them, and the holy people shall be called God’s.

12 Ephraim is an evil wind; he pursued hot wind all day long. He multiplied empty and vain things, and he made a covenant with the Assyrians and would trade oil to Egypt.

2 And the Lord has a judgment against Ioudas, to punish Iakob according to his ways, and he will repay him according to his deeds.

3 In the womb he kicked his brother with the heel and in his struggles prevailed against God.

4 And he prevailed with an angel and predominated. They wept and implored me; they found me in the house of On, and there a word was spoken to him.

5 But the Lord God the Almighty shall be his memorial.

6 And as for you, you shall return by your God. Guard mercy and judgment, and hope continually for your God.

7 In his hand Chanaan is a yoke of injustice; he has loved to oppress.

8 And Ephraim said, "But I am rich; I have found relief for myself." None of the fruits of his toil will be available to him, because of the injustice with which he sinned.

9 But I, the Lord your God, brought you up from the land of Egypt; I will make you live in tents again, as the day of the feast.

10 And I will speak to the prophets, and it was I who multiplied visions, and b I was made similar by the hand of the prophets.

11 If Galaad is nothing, then the rulers offering sacrifices in Galgal were false, and their altars like stone heaps on a parched patch of a field.

12 And Iakob withdrew to the plain of Syria, and Israel was subject because of a wife, and because of a wife he kept watch.

13 And through a prophet the Lord brought Israel up from Egypt, and through a prophet he was guarded.

14 Ephraim became angry and provoked, and his blood shall be poured out upon him, and the Lord shall pay him back for his reproach.

13 According to report, Ephraim himself received statutes in Israel, and he established them for the goddess Baal and died.

2 And they added to sin and made a cast image for themselves from their silver according to the likeness of idols, works of artisans produced for them. “Sacrifice people,” they say, “for calves have perished.”

3 Therefore they shall be like a morning mist and like an early dew that goes away, like dust that swirls from the threshing floor and like a hazy swarm of grasshoppers.

4 But I am the Lord your God who makes heaven firm and creates earth, whose hands created all the host of the sky. And I did not display them for you to follow after them. And I brought you up from the land of Egypt, and you shall know no God but me, and apart from me there is no one that saves.

5 It was I who tended you in the wilderness, in an uninhabitable land, according to their feedings. And they were satisfied to satiety, and their hearts were exalted; therefore, they forgot me.

7 And I will become like a panther to them and like a leopard according to the way of the Assyrians.

8 I will meet them like a famished bear and rend the closing of their heart. And whelps of the thicket will devour them there; wild animals of the field will tear them to pieces.

9 In your destruction, O Israel, who will help you? Where is this king of yours? And let him save you in all your cities. Let him judge you who said, “Give me a king and a ruler.”

11 And I gave you a king in my anger and sustained in my wrath a gathering of injustice.

(12) As for Ephraim, his sin is hidden.

13 Pains as of one in childbirth will come to him. This son is without sense, a Lacking in Gk  b Perhaps I have been portrayed symbolically by the prophets c i.e. are no longer available for he will not withstand in the crushing of children.

14 I shall rescue them from the hand of Hades and shall redeem them from Death. O Death, where is your sentence? O Hades, where is your goad? Comfort is hidden from my eyes.

For this one will make a division among brothers; the Lord will bring a hot wind from the wilderness against him, and it will dry up his aquifers; it will drain his fountains. It will cause his land to wither, and all his desirable vessels.

14 (13.16) Samaria will be annihilated, because she rose up against her God; they shall fall by the sword, and their nurslings shall be dashed to the ground, and their pregnant ones ripped open.

2(14.1) Return, O Israel, to the Lord your God, for you have been weakened by your injustices.

3(2) Take words with you, and return to the Lord your God; speak to him, that you not receive injustice but that you receive good things, and, "We will return the fruit of our lips.

4(3) Assour shall not save us; we will not mount on horses; let us no longer say, 'Our gods,' to the works of our hands. 'He who is within you will pity the orphan.'

5(4) I will heal their settlements; I will love them openly, for my anger has turned from them.

6(5) I will be like dew to Israel; he shall blossom like a lily and strike his roots like Lebanon.

7(6) His branches shall go forth, and he shall be like a fruitful olive tree, and his fragrance like that of Lebanon.

8(7) They shall return and sit beneath his shelter; they shall live and be intoxicated on grain, and his memory will blossom like the vine, like the wine of Lebanon.

9(8) As for Ephraim—what is there any longer between him and idols? It is I who humbled him, and it is I who will strengthen him. I am like a leafy juniper tree; your fruit has been found from me.

10(9) Who is wise and will understand these things, or prudent and will comprehend them? For the ways of the Lord are upright, and the just will walk in them, but the impious will be weak in them.

AMOS

1 Words of Amos that came in Nakkarim out of Thekoue, which he saw concerning Jerousalem in the days of King Oziyas of loudas and in the days of King Jeroboam son of Ioas of Israel, two years before the earthquake. And he said: The Lord uttered sounds from Sion and gave his voice from Jerousalem, and the pastures of the shepherds mourned, and the top of Carmel dried up.

3 And the Lord said: For three impious acts of Damascus, and for four, I will not turn away from him, because they were sawing pregnant women of those in Galaad asunder with iron saws.

4 And I will send forth a fire on the house of Hazael, and it shall devour the foundations of the son of Hader.

5 And I will break the gate bars of Damascus and utterly destroy inhabitants from the plain of On, and I will cut to pieces a tribe from the men of Charran, and the important people of Syria will be taken captive, says the Lord.

6 This is what the Lord says: For three impious acts of Gaza, and for four, I will not turn away from them, because of their capturing a captivity of Salomon, to shut them up in Idumea.

7 And I will send forth a fire against the walls of Gaza, and it shall devour its foundations.

8 And I will utterly destroy inhabitants from Azotus, and a tribe shall be removed from Ascalon, and I will bring my hand against Akkaron, and those remaining of the allophyles shall perish, says the Lord.

9 This is what the Lord says: For three impious acts of Tyre,
Amos 1–2

1 This is what the Lord says:
For three impious acts of Idumea,
and for four, I will not turn away from them, because they shut up a captivity of Salomon in Idumea
and did not remember a covenant of brothers.

2 And I will send forth a fire against the walls of Tyre,
and it shall devour its foundations.

3 This is what the Lord says:
For three impious acts of Idumea,
and for four, I will not turn away from them,
because they pursued his brother with a sword and he spoiled a womb upon the ground and seized his shivering fright for a testimony
and kept his onslaught unto victory.

4 And I will send forth a fire on Thaiman, and it shall devour the foundations of its walls.

5 This is what the Lord says:
For three impious acts of the sons of Ammon,
and for four, I will not turn away from him, because they were ripping up the pregnant women of the Galaadites in order to enlarge their borders.

6 And I will kindle a fire against the walls of Rabba,
and it shall devour its foundations,
with a cry on the day of battle,
and it will be shaken on the day of its destruction.

7 And its kings shall go into captivity, their priests and their rulers together,
says the Lord.

2 This is what the Lord says:
For three impious acts of Moab,
and for four, I will not turn away from him,
because they burned to lime the bones of the king of Idumea.

8 And I will send forth a fire against Moab, and it shall devour the foundations of its cities,
and Moab shall die in debility, with shouting and with the sound of a trumpet.

9 This is what the Lord says:
For three impious acts of the sons of Ioudas,
and for four, I will not turn away from him,
because they rejected the law of the Lord and did not keep his ordinances, and their vain things which they made,
which their fathers followed after, led them astray.

10 And I will send forth a fire against Ioudas, and it shall devour the foundations of Ierousalem.

11 This is what the Lord says:
For three impious acts of Israel,
and for four, I will not turn away from him,
because they sold the just for silver and the needy for the sake of sandals—things that tread on the dust of the earth, and they were buffeting the heads of the poor,
and they turned aside the way of the humble, and a son and his father were going to the same female servant
in order to profane the name of their God.

12 And binding their garments with cords,
they were making curtains beside the altar, and in the house of their God they were drinking wine obtained through extortion.

13 But I removed the Amorrite from before them, whose height was as the height of a cedar,
and who was as strong as an oak,
and I removed his fruit above and his roots beneath.

14 Also I brought you up out of the land of Egypt and led you around for forty years in the wilderness, to inherit the land of the Amorrites.

15 And I took some of your sons to be prophets and some of your youths for consecration.
Is this not so, O sons of Israel?
says the Lord.

16 But you were making the consecrated ones drink wine
and were commanding the prophets, saying, “You shall not prophesy.”

17 Therefore, behold, I roll under you like a wagon full of straw is rolled.

18 And flight shall perish from the runner, and the strong shall not retain his strength,
and the fighter shall not save his soul,

aPerhaps I will not let . . . go unpunished bPerhaps forever
and the archer shall not stand, and he who is swift on his feet shall not escape, nor shall the horseman save his soul and shall find his heart in acts of dominance;
the naked shall pursue on that day,
says the Lord.

Hear this word that the Lord has spoken against you, O house of Israel, and against the whole tribe that I brought up out of the land of Egypt, saying,

Only you have I known of all the tribes of the earth;
therefore I will avenge upon you all your sins.

Will two in any way walk together unless they be acquainted with each other?
Will a lion roar from its thicket, when it has no prey?
Will a whelp utter its voice from his den at all, if he has caught nothing?
Will a bird fall upon the ground without a fowler?
Will a snare on the ground spring without catching something?
Will a trumpet sound in a city, and the people not be terrified?
Will there be evil in a city, which the Lord did not do?
For the Lord God will not do a thing unless he reveals instruction to his slaves the prophets.

A lion will roar, and who will not fear?
The Lord God has spoken, and who will not prophesy?

Proclaim to the districts among the Assyrians, and to the districts of Egypt, and say,
"Assemble on the mountain of Samaria, and see many marvels in its midst and oppression within it."

And it was unaware of what would be before it, says the Lord, those who store up injustice and wretchedness in their districts.

Therefore this is what the Lord God says:
Tyre and your land round about shall be made desolate,
and he shall bring down your might out of you,
and your districts shall be plundered.

This is what the Lord says: As when the shepherd pulls from the mouth of the lion two legs or a lobe of an ear, so shall the sons of Israel be pulled out, those who live in Samaria before a tribe and in Damascus as priests.

Hear, and testify to the house of Jakob, says the Lord God the Almighty:

For in the day when I take vengeance on the impious acts of Israel against him, I will also take vengeance against the altars of Baithel, and the horns of the altar shall be demolished and fall to the ground.

I will demolish the house encircled by columns onto the summer house, and the houses of ivory shall perish, and many other houses shall be added, says the Lord.

Hear this word, you heifers of Basanitis, who are in the mountain of Samaria, who oppress the poor and trample the needy, who say to their lords, "Give to us that we might drink."

The Lord swears by his holy ones: For behold, days are coming upon you, and they shall take you with weapons, and fiery pests shall cast those with you into cauldrons heated from underneath.

And you shall be carried out naked before each other, and you shall be flung out into Mount Remman, says the Lord.

You came to Baithel and committed lawlessness, and in Galgala you multiplied to commit impiety, and you brought your sacrifices in the morning, your tithes on the third day.

They read the law outside and called for confessions. Announce that the sons of Israel have loved these things, says the Lord God.

And I will give you an aching of the teeth in all your cities, and lack of bread in all your places, and you did not return to me, says the Lord.

I also withheld the rain from you three months before the harvest, and I will rain on one city, and on one city I will not rain; one part will be rained upon, and a part which I will not rain on will wither, and two or three cities will come together to one city to drink water and will not be satisfied;
even so you did not return to me,
says the Lord.

I struck you with fever and jaundice;
you multiplied your gardens;
the caterpillar devoured your vineyards and fig yards and olive yards;
even so you did not return to me,
says the Lord.

I sent you death in the way of Egypt,
and I killed your young men with the sword,
along with the captivity of your horses,
and I brought up your camps with fire in your wrath;
even so you did not return to me,
says the Lord.

I overthrew you
as God overthrew Sodoma and Gomorra, and you were like a firebrand snatched from the fire;
even so you did not return to me,
says the Lord.

Therefore, thus I will do to you, O Israel,
but because I will do thus to you,
prepare to call upon your God, O Israel.

For behold, I am the one who makes the thunder strong and creates a wind and announces his anointed to humans, makes dawn and mist
and treads on the heights of the earth—
the Lord God the Almighty is his name!

Hear this word of the Lord that I take up over you in lamentation, O house of Israel:
She has fallen, no more to rise,
the maiden Israel;
she slipped upon her land;
there is no one to raise her up.

For this is what the Lord says:
The city out of which a thousand were going forth,
there shall be left a hundred,
and out of which a hundred were going forth,
there shall be left ten to the house of Israel.

For this is what the Lord says to the house of Israel:
Seek me, and you shall live,
and stop seeking Baithel,
and stop entering Galgala,
and stop crossing over to the well of the oath,
because Galgala, taken captive, will be taken captive, and Baithel shall be as not existing.

Seek the Lord, and live,
lest the house of Ioseph should flame up like fire, and it will devour him, and there will be no one to quench for the house of Israel.

The Lord is the one who makes judgment on high and has established justice on earth, who makes all things and transforms and turns the shadow of death into the morning and darkens day into night, who calls to the water of the sea
and pours it out upon the face of the earth—
the Lord God the Almighty is his name—
who dispenses destruction against strength and brings misery to the fortress.

They have hated the one who reproves in the gates and have despised holy speech.

Therefore, because you were buffetting the poor and have taken from them choice gifts, you have built houses of hewn stone,
but you shall not live in them;
you have planted desirable vineyards,
but you shall not drink the wine from them.

For I have known your many impious acts—your sins are mighty—trampling the just, taking rewards and turning aside the needy in the gates.

Therefore the prudent will keep silent in that time,
for it is an evil time.

Seek the good thing and not the evil thing,
that you may live,
and so the Lord God the Almighty will be with you,
just as you have said,
“We have hated evil things and loved the good things.”
Restore judgment in the gates, that the Lord God the Almighty might have mercy on the remnant of Ioseph.

Therefore this is what the Lord God the Almighty says:
In all the streets there shall be wailing, and in all the roads it shall be said, Alas! Alas!
The farmer shall be called to mourning and lamentation and to those knowing a dirge;
in all the roads there shall be wailing.
for I will pass through the midst of you, said the Lord.

18 Woe, you who desire the day of the Lord! Why is this the day of the Lord to you? And it is darkness, not light, as if someone should flee from a lion, and a bear attacks him, or he should leap into his house, place his hands on the wall, and a snake should bite him.

19 Is not the day of the Lord darkness and not light, and gloom with no brightness in it?

20 I have hated, I have despised your feasts, and I will not smell at your festivals.

21 For if you should bring to me your whole burnt offerings and sacrifices, I will not accept them, and your conspicuous acts for deliverance\(^a\) I will not look upon.

22 Take away from me the noise of your songs; I will not listen to a strumming of your instruments.

23 And judgment will roll down like water, and justice like an unfordable wadi.

24 Surely you did not bring me victims and sacrifices forty years, O house of Israel?

25 You even took up the tent of Moloch and the star of your god Raiphan, models of them which you made for yourselves.

26 And I will deport you beyond Damascus, says the Lord—God the Almighty is his name.

6 Alas for those who count Sion as nothing and for those who trust in the mountain of Samaria.

They have harvested the rule of the nations and entered for themselves.

2 Cross over, O house of Israel, all of you, and see,

and from there pass on to Hemath Rabba, and go down to Geth of allophyles, the most excellent ones of all these kingdoms.

3 Those who pray for an evil day, who draw near and hold fast to false sabbaths,

4 who sleep on beds of ivory and live lewdly on their couches and eat kids from the flocks and suckling calves from the midst of the herds,

5 who applaud at the sound of the instruments—since they considered them as permanent and not as fleeting—

6 who drink thoroughly filtered wine and anoint themselves with the finest oils, they were not even suffering anything over the ruin of Joseph.

7 Therefore they shall now be captives of the powerful from the beginning, and the neighing of horses shall be removed from Ephraim.

8 Because the Lord has sworn by himself: For I abhor all the pride of Jakob and have hated his lands. And I will remove a city with all who inhabit it.

9 And it shall be, if ten men are left in one house, they shall also die—and the remaining ones shall be left—\(^10\) and the members of their household shall take them and forcibly bring their bones out of the house, and he\(^c\) will say to those in charge of the house, "Might there still be one with you?" And he\(^c\) will say, "No more." And he will say, "Silence, so as not to name the name of the Lord!"

10 For behold, the Lord commands, and he shall strike the great house with bruises and the little house with lacerations.

11 Will horses pursue on rocks? Will they be silent among mares? Because you have turned judgment into wrath and the fruit of justice into bitterness, you who are glad at no word, who say, "Did we not have horns in our strength?"

12 For behold, I am raising up against you a nation, O house of Israel, and they shall oppress you, that you may not enter Hemath and as far as the wadi of the west.

7 Thus the Lord showed me and behold, an early offspring of grasshoppers coming, and behold, one locust larva, Gog the king. \(^2\) And it will be, if they finish to devour the grass of the land—and I said,

"O Lord, O Lord, be gracious. Who will raise up Jakob, because he is very small?"

3 Repent, O Lord, at this." "Even this shall not be," says the Lord.

4 Thus the Lord showed me, and behold, the Lord called for a sentence by fire. And it devoured the voluminous deep and devoured the portion. \(^5\) And I said,

\(^a\)Perhaps offering for deliverance \(^b\)Lacking in Gk \(^c\)Possibly one “O Lord, O Lord, do cease!
Who will raise up Iakob,
because he is very small?
6 Repent, O Lord, at this.”

“Even this shall not come about,” says the Lord.

7 Thus the Lord showed me, and behold, one that stood on an adamantine wall, and adamant was in his hand.
And the Lord said to me, “Amos, what do you see?” And I said, “Adamant.” And the Lord said to me,
“Behold, I am inserting adamant in the midst of my people, Israel.
I will no longer add to pass them by,
and altars of laughter shall be annihilated, and the mystic rites of Israel shall be laid and Israel shall be led captive from his land.”

10 And Amasias, the priest of Baithel, sent to King Ieroboam of Israel, saying, “Amos is conduct-sing seditious meetings against you in the midst of the house of Israel. The land shall not be able to bear all his words.
11 For this is what Amos says, ‘Ieroboam shall die by the sword, and Israel shall be led captive from its
land. ’ ”

13 And Amasias said to Amos, “You that see, go, betake you to the land of Ioudas, and live there, and you shall prophesy there, but do no longer add to prophesy at Baithel, for it is the king’s holy precinct and it is the house of the kingdom.”

14 And Amos answered and said to Amasias, “I was no prophet nor a prophet’s son, but I was a goatherd and a scratcher of sycamore figs, and the Lord took me from the sheep, and the Lord said to me, ‘Go, prophesy against my people, Israel.’

16 “And now, hear a word of the Lord.
You say, ‘Do not prophesy against Israel, and you shall not incite a mob against
the house of Iakob.’

Therefore this is what the Lord says, ‘Your wife shall become a whore in the city,
your sons and your daughters shall fall by the sword, your land shall be measured by line, yourself shall die in an unclean
land,
and Israel shall be led captive from its
land.’ ”

8 Thus the Lord showed me, and behold, a fowler’s basket. And he said, “What do you see, Amos?” And I said, “A fowler’s basket.”
2 And the Lord said to me,
“The end has come upon my people Israel;
I will no longer add to pass them by,
and the compartments of the shrine shall wail in that day,” says the Lord;

“the fallen one shall be numerous in every place.
I will inflict silence.”

4 Do hear this, you who rub out the needy in
the morning
and oppress the poor from the land, who say, “When will the month pass and we will do business,
and the sabbaths,
and we will open storehouses,
to make a measure small, to enlarge weights
and to make the balance unfair, to acquire the poor with silver and the humble for sandals, and we will trade in every kind of produce?”

7 The Lord swears by the pride of Iakob:
If all your deeds shall be forgotten successfully!

And due to this shall not the land be troubled
and everyone mourn who lives in it and consummation rise up like a river and sink like the river of Egypt?

9 And it will come to pass on that day, says
the Lord,
and the sun will go down at noon, and the light will become dark upon the earth in the daytime.

10 And I will turn your feasts into mourning and all your songs into lamentation.
And I will bring sackcloth on every loin
and baldness on every head.
And I will make himb like the mourning for a loved one and those with himb like a day of suffering.

11 Behold, days are coming, says the Lord,
and I will send a famine on the land,
not a famine of bread or a thirst for water, but a famine of hearing a word of the Lord.

12 And the waters will be shaken as far as the sea,
and from north to east they shall run to
and fro,
seeking the word of the Lord,
and they shall not find it.

13 In that day, the beautiful maidens and the young men
shall faint for thirst, those who swear by the atonement of Samaria,
and say, “Your god lives, O Dan,” and, “Your god lives, O Bersabee”— and they shall fall and never rise again.

aGk = βômos  bAntecedent uncertain
I saw the Lord standing on the altar, and he said:
Strike the propitiatory, and the gateways shall be shaken,
and cut through the heads of all,
and those who are left I will kill with the sword;
not one of them fleeing shall escape,
and not one of them attempting to return safe will come through safely.

If they be buried in Hades, from there my hand shall draw them up;
even if they ascend to heaven,
from there I will bring them down.

If they hide on the top of Carmel,
from there I will search out and take them;
even if they sink from my eyes to the depths of the sea,
there I will command the dragon, and it shall bite them.

Even if they go into captivity in front of their enemies, there I will command the sword, and it shall kill them,
and I will fix my eyes on them for harm and not for good.

And the Lord God the Almighty, who touches the earth and shakes it,
and all who inhabit it will mourn,
and its consummation will rise up like a river
and sink like the river of Egypt;
who builds his ascent to heaven and founds his promise upon the earth, who calls for the water of the sea
and pours it out upon the face of the earth—
the Lord God the Almighty is his name.

Are you not like sons of Ethiopians to me, O sons of Israel? says the Lord.
Did I not bring Israel up from the land of Egypt and the allophyles from Cappadocia and the Syrians from a hole?

Behold, the eyes of the Lord God are upon the kingdom of sinners,
and I will remove it from the face of the earth—
except that I will not utterly remove the house of Jakob,
says the Lord.

For behold, I am commanding,
and I will winnow the house of Israel among all the nations
as one winnows with a winnowing-fan,
and nothing crushed shall fall to the ground.

All the sinners of my people shall die by the sword, who say, “Evil shall not draw near or be against us.”
On that day I will raise up the tent of David that is fallen and rebuild its ruins
and raise up its destruction, and rebuild it as the days of old in order that those remaining of humans and all the nations upon whom my name has been called might seek out me, says the Lord who does these things.

Behold days are coming, says the Lord,
and the grain harvest shall overtake the vintage,
and the grape shall ripen at seedtime,
and the mountains shall drip sweetness,
and all the hills shall be thickly grown.
And I will return the captivity of my people Israel,
and they shall build the annihilated cities and inhabit them,
and they shall plant vineyards and drink their wine,
and they shall plant gardens and eat their fruit.
And I will plant them upon their land,
and they shall never again be plucked from their land that I have given them, says the Lord God the Almighty.

And a word of the Lord came to Michaias, the Morasthi, in the days of Kings Ioatham and Achaz and Hezekias of Ioudas, regarding the things that he saw concerning Samaria and concerning Ierousalem.

Hear words, you people,
and let the earth pay attention, and all those in it, and the Lord shall be a witness against you, the Lord from his holy house.

Behold, the eyes of the Lord God are upon the kingdom of sinners,
and I will remove it from the face of the earth—
except that I will not utterly remove the house of Jakob,
says the Lord.

For behold, I am commanding,
and I will winnow the house of Israel among all the nations
as one winnows with a winnowing-fan,
and nothing crushed shall fall to the ground.
And I will make Samaria an orchard-guard’s shed in the field and a planting of a vineyard. And I will pull down her stones into a chasm, and her foundations I will uncover. And all her carved images they shall cut to pieces, and all her wages they shall burn with fire, and all her idols I will make an annihilation. For from the wages of whoredom she gathered them, and from the wages of whoredom she brought them together.

For this she shall lament and wail; she shall go unshod and naked; she shall make lamentation like that of dragons and mourning like that of the daughters of Sirens.

Because her blow has taken hold, for it has come as far as Loudas and has reached as far as the gate of my people, as far as Jerusalem.

Do not consider yourselves great, you in Geth; do not rebuild out of a house a laughingstock, you in Akim; besprinkle your laughingstock with soil. Though she inhabits her cities well, inhabiting Sennaan did not come out to mourn a house next to her; she shall receive a painful blow from you. Who made a beginning of good things for her who dwells in pain? Because bad things have come down from the Lord to the gates of Jerusalem: noise of chariots and of horsemen. She who dwells in Lachis, she is the originator of sin for daughter Sion, because in you were found the impious acts of Israel. Therefore you shall give worthless houses—ones being dispatched—as far as the inheritance of Geth. It became meaningless to the kings of Israel.

Until I lead the heirs to you, O inheritance inhabiting [Lachis], the glory of daughter Israel will come as far as Odollam.

Shave, and cut your hair for your pampered children; broaden your widowhood like an eagle, because they were taken captive from you.

They came devising troubles and working out evil deeds on their beds. And as soon as it was day, they would execute them, for they did not lift their hands to God. And they would covet fields and plunder orphans and oppress households, and they would plunder a man and his house, a man and his inheritance. Therefore this is what the Lord says: Behold, I am devising evil against this tribe from which you shall not remove your necks nor walk upright suddenly, because it is an evil time.

On that day a parable shall be taken up against you, and a dirge will be wailed with a tune, saying, “We suffered misery in misery; a portion of my people was measured by a line, and there was none to prevent him from turning away. Our fields were parcelled out.” Therefore you will have no one to cast the line by lot in the assembly of the Lord.

“Stop weeping with tears, nor let them shed tears over these matters, for he will not repel reproaches.” One says, “The house of Jakob provoked the spirit of the Lord.” If these are his practices, are not his words good with him, and have they not proceeded upright? And previously, my people resisted in hostility; contrary to his peace they stripped off his skin to remove hope in the crushing of war.

Therefore, leaders of my people shall be cast out of their homes of luxury. On account of their evil practices, they have been expelled. Draw near to the everlasting mountains. Arise, and go, because this rest is not for you, due to uncleanness. You were corrupted with corruption; you were pursued without anyone pursuing. A spirit established a lie; it dripped on you as wine and intoxicating drink. And it shall be that from the drop of this people, when Jakob is being gathered, he will be gathered together with all. Receiving I will receive those remaining of Israel;
I will establish their return at the same time.
Like sheep in affliction, like a flock in the midst of their stall, they shall leap away from people.

They have cut through the breach before
them,
and they passed through the gate
and went out through it.
And their king went out before them,
but the Lord shall lead them.

And he will say:
Do hear this, you progenitors of the house of Iakob
and you that are left of the house of Israel!
Should you not know judgment—you who hate the good things and seek the evil things,
who snatch their skin from them,
and their flesh from their bones?

As they devoured the flesh of my people and flayed their skin off them and crushed their bones and cut them in pieces like meat in a cauldron,
like flesh in a cauldron.

Thus they will cry to the Lord,
and he will not listen to them,
and he will turn his face from them at that time, because they did evil against thema in their practices.

This is what the Lord says against the prophets who lead my people astray,
who bite with their teeth
and announce peace to hima, and nothing has been given into their
mouth;
they have raised up war against hima.

Therefore, it shall be night to you without vision
and darkness to you without divination.
The sun shall go down upon the prophets,
and the day shall be dark over them;
those who see dreams shall be disgraced,
and the diviners shall be mocked;
they shall all speak against them,
for no one will listen to them.

Otherwise I will replenish strength in the spirit of the Lord,
and of judgment and of dominance to declare to Iakob his impious acts and to Israel his sins.

Do hear this, you leaders of the house of Iakob
and you that are left of the house of Israel,
who abhor judgment
and pervert the upright things, who build Sion with blood and Ierousalem with injustice!

Her leaders were judging for gifts, and her priests were giving answer for a wage,
and her prophets were divining for money,
and they were relying on the Lord, saying, “Is the Lord not withb us?
No harm shall come upon us.”

Therefore, on your account
Sion shall be plowed as a field, and Ierousalem shall become like a garden-watcher’s hut,
and the mountain of the house shall become a grove of a thicket.

And it shall be in the last days,
the mountain of the Lord shall be manifest,
prepared on the tops of the mountains,
and it shall be elevated beyond the hills.
And peoples shall hasten to it,
and many nations shall come and say:
“Come, let us go up to the mountain of the Lord
and to the house of the God of Iakob, and they will show us his way,
and we will walk in his paths.”
Because out of Sion shall go forth a law, and a word of the Lord from Ierousalem.

And he shall judge between many peoples and shall reprove strong nations far away,
and they shall cut their swords into plows
and their spears into sickles, and nation shall no longer lift up sword against nation,
and they shall learn war no more,
and each one shall rest under his vine, and each under his fig tree,
and no one shall make them afraid, for the mouth of the Lord Almighty has spoken this.

Because all the peoples will walk,
each in its own way,
but we will walk in the name of the Lord,
our God,
forever and anon.

In that day, says the Lord,
I will assemble her who is shattered, and I will welcome her who is rejected and those whom I drove away.
And I will make her who is shattered a remnant,
and her who is driven away a strong
nation,
and the Lord will reign over them in Mount Sion from now and forever.

8 And you, O dusty tower of the flock, daughter Sion, to you it shall come, and the former dominion, a kingdom out of Babylon, shall enter daughter Jerusalem.

9 And now why did you know harm? You did not have a king, did you? Or did your counsel perish, because pangs subdued you like one in labor?

10 Suffer pain, and be courageous, and draw near, O daughter Sion, like one in labor, for now you shall go forth from the city and tent in the plain, and you shall come as far as Babylon. From there he will rescue you, and from there the Lord your God will redeem you from the hand of your enemies.

11 And now many nations have assembled against you, those who say, “We shall rejoice, and our eyes shall behold Sion.”

12 They too did not know the thought of the Lord, and they did not understand his plan, that he has gathered them as sheaves of a threshing floor.

13 Arise, and thresh them, O daughter Sion, because I will make your horns iron and your hoofs I will make bronze, and you shall dissolve many peoples and shall devote their multitude to the Lord and their strength to the Lord of the whole earth.

5 Now a daughter will be blocked with a blockage; he set up a siege against us; with a rod they shall strike the tribes of Israel upon the cheek.

2 And you, O Bethlehem, house of Ephratha, are very few in number to be among the thousands of Loudas; one from you shall come forth for me to become a ruler in Israel, and his goings forth are from of old, from days of yore.

3 Therefore he shall give them up until the time when she who is in labor shall bring forth, and the rest of their brothers shall return to the sons of Israel.

4 And he shall stand and see and tend his flock in the strength of the Lord. And they shall exist in the glory of the name of the Lord their God, for now he shall be great to the ends of the earth, and this shall be peace.

When Assour comes against our land and when he treads upon our country, seven shepherds shall also be raised up against him, and eight stings of people.

6 And they shall tend Assour with a sword and the land of Nebrod with her ditch; and he shall rescue us from Assour, when he comes against our land and when he treads upon our borders.

7 And the remnant of Iakob among the nations, in the midst of many peoples, shall be like dew falling from the Lord and like lambs in the grass that none among sons of man may assemble or resist.

8 And the remnant of Iakob among the nations, in the midst of many peoples, shall be like a lion among animals in the forest and like a whelp among flocks of sheep, as when it passes through and, having made a selection, snatches away, and there is none to deliver.

9 Your hand shall be exalted over those who oppress you, and all your enemies shall be utterly destroyed.

10 It shall come to pass in that day, says the Lord, I will utterly destroy your horses from among you and will demolish your chariots, and I will utterly destroy the cities of your land and remove all your strongholds, and I will remove your sorceries from your hands, and there will be no speakers of apothegms among you, and I will destroy your carved images and your steles from among you, and you shall do obeisance no more to the works of your hands.

aLacking in Gk
14 and I will cut off your sacred groves from among you and annihilate your cities.

15 And in anger and wrath I will execute vengeance on the nations, due to the fact they did not listen.

6 Do hear a word of the Lord. The Lord said: Rise, plead your case before the mountains, and let the hills hear your voice.

2 Hear, you peoples, the judgment of the Lord, and you chasms, foundations of the earth, because the Lord has a case against his people, and he will dispute with Israel.

3 “O my people, what have I done to you? Or how did I sadden or how did I annoy you? Answer me!

4 For I brought you up from the land of Egypt and redeemed you from a house of slavery, and I sent before you Moyses and Aaron and Mariam.

5 O my people, do remember what King Balak of Moab planned against you and what Balaam son of Beor answered him from the reeds as far as Galgal, that the justice of the Lord might be known.”

6 "With what should I lay hold of the Lord; shall I lay claim to my God Most High? Shall I lay hold of him with whole burnt offerings, with calves a year old?

7 Will the Lord receive favorably among thousands of rams or among ten thousands of swollen streams? Should I give my firstborns for impious acts, the fruit of my belly for the sin of my soul?"

8 Has it been told to you, O man, what is good or what the Lord seeks from you, but to do judgment and to love mercy and to be ready to walk with the Lord, your God?

9 The voice of the Lord will be invoked for the city, and he shall save those who fear his name.

Hear, O tribe, and who shall adorn a city?

10 Will a fire and a lawless person's house [treasuring up] lawless treasure and a measure of pride—injustice?

11 Shall the lawless be justified by a pair of scales, or deceitful weights by a bag?

12 From these they filled their wealth with impiety. And her inhabitants were speaking lies, and their tongue was exalted in their mouth.

13 And I will begin to strike you down; I will annihilate you because of your sins. And it shall grow dark within you, and you shall swim away and shall not escape. And as many as shall escape shall be delivered over to the sword.

14 You shall sow, and you shall not reap; you shall press the olive and shall not anoint yourself with oil, and even wine you shall not drink, and the precepts of my people shall be annihilated, and all the works of the house of Achaab.

And you walked in their counsels, that I might give you over to annihilation and her inhabitants to hissing, and you shall receive reproaches of peoples.

7 Woe is me, because I have become like one gathering stubble at the harvest and like grape gleanings at the vintage, when there is no cluster to eat the firstlings.

Woe is me, O soul, because the devout has perished from the land, and there is none among people who is upright; all give a judgment for a blood; they afflict, each his neighbor, with affliction.

3 They prepare their hands for evil; the ruler requests, and the judge has spoken peaceful words; it is what pleases his soul. And I will take away their good things like a moth eating and crawling on a rod in the day of your watching. [Woe, woe,] your vengeance has come; now their weeping shall come.

4 Put no trust in friends, and do not hope in leaders; guard yourself against your bedmate, so as to communicate anything to her; for a son dishonors a father, a daughter shall rise up against her mother, a daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law;

\[a.e.\ aiming at\] the enemies of a man are the men in his house.

7 But as for me, I will look to the Lord; I will wait for God my savior; my God will hear me.

8 Stop rejoicing over me, O my lady adversary, because I have fallen and I shall rise, for though I shall sit in darkness, the Lord shall give me light.

9 I will endure the wrath of the Lord —because I sinned against him— until he justifies my sentence, and he will accomplish my judgment and will bring me out into the light; I will see his justice.

10 And my lady adversary will see and will be covered with shame, she who says to me, “Where is the Lord your God?” My eyes shall look upon her; now she shall become an object to be trampled like clay in the streets during a day of daubing of brick.

That day will be your erasure, and that day will rub out your precepts.

12 And your cities shall come to a leveling and a dividing [of the Assyrians], and your strong cities to a dividing from Tyre as far as a river—a day of water and confusion.

13 The earth will become an annihilation with its inhabitants, for the fruits of their doings.

14 Shepherd your people with your rod, the sheep of your possession, tenting alone in a forest in the midst of Carmel; they shall feed in Basanitis and Galaaditis as the days of old.

15 And as in the days of your exit from Egypt, you shall see marvelous things.

16 Nations shall see and be ashamed of all their might; they shall lay their hands on their mouth; their ears shall be deafened; they shall lick dust like a snake, as they trail dirt; they shall be confounded in their enclosure; they shall be amazed at the Lord, your God, and shall be afraid of you.

18 Who is god like you, removing injustices and passing over impieties for the remnant of his possession? And he did not retain his anger for a witness, because he is one that desires mercy.

19 He will turn and have compassion upon us; he will sink our injustices and cast all our sins into the depths of the sea.

20 You will give truth to Iakob, mercy to Abraam, as you swore to our fathers in former days.

IOEL

1 A word of the Lord that came to Ioel the son of Bathouel.

2 Hear this, O elders; give ear, all you that inhabit the land! Have such things happened in your days or in the days of your fathers?

3 Tell your children of them, and your children their children, and their children to another generation.

4 The leavings of the caterpillar the grasshopper has devoured, and the leavings of the grasshopper the locust larva has devoured, and the leavings of the locust larva the rust has devoured.

5 Sober up, drunkards, from their wine and weep; wail, all you who drink wine unto intoxication, because happiness has been removed from your mouth, and joy.

6 Because a nation has come up against my land, powerful and innumerable; its teeth are lion’s teeth, and its molars those of a whelp.

7 It has set my vine for annihilation and my fig trees for breaking; searching it has searched it out and thrown it down; its branches have turned white.

8 Lament for me more than a bride dressed in sackcloth for the husband of her youth.

9 Sacrifice and libation are removed from the house of the Lord. Mourn, O priests, that minister to the altar, because the plains have suffered misery. Let the land mourn, because the grain has suffered misery; the wine has dried up; the oil has been diminished.

10 The farmers have dried up. Wail, O farms, over the wheat and barley, for the harvest of the field is ruined.

12 The vine has dried up, and the fig trees have become few. Pomegranate and palm and apple —even all the trees of the field have dried up, because the sons of men have put joy to shame.

13 Gird yourselves, and mourn, you priests;
lament, you that minister to the altar.
Enter, sleep in sackcloth,
when you minister to God,
because sacrifice and libation have failed from the house of your God.

14 Sanctify a fast;
proclaim a service;
gather all the elders
who inhabit the land into the house of your God, and cry out earnestly to the Lord.

15 Alas! Alas! Alas for the day, because the day of the Lord is near,
and it will come like misery from misery.

16 The food has been utterly destroyed before our eyes, happiness and joy from the house of our God.

17 Heifers have jumped up at their mangers;
storehouses have been annihilated;
wine presses have been razed to the ground,
because the grain has dried up.

18 How shall we store anything in them?
The herds of cattle have wept,
because there has been no pasture for them;
even the flocks of sheep have been annihilated.

19 To you, O Lord, I will shout, because fire has destroyed the seasonable things of the wilderness and a flame has kindled all the trees of the field.

20 Even the animals of the plain have looked up to you, because courses of water have dried up and fire has devoured the seasonable things of the wilderness.

2 Trumpet with a trumpet in Sion;
make proclamation on my holy mountain!
And let all the inhabitants of the land be confounded, for the day of the Lord has come, because it is near—a day of darkness and gloom,
a day of cloud and mist!
Like dawn, a numerous and mighty people shall pour onto the mountains;
their like has not been from of old,
and after him there shall not be added throughout the years for generations of generations.

3 In front of him there is a consuming fire, and a kindled flame behind him;
the land before him is like an orchard of delight,
but a plain of annihilation behind him,
and no one shall escape him.

4 Their appearance is like the appearance of horses, and like horsemen so they shall pursue.

5 Like the noise of chariots they shall leap on the tops of the mountains, and like the noise of a flame of fire devouring stubble and like a numerous and mighty people being drawn up for battle.

6 Before him peoples will be crushed;
every face will be like the soot of an earthen pot.

7 Like fighters they will run,
and like men of battle they will scale the walls.
And each will go by his own way
and not turn from their paths.

8 And no one will stand aloof from his brother;
weighed down by their own weapons, they shall go,
and they shall fall by their arrows and not come to an end.

9 They shall seize the city and run upon the walls;
they will scale the houses and enter through windows like thieves.

10 The earth shall be disturbed before them,
and the sky shall be shaken.
The sun and the moon shall grow dark,
and the stars shall shed their brightness.

11 The Lord shall give forth his voice before his force, because exceedingly large is his encampment,
because strong are the actions of his words.
For great is the day of the Lord, great and exceedingly remarkable,
and who shall be sufficient for it?

12 Even now, says the Lord, your God, return to me with all your heart,
with fasting and with weeping and with mourning.

13 and rend your hearts and not your clothing.
And return to the Lord, your God,
for he is merciful and compassionate, patient and very beneficent and repenting concerning evils.

14 Who knows whether he will turn and repent and leave a blessing behind him,
a sacrifice and a libation for the Lord, your God?
802

Trumpet with the trumpet in Sion; sanctify a fast; proclaim a service; gather the people. Sanctify an assembly; welcome the aged; gather the infants sucking the breast. Let the bridegroom come from his bedroom, and the bride from her chamber.

Between the foundation and the altar, the priests who minister to the Lord shall weep and say, "Spare your people, O Lord, and do not subject your inheritance to the reproach of being ruled over by nations, lest they say among the nations: 'Where is their God?' "

And the Lord became jealous for his land and spared his people. And the Lord answered and said to his people: Behold I am sending you grain and wine and oil, and you will be satisfied with them, and I will no more give you over to reproach among the nations.

And I will chase from you the one from the north and banish him to a parched land, and I will annihilate his front in the first sea and his rear in the last sea, and his decay will go up, and his foul smell will go up, because he magnified his works.

Courage, O land, rejoice, and be happy, because the Lord has done great things!

Courage, you animals of the plain, because the plains of the wilderness have blossomed, because a tree has borne its fruit; a vine and fig tree have yielded their strength.

And you children of Sion, rejoice, and be happy in the Lord, your God, for he has given you food for justice, and he shall send you the early and later rain as before.

The threshing floors shall be full of grain, and the vats shall overflow with wine and oil.

And I will repay you for the years that the grasshopper devoured, and the locust larva and the rust and the caterpillar, my great force, which I sent against you.

And eating you shall eat and be satisfied and praise the name of the Lord your God in regard to the marvelous things he has done with you. And my people shall never again be put to shame.

You shall know that I am in the midst of Israel, and I am the Lord your God, and there is none other but me. And my people shall never again be put to shame.

And it shall be after these things, I will pour out of my spirit on all flesh, and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, and your old men shall dream dreams, and your young men shall see visions.

Even on the male and female slaves, in those days, I will pour out of my spirit.

I will give portents in the sky and on earth: blood and fire and the vapor of smoke. The sun shall be turned to darkness, and the moon to blood, before the great and notable day of the Lord comes. And it shall be, everyone who calls on the name of the Lord shall be saved, because in Mount Sion and in Jerusalem there shall be one who escapes, as the Lord has said, and people who have good news announced to them, whom the Lord has called.

For, behold, in those days and at that time, when I return the captivity of Judas and Jerusalem, I will also gather all the nations and bring them down to the valley of Josaphat and hold a disputation with them there, on account of my people and my heritage Israel, who were dispersed among the nations. And they have divided my land and have cast lots for my people, and they gave the boys to whores and would sell the girls for wine and would drink.

And what are you to me, O Tyre and Sidon and all Galilee of allophyles? Are you rendering retribution on me? Or are you bearing a sharp grudge against me? And quickly I will return your retribution back upon your own heads, because you took my silver and my gold and you carried my choice and beautiful things into your shrines.

And you sold the sons of Judas and the sons of Jerusalem to the sons of Greeks to banish them from their borders. Behold, I am rousing them up from the place, there where you sold them, and will turn your retribution back upon your own heads. And I will sell your sons and your daughters into the hands of the sons of Judas, and they will sell them into captivity to a nation far away, for the Lord has spoken.

Proclaim these things among the nations: Sanctify a war; stir up the fighters.
Come near, and ascend, all you warrior men.

Beat your plows into swords and your sickles into barbed lances; let the weakling say, “I am strong.”

Assemble, and come, all you nations round about; gather there. Let the meek become a fighter.

Let all the nations rouse themselves and come up to the valley of Josphat, for there I will sit to pass judgment on all the nations round about.

Send forth sickles, because the harvest has come. Go in, tread, for the winepress is full. The vats overflow, because their wickedness is full.

Noises have rung out in the valley of decision, because the day of the Lord is near in the valley of decision.

The sun and the moon shall grow dark, and the stars shall shed their brightness.

And the Lord shall cry out from Sion and give his voice from Jerusalem, and sky and earth shall be shaken. But the Lord will spare his people, and the Lord shall strengthen the sons of Israel.

And you shall know that I am the Lord your God, who tents in Sion, in my holy mountain. And Jerusalem shall be holy, and aliens shall never again pass through it.

And it shall be in that day, the mountains shall drip sweetness, and the hills shall flow with milk, and all the water courses of Loudas shall flow with water, and a fountain shall come forth from the house of the Lord and give drink to the wadi of rushes.

Egypt shall become an annihilation, and Idumea shall become a plain of annihilation for the injustice of the sons of Loudas, because they shed just blood in their land.

But Judea shall be inhabited forever, and Jerusalem to all generations.

I will avenge their blood, and I will not hold it guiltless, and the Lord shall tent in Sion.

1 The Vision of Abdias.

This is what the Lord God says to Idumea: I heard a report from the Lord, and he sent enclosing to the nations: “Rise up, and let us rise up against it for battle!”

Behold, I have made you least among the nations; you are very much dishonored.

The arrogance of your heart has raised you up, though you tent in the holes of the rocks, exalting his habitation, saying in his heart, “Who will bring me down to the ground?”

If you soar like an eagle, even if you set your nest among the stars, from there I will bring you down, says the Lord.

If thieves came to you, or robbers by night, where would you be cast aside; would they not steal what is sufficient for themselves? And if grape gatherers came to you, would they not leave gleanings?

How Esau was searched, and his hidden things seized.

All the men of your covenant have sent you as far as the borders; they have risen up against you; your men of peace have prevailed against you; they have set an ambush beneath you. There is no understanding in it.

On that day, says the Lord, I will destroy the wise out of Idumea and understanding out of Mount Esau.

And your fighters from Thaiman shall be terrified so that a person will be removed from Mount Esau.

On account of the slaughter and impiety against your brother Jakob, shame shall also cover you, and you shall be removed forever.

Since the day you stood in opposition, on the day that aliens took captive his force and foreigners entered his gate and cast lots for Jerusalem, you too were like one of them.

And do not look upon a day of your brother, on the day of foreigners, and do not rejoice over the sons of Loudas on the day of their ruin, and do not boast.

Or done to
on the day of affliction.

13 Do not even enter the gates of the peoples on the day of their suffering nor look, even you, upon their gathering on the day of their ruin nor join in an attack on their force on the day of their destruction.

14 Do not even stand at their mountain passes, to destroy utterly their escapees nor hem in those among them who are attempting to flee on the day of affliction.

15 For the day of the Lord against all the nations is near. As you have done, so shall it be to you; your recompense shall be returned on your head.

16 For as you have drunk on my holy mountain, all the nations shall drink wine; they shall drink and descend and be as though they are not.

17 But on Mount Sion there shall be salvation, and it shall be holy, and the house of Jacob shall take possession of those who took possession of them.

18 And the house of Jacob shall be a fire, the house of Joseph a flame, the house of Esau stubble, and they shall be enflamed against them and consume them, and there shall be no fire bearer for the house of Esau, for the Lord has spoken.

19 And those in Nageb shall possess Mount Esau, and those in the Sephela the allophyles, and they shall possess Mount Ephraim and the plain of Samaria and Benjamin and Galaaditis.

20 And this is the beginning of the migration: the sons of Israel shall have the land of the Chananites as far as Sarepta and the migration of Jerusalem as far as Sephratha; they shall also possess the cities of the Nageb.

21 The men who are rescued from Mount Sion shall go up to punish Mount Esau, and the kingdom shall be the Lord’s.

IONAS

1 And a word of the Lord came to Jonas the son of Amathi, saying, 2 "Arise, and go to Nineue, the great city, and make a proclamation in it, because the cry of its wickedness has come up to me."

3 And Jonas arose to flee to Tharsis from the presence of the Lord. And he went down to Joppe and found a ship going to Tharsis, and he paid his fare and went on board to sail with them to Tharsis away from the presence of the Lord.

4 And the Lord aroused a wind in the sea, and a great surge came upon the sea, and the ship was in danger of breaking up. 5 And the mariners were afraid and cried out, each to their god. And they heaved the wares that were in the ship into the sea, to be lightened from them. But Jonas went down into the hold of the ship and was sleeping and snoring. 6 And the captain came to him and said to him, "Why are you snoring? Get up, invoke your god in order that the god might deliver us and we not perish."

7 And they said each to his neighbor, "Come, let us cast lots and learn on whose account this calamity is among us. And they cast lots, and the lot fell on Jonas. 8 And they said to him, "Tell us on what account this calamity is among us. What is your occupation? And where do you come from? And from what country are you and of what people?" 9 And he said to them, "I am a slave of the Lord, and I worship the Lord, God of the sky, who made the sea and the dry land." 10 And the men feared with a great fear and said to him, "What is this that you have done!" For the men knew that he was fleeing from the presence of the Lord, because he had told them.

11 And they said to him, "What should we do to you, and the sea will abate from us?" Because the sea kept coming and stirring up a surge even more. 12 And Jonas said to them, "Pick me up, and throw me into the sea, and the sea will abate from you, for I know it is because of me that this great surge is upon you." 13 And the men exerted themselves to return to land, and they could not, because the sea kept coming and stirring up against them more. 14 And they cried out to the Lord and said, "No way, O Lord, do not let us perish on account of this person’s life. And do not put upon us just blood, for you, O Lord, have done as you have wished." 15 And they took Jonas and cast him into the sea, and the sea ceased from its tumult. 16 And the men feared the Lord in great fear, and they sacrificed a sacrifice to the Lord and vowed vows.

2 (1.17) And the Lord ordered a great sea monster to swallow Jonas, and Jonas was in the belly of the sea monster three days and three nights. 2(1) And Jonas prayed to the Lord, his God, from the belly of the sea monster and said, "I cried out to the Lord my God in my affliction, and he heard me; out of the belly of Hades you heard my cry, my voice.

3 You cast me into the depths of the heart of the sea, and streams surrounded me; all your surges and your billows passed over me.

4(3) And I said, 'I have been driven away from your eyes;"
shall I add to look at your holy shrine?"

6(5) Water poured over me as far as my life; the deepest abyss surrounded me; my head sank into the crevices of the mountains.

7(6) I went down to the land, whose bars are everlasting barriers, and let the decay of my life ascend, O Lord my God.

8(7) As my life was failing me, I remembered the Lord; so may my prayer come to you into your holy shrine.

9(8) People who cherish vain and false things have forsaken their mercy.

10(9) But I with a voice of praise and acknowledgment will sacrifice to you; what I have vowed I will pay to the Lord for my deliverance."

11(10) And the sea monster was ordered, and it cast Ionas out upon dry land.

And a word of the Lord came to Ionas a second time, saying, 2“Get up, go to Nineue, the great city, and proclaim in it according to the previous proclamation that I spoke to you. 3And Ionas got up and went to Nineue, as the Lord said. Now Nineue was a great city to God, of about three days' journey. 4And Ionas began to go into the city about one day's journey. And he proclaimed and said, "Three days more and Nineue shall be overthrown!" 5And the men of Nineue believed God and proclaimed a fast and put on sackcloth from the great among them unto the small among them.

6 And the news reached the king of Nineue, and he rose from his throne, and removed his robe from himself and covered himself with sackcloth and sat on ashes. 7And proclamation was made, and it was spoken in Nineue by the king and his nobles, saying, "Let people and animals and cattle and sheep not taste anything or feed or drink water." 8And the people and animals put on sackcloth, and they cried fervently to God. And they turned, each from his evil way and from the injustice in his hands, saying, 9"Who knows if God will repent and turn from the anger of his wrath and we will not perish?"

10 And God saw their deeds, that they turned from their evil ways, and God repented at the calamity which he said he would do to them, and he did not do it.

And Ionas was grieved with great grief and confused. 2And he prayed to the Lord and said, "Ah Lord! Were these not my words while I was still in my country? That is why I had the foresight to flee to Tharsis, for I knew that you are merciful and compassionate, long-suffering and very merciful and one who repents at calamities. 3And now, O Sovereign, Lord, take my life from me, because it is better for me to die than to live." 4And the Lord said to Ionas, "Are you exceedingly grieved?" 5And Ionas went out of the city and sat down opposite the city and made a tent for himself there. And he sat under it in the shade until he should see what would become of the city.

6 And the Lord God ordered a gourd, and it came up over Ionas's head to be a shade over his head to shade him from his miseries. And Ionas was happy with great happiness about the gourd.

7 And early the next morning, God ordered a worm, and it smote the gourd, and it withered. 8And it came to pass, as soon as the sun rose, God ordered a scorching wind of heat, and the sun beat down on the head of Ionas, and he became disheartened and renounced his life and said, "It is better for me to die than to live."

9 And God said to Ionas, "Are you exceedingly grieved over the gourd?" And he said, "I am exceedingly grieved, unto death." 10And the Lord said, "You had consideration for the gourd, which you suffered no trouble for, and you did not nurture it, which came into being towards nightfall and perished towards nightfall. 11But shall I not spare Nineue, the great city, in which dwell more than a hundred and twenty thousand persons who did not know their right hand from their left, and many animals?"

NAOUM

1 An issue for Nineue. A book of vision of Naoum the Elkesite.

2 A jealous and avenging god is the Lord, the Lord avenging with wrath, the Lord taking vengeance on his adversaries and removing his enemies.

3 The Lord is slow to anger, and his strength is great, and holding guiltless, the Lord will not hold guiltless.

His way is in consummation and bseismic upheaval, and clouds are dust for his feet, threatening the sea and making it dry and making all the rivers desolate; Basanitis and Carmel were diminished, and the vegetation of Lebanon has died out.

5 The mountains quaked because of him, and the hills were shaken, and the earth was removed from his presence, the whole of it and all who live in it.

6 Who shall endure before his wrath? And who shall withstand the heat of his anger? His anger causes domains to melt, and by him the rocks were broken in pieces.

aOr I shall . . . .  bPossibly earthquake and hurricane  cI.e. the Lord
The Lord is kind to those who await him in a day of trouble and familiar with those who reverence him.

And by the flooding of a passage,
he will make an end to those who arise,
and darkness will pursue his enemies.

Why do you calculate against the Lord?
It is he that will make an end.
He will not avenge twice added together with affliction!

Because he shall be left dry down to their foundation,
and he shall be consumed like a twisted yew tree
and like straw fully dried.

From you a calculation shall go forth against the Lord, counseling evil things, contrary things.

This is what the Lord says, who rules over
many waters,
"And thus they shall be dispersed,
and your fame shall no longer be heard.
And now I will break off his rod from you,
and I will shatter your bonds."

And the Lord will command concerning you:
"Part of your name will no longer be scattered.
I will utterly destroy the carved and molten images
from the house of your God.
I will make your grave, because they are fleeting."

Behold, on the mountains are the feet of one who brings good tidings and who announces peace.
Celebrate your feasts, O Ioudas;
pay your vows,
for they shall not add any longer to pass on to becoming old.

(1.15) It is finished; it has been removed.
(2(1)) Delivered from trouble, he rose up, breathing in your face.
Watch the road;
grasp your loins;
be very manly in strength!

For the Lord has turned aside the pride of Iakob,
as he did the pride of Israel,
for shaking they shook them off and their branches.

They destroyed their weapons of dominance\(^a\) from men,
\(^a\)mighty men\(^a\) sporting with fire.
The reins of their chariots,
in the day of his preparation, and the horsemen will be thrown into confusion \(^5(4)\) in the roads.

\(^a\)I.e. mighty men = weapons of dominance  \(^b\)I.e. substructure

And the chariots will be in confusion and jammed together in the streets.
Their appearance will be like torches of fire and like flashing lightnings.

And their nobles shall remember and flee by day,
and they shall become weak in their journey and hasten to the walls and prepare their outposts.

The river gates have been opened,
and the royal palace has collapsed,
and the substructure has been uncovered,
and this\(^b\) kept coming up,
and its slave women were being led away,
moaning in their hearts like doves.

And as for Nineue, her water is like a swimming pool of water,
and they, when they were fleeing, did not stop,
and there was no one who looked on.

They were plundering the silver;
they were plundering the gold,
and there was no end of her adornment.
They have been laden with all her desirable vessels.

Shaking and quaking and trembling and shattering of heart and loosening of knees
and pains in every loin,
and the face of all like burnt earthenware!

Where is the abode of the lions and the feeding ground that exists for welpes,
where the lion went to enter there,
a lion’s whelp, and there was none to scare it away?

A lion has snatched enough for its welpes and has strangled for its lions, and it has filled its lair with game
and its abode with prey.

Behold, I am against you, says the Lord Almighty, and I will burn your abundance in smoke, and a sword shall devour your lions, and I will utterly destroy your prey from the earth, and your works shall be heard of no more.

Ah city of bloodshed, utterly deceitful, full of injustice,
prey shall not be groped for!

A noise of whips and a noise of the rumble of wheels,
of pursuing horse and bounding chariot
and of mounting horsemen and glittering sword and of flashing arms and a multitude of wounded and of heavy falling.
And there was no end to her nations, and they shall become weak in their bodies, because of a multitude of whoredom.

4 Beautiful and gratifying prostitute, manipulator of potions, she who barters nations through her whoredom and tribes through her potions.

5 Behold, I am against you, says the Lord God the Almighty, and I will uncover your behind to your face, and I will show your shame to nations and your dishonor to kingdoms.

6 And I will throw filth at you, even your own uncleanness, and I will set you as an example.

7 And it shall be, everyone who sees you will go down from you and say, “Wretched Nineue, who will bemoan her? From where shall I seek comfort for her?”

8 Tune a chord; prepare a portion, O Amon who dwells in rivers; water is around her, whose dominion is the sea, and her walls are water, and her strength is Ethiopia and Egypt—and there is no end to flight! Even the Libyans have become her helpers.

9 She too shall go into migration a captive, and they shall dash her infants to the ground at the heads of all her streets. And they shall cast lots for all her glorious things, and all her nobles shall be bound in handcuffs.

10 You too will be drunken, and you will be despised; as well you will seek a position for yourself from your enemies.

11 All your fortresses are fig trees with guards; if shaken, they will then fall into the mouth of the eater.

12 Behold, your people are like women in your midst. The gates of your land, when opened, shall be opened to your foes; fire shall devour your bars.

13 Draw yourself water for a siege; strengthen your forts; trample the clay, and let it be trodden in the chaff; make it stronger than brick.

14 There a fire will devour you; a sword will utterly destroy you. It will devour you like the grasshopper, and you shall be weighed down like the locust larva.

15 You increased your merchandise beyond the stars of the sky. The locust larva rushed in and spread.

16 Your commingled one hopped off like a locust, like a grasshopper having landed on a fence in the days of frost: the sun rose, and it jumped off and knew not its place. Woe to them!

17 Your shepherds dozed; the Assyrian king put your mighty men to sleep. Your people have departed for the mountains, and there has been none to receive them.

18 There is no healing for your ruin; your blow swelled up. All who hear the news about you will clap their hands over you. For against whom has your endless wickedness not come?

NAOUUM 3—HABBAKOUM 1

The issue that the prophet Habbakoumb saw.

1 O Lord, how long shall I cry out, and you will not listen? Being wronged shall I cry to you, and you will not save?

2 Why did you show me toils and hardships, to look at wretchedness and impiety? Justice has come before me, and the judge is receiving.

3 Therefore, law has been dispersed, and judgment is not administered at all, because an impious person oppresses the just—on this account, judgment will come forth perverted.

4 Look, you despisers, and watch! And marvel at marvelous things, and be annihilated! For I am working a work in your days that you would not believe if someone should tell it.

5 For behold I am rousing [the Chaldeans,] the fighters, the bitter and swift nation that goes over the breadths of the earth to possess dwellings not his own.

6 He is frightening and conspicuous; his judgment will be from himself, and his unjust gain will come from himself.

7 And his horses will leap beyond leopards and will be swifter than the wolves of Arabia. His horsemen will ride forth and charge from far away; they will fly like an eagle eager to devour.

8 Consummation will come to the impious, who stand with their faces in opposition, and he will gather a captivity like the sand.

10 And at kings he will scoff, and tyrants will be his toys. He will jest at every fortress and heap up earth and take it.

11 Then he will have a change of spirit and pass through and will appease.

This strength belongs to my God.

12 Are you not from the beginning, O Lord, my holy God? So we shall not die. O Lord, you have appointed him for judgment, and he has formed me to examine his chastening.

13 A pure eye is not for seeing evil things, and you cannot look upon sufferings. Why do you look on those who despise? Will you keep silence while the impious swallows up the just?

14 And you will make people like the fish of the sea and like crawling things that have no leader!

15 He drew up consummation with a fish hook and dragged him with a fishing net and gathered him in his seines.

16 On this account he will be glad, and his heart will rejoice. On this account he will sacrifice to his seine and burn incense to his fishing net, because by them he made his portion fat and his food choice.

17 Therefore he will cast his fishing net and never spare killing the nations.

2 I will stand at my watch post and station myself on a rock. And I will keep watch to see what he will say to me and what I should answer to my reproof.

2 And the Lord answered me and said, Write a vision, and clearly on a tablet, so that the reader might pursue them.

3 For there is still a vision for an appointed time, and it will rise up at the end and not in vain. If it should tarry, wait for it, for when it comes it will come and not delay.

4 If it draws back, my soul is not pleased in it. But the just shall live by my faith.

5 But he who is drunk with wine and a despiser—a boastful man—will complete nothing.

who widened his soul like Hades, and he, like death, not being satisfied, will also gather to himself all nations and will welcome to himself all peoples.

6 Shall not all these things take up a parable against him and a riddle as a narrative of him? And they will say, "Woe to him who increases for himself things not his own—how long?—and who weighs down his collar strongly,"

7 because when they bite him they will suddenly rise. And those who plot against you will become sober, and you will be booty for them.

8 For you have despoiled many nations, all the peoples that survive shall despoil you—on account of human bloodshed and impieties of the earth, of the city and of all who live in it.

9 "Ah he who gains an evil gain for his house, to set his nest on high, to be pulled out from the reach of evil ones!"

10 You have devised shame for your house; you have put an end to many peoples, and your soul has sinned.

11 For a stone shall cry out from a wall, and a beetle shall utter them from wood.

12 "Woe to him who builds a city by bloodshed and prepares a city with injustices!"

13 Are these not from the Lord Almighty? And enough peoples have expired in fire, and many nations have become faint-hearted.

14 Because the earth will be filled with knowing the glory of the Lord, like water it will cover them.

15 "Ah he who by turbid upset gives his neighbor to drink and intoxicates him in order to gaze on their caverns,"

16 Drink, you too, an abundance of dishonor from glory, and shake, and quake! A cup in the Lord's right hand has gone around to you, and dishonor has been gathered to your glory!

17 For the impiety of Lebanon will cover you, and the misery of wild animals will terrify you—on account of human bloodshed and impieties of the earth, of the city and of all who live in it.

What use is a carved image, because one carved it? He shaped it a molten image, a deceptive representation, because its shaper trusts in his shape, to make idols dumb!

Woe to him who says to the wood, “Be sober! Wake up!” and to the stone, “Be exalted!” And it is a representation, that is, a beaten-out piece of gold and silver, and there is no breath in it.

But the Lord is in his holy shrine; let all the earth do reverence before him!

A prayer of the prophet Habakkoum with a song.

O Lord, I have heard of your renown and feared; I considered your works and was astonished.

You will be known in the midst of two living creatures; you will be recognized when the years draw near; you will be displayed when the right time comes; you will remember mercy when my soul is troubled in wrath.

God will come out of Thaiman, and the Holy One from a shady, densely wooded mountain.

His virtue has covered heavens, and the earth is full of his praise.

And his brightness will be like light; horns are in his hands.
And he has established a strong love of his strength.

A report shall proceed before him, and he shall go forth, his feet in sandals.

He stopped, and the earth shook; he looked, and nations dissolved; the mountains were broken to pieces in violence; everlasting hills of his eternal passage melted.

I saw the encampments of the Ethiopians instead of troubles; they shall be terrified, even the tents of the land of Madiam.

Surely, you were not angry with rivers, O Lord? Or was your wrath against rivers, or your onslaught against a sea? Because you will mount your horses, and your cavalry is deliverance.

Stretching, you will stretch your bow; seven scepters, says the Lord.

A land of rivers will be torn asunder. Peoples will see you and writhe as you scatter the waters of a course. The deep gave forth its voice, the height of its representation.

The sun was raised up, and the moon stood still in its course. Your missiles will go into the light, into the brightness of the lightning of your weapons.

With a threat you will diminish the earth, and with wrath you will bring down nations.

You came forth for the salvation of your people, to save your anointed ones. You cast death on the heads of the lawless; you raised fetters up to the neck.

In a frenzy you cut through the heads of the mighty; they shall quake at this, They shall open their bridles like a poor man eating in secret.

And you caused your horses to go up into the sea, as they were stirring up much water.

I watched, and my belly was terrified by the sound of the prayer of my lips. And trembling entered into my bones, and my posture was stirred beneath me. I will rest on a day of affliction to go up to a people of my sojourning.

For a fig tree shall bear no fruit, and no produce shall be on the vines; the work of the olive will deceive, and the plains will yield no food; sheep have run out of food, and cows are not at the mangers.

But I will exult in the Lord; I will rejoice in God my savior.

The Lord God is my power, and he shall establish my feet unto the end. He causes me to mount the heights, to be victorious in his song.

The sky has covered the comeliness of his glory, and the world has been filled with his praise.

4 The splendor of light shall be his; horns from his hand belong to him. There the power of his glory has been fixed.

5 A fall shall go forward before him, and the greatest of winged creatures will follow at his feet.

6 Having taken his stand, he measured out the earth; having observed, he portrayed the nations. They were broken to pieces, and the mountains shall be shattered; the woodland vales of long ago shall be brought low; the ways which are from yore shall be changed; on account of him the world shall be shaken.

7 I have observed the tents of the Ethiopians; those who inhabit the leather coverings of Madiam shall be troubled.

8 Do not be angry with rivers, O Lord. Or is your wrath against rivers, or your anger against a sea? You mounted on your chariots; your cavalry, before which you advanced, is deliverance.

9 Your bow was awakened; you fattened the missiles of its quiver.

You will disperse rivers, and you will shake the earth.

10 When you look them in the face, the mountains will be stirred, when your violent rain storm passed through it. The abyss gave forth a great voice.

11 A light held back the brilliance of the sun, but the radiance of the moon stayed; according to the radiance of your missiles they shall go forth, according to the radiance of the lightning of your sword.

12 You shall be awakened against the earth with wrath; you shall thresh nations with anger.

13 You reappeared for the salvation of your people, to deliver your chosen;

you shot down the heads of arrogant people with arrows; they shall sink unto the depth of the sea.

14 You punished the leaders of the sinners with your power, who trusted in their stubbornness for the sake of devouring the poor in secret.

15 You caused your horses to go up on the seas; the violent waters of the deep were stirred up.

16 I was arrayed for battle, and my innards were unsettled by the voice of your mouth. Trembling sank into my bones; I was troubled within myself. You will guard these things in a day of affliction, to march against a nation making war on your people.

17 The fig tree shall not deliver its fruit, and there shall be no crop on the vines; the olive tree shall become extinct, and the earth shall not put forth vegetation; sheep shall fail from the fold, and cows shall not be at the mangers.

18 But I will exult in the Lord; I will rejoice in God my savior.

19 The Lord my God gave me strength, and he caused my feet to be secure. And upon the necks of my enemies he causes me to mount; having been swift, he rested.

SOPHONIAS

A word of the Lord that came to Sophonias the son of Chousi son of Godolias son of Amarias son of Hezekias in the days of King Iosias son of Amon of Ioudas.

2 With extinction, let it become extinct from the face of the earth, says the Lord.

3 Let humanity become extinct, and cattle; let the birds of the air become extinct, and the fish of the sea. And I will remove humans from the face of the earth, says the Lord.

4 And I will stretch out my hand against Ioudas and against all the inhabitants of Jerousalem, and I will remove from this place the names of the goddess Baal and the names of the priests

7 Show reverence before the Lord God! For the day of the Lord is near; because the Lord has prepared his sacrifice, he has consecrated his called ones.
And it shall be on the day of the Lord’s sacrifice that I will punish the rulers and the king’s house and all who dress themselves in foreign dress.
And on that day I will publicly punish all in the gateway, who fill the house of the Lord their God with impiety and fraud.
And it shall be on that day, says the Lord, there shall be a sound of clamor from the gate of men slaying and a moaning from the second and a loud crash from the hills.
Lament, you who inhabit the destroyed part, because all the people were made like Chanaan; all those buoyed by silver were utterly destroyed.
And it shall be on that day, I will search Jerusalem with a lamp, and I will punish the men who despise their ordinances, who say in their hearts, “The Lord will not do good, nor will he do harm.”
And their power shall become plunder, and their houses annihilation. And they will build houses and shall not inhabit them, and they will plant vineyards and shall not drink their wine.
For the great day of the Lord is near, near and very swift; the sound of the day of the Lord is bitter and harsh; it has been made powerful.
That day will be a day of wrath, a day of affliction and anguish, a day of untimely fate and annihilation, a day of darkness and gloom, a day of clouds and fog, a day of trumpet and shouting against the fortified cities and against the lofty corners.
And I will afflict people, and they shall walk like the blind, because they sinned against the Lord, and he shall pour out their blood like dust and their flesh like cow dung.
Neither their silver nor their gold will be able to deliver them in the day of the Lord’s wrath, and in the fire of his zeal the whole earth shall be consumed, for he will bring about a swift end upon all the inhabitants of the earth.

2 Gather together, and bind yourselves together, you uneducated nation, before you become like a transient flower, before there comes upon you the Lord’s anger, before there comes upon you the day of the Lord’s wrath.
Seek the Lord, all you humble of the earth; work judgment, and seek justice, and distinguish them, that you might be sheltered on the day of the Lord’s wrath.
For Gaza shall be plundered, and Ascalon shall become an annihilation, and Azotus shall be cast out at noon, and Akkaron shall be uprooted.
Woe, you that inhabit the strip of the sea, resident aliens of the Cretans! A word of the Lord is against you, O Chanaan, land of allophyles, and I will wipe you out of a dwelling place.
And Crete shall be a pasture for flocks and a fold for sheep. And the strip of the sea shall belong to the remnant of the house of Ioudas; they shall pasture upon them in the houses of Ascalon; in late afternoon they shall lodge before the sons of Ioudas, because the Lord, their God, has looked upon them and returned their captivity.
I heard the taunts of Moab and the revilings of the sons of Ammon with which they taunted my people and made boasts against my borders.
Therefore, I live, says the Lord God of Israel, Moab shall become like Sodoma, and the sons of Ammon like Gomorra, and Damascus shall be abandoned like a mound of salt, and it shall be annihilated forever. And the remnant of my people shall plunder them, and the remnant of my nation shall possess them.

10 She shall be theirs in return for their pride, for they scoffed and boasted against the Lord the Almighty.

11 The Lord will appear against them, and he will utterly destroy all the gods of the nations of the earth, and all the islands of the nations shall do obeisance to him, each in its place.

12 You also, O Ethiopians, are victims of my sword.

13 And he will stretch out his hand against the north and destroy the Assyrian, and he will make Nineue an annihilation, dry like a wilderness.

14 And flocks shall pasture in its midst, and all the wild animals of the earth. And chameleons and hedgehogs shall sleep in its compartments, and wild beasts shall cry in its burrows, ravens in its gates, for its rise is that of a cedar.

3 (2.15) This is the city, the one that despises, that dwells in hope, that says in its heart: “I am, and there is no one else after me.” How it has become an annihilation, a pasture for wild animals. Everyone who passes through it will hiss and wave his hands.

2(3.1) Ah, distinguished and ransomed, the city, the dove!

(2) It listened to no voice. It accepted no correction. It trusted not in the Lord and did not draw near to its God.

3 Its rulers within it are like roaring lions, its judges like wolves of Arabia; they left nothing until the morning. Its prophets are b puffs of wind b, scornful men; its priests profane the sacred things and desecrate law.

5 But the Lord within it is just and will do no injustice. Morning by morning, he will render his judgment and c no injustice unto victory c.

6 I pulled down the haughty with ruin; their corners were annihilated; I altogether laid waste their roads so that no one travels through; their cities failed, because no one existed or lived there.

7 I said, “But fear me, and accept correction, and you will not be destroyed before its eyes, in regard to all the things for which I punished it. Prepare yourself eagerly.” All their gleaning is corrupt.

8 Therefore, wait for me, says the Lord, for the day of my arising as a witness. For my judgment is for gatherings of nations, to welcome kings, to pour out upon them all the wrath of my anger; for in the fire of my zeal all the earth shall be consumed.

9 Because then I will change the tongue for peoples in its generation, that all might call upon the name of the Lord to be subject to him under one yoke.

10 From the ends of the rivers of Ethiopia they shall bring my offerings.

11 On that day you shall not be put to shame as a result of all your deeds by which you have acted impiously against me, because then I will remove from you the contempt of your pride, and you shall no longer add to boast against my holy mountain.

12 And I will leave in you a people meek and humble. And the remnant of Israel will beware of the name of the Lord.

13 And they will do no injustice nor speak vanity, nor shall a deceitful tongue be found in their mouth; for they will pasture and lie down, and no one shall make them afraid.

14 Rejoice, O daughter Sion! Proclaim, O daughter Jerusalein! Be glad, and be delighted with your whole heart, O daughter Jerusalein!

15 The Lord has taken away your injustices; he has redeemed you from the hand of your enemies. The king of Israel, the Lord, is in your midst; you shall see disaster no more.

16 At that time the Lord will say to Jerusalein: Courage, O Sion; do not let your hands grow weak.

17 The Lord your God is in you; a mighty one will save you;

1 In the second year of King Darius, in the sixth month, on the first of the month, a word of the Lord came by the hand of the prophet Haggai, saying, Speak to Zorobabel the son of Salathiel, from the tribe of Judah, and to the people, saying, 2This is what the Lord Almighty says, These people say, The time has not come to build the Lord’s house. 3And a word of the Lord came by the hand of the prophet Haggai, saying, 4Is it time for you to live in your paneled houses, but this house is in ruins? 5And now, this is what the Lord Almighty says, Focus now your hearts on your ways. 6You have sown much and taken in little; you have eaten, and not to satiety; you have drunk, and not to drunkenness; you have clothed yourselves and have not been warmed by them, and he who gathers wages gathered them for a purse with holes.

7 This is what the Lord Almighty says, Set your hearts on your ways. 8Go up to the mountain, and cut trees, and build the house, and I will take pleasure in it and be honored, said the Lord. 9You have looked for much, and little has come, and it was brought home, and I blew it away. Therefore this is what the Lord Almighty says, Because my house is defiled, and you entered the wine vat to draw fifty he will bring gladness to you and renew you in his affection, and he will be glad over you with delight as on a day of a feast.

And I will gather those who are shattered. 11And I will save her who has been thrust out and her who has been rejected; I will welcome and make them objects of boasting and renowned in all the earth.

And they will be ashamed in that time, when I do well with you and in the time when I accept you; for I will make you renowned and objects of boasting among all the peoples of the earth, when I return your captivity before you, says the Lord.

HAGGAIOS

12 And Zorobabel the son of Salathiel, from the tribe of Judah, and to the people, saying, 13And Haggai, the messenger of the Lord, said to the people, I am with you, says the Lord. 14And the Lord stirred up the spirit of Zorobabel son of Salathiel, from the tribe of Judah, and to the people, saying, 15Who is left among you that saw this house in its former glory? And how do you see it now? As though it does not exist before you? 16And now, be strong. O Zorobabel, says the Lord Almighty, and let all the people, saying, 17The silver is mine, and the gold is mine, the choice things of all the nations shall come, and I will fill this house with splendor, says the Lord Almighty. 18The silver is mine, and the gold is mine, says the Lord Almighty, and in this place I will give peace, and renown in all the earth.

19 Behold, I will act in you for your sake and the cause of your toils. And you used to hate those among you that saw this house in its former glory? And how do you see it now? As though it does not exist before you? 20And now, be strong. O Zorobabel, says the Lord Almighty, and let all the people, saying, 21The silver is mine, and the gold is mine, the choice things of all the nations shall come, and I will fill this house with splendor, says the Lord Almighty. 22The silver is mine, and the gold is mine, says the Lord Almighty. 23For this is what the Lord Almighty says, Once again I will shake the sky and the earth and the sea and the dry land, and I will shake all the nations, and the choice things of all the nations shall come, and I will fill this house with splendor, says the Lord Almighty. 24The silver is mine, and the gold is mine, says the Lord Almighty. 25For the last splendor of this house shall be great beyond the first, says the Lord Almighty, and in this place I will give peace, and renown in all the earth.

10 On the twenty-fourth of the ninth month of the second year of Darius, a word of the Lord came to the prophet Haggai, saying: 11This is what the Lord Almighty says: Ask the priests for a ruling, saying: 12If a person should take consecrated meat in the skirt of his garment and the skirt of his garment should touch bread or stew or wine or oil or any kind of food—whether it will become holy? And the priests answered and said, “No.” 13And Haggai said, “If one who is defiled by a soulb should touch any of these, will it become defiled?” And the priests answered and said, “It will become defiled.” 14And Haggai answered and said, So is this people, and so is this nation before me, says the Lord, and so are all the works of their hands, and whoever comes near there will be defiled on account of their earlier gains; they will suffer because of their toils. And you used to hate those who reproved in the gates. 15And now, do place it in your hearts from this day and beyond, before laying one stone upon another in the Lord’s shrine, 16who you were; when you threw twenty sata of barley into the grain bin and it became ten sata of barley, and you entered the wine vat to draw fifty measures and they became twenty. 17 I struck you with death and wind-damage, and all the works of your hands with hail, and you did not return to me, says the Lord. 18 Subject now your hearts from this day forward; from the twenty-fourth of the ninth month, even from the day when the Lord’s shrine was founded, place it in your hearts, 19 whether still there will be anything recognized on the threshing floor and whether still the vine and the fig and the pomegranate and the trees of the olive that fail to bear fruit will be recognized; from this day on I will bless you.

20 And a word of the Lord came a second time to the prophet Haggaios on the twenty-fourth of the month, saying: 21 Say to Zorobabel the son of Salathiel, from the tribe of Judah, saying, I am shaking the sky and the earth and the dry land, and I will overthrow thrones of kings and destroy power of kings of the nations and overthrow chariots and riders, and the horses and their riders will descend each one with a sword against his brother. 22 On that day, says the Lord Almighty, I will take you, O Zorobabel the son of Salathiel, my slave, says the Lord, and I will make you like a signet, for I have chosen you, says the Lord Almighty.

ZACHARIAS

1 In the eighth month of the second year of Darius, a word of the Lord came to the prophet Zacharias the son of Barachias son of Addo, saying: 2 The Lord was angry with great anger with your fathers. 3 And you will say to them, This is what the Lord Almighty says: Return to me, and I will return to you, says the Lord. 4 And do not be like your fathers, against whom the former prophets brought a charge, saying, “This is what the Lord Almighty says, Turn away from your evil ways and from your evil practices.” And they gave no heed to listen to me, says the Lord. 5 Your fathers, where are they? And the prophets, will they live forever? 6 But receive my words and my precepts, which I command my slaves the prophets through my spirit; did they not overtake your fathers? And they answered and said, “As the Lord Almighty arranged to do according to our ways and according to our practices, so he did to us.”

7 On the twenty-fourth of the eleventh month—this is the month Sabat—in the second year of Darius, a word of the Lord came to the prophet Zacharias the son of Barachias son of Addo, saying: 8 In the night I have seen, and behold, a man riding on a red horse! And this one stood among the shaded mountains, and behind him were red and gray and spotted and white horses. 9 And I said, “What are these things, lord?” And the angel who talked with me said to me, “I will show you what these are.” 10 And the man who stood among the mountains answered and said to me, “These are those whom the Lord has sent to patrol the earth.” 11 And they answered the angel of the Lord who stood among the mountains and said, “We have patrolled all the earth, and lo, the whole earth is settled and at rest.” 12 And the angel of the Lord answered and said, “O Lord Almighty, how long will you show no mercy toward Jerusalem and the cities of Judah, which you have neglected this seventieth year?” 13 And the Lord Almighty replied to the angel who talked with me with good words and comforting tidings. 14 And the angel who talked with me said to me, Cry out, saying: This is what the Lord Almighty says: I have been jealous with great jealousy for Jerusalem and for Sion. 15 And I am angry with great anger against the nations who joined together in an attack. Because I was angry in regard to a few things, but they joined together in attacking for evil.

16 Therefore, this is what the Lord says, I will return to Jerusalem with compassion, and my house shall be rebuilt in it, says the Lord Almighty, and a measure shall again be stretched out over Jerusalem. 17 And the angel who talked with me said to me, Cry out saying: This is what the Lord Almighty says: Cities shall again be flooded with good things, and the Lord will again show mercy to Sion and again choose Jerusalem.

18 And I lifted up my eyes and saw and beheld four horns. 19 And I said to the angel who talked with me, “What are these, lord?” And he said to me, “These are the horns that have scattered Judah and Israel.” 20 And the Lord showed me four craftsmen. 21 And I said, “What are these coming to do?” And he said to me, “These are the horns that scattered Judah, and they broke Israel in pieces, and none of them raised a head. And these came to sharpen them, the four horns into their hands, even the nations who raised their horns against the land of the Lord to scatter it.”

2 And I raised my eyes and saw, and behold, a man and a measuring line in his hand. 2 And I said to him, “Where are you going?” And he said to me, “To measure Jerusalem, to see how great is its width and how great is its length.” 3 And behold, the angel who talked with me stood still, and another angel came forward to meet him and said to him, saying, “Run, and speak to that young man, saying, Jerusalem shall be abundantly settled, because of a multitude of people and animals in it. 4 And I will be to it, says the Lord, a wall of fire round about, and I will become glory in its midst.”

6 Oh, oh, flee from the land of the north, says the Lord, for I will gather you from the four winds of the sky, says the Lord. 7 Return safe to Sion, you who inhabit daughter Babylon. 8 For this is what the Lord Almighty says: Behind glory he has sent me to the nations who despoiled you. For he who touches you is as one who touches the pupil of his eye. 9 For behold, I am bringing my hand against them, and they shall be booty to their own slaves. And you will know that the Lord Almighty has sent me. 10 Rejoice, and be glad, O daughter Sion. For
And he showed me the great priest Iesous standing before an angel of the Lord, and the slanderer stood at his right to oppose him. And the Lord said to the slanderer, “The Lord rebuke you, O slanderer! And the Lord who has chosen Jerusalem rebuke you! Behold, is not this like a brand plucked from the fire? 3 And lesous was dressed with filthy clothes, and he stood before the angel. 4 And he answered and said to those standing before him, saying, “Remove the filthy clothes from him.” And to him he said, “Behold, I have removed your lawlessness. And clothe him with a full-length robe, 5 and put a clean turban on his head.” And they put a clean turban on his head and clothed him with garments, and the angel of the Lord stood by.

6 And the angel of the Lord bore witness to lesous, saying: 7 This is what the Lord Almighty says: If you walk in my ways and keep my ordinances, then you shall judge my house. And if you carefully guard my court, then I will give you men to prosper before Zorobabel. 8 And he said to me, “If you walk in my ways and keep my ordinances, then you shall judge my house. And if you carefully guard my court, then I will give you men to prosper before Zorobabel.” 9 And he answered and said to me, “This is the curse that goes out over the face of the whole earth, for every thief will be punished until death from this and everyone who swears falsely will be punished until death from this. 4 And I will bring it out, says the Lord Almighty, and it shall enter into the house of the thief and into the house of anyone who swears falsely by my name, and it shall lodge in the midst of his house and consume it, both its timbers and its stones.”

5 And I turned and lifted my eyes and saw and beheld, a flying sickle. 2 And he said to me, “What do you see?” 3 And I said, “I see a flying sickle twenty cubits long and ten cubits wide.” 4 And he said to me, “This is the curse that goes out over the face of the whole earth, for every thief will be punished until death from this and everyone who swears falsely will be punished until death from this.” 5 And I will bring it out, says the Lord Almighty, and it shall enter into the house of the thief and into the house of anyone who swears falsely by my name, and it shall lodge in the midst of his house and consume it, both its timbers and its stones.”

6 And the angel who talked with me continued and wakened me as when a person is wakened from his sleep. 2 And he said to me, “What do you see?” 3 And I said, “I have seen, and behold, a lampstand all of gold and the torch on it, and there are seven lamps on it and seven pouring vessels for the lampstand on it. 4 And on it are two olive trees, one on the right of the torch and one on the left.” 5 And I inquired and said to the angel who talked with me, saying, “What are these, lord?” 6 And he answered and said to me, “Do you not know what these are?” And I said, “No, lord.” 7 And he answered and said to me, “This is the word of the Lord to Zorobabel, saying, Not by great power nor by strength, but by my spirit, says the Lord Almighty. 8 Who are you, You great mountain, to prosper before Zorobabel? And you will bring forth the stone of inheritance, equality of grace, grace for it.”

8 And a word of the Lord came to me, saying, 9 “The hands of Zorobabel laid the foundation of this house; his hands shall also complete it. And you will know that the Lord Almighty has sent me to you. 10 For who has despised the small days? And they shall rejoice and see the tin stone in the hand of Zorobabel.

““These seven are the eyes of the Lord that watch the whole earth.” 11 And I answered and said to him, “What are these two olive trees on the right of the lampstand and on the left?” 12 And I querie a second time and said to him, “What are the two branches of olive trees in the hands of the two gold nostrils that pour to and flow to the golden pouring vessels?” 13 And he said to me, “Do you not know what these are?” And I said, “No, lord.” And he said, “These two dsons of fattiness stand before the Lord of the whole earth.”

And he said, “Go, and patrol the earth.” And they patrolled the earth. 8 And he shouted and spoke to me, saying, “Behold, those who go toward the north country have caused my rage to rest in the north country.”

9 And a word of the Lord came to me saying: Take the things from the captivity—from the rulers and from its useful people and from those who are familiar with it—and you shall enter in that day into the house of losias son of Sophonias, who has come from Babylon. 10 And you shall take silver and gold and make crowns and set them on the head of the great priest lesou son of Iosedek, and you shall say to him: This is what the Lord Almighty says: Behold, a man, Shoota is his name, and he shall sprout from below him and shall build the house of the Lord. 11 And it is he that shall receive virtue and shall sit and rule on his throne. And the priest shall be on his right, and peace counsel shall be between the two of them.

12 And the crown shall be for those who endure and for its useful people and for those who are familiar with it. And it will become a credit for the son of Sophonias and music in the house of the Lord.

13 And those who are far off from them shall come and build in the house of the Lord, and you shall know that the Lord Almighty has sent me to you. And it will be if, listening, you shall listen to the voice of the Lord your God.

7 And in the fourth year of King Darius, a word of the Lord came to Zacharias on the fourth of the ninth month, which is Chaseleu. 2 And Sarasar and Arbeseeer the king and his men sent to Baithel to appease the Lord, 3 saying to the priests in the house of the Lord Almighty and to the prophets, saying, “Has the sanctity entered here in the fifth month, as I did already many years?” 4 And a word of the Lord came to me, saying: 5 Say to all the people of the land and the priests, saying: If you fast or lament on the fifth or seventh days—even behold for seventy years—you have not fasted a fast for me, have you? 6 And if you eat and if you drink, is it not you that eat and you that drink? 7 Are not these the words that the Lord spoke by the hands of the former prophets, when Ierousalem was inhabited and in prosperity and her cities round about and the hill country and the low-lying land were inhabited?

8 And a word of the Lord came to Zacharias, saying: 9 This is what the Lord Almighty says, saying: Render just judgment, and perform mercy and compassion, each one to his brother. 10 And do not oppress the widow and the orphan and the guest and the needy, and let not each one of you bear a grudge in your hearts against his brother for an evil deed. 11 And they refused to take notice and turned a senseless back and made their ears heavy so as not to listen. 12 And they made their heart disobedient so as not to heed my law and the words that the Lord Almighty sent by his spirit by the hands of the former prophets, and great wrath came from the Lord Almighty. 13 And it will be, just as he said, and they did not listen; so they will cry out, and I will not listen, says the Lord Almighty. 14 And I will cast them into all the nations that they did not know, and the land behind them will be annihilated of anyone going through and of returning. And they have consigned the choice land to desolation.

8 A word of the Lord Almighty came, saying: 2 This is what the Lord Almighty says: I have been jealous for Ierousalem and Sion with great jealousy, and I have been jealous for her with great wrath. 3 This is what the Lord says: And I will return to Sion, and I will tent in the midst of Ierousalem, and Ierousalem shall be called a city that is true, and the mountain of the Lord Almighty, a holy mountain. 4 This is what the Lord Almighty says: Old men and old women shall again sit in the streets of Ierousalem, each with his rod in his hand, because of the great number of days. 5 And the streets of the city shall be full of boys and girls playing in its streets. 6 This is what the Lord Almighty says: For if it will be impossible in the sight of the remnant of this people in those days, will it also be impossible in my sight, says the Lord Almighty? 7 This is what the Lord Almighty says: Behold I am saving my people from a land of the east and from a land of the west, 8 and I will bring them and make them tent in the midst of Ierousalem. And they shall become my people, and I will become a god to them, in truth and in justice.

9 This is what the Lord Almighty says: Let your hands be strong, you who hear in these days these words from the mouth of the prophets, since the day the house of the Lord Almighty was founded and since the shrine was built. 10 For before those days the wages of people will not be for enjoyment, and there are no wages for cattle, and there will not be peace from distress for the one who went out and the one who came in, and I will send away all people, each against his neighbor. 11 And now I do not deal with the remnant of this people as in the former days, says the Lord Almighty.

12 Rather, I will demonstrate peace; the vine shall yield its fruit, and the ground shall give its produce, and the sky shall give its dew, and I will cause the remnant of my people to possess all these things. 13 And it will be, just as you have been as a curse among the nations, O house of Ioudas and house of Israel, so I will save you, and you shall be as a blessing. Take courage, and be strong with your hands.

14 For this is what the Lord Almighty says: Just

---

a Or Dawn  b Or psalm
as I purposed to harm you, when your fathers provoked me to wrath, says the Lord Almighty, and I did not repent, 15so I stand prepared and have purposed in these days to do good to Jerusale-and to the house of Judas. Take courage. 16These are the matters that you shall do: Speak the truth each to his neighbor; render in your gates judgment that makes for peace, 17and do not devise evil in your hearts each against his neighbor, and do not love a false oath; for all these things I have hated, says the Lord Almighty.

And a word of the Lord Almighty came to me, saying: 19This is what the Lord Almighty says:
The fourth fast and the fifth fast and the seventh fast and the tenth fast shall become a joy for the house of Judas, and gladness and good feasts, and you shall be glad, and love truth and peace.

This is what the Lord Almighty says: Many peoples shall yet come, and inhabitants of many cities. 21And inhabitants of five cities shall come to-ger in one city, saying, “Let us go to entreat the face of the Lord and to seek the face of the Lord Almighty; I too will go.” 22And many peoples and many nations shall come to seek the face of the Lord Almighty in Jerusalem and to appease the face of the Lord. 23This is what the Lord Almighty says: In those days if ten men from all the languages of the nations take hold, then let them take hold of the hem of a Judan man, saying, “We shall go with you, for we have heard that God is with you.”

9 An issue of the Lord’s word.
His sacrifice is in the land of Sedrach and Damascus.
For the Lord oversees people, including all the tribes of Israel
2 and Hemath in its borders, Tyre and Sidon, for they were very clever.
3 And Tyre built itself fortresses and heaped up silver like dust and gold like the dirt of the streets.
4 Therefore the Lord will possess it and strike its power into the sea, and it shall be consumed by fire.
5 Ascalon shall see and be afraid,
Gaza too, and shall feel great agony, Akkaron also, because it was put to shame by its transgression.
And a king shall perish from Gaza,
and Ascalon shall be uninhabited, 6 and aliens shall settle in Azotus, and I will destroy the pride of the allophyles.
7 And I will remove their blood from their mouth
and their abominations from between their teeth.
And this one too shall be left for our God, and they shall be like an officer of a thousand in Judas,
and Akkaron shall be like the Jebusite.
8 And I will set up a structure for my house so that no one shall pass through or return,
and no longer will anyone come against them to drive them out,
for now I have seen with my own eyes.

9 Rejoice greatly, O daughter Sion!
Proclaim, O daughter Jerusalem!
Behold, your king comes to you,
just and salvific is he,
meek and riding on a beast of burden and a young foal.
And he will utterly destroy chariots from Ephraim
and cavalry from Jerusalem, and the battle bow shall be destroyed, and there shall be abundance and peace
from nations,
and he shall reign over the waters as far as the sea,
and the rivers at the exits of the earth.

You also, by the blood of the covenant, have sent forth your prisoners from the pit that has no water.
You shall sit in a stronghold, O prisoners of the gathering,
and in place of one day of your alien residence I will restore to you double.
For I stretched you tight, O Judas, a bow
for myself;
I filled Ephraim
and will raise up your children, O Sion, against the children of the Greeks, and I will stroke you like a warrior’s sword.
And the Lord shall be over them
and shall go forth like a lightning bolt, and the Lord Almighty will trumpet with the trumpet
and come with his menacing tempest.
The Lord Almighty will protect them, and they shall consume them and bury them with sling stones,
and they shall drink them empty like wine,
and fill the altar like saucers.
And on that day the Lord will save them,
his people like sheep,
for sacred stones roll on his land.
Because if anything of his is good and if anything of his is fair, there will be grain for young men and sweet-smelling wine for maidens.

10 Ask rain from the Lord
in the early and latter season.
The Lord has produced representations and will give to them winter rain, to each vegetation in the field.
For the speakers uttered troubling things,
and the diviners lying visions, and they were speaking false dreams and were consoling with vanities. Therefore they were removed like sheep and were mistreated, for there was no healing.

3 My anger was provoked against the shepherds, and I will have concern for the lambs, and the Lord God the Almighty will have concern for his flock, the house of Ioudas, and will make them like his comely horse in battle.

4 And from it\(^a\) he took perspective, and from it\(^b\) he drew up in battle order, and from it\(^c\) was a bow with fury; from it\(^d\) everyone who marches out will come together.

5 And they shall be like warriors trampling clay in the streets during battle, and they shall fight, for the Lord is with them, and riders on horses shall be put to shame.

6 And I will strengthen the house of Ioudas, and I will save the house of Ioseph. And I will settle them, because I have loved them, and they shall be as though I had not turned them away, for I am the Lord their God, and I will listen to them.

7 And they shall be like the warriors of Ephraim, and their heart shall rejoice as with wine. And their children shall see it and be glad; their heart shall rejoice in the Lord.

8 I will signal for them and receive them, for I shall redeem them, and they shall be as numerous as they were.

9 And I will sow them among peoples, and those far away shall remember me; they shall rear their children and return.

10 And I will bring them back from the land of Egypt and receive them from the Assyrians, and I will bring them to Galaaditis and to Lebanon, and not even one of them shall be left behind.

11 And they shall pass through a narrow sea, and they shall strike the waves in the sea, and all the depths of the rivers shall dry up. And all the pride of the Assyrians shall be taken away, and the scepter of Egypt shall be removed.

12 And I will make them strong in the Lord, their God, and they shall boast in his name, says the Lord.

11 Open your doors, O Lebanon, and let fire devour your cedars!

2 Let the pine wail, for the cedar has fallen, because nobles have greatly suffered misery.

Wail, oaks of Basanitis, because the thick forest has been torn down!

3 There is a sound of shepherds mourning, because their greatness has suffered misery!

There is a sound of lions roaring, because the pride of the Jordan has suffered misery.

4 This is what the Lord Almighty says: Tend the sheep of slaughter, \(^5\) which those who acquire were slaughtering and were not repenting, and those who sell them were saying, “Blessed be the Lord, and we have become rich,” and their own shepherds were suffering nothing for them. \(^6\) Therefore, I will no longer be sparing toward the inhabitants of the earth, says the Lord. And behold, I deliver people over, each one into the hands of his neighbor and into the hands of his king, and they shall devastate the earth, and I will not deliver from their hand.

7 And I will tend the sheep of slaughter in Chanaanitis. And I will take to myself two rods—the one I have called Beauty, and the other I have called Line—and I will tend the sheep. \(^8\) And in one month I will dispose of the three shepherds, and my soul will be heavy against them, for also their souls were howling against me. \(^9\) And I said, “I will not tend you. Whatever dies, let it die, and whatever fails, let it fail, and as for the things that are left—let them devour each one the flesh of his neighbor!” \(^10\) And I will take my beautiful rod and cast it away in order to scatter my covenant that I made with all the peoples. \(^11\) And it shall be scattered on that day, and the Chananites will know the sheep that are kept, for it is the Lord’s word. And I will say to them, “If it is good in your sight, give me my wages, or refuse.” And they set my wages at thirty pieces of silver. \(^12\) And the Lord said to me, “Place them in the smelter, and I will observe whether it is genuine, as I have been proven for them.” And I took the thirty pieces of silver and threw them into the house of the Lord, into the smelter. \(^13\) And I cast away the second rod, Line, to disband the tie between Ioudas and between Israel.

15 And the Lord said to me: Take to yourself once more shepherd implements of an inexperienced shepherd. \(^16\) For behold, I am raising up over the land a shepherd. He will not care for the abandoned or seek the scattered or heal the crushed or lead the whole, and he will devour the flesh of the chosen and twist their vertebrae.

17 Oh, you who tend to idle things, who desert the sheep! May the dagger be upon his arm and against his right eye!

\(^a\) I.e. flock
His arm withering shall wither;
his right eye blinded shall be blinded!

12 An issue of the Lord's word regarding Israel. The Lord, as he stretches out heaven and founds the earth and forms the human spirit within, says: 2 Behold, I set Jerusalem as shaking doorways for all the peoples round about, and in Judea there will be a siege against Jerusalem. 3 And it shall be on that day, I will make Jerusalem a trampled stone for all the nations; everyone who tramples it when mocking shall mock. And all the nations of the earth shall be gathered against it. 4 On that day, says the Lord, I will strike every horse with alarm and its rider with derangement—but on the house of Judah I will open my eyes—and all the horses of the peoples I will strike with blindness. 5 And the officers of thousands in Judah shall say in their hearts, "We shall find for ourselves the inhabitants of Jerusalem in the Lord Almighty, their God."

6 On that day I will make the officers of thousands of Judah like a firebrand in wood and like a torch of fire in stubble, and they shall devour all the peoples round about to the right and to the left, and Jerusalem shall again dwell by itself.

7 And the Lord will save the tents of Judah as from the beginning, that the boast of the house of David and the exaltation of the inhabitants of Jerusalem might not be exalted over Judah. 8 And it shall be on that day, the Lord will be a shield for the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and the weak one among them in that day will be like David, and the house of David will be like a divine house, like an angel of the Lord before them. 9 And it shall be on that day, I will seek to destroy all the nations that come against Jerusalem.

10 And I will pour out a spirit of grace and compassion on the house of David and on the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and they shall look to me because they have danced triumphantly, and they shall mourn for him with a mourning as for a loved one, and they shall be pained with pain as for a firstborn. 11 On that day the mourning in Jerusalem will be great like the mourning for a firstborn. 12 And the land shall mourn, tribes by tribes, the tribe of Judah by itself and their wives by themselves, the tribe of the house of Nathan by itself and their wives by themselves, the tribe of the house of David by itself and their wives by themselves, the tribe of the house of Leui by itself and their wives by themselves, the tribe of Zimri by itself and their wives by themselves, all the tribes that are left, a tribe by itself and their wives by themselves.

13 On that day every place will be opened for the house of David.

2 And it shall be on that day, says the Lord, I will utterly destroy the names of the idols from the land, and there shall be no more remembrance of them; also I will remove from the land the pseudo-prophets and the unclean spirit. 3 And it shall be, if a person should again prophesy, then his father and his mother who bore him will say to him, "You shall not live, for you have spoken lies in the name of the Lord," and his father and his mother who bore him shall bind his feet together when he prophesies. 4 And it shall be on that day, the prophets will be ashamed, each of his vision when he prophesies, and they will wear a hairy skin, because they lied. 5 And one will say, "I am no prophet, for I am a person who tills the soil, because such a person brought me up from my youth." 6 And I will say to him, "What are these blows between your hands?" And he will say, "Those with which I was beaten in my beloved house."

7 "Awake, O sword, against my shepherds and against his fellow citizen," says the Lord Almighty. Smite the shepherds, and remove the sheep, and I will bring my hand against the shepherds.

8 And it shall be in the whole land, says the Lord, two parts shall be utterly destroyed and perish, but the third shall be left in it.

9 And I will draw the third through the fire, and I shall test them by fire as silver is tested by fire, and I shall prove them as gold is proven. He will call on my name, and I will listen to him, and I will say, "This is my people," and he will say, "The Lord is my God."

14 Behold, days of the Lord are coming, and your spoils shall be divided in you. 2 And I will gather all the nations to Jerusalem for battle, and the city shall be taken, and the houses looted, and the women defiled, and half the city shall go into captivity, but the rest of my people shall not be utterly destroyed from the city. 3 And the Lord will go forth and draw up in battle order against those nations like a day of his marshaling in a day of battle. 4 And on that day his feet shall stand on the Mount of Olives, which is opposite Jerusalem on the east, and the mount of Olives shall be split, half of it to the east and half of it to the sea, an exceedingly great chasm, and half of the Mount shall incline northward and half of it southward. 5 And the valley of my mountains shall be blocked up, and the valley of the mountains shall be joined up to Jasil, and it shall be blocked up as it was blocked in the days of the earthquake in the days of King Oziias of Judah. And the Lord my God will come and all the holy ones with him.

6 On that day there shall be no light nor cold weather nor frost. 7 It shall be for one day—and that day is known to the Lord—and not a day and not a night, and at evening time there shall be light.

8 And on that day living water shall come forth from Jerusalem, half of it into the first sea and... half of it into the last sea; even in summer and spring it will be so.
9 And the Lord will become king over all the earth; on that day the Lord will be one and his name one.

10 One shall go around the whole land by way of the wilderness from Gabe unto Remmon south of Jerousalem. But Rama shall remain in place, from the Gate of Benjamin unto the place of the first gate, unto the gate of the corners and unto the tower Hananeel, unto the king’s wine vats. 11They shall inhabit it, and there shall be no more anathema, and Jerousalem shall dwell confidently.

16 And it will be that all who remain of all the nations that came against Jerousalem shall also go up year after year to do obeisance to the King, the Lord Almighty, and to keep the feast of tent pitching. 17And it shall be that all who do not go up from all the tribes of the earth to Jerousalem to do obeisance to the King, the Lord Almighty, these then shall be added to those. 18And if the tribe of Egypt should not go up or come, then on these shall be the calamity with which the Lord will strike all the nations, as many as will not go up to keep the feast of tent pitching. 19This shall be the sin of Egypt and the sin of all the nations, as many as shall not go up to keep the feast of tent pitching.

20 On that day, there shall be upon the bridle of the horse, “Holy to the Lord Almighty.” And the cauldrons in the house of the Lord shall be like the saucers in front of the altar, 21and every cauldron in Jerousalem and in loulas shall be holy to the Lord Almighty, and all those who sacrifice will come and take of them and boil in them. And the Chananite shall no longer be in the house of the Lord Almighty on that day.

MALACHIAS

1 An issue of the Lord’s word to Israel by the hand of his messenger. Do place it upon your hearts.

2 I loved you, says the Lord. And you said, “How did we love you?” Was not Esau Jakob’s brother? says the Lord. And I loved Jakob, but I hated Esau, and I made his mountains an annihilation and his heritage gifts of the wilderness. 4For Idumea will say, “It is destroyed. And let us return and rebuild the desolate places.” This is what the Lord Almighty says: They will build, and I will tear down. And they will be called borders of lawlessness and a people against whom the Lord is drawn up in battle forever. 5And your eyes shall see, and you shall say, “The Lord has been magnified beyond the borders of Israel.”

6 A son honors the father, and a slave his master. If then I am a father, where is my honor? And if I am a master, where is my respect? says the Lord Almighty to you, O priests, who despise my name. And you said, “How did we despise your name?” 7By bringing defiled loaves to my altar. And you said, “How did we defile them?” When you say, “The Lord’s table is despised, and the food laid on it is despised.” 8For if you bring something blind as a sacrifice, is that not wrong? And if you offer something lame or sickly, is that not wrong? Do bring it to your governor, if he will accept you or receive your face, says the Lord Almighty. 9And now, appease the face of your God, and entreat him. By your own hands these things have occurred. Will I receive the faces of any of you? says the Lord Almighty. 10For even among you the doors shall be shut, and you shall not kindle my altar in vain. I have no will among you, says the Lord Almighty, and I will not accept an offering from your hands. 11For from the rising of the sun to its setting my name is glorified among the nations, and in every place incense is brought to my name, and a pure offering, for my name is great among the nations, says the Lord Almighty. 12But you profane it when you say that the Lord’s table is defiled, and its food set forth is despised. 13And you said, “These are toilsome,” and you snorted at them, says the Lord Almighty. And you were carrying in what was taken by violence and what is lame and physically impaired. Even if you bring the offering, shall I accept them from your hands? says the Lord Almighty. 14And cursed is he who was able, and there was in his flock a male, and his vow is upon him, and he sacrifices to the Lord what is corrupted, for I am a great king, says the Lord Almighty, and my name is notable among the nations.

2 And now, O priests, this commandment is for you. 2If you will not listen and if you will not place it in your heart to give glory to my name, says the Lord Almighty, then I will send the curse on you, and I will curse your blessing; indeed I will curse it. And I will scatter your blessing, and it shall not be among you, because you do not place it in your heart. 3Behold, I separate the shoulder at you and will spread paunch a on your faces, paunch a for your feasts, and I will take you to the same place.

4 And you will know that I have sent this commandment to you, that my covenant might be with the Leuites, says the Lord Almighty. 5My cov-aTechnically also the fourth stomach of ruminants

enant of life and peace was with him. And I gave it to him that he fear me with fear and that he avoid the presence of my name. A law of truth was in his mouth, and no injustice was found on his lips. He walked uprightly with me in peace and turned many from injustice. Because the lips of a priest shall guard knowledge, and they shall seek law from his mouth, for he is a messenger of the Lord Almighty. But you have turned aside from the way, and you have caused many to fail by law; you have corrupted the covenant of Levi, says the Lord Almighty. And I rendered you despised and disregarded among all the nations, because you did not keep my ways but were accepting persons in law.

10 Did not one god create us? Is there not one father of us all? Why then did each of you forsake his brother, to profane the covenant of our fathers? Loudas was forsaken, and an abomination occurred in Israel and in Ierousalem, for Loudas profaned the sacred things of the Lord with which he loved and busied himself with foreign gods. The Lord will utterly destroy the person who does this until he has even been humiliated from the tents of Iakob and from among those who bring sacrifice to the Lord Almighty.

11 And now we call foreigners happy, and they are heavy, says the Lord. And you said, “How did we trip you up?” Because the tithes and the first fruits are still with you. And disregarding you disregard, and you are tripping me up—the nation has been made an end of. And you brought all the produce into the storehouses, and it shall be pillage in my house. Do observe by this, says the Lord Almighty, if I will not open to you the floodgates of the sky and pour out upon you my blessing until you are satisfied. And I will distinguish among you for food, and I will not destroy among you the fruit of the land, and the vine in the field will not fail you, says the Lord Almighty. And all the nations will call you happy, for you will be a wanted land, says the Lord Almighty.

12 You have made your words against me heavy, says the Lord. And you said, “How did we speak against you?” 14 You said, “The one who is subject to God is vain. And what more is there that we kept his ordinances and that we went as suppliants into the presence of the Lord Almighty? And now we call foreigners happy, and they are rebuilding while they do lawless things, and they withstood God and escaped.”

16 Those who fear the Lord spoke against these things, each to his neighbor. And the Lord took note and listened and wrote a book of remembrance before him for those who fear the Lord and reverence his name. And they shall be mine, says the Lord Almighty, in the day when I make them my acquisition, and I will choose them as a person who is subject to him. And you shall turn and discern between the just and between the lawless and between the one who is subject to God and the one who is not subject.

Behold, I am sending my messenger, and he will oversee the way before me, and the Lord whom you seek will suddenly come to the shrine. And the messenger of the covenant whom you want—behold, he is coming, says the Lord Almighty. And who will endure the day of his arrival, or who will withstand in his appearance? For he is coming like the fire of a smelter and like the lye of cleaners, and he will sit, smelting and purifying as it were silver and as it were gold, and he will purify the sons of Levi and pour them like gold and like silver, and they shall be bringing an offering to the Lord in justice. And an offering of Loudas and Ierousalem will be pleasing to the Lord as the days of old, even as the former years.

5 And I will draw near to you in judgment; I will be a swift witness against the sorceresses and against the adulteresses and against those who swear by my name falsely and against those who defraud the hired worker of his wages and those who oppress the widow and those who buffet orphans and those who turn aside justice from the guest and those who do not fear me, says the Lord Almighty.

6 For I am the Lord your God, and I have not changed. And you, O sons of Iakob, are not keeping a distance from the injustices of your fathers. You perverted my precepts and did not keep them. Return to me, and I will return to you, says the Lord Almighty. And you said, “How should we return?”

8 Will a person trip up God? For you are tripping me up! And you will say, “How have we tripped you up?” Because the tithes and the first fruits are still with you. And disregarding you disregard, and you are tripping me up—the nation has been made an end of. And you brought all the produce into the storehouses, and it shall be pillage in my house. Do observe by this, says the Lord Almighty, if I will not open to you the floodgates of the sky and pour out upon you my blessing until you are satisfied. And I will distinguish among you for food, and I will not destroy among you the fruit of the land, and the vine in the field will not fail you, says the Lord Almighty. And all the nations will call you happy, for you will be a wanted land, says the Lord Almighty.

3 Behold, I am sending my messenger, and he will oversee the way before me, and the Lord whom you seek will suddenly come to the shrine. And the messenger of the covenant whom you want—behold, he is coming, says the Lord Almighty. And who will endure the day of his arrival, or who will withstand in his appearance? For he is coming like the fire of a smelter and like the lye of cleaners, and he will sit, smelting and purifying as it were silver and as it were gold, and he will purify the sons of Levi and pour them like gold and like silver, and they shall be bringing an offering to the Lord in justice. And an offering of Loudas and Ierousalem will be pleasing to the Lord as the days of old, even as the former years.
ing is in its wings. And you shall go out and leap like calves let loose from tethers. 3 And you shall tread down the lawless, for they will be ashes under your feet, on the day when I act, says the Lord Almighty.

4(5) And behold I am sending to you Elias the Thesbite before the great and notable day of the Lord comes, 5(6) who will restore the heart of the father to the son and the heart of a person to his neighbor so that I will not come and utterly strike the land.

6(4) Remember the law of Moyses my slave, as I commanded him at Choreb with ordinances and statutes for all Israel.
Edition of the Greek Text

It is important to note that the earlier English translations of the LXX by Thomson and Brenton were based on editions of the Greek version that essentially reproduced the text of Codex Vaticanus. While this important manuscript preserves an excellent text for most books of the LXX, it is less trustworthy in the case of Esaias. (R. R. Ottley, for his translation, used Codex Alexandrinus, our best available witness for Esaias.) As a result, the reader will find a large number of textual differences between those earlier English translations and the present one, which is based on the full-fledged critical edition of J. Ziegler (Sextuaginta: Vetus Testamentum Graecum Auctoritate Academiae Scientiarum Gottingensis editum XIV: Isaias [Gottingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1967]).

Ziegler’s reconstructed text is very similar to that found in Rahlfs’ Septuaginta. If we set aside differences that do not show up in an English translation (primarily Greek orthographic variants), we find approximately ninety places where the two editions differ, and many of these variations are relatively minor. I have accepted Ziegler’s judgment in all but sixteen of these (10.7; 13.3; 14.27; 26.18; 28.2–3; 41.29[bis]; 42.4; 49.13; 50.3; 51.16; 54.5; 55.13; 56.5; 61.3; 63.12), some of which involve conjectural emendations that are reasonable, even brilliant, but not totally persuasive. In addition, there are two places where Rahlfs and Ziegler agree but where I have reluctantly gone my own way (9.1[8.23] and 53.11; in the latter passage I have accepted an old conjectural emendation).

Many readers of NETS will not have easy access to Ziegler’s edition. If they use the present translation in conjunction with Rahlfs’ text, it will often be unclear whether departures from the latter are only apparent (the result of a non-literal rendering) or substantial (the result of a textual variation). Since NETS includes textual notes only when it departs from the base text (Ziegler), it may be helpful to the reader to have a list of those verses where the present translation reflects a text different from Rahlfs’ edition. They are as follow: 2.20; 5.9; 5.29; 7.6; 8.18; 9.4(3); 10.1; 10.10[bis]; 10.22; 11.5; 12.2; 12.6[bis]; 13.3; 14.13; 15.2; 15.4; 16.3; 16.5; 17.5; 17.6; 18.7; 20.1; 21.13; 22.1; 23.13; 23.16; 25.5; 25.9; 28.15; 29.8; 30.14; 30.33; 33.18; 34.10; 36.19; 37.12; 37.13; 37.32; 37.38; 40.4; 40.25; 40.28; 41.23; 43.17; 44.16; 45.4; 45.9; 45.13; 46.11; 47.10; 48.5[bis]; 48.16; 49.6; 49.7; 49.15; 51.5; 53.2; 54.3; 54.8; 54.10; 54.17[bis]; 56.11; 58.11[bis]; 60.6; 61.4; 61.8; 65.11; 65.23; 66.8[bis]; 66.17[misprint].

Attempts to evaluate the Greek translation of Esaias in the past have typically failed to note the complexity of such a task. One can find numerous passages where the translator has failed to understand the Hebrew text and where his Greek appears to be solecistic and even unintelligible. It is therefore natural to infer that he lacked competence. The problem with this conclusion, however, is that it does not take into account the skill, knowledge and creativity that he displays in many other passages. Moreover, any generalizations about the translator’s technique run afoul of the startling variations in his approach.

Consider, for example, the first half dozen verses in chapter 43. It is apparent that the translator had no trouble whatever understanding the Hebrew text and that he was capable of representing the meaning of the original in simple, clear and faultless Greek. His approach here may be characterized as moderately literal, resulting in a certain quaintness of style that betrays its Semitic background. Admittedly, the Hebrew of this passage is not particularly difficult. Elsewhere, if the translator encounters a rare word, he seems to lose his bearings. In 28.20, the Hebrew appears to mean, “For the bed is [too] short for stretching, and the covering [too] narrow for gathering [i.e., wrapping] oneself.” Here the Hebrew words for “bed” (which appears nowhere else in the Bible) and “stretching” (which is rare) stumped the translator. Exercising his imagination, he came up with this, “We are in straits and unable to fight, and we ourselves are too weak to be mobilized.” We should remember, however, that even modern scholarship is less than confident about the meaning of numerous sentences in the Hebrew text of Isaiah.

In some of his renderings, the translator appears to be slavishly literal, but it is clear that, as a whole, he felt free to vary his vocabulary and restructure the syntax if it served his purposes. That sense of freedom allowed him at times to go off on tangents that have little connection with the Hebrew. Indeed, on occasions the meaning of his translation is patently contrary to that of the original (cf. the negative he introduces at 8.14, “you will not encounter him as a stumbling caused by a stone”). What may have been going on in his mind at those times is an intriguing question, but we would be wrong to infer that he was unconcerned about being faithful to the text. There can be no doubt that he struggled mightily to make sense of difficult passages, and that even when he seems to go beyond the text, he is sensitive to the thrust of the book as a whole and seeks to come up with teachings that are up-building (note that at the beginning of 8.14 the addition of the clause “if you trust in him” effectively links this verse with a recurring theme in the book).

All of this means that we cannot easily describe lexical and grammatical patterns in the translator’s handling of the Hebrew text. Some can certainly be identified, but the exceptions to those patterns are significant, and they prevent us from making many valid generalizations. As we might expect, he follows some of the lexical equations established by the Greek translators of the Pentateuch, such as διαθήκη in the sense of “covenant.” For Hebrew עֹזְזָה he normally uses Ἀιδης (“Hades”); but in 28.15, 18 we find θάνατος, “death.” There is no need to multiply examples. Beyond these more-or-less standard calques, the translator naturally comes up with a few equivalences of his own, but not in uniform fashion. With regard to syntax, while his tendency is to follow the simple structure of the Hebrew clauses, he does not hesitate to introduce variety and to exploit some of the resources of the Greek language; still, many of the niceties one routinely finds in original Greek composition are missing. Special note should be made of the translator’s fairly consistent representation of the Hebrew perfect tense (which can have various temporal references) with the Greek aorist (a simple past tense). Although the choice of the aorist is appropriate when the context clearly indicates a past action or a gnomic idea (e.g., 1.3, “The ox knew [=knows] its owner”), his overuse of this tense lends a distinct and odd quality to his translation.

The NETS Translation of Esaias
Given the Greek translator’s inconsistent approach (or so it appears to us), an English translation of his work faces special problems. The challenges are compounded by the need to follow the pattern of the NRSV. Numerous stylistic variations frequently used by the latter (as it renders the Hebrew text) introduce an additional and deeper level of inconsistency to the endeavor.

The user of NETS deserves to know that the present translation has gone through two distinct stages. The initial draft reflected a special effort not only to understand what the Greek translator meant (for which the sense of the Hebrew is an important piece of evidence), but also to communicate that meaning in fairly clear and natural English when possible (often the irregularities of the Greek called for less than fluent English). That first draft, in addition, sought to maximize the potential for NETS/NRSV synoptic study; in other words, it preserved NRSV renderings whenever these could be defended as reasonable representations of the Greek.

In the opinion of the editors, however, such an approach was inconsistent with the aim of NETS to represent not only what the Greek says but also how it is being said. For the sake of uniformity with the project as a whole, therefore, hundreds of changes were made that result in unclear or even unnatural English (e.g., “wept with weeping”). Moreover, the reader should be advised not to assume that a difference between NETS and NRSV reflects a difference between the Hebrew and the Greek.

Even in the first draft of this translation, NRSV renderings were changed in cases where the Hebrew is idiomatic but the Greek equivalence appears odd. In particular, note that the Greek translator fairly consistently translates the Hebrew יָוָשָׁע (“man”) with άνθρωπος, even in passages where such an equivalence is inappropriate, including instances when the Hebrew has a distributive meaning, “each.” The Greek translator is quite capable of rendering these uses idiomatically. For example, in 13.8, the Hebrew יָוָשָׁע נַבְרֵי (“a man to his neighbor”) is rendered έτέρος πρός τόν έτέρων (“one to another”). It seems advisable to render the Greek to English literally in cases where the Greek inappropriately renders the Hebrew literally. The reader of NETS will thus notice a large number of instances of the singular “man”; the unusual flavor of the resulting English corresponds to some extent with the peculiar quality of the Greek.

The strophic arrangement of the NRSV has been followed as much as possible to facilitate comparison, but it must not be thought that the Greek always has a corresponding poetic quality.

Bibliographical Note
I have profited greatly from R. R. Ottley, The Book of Isaiah according to the LXX (Codex Alexandrinus) (3 vols; London: Cambridge University Press, 1904–1906). The first volume contains an important intro-
A vision, which Esaias son of Amos saw—which he saw against Judea and against Jerusalem in the reign of Ozias and Ioatham and Achaz and Hezekias, who reigned over Judea.

Hear, O heaven, and give ear, O earth,
for the Lord has spoken:
I begat sons and exalted them,
but they rejected me.

The ox knows its owner,
and the donkey its master's crib,
but Israel has not known me,
and the people have not understood me.

Ah, sinful nation,
people full of sins,
evil offspring,
lawless sons,
you have forsaken the Lord and provoked to anger the Holy One of Israel!

Why should you be beaten anymore
as you continue in lawlessness?
Every head has become troubled,
and every heart has become sad.

From the feet to the head—whether a sore or a bruise or a festering wound—
there is no emollient to put on,
nor oil nor bandages.

Your country lies desolate;
your cities are burned with fire;
in your very presence foreigners devour your land,
and it has been made desolate, overthrown by foreign peoples.

Daughter Sion will be forsaken like a booth in a vineyard and like a garden-watcher's hut in a cucumber field,
like a besieged city.

And if the Lord Sabaoth had not left us offspring, we would have become like Sodoma and been made similar to Gomorra.

Hear the word of the Lord,
you rulers of Sodoma!
Pay attention to the law of God,
you people of Gomorra!

What to me is the multitude of your sacrifices?
says the Lord;
I am full of whole burnt offerings of rams, and I do not want the fat of lambs nor the blood of bulls and goats—not even if you come

You shall trample my court no more!
If you should offer fine flour, that would be futile;
incense is an abomination to me.
Your new moons and sabbaths and great day
I cannot endure. Fasting and holidays, as well as your new moons and your feasts,
my soul hates.
aYou have made me full;
I will no longer forgive your sins.

15 When you stretch out your hands to me,
I will turn away my eyes from you;
even if you make many petitions,
I will not listen to you,
for your hands are full of blood.

16 Wash yourselves; become clean; remove the evil deeds from your souls
before my eyes;
cease from your evil deeds;
learn to do good;
seek judgment;
rescue the one who is wronged;
defend the orphan,
and do justice to the widow.

18 So come, and let us argue it out,
says the Lord:
even though your sins are like crimson,
I will make them white like snow,
and though they are like scarlet,
I will make them white like wool.

19 And if you are willing and listen to me, you shall eat the good things of the
land,
but if you are not willing nor listen to me,
the dagger will devour you;
for the mouth of the Lord has spoken
these things.

21 How the faithful city Sion has become a whore!
She that was full of justice,
wherein righteousness lodged—but now murderers!

22 Your silver has no value;
your taverners mix the wine with water.

23 Your rulers are disobedient:
they are companions of thieves,
loving gifts,
running after a reward,
not defending orphans and not paying attention to the widows’ cause.

24 Therefore this is what the Sovereign, the Lord Sabaoth, says:
Ah, mighty ones of Israel!
For my wrath on my adversaries will not abate,
and I will exact judgment from my foes!

25 And I will turn my hand against you and will burn you to bring about purity.
But the disobedient I will destroy, and I will remove from you all the lawless
and humble all who are arrogant.

26 And I will set up your judges as at the former time
and your counselors as at the beginning.

And after these things you shall be called the city of righteousness,
the faithful mother city, Sion.

27 For her captivity shall be saved with judgment and with mercy.

28 But the lawless and the sinners shall be crushed together, and those who forsake the Lord shall be brought to an end.

29 For they shall be ashamed because of their idols,
which they themselves wanted,
and they were embarrassed because of their gardens,
which they desired.

30 For they shall be like a terebinth that has shed its leaves and like an orchard that has no water.

31 And their strength shall be like a stalk of flax,
and their works like sparks of fire, and the lawless and the sinners shall be burned together,
and there shall be no one to quench
them.

The word that came from the Lord to Esaias son of Amos concerning Judea and concerning Jerusalem.

2 For in the last days
the mountain of the Lord shall be manifest,
and the house of God shall be on the tops of the mountains and shall be raised above the hills, and all the nations shall come to it.

3 And many nations shall go and say,
"Come, let us go up to the mountain of the Lord
and to the house of the God of Israeł, and he will declare to us his way,
and we will walk in it."
For out of Sion shall go forth a law,
and a word of the Lord from Jerusalem.

4 And he shall judge between the nations and shall convict many people, and they shall beat their daggers into plows and their spears into pruning hooks, and no more shall nation take up dagger
against nation,
neither shall they learn to wage war any more.

5 And now, O house of Israeł, come, let us walk
by the light of the Lord!

6 For he has abandoned his people,
the house of Israel,
because their country, like that of the allophyles,

aOr You have become repugnant to me was filled with divinations as it had been at the beginning, and many allophyle children were born to them.

7 For their country was filled with silver and gold, and there was no number to their treasures, and the land was filled with horses, and there was no number to their chariots.

8 And the land was filled with abominations, the works of their hands, and they did obeisance to the things their own fingers had made.

9 And so a person bowed down, and a man was humbled—and I will not forgive them!

10 And now enter into the rocks, and hide in the earth from before the fear of the Lord and from the glory of his strength, when he rises to crush the earth.

11 For the eyes of the Lord are lofty, but man is lowly, and the loftiness of men shall be brought low, and the Lord alone will be exalted in that day.

12 For the day of the Lord Sabaoth will be against everyone who is insolent and haughty and against everyone who is lofty and high, and they shall be humbled, both against every cedar of Lebanon, of them that are lofty and high, and against every acorn tree of Basan, both against every mountain and against every lofty hill, both every lofty tower and against every lofty wall, both every ship of the sea and against every spectacle of beautiful ships.

13 And every person shall be humbled, and the loftiness of men shall fall, and the Lord alone will be exalted in that day.

14 They will hide all the works of their hands—

15 carrying them into the caves and into the clefts of the rocks and into the holes of the earth—from before the fear of the Lord and from the glory of his strength, when he rises to crush the earth.

16 On that day a man will throw away his silver and gold abominations, which they made to do obeisance to the vain ones and the bats,

21 to enter the holes of the solid rock and the clefts of the rocks, from before the fear of the Lord and from the glory of his strength, when he rises to crush the earth.

3 Behold now the Sovereign, the Lord Sabaoth, will take away from Judea and from Jerusalem a strong man and a strong woman, strength of bread and strength of water, a mighty one and strong one and soldier, both judge and prophet, and diviner and elder, both officer of fifty and wonderful counselor, both skillful builder and intelligent listener.

4 And I will set up youths as their rulers, and mockers shall be lords of them.

5 And the people will fall together, man against man, and a man against his neighbor; the child will stumble against the elder, the dishonored against the honorable.

6 Because a man will seize his brother or his father's kinsman, saying, "You have a cloak; you be our leader, and let my food be under you."

7 But he will answer and say on that day, "I will not be your leader, for in my house there is neither bread nor cloak; I will not be the leader of this people,"

8 because Jerusalem has been abandoned and Judea has fallen and their tongues are joined with lawlessness, being disobedient toward the things of the Lord; now therefore their glory has been brought low.

9 And the shame of their face has risen up against them; they have proclaimed their sin like that of Sodoma, and they have made it plain. Woe to their soul! Because they have given evil counsel against themselves, saying, "Let us bind the just, for he is a nuisance to us."

Therefore they shall eat the fruit of their works.

aI.e. the balanites aegyptiaca bOr their idols cOr will throw away to the vain ones and to the bats his silver and gold abominations, which they made to do obeisance to dOr giant eOr supplied by 11 Woe to the lawless one! Evil things will happen to him according to the works of his hands.

12 O my people, your executors strip you clean, and your creditors lord it over you. O my people, those who congratulate you mislead you and confuse the path of your feet.

13 But now the Lord will stand up to judge, and he will make his people stand to judge them.

14 The Lord himself will enter into judgment with the elders of the people and with their rulers. But you, why have you burned my vineyard, and why is the spoil of the poor in your houses?

15 Why do you wrong my people and shame the face of the poor?

16 This is what the Lord says: Because the daughters of Sion were lifted up and walked with an uplifted neck and with a wink of the eyes, all the while sweeping their tunics in the gait of their feet, all the while being playful with their feet; God will bring low the ruling daughters of Sion, and the Lord will expose their form in that day.

17 And the Lord will take away the glory of their attire and their adornments and the braids and the tassels and the crescents and the necklace and the adornment of their face and the armlets and the braiding and the bangles and the rings and the earrings and the garments trimmed with purple and the garments blended with purple and the housecoats and the transparent Lachonian fabrics and the garments of fine linen, both the blue ones and the scarlet ones, and the fine linen embroidered with gold and blue thread and the light flowing garments.

24 And instead of a pleasant scent there will be dust, and instead of a girdle you will gird yourself with a rope, and instead of a head adornment of gold you will have baldness because of your works, and instead of the tunic blended with purple you will gird yourself about with sackcloth.

25 And your most beautiful son, whom you love, shall fall by dagger, and your strong men shall fall by dagger

(26)and shall be brought low. And the cases for your adornment shall mourn, and you shall be left alone and shall be dashed to the ground.

4 Seven women shall take hold of one man, saying, “We will eat our own bread and wear our own clothes; just let your name be called upon us; take away our reproach.”

2 But on that day God will gloriously shine on the earth with counsel, to uplift and glorify what remains of Israel. And what is left behind in Sion and remains in Jerusalem will be called holy, all who have been recorded for life in Jerusalem, because the Lord will wash away the filth of the sons and daughters of Sion and will cleanse the blood from their midst by a spirit of judgment and a spirit of burning. Then he will come, and as for every site of Mount Sion and all that surrounds it, a cloud will overshadow it by day and will be like smoke and like a light of fire burning by night. With all glory will it be covered. And it will serve as a shade from the heat and as a shelter and a hideout from harshness and rain.

5 I will now sing for the beloved a song of the loved one concerning my vineyard: The beloved had a vineyard on a hill, on a fertile place.

2 And I put a hedge around it and fenced it in and planted a Soreche vine, and I built a tower in the midst of it and dug out a wine vat in it, and I waited for it to produce a cluster of grapes, but it produced thorns.

3 And now, man of Judas and those who dwell in Jerusalem, judge between me and my vineyard.

4 What more might I do for my vineyard, and I have not done for it? Because I waited for it to produce a cluster of grapes, but it produced thorns.

5 But now I will declare to you what I will do to my vineyard. I will remove its hedge, and it shall be plundered, and I will tear down its wall, and it shall be trampled down.

6 And I will abandon my vineyard, and it shall not be pruned or dug, and a thorn shall come up into it as into a wasteland, and I will also command the clouds, that they send no rain to it.

7 For the vineyard of the Lord Sabaoth is the house of Israel, and the man of loudas is a beloved young plant; I waited for him to produce justice, but he produced lawlessness—nor a did he produce righteousness, but a cry!

8 Ah, those who join house to house and bring field next to field so that they may take something from their neighbor! Will you dwell alone on the earth?

9 For these things were heard in the ears of the Lord Sabaoth; for if houses become many, large and beautiful ones shall be desolate, and there shall be no inhabitants.

10 For where ten yoke of oxen shall work, a that land a shall produce one jarful, and he who sows six bushels shall produce three measure b.

11 Ah, those who rise early and pursue the sikerac, who linger till evening, for wine will inflame them!

12 For with lyre and harp and drums and flutes do they drink the wine but do not regard the works of the Lord or consider the works of his hands!

13 Therefore my people have become captive, because they do not know the Lord; they have become a multitude of corpses, because of famine and thirst for water.

14 And Hades has enlarged its appetite and opened its mouth without ceasing; and her d glorious ones and her e rich and her d pestilent shall go down.

15 A person shall be brought low, and a man shall be dishonored, and the eyes that are high shall be brought low.

16 But the Lord Sabaoth shall be exalted in judgment, and the Holy God shall be glorified in righteousness.

17 Then those who have been plundered shall graze like bulls, and lambs shall feed on the wastelands of those who have been displaced.

18 Ah, those who draw sins as with a long rope and who draw acts of lawlessness as with a strap from a heifer’s yoke, who say, “Let him quickly bring near the things he will do, that we may see them, and let the plan of the Holy One of Israel come, that we may know it!”

20 Ah, those who call evil good and good evil, who make darkness light and light darkness, who make bitter sweet and sweet bitter!

21 Ah, those who are wise in themselves and knowledgeable in their own sight!

22 Ah, your strong ones who drink wine and the powerful ones who mix the sikerac,

23 who acquit the impious one for the sake of bribes and take away the right of the righteous one!

24 Therefore, as stubble will be burned by a coal of fire and burned up by a weakened flame, so their root will be like fine dust and their blossom go up like dust; for they did not want the law of the Lord Sabaoth but have provoked the oracle of the Holy One of Israel.

25 And the Lord Sabaoth was enraged with anger against his people, and he laid his hand on them and struck them; the mountains were provoked, and their carcasses became like dung in the middle of the road. In all these things his wrath has not turned away, but his hand is still high.

26 Therefore, he will raise a signal among the nations that are far away and whistle for them from the end of the earth. And behold, they are coming, quickly, swiftly!

27 They will not hunger nor grow weary nor slumber nor sleep, nor will they loosen their girdles from their waist, nor will the thongs of their sandals be broken;

28 their arrows are sharp, and their bows bent; their horses’ hoofs were reckoned as solid rock, the wheels of their chariots as a tempest.

29 They rush like lions but stand by like a lion’s whelp, and he will seize and roar like a beast, and he will cast them out, and there will be no one who can rescue.
And he will roar because of them on that day, like the sound of a surging sea. And they will look to the land, and behold, harsh darkness in their dismay.

And it happened in the year that King Ozias died that I saw the Lord sitting on a throne, lofty and raised up, and the house was full of his glory. And seraphim stood around him; the one had six wings and the one had six wings, and with two they covered their face, and with two they covered their feet, and with two they flew. And they cried out one to another and said:

"Holy, holy, holy is the Lord Sabaoth; the whole earth is full of his glory."

And the lintel was raised at the voice with which they cried out, and the house was filled with smoke. And I said: "O wretched that I am! I am stunned; for being a man and having unclean lips, I live among a people having unclean lips, and I have seen the King, the Lord Sabaoth, with my eyes!"

Then one of the seraphim was sent to me, and he had in his hand a live coal that he had taken from the altar with the tongs. And he touched my mouth and said: "Behold, this has touched your lips, and it will take away your lawlessness and purify your sins." Then I heard the voice of the Lord saying, "Whom should I send, and who will go to this people?" And I said, "Here am I; send me!"

And he said, "Go, and say to this people:

'You will listen by listening, but you will not understand, and looking you will look, but you will not perceive.'

For this people's heart has grown fat, and with their ears they have heard heavily, and they have shut their eyes so that they might not see with their eyes and hear with their ears and understand with their heart and turn—and I would heal them."

Then I said, "How long, O Lord?" And he said:

"Until cities become desolate, because they are not inhabited, and houses, because there are no people, and the land will be left desolate.

And after these things, God will send people far away, and those who have been left will be multiplied on the land.

And still a tenth part is on it, and it will be plundered again, like a terebinth or an acorn tree when it falls from its station."

And it happened in the days of Achaz son of Ioatham the son of Ozias, king of Ioudas, that King Raasson of Aram and King Phakee son of Romelias of Israel went up against Jerousalem to wage war against it but could not besiege it. And it was reported to the house of Dauid, saying, "Aram has made an agreement with Ephraim." And his soul and the soul of his people were agitated as when a tree in the forest is shaken by the wind.

Then the Lord said to Esaias, Go out to meet Achaz, you and the one who is left, your son Ia-soub, at the pool on the upper road to the Fuller's Field. And you will say to him, Take care to be quiet, and do not fear, nor let your soul be feeble because of these two logs of smoking firebrands, for when my fierce anger comes, I will heal again. And as for the son of Aram and the son of Romelias: Because they have plotted an evil counsel concerning you, saying, We will go up to Judea, and after talking with them, let us turn them toward us, and we will make the son of Ta-beel king over it; this is what the Lord Sabaoth says:

This counsel shall not remain, nor shall it come to pass.

But the head of Aram is Damascus, but yet within sixty-five years the kingdom of Ephraim will cease from being people.

And the head of Ephraim is Somoron, and the head of Somoron is the son of Romelias.

And if you do not believe, neither shall you understand.

And the Lord spoke further to Achaz, saying, Ask for yourself a sign of the Lord your God, in depth or in height. But Achaz said, I will not ask, nor will I put the Lord to the test. Then he said: "Hear now, O house of Dauid! Is it a small thing for you to provoke a fight with the Lord? How then do you provoke a fight with mortals? How then do you provoke a fight with the Lord? Therefore the Lord himself will give you a sign. Look, the virgin shall be with child and bear a son, and you shall name him Emmanuel. He shall eat butter and honey; before he knows or prefers evil things, he shall choose what is good. For before the child knows good or bad, he defies evil to choose what is good, and the land that you fear from before the two kings will be abandoned. But God will bring on you and on your people and on your ancestral house such days as have not yet come since the day that he took Ephraim away from Ioudas—the king of the Assyrians.

And it shall be on that day that the Lord will whistler for the flies that rule part of the river of Egypt and for the bee that is in the country of the Assyrians. And they will all come and rest in the land that you fear from being people.
great and drunken razor—which is beyond the river of the king of the Assyrians—the head and the hair of the feet, and he will cut off the beard.

21 And it shall be on that day that a person will nourish a young cow of the cattle and two sheep, 22and it shall be, because of the abundance of milk that they give, everyone that is left on the land will eat butter and honey.

23 And it shall be on that day that every place where there used to be a thousand vines, worth a thousand shekels, will become barren ground and thorn. 24With dart and arrow they will enter there, for all the land will be barren ground and thorn, 25and every hill being plowed will be plowed, and fear will not come there, for it will be turneda from the barren ground and thorn to a place where a sheep can feed and an ox can tread.

8 Then the Lord said to me, Take for yourself ba scroll of a new large oneb and write on it with a man’s pen, “In order to take plunder from the spoils quickly, for it is near,” 2and make reliable men my witnesses, Ourias and Zacharias son of Barachias. 3And I went to the prophetess, and she conceived and bore a son. Then the Lord said to me, Name him “Swiftly Spoil, Quickly Plunder”; 4for before the child knows how to call father or mother, it will receive the power of Damascus and the spoils of Samaria before the king of the Assyrians.

5 The Lord spoke to me yet further: 6Because this people does not want the water of Siloam that flows gently but want to have Raasson and the son of Romelias as king over you, 7therefore behold, the Lord is bringing up against you the mighty and abundant water of the River, the king of the Assyrians and his glory, and he will go up on your every wall, and every hill being plowed will be plowed, and fear will not come there, for it will be turneda from the barren ground and thorn to a place where a sheep can feed and an ox can tread.

9 (8.23) Do this first; do it quickly, O country of Zaboulon, the land of Nephthalim6, and the rest who inhabit the seashore and beyond the Jordan, Galilee of the nations, the parts of Judea. 2(1) O you people who walk in darkness, see a great light!

10 And whatever counsel you take, the Lord will scatter it, and whatever word you speak, it will not remain for you, because the Lord God is with us.

11 Thus says the Lord, With a strong hand do they reject the course of the way of this people, saying: 12Never say “Hard,” for whatever this people says is hard, but do not fear what it fears, neither be troubled. 13Sanctify the Lord himself, and he himself will be your fear. 14If you trust in him, he will become yourc holy precinct, and you will not encounter him as a stumbling caused by a stone nor as a fall caused by a rock, but the house of Lákon is in a trap, and those who sit in Ierousalem are in a pit. 15Therefore, many among them shall become powerless, and they shall fall and be crushed, and people who are in safety shall draw near and be taken.

16 Then shall become manifest those who seal up the law so that they might not learn. 17And one shall say, “I will wait for God, who has turned away his face from the house of Lákob, and I will trust in him. 18Here am I and the children whom God has given me, and they shall become signs and portents in Israel from the Lord Sábaoth, who dwells on Mount Sion.” 19And if people say to you, “Seek those who utter sounds from the earth and the ventriloquists, the babblers who utter sounds out of their bellies,” should not a nation be with its God? Why do they seek out the dead concerning the living? 20For he has given a law as a help so that they may not speak a word such as this one, concerning which there are no gifts to give. 21And a harsh famine will come upon you, and it shall be that when you become hungry, you will be distressed, and you will vilify your ruler and your patachra4. And they will look up to heaven above, 22and they will observe the earth below, but look: affliction and distress and darkness—dire straits and darkness so that they cannot see—(23) and the one who is in distress will not be perplexed for a time.

and he is named Messenger of Great Counsel, for I will bring peace upon the rulers,
peace and health to him.

His sovereignty is great,
and his peace has no boundary upon the throne of David and his kingdom, to make it prosperous and to uphold it with righteousness and with judgment from this time onward and forevermore.
The zeal of the Lord Sabaoth will do these things.

The Lord sent death against Jacob,
and it came on Israel,
and all the people of Ephraim will know it,
and those who sit in Samaria with pride and uplifted heart, saying:

“They bricks have fallen,
but come, let us hew stones and cut down sycamores and cedars and build ourselves a tower.”

And God will strike those who rise up against them on Mount Sion, and he will scatter their enemies,
Syria from the rising of the sun and the Greeks from the setting of the sun—
those who devour Israel with open mouth.
For all this his anger has not turned away,
but his hand is still uplifted.

And the people did not turn back until they were smitten, and they did not seek the Lord.
So the Lord took away from Israel head and tail, great and small in one day—
the elder and those who admire persons:
this is the first part,
and the prophet who teaches lawless things:
this one is the tail.

And those who congratulate this people will lead them astray,
and they lead them astray in order to devour them.
Therefore God will not rejoice over their young people,
nor will he have compassion on their orphans and widows;
for they are all lawless and evil,
and every mouth speaks injustices.
For all this his anger has not turned away,
but his hand is still uplifted.

And the transgression will burn like a fire,
and like dry grass will it be consumed by fire,
and it will burn in the thickets of the forest and devour everything around the hills.
Because of the fierce anger of the Lord,
the whole land has been burned up,
and the people will be completely burned as by fire.
A man will not have compassion on his brother but will turn aside to the right, because he will be hungry, and he will eat on the left,
but a man will not be satisfied
even if he eats the flesh of his arm.

For Manasse will eat Ephraim’s, and Ephraim Manasse’s, because together they will besiege Ioudas.
For all this his anger has not turned away,
but his hand is still uplifted.

Woe to those who write evil!
For when writing they write trouble, turning aside the cause of the poor, seizing the judgment of the needy among my people so that a widow may become their spoil and an orphan their plunder!
What will they do on the day of visitation?
For the affliction will come to you from far away.
And to whom will you flee for help,
and where will you leave your glory
so as not to fall into misery?
For all this his anger has not turned away,
but his hand is still uplifted.

Woe to the Assyrians!
The rod of my wrath and anger is in their hands!
I will send my anger against a lawless nation, and I will instruct my people to take spoils and plunder and to tread down the cities and turn them into dust.
But he himself did not plan thus,
nor has he reasoned thus in his soul,
but his mind will change,
even to destroy utterly nations not a few.
And if they say to him,
“You alone are ruler,”
then he will say,
“Did I not take the country above Babylon and Chalanne, where the tower was built?
And I took Arabia and Damascus and Samaria.
As I took these, I will also take all the countries.
Wail, you graven images in Jerusalem and in Samaria!
For as I did to Samaria and to the works of her hands, thus will I do also to Jerusalem and to her idols.”
12 And it shall be that when the Lord has finished doing all the things on Mount Sion and in Jerusalem, he will bring his wrath against the great mind, the ruler of the Assyrians, and against the loftiness of the glory of his eyes.

For he said: “By my strength I will do it, and by the wisdom of my understanding I will remove the boundaries of nations, and I will plunder their strength.

13 And I will shake inhabited cities and take with my hand the whole world like a nest and seize its inhabitants like eggs that have been forsaken, and there is none who will escape from me or contradict me.”

14 Shall an ax be glorified without the one who cuts with it or a saw be exalted without the one who pulls it? Just so would it be if someone were to lift a rod or a log. (16) But not so!

15 Rather, the Lord Sabaoth will send dishonor on your honor, and a burning fire will burn on your glory.

16 The light of Israel will become a fire, and it will sanctify him with a burning fire and devour the wood like grass.

17 On that day (18) the mountains and the hills and the woods will vanish, and it will consume them from the soul to the flesh, and the one who flees will be like the one who flees from a burning flame.

18 And those who are left from them will be a cipher, and a child will write them down.

20 And it shall be on that day that what remains of Israel will no more be added, and those of Jakob who have been saved will no more trust in those who have wronged them but will trust in God, the Holy One of Israel, in truth.

21 And what remains of Jakob will be to the mighty God.

22 And if the people of Israel become like the sand of the sea, the remnant will be saved, for he is completing and cutting short a reckoning with righteousness, because God will perform a shortened reckoning in the whole world.

24 Therefore this is what the Lord Sabaoth says: O my people, who live in Sion, do not be afraid of the Assyrians, because he will beat you with a rod, for I bring a stroke upon you so that you may see the way of Egypt. (For yet a little while and the anger will cease, but my wrath will be upon their counsel.

26 God will stir up evil against them, like the stroke of Madiam at the place of affliction, and his wrath will be by the way of the sea, on the way toward Egypt. And it shall be on that day that the fear of him will be taken away from you, and his yoke from your shoulder, and the yoke will be destroyed from off your shoulders.

28 For he will come to the city of Aggai and pass on to Magedo, and at Machmas he will lay down his baggage,

(29) and he will pass the ravine and come to Aggai; fear will grip Rama, the city of Saoul.

30 The daughter of Gallim will flee: Laisa will listen; Anathoth will listen. Madebena has retired—also the inhabitants of Gibbir. Encourage Sion today to remain in the way; O mount, as well as you hills that are in Jerusalem, with your hand encourage daughter Sion.

33 For behold, the Sovereign, the Lord Sabaoth, will mighty confound the glorious ones, and the lofty will be crushed in their insolence, and the lofty will be brought low.

34 And the lofty will fall by dagger, and Lebanon will fall with its lofty ones.

11 And a rod shall come out of the root of Jessai, and a blossom shall come up out of his root.

2 And the spirit of God shall rest on him, the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge and godliness.

3 The spirit of the fear of God will fill him.

He shall not judge on the basis of repute or convict on the basis of report, but he shall administer justice to a humble one and convict the humble ones of the earth, and he shall strike the earth with the word of his mouth, and with breath through his lips he shall do away with the impious.

5 He shall be girded with righteousness around the waist and bound with truth around the sides.

6 And the wolf shall graze with the lamb, and the leopard shall rest with the kid, and the calf and the bull and the lion shall graze together, and a little child shall lead them.

7 And the ox and the bear shall graze together, and their young shall be together, and together shall the lion and the ox eat husks.

aLacking in Gk  bGk = pl
And the young child shall put its hand over the hole of asps and on the lair of the offspring of asps.

And they will not hurt or be able to destroy anyone on my holy mountain, because the whole earth has been filled to know the Lord like much water to cover seas.

And there shall be on that day the root of lessai, even the one who stands up to rule nations; nations shall hope in him, and his rest shall be honor.

And it shall be on that day that the Lord will further display his hand to show zeal for the remnant that is left of the people, whatever is left from the Assyrians, and from Egypt and Babylonia and Ethiopia and from the Ailamites and from where the sun rises and out of Arabia.

And he will raise a signal for the nations and will gather the lost ones of Israel and gather the dispersed of loudas from the four points of the earth.

And the jealousy of Ephraim shall be taken away, and the enemies of loudas shall perish; Ephraim shall not be jealous of loudas, and loudas shall not afflict Ephraim.

But they shall fly away in ships of allophyles; together they shall plunder the sea and those from the rising of the sun and Idumea. And they shall first lay their hands on Moab, but the sons of Ammon shall obey first.

And the Lord will make the sea of Egypt desolate and will lay his hand upon the River with a violent wind and will strike seven gullies so that he may cross in sandals.

And there shall be a passage for what is left of my people in Egypt, and it shall be to Israel as the day when he came out of the land of Egypt.

And you will say in that day: I will bless you, O Lord, for you were angry with me, and you turned away your wrath, and you had compassion on me.

Behold, the Lord is my God, my savior; I will trust in him and will not be afraid, because the Lord is my glory and my praise, and he has become my salvation.

And with joy you will draw water out of the springs of salvation. And you will say in that day: Sing hymns to the Lord; call his name out loud; declare his glorious deeds among the nations; remember them, because his name has been exalted.

Sing hymns to the name of the Lord, for he has done exalted things; declare these things in all the earth.

Be glad, and rejoice, O you who dwell in Sion, because the Holy One of Israel has been exalted in your midst.

On a mountain in the plain raise a signal; raise up your voice to them; do not fear; encourage them with your hand; open, you rulers.

It is I who instruct, and I lead them; [they have been consecrated,] and it is I who summon them.

Mighty ones come to fulfill my wrath, at the same time rejoicing and reviling.

A voice of many nations on the mountains like that of many nations! A voice of kings and of nations gathered together! The Lord Sabaoth has commanded a heavily armed nation to come from a distant land, from the utmost foundation of heaven—the Lord and his armed men—to destroy the whole world.

Wail, for the day of the Lord is near and a destruction will come from God!

Therefore every hand will be weakened, and every human soul will be afraid, and the elders will be troubled, and pangs will seize them, as of a woman in labor. And they will bewail one to another and be amazed, and they will change their face like a flame.

For behold, the incurable day of the Lord comes, a day of wrath and anger, to make the whole world desolate and to destroy the sinners from it.

For the stars of heaven and Orion and all the ornament of heaven will not give light, and it will be dark when the sun rises, and the moon will not give its light.

And I will command evils for the whole world, and for the impious, their own sins;
I will destroy the pride of the lawless and bring low the pride of the arrogant.

And those that are left will be more valuable than unsmelted gold, and man will be more valuable than the stone from Souphir.

For heaven will be enraged, and the earth will be shaken out of its foundations,
because of the fierce anger of the Lord
Sabaoth
in the day when his wrath comes upon it.

And those that are left will be like a fleeing gazelle or like a wandering sheep, and there will be no one to gather them so that a man will turn to his own people and a man will run to his own land.

For whoever is caught will be defeated, and whoever are gathered together will fall by dagger.

And they will strike down their children
in front of them,
and they will plunder their houses
and take their wives.

See, I am stirring up the Medes against
you,
who do not take silver into account
nor have any need of gold.

They will crush the arrows of the young men,
and they will have no mercy on your children,
nor will their eyes be sparing upon the
children.

And Babylon, which is called glorious by the king of the Chaldeans, will be as when God overthrew Sodoma and Gomorra.

It will not be inhabited forever, nor will they enter it for many generations,
nor will Arabs pass through it,
nor will shepherds rest in it.

But wild animals will rest there,
and the houses will be filled with noise;
there sirens will rest,
and there demons will dance.

Donkey-centaursa will dwell there, and hedgehogs will build nests in their houses;
it is coming quickly
and will not delay.

And the Lord will have compassion on Iakob and will yet choose Israel, and they will rest on their own land,
and the giorasb will be added to them; indeed, he will be added to the house of Iakob. 2
And nations will take them and bring them into their place, and they will obtain an inheritance and will be multiplied on the land of God for male and female slaves, and those who
captured them will be captives,
and those who dominated them will be dominated.

And it shall be on that day that God will give you rest from your pain and wrath and your hard slavery with which you were subject to them. 4
And you will take up this lament against the king of Babylon, and you will say on that day:
How the exactor has ceased and the taskmaster has ceased!

God has crushed the yoke of sinners,
the yoke of rulers.

Having struck a nation in wrath
with an incurable blow, smiting a nation with a wrathful blow that spared no one,

(7)
he rested confidently.

The whole earth shouts with joy,
and the trees of Lebanon rejoiced over you,
even the cedar of Lebanon, sayingc, “Since you fell asleep,
the one who is to cut us down has not come up.”

Hades beneath was embittered on meeting you;
all the dmighty onesd who have ruled the
earth
rose up together against you—those who have roused from their thrones all the kings of the nations.

All will answer
and say to you:
“You too were taken even as we were,
and you were counted among us!”

But your glory has gone down to Hades—your abundant joy;
they will spread decay beneath you,
and a worm will be your covering.

How is fallen from heaven the Day Star, which used to rise early in
the morning!
He has been crushed into the earth who used to send lightc to all the nations!

You said in your mind,
“I will ascend to heaven;
I will set my throne
above the stars of God;
I will sit on a lofty mountain, upon the lofty mountains toward the north;
I will ascend above the clouds;
I will be like the Most High.”

But now you will descend into Hades and into the foundations of the earth.

Those who see you will marvel at you and say:
“Is this the man who troubles the earth, shaking kings?”

The one who made the whole world desolate

and overthrew the cities has not released those who are in misery.

All the kings of the nations have fallen asleep in honor,
a man in his own house,
but you will be cast out on the mountains,
like an abominable corpse, with many dead, those pierced with daggers,
who go down into Hades.
As a cloak stained with blood will not be clean,
so neither will you be clean,
because you have destroyed my land
and killed my people.

You will not remain forever,
you evil seed!

Prepare your children to be slaughtered for the sins of your father so that they will not rise and inherit the
earth
and fill the earth with wars.

And I will rise up against them, says the Lord Sabaoth, and will destroy their name and remnant and offspring. This is what the Lord says: 23 And I will make Babylonia desolate so that hedgehogs will dwell there, and it will become nothing, and I will make it a miry pit for destruction.

This is what the Lord Sabaoth says:
As I have said,
so shall it be,
and as I have planned,
so shall it remain:
to destroy the Assyrians from my land and
from my mountains,
and they shall be trampled, and their yoke shall be removed from
them,
and their renown shall be removed from their shoulders.

This is the plan that the Lord has planned against the whole earth, and this is the hand that is raised up against all the nations of the world.

For what b the holy Godb has planned,
who will scatter it?
And his hand that is raised up,
who will turn it back?

In the year that King Ahaz died this word came:
May you not rejoice, all you allophyles, for the yoke of him who struck you is broken,
for from the seed of snakes will come forth
the offspring of snakes, and their offspring will come forth as flying snakes.

And the poor will graze through him,
and poor men will rest in peace, but he will wipe out your offspring with famine,
and your remnant he will wipe out.

Wail, O city gates;
let the troubled cities cry out—all the allophyles!
Because smoke comes out of the north,
and there is no way to live.

What will the kings of the nations answer?
“The Lord has founded Sion, and the humble among the people will be saved through him.”

The word against Moabitis.
By night Moabitis will perish;
for by night the wall of Moabitis will perish.

Grieve for yourselves, for Lebedon will perish!
Where your altaris there, you will go up to weep:
wail over Nabau of Moabitis!
On every head will be baldness;
all arms will be cut in pieces.

In her highways gird yourselves with sackcloth, and smite yourselves;
on her housetops and in her streets
wail, all of you, with weeping!

Because Hesebon and Eleale have cried out, her voice is heard as far as lassa;
therefore the loins of Moabitis cry aloud;
she will know.

The heart of Moabitis cries aloud within her as far as Segor,
for she is a three-year-old heifer.
And on the ascent of Louith
they will go up to you weeping;
by the way of Haroniim she cries aloud, “Destruction and an earthquake!”

The water of Nemrim will be desolate,
and her grass will fail,
for there will be no green grass.

Even so, will she be saved?
For I will bring Arabs to the ravine,
and they will take her.

For the cry has reached the boundary of Moabitis of Agallim, and her wailing
as far as the well of Ailim.

And the water of Remmon will be filled with blood,
for I will bring Arabs upon Remmon, and I will remove the offspring of Moab and Ariel
and the remnant of Adama.

I will send as it were creeping animals on the land:
is Mount Sion a desolate rock?

aPossibly captivity  bGod Sabaoth = Zi  cGk uncertain  dGk = bômos
For you will be as a nestling taken away from a bird that is flying, O daughter of Moab!
And then, O Armon, take further counsel, and make for her a shelter for mourning for all time. They flee in darkness at noon; they were astonished; do not be taken away.

The fugitives of Moab will sojourn with you; they will be a shelter to you from before a pursuer, because your alliance has been taken away and the ruler who trampled on the land has perished.

Then a throne shall be restored with mercy, and he shall sit on it with truth in the tent of David, judging and seeking judgment and quickly procuring righteousness.

We have heard of the pride of Moab: exceedingly proud he is; you have removed his arrogance. Your divination is not thus;

Moab shall wail, for in Moabitis all shall wail. You will take care of those who dwell in Adeseth, and you will not be ashamed.

The plains of Hesebon will mourn, the vine of Sebama. As you swallow up the nations, trample down her vines as far as Lazer. You will not come together; you will not wander in the wilderness; those who were sent have been forsaken, for they crossed the wilderness.

Therefore I will weep as with the weeping of Lazer for the vine of Sebama. He has cut down your trees, O Hesebon and Eleale, because I will trample down your harvest and vintage, and all things will fall.

And joy and gladness will be taken away from your vineyards, and in your vineyards they will not rejoice, and they will not tread out wine in the vats, for the vintage has ceased.

Therefore my belly will resound like a lyre upon Moab, and my inward parts will be like a wall that you have made new. And it will be for your shame, because Moab has become weary at the altars, and she will enter the works of her hands in order to pray but will not be able to deliver him.

This was the word that the Lord spoke against Moab at the time he also spoke. But now I say, In three years of the years of a hired worker, the glory of Moab will be dishonored with all its great wealth, and it will be left very few in number and without honor.

The word against Damascus.

See, Damascus will be removed from among cities and will become a ruin, abandoned forever, to be a fold and resting place for flocks, and there will be no one to drive them away.

And no longer will it be strong enough for Ephraim to flee to it for refuge, and no longer will there be a kingdom in Damascus, and the rest of the Syrians will perish, for you are not better than the sons of Israel and their glory.

This is what the Lord Sabaoth says:

On that day there will be a failing of the glory of Jakob, and the riches of his glory will be shaken.

And it shall be as if someone were to gather the standing crop and reap the seed of the ears of grain, and it shall be as if someone were to gather an ear of grain in a firm ravine and as if a stalk should be left in it, or like berries of an olive tree—two or three on the topmost height, or four or five left on its branches.

This is what the Lord God of Israel says: On that day a man will trust in the One who made him, and his eyes will look to the Holy One of Israel, and they will not trust in the altars nor in the works of their hands, which their own fingers have made, and they will not look at their trees nor at their abominations.

On that day your cities will be abandoned, just as the Amorrites and the Hivites abandoned them before the sons of Israel, and they will be desolate.

Because you have abandoned God your savior and have not remembered the Lord your helper, therefore you will plant an unfaithful plant and an unfaithful seed.

But on the day that you plant them,
you will be led astray,
and if you sow in the morning,
it will blossom for harvest in whatever day you take possession of it, and like a man’s father
you will take possession of it for your sons.

Ah, the multitude of many nations!
Like a swelling sea, so will you be troubled,
and the backside of many nations will roar like water.

Many nations are like much water, as when much water violently rushes down.
And he will damn him and pursue him far
away,
like the dust of chaff when they winnow
before the wind and like a squall that drives a circling dust cloud.

Toward evening there will be lamentation;
before morning, and it will not be.
This is the portion of those who despoiled
you
and an inheritance for those who inherited you.

Ah, wings of a land of ships beyond the rivers of Ethiopia—he who sends hostages by sea and papyrus letters on the water!
For swift messengers will go to a high nation,
and a foreign and fierce people:
who is beyond it?
It is a nation
without hope and trampled down.

Now the rivers of the land will be all like an inhabited country; their country will be inhabited as if a signal were raised from a mountain—
like the sound of a trumpet will it be heard,
because thus the Lord said to me:
There will be safety in my city like the light of midday heat, and it will be like a cloud of dew
in the day of harvest.

Before the harvest, when the blossom has been completed and the unripe grape blossoms—a grape-bearing blossom—then he will take away the little clusters with pruning hooks
and take away the small branches and cut them off
and leave them together to the birds of heaven and to the beasts of the earth.
And the birds of heaven will be gathered over them,
and all the beasts of the earth will come upon him.

At that time gifts will be brought to the Lord Sabaoth from a people afflicted and plucked and from a great people henceforth and forever, a nation having hope and trodden down, which is in a part of a river of its land, to Mount Sion, the place where the name of the Lord Sabaoth is.

A vision concerning Egypt.
See, the Lord is sitting on a swift cloud and will come to Egypt, and the handiworks* of Egypt will be shaken at his presence, and their heart will be dismayed within
them.

And Egyptians will be stirred up against Egyptians,
and a man will war against his brother,
and a man against his neighbor, city against city and province against province,
and the spirit of the Egyptians will be troubled within them,
and I will scatter their counsel, and they will consult their gods and their images
and those who speak out of the earth and the ventriloquists, and I will deliver Egypt
into the hands of men, cruel lords, and cruel kings will lord it over them.

This is what the Lord Sabaoth says:
And the Egyptians will drink the water that is by the sea,
but the river will fail and be dried up,
and the rivers and the canals of the river will fail,
even in every marsh of reed and papyrus,
will be dried up.

And the green marsh grass,
all that is around the river and all that is sown by the river, will be dried up, blasted by the wind.

And the fishers will groan, and all who cast hooks into the river will groan,
and those who cast seines and those who are anglers will mourn.

And shame will take hold of those who work the split flax
and those who work the linen.

And those who weave them will be in pain,
and all who make beer will be grieved,
and they will afflict their souls.

*Or idols
11 And the rulers of Tanis will be fools;
as for the wise counselors of the king,
their counsel will become foolish.
How will you say to the king,
"We are sons of sages, sons of kings who were from the
beginning"?
12 Where now are your wise men?
And let them also declare to you and say what the Lord Sabaoth has planned against Egypt.
13 The rulers of Tanis have failed, and the rulers of Memphis have been exalted,
and they will lead Egypt astray

14 For the Lord has prepared for them
a spirit of error,
and they have led Egypt astray in all their
works,
as the drunkard and the one who vomits
are led astray together.
15 And there will not be a work for the Egyptians
that will make head or tail, beginning or end.

16 But on that day the Egyptians will be like women in fear and in trembling before the hand of the Lord Sabaoth, which he will lay on them.
17 And the land of the Judeans will become a terror to the Egyptians. As for everyone who should mention it to them—they will fear because of the plan that the Lord has planned against it.
18 On that day there will be five cities in Egypt speaking the Chananite language and swearing in the name of the Lord. The one city will be called Asedek City.
19 On that day there will be an altar to the Lord in the land of the Egyptians and a stele at its border.
And it will be a sign forever to the Lord in the country of Egypt, because they will cry to the Lord on account of those who oppress them, and the Lord will send them a man who will save them—judging he will save them. 21 And the Lord will be known to the Egyptians, and the Egyptians will know the Lord on that day and will offer sacrifices and make vows to the Lord and repay them. 22 And the Lord will strike the Egyptians with a great blow and heal them with healing, and they will return to the Lord, and he will listen to them and heal them.
23 On that day there will be a way from Egypt to the Assyrians, and the Assyrians will enter Egypt, and the Egyptians will go to the Assyrians, and the Egyptians will be subject to the Assyrians.
24 On that day Israel will be third among the Assyrians and among the Egyptians, blessed in the land 25 that the Lord Sabaoth has blessed, saying,
"Blessed be my people that are in Egypt and among the Assyrians, even Israel my heritage."

20 In the year that Tanathan entered Azotos, when he was sent by Sarnan, king of the Assys, and waged war against Azotos and took it—then the Lord spoke to Esaias, saying, "Go, and take off the sackcloth from your loins, and untie your sandals off your feet," and he did so,
walking naked and barefoot. 3And the Lord said,
"Just as my servant Esaias has walked naked and barefoot for three years, there will be signs and portents to the Egyptians and Ethiopians, because thus shall the king of the Assyrians lead away the captivity of Egypt and of the Ethiopians, young and old, naked and barefoot, uncovered—the shame of Egypt. 5 And the Egyptians, having been defeated, shall be ashamed because of the Ethiopis, in whom the Egyptians had trusted, for they were their glory. 6 And those who dwell in this island will say, 'See, we had trusted to flee to them for help, who could not be saved from the king of the Assyrians! And we, how shall we be saved?'"

21 The vision of the wilderness.
As a whirlwind might pass through a wilderness—
coming from a wilderness, from land—dreadful and harsh is the vision declared to
me;
+the betrayer betrays;
the lawless one acts lawlessly.
The Ailamites are upon me, and the envoys of the Persians are coming upon me.
Now I will groan and comfort myself.
Therefore my loins have been filled with weakness,
and pangs have seized me
like a woman in labor;
I did wrong not hearing;
I hasted not seeing.
My heart wanders, and lawlessness overwhelms me;
my soul has turned to fear.
Prepare the table;
drink; eat!
Rise up, rulers;
prepare shields!
Because thus the Lord said to me:
"Go, post a lookout for yourself, and announce whatever you see."
And I saw two riding horsemen, a rider on a donkey and a rider on a camel.
Listen with much listening, and call Ourias to the watchtower of the Lord.
And he said:
"I stood continually by day,
and over the camp I stood the whole night.
And look, he himself comes,
a rider of a pair of horses!"
Then he answered and said,
"Babylon has fallen,
and all her images and the works of her hands have been crushed to the ground."

Hear, you who have been left and you who are in pain;
hear the things I have heard from the Lord Sabaoth;
the God of Israel has announced them to us.

The vision concerning Idumea.
He calls to me from Seir,
"Guard the battlements!"
I guard them in the morning and at night.
If you would inquire, inquire, and dwell by me."

In the evening, you will lie down in the thicket, in the way of Dedan.
Bring water to meet the thirsty,
O you who dwell in the land of Thaiman;
meet with bread those who flee because of the multitude of those who flee and because of the multitude of those who wander and because of the multitude of the dagger and because of the multitude of the poised arrows and because of the multitude of those who have fallen in war.

For thus the Lord said to me: Yet a year, like the year of a hired worker—the glory of the sons of Kedar will fail, and the rest of the arrows of Kedar's strong sons will be few, because the Lord, the God of Israel, has spoken.

The vision concerning the ravine of Sion.
What has happened to you now that you have all gone up to useless house tops?
The city was filled with people shouting.
Your wounded were not wounded by dagger, nor were your dead men dead in battle.
All your rulers have fled, and those who were caught have been harshly bound, and those who are strong in you have fled far away.
Therefore I said:
Leave me alone; I will weep bitterly; do not prevail in comforting me for the ruin of the daughter of my race.
Because it is a day of trouble and destruction and trampling and there is wandering from the Lord Sabaoth in the ravine of Sion, from small to great they wander; they wander on the mountains.
Now the Ailamites took quivers—riding men on horses and a gathering for battle.
And your choicest ravines will be filled with chariots, and the cavalry will block your gates.
And they will uncover the gates of Ioudas and look on that day into the choicest houses of the city, and they will uncover the secrets of the houses of the citadel of David.

And they saw that there were rather many and that they had turned the water of the old pool into the city and that they had demolished the houses of Jerusaleam to fortify the wall for the city. And you produced water for yourselves between the two walls, further inward than the old pool. But you did not look to him who made it from the beginning, nor did you see him who created it.

And in that day the Lord Sabaoth called for weeping and lamentation and shaving and girding with sackcloth, but they engaged in joy and gladness, killing calves and slaughtering sheep in order to eat meat and drink wine, saying: "Let us eat and drink, for tomorrow we die."

And these things are revealed in the ears of the Lord Sabaoth, because this sin will not be forgiven you until you die.

This is what the Lord Sabaoth says: Go into the priestly chamber, to Somnas the treasurer, and say to him: Why are you here? What do you have here, that you have cut out a tomb here for yourself and made for yourself a tomb on the height and inscribed a tent for yourself in a rock?
Look now, the Lord Sabaoth will hurl away and wipe out a man, and he will take away your robe and your glorious crown and throw you into a great and immeasurable land; there you shall die. And he will make your fair chariot a disgrace and your ruler's house something trampled down, and you will be removed from your office and from your position.
And it shall be on that day that I will call my servant Eliakim the son of Chelkias and will clothe him with your robe and give him your crown, and I will give your power and office into his hands, and he shall be as a father to those who dwell in Jerusaleam and to those who dwell in Ioudas. And I will give him the glory of David, and he shall rule, and there shall be no one to con-

23 The vision of Tyre.

Wail, O ships of Carthage,
for she has perished,
and people no longer come from the land of the Kitieans:
she has been led captive.

To whom have become similar those who dwell in the island—the merchants of Phoenicia, crossing the sea on much water, an offspring of merchants? The merchants of the nations are as when a harvest is being gathered in.

”Be ashamed, O Sidon,” said the sea, and the strength of the sea said: ”I have not travailed nor given birth nor reared young men nor raised up virgins.”

But when it becomes heard in Egypt, anguish concerning Tyre will take hold of them.

Go away to Carthage—wail, O you who dwell in this island! Was this not your pride from the beginning, before she was handed over?

Who has planned these things against Tyre? Is she inferior? Or does she have no strength?

Her traders are glorious, rulers of the earth!

The Lord Sabaoth has planned to undo all the pride of the glorious ones and to dishonor every glorious thing on the earth.

Work your land, for indeed ships no longer come from Carthage.

But your hand, which irritated kings, is no longer strong by sea; the Lord Sabaoth commanded concerning Chanaan to destroy her strength.

And they will say: You will no longer continue to insult and do wrong to the daughter of Sidon; even if you go away to the Kitieans, not even there will you have rest.

13 And if you go to the land of the Chaldeans, this too has been made desolate by the Assyrians, because her wall has fallen.

14 Wail, O ships of Carthage, because your fortress has perished.

15 And it shall be on that day that Tyre will be abandoned for seventy years, like the time of a king, like the time of a man. And it shall be that after seventy years Tyre will be like the song about a prostitute:

Take a lyre; roam, you city, you forgotten prostitute! Play the lyre well; sing much, that you may be remembered.

17 And it shall be that after seventy years God will pay a visit to Tyre, and she will be restored again to her ancient condition and will be a market center for all the kingdoms of the world. 18 And her merchandise and her wages will be holy to the Lord; it will not be gathered for them, but all her merchandise will be for those who live in the presence of the Lord, to eat and drink and be filled, as a covenant, a memorial in the presence of the Lord.

24 Look, the Lord is ruining the world and will make it desolate, and he will uncover its surface and scatter those who dwell in it.

And the people shall be like the priest, and the servant like the master, and the maid like the mistress; the buyer shall be like the seller, and the lender like the borrower, and the creditor like the one to whom he owes.

The earth shall be ruined with ruin, and the earth shall be plundered with plundering, for the mouth of the Lord has spoken these things.

The earth mourned, and the world was ruined; the exalted ones of the earth mourned.

And the earth behaved lawlessly because of those who inhabit it, because they transgressed the law and changed the ordinances—an everlasting covenant.

Therefore a curse will devour the earth, because those who inhabit it have sinned; therefore those who dwell in the earth will be poor, and few people will be left.

The wine will mourn; the vine will mourn; all who rejoice in their soul will groan.

The joy of the drums has ceased; the stubbornness and wealth of the impious have ceased; the sound of the lyre has ceased.

Possibly depend on  bLacking in Gk  cPossibly for a contribution to be kept as remembrance
They felt shame, did not drink wine; the sikera\(^a\) became bitter to those who drank it.

Every city was made desolate; he will shut up the house so that no one can enter.

Wail everywhere for the wine; all the joy of the earth has ceased.

And cities will be left desolate; abandoned houses will perish.

All these things shall be on the earth, in the midst of the nations; just as when someone gleans an olive tree, so shall people glean them, even when the harvest has ceased.

These will cry aloud with their voice, but those who are left in the land will rejoice together in the glory of the Lord. The water of the sea will be troubled.

Therefore the glory to the Lord will be in the islands of the sea; the name of the Lord will be glorious.

O Lord God of Israel, from the wings of the earth we have heard wonders: Hope for the godly one.

But those who reject the law will say, Woe to those who reject!\(^b\)

Fear and pit and snare are upon you who dwell on the earth!

And it shall be that the one who flees from the fear shall fall into the pit, and the one who gets out of the pit shall be caught by the snare, because windows have been opened out of heaven, and the foundations of the earth will be shaken.

The earth will be troubled with trouble, and the earth will be perplexed with perplexity.

The earth has bent over, and it will be shaken like a garden-watcher’s hut, like the one who drinks too much and is intoxicated, and it will fall and will not be able to rise, for lawlessness has prevailed upon it.

And God will bring his hand against the ornament of heaven and against the kings of the earth.

And they will gather them together and shut them up in a fortress and in a prison; through many generations will be their visitation.

Then the brick will be dissolved, and the wall will fall, because the Lord will reign in Sion and in Jerusalem, and before the elders he will be glorified.

O Lord, my God, I will glorify you; I will sing hymns to your name, because you have done wonderful things—an ancient, true plan. May it be so, Lord!

Because you have made cities a heap, fortified cities, so their foundations might fall; the city of the impious will not be built forever.

Therefore the poor people will bless you, and cities of ill-treated persons will bless you.

For you have become a helper to every humble city and a shelter to those who are dispirited because of poverty; you will rescue them from evil persons—a shelter for the thirsty and breath for ill-treated persons, like faint-hearted persons thirsting in Sion, because of the impious, to whom you delivered us.

On this mountain the Lord Sabaoth will make a feast\(^c\) for all nations: they will drink joy; they will drink wine;

they will anoint themselves with perfume.

Deliver all these things to the nations on this mountain, for this counsel is against all the nations.

Death, having prevailed, swallowed them up, and God has again taken away every tear from every face; the disgrace of the people he has taken away from all the earth, for the mouth of the Lord has spoken.

And they will say on that day, Lo, our God, in whom we were hoping, and we were glad in our salvation, because God will give us rest on this mountain, and Moabititis shall be trodden down as they tread a threshing floor with wagons.

And he will send forth his hands, as he himself brought him low to destroy him, and he will bring low his pride—things on which he laid his hands.

And he will bring low the height of the refuge of your wall, and it will come down all the way to the ground.

26 On that day they will sing this song on the land of Ioudas, saying:
Look, a strong city,
and he will make our salvation its wall and outer wall.

2 Open the gates;
let a people enter that keeps righteousness and that keeps truth, that lays hold of truth
and that keeps peace, because in you have they hoped, O Lord, forever—the great, everlasting God, you who have humbled and brought down those who dwell in lofty places;
you will cast down strong cities and bring them down to the ground, and the feet of the gentle and humble will trample them.

3 The way of the godly has become straight;
the way of the godly has also been prepared, for the way of the Lord is judgment;
we have hoped in your name and in the remembrance that our soul desires.
In the night my spirit a rises early toward you, O God,
because your ordinances are a light upon the earth.
Learn righteousness, you who dwell on the earth;
for the impious one has come to an end; he will not learn righteousness on the earth;
he will not perform truth.
Let the ungodly one be taken away so that he may not see the glory of the Lord.

27 On that day God will bring his holy and great and strong dagger against the dragon, a fleeing snake—against the dragon, a crooked snake—and he will kill the dragon.

2 On that day:
A beautiful vineyard—a desire to begin singing about it.

3 I am a strong city, a besieged city;
in vain will I water it,
for it will be taken by night,
and by day the wall will fall.

4 There is not a city that has not taken hold of it;
who will set me to watch stubble in a field?
Because of this enmity I have set it aside.
Therefore because of this the Lord God has done all things, whatever he has ordained.
I have been burned up.

5 Those who dwell in it will cry out:
Let us make peace with him;
let us make peace!

6 Those who are coming are the children of Iakob;
Israel shall bud and blossom,
and the world will be filled with his fruit.

7 Will he be smitten even as he himself has struck?

--843--
And will he be killed even as he himself has killed?

8 Fighting and reviling, he will send them away.

Were you not the one who conspired with your harsh spirit to kill them with a spirit of wrath?

9 Because of this the lawlessness of Jakob will be removed.

And this is his blessing, when I remove his sin, when they make all the stones of the altars broken pieces like fine dust, and their trees will not remain, and their idols will be cut down like a forest far away.

10 The inhabited fold will be left deserted, like a forsaken fold, and it will be turned into a feeding place for a long time, and there they will rest.

11 Then after a time there will be nothing green in it, because it will have dried up.

You women who come from a spectacle, come here!

For it is not a people having understanding; therefore he that made them will not have compassion, nor will he that formed them have mercy.

12 And it shall be on that day that the Lord will fence them in from the channel of the river to Rhinocorura, but as for you, gather the sons of Israel one by one. 13 And it shall be on that day that they will trumpet with the great trumpet, and those who were lost in the country of the Assyrians and those who were lost in Egypt will come and do obeisance to the Lord on the holy mountain at Jerusalem.

28 Ah, the crown of pride, the hired workers of Ephraim, the flower that has fallen from its glory on the top of the stout mountain— those who are drunk without wine!

2 See, the wrath of the Lord is a strong and harsh thing, like hail rushing down where there is no shelter; violently rushing down like a great flood that sweeps a country, it will give rest to the land. With hands and feet the garland of pride will be trampled— the hired workers of Ephraim.

4 And the flower that has fallen from its glorious hope on the topmost of the lofty mountain will be like an early fig; the one who sees it will want to eat it up before he takes it into his hand.

5 In that day the Lord Sabaoth will be the garland of hope, which is woven of glory, to what is left of my people.

6 They will be left for a spirit of judgment— for judgment and strength in forbidding anyone to destroy.

7 For these have gone astray with wine; they went astray because of sikerae; the priest and the prophet lost their senses because of wine; they were shaken up as a result of the drunkenness of strong drink; they went astray; this is an omen.

8 A curse will devour this counsel, for this counsel is for the sake of greed.

9 To whom did we declare evil things, and to whom did we declare a message?

Those who are weaned from milk, those pulled away from the breast?

10 Expect affliction upon affliction, hope upon hope, yet a little, yet a little, because of contempt from lips, through a different tongue, because they will speak to this people, saying to them, “This is the rest for the hungry, and this is the destruction”; yet they would not hear.

11 And the oracle of the Lord God will be to them affliction upon affliction, hope upon hope, yet a little, yet a little, in order that they may go and fall backward, and they will be in danger and crushed and taken.

12 Therefore hear the word of the Lord, you afflicted men and rulers of this people that is in Jerusalem.

13 Because you have said, “We have made a covenant with Hades and agreements with death, if a rushing storm passes through, it will not come to us; we have made falsehood our hope, and in falsehood we will be sheltered”; therefore thus says the Lord, See, I will lay for the foundations of Sion a precious, choice stone, a highly valued cornerstone for its foundations, and the one who believes in him will not be put to shame.

14 And I will turn judgment into hope, and my mercy will become weight balances,
and as for you who trust vainly in falsehood, aI tell you\(^a\) that the tempest will not pass
you by,
lest it also take away your covenant of death.
And your hope regarding Hades will not remain;
if a rushing storm comes, you will be trampled down by it.
When it passes by, it will take you;
early, early in the day it will pass by, and at night it will be an evil hope;
learn to hear.
We are in straits and unable to fight, and we ourselves are too weak to be mobilized.
He will rise up as a mountain of impious ones, and he will be in the ravine of Gabaon; with wrath he will do his deeds—a deed of bitterness!
But his wrath will deal strangely, and his bitterness will be strange.
And as for you, may you not rejoice, nor let your bonds become strong, because I have heard from the Lord Sabaoth of deeds finished and cut short, which he will perform upon the whole land.
Give ear, and hear my voice; pay attention, and hear my words.
Will the plowman plow the whole day? Will he prepare the seed prior to working the land?
When he has leveled its surface, does he not then sow small dill\(^b\) and cumin and again sow wheat and barley and spelt in your borders?
And you will be instructed by the judgment of your God, and you will rejoice.
For the dill is not purified with harshness, nor will a cart wheel roll over the cumin, but the dill\(^b\) is shaken with a rod, and the cumin\(^28\) will be eaten with bread. For I will not be angry with you forever, nor will the voice of my bitterness trouble you.
And these wonders came forth from the Lord Sabaoth; take counsel; lift up a vain appeal.
Ah, city of Ariel, against which David waged war!

\(^a\) Lacking in Gk
\(^b\) Or black cumin

Gather crops year by year, for you will eat with Moab.
For I will greatly distress Ariel, and her strength and wealth shall be mine.
And like David I will surround you; I will lay ramparts around you and set up towers around you.
Then your words shall be brought low to the earth; to the earth shall your words sink; your voice shall be like those who utter sounds from the earth, and your voice shall be weak near the ground.
But the wealth of the impious shall be like dust from a wheel and like flying chaff. And it shall be like an instant, suddenly, from the Lord Sabaoth, for there shall be a visitation with thunder and earthquake and a great voice, a rushing storm and a devouring flame of fire.
And the wealth of all the nations— as many as marched against Ariel and all that went to war against Jerusalem and all who were gathered against her and were distressing her— shall be like one who dreams in his sleep.
And they shall be like those who hunger and eat in their sleep, and after rising, their dream is vain, and just as a thirsty person dreams that he is drinking and after rising is still thirsty and his soul has hoped for something vain, so shall the wealth of all the nations be, as many as have marched against Mount Zion.
Be faint and amazed; get a drunken headache— not from strong drink nor from wine!
Because the Lord has made you drink with a spirit of deep sleep; he will close their eyes and those of their prophets and of their rulers— the ones who see the hidden things.
And all these sayings shall become for you like the words of this sealed book. If they give it to a learned man, saying, \"Read these things,\" then he will say, \"I cannot read it, for it is sealed.\" 12 And this book will be given into the hands of an unlearned man, and one will say to him, \"Read this,\" and he will say, \"I am not learned.\"
The Lord said:
These people draw near me;
they honor me with their lips,
while their heart is far from me,
and in vain do they worship me,
teaching human precepts and teachings.

Therefore look, I will proceed to remove this people.
I will remove them and destroy the wisdom of the wise,
and the discernment of the discerning I will hide.

Ah, those who make plans deeply and not through the Lord!
Ah, those who make plans in secret,
and their works will be in darkness!
And they will say, “Who has seen us,
and who will know us or the things we do?”

Shall you not be regarded as the potter’s
clay?
Shall the thing formed say to the one who formed it,
“You did not form me,”
or the thing made to the one who made it,
“You made me with no understanding”?

Is it not yet a little while,
and Lebanon shall be changed like Mount Chermel, and Mount Chermel shall be regarded as a forest?

On that day the deaf shall hear the words of a scroll, and as for those who are in the darkness and those who are in the fog,
the eyes of the blind shall see.

And the poor shall be glad with joy because of the Lord,
and those despairing among people shall be filled with joy.

The lawless has failed,
and the arrogant has perished, and those who transgress wickedly have been utterly destroyed—
even those who cause people to sin in word.
And they will make all those who reprove in the gates a cause of stumbling, and they have turned aside the just among the unjust.

Therefore this is what the Lord says concerning the house of Jakob, which he set apart from Abraam:
Jakob shall not be ashamed now,
nor shall Israel now change his face.

But when their children see my works,b because of me they will sanctify my name;
they will sanctify the Holy One of Jakob and will fear the God of Israel.

And those who wander in spirit will know
understanding.

and those who grumble will learn to obey, [and the faltering tongues will learn to speak peace].

Oh, rebellious children, this is what the Lord says,
You made a plan not through me
and agreements not through my spirit, to add sins to sins—
those who walk to go down to Egypt
but did not ask me,
to be helped by Pharao
and to be sheltered by the Egyptians.

For the shelter of Pharao shall become a shame to you,c and to those who trust in Egypt, a reproach.

Because there are leaders in Tanis, evil messengers,
in vain shall they become weary with a people that shall not profit them—neither for help nor for profit
but for shame and reproach.

The vision of the quadrupeds in the wilderness.
In affliction and distress,
there are a lion and a lion’s whelp, thence also asps and the offspring of flying asps,
those who brought their wealth on donkeys and camels
to a nation that shall not profit them for help,
but for shame and reproach.

The Egyptians shall benefit you in vain and with emptiness;
announce to them,
“This consolation of yours is vain.”

Now therefore sit, and write these things on a tablet and in a book, because these things shall be for days of times
and even forever.

For they are a disobedient people,
faithless sons,
who were not willing to hear the law of God, who say to the prophets, “Do not declare to us”
and to those who see visions, “Do not speak to us,
but talk to us,
and declare to us another error,
and turn us back from this way; remove from us this path, and remove from us the Holy One of Israel.”

Therefore thus says the Lord, the Holy One of Israel:

a Or with what is unjust   b Or they see their children, my works   c Or Pharao shall be your shelter to your shame
Because you disobeyed these words and hoped in a lie and because you murmured and trusted in this word, therefore this sin shall be for you like a wall falling suddenly when a strong city is taken, whose fall comes suddenly, and its fall will be like the crushing of an earthen vessel, becoming small fragments of a jar so that you cannot find among them a sherd in which you can take up fire and in which you can skim off a little water.

Thus says the Lord, the Holy One of Israel: When you turn back and groan, then you shall be saved and realize where you were; when you placed your trust in vain things, your strength became vain. And you were not willing to hear but said, "We will flee upon horses"—therefore you shall flee! And you said, "We will be riders upon swift steeds"—therefore those who pursue you shall be swift!

Because of the voice of one, a thousand shall flee, and because of the voice of five, many shall flee, until you are left like a pole on a mountain, like someone bearing a standard on a hill.

And again God will wait to have compassion on you; therefore he will be exalted to show mercy to you, because the Lord our God is a judge, and where will you leave your glory? Happy are those who stay firm in him.

Because a holy people shall dwell in Sion, and Jerusalem wept with weeping, "Have mercy on me," he will have mercy on you for the voice of your cry; when he saw, he listened to you. And God will make the glory of his voice to be heard, and he will show the wrath of his arm with wrath and anger and a devouring flame; he will thunder violently, even like water and hailstones falling down with violence. The Assyrians will be defeated because of the voice of the Lord, through the stroke with which he will smite them. And this will happen to him on all sides, from where the hope of help in which he himself trusted came to him; they in turn will wage war against him with flutes and lyres, for you will be deceived before those days; was it also for you to reign that it was made ready with a deep trench, wood piled, fire and wood in abundance? The wrath of the Lord is like a ravine burning with brimstone.

Ah, those who go down to Egypt for help, who trust in horses and in chariots, for they are many, and in horses—a great multitude—but did not trust in the Holy One of Israel and did not seek God!

And he, being wise, brought evils upon them; his word will not be set to naught. And he will rise against the houses of evil men and against their vain hope—an Egyptian, a man and not God—

4 Because thus the Lord said to me, As a lion or a whelp might roar over the prey that he has taken and might cry out over it until the mountains are filled with his voice—and they were overcome, and were terrified at the greatness of his wrath—so the Lord Sabaoth will come down, to march against Mount Sion and against its mountains.

5 Like birds flying, so the Lord will shield Jerusalem; he will deliver and preserve and save it.

6 Turn, you who plan a deep and lawless plan, because on that day people shall disarm their handiworks of silver and gold, which their hands have made.

8 Then Assour shall fall; not a man’s dagger, nor a human dagger, shall devour him, and he shall not flee from before a dagger, but his young men shall be defeated; for they shall be encompassed by a rock, as with a rampart, and they shall be defeated, and the one who flees will be caught. This is what the Lord says: “Happy is the one who has a seed in Sion and kinsmen in Jerusalem.”

32 For see, a just king will reign, and rulers will rule with judgment. The man will be hiding his words and will be hidden as from rushing water, and he will appear in Sion like a rushing river, glorious in a thirsty land. Then no longer will they trust in men, but they will lend their ears to hear. The heart of the weak will apply itself to hear, and the stammering tongues will soon learn to speak peace. And they will no longer tell the fool to rule, and no longer will your servants say, “Be quiet.”

6 For the fool will speak folly, and his heart will devise vain things in order to accomplish lawless things and to speak error against the Lord, in order to scatter hungry souls and to make empty the souls that thirst. For the counsel of the evil ones will plan lawless things, to ruin the humble with unjust words and to scatter the words of the humble in judgment.

8 But the godly have planned intelligent things, and this counsel will remain.

9 Rise up, you wealthy women, and hear my voice; you daughters in hope, hear my words. Mention the days of a year in pain with hope; the vintage has been consumed; the sowing has ceased and will no longer come.

13 As for the land of my people, thorns and grass will come up, and joy will be removed from every house. A wealthy city, forsaken houses! They will give up a city’s wealth and desirable houses. And the villages will be caverns forever, the joy of wild donkeys, a feeding place of shepherds, until a spirit from on high comes upon you. And Cheremel will be a wilderness, and Cheremel will be regarded as a forest.

16 Then judgment will rest in the wilderness, and righteousness abide in Carmel. And the works of righteousness will be peace, and righteousness will hold on to rest, and they will be confident forever. His people will abide in a city of peace, dwell in confidence and rest with wealth. If hail descends, it will not come upon you. And those who dwell in the forests will be confident, like those in the plain. Happy are those who sow beside every water, where ox and donkey tread.

33 Woe to those who distress you! But no one makes you distressed, and the betrayer does not betray you; the betrayers will be caught and delivered up, and like a moth on a garment, so will they be defeated. O Lord, have mercy on us, for we trust in you.
The seed of the disobedient came to destruction, but our salvation came in a time of affliction.

3 Because of the voice of the fear of you, peoples were astonished for fear of you, and the nations scattered.

4 But now your spoils—of small and of great—will be gathered; as someone might gather grasshoppers, so will they mock you.

5 God who dwells in lofty places is holy; Sion is filled with judgment and righteousness.

6 By law they will be handed over. Our salvation is in treasures: wisdom and knowledge and piety toward the Lord are there; these are the treasures of righteousness.

7 See now! They themselves will be afraid with fear of you; those you feared will be afraid because of you, for messengers will be sent requesting peace, weeping bitterly, entreating for peace.

8 For the roads of these people will be made desolate; the fear of the nations has ceased, and their covenant with these is being put away, and you will not reckon them to be men.

9 The land mourned; Lebanon was ashamed; Saron became marshes; Galilee and Carmel will become visible.

10 “Now I will arise,” says the Lord, “now I will be glorified; now I will be exalted.

11 Now you will see; now you will perceive; the strength of your spirit will be vain; fire will consume you.

12 And the nations will be burned like a thorn cast out and burned in a field.”

13 Those who are far away will hear the things I have done; those who are near will know my might.

14 The lawless in Sion have gone away; trembling will seize the impious. Who will declare to you that a fire is burning?

Who will declare to you the everlasting place?

15 One walking in righteousness, speaking a straight way, hating lawlessness and unrighteousness and shaking off his hands from gifts, making his ears dull, lest he hear a judgment of blood, shutting his eyes, lest he see unrighteousness—this one will live in the high cave of a strong rock; bread will be given to him, and his water will be assured.

16 You will see a king with glory, and your eyes will see a land from far away.

18 Your soul will muse on fear: “Where are the scholars? Where are the counselors? Where is the one who counts those gathering together, a small and a great people?”

They took no counsel with him, nor did he know deep speech, so that a despised people could not hear, and there is no understanding to the one who hears.

20 Look, the city of Sion is our salvation! Your eyes will see Jerusalem, a wealthy city: tents that will not be shaken, nor will the stakes of its tent be moved forever, nor will its ropes be broken.

21 Because the name of the Lord is great to you, there will be a place for you—rivers and canals, broad and spacious. You shall not go this way, nor shall a ship go sailing.

22 For my God is great; the Lord will not pass me by. The Lord is our judge; the Lord is our ruler; the Lord is our king; he will save us.

23 Your ropes broke, because they were not strong. Your mast has bent; it will not release the sails; it will not raise a signal until it is given up for plunder; therefore many lame will take plunder.

24 And the people who live in them will not say, “I am weary,” for their sin has been forgiven.

34 Draw near, O nations, and hear, O rulers! Let the earth hear, and those in it, the world, and the people that are in it, because the wrath of the Lord is against all the nations and his anger against the whole number of them, to destroy them and to give them over for slaughter.

3 Their wounded and their dead shall be cast out,
and their stench shall rise;
the mountains shall be drenched with their blood.

4 Heaven shall roll up like a scroll, and all the stars shall fall like leaves from a vine and as leaves fall from a fig tree.

5 My dagger has become drunk in heaven;
lo, it will descend upon Idumea and upon the people of destruction with judgment.

6 The dagger of the Lord is filled with blood;
it is gorged with the fat of lambs and with the fat of goats and rams, because the Lord has a sacrifice in Bosor and a great slaughter in Idumea.

7 And the prominent ones shall fall with them,
both the rams and the bulls.
And the land shall become drunk with blood,
and it shall be filled with their fat.

8 For it is a day of the Lord’s judgment and a year of recompense for the judgment of Sion.

9 And her ravines shall be turned into pitch, and her land into sulfur;
hers land shall burn like pitch night and day,
and it shall not be quenched forever,
and its smoke shall go up above;
for generations it shall be made desolate;
indeed, for a long time it shall be made desolate.

10 But birds and hedgehogs and ibises and ravens shall live in it.
A measuring line of desolation shall be cast over it,
and donkey-centaurs shall dwell in it.

11 Her rulers shall not be,
for her kings and her rulers and her nobles shall be destroyed.

12 Thorn trees shall grow up in their cities and in her fortresses.
It shall be a habitation of sirens and a courtyard of ostriches.

13 Demons shall meet with donkey-centaurs and call one to another;
there donkey-centaurs shall repose,
for they have found for themselves a place to rest.

14 There has the hedgehog made a nest,
and the earth has preserved her young in safety;
there does meet
and saw each other’s faces.

16 They have passed by in number,
and not one of them has perished;
they did not seek each other,
because the Lord has commanded them
and his spirit has gathered them.

17 He will himself cast lots for them;
his hand has distributed food for them
to eat.
You will inherit the land forever;
for generations of generations they shall rest on it.

35 Rejoice, O thirsty wilderness!
Let the wilderness be glad,
and let it blossom like a lily!

2 And the deserted places of the Jordan shall blossom and be glad.
And the glory of Lebanon has been given to it,
as well as the honor of Carmel, and my people shall see the glory of the Lord and the loftiness of God.

3 Be strong, you weak hands and feeble knees!

4 Give comfort,
you who are faint of heart and mind!
Be strong; do not fear!
Look, our God is repaying judgment;
yes, he will repay;
he himself will come and save us.

5 Then the eyes of the blind shall be opened,
and the ears of the deaf shall hear;
6 then the lame shall leap like a deer,
and the tongue of stammerers shall be clear, because water has broken forth in the wilderness and a gully in a thirsty land;
7 the dry place shall turn into marshlands, and in the thirsty land there shall be a spring of water;
the joy of birds shall be there—a bed of reed and marshlands.

8 A pure way shall be there,
and it shall be called a holy way;
and the unclean shall not pass by there,
or shall be there an unclean way,
but those who have been dispersed shall walk on it,
and they shall not go astray.

9 And no lion shall be there, nor shall any of the evil beasts come up on it or be found there,
but the redeemed shall walk on it.
And those gathered together because of the Lord shall return and come to Sion with joy;

everlasting joy shall be above their head, for upon their head shall be praise and gladness, and joy shall take hold of them—pain and sorrow and sighing have fled away.

36 And it happened in the fourteenth year of the reign of Hezekias that Sennacherim, king of the Assyrians, came up against the strong cities of Judea and took them. 2The king of the Assyrians sent Rapsakes from Lachis to Ierousalem, to King Hezekias, with a great force. And he stood by the conduit of the upper pool in the way of the Fuller’s Field. 3And there went out to him Eliakim the son of Chelkias, the steward, and Somnas, the secretary, and loach the son of Asaph, the recorder.

4 And Rapsakes said to them, “Say to Hezekias: This is what the great king, the king of the Assyrians, says: Why are you trusting? 5Does marshalling take place through counsel or by words of the lips? And now in whom do you trust, that you are rebelling against me? 6See, you are trusting in Egypt, this broken reed-rod; whoever leans on it, it will go into his hand. Such is Pharao, king of Egypt, and all who trust in him. 7But if you say, ‘We trust in the Lord our God,’ come in contact now with my lord the king of the Assyrians. I will give you two thousand horses, if you will be able to set riders on them. 8How then are you able to turn back to the face of a one governor? Those who trust in Egypt for horse and rider are domestics. 9And now, is it without the Lord that we have come up against this country to war against it?”

11 Then Eliakim, Somnas and loach said to him, “Speak to your servants in Syrian, for we understand it; do not speak to us in Judean. And why do you speak to the ears of the people who are on the wall?” 12But Rapsakes said to them, “Has my lord sent me to speak these words to your lord or to you? Is it not to the people sitting on the wall so that they may eat dung and drink urine together with you?”

13 Then Rapsakes stood and called out in a loud voice in Judean and said, “Hear the words of the great king, the king of the Assyrians! 14This is what the king says: ‘Do not let Hezekias deceive you with words that will not be able to deliver you. 15Do not let Hezekias say to you, God will deliver you, and this city will not be given up into the hand of the king of the Assyrians.’ 16Do not listen to Hezekias. This is what the king of the Assyrians says: ‘If you wish to be blessed, come out to me; then everyone of you will eat from his own vine and fig trees and drink water from your own cistern, until I come and take you to a land like your land, a land of grain and wine and breads and vineyards. 18Do not let Hezekias deceive you by saying, Your God will deliver you. Have the gods of the nations delivered each one his own country out of the hand of the king of the Assyrians? 19Where is the god of Hemath and Arphad? And where is the god of the city of Seppharim? Have they been able to deliver Samaria out of my hand? 20Which of the gods of all these nations has delivered his land out of my hand, that God should deliver Ierousalem out of my hand?’ ”

21 But they were silent, and no one answered him a word, because the king had ordered that no one should answer. 22Then Eliakim the son of Chelkias, the steward, and Somnas, the secretary of the army, and loach the son of Asaph, the recorder, came to Hezekias with their tunics torn and reported to him the words of Rapsakes.

37 And it happened, when King Hezekias heard it, that he tore his clothes, put sackcloth about him and went up into the house of the Lord. 2And he sent Eliakim the steward and Somnas, the secretary, and the senior priests, with sackcloth about them, to the prophet Esaias son of Amos. 3They said to him, “This is what Hezekias says, Today is a day of affliction and of reproach and of rebuke and of anger, because the pangs have come to the woman giving birth, but she has no strength to give birth. 4May the Lord, your God, listen to the words of Rapsakes, which the king of the Assyrians has sent to revile the living God, yes, to revile with the words that the Lord, your God, has heard; therefore you will pray to the Lord your God concerning these that are left.”

5 And the servants of the king came to Esaias, and Esaias said to them, “Thus you will say to your lord, This is what the Lord says: Do not be afraid because of the words that you have heard, with which the ambassadors of the king of the Assyrians have reviled me. 6Look, I will put a spirit in the hearts of the Assyrians who are coming to Ierousalem; and they shall say to one another, ‘We have come to Ierousalem to the Lord our God.’

8 Rapsakes returned and found the king besieging Lomna. 9And the king of the Assyrians heard that Tharaka, king of the Ethiopians, had gone out to besiege him. When he heard it, he turned back and sent messengers to Hezekias, saying, 10“Thus shall you speak to King Hezekias of Judea: Do not let your God in whom you trust deceive you by saying, Ierousalem will not be given over into the hands of the king of the Assyrians. 11Or have you not heard the things that the kings of the Assyrians have done—how they have destroyed the whole earth? 12Have the gods of the nations delivered them whom my fathers destroyed, both Goza and Charran and Raphes, which are in the country of Thelsad? 13Where are the kings of Hemath and Arphad and of the city of Seppharim, of Hanag, of Ougaua?”

14 Hezekias received the letter from the messengers and opened it before the Lord. 15And Hezekias prayed to the Lord, saying: 16“O Lord Sabaoth, God of Israel, who sits upon the cheroubin, you alone are God of every kingdom of the world; you have made heaven and earth. 17Listen, O Lord; look, O Lord, and see the words that Sennacherim has sent to revile the living God. 18 For truly the kings of the Assyrians have made desolate the whole world and their country 19 and have hurled their idols into the fire, for they were no gods, but the works of human hands—wood and stone—and they destroyed them. 20 But you, O Lord, our God, save us from their hand so that every kingdom of the earth may know that you alone are God.”

21 Then Esaias son of Amos was sent to Hezekias and said to him: “This is what the Lord says, the God of Israel: I have heard the things you have prayed to me concerning King Sennacherim of the Assyrians. 22 This is the word that God has spoken concerning him:

Virgin daughter Sion has despised and mocked you;
daughter Jerousalem has shaken her head
at you.

23 Whom have you reviled and provoked?
Or against whom have you raised your voice?
And you did not lift your eyes on high
to the Holy One of Israel!
24 Because by your messengers you have reviled the Lord,
for you said, ‘With the multitude of my chariots
I have gone up to the height of the mountains
and to the utmost limits of Lebanon, and I cut down the height of its cedar and the beauty of its cypress, and I entered into the height of its forest region, 25 and I built a bridge∗ and desolated the waters and every gathering of water.’

26 Have you not heard long ago of these things that I have done?
From ancient days I ordained them,
but now I have exhibited them, to make desolate the nations that are in strong places
and those who dwell in strong cities.
27 I weakened their hands,
and they have withered,
and they have become like dry grass on housetops
and like wild grass.

28 But now I know your resting place, your going out and coming in.
29 And your wrath with which you have raged and your bitterness have come up to me;
so I will put a muzzle on your nose
and a bit on your lips;
I will turn you back on the way
by which you came.

30 “And this shall be the sign for you: This year eat what you have sown, and in the second year what is left; then in the third year sow, reap, and plant vineyards, and eat their fruit. 31 And those that are left in Judea shall take root downward and bear seed upward, 32 because from Jerousalem shall be those who are left, and from Mount Sion those who are saved. The zeal of the Lord Sabaoth will do these things.

33 “Therefore thus says the Lord concerning the king of the Assyrians: He shall not come into this city nor cast a missile against it nor bring a shield against it nor set up a rampart around it.
34 But by the way that he came, by the same he shall return. This is what the Lord says: 35 I will shield this city to save it, for my own sake and for the sake of my servant Davuid.’

36 Then the angel of the Lord set out and destroyed one hundred eighty-five thousand out of the camp of the Assyrians; when they arose in the early morning, they found all the dead bodies.
37 Then the king of the Assyrians turned back, departed and lived at Nineue. 38 And as he was doing obeisance to his patachron in the house of Nasarach, his sons Adramelech and Sarasar smote him with daggers, but they escaped into Armenia.
His son Asoradan reigned in his stead.

38 Now it happened at that time that Hezekias became sick to the point of death. And the prophet Esaias son of Amos came to him and said to him, “This is what the Lord says: Make arrangements concerning your house, for you shall die; you shall not live.” 2 Then Hezekias turned his face to the wall and prayed to the Lord: 3 “Remember, O Lord, how I have walked before you with truth, with a true heart, and have done the things that are pleasing in your sight.”

4 Then the word of the Lord came to Esaias, saying: 5 “Go, and say to Hezekias, This is what the Lord, the God of your ancestor Davuid, says: I have heard the voice of your prayer and have seen your tears; look, I am adding fifteen years to your time.
6 And I will save you out of the hand of the king of the Assyrians and shield this city.
7 “This is the sign to you from the Lord, that God will do this thing: 8 The shadow of the steps on which the sun has gone down—the ten steps of the house of your father—I will turn back the sun those ten steps.” So the sun went up the ten steps on which the shadow had gone down.

9 Prayer of King Hezekias of Judea, when he had become sick and had recovered from his sickness:
10 I said: At the height of my days, in the gates of Hades,
I shall leave behind my remaining years.
11 I said, No longer shall I see the salvation of God on the earth;
no longer shall I see a man

∗Or dam ∗Aram = idol from my kindred.
I have left behind the rest of my life;
it has gone out and departed from me like the one who having pitched a tent takes it down;
my spirit in me became like the web
of a weaver who approaches to cut it off.
In that day I was given over as to a lion until morning;
thus he broke my bones,
for I was given over from day to night.
Like a swallow, so will I cry out,
and like a dove, so will I mutter;
for my eyes have failed from looking to the height of heaven, toward the Lord, who rescued me
and took away 15 the pain of my soul.
Lord, you were indeed told concerning it,
and you revived my breath,
and I, comforted, came to life!
For you have chosen my soul
so that it may not perish, and you have cast all my sins behind me.
For those who are in Hades will not praise
you,
nor will the dead bless you,
nor will those who are in Hades hope for your mercy.
The living will praise you,
as I also do,
for from today I will produce children who will declare your righteousness,
o Lord of my salvation.
And I will not cease praising you with a harp
all the days of my life,
before the house of the Lord.
And Esaias said to Hezekias, “Take a cake of figs, and mash it, and apply it as plaster, and you will be well.”
At that time Marodach son of Laadan, the king of Babylonia, sent letters and ambassadors and presents to Hezekias, for he heard that he had been sick to the point of death and had recovered.
A voice of one crying out in the wilderness:
“Prepare the way of the Lord;
make straight the paths of our God.
Every ravine shall be filled up,
and every mountain and hill be made
low,
and all the crooked ways shall become straight,
and the rough place shall become plains.
Then the glory of the Lord shall appear,
and all flesh shall see the salvation of God,
because the Lord has spoken.”
A voice of one saying, “Cry out!”
And I said, “What shall I cry?”
All flesh is grass;
all the glory of man is like the flower of grass.
The grass has withered, and the flower has fallen,
but the word of our God remains forever.
Go up on a high mountain,
you who bring good tidings to Sion;
lift up your voice with strength,
you who bring good tidings to Jerusalem;
lift it up; do not fear;
say to the cities of Ioudas,
“See, your God!”
See, the Lord comes with strength,
and his arm with authority;
see, his reward is with him,
and his work before him.
What have they seen in your house?” And Hezekias said, “They have seen all the things that are in my house—and there is nothing in my house that they have not seen—but also the things in my storehouses.”
Then Esaias said to him, “Hear the word of the Lord Sabaoth: 6 Look, days are coming, says the Lord, when they will take all the things that are in your house, and whatever your fathers have colclected up until this day shall go to Babylon, and they shall leave nothing behind. And God has said 7 that they shall take also some of your children whom you have begotten and shall make them eu-uchs in the house of the king of the Babylonians.”
Then Hezekias said to Esaias, “The word of the Lord that he has spoken is good. Let there now be peace and righteousness in my days.”
Comfort, O comfort my people, says God.
O priests, speak to the heart of Ierousalem;
comfort her,
because her humiliation has been fulfilled,
she has been cast away with,
because she has received from the Lord’s hand
double that of her sins.
A voice of one crying out in the wilderness:
"Prepare the way of the Lord;" 4
make straight the paths of our God.
Every ravine shall be filled up,
and every mountain and hill be made
low,
and all the crooked ways shall become
straight,
and the rough place shall become
plains.
Then the glory of the Lord shall appear,
and all flesh shall see the salvation of God,
because the Lord has spoken.”
A voice of one saying, “Cry out!”
And I said, “What shall I cry?”
All flesh is grass;
all the glory of man is like the flower of
grass.
The grass has withered, and the flower has fallen,
but the word of our God remains forever.
Go up on a high mountain,
you who bring good tidings to Sion;
lift up your voice with strength,
you who bring good tidings to Jerusalem;
lift it up; do not fear;
say to the cities of Ioudas,
“See, your God!”
See, the Lord comes with strength,
and his arm with authority;
see, his reward is with him,
and his work before him.
He will tend his flock like a shepherd and gather lambs with his arm and comfort those that are with young.

Who has measured the water with his hand and heaven with a span and all the earth by handful? Who has weighed the mountains with a scale and the forests with a balance? Who has known the mind of the Lord, and who has been his counselor to instruct him? Or with whom did he consult, and he instructed him? Or who showed him judgment? Or who showed him the way of understanding? If all the nations have been accounted as a drop from a jar and as the sinking of a balance, they will also be accounted as spittle. Lebanon is not enough for burning, nor are all the quadrupeds enough for a whole burnt offering. And all the nations are as nothing, and they have been accounted as nothing. To whom have you likened the Lord, or with what likeness have you likened him? Has an artisan made an image, or has a goldsmith, after casting gold, gilded it—prepared a likeness of it? For an artisan chooses wood that will not rot, then inquires wisely how he should set up his image and what to do so that it will not topple. Will you not know? Will you not hear? Has it not been declared to you from the beginning? Have you not known the foundations of the earth? It is he who holds the circle of the earth, and those who dwell in it are like grasshoppers, who has set up heaven like a vault and stretched it out like a tent to live in, who has appointed rulers to rule for naught and has made the earth as nothing. For they will not sow, nor will they plant, neither will their root take root in the earth; he blew upon them, and they withered, and a tempest will carry them off like brushwood.

Be dedicated to me, O islands, for the rulers will change strength; let them approach and speak together; then let them declare judgment.

Who has roused righteousness from the east, called it to its feet and it will go? He will place it before nations and astonish kings, and he will place their daggers in the earth, and their bows like brushwood that is driven out. And he will pursue them, and the way of his feet will pass through in peace. Who has wrought and done these things? The one calling her from the beginning of generations has called her. I, God, am first, and for the things that are coming, I am. The nations saw and became afraid; the ends of the earth drew near and came together, each deciding to help his neighbor and his brother.
And he will say:

The artisan man has become strong,
also the smith as he smites with the hammer
while at the same time striking.
At some time he will say, “The seam is good”;
they have strengthened them with nails;
they will set them up, and they will not be moved.

But you, Israel, my servant, Iakob, whom I have chosen, the offspring of Abraam, whom I have loved,
you whom I took hold of from the ends of the earth,
and I called you from its mountain peaks,
and I said to you, “You are my servant;
I have chosen you and not forsaken you”;
do not fear, for I am with you;
do not be at a loss, for I am your God who has strengthened you,
and I have helped you,
and I have made you secure with my righteous right hand.

See, all who oppose you shall be ashamed and disgraced,
for they shall be as though they were not,
and all your adversaries shall perish.

You shall seek them,
but you shall not find
the men who shall treat you violently,
for they shall be as though they were not,
and those who war against you shall not be,
because I am your God,
who holds your right hand,
who says to you, “Do not fear,
O Iakob, O small Israel.”
I have helped you, says God who redeems you, O Israel.

Look, I made you as the threshing wheels of a cart,
new and saw-shaped,
and you shall thresh mountains and grind hills to powder
and make them like dust.
And you shall winnow them, and a wind shall take them,
and a tempest shall scatter them.
But you shall rejoice in the holy things of Israel.

And the poor and needy shall be glad,
for they shall seek water, and there will be none;
their tongue has been dried up from thirst.
I, the Lord God, I, the God of Israel, will listen and will not forsake them.

But I will open rivers on the mountains and fountains in the midst of the plains;
I will make the wilderness into marshlands and the thirsty land as watercourses.

I will put in the dry land a cedar and a box tree and a myrtle and a cypress and a white poplar so that together they may see and know and consider and understand that the hand of the Lord has done all these things, and the Holy One of Israel has exhibited them.

Your judgment draws near, says the Lord God;
your counsels have drawn near, says the King of Iakob.

Let them draw near and declare to you the things that will happen or speak of the former things, what they were,
and we will apply our mind and know what the last things will be—and tell us the things that are coming.

Declare the things that are coming at the end,
and we will know that you are gods;
do good, and do harm,
and we will wonder as well as see.

Because whence are you
and whence is your work?
From the earth.
They have chosen you as an abomination.

But I stirred up the one who is from the north and the one who is from the rising of the sun;
they shall be called by my name.
Let rulers come, and like potter’s clay—even as a potter treading clay—so shall you be trodden down.

For who shall declare the things that were from the beginning so that we might know them,
and the former things,
and we will say that they are true?
There is none who foretells
nor any who hears your words.
I will give dominion to Sion,
and I will comfort Jerousalem on the way.

For from among the nations, behold, no one,
and from among their idols, there was none who declared.
And if I should ask them, Whence are you? they will not answer me, for they are the ones who make you and those who lead you astray are vain.
Iakob is my servant; I will lay hold of him;
Israel is my chosen; my soul has accepted
him;
I have put my spirit upon him;
he will bring forth judgment to the nations.
He will not cry out or send forth his voice,
nor will his voice be heard outside;
a bruised reed he will not break,
and a smoking wick he will not quench,
but he will bring forth judgment for truth.
He will blaze up and not be overwhelmed until he has established judgment on the
earth,
and nations will hope in his name.
Thus says the Lord God,
who created heaven and established it,
who bolstered the earth and the things that are in it
and who gave breath to the people upon it and spirit to those who tread on it:
I, the Lord God, have called you in righteousness,
and I will take hold of your hand and strengthen you;
I have given you as a covenant to a race,
as a light to nations,
to open the eyes of the blind, to bring out from bonds those who are bound and from the prison house those who sit in darkness.
I am the Lord God; this is my name;
my glory I will not give to another,
nor my excellences to the graven images.
As for the things that were from the
beginning,
see, they have come;
also new things,
which I myself will declare,
and before they sprang forth,
they were made plain to you.
Sing to the Lord a new song,
[you, his dominion]!
Glorify his name from the end of the earth,
you who go down to the sea and sail it,
you islands and those who inhabit them.
Rejoice, O wilderness and its villages,
O homesteads and those who inhabit Kedar.
Those who inhabit Petra will rejoice;
they will shout from the tops of the mountains.
They will give glory to God;
they will declare his excellences in the islands.
The Lord God of the powers will go forth and crush the war;
he will stir up jealousy
and shout against his foes with strength.
But now thus says the Lord God,
he who made you, O Iakob,
he who formed you, O Israel:

Do not fear, for I have redeemed you; I have called you by your name; you are mine.

And if you should pass through water, I am with you, and rivers shall not overwhelm you, and if you should go through fire, you shall be by no means be burned; the flame shall not consume you, because I am the Lord your God, the Holy One of Israel, who saves you.

Because you have become precious in my sight, you have been glorified, and I have loved you, and I will give many people on your behalf and rulers on behalf of your head.

Do not fear, because I am with you; I will bring your offspring from the east, and from the west I will gather you;

I will say to the north, “Bring them,” and to the southwest, “Do not hinder; bring my sons from a land far away and my daughters from the ends of the earth—all who have been called by my name. For I prepared him in my glory, and I formed and made him.”

And I have brought forth a blind people, and their eyes are likewise blind, and they are deaf, though they have ears!

All the nations have gathered together, and rulers will be gathered from among them. Who will declare these things? Or who will declare to you the things that were from the beginning? Let them bring their witnesses, and let them be justified and speak truths.

Be my witnesses; I too am a witness, says the Lord God, and the servant whom I have chosen so that you may know and believe and understand that I am. Before me there was no other god, nor shall there be any after me.

I am God, and besides me there is none who saves. I declared and saved; I reproached, and there was no stranger among you. You are my witnesses; I too am a witness, says the Lord God.

Even from the beginning there is also no one who rescues from my hands; I will do it, and who will turn it back?

Thus says the Lord God, the one who redeems you, the Holy One of Israel:

For your sake I will send to Babylon and stir up all who are fleeing, and the Chaldeans will be bound in ships.

I am the Lord God, your Holy One, the one who exhibited Israel as your king.

Thus says the Lord, who provides a way in the sea, a path in the mighty water, who has brought out chariots and horse and a mighty throng together; they have lain down and will not rise; they have been quenched like a wick that is quenched:

Do not remember the former things or consider the things of old.

Look, I am doing new things that will now spring forth, and you will know them, and I will make a way in the wilderness and rivers in the dry land.

The wild animals of the field will praise me, sirens and the daughters of ostriches, because I have provided water in the wilderness and rivers in the dry land, to give drink to my chosen race, my people whom I have acquired to set forth my excellences.

I have not called you now, O Jacob, nor have I made you weary, O Israel.

There are no sheep for me from your whole burnt offering, nor have you glorified me with your sacrifices, nor have I made you tired with frankincense, nor have you bought me incense with silver, nor did I desire the fat of your sacrifices, but in your sins and iniquities I have stood before you.

I am, I am the one who blots out your acts of lawlessness, and I will not remember them at all.

But as for you, do remember, and let us be judged; you state your acts of lawlessness first so that you may be justified.

Your fathers first, also their rulers, acted lawlessly against me.

And the rulers defiled my holy things, and I gave Jacob to destroy him, and Israel for a reproach.

aOr I have made Egypt your ransom, and Ethiopia and Soene the ones instead of you  bOr sanctuaries
But now hear, O Israel my servant and Israel whom I have chosen!

2 Thus says the Lord God who made you and who formed you from the womb:
You will still be helped; do not fear, O Israel my servant and the beloved Israel whom I have chosen,

3 because I will provide water in their thirst to those who walk in a dry land;
I will put my spirit on your offspring and my blessings on your children.

And they shall spring up like grass in the midst of water and like a willow by flowing water.

This one will say, “I am God’s,”
and this one will call out in the name of Israel;
yet another will inscribe, “I am God’s,” in the name of Israel.

Thus says God, the king of Israel,
who delivered him, God Sabaoth:
I am first, and I am after these things;
besides me there is no god.

Who is like me? Let him stand; let him call, and let them declare to you the things that are coming before they come.

Do not cover yourselves;
did you not give ear from the beginning,
and I declared it to you?
You are witnesses
whether there is a god besides me,
and they were not formerly.

All who fashion and carve are vain a — those who do the things that are in their mind, which will not profit them. But they will be put to shame, all who fashion a god or cast useless things, and all from where they came have withered and are mute from among men. Let them all assemble and stand together; let them be disgraced and put to shame together.

Because the artisan sharpened the iron, he fashioned it with an ax and bored it with a gimlet; he fashioned it with his strong arm; he also will become hungry and weak and will not drink water.

Having chosen a piece of wood, the artisan set it up with a measure and arranged it with glue; he made it like the form of a man, like human beauty, to set it up in a house. He cut this wood from the forest, which the Lord planted and the rain made grow, so that it might be for people to burn. And taking part of it, he warmed himself, and they burned the pieces and baked bread on their coals and roasted meat and ate and that the rest of it he made into an abomination, and they are doing obeisance to it.

Know that their heart is ashes, and they are going astray, and no one is able to deliver his soul. See, will you not say, “There is a lie in my right hand”?

Remember these things, O Israel,
for you are my servant;
I formed you as my servant,
and you, Israel, do not forget me.

For see, I have blotted out your acts of lawlessness like a cloud and your sins like darkness;
return to me, and I will redeem you.

Rejoice, O heavens, because God has had mercy on Israel; trumpet, O foundations of the earth; shout for joy, O mountains, the hills and all the trees that are in them, because God has redeemed Israel, and Israel will be glorified!

Thus says the Lord, who redeems you,
who forms you from the womb:
I am the Lord, who accomplishes all things;
I alone stretched out heaven, and I bolstered the earth.

Who else will scatter the signs given by ventriloquists and the divinations from the heart, turning the wise backward and making their counsel foolish and confirming the words of his servant and proving true the counsel of his messengers?

The one who says to Jerusalem, “You shall be inhabited,” and to the cities of Judea, “You shall be built,” and her deserted places shall arise, who says to the deep, “You will become desolate, and I will dry up your rivers,” who tells Cyrus to be wise and says, “He shall carry out all my wishes,” who says to Jerusalem, “You shall be built, and I will lay the foundations of my holy house.”

Thus says the Lord God to my anointed, Cyrus, whose right hand I have grasped so that nations will obey before him, and I will break through the strength of kings; I will open doors before him—and cities shall not be closed:

I will go before you and level mountains; I will break in pieces doors of bronze and break off bars of iron, and I will give you dark treasures; hidden, unseen ones I will open for you so that you may know that I am the Lord God, the God of Israel, who calls your name.

For the sake of my servant Iakob and Israel my chosen, I will call you by my name and receive you, but you did not know me, because I am the Lord God, and there is no other god besides me, and you did not know me, so that they who are from the rising of the sun and from its going down may know that there is no one besides me; I am the Lord God, and there is no other.

I am the one who has prepared light and made darkness, who makes peace and creates evils; I am the Lord who does all these things.

Let heaven rejoice from above, and let the clouds shower down righteousness; let the earth bring forth mercy, and let it bring forth righteousness as well; I am the Lord who created you.

What better thing have I formed like potter’s clay? Shall the plowman plow the earth? Shall the clay say to the potter, “What are you doing, since you are not working, nor do you have hands”?

It is like the one who says to his father, “What will you beget?” and to his mother, “With what are you in labor?”

Because thus says the Lord God, the Holy One of Israel, the one who has made the things that are coming: Ask me about my sons and about my daughters, and command me concerning the works of my hands.

I made the earth and humankind upon it; I bolstered heaven with my hand; I commanded all the stars. I have raised him with my hand, and all his paths shall be straight; he shall build my city and turn back the captivity of my people, not with ransom or with gifts, said the Lord Sabaoth.

Thus says the Lord Sabaoth: Egypt has worked hard, as has the commerce of the Ethiopians. And the lofty men of Seboin shall come over to you, and they shall be your slaves; they shall follow behind you bound in handcuffs. They will do obeisance to you and pray in you, because God is in you, and they will say, “There is no god besides you.”

For you are God, and we did not know it, O God of Israel, Savior. All who oppose him shall be ashamed and disgraced, and they shall go in shame. Dedicate yourselves to me, you islands!

Israel is being saved by the Lord with everlasting salvation; they shall not be ashamed or disgraced forever.

Thus says the Lord, who made heaven—this is the God who displayed the earth and made it; he himself marked its limits; he did not make it to be empty but to be inhabited: I am, and there is no other. I have not spoken in secret nor in a dark place of the earth; I did not say to the offspring of Iakob, “Seek a vain thing.” I am, I am the Lord, speaking righteousness and declaring truth.

Assemble yourselves, and come; take counsel together, you who are being saved from among the nations! They did not know—those who lift up the wood, their graven image, and pray as if to gods that do not save. If they will declare it, let them draw near so that they may know together
Then it was declared to you, I am God, and there is no other besides me; there is no righteous one or savior except me.

22 Turn to me, and you shall be saved, you who are from the end of the earth! I am God, and there is no other.

23 By myself I swear, “Verily righteousness shall go forth from my mouth; my words shall not be turned back, because to me every knee shall bow and every tongue shall acknowledge God, saying, Righteousness and glory shall come to him, and all who separate themselves shall be ashamed.”

25 By the Lord shall they be justified, and all the offspring of the sons of Israel shall be glorified in God.

Bel has fallen; Dagon has been crushed; their graven images have become for beasts and cattle; you carry them bound as a burden for the weary and the hungry as well as for the feeble who has no strength, who will not be able to be saved from war, but themselves have been led captive.

3 Hear me, O house of Jakob and everyone who is left of Israel, you who are being carried from the womb and trained from the time you were a child.

4 Until your old age, I am, and until you grow old, I am; I bear with you; I have made, and I will set free; I will take up and save you.

5 To whom have you likened me? See, act with cunning, you who are going astray!

6 Those who contribute gold from a bag and silver in a balance will set it on a scale, and after hiring a goldsmith, they made handiwork, and bowing down they do obeisance to them!

7 They carry it on their shoulders and go, and if they set it up, it stays in its place; it will not move. And whoever cries out to him, he will not listen; he will not save him from evils.

8 Remember these things and groan; repent, you who have gone astray; turn in your heart, and remember the former things of old, because I am God, and there is no other besides me, declaring the last things first, before they happen, and at once they came to pass, and I said, “My whole plan shall stand, and I will do all the things I have planned,” calling a bird from the east and from a far country those concerning whom I have planned. I have spoken and brought it; I have created and made it.

9 Hear me, you who have ruined your heart, you who are far from righteousness:

10 I brought near my righteousness, and I will not delay the salvation that comes from me; I have provided salvation in Sion to Israel for glorying.

47 Come down; sit on the ground, virgin daughter of Babylon! Enter the darkness, daughter of the Chaldeans, because you shall no longer be called tender and delicate!

2 Take a millstone: grind meal; uncover your covering; expose your gray hairs; bare your legs; pass through rivers.

3 Your shame shall be uncovered; your reproaches shall be seen. I will take from you what is right; I will no longer deliver you over to men.

4 He who delivered you—the Lord Sabaoth is his name, the Holy One of Israel—has said:

5 Sit distressed; enter the darkness, daughter of the Chaldeans! You shall no more be called the strength of a kingdom.

6 I was provoked at my people; you defiled my heritage. I gave them into your hand, but you granted no mercy to them; you made the yoke of the elder exceedingly heavy.

7 And you said, “I shall be a ruler forever”; you did not consider these things in your heart, nor did you remember the last things.

8 But now hear these things, you delicate woman, who sits securely, who says in her heart,
“I am, and there is no other;
I shall not sit as a widow or know bereavement.”

But now both these things shall come upon you suddenly, in one day:
widowhood and loss of children shall come upon you suddenly in your witchcraft, exceedingly in the strength of your enchantments,
in the hope of your evil,
for you said, “I am and there is no other.”

Know that the understanding of these things and your evil shall be your shame.
And you said in your heart,
“I am, and there is no other.”

But destruction shall come upon you,
and you will not realize it;
a pit, and you shall fall into it.
And wretchedness shall come upon you,
and you will not be able to become clean
of it,
and destruction shall come upon you suddenly,
and you will not realize it.

Stand now in your enchantments
and your abundant witchcraft, which you learned from your youth,
if you will be able to receive benefit.

You have become weary with your counsels;
let the astrologers of heaven stand up and save you,
those who look at the stars;
let them declare to you what is about to come upon you.

See, they all will be burned
like brushwood on a fire, and they will not deliver their soul from the flame;
since you have coals of fire,
sit on them—
these will be a help to you.

You have labored in your traffic from your youth;
a man has wandered by himself,
but for you there will be no salvation.

Hear these things, O house of Israel, who are called by the name of Israel and who came forth out of Judah, who swear by the name of the Lord God of Israel, remembering it, not with truth or with righteousness, and clinging to the name of the holy city and leaning on the God of Israel;
the Lord Sabaoth is his name.

The former things I have moreover declared, and they went out from my mouth and came to be heard;
suddenly I did them, and they came to pass.

I know that you are unyielding, and your neck is an iron sinew,
and your forehead brass,
and I declared to you the things of old;
before they came upon you I made them
to be heard by you;
do not say, “The idols did them for me,”
and do not say, “The graven and the cast images commanded me.”

You have heard all things,
and you yourselves have not known.
But I have also made to be heard by you,
from now on,
the new things that shall come to pass;
yet you did not speak.

They are happening now, not long ago;
in former days you did not hear of them;
do not say, “Yes, I know them.”

You have neither known nor understood, nor did I open your ears from the beginning.
For I knew that betraying you would betray,
and that even from the womb you would be called a lawless one.

For my name’s sake I will show you my
wrath;
I will bring my glorious deeds upon you so that I may not utterly destroy you.

See, I have sold you, not for silver, but I delivered you from the furnace of poverty.

For my own sake will I do this to you,
because my name is being profaned,
and my glory I will not give to another.

Hear me, O Jacob,
and Israel, whom I call:
I am the first,
and I am forever.

And my hand laid the foundation of the
earth,
and my right hand bolstered heaven;
I will call them,
and they will stand together.

And all of them will be gathered and hear.
Who has declared these things to them?
Because I love you,
I have performed your will on Babylon,
to do away with the offspring of the Chaldeans.

I have spoken; I have called,
brought him and made his way prosperous.

Draw near to me, and hear these things!

a Or enchanters  b Or to his own house  c Or making mention of  d Or say  e Or you would surely reject me
From the beginning I have not spoken in secret; when it happened I was there, and now the Lord has sent me and his spirit.

Thus says the Lord who delivered you, the Holy One of Israel: I am your God; I have shown you how to find the way in which you should go.

And if you had heared my commandments, your peace would have become like a river, and your righteousness like a wave of the sea; your offspring would have become like the sand, and the descendants of your womb like the dust of the earth.

Now neither will you be utterly destroyed, nor will your name perish before me.

Go out from Babylon, fleeing from the Chaldeans; proclaim a voice of joy, and let this be heard; report it to the end of the earth; say, “The Lord has delivered his slave Jakob!”

Even if they are thirsty, he will lead them through the wilderness; he will bring forth water for them out of a rock; a rock will be split, and water will flow, [and my people will drink].

“There is no rejoicing,” says the Lord, “for the impious.”

Hear me, O islands; pay attention, O nations! After a long time it shall stand, says the Lord. From my mother’s womb he called my name and made my mouth like a sharp dagger, and under the shelter of his hand he hid me; he made me like a chosen arrow, and in his quiver he sheltered me. And he said to me, “You are my slave, Israel, and in you I will be glorified.” But I said, “I have labored vainly, and I have given my strength in vain and for nothing; therefore my judgment is with the Lord, and my toil before my God.”

And now thus says the Lord, who formed me from the womb to be his own slave, to gather Jakob and Israel to him; I will be gathered and glorified before the Lord, and my God shall become my strength.

And he said to me, “It is a great thing for you to be called my servant so that you may set up the tribes of Jakob and turn back the dispersion of Israel. See, I have made you a light of nations, that you may be for salvation to the end of the earth.”

Thus says the Lord who delivered you, the God of Israel: “Sanctify him who despises his own soul, who is abhorred by the nations, the slaves of rulers; kings shall see him, and rulers shall stand up and do obeisance to him for the Lord’s sake, because the Holy One of Israel is faithful, and I have chosen you.”

Thus says the Lord: In an acceptable time I have listened to you, on a day of salvation I have helped you; I gave you as a covenant to nations, to establish the land, and to inherit a wilderness heritage, saying to those who are in bonds, “Come out,” and to those who are in darkness that they be revealed. And they shall feed in all their ways; in all the paths shall be their pasture; they shall not hunger or thirst, neither shall burning heat nor sun strike them down, but he who has mercy on them will comfort them and through springs of water will lead them. And I will turn every mountain into a road and every path into a pasture for them. Lo, these come from far away, these from the north and these from the sea but others from the land of the Persians.

Rejoice, O heavens, and let the earth be glad; let the mountains break forth with joy, and the hills with righteousness, because God has had mercy on his people and he has comforted the humble of his people.

But Sion said, “The Lord has forsaken me; the Lord has forgotten me.”

Will a mother forget her child... so as not to have mercy on the descendants of her womb?
But even if a woman should forget these,
yet I will not forget you, said the Lord.
See, I have painted your walls on my hands,
and you are continually before me.
And soon you will be built by those by whom you were destroyed, and those who made you desolate will go forth from you.
Lift up your eyes all around, and see them all;
look, they have gathered and have come
to you.
I live, says the Lord;
you shall clothe yourself with all of them and put them on like a bride’s ornament.

Because your desolate and spoiled and ruined places will now be crowded on account of your inhabitants,
and those who swallow you up will be far away from you.
For your sons whom you have lost
will say in your ears:
“The place is too narrow for me;
make a place for me so that I may settle.”
Then you will say in your heart, “Who has begotten me these?
But I was childless and a widow,
so who has reared these for me?
But I was left all alone,
so from where have these come to me?”
Thus says the Lord:
Look, I am lifting up my hand to the
nations,
and I will lift my signal to the islands, and they shall bring your sons in their bosom,
and your daughters shall they lift on their shoulders.
And kings shall be your foster fathers,
and the women who rule, your nurses.
On the face of the earth they shall do obeisance to you,
and they shall lick the dust of your feet.
Then you will know that I am the Lord,
and you shall not be put to shame.
Will anyone take spoils from a mighty one? And if one should take a captive unjustly, shall he be saved?
Thus says the Lord:
If one should take a mighty one captive,
he will take spoils,
and by taking them from a strong one,
he will be saved.

And I will judge your cause,
and I will rescue your sons.
And those who afflicted you shall eat their own flesh,
and they shall drink their own blood like new wine and be drunk.
Then all flesh shall perceive that I am the Lord who rescued you, who assists the strength of Jakob.

Thus says the Lord:
Of what kind was your mother’s bill of divorce
with which I sent her away?
Or to which creditor have I sold you?
Look, for your sins you were sold, and for your acts of lawlessness I sent away your mother.

Why was it that I came and no man was there?
I called, and there was none to answer?
Is not my hand strong to deliver?
Or am I not strong to rescue?
Look, by my threat I will make the sea
desolate,
and the rivers I will make deserts, and their fish shall be dried up because there is no water,
and they will die by thirst.
And I will clothe heaven with darkness and make its covering like sackcloth.

The Lord gives me
the tongue of instruction,
that I may know in season:
when it is necessary to speak a word.
He assigned it to me in the morning;
he added to me an ear to hear.
And the instruction of the Lord opens my ears,
and I do not disobey nor contradict.
I have given my back to scourges and my cheeks to blows, but I did not turn away my face from the shame of spittings.
And the Lord became my helper;
therefore I was not disgraced,
but I have set my face like solid rock, and I realized that I would not be put to shame,
because he who justified me draws near.
Who is the one who contends with me?
Let him confront me at once.
Yes, who is the one who contends with me?
Let him draw near me.
Look, the Lord helps me;
who will harm me?
Look, all of you will become old like a garment,
and as it were a moth will devour you.

50 Who among you is the one who fears the Lord? Let him hear the voice of his servant. Those who walk in darkness—they have no light; trust in the name of the Lord, and lean upon God.

11 Look, all of you, kindle a fire, and make a flame stronger. Walk by the light of your fire and by the flame you have kindled. Because of me, these things came upon you; you shall lie down in sorrow.

51 Hear me, you that pursue what is righteous, and seek the Lord. Look to the solid rock that you hewed and to the hole of the pit that you dug.

2 Look to Abraam your father and to Sarra who bore you; because he was but one, then I called him and blessed him and loved him and multiplied him.

3 And I will comfort you now, Sion; I comforted all her desolate places, and I will make her desolate places like the garden of the Lord; in her they will find joy and gladness, confession and the voice of praise.

4 Hear me; hear, my people, and you kings, give ear to me, because a law will go out from me, and my judgment for a light to nations.

5 My righteousness draws near swiftly; my salvation will go out, and the nations will hope in my arm; the islands will wait for me and hope in my arm.

6 Lift up your eyes to heaven, and look at the earth beneath, because heaven was strengthened like smoke, and the earth will become old like a garment, and those who live on the earth will die like these things, but my salvation will be forever, and my righteousness will not fail.

7 Hear me, you who know judgment, my people, you in whose heart is my law; do not fear the reproach of men, and do not be dismayed by their contempt.

8 For just as a garment it will be devoured by time, and like wool it will be devoured by a moth, but my righteousness will be forever and my salvation for generations of generations.

9 Awake, awake, O Jerusalem; put on the strength of your arm! Awake, as at the beginning of a day, like a generation of long ago! Are you not she who made desolate the sea, the water, the abundance of the deep, who made the depths of the sea a way of passage for those being delivered and those who have been ransomed? For by the Lord they shall be returned and come to Sion with joy and everlasting gladness; for gladness and praise shall be upon their heads and joy shall take hold of them; pain and sorrow and sighing have fled away.

12 I am, I am he who comforts you. Acknowledge of whom you were cautious; you were afraid because of a mortal man and a son of man, who have dried up like grass.

13 And you have forgotten God who made you, who made heaven and laid the foundations of the earth. And always, all the days, you feared the face of the fury of the one who was oppressing you, for just as he planned to do away with you, and where now is the fury of the one who was oppressing you?

14 For when you are saved, he will not stand nor linger, because I am your God, who stirs up the sea and makes its waves to sound—the Lord Sabaoth is my name.

16 I will put my words in your mouth and shelter you under the shadow of my hand, by which I established heaven and laid the foundations of the earth. And he will say to Sion, “You are my people.”

17 Awake, awake! Stand up, O Jerusalem, you who have drunk from the hand of the Lord the cup of his wrath, for you have drained dry and emptied the cup of ruin, the goblet of wrath. And there was none who comforted you from among all your children whom you have borne, and there was none who took hold of your hand, not even from among all your sons, whom you have raised.
These two things are set against you—who will grieve with you?—
ruin and destruction, famine and dagger—who will comfort you?

Your sons are the ones perplexed, who lie down at the head of every street
like a half-cooked beet, who are full of the wrath of the Lord,
made feeble by the Lord God.

Therefore hear, you who are humbled, who are drunk, but not with wine.

Thus says the Lord God,
who judges his people:
See, I have taken from your hand
the cup of ruin, the goblet of wrath, and you shall not continue to drink it any longer.

And I will put it into the hands of those who have wronged you and humbled you,
who have said to your soul, “Bow down, that we may pass by,”
and you put your back level to the ground, outside, for those who were going by.

Awake, awake, O Sion!
Put on your strength, O Sion,
and put on your glory,
O Ierousalem, the holy city;
the uncircumcised and unclean shall no longer continue to pass through
you.

Shake off the dust, and rise up;
sit down, O Ierousalem;
take off the bond from your neck,
O captive daughter Sion!

Because this is what the Lord says: You were sold for nothing, and not with money you shall be redeemed.

Thus says the Lord: Formerly, my people went down into Egypt to sojourn there, and they were led by force to the Assyrians.

And now, why are you here? This is what the Lord says, Because my people were taken for nothing, you marvel and howl. This is what the Lord says, Because of you, my name is continually blasphemed among the nations.

Therefore my people shall know my name in that day, because I myself am the one who speaks: I am here,

like season upon the mountains,
like the feet of one bringing glad tidings of a report of peace,
like one bringing glad tidings of good things,
because I will make your salvation heard, saying to Sion, “Your God shall reign,” because the voice of those who watch over you was lifted up,
and with their voice they shall rejoice together,
because eyes shall look at eyes
when the Lord will have mercy on Sion.

Let the desolate places of Ierousalem break forth together in joy, because the Lord has had mercy on her and has delivered Ierousalem.

And the Lord shall reveal his holy arm before all the nations, and all the ends of the earth shall see the salvation that comes from God.

Depart, depart, go out from there,
and touch no unclean thing:
go out from the midst of it; be separated,
you who carry the vessels of the Lord, because you shall not go out with confusion,
nor shall you go in flight,
for the Lord will go before you,
and the Lord God of Israel is the one who gathers you together.

See, my servant shall understand,
and he shall be exalted and glorified exceedingly.

Just as many shall be astonished at you—so shall your appearance be without glory from men,
and your glory be absent from the
men—

so shall many nations be astonished at him,
and kings shall shut their mouth, because those who were not informed about him shall see
and those who did not hear shall understand.

Lord, who has believed our report?
And to whom has the arm of the Lord been revealed?

He grew up before him like a child,
like a root in a thirsty land;
he has no form or glory,
and we saw him, and he had no form or beauty.

But his form was without honor, failing beyond all men,
a man being in calamity and knowing how to bear sickness;
because his face is turned away,
he was dishonored and not esteemed.

This one bears our sins
and suffers pain for us,
and we accounted him to be in trouble and calamity and ill-treatment.

But he was wounded because of our acts of lawlessness
and has been weakened because of our sins;
upon him was the disciplined of our peace;
by his bruise we were healed.

6 All we like sheep have gone astray; a man has strayed in his own way, and the Lord gave him over to our sins.

7 And he, because he has been ill-treated, does not open his mouth; like a sheep he was led to the slaughter, and as a lamb is silent before the one shearing it, so he does not open his mouth.

8 In his humiliation his judgment was taken away. Who will describe his generation? Because his life is being taken from the earth, he was led to death on account of the acts of lawlessness of my people.

9 And I will give the wicked for his burial and the rich for his death, because he committed no lawlessness, nor was deceit found in his mouth.

10 And the Lord desires to cleanse him from his blow. If you give an offering for sin, your soul shall see a long-lived offspring.

11 And the Lord wishes to take away from the pain of his soul, to show him light and fill him with understanding, to justify a righteous one who is well subject to many, and he himself shall bear their sins.

12 Therefore he shall inherit many, and he shall divide the spoils of the strong, because his soul was given over to death, and he was reckoned among the lawless, and he bore the sins of many, and because of their sins he was given over.

54 Rejoice, O barren one who does not bear; break forth, and shout, you who are not in labor! Because more are the children of the desolate woman than of her that has a husband, for the Lord has spoken.

2 Enlarge the site of your tent and of your curtains; make it firm; do not hold back; lengthen your cords, and strengthen your stakes,

3 because you must spread out to the right and to the left, and your offspring will inherit the nations and will inhabit the cities that have become desolate.

4 Do not fear because you were put to shame, neither feel disgraced because you were reproached, because you will forget your ancient shame and the reproach of your widowhood you will not remember,

5 because the Lord is the one who makes you, the Lord Sabaoth is his name, and the one who delivered you is the very God of Israel; he shall be called thus in all the earth.

6 The Lord has not called you as a forsaken and faint-hearted woman, nor as a woman hated from youth, your God has said.

7 For a brief moment I forsook you, but with great mercy I will have mercy on you.

8 With a little wrath I turned my face away from you, but with everlasting mercy I have had mercy on you.

9 From the water at the time of Noe, this is my oath: Just as I swore to him at that time that I would no more be angry at the earth because of you, nor as a threat to you would I remove the mountains, nor would the hills be shifted, so neither shall the mercy that comes from me to you fail, nor shall the covenant of your peace be removed, for the Lord said he would be merciful to you.

10 O humbled and unsteady one, you have not been comforted; see, I am preparing for you charcoal as your stone and lapis lazuli as your foundations.

11 And I will make your battlements of jasper and your gates of crystal stones and your enclosure of precious stones.

12 And gI will make all your sons taught by God and your children to be in great peace.

13 And in righteousness you shall be built; keep away from injustice, and you shall not be afraid, and trembling shall not come near you.

14 See, guests shall approach you through me and flee to you for refuge.

15 See, I create you, not as a smith who blows the coals and produces a vessel for work. But I have created you not for destruction, to ruin every perishable vessel.

55 You who thirst,
go to water,
and as many of you as have no money,
go, buy, and drink wine and fat,
without money and without price.

2 Why do you set a price with money and your labor for that which does not

Hear me, and you shall eat good things,

3 Pay attention with your ears,

5 Nations that did not know you shall call upon you,
and peoples that do not understand you shall flee to you for refuge, for the sake of your God, the Holy One of Israel,
because he has glorified you.

6 Seek God, and when you find him, call upon him,
and whenever he should draw near you,
let the impious forsake his ways,
and the lawless man his plans, and let him return to the Lord, and he will have mercy,
because he will abundantly forgive your sins.

8 For my plans are not like your plans, nor are your ways like my ways, says the Lord.

9 But as heaven is far from the earth,
so is my way far from your ways and your notions from my thought.

10 For as rain or snow comes down from heaven
and will not return until it has soaked the earth
and brought forth and blossomed and given seed to the sower and bread for food,

11 so shall my word be, whatever goes out from my mouth;
it shall not return
until whatever I have willed is fulfilled, and I will prosper your ways and my commandments.

12 For you shall go out with joy and be taught with happiness;
for the mountains and the hills shall leap forth
as they welcome you with happiness, and all the trees of the field shall clap with their branches.

13 And instead of the brier shall come up a cypress,
and instead of the nettle shall come up a myrtle,
and the Lord shall be for a name and for an everlasting sign and shall not fail.

56 This is what the Lord says:
Keep judgment; do righteousness, for my salvation has drawn near to arrive and my mercy to be revealed.

2 Happy is the man who does these things,
the person who holds them fast, who keeps the sabbaths so as not to profane
them,
and watches his hands so as not to do
wrong.

3 Let not the alien who clings to the Lord say, “So then the Lord will separate me from his people,”
and let not the eunuch say,
“I am a dry tree.”

4 This is what the Lord says:
To the eunuchs, as many as keep my sabbaths and choose the things that I want
and hold fast my covenant,

5 I will give to them, in my house and within my wall,
an esteemed place,
better than sons and daughters;
I will give them an everlasting name,
and it shall not fail.

6 And to the aliens who cling to the Lord, to be subject to him, to love the name of
the Lord,
so that they may be his male and female slaves—
and as for all who keep my sabbaths so as not to profane them
and hold fast my covenant—
I will bring them into my holy mountain and make them joyful in my house of prayer; their whole burnt offerings and their sacrifices will be acceptable on my altar, for my house shall be called a house of prayer for all the nations—said the Lord, who gathers the dispersed of Israel— for I will gather to him a gathering.

All you wild animals that live in the fields, all you wild animals of the forest, come here; eat!
Observe that all have become totally blind; they have not learned how to think; they are all silent dogs; they will not be able to bark, dreaming in bed, loving to slumber.
The dogs are shameless in their soul, not knowing satisfaction. They are evil, not knowing understanding. They have all followed their own ways, each in the same manner.

Observe how the righteous has perished, and no one takes it to heart; righteous men are being taken away, and no one takes notice, for the righteous has been taken away from the presence of unrighteousness;
his burial will be in peace; he has been taken away from their midst.
But as for you, draw near here, you lawless sons, you offspring of adulterers and of a whore.
In what have you indulged? And against whom have you opened your mouth wide? And against whom have you let loose your tongue?
Are you not children of destruction, a lawless offspring?
You are the ones who call on their idols under thick trees, slaughtering their children in the ravines, among the rocks.
That is your portion; this is your lot, and to them you have poured out libations, and to them you have brought a sacrifice. Shall I not therefore be angry for these things?
Upon a high and lofty mountain, there was your bed, and there you brought up your sacrifices.
Behind the posts of your door you have set up your memorials.

And they shall say, “Cleanse the ways before him, and remove the obstructions from my people’s way.”

This is what the Lord says, the Most High, who dwells forever in lofty places— Holy among the holy ones is his name, the Lord Most High who rests among the holy ones and gives patience to the faint-hearted and gives life to those who are broken of heart:
I will not punish you forever, nor will I always be angry with you, for a spirit shall go forth from me, and I have made every breath.
Because of sin I grieved him a little while; I struck him and turned my face away from him, and he was grieved and went on sullen in his ways.
I have seen his ways, and I healed him and comforted him, yes, gave him true comfort—peace upon peace to those that are far and to those that are near.
And the Lord said,

aOr thorns  bOr inhabits eternity
I will heal them.

But thus shall the unrighteous be tossed like waves and shall not be able to rest.

There is no rejoicing for the impious, said the Lord God.

Cry out with strength, and do not hold back!
Lift up your voice like a trumpet,
and declare to my people their sins,
to the house of Iakob their acts of lawlessness.

Day after day they seek me
and desire to know my ways.
Like a people that practiced righteousness and did not forsake the judgment of their God, they now ask of me righteous judgment,
and they desire to draw near to God, saying, "Why is it that we have fasted, but you did not see, humbled our souls, but you did not know?"
For in the days of your fasts you find your own wishes and goad all those who are under you.
If you fast for quarrels and fights and you strike a humble person with your fists, why do you fast for me as you do today
so that your voice may be heard by its clamor?
This is not the fast that I have chosen,
even a day for a person to humble himself;
not even if you bend your neck like a ring and spread under you sackcloth and ashes—not even so shall you call it an acceptable fast.

I have not chosen such a fast, says the Lord;
rather loose every bond of injustice; undo the knots of contracts made by force;
let the oppressed go free,
and tear up every unjust note.

Break your bread with the one who is hungry,
and bring the homeless poor into your house;
if you see one naked, clothe him,
and you shall not neglect any of the relatives of your seed.
Then your light shall break forth early in the morning,
and your healings shall rise quickly,
and your righteousness shall go before you,
and the glory of God shall cover you.
Then you shall cry out, and God will listen to you;
while you are still speaking, he will say, Here I am.
If you remove from you a bond and a stretching of the hand\(^a\) and a murmuring word and give to one who is hungry bread from your soul and satisfy a soul that has been humbled, then your light shall rise in the darkness,
and your darkness shall be like noonday.
And your God will be with you continually,
and you shall be satisfied exactly as your soul desires,
and your bones shall be enriched, and they shall be like a soaked garden and like a spring whose water has never failed.
And your ancient deserts shall be built,
and your foundations shall be everlasting,
for generations of generations,
and you shall be called a builder of fences,
and you shall cause the paths between them to rest.
If you turn your foot away from the sabbaths, so as not to do the things you wish on the holy day,
and you shall call the sabbaths delightful\(^b\), hoi to your God,
you shall not lift your foot for work
nor speak a word in anger out of your mouth;
then you shall trust in the Lord, and he shall bring you up upon the good things of the earth and feed you with the heritage of your ancestor Iakob, for the mouth of the Lord has spoken these things.

Is not the Lord’s hand strong to save?
Or has he made his ear heavy so as not to listen?
Rather, your sinful acts separate between you and God, and because of your sins he has turned his face away from you so as not to show mercy.
For your hands have been defiled with blood,
and your fingers with sins,
and your lips have spoken lawlessness,
and your tongue plots unrighteousness.
No one speaks righteous things,
nor is there true judgment;
they trust in vanities, and they speak empty words,
because they conceive trouble and give birth to lawlessness.
They broke the eggs of asps and weave the web of a spider, and the one who intended to eat their eggs, upon breaking them found wind, and in it was a basilisk.

6 Their web shall not become a garment, nor shall they be clothed with their works, for their works are works of lawlessness.

7 And their feet run to evil, swift to shed blood, and their reasonings are reasonings of fools; destruction and wretchedness are in their ways.

8 And a way of peace they do not know, and there is no judgment in their ways, for their paths, through which they travel, are crooked, and they do not know peace.

9 Therefore their judgment has departed from them, and righteousness will not catch up with them; having awaited light, darkness came to them; having waited for sunlight, they walked in midnight.

10 They will grope like blind men for a wall, and like those who have no eyes they will grope. And they will fall at noon as at midnight; like dying men they will groan.

11 Like a bear and like a dove they will walk together. We waited for judgment, but there was none; salvation has withdrawn far from us.

12 For our lawlessness was great before you and our sins have risen up against us; for our acts of lawlessness are in us, and we realized our wrongs;

13 we were impious and lied and turned away from behind our God; we spoke unrighteous things and disobeyed; we conceived and rehearsed unrighteous words from our heart.

14 And we put away our judgment behind us, and righteousness withdrew far away, because truth was consumed in their ways, and they could not travel through a straight path.

15 And truth was taken away, and they removed their thought from understanding. The Lord saw it, and it did not please him that there was no judgment.

16 And he saw, and there was no man, and he took notice, and there was none who helped; so he defended them with his own arm, and with his compassion he upheld them.

17 And he put on righteousness like a breastplate and placed a helmet of salvation on his head, and he clothed himself with a garment of vengeance and with his cloak, 18 as one about to render retribution, reproach to his adversaries.

19 And those from the west shall fear the name of the Lord, and those from the rising of the sun, his glorious name, for anger will come from the Lord like a rushing river—it will come with wrath.

20 And the one who delivers will come for Sion’s sake, and he will turn impiety away from Iakob.

21 And this is the covenant to them from me, said the Lord, my spirit that is upon you and my words that I have put in your mouth shall not fail out of your mouth or out of the mouth of your offspring, for the Lord has said it, from now on and forever.

60 aShine, shine, O Jerusalem, for your light has come, and the glory of the Lord has risen upon you.

2 Look, darkness and gloom shall cover the earth upon the nations, but the Lord will appear upon you, and his glory will be seen upon you.

3 Kings shall walk by your light, and nations by your brightness.

4 Lift up your eyes round about, and see your children gathered together; look, all your sons have come from far away, and your daughters shall be carried on shoulders.

5 Then you shall see and be afraid and be amazed in your heart, because the wealth of the sea and of nations and of peoples shall change over to you. And there shall come to you

6 herds of camels, and the camels of Madiam and Gaiphar shall cover you. All those from Saba shall come, bringing gold, and they shall bring frankincense and announce the good news of the salvation of the Lord.

7 And all the sheep of Kedar shall be gathered to you, and the rams of Nabaioth shall come to you, and acceptable things shall be offered on my altar, and my house of prayer shall be glorified.

Who are these that fly like clouds, and like doves with their young?
The islands waited for me, and the ships of Tharsis among the first, to bring your children from far away, and their silver and gold with them, because of the holy name of the Lord and because the Holy One of Israel is glorious.

And aliens shall build up your walls, and their kings shall attend to you; for because of my wrath I struck you down, but because of my mercy I loved you.

For the nations and kings that will not be subject to you shall perish, and the nations shall be made desolate with desolation.

And the glory of Lebanon shall come to you, with cypress and pine and cedar together, to glorify my holy place.

The sons of those who humbled and provoked you shall come to you with dread; you shall be called City of the Lord, Sion of the Holy One of Israel.

Because you have become forsaken and hated and there was none who helped, and I will make you an everlasting gladness, a joy for generations of generations.

You shall suck the milk of nations, and you shall eat the wealth of kings, and you shall know that I am the Lord who saves you and rescues you, the God of Israel.

And instead of bronze I will bring you gold; instead of iron I will bring you silver; instead of wood I will bring you bronze; instead of stones, iron. And I will appoint your rulers in peace and your overseers in righteousness.

And injustice shall no more be heard in your land, nor destruction or wretchedness within your borders; rather your walls shall be called Salvation, and your gates Sculpture.

And the sun shall not be to you as a light by day, nor shall the rising of the moon give light to you at night, but the Lord will be to you an everlasting light, and God will be your glory.

For your sun shall not go down, and your moon shall not fail; for the Lord will be to you an everlasting light, and the days of your mourning shall be fulfilled.

Your people shall all be righteous, and they shall inherit the land forever, guarding their plant, the works of their hands, for glory.

The smallest one shall become thousands, and the least, a great nation; I, the Lord, will gather them in due time.

The spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he has anointed me; he has sent me to bring good news to the poor, to heal the brokenhearted, to proclaim release to the captives and recovery of sight to the blind, to summon the acceptable year of the Lord and the day of retribution, to comfort all who mourn so that to those who mourn for Sion be given glory instead of ashes, oil of joy instead of ashes, a garment of glory instead of a spirit of weariness. They will be called generations of righteousness, a plant of the Lord for glory.

Aliens shall come, feeding your sheep, and allophyles as plowmen and vinedressers, but you shall be called priests of the Lord, ministers of God; you shall devour the strength of nations, and with their wealth you shall be admired.

Thus they shall inherit the land a second time, and everlasting joy shall be above their head.

For I am the Lord, who loves righteousness and hates spoils obtained by injustice; I will give them their hard work righteously, and I will make an everlasting covenant with them.

And their offspring and their descendants shall be known among the nations; everyone who sees them shall acknowledge them, because these are an offspring blessed by God, and they will rejoice with rejoicing in the Lord.

And as the earth making its flowers grow, and as a garden its seeds, so the Lord will cause righteousness and gladness to spring up before all the nations.

Because of Sion I will not be silent, and because of Ierousalem I will not slacken until my righteousness goes forth like light and my salvation shall burn like a torch.

And nations shall see your righteousness, and kings your glory, and he shall call you by your new name, which the Lord will name.

And you shall be a crown of beauty in the hand of the Lord and a royal diadem in the hand of your God.

And you shall no more be called Forsaken, and your land shall not be called Desolate, for you shall be called My Will, and your land, Inhabited.

And as a young man lives together in marriage with a virgin, so shall your sons dwell with you, and it shall be that as a bridgroom shall rejoice over a bride, so shall the Lord rejoice over you.

And upon your walls, O Ierousalem, I have posted sentinels all day and all night, who shall never be silent, making mention of the Lord.

For you have none like him, if he should restore Ierousalem and make it a boast on the earth.

The Lord has sworn by his right hand and by his mighty arm: I will not again give your grain and your food to your enemies, and not again shall foreign sons drink your wine for which you have labored, but those who gather shall eat them and praise the Lord, and those who gather shall drink them in my holy courts.

Go through my gates, and make a way for my people, and cast the stones out of the way; lift up a signal for the nations.

For see, the Lord has made it to be heard to the end of the earth: Say to daughter Sion, “See, your Savior comes to you, having his own reward and his work before him.”

And he shall call it a holy people, redeemed by the Lord, and you shall be called “A City Sought After” and “Not Forsaken.”

“Who is this that comes from Edom, a redness of garments from Bosor, so beautiful in apparel, in might, with strength?”

“I discourse about righteousness and judgment of salvation.”

“Why are your garments red, and your clothes as if from a trodden wine press?”

“I am full of a trampled wine press, and of the nations no man is with me, and I trampled them in wrath and crushed them like earth and brought down their blood to the earth.

For a day of retribution has come upon them, and a year of ransom is here.

And I looked, but no one was a helper, and I observed, but no one was assisting; so my own arm delivered them, and my wrath was present.

And I trampled them down in my anger, and I brought down their blood to the earth.”

I called to mind the mercy of the Lord, the excellences of the Lord in all the things with which the Lord rewards us; the Lord is a good judge to the house of Israel; he provides for us according to his mercy, according to the abundance of his righteousness.

And he said, “Are they not my people—children who will not deal falsely?” And he became to them salvation out of all affliction.

It was no ambassador or angel but the Lord himself that saved them, because he loved them and spared them; he himself ransomed them and took them up and lifted them up all the days of old.

11 Then the one who brought up from the land the shepherd of the sheep remembered the days of old: Where is the one who put within them his holy spirit, who led Moyses with his right hand? aWhere is his glorious arm? He overcame the water from before him, to make for himself an everlasting name. He led them through the deep like a horse through a wilderness, and they did not become weary, and like cattle through a plain. A spirit came down from the Lord and guided them. Thus you led your people, to make for yourself a glorious name.

12 Turn from heaven, and see from your holy house and glory. Where are your zeal and your strength? Where is the abundance of your mercy and of your compassions, that you have cheld back from us?

13 For you are our father, because Abraam did not know us and Israel did not recognize us, but you, O Lord, are our father; deliver us; from the beginning your name is upon us.

14 Why, O Lord, did you make us stray from your way and harden our hearts so that we would not fear you? Turn back on account of your slaves, on account of the tribes of your inheritance, so that we may inherit a little of your holy mountain; our adversaries have trampled down your holy precinct.

15 We have become as at the beginning, when you did not rule us, nor was your name called upon us.

64 If you should open heaven, trembling from you would seize the mountains, and they would melt as wax melts from the fire. And fire shall burn up your adversaries, and the name of the Lord shall be manifest among your adversaries; nations shall be confused at your presence!

2(1) When you do your glorious deeds, trembling from you will seize the mountains.

3[2] From ages past we have not heard, nor have our eyes seen any God besides you, and your works, which you will do to those who wait for mercy.

4(3) For he will meet those who do what is right, and they will remember your ways. Look, you were angry, and we sinned; therefore we went astray.

5(4) And we have all become like unclean people; all our righteousness is like the rag of a woman who sits apart. And we have fallen off like leaves because of our acts of lawlessness; thus the wind will take us away.

6(5) And there is no one who calls on your name or remembers to take hold of you, because you have turned your face away from us and have delivered us over because of our sins.

7(6) And now, O Lord, you are our Father, and we are clay; we are all the work of your hands.

8(7) And now, O Lord, you are our Father, and we are clay; we are all the work of your hands.

9(8) Do not be exceedingly angry, and do not remember our sins in season. And now look upon us, because we are all your people.

10(9) Your holy city has become a wilderness; Sion has become like a wilderness, Jerusaleam a curse.

11(10) The house, our holy place, even the glory that our fathers blessed, has been burned by fire, and all our glorious places have fallen in ruins.

12(11) And for all this you have restrained yourself, O Lord, and have kept silent and have humbled us severely.

65 I became visible to those who were not seeking me; I was found by those who were not inquiring about me. I said, “Here I am,” to the nation that did not call my name.

2 I stretched out my hands all day long to a disobedient and contrary people, who did not walk in a true way but after their own sins.

3 These are the people who provoke me to my face continually; they sacrifice in the gardens and burn incense on bricks to the demons, which do not exist, and they fall asleep in the tombs and in the caves for the sake of dreams—those who eat swine’s flesh and broth of sacrifices.

do not come near me, for I am clean." a
This is the smoke of my wrath;
a fire burns in it all the days.

See, it is written before me:
I will not keep silent until I repay into their bosom their sins and those of their fathers—says the Lord—who burned incense on the mountains and reviled me on the hills;
I will repay their works into their bosom.

Thus says the Lord:
As the grape will be found in the cluster,
and they will say, “Do not destroy it, because the blessing of the Lord is in it,”
so I will do for the sake of the one who is subject to me.
For the sake of this one I will not destroy them all.

And I will bring forth the offspring that comes from Jakob and from Louts, and it will inherit my holy mountain, and my chosen ones and my slaves shall inherit it and dwell there.

And there shall be in the forest folds of flocks, and the Ravine of Achor shall become a resting place of herds for my people who have sought me.

But as for you who forsake me and forget my holy mountain and prepare a table for the demon and fill a mixed drink for Fortune,
I will deliver you over to the dagger; all of you shall fall by slaughter;
because I called you and you did not answer,
I spoke and you misheard, and you did what was evil before me and chose the things I did not desire.

Therefore this is what the Lord says:
See, those who are subject to me shall eat,
but you shall be hungry;
see, those who are subject to me shall drink,
but you shall be thirsty;
see, those who are subject to me shall rejoice,
but you shall be put to shame;
see, those who are subject to me shall be glad with joy, but you shall cry out because of the pain of your heart and shall wail for crushing of spirit.

For you shall leave your name a for fullness to b my chosen ones, but the Lord will do away with you.
But to those who are subject to him, a new name shall be called,
which shall be blessed on the earth;
for they shall bless the true God,
and those who swear on the earth shall swear by the true God,
for they shall forget their first affliction,
and it shall not come up into their heart.

For heaven will be new,
and the earth will be new,
and they shall not remember the former things,
nor shall they come upon their heart,
but they shall find joy and gladness in it,
because look, I am making Jerusalem as gladness,
and my people as a joy.

And I will be glad over Jerusalem and rejoice over my people, and no more shall a voice of weeping be heard in it,
nor a voice of crying.

And there shall not be there one b who dies untimely or an old person who will not fulfill his time;
for the young person will be a hundred years old,
but c the one who dies a sinner will be a hundred years old and accursed.

And they shall build houses and themselves shall inhabit them, and they shall plant vineyards and themselves shall eat their fruit,
and they shall not build, and others shall inhabit;
they shall not plant, and others eat, for according to the days of the tree of life shall the days of my people be;
they shall make old the works of their labors.

And my chosen ones shall not labor in vain,
nor bear children for a curse,
because they are an offspring blessed by God.

And it shall be that before they have cried out I will listen to them;
while they are yet speaking I will say, What is it?

Then wolves and lambs shall feed together,
and a lion shall eat straw like an ox,
but a snake b shall eat earth as bread!
They shall not do wrong or destroy on my holy mountain,
says the Lord.

Thus says the Lord:
Heaven is my throne,
and the earth is the footstool of my feet;
what kind of house will you build for me, or of what kind will be the place of my rest?

For all these things my hand has made,
and all these things are mine, says the Lord.
And to whom will I look but to the one who is humble and quiet and trembles at my words?

a Or to the disgust of  b Lacking in Gk  c Or the sinner who dies a hundred years old will also be accursed 3 But the lawless who sacrifices to me a calf is like one who kills a dog,
and he who offers fine flour,
like one who offers a swine's blood;
he who has given frankincense for a memorial,
like a blasphemer.
And these have chosen their own ways and their abominations, which their soul wanted;
4 so I will choose mockeries for them
and repay them their sins, because I called them and they did not answer me,
I spoke and they did not hear,
but they did what was evil in my sight
and chose the things I did not desire.
5 Hear the word of the Lord,
you who tremble at his word;
speak, our brothers,
to those who hate and abominate us so that the name of the Lord may be glorified and seen in their joy,
but those ones shall be put to shame.
6 A voice of crying from the city!
A voice from the shrine!
The voice of the Lord,
rendering retribution to his adversaries!
7 Before she who was in labor gave birth,
before the pain of her pangs came,
she escaped and gave birth to a male.
8 Who has heard of such a thing?
And who has seen thus?
Did the earth give birth in one day?
Was also a nation born all at once?
Because Sion was in labor and she gave birth to her children.
9 But I am the one who gave you this expectation,
and you did not remember me,
said the Lord;
see, was it not I who made the woman who gives birth
and the one who is barren?
said God.
10 Rejoice, O Jerusalem, and celebrate a festival in her, all you who love her;
rejoice with joy,
all you who mourn over her—that you may nurse and be satisfied from her consoling breast, that by much nursing you may take delight from the entrance to her glory.
11 Because this is what the Lord says:
See, I myself turn to them like a river of
peace,
and like a wadi overflowing the glory of
nations;
their children shall be carried on shoulders
and comforted on knees.
13 As a mother will comfort someone,
so also I will comfort you,
and you shall be comforted in Jerusalem.
14 You shall see, and your heart shall rejoice, your bones shall grow like grass, and the hand of the Lord shall be known to those who worship him,
and he shall threaten those who disobey
him.
15 For see, the Lord will come like fire,
and his chariots like a tempest, to render vengeance with wrath
and repudiation with a flame of fire.
16 For by the fire of the Lord shall all the earth be judged,
and all flesh by his sword;
many shall be wounded by the Lord.
17 Those who sanctify and purify themselves for the gardens and who in the porches eat swine's flesh, the abominations and the mouse shall be consumed together, said the Lord.
18 And I understand their works and their rea-sonings; I am coming to gather all the nations and tongues, and they shall come and shall see my glory. 19 And I will leave signs upon them, and from them I will send forth those who are saved to the nations, to Tharsis and Phoud and Loud and Mosoch and Thobel and to Greece and to the islands far away—those who have not heard my name or seen my glory, and they shall declare my glory among the nations. 20 They shall bring your kindred from all the nations as a gift to the Lord, in mule-drawn litters with sunshades, into the holy city Jerusalem, said the Lord, so that the sons of Israel may bring to me their sacrifices with music into the house of the Lord. 21 And I will take for myself some of them as priests and as Leuites, said the Lord.
22 For as the new heaven and the new earth, which I am making, remain before me,
says the Lord,
so shall your offspring and your name stand.
23 And it shall be that month after month and sabbath after sabbath all flesh shall come before me to do obeisance in Jerusalem,
said the Lord.
24 And they shall go forth and see the limbs of the people who have transgressed against me; for their worm shall not die and their fire shall not be quenched and they shall become a spectacle to all flesh.

IEREMIAS
TO THE READER

Edition of the Greek Text
The New English Translation of the Septuagint (NETS) version of Ieremias is based on the critical edition of Joseph Ziegler (Septuaginta: Vetus Testamentum Graecum Auctoritate Societatis Litterarum Gottingensis edidit XV: Ieremias Baruch Threni Epistula Ieremiae [Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1957]), though in a number of instances, notably in chapter 43, we have deviated from Ziegler’s edition. The deviation in 52.24 (“way” > “threshold”) NETS owes to J. Smith.1 No systematic and thorough text-critical reassessment has, however, been carried out.

Translation Profile of the Greek
General Character
Given that, according to opinio communis, Greek Jeremiah (hereafter Ieremias) is based on a Hebrew text substantially at variance with MT, a comparison of the Greek with its source text is no straightforward task. It is nevertheless reasonably clear that the most basic norm of the translator (hereafter Ier)2 was that of isomorphism. That is to say, typically each morpheme of the source text is represented in the target text. This is true not only of so-called content words (lexemes) but as well of structure words. For example, Hebrew articles, notae accusativi, infinitival prefix l, personal pronouns (even when rendered superfluous by Greek inflection), pronominal suffixes, pleonastic pronouns and adverbs, prepositions, and conjunctions are all regularly represented, whether or not such representation results in standard Greek usage. Though certain structural items are at times added in deference to Greek usage, this occurs almost exclusively at the level of phrase and clause and rarely at the level of discourse. Moreover, deference to Greek literary style was often trumped by Ier’s isomorphism, as a result of which Greek articles are notably in short supply.

Be it noted, however, that isomorphism need not mean lexical or grammatical consistency. Thus Hebrew prepositions may at times trigger Greek articles, in the same sort of way that a Hebrew lexeme may be assigned a number of Greek counterparts, differentiated according to contextual demand, whether linguistic or expositional, even though the context may be rather narrowly conceived.

In spite of its isomorphism, Ieremias is usually intelligible though rarely elegant. Yet the reader encounters many instances of unintelligibility. As good an example as any is perhaps 52.19, the more since it contains transcriptions (see further below): καὶ τὰ σαφῆ καὶ τὰ μασμαρὰ καὶ τῶν ύποχύτηρας καὶ τῶν λυχνίων καὶ τῶν πυθών καὶ τῶν κύδων, ἂν χρυσὰ χρυσὰ καὶ ἂν ἀργυρὰ ἀργυρὰ, ἔλαβεν ὁ ἀρχιμάγιερος. Though this line is an exact representation of the Hebrew source text—which was evidently very much like MT—what was a Greek reader without access to the Hebrew to make of it? NETS has glossed it as: “And the chief cook took away the saphphoth and the masmaroth and the pitchers and the lampstands and the censers and the ladles, which were gold gold and which were silver silver,” with a few notes attached to help the reader of English. Problems encountered by Ier in the source text are typically passed on to the reader. Difficulties, too, may be caused by uncertain referents/antecedents of pronominals (e.g., 27.44; 29.14, 20; 42.2). Especially the Oracles Against the Nations (OAN) present many uncertainties of various kinds. All the same, Ier is not totally oblivious to Greek literary conventions. So for example in 4.23–26 he renders the fourfold ἔθεσεν ἔθεσεν ἔθεσεν ἔθεσεν (“I looked at”) of his source into two pairs of ἐπέβλεψα . . . ἔθεσεν. All in all, though, Ieremias often lacks semantic transparency, because too little attention was paid to units of discourse beyond the clausal level.

Stipp rightly notes that “diese Übersetzung auf sprachliche Glätte wenig Rücksicht nahm und in ästhetischer Hinsicht ihren Lesern nicht entgegenkam.”3

2 The label is not intended to preclude more than one translator.
3 Hermann-Josef Stipp, Das masoretische und alexandrinische Sondergut des Jeremiabuches (Freiburg/Göttingen: Universitätsverlag/Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1994) 27 (“This translation paid little attention to linguistic polish and aesthetically failed to accommodate its readers.”)
Of Consistency and Inconsistency

Though Ier’s most basic norm is that of isomorphism, as noted, this does not need to mean a heavy emphasis on lexical/grammatical consistency. As a result, predictable Hebrew-Greek equivalency and isomorphism may be quite distinct. While lack of consistency can suggest different agents—whether translators or revisers—it is equally true that one and the same agent may make use of such inconsistency to slip into his text interpretive elements, whether of purely local import or possibly with a larger scope. We are here interested in such marked usage, especially those instances that are not readily explained as obligatory differentiation in the target language. Here we note some interesting examples. Though the textual facts are clear, the reasons for them are not always so. In each case, the item in question is distributed throughout the book.

Variation at the Word Level

1a νεκρός (“corpse”) 7.33; 9.22; 19.7; 40.5
1b θησαμαίου (“carcass”) 16.18; 41.20; 43.30

In all but 40.5 the Hebrew term is נָבָן, used for a dead body of human and animal alike. Though in this case one can scarcely speak of a default Hebrew-Greek equivalency, the difference in rendering nevertheless invites examination. Since Greek, like English, differentiates, one might expect that 1a denotes deceased humans and 1b dead animals. When one finds that, in fact, both terms are used to describe human dead, θησαμαίου shows itself to be a marked usage and based on contextual considerations. So it seems safe to say that Ier did not think well of King Ioakim, alive or dead (43.30). As might be expected, in Leuitikon (Leviticus) θησαμαίου is standard, with the sole exception of 21.5 where reference is made to a human.

2a ἀλλότριοι θεοί (“strange/foreign gods”) 1.16; 5.19; 7.6, 9, 18; 11.10; 13.10; 16.11; 19.4, 13; 22.9; 25.6. In all instances, with the exception of 5.19 (= נָבָן), ἀλλότριοι is a rendition of נָבָן.
2b ἄλλοι θεοί (“other gods”) 16.13; 39.29; 42.15; 51.3, 5, 8, 15. All cases gloss נָבָן.

The default in this case is reasonably clear. Reasonably clear too would seem to be Ier’s reason for differentiation. Though Israel’s pursuit of “foreign ways” is already noted in the Hebrew source text, signaled notably by מֵרָז (2.25; 3.13; 5.19; 18.14; 37[30].8) and נָבָן (2.21; 5.19; 8.19; 19.4)—all nine glossed by ἀλλότριος—Ier makes it more explicit by differentiating between the worship of “strange/foreign gods” in the homeland (e.g., 5.19) and the worship of “other (non-Yahweh) gods” once the people have been forced to leave their homeland. The same difference in perspective can be seen in Deuteronomy between chapters 4–30 (ἄλλοι), on the one hand, and 31–32 (ἀλλότριοι), on the other, though Deut 31.16 and 32.12 have explicit warrant for differentiation in the Hebrew.

3a προφήτης (“prophet”) 1.5; 2.8, 26, 30; 4.9; 5.13, 31; 7.25; 8.1; 13.13; 14.13, 14, 15(bis), 18; 18.18; 23.6, 11, 13, 14, 15, 16, 21, 25, 26, 28, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34; 25.4; 28.59; 33.5; 34.12, 13, 15; 35.8, 9(bis); 36.15; 39.32; 42.15; 44.19; 49.2; 50.6; 51.4, 31.
3b ψευδοπροφήτας (“pseudo-prophet”) 6.13; 33.7, 8, 11, 16; 34.7; 35.1; 36.1, 8. In both cases, all the glosses are for נָבָן.

Ier’s standard gloss is patently obvious and both items are distributed throughout the book, although not evenly so. Be it noted, however, that when “pseudo-prophet” appears on the scene “prophet” by no means disappears. Since a prophet does not become a pseudo-prophet (a word which arguably originated with Ier) by prophesying by Baal (2.8) nor by prophesying what is wrong (5.31) or lies in the Lord’s name (23.25) nor by not having been sent by the Lord (14.15) nor by being defiled (23.11) or causing defilement (23.15) nor by rendering a vision empty (23.16) or projecting his own thoughts (23.26), it is not immediately clear how a prophet could become a pseudo-prophet. Yet, it is in fact quite possible that Ier is basing his differentiation on Ier 35.9 (= Deut 18.22). That is to say, a prophet is shown to be a pseudo-prophet when what he predicts does not happen. Since after the panoramic overview of 1–32, chapter 33.1 starts the tale of the book anew on a more horizontal plane (see further below), it makes sense that pseudo-prophets should not be shown to exist until chapter 33. Though the term already appears proleptically in 6.13, it does not become applicable until the predicted events are beginning to unfold.

4a ὀρχῶν (“magistrate/ruler”) 1.18; 2.26; 4.9; 8.1; 17.25 (bis); 24.1; 30.3; 31.7; 32.4; 33.10, 11, 12, 16, 21; 39.32; 41.19, 21; 42.4; 43.12, 14, 21; 44.14, 15; 45.22, 25, 27; 51.17, 21; 52.10. All translate נָבָן. ὀρχῶν further has no translation equivalent in 51.9.
4b ἰґεμών ("leader") 45.17; 46.3(bis); 47.7, 13; 48.11, 13, 16; 49.1, 8; 50.4, 5. All translate Ἰ. ἰґεμών further translates Ἰ in 28.23, 57 (cf. v. 28).

4c δυνάστης ("one with power") 41.19. Though this term translates Ἰ, it functions as a replacement for καραδοτος Ἰ. Evidently, Ier did not know what to do with the sequence Ἰ of Judah and Ἰ of Jerusalem.

4d μεγιστάν ("noble") 24.8; 25.18; 27.35; 32.5; 41.10. All translate Ἰ. μεγιστάν further translates Ἰ in 14.3.

Though 4a is Ier's default, 4a, 4b and 4d have wide distribution in the book. Since for Ier the ἰρχοντες are clearly local magistrates, such terminology is evidently deemed inappropriate when the source text speaks of military personnel. That the latter should appear predominantly in later chapters of the book is simply a matter of contents. Both ἰρχοντες and ἰґεμών are apparently deemed inappropriate when the social elites come into view. Ier clearly does not adhere to a lexical correspondence but differentiates based on context.

5a ἐντέλλωμαι ("command") 1.7, 17; 7.22, 23(bis), 31; 11.4(bis); 13.5, 6; 14.14; 17.22; 19.5; 23.32; 27.21; 28.59; 29.7; 39.23; 42.6, 10, 14, 18; 43.5, 8, 26; 45.10, 27.

5b συντάσσω ("instruct") 33.2, 8; 34.3; 36.23; 39.13, 35; 41.22; 44.21. In both cases all the glosses are for ἱπν.

Again Ier's default rendering of the source item is not in doubt nor, for that matter, that this rendering occurs throughout the book, as a result of which the marked item stands in bold relief. It is of interest that, although ἐντέλλωμαι is the Septuagintal favorite, most other books show a comparable mix of the two terms. A quick count of the Pentateuch reveals the following statistics: ἐντέλλωμαι Gen 18, Ex 18, Leu 16x, Num 18x, Deut 82x; συντάσσω Gen 2x, Ex 3x, Leu 12x, Num 27x, Deut 2x. That synonymy determined translational usage to a degree is likely, but it can hardly be the whole story. If ἐντέλλωμαι connotes "to give definite orders, implying authority or official function" (emphasis added), as Louw and Nida note (33.329), not only does the deuteronomistic imbalance become understandable, given the nature of the book, but also the occasional use of συντάσσω in Ieremias. A case in point is 39.13 in distinction from 43.5, 8. While in the former the prophet gives Barouch instructions (συντάσσω) about the safekeeping of a business document, the issue in the latter is that, since Ieremias is in custody, Barouch is commissioned (ἐντέλλωμαι) to read Ieremias' book of oracles in the temple.

What is at issue in the all-too-few examples offered above is not, in the first instance, a "correct" matching of source text and target text but a differentiation in the target language due to context. Hence the variations are not formal but semantic.

Variation at the Phrase/Clause Level

When one moves from the word level to the phrase/clause level, inconsistency for the same Hebrew continues, though again against a general background of consistency. A few examples will have to suffice.

6a στηλιζω το πρόσωπον 21.10 (cf. 24.6 στηλιζω τους ὀφθαλμους)

6b διδωμι το πρόσωπον 49.15

6c τιθημι το πρόσωπον 49.17 (cf. 47.4 τιθημι ὀφθαλμους)

6d ἐφιστημι το πρόσωπον 51.11.

In the four chief instances the gloss is for ἰνκ ς ("set the face"), with the two added ones for ἰνκ ς ("set the eye"). That 21.10 and 24.6 should use the same Greek verb might be expected in view of close similarity in context, but that 49.15 and 49.17 should differ is more difficult to explain, since reference is being made to the same act by the same group of people. Similarly unclear is the reason for ἐφιστημι in 51.11. The point to be made, however, is that the translator's choice though governed by isomorphism, is evidently not necessarily governed by lexical consistency with the source text.

A second example occurs in chapter 41. The Hebrew idiom, הירוט היר ש ("make a covenant"), occurs four times within this chapter, namely in vv. 8, 13, 15, 18, but in three different forms.

7a συντελεω διαθηκην 41.8, 15

7b διατιθημι διαθηκην 41.13

7c ποιεω διαθηκην 41.18

Given the fact that the standard Septuagintal equivalent for הירוט היר ש is διατιθηκη διαθηκη (at times with the simplex verb) and that both Ier 39.40 and 41.13 feature this idiom, the two deviant forms come as a surprise, the more since they appear nowhere else in the Septuagint. The issue for Ier in all three verses is evidently the same, namely, that the διαθήκη in question is not the covenant made with Israel by divine initiative. In 41.8, 15 it is an agreement for release between Sedekias and the people. Verse 18 in both MT (34.18) and LXX contains a possible reference to the golden calf episode (Ex 32), but in the latter the διαθήκη of Sedekias and his ilk is thrashed along with the calf—even though it is rather woodenly expressed.

---

Earlier in Ieremias a similar level of variation obtains both in the Hebrew > Greek direction and vice versa.

8a τάσσω + O(bject) + OC (object complement) 2.15; 3.19
8b τίθημι + O(bject) + OC (object complement) 13.16 (pass. transformation); 22.6; 27.3
8c δίδωμι + O(bject) + OC (object complement) 38.31
In all six cases the Hebrew verb is ἔθι ("put/set")

9a κατάσκοι (ξύλον) 2.20
9b ἀλάωδες (ξύλον) 3.6; 3.13; 17.8
9c εὑρόκιον (ξύλον) 11.16
What is of interest here is not only that all three translate Hebrew תִּל הַנִּיחוֹת and that all have reference to "trees," but that in 2.20; 3.6, 13 these trees are sites of whoredom, as a result of which one might have expected κατάσκοι to have been used in all three. On the other hand, in 11.16 and 17.8 a flourishing tree is a metaphor for Louda (Judah) and for a person who trusts in the Lord respectively. Thus one might expect the same descriptive to have been used. Again, the central point to be made is that Ier was not stuck on strict lexical correspondence even when the contexts are similar or identical.

We close the discussion in this section with a rather lengthy doublet, namely, Ier 10.12–17 and 28(51).15–19. While the two passages are identical in MT (apart from the added "Israel" in 10.16), the Greek shows some rather remarkable differences:

10.12 Κύριος ο νοησάς την γῆν ἐν τῇ ἱερὸι αυτοῦ, ο ἀνορθώσας τήν οἰκουμένην
28.15 ποιῶν γῆν ἐν τῇ ἱερῳ αὐτοῦ, ἔτοιμαξαν οἰκουμένην
10.12 ἐν τῇ σοφίᾳ αὐτοῦ καὶ τῇ φρονήσει αὐτοῦ ἔξετειν τὸν οὐρανὸν
28.15 ἐν τῇ σοφίᾳ αὐτοῦ ἐν τῇ συνέσει αὐτοῦ ἔξετειν τὸν οὐρανὸν
10.13 καὶ πληθὸς ὕδατος ἐν οὐρανῷ καὶ ἀνήγαγε νεφέλας
28.16 εἰς φονὴν έθετο ἤχος ὕδατος ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ καὶ ἀνήγαγε νεφέλας
10.13 ἐς ἱσχατοῦ τῆς γῆς, ἀστραπᾶς εἰς ύποτὸν ἐσοίση
28.16 αἲ ἱσχατοῦ τῆς γῆς, ἀστραπᾶς εἰς ύποτὸν ἐσοίση
10.13 καὶ ἐξήγαγε φῶς ἐκ θησαυρῶν αὐτοῦ
28.16 καὶ ἐξήγαγε φῶς ἐκ θησαυρῶν αὐτοῦ
10.14 ἐμορίεν θαύμας ἀνθρώπως ἀπὸ γνώσεως
28.17 ἐμαυτισθήθη πᾶς ἀνθρώπος ἀπὸ γνώσεως
10.14 κατηχύνθη πᾶς χρυσοχόος ἐπὶ τοῖς γλυπτοῖς αὐτοῦ
28.17 κατηχυνθῆ πᾶς χρυσοχόος ἀπὸ τῶν γλυπτῶν αὐτοῦ
10.14 ὅτι ἤθελ· ἐχάνευον, οὐκ ἔστιν θνησκόν ἐν αὐτοῖς
28.17 ὅτι ἤθελ· ἐχάνευον, οὐκ ἔστιν πνεῦμα ἐν αὐτοῖς
10.15 μάταιά ἐστιν, ἔργα ἐμπεπαγμένα, ἐν καιρῷ ἐπισκοπῆς αὐτῶν ἠπολοῦνται
28.18 μάταια ἐστιν, ἔργα μεμοικημένα, ἐν καιρῷ ἐπισκέψεως αὐτῶν ἠπολοῦνται
10.16 οὐκ ἔστιν τοιαύτη μερίς τῷ Ιακὼβ
28.19 οὐ τοιαύτη μερίς τῷ Ιακὼβ
Transcriptions of Hebrew—as well as some translations that might better have been transferred as transcriptions—are found in considerable number throughout Ieremias. In some cases Ier may have had a source text different from MT, while at other times his source text may have been unintelligible to him. Be that as it may, our interest here, again, is in translational norms. As noted above, a basic norm for Ier was that of isomorphism, i.e., that each morpheme of the source text be represented in the target text. The transcriptions give plenty of evidence of that. Accordingly, items are transcribed even though they make little or no sense in the target text: σῶς (8.7), συγωρ (8.7), μασαρ (17.26; 48(41).5), αἰθέρ (31[48].33; 32.16[25.30], κεφαλαίο (38[31].21), τιμωρία (38[31].21), ασφαλεία (38[31].40), ασφάλεια (52.19), μοισαμαρ (52.19); similarly, transcriptions are supplied with articles when the source text has an article and/or not accusativi, gender and number being gleaned from the source: τῆς χαράς (19.2), τὴν χερέ (44[37].16), τὸ ασφαλεία (52.19), τὸ μοισαμαρ (52.19).

Also noted above—against the backdrop of lexical and grammatical consistency—was that Ier often deviates from defaults for, at times, clearly contextual reasons. That too is reflected in the transcriptions. Although one finds σῶμα χωρὶς for ἃ ἰδεῖν ἐὰν [πᾶν τὸ ἀγαθόν] (“O Lord”) in 22.18, in 41(34).5 we have ὁ σῶμα. Likewise, μᾶνα for ἄρα ἐξορκίζει (“grain offering”) occurs in 17.26 and 48(41).5 when θυσία and διῶρον (MT ἄρα ἐξορκίζει) appear respectively in 14.12 and 28(51).5—both well attested glosses in the LXX. For ἄρα (“broke”) we have σαχάλ in 38(31).40, χειμάρρος in 29(47).2 and διῶρος in 38(31).9, and for ἄρα (“Bozrah”) 31(48).24 has Βοζρ, but 29.23(49.22) has ὁχυρώματα σαυτῆς. Thirdly, there is evidence here of Ier’s penchant for working at the lower levels of constituent structure at the expense of the larger units of discourse. One such case is Ἀρχαβίν in 42(35).2. Though the Hebrew is a plural gentilic, the Greek transcription is a (singular) name. In the following clause Ier fails to represent the plural suffixes by singular pronouns, thereby creating a puzzling text. A reverse example is 29.14(49.13) where ην μέσῳ αὐτῆς represents ἁμαρτίας (“Bozrah”). Though it may be that, as HGS suggests, the source text differed from MT, the point at issue remains: What can “in her midst” mean in the context? Of a similar kind is Ier’s misreading of ἰδεῖν (“Hazor”) throughout the Oracle Against Kedar (30.6[49.28], 8[30], 11[33]) as συλῆ (“brook”). Yet another, very awkward one, is παρ’ ἐμοί for ἀνὴν (“Minni”) in a series of names. For additional transcriptions see Σοφ (21.13), ἴωδέκε (23.6), Σακεν εὐθύς ἐμφώνε (26[46].17), Ἰακεμ (29[47].5), Ἀθαν (27[50].44; 29.20[49.19]), Κέθεμ (30.6[49.28]), Αταθ and Ατατ (31[48].1, 39), Ζοῦρα (31[48].4, cf. v. 34), Ακασίρωθ (31(48).41), φασάκ (38[31].8), σαλείη (45[38].14), and finally an inflected example: χούλανες (7.18; 51[44].19).

In sum, the transcriptions are a good index to the book’s textual-linguistic makeup.

The NETS Translation of Ieremias

This translation aims to be a faithful representation of the Greek text, including many of the warts one finds along the way. In that light the reader should not be surprised to encounter from time to time less than felicitous or even questionnable English. For example, since the use of pleonastic adverbs and pronouns is characteristic of the translator’s isomorphism, we have tried to mimic this usage without, we hope, producing unintelligible English. As a result, 1 1.1 1 e.g., reads “Behold I am bringing evil upon this people from which they will not be able to escape from it” rather than without the final two words. The translation is therefore often one of formal equivalence, reflective of the relationship deemed to exist between the Greek and its Hebrew source.

In an effort to capture the distinctiveness of some of the key, recurring formulae in Ieremias, we have opted for “This is what the Lord says” (τάδε λέγει κύριος) and “ays the Lord” (λέγει κύριος) in distinction from “Thus did the Lord say” (ἐπὶ θυσία κύριος) and “quoth the Lord” (φησὶ κύριος). Though “quoth” is admittedly not current English usage and in form is said to be past tense, it has the distinct advantage of underscoring the quotative use of φησὶ.5

Though NETS has followed the NRSV in its formatting of Hebrew prose in distinction from poetry, this

5 For a discussion of the bisectioning of Greek Jeremiah, see http://ccat.sas.upenn.edu/nets/edition/Prophethal Books, Ieremias, "To the Reader of Ieremias."
should not be taken to mean either that the Greek translator made a conscious distinction between the two or that the Greek text contains poetry.

In pursuance of NETS policy, footnotes have been kept to a minimum, though we have supplied certain helps to the English reader that would not have been available to a Greek reader.

EDITORIAL DETAIL

Since Ziegler's critical edition rather than Rahlfs' Handausgabe has functioned as base text, the numbering of chapters and verses is that of Ziegler. For the most part Ziegler and Rahlfs coincide, but there are a few wrinkles:

- Zi 9.1–26 = Ra 8.23–9.25
- Zi 10.5a = Ra 10.9a
- Zi 26.1 = Ra 25.20
- Zi 26.1 = Ra 26.2
- Zi 29.1–23 = Ra 29.1–16
- Zi 29.8–23 = Ra 30.1–16
- Zi 30.1–16 = Ra 30.17–33
- Zi 32.1–24 = Ra 32.15–38
- Zi 34.1–18 = Ra 34.2–22

1 The dictum of God which came to Jeremias the son of Chelkias of the priests, who was living in Anathoth in the land of Benjamin; a word of God which came to him in the days of King Josias son of Amos of Iouda, in the thirteenth year of his reign. And it came in the days of King Joakim son of Josias of Iouda, until the eleventh year of King Sedekias son of Josias of Iouda, until the captivity of Jerusalem in the fifth month.

4 And a word of the Lord came to him, saying:

5 "Before I formed you in the belly, I knew you,
   and before you came forth from the womb,
   I had consecrated you;
   a prophet to nations I had made you."

6 And I said, “You That Are, Sovereign, Lord! Behold, I do not know how to speak, because I am rather young." 7 And the Lord said to me, “Do not say, ‘I am rather young,’ because you shall go to all to whom I send
   you,
   and you shall speak according to all I command you.

8 Do not be afraid before them, because I am with you to deliver you,
   says the Lord.”

9 And the Lord stretched out his hand to me and touched my mouth, and the Lord said to me, “Behold, I have given my words to your mouth.

10 Behold, today I have appointed you over nations and over kingdoms, to uproot and to pull down and to destroy and to rebuild and to plant.

11 And a word of the Lord came to me, saying, “Jeremias⁴, what do you see?” And I said, “A staff of nut wood.” 12 And the Lord said to me, “You have seen well, for I am watchful over my words to perform them.” 13 And a word of the Lord came to me a second time, saying, “What do you see?” And I said, “A cauldron being heated, and its face⁶ is from the north.”

14 And the Lord said to me: From the face of the north evil shall flare up against all the inhabitants of the land, 15 for behold, I am summoning all the kingdoms from the north of the earth, says
   the Lord, and they shall come, and they shall set, each his throne against the entrances of the gates of Jerusalem and against all its surrounding walls and against all the cities of Iouda. 16 And I will speak to them with judgment about all their wickedness, how they forsook me and burned incense to foreign gods and did obeisance to the works of their own hands. 17 And you, gird up your loins, and stand up, and tell them everything that I command you. Do not be afraid by their presence, nor be terrified before them, because I am with you to deliver you,

18 Behold, I have made you in this very day like a strong city and like a strong bronze wall, to all the kings of Iouda and its rulers and the people of the land. 19 And they will fight you, and they shall not prevail against you, for I am with you to deliver
   you,

2 And he said, This is what the Lord says:

   I remembered the mercy of your youth

⁴Om = Zi ⁶I.e. opening and the love of your growing up,
how you followed the holy one of Israel,
says the Lord.

3 [Israel was holy to the Lord,]
the firstfruit of his products.
All who eat him will err;
evil will come upon them,
says the Lord.

4 Hear a word of the Lord, O house of Iakob and the whole paternal family of the house of Israel. 5This is what the Lord says:
What error did your fathers find in me that they stood far from me and went after worthless things and became worthless themselves?

6 And they did not say, “Where is the Lord who brought us up out of the land of Egypt, in a land boundless and trackless,
in a land waterless and fruitless, in a land that nothing passed in it and no person settled there?”

7 And I brought you into Carmel that you eat its fruit and its good things.
And you entered, and you defiled my land
and made my heritage an abomination.

8 The priests did not say, “Where is the Lord?”
and those who hold fast to the law did not know me,
and the shepherds would act impiously toward me,
and the prophets would prophesy by the goddess Baal
and went after what does not profit.

9 Therefore once more I will go to law with
you,
says the Lord,
and I will go to law with your sons’ sons,
for cross to islands of Chettiim and see,
and send to Kedar and examine with care,
and see if such things have happened:

10 Will nations change their gods?
And these are no gods.
But my people have changed their glory
for one from which they will not profit.

11 The sky was appalled at this and shuddered more and more,
says the Lord,
because my people in fact committed two evils:
they forsook me, fountain of living water,
and they dug out cracked cisterns for themselves
that will not be able to hold water.

12 Surely Israel is not a slave or a homebred one?
Why has he become plunder?
Lions would roar against him
and gave forth their voice, who turned his land into a wilderness,
and his cities were torn down,
to the point that they are not inhabited.

13 And sons of Memphis and Taphnas knew
you
and used to mock you.

14 Has not your abandoning of me brought about these things for you?

15 And now, what do you have to do with the road to Egypt,
to drink the water of Geon?
And what do you have to do with the road to the Assyrians,
to drink the water of rivers?

16 Your apostasy will discipline you,
and your wickedness will convict you.
Both know and see that it is bitter for you to forsake me,
says the Lord, your God,
and I took no pleasure in you,
says the Lord, your God.

17 because long ago you shattered your yoke and burst your bonds,
and you said, “I will not be a slave,
but I will go on every high hill and under every shady tree;
there I will sprawl in my whoredom.”

18 Yet I planted you as a fruitful vine from pure stock.
How did you turn to bitterness,
your foreign vine?

19 Though you wash yourself with nitre and multiply herbs for yourself, you have become stained by your injustices before me,
says the Lord.

20 How will you say, “I was not defiled, and I did not go after the goddess Baal”?
Look at your ways in the common burial place
and know what you did.

21 She widened her ways to the waters of the
wilderness;
she was wind-borne
by the cravings of her soul.

22 She widened her ways to the waters of the
wilderness;
she was wind-borne
by the cravings of her soul.

23 She was handed over.
Who will turn her back?
None who seek her will toil hard;
in her humiliation they will find her.

24 Turn your foot from a rough way and your throat from thirst.
But she said, “I will play the man,” because she had loved foreigners and would go after them.

25 Like a thief’s shame when he is caught,
so the sons of Israel shall be shamed,
they and their kings and their rulers and their priests and their prophets.

26 They said to the tree, “You are my father,” aI.e. with medicinal qualities  bPossibly inspired and to the stone, “You gave me birth.”

And they turned backs to me,
and not their faces.
And in the time of their trouble they will say, “Rise up, and save us!”

And where are your gods
that you made for yourself, if they will rise up and save you in your time of trouble?—
because according to the number of your cities were your gods, O Louda, and according to the number of Jerusalem’s streets
they were sacrificing to the goddess Baal.

Why do you speak to me?
You all acted impiously,
and you all acted lawlessly against me,
says the Lord.

In vain I have struck your children;
discipline you did not accept.
A dagger devoured your prophets like a ravening lion, and you did not fear.

Hear a word of the Lord!
This is what the Lord says:
Surely I have not become a wilderness to Israel or a dried-out land?
Why did my people say, “We will not be ruled,
and we will come to you no more”?

Surely a bride will not forget her adornment,
and a virgin her breast band?
Yet my people forgot me, days without number.

Why is it that you will take exceptional care
in your ways to seek affection?
Not so, but in fact you acted wickedly to defile your ways.

Also on your hands was found blood of innocent souls.
I did not find them in trenches
but at every oak.
And you said, “I am innocent;
only let his anger be turned from me.”
Behold, I am going to law with you for saying, “I did not sin.”

Whatever did you greatly despise
so as to repeat your ways?
And you shall be put to shame by Egypt
as you were put to shame by Assour, because also from there you will come away,
and your hands will be on your head,
because the Lord has rejected your hope,
and you will not prosper through it.

If a man dismisses his wife and she goes from him
and becomes another man’s, surely, if she returns, she will not return any more to him?

Surely when she becomes polluted,
that woman will be polluted?
And you have played the whore with many shepherds,
and would you return to me?
says the Lord.

Raise your eyes straight ahead, and see!
Where have you not been contaminated?
By the ways you have sat for them like a desolate crow.
And you polluted the land with your whoring and wickedness.

And you had many shepherds as an obstacle to yourself;
you got a harlot’s look;
you behaved shamelessly toward all.

Did you not, as it were, call me Home and Father and Originator of your maidenhood?
Surely, it will not remain forever,
nor will it be maintained to victory?
Behold, you spoke,
and you did these evils, and you prevailed.

And the Lord said to me in the days of King Josias:
Have you seen what the settlement of Israel did to me?
They went to every high mountain and under every woodland tree and played the whore there.
And I said after she did all these things, “Return to me,” but she did not return, and faithless Louda saw her faithlessness.
And I saw that for everything in which the settlement of Israel was caught, [in which she committed adultery], and I sent her away and gave her a document of dismissal, and faithless Louda did not fear,
but she too went and played the whore.
And her whoredom came to nothing,
and she committed adultery with tree and stone.
And in all these things faithless Louda did not return to me with her whole heart, but only in pretense.

And the Lord said to me: Israel has justified his soul vis-à-vis faithless Louda.
Go, read these words toward the north,
and you will say:
Return to me, settlement of Israel,
says the Lord,
and I will not set my face against you,
because merciful am I,
says the Lord,
and I will not cherish wrath against you forever.

Only acknowledge your injustice, that you acted impiously against the Lord your God
and poured out your ways to foreigners under every woodland tree, but you did not obey my voice,
says the Lord.

Return, O apostate sons,
says the Lord,
for I will be your lord, and I will take you, one from a city and two from a paternal family, and I will bring you into Sion.

15 And I will give you shepherds after my own heart, and in shepherding they will shepherd you with skill. And it will be, if you multiply and increase in the land, in those days, says the Lord, they shall no longer say, “Ark of the covenant of the holy one of Israel.” It shall not come up in the heart; it shall not be named nor be considered, and it shall not be made again. In those days and at that time they shall call Jerusalem “The Lord’s throne,” and all the nations shall be gathered into her, and they shall no longer walk after the notions of their own evil heart. In those days the house of Iouda shall join the house of Israel, and they shall come to the same place from a land of the north and from all the countries to the land that I gave their fathers for a heritage.

19 And I said, “May it be, O Lord,” because I will make you as children and will give you a choice land as a heritage of God Almighty of nations, and I said, “You will call me Father and will not be turned away from me.” Instead, as a woman is faithless toward her mate, so the house of Israel was faithless toward me, says the Lord.

21 From lips was heard a voice of weeping and of pleading of Israel’s sons, because they did wrong in their ways, they forgot their holy God.

22 Return, O sons who are given to turning, and I will heal your fractures. “We here will be yours, because you are the Lord, our God.

23 Truly the hills and the power of the mountains were a delusion, but through the Lord, our God, is the salvation of Israel.

24 “But from our youth Shame has devoured the labors of our fathers, their sheep and their bull calves and their sons and their daughters. We lay down in our shame, and our dishonor covered us; for we have sinned against our God, we and our fathers, from our youth until this day, and we have not obeyed the voice of the Lord our God.”

4 If Israel returns, says the Lord, to me he shall return, if he removes his abominations from his mouth and shows reverence because of my presence and if he swears, “The Lord lives!” with truth in judgment and in uprightness, nations shall also bless in him, and in him they shall praise God in Jerusalem, because this is what the Lord says to the men of Iouda and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem: Renew for yourselves what has been made new, and do not sow among thorns. Be circumcised to your God, and remove the foreskin of your heart, O men of Iouda and inhabitants of Jerusalem, or else my anger goes forth like fire and will blaze forth, and there will be no one to quench because of the evil of your doings.

5 Declare in Iouda, and let it be heard in Jerusalem; say: Give a sign with a trumpet in the land, and cry greatly; say: “Gather together, and let us enter into the walled cities!” Take up, and flee to Sion; hurry, do not stop, because I am bringing Sion; hurry, do not stop, because I am bringing evil from the north, and a great destruction.

7 A lion has gone up from its lair; an utter destroyer of nations has set out, and he has gone out from his place to make the land a desolation, and cities will be ruined, to the point they are not inhabited. For these things put on sackcloth, and lament and wail, for the anger of the Lord has not turned away from us.

9 And it shall be on that day, says the Lord, that the heart of the king shall perish, and the heart of the rulers, and the priests shall be amazed, and the prophets astounded.

10 And I said, “You That Are, O Sovereign, Lord! So then, when misleading you misled this people and Jerusalem, saying, ‘There shall be peace.’ And behold, the dagger reached as far as their life.”

11 At that time they will say to this people and to Jerusalem: There is a spirit of wandering in the wilderness, a way of the daughter of my people not to what is clean nor to what is holy. A spirit of filling will come to me, but now I speak judgments against them.

13 Behold, he will come up like a cloud, and his chariots like a whirlwind; his horses are swifter than eagles—

Or satisfaction
woe to us, because we are wretched.
for I have spoken, and I will not repent;
I rushed out, and I will not turn back from it.

O Jerousalem, wash your heart of wickedness
so that you may be saved.

How long are thoughts of your trouble within you?—

for a voice of one declaring will come from Dan, and trouble will be heard from Mount Ephraim.

Remind nations, “Behold, they have come!” Declare in Jerousalem, “Bands come from a land far away, and they gave forth their voice against the cities of louda.

They came against her all round like watchers of a field, because you neglected me,
says the Lord.

Your ways and your doings have done these things to you.
This is your wickedness, because it is bitter, because it reached your heart.”

My belly, I feel pain in my belly and in the faculties of my heart.
My soul quivers with excitement!
My heart is beating wildly;
I cannot keep silent, because my soul heard a trumpet sound, a cry of war.

And distress calls upon disaster, because the whole land has become distressed.
Suddenly the tent has become distressed, my skins torn up.

How long will I see people fleeing,
while I hear the sound of trumpets?—

“for the leaders of my people did not know me;
they are stupid sons,
and they have no understanding.
They are skilled in doing evil but did not know how to do good.”

I looked on the earth, and behold, there was nothing, and to the sky, and it had no lights.

I saw the mountains, and they were trembling,
and all the hills were being disturbed.

I looked, and behold, there was no human,
and all the birds of the air were being terrified.

I saw, and behold, Carmel was a wilderness,
and all the cities burned up before the Lord,
and before the wrath of his anger they were annihilated.

This is what the Lord says: The whole land shall be a wilderness; yet I will not make a full end.

Run about in the streets of Jerousalem, and see, and take note, and search in its squares, if there be found one who practices justice and seeks faithfulness, and I will be gracious to them, says the Lord.

They say, “The Lord lives.”
Are they therefore not swearing lies?

O Lord, your eyes—are they not on faithfulness?
You have struck them, but they were not in trouble; you have consumed them, but they did not want to take correction. They have made their faces harder than rock, and they did not want to turn back.

And I said, "Perhaps they are poor; that's why they were not able, because they did not know the way of the Lord and divine judgment."

I will go to the prominent and speak to them, because they were acquainted with the way of the Lord and divine judgment, and behold, they all alike had broken the yoke; they had burst the bonds.

aI.e. the earth
Therefore a lion from the forest struck them, and a wolf right up to the houses destroyed them, and a leopard watched against their cities; all who go out of them shall be hunted—because they multiplied their impieties, they prevailed in their digressions.

For which of these should I be merciful to you? Your sons have forsaken me and would swear by those who are no gods. And I fed them, and they were committing adultery and would lodge in houses of prostitutes. They were lusty stallions, each neighing for his fellow’s wife.

Surely I shall not fail to visit for these things? says the Lord, or shall my soul not take vengeance on such a nation?

Go up upon her battlements, and raze, but do not make a full end; leave behind her under-props, because they are the Lord’s, because in breaking faith, the house of Israel and the house of Juda broke faith with me. They lied to their Lord and said, “These things are not so. No evil will come upon us, and we shall not see dagger and famine.

Our prophets became wind, and a word of the Lord was not in them. Thus shall it be to them!”

Therefore this is what the Lord Almighty says: Because you spoke this utterance, behold, I have given my words in your mouth as a fire and this people as wood, and it shall devour them.

Behold, I am bringing upon you a nation from far away, O house of Israel, says the Lord, a nation [the sound of] whose language you will not understand.

All are strong, and they shall devour your harvest and your food, and they shall devour your sons and your daughters, and they shall devour your sheep and your bull calves, and they shall devour your vineyards and your fig groves and your olive groves, and they shall thresh by sword your fortified cities in which you trust in them.

And it shall be in those days, says the Lord, your God, I will not make a full end of you. And it shall be when you say, “Why has the Lord our God done all these things to us?” then you shall say to them, “Because you were a slave to foreign gods in your land, so you shall be a slave to foreigners in a land that is not yours.”

Declare these things to the house of Jakob, and let it be heard in louda:

Do hear these things, O foolish and heartless people; eyes they have and do not see, ears they have and do not hear.

Will you not fear me? says the Lord, or will you not show reverence before me who sets sand as boundary for the sea? A perpetual ordinance, and it will not transgress it, and it will toss and will not be able, and its waves will roar, and it will not transgress it.

But this people had a noncompliant and disobedient heart; they have turned aside and gone away. And they did not say in their heart, “Do let us fear the Lord our God, who gives us rain, early rain and late rain, according to the season of the satisfaction of the ordinance of harvesting, and he kept it for us.”

Your acts of lawlessness have turned these away, and your sins have distanced good things from you, because impious ones were found among my people, and they set traps to ruin men, and they would catch them.

As a trap, when set up, is full of birds, so their houses are full of treachery; therefore they have become great and rich, and they transgressed justice, they did not judge the cause of the orphan, and the cause of the widow they would not judge.

Surely I shall not fail to visit for these things? says the Lord, or shall my soul not take vengeance on such a nation?

Astonishment and horrible things have occurred in the land: the prophets prophesy what is wrong, and the priests seized with their hands, and my people loved to have it so. And what will you do hereafter?
Jeremiah 6

1 Prevail, O sons of Benjamin, from the midst of Jerusalem! And in Thekouro signal with the trumpet, and over Baitthacharma raise a signal, because evil has popped up from the north and it is becoming a great destruction.

2 And your loftiness, O daughter Sion, shall be removed.

3 Shepherds and their flocks shall come into her. And they shall pitch tents at her all around, and they shall pasture, each with his hand.

4 "Prepare for war against her; rise up, and let us go up against her at noon!" "Woe to us, for the day has declined, because the shadows of the evening fail!"

5 "Rise up, and let us go up by night and destroy her foundations!"—because this is what the Lord says: Cut down her trees; pour out a force against Jerusalem. Ah false city, there is nothing but oppression within her.

6 As a cistern keeps water fresh, so she keeps fresh her wickedness; impiety and distress will be heard within her, before her always. With toil and whip you will be disciplined, O Jerusalem, lest my soul stand away from you, lest I make you an untrodden land which will not be inhabited, because this is what the Lord says: Glean, glean like a vine the remnants of Israel; turn back like the grape gatherer to his basket.

7 To whom should I speak and give warning, and he will hear? Behold, their ears are uncircumcised, and they cannot hear. Behold, the dictum of the Lord was to them an object of scorn; they will not want it at all.

8 And I filled my anger, and I held back and did not finish them. I will pour it out on infants outside and on a gathering of young men as well, because husband and wife shall be seized, an older person with fullness of days.

9 And their houses shall be turned over to others, fields and their wives together, because I will stretch out my hand against the inhabitants of this land, says the Lord, because from their small even to their great, all carried out lawless deeds; from priest even to pseudo-prophet, all produced lies.

10 And they were doctoring the fracture of my people with contempt and saying, "Peace, peace," and where is peace?

11 They were put to shame, because they failed; yet they were not ashamed like people being put to shame, and they did not know their disgrace. Therefore they shall fall in their fall, and they shall perish in a time of visitation, said the Lord.

12 This is what the Lord says: Stand at the roads, and see, and ask for the ancient paths of the Lord, and see what the good way is, and walk in it, and you will find purification for your souls. And they said, "We will not walk in it."

13 I have appointed sentinels for you: "Hear the sound of the trumpet!" And they said, "We will not hear."

14 Therefore, the nations heard, and those that were shepherding their flocks.

15 Hear, O earth; behold, I am bringing evil on this people, the fruit of their turning away, because they did not hold on to my words and they rejected my law.

16 Why do you bring me frankincense from Saba and cinnamon from a land far away? Your whole burnt offerings are not acceptable, and your sacrifices did not gratify me.

17 Therefore this is what the Lord says: Behold, I am giving to this people weakness, and they shall be weak with it, fathers and sons together; a neighbor and his fellow shall perish.

18 This is what the Lord says: Behold, a people is coming from the north, and nations will stir from the farthest part of the earth.

19 They will grasp bow and spear; bold it is and will show no mercy; its sound is like a roaring sea; on horses and chariots it will draw up in battle order like a fire, for battle against you, O daughter Sion!

20 "We have heard news of them; our hands fell helpless; anguish took hold of us, pains as of one giving birth. Do not go out into a field, and do not walk on the roads, because a sword of the enemies sojourns on every side."
26 O daughter of my people, put on sackcloth;
sprinkle with ashes;
make for yourself a mourning for a beloved,
a most pitiable lamentation:
because suddenly distress will come upon us.

27 I have given you as a tester among tested peoples, and you will know me when I test their way.

28 All are noncompliant, going about with slanders;
bronze and iron,
all of them have been corrupted.

29 Bellows failed from a fire;
lead failed;
in vain does a silversmith coin silver;
their wickedness did not melt.

30 Call them “rejected silver,”
because the Lord has rejected them.

7 2Hear a word of the Lord, all Judea. 3This is what the Lord, the God of Israel says: Amend your ways and your doings, and I will cause you to dwell in this place. 4Do not trust in yourselves with deceptive words, because they will not benefit you at all, when you say: “A shrine of the Lord, a shrine of the Lord it is.”

5 Because if in amending, you amend your ways and your doings, and in acting you act with justice between a man and between his fellow 6and do not oppress guest and orphan and widow and do not shed innocent blood in this place and do not go after foreign gods to your own hurt, 7I will also cause you to dwell in this place, in the land that I gave of old to your fathers and forever.

8 But if you trust in deceptive words, whereby you will not benefit, 9and murder and commit adultery and steal and swear wrongly and offer in- cense to the goddess Baal and go after foreign gods that you do not know, 10so that it be ill for you, and if you came and stood before me in the house, where my name has been called on it, and you said, “We have kept away from doing all these abominations”—surely my house, there where my name has been called on it, has not become a den of robbers before you? And I, behold, I have seen it, says the Lord, 12because go to my place which was in Selo, there where I made my name encamp formerly, and see what I did to it because of the wickedness of my people Israel. 13And now, because you have done all these deeds and I spoke to you and you did not hear me and I called you and you did not answer, 14I will also do to the house, where my name is called on it, in which you trust in it, and to the place that I gave to you and to your fathers, just what I did to Selo. 15And I will cast out you from before me, just as I cast out your kinsfolk, all the offspring of Ephraim.

16 And as for you, do not keep praying about this people, and do not request to petition about them, and do not keep making vows, and do not approach me concerning them, because I will not listen. 17Or do you not see what they themselves are doing in the cities of louda and in the streets of Jerusalem? 18Their sons gather wood, and their fathers burn a fire, and their women knead dough to make cakes for the host of the sky, and they poured out libations to foreign gods in order to provoke me to anger. 19Are they not provoking me? says the Lord. Is it not themselves so that their faces may be ashamed? 20Therefore this is what the Lord says: Behold, my wrath and anger are being poured on this place, both on human beings and on animals and on every tree of the field and on the produce of the ground, and it will burn and not be quenched.

21 This is what the Lord says: Gather your whole burnt offerings with your sacrifices, and eat meat, 22because in the day that I brought your fathers up out of the land of Egypt, I did not speak to them and did not command them concerning whole burnt offerings and sacrifices. 23But this dictum I commanded them, saying, “Obey my voice, and I will become a god to you, and you shall become a people to me, and walk in all my ways, which I command you, so that it may be well with you.” 24And they did not obey me, and they did not turn their ear, but they walked by the notions of their evil heart, and they became backward and not forward. 25From the day that their fathers came out of the land of Egypt even until this day, I have also sent out all my slaves the prophets to you by day, and early in the morning I also sent, 26and they did not obey me, and they did not turn their ear, and they stiffened their necks worse than their fathers.

28 And you shall speak this word to them: This is the nation that did not obey the voice of the Lord and did not accept discipline; faithfulness has failed from their mouth.

29 Shear your head, and throw away b, and take a lamentation on your lips, because the Lord has discarded and rejected the generation that did these things,

30 because the sons of louda have done evil c before me, says the Lord; they have arrayed their abominations in the house where my name is called on it, to defile it. 31And they built the altar d of Tapheth, which is in the valley of Hennom’s son, to burn their sons and their daughters with fire—which I did not command them, and I did not intend it in my heart. 32Therefore, behold, days are coming, says the Lord, and they shall no longer say Altard of Tapheth and Valley of Hen- nom’s Son, but Valley of the Slain, and they will bury in Tapheth, because there is no room. 33And the corpses of this people will be food for the birds of the air and for the animals of the earth, and there will not be one to frighten them away. 34And I will abolish a sound of people making mirth and a sound of people rejoicing, a voice of bridegroom and a voice of bride from the cities of louda and from the streets of Jerusalem, because all the land shall become a desolation.

8 At that time, says the Lord, they shall bring the bones of the kings of Judah and the bones of its rulers and the bones of the priests and the bones of the prophets and the bones of the inhabitants of Jerusalem out of their tombs, and they shall air them to the sun and to the moon [and to all the stars] and to all the host of the sky, which things they have loved and been slaves to and which they have followed after them and which they have clung to and which they did obeisance to them. They shall not be mourned and shall not be buried, and they shall be an example on the surface of the ground, because they chose death over life, even for all the remnant that remain of that generation in every place, there where I have driven them—

4 because this is what the Lord says: He that falls, does he not rise up, and he that turns away, does he not return?

5 Why has my people turned away in a shameless turning away and were in the grip of their preference and did not want to return?

6 Do give ear, and hear. Will they not speak in this manner; "There is no person that repents of his wickedness, saying, 'What have I done?'" The runner stopped from his own course, like a sweating horse in his neighing.

7 Even the hasidaa in the sky knew its time; turtledove and swallow, agourb [ sparrows] observe the times of their arrival, but my people did not know the judgments of the Lord.

8 How will you say, "We are wise, and the law of the Lord is with us?" A false pen has become of no use to scribes.

9 Wise were put to shame and were terrified and caught, because they have discarded the word of the Lord. What wisdom is in them?

10 Therefore I will give their wives to others and their fields to heirs.

13 And they will gather their produce, says the Lord; there are no grapes on the vines, and there are no figs on the fig trees; even the leaves have fallen off.

14 For what do we sit still? Gather together, and let us go into the fortified cities and be cast out, because God has cast us out and has given us water with gall to drink, because we have sinned before him.

15 We gathered for peace, and there was no good, for a time of healing, and behold, exertion.

16 From Dan we will hear the sound of the speed of his horses; at the sound of the neighing of his cavalry the whole land quaked. And he will come and devour land and all that fills it, city and those who live in it.

17 For behold, I am sending out against you deadly snakes that cannot be charmed, and they shall bite you. Incurable things with the pain of your puzzled heart.

19 Behold, a voice of the daughter of my people from a land far away: "Is the Lord not in Sion? Or is there no king there?" ("Why have they provoked me to anger with their carved images and with strange vanities?")

20 "Summer ended; harvest passed, and we were not saved." Because of a fracture of the daughter of my people I was made dizzy; dismay has taken hold of me, pains as one giving birth.

22 Is there no pine resin in Galaad, or is a physician not there? Why has the healing of the daughter of my people not come about?

9 Who will give my head water and my eyes a fountain of tears, and I shall bewail my people day and night, the slain of the daughter of my people?

2 Who would give me in the wilderness a remote lodging place, and I shall leave my people and go away from them? Because they all commit adultery, a band of faithless they are.

3 And they bent their tongue like a bow; falsehood and not faith grew strong in the land, because they proceeded from evil to evil, and me they did not know.

4 Each of you, beware of his fellow, and put no trust in their kin, because every brother will trip up with the heel.

and every friend will go around deceitfully.
5 Each will mock at his friend;
thru... committed injustice and did not pause so as to return.
6 Usury upon usury, deceit upon deceit! They did not want to know me.

7 Therefore this is what the Lord says: Behold, I will refine them and test them, because I will act in the face of the wickedness of the daughter of my people.
8 Their tongue is a wounding arrow; the words of their mouth are deceitful. He speaks peaceably to his fellow but inwardly has enmity.
9 Surely I shall not fail to visit for these things? says the Lord, or shall my soul not take vengeance on such a people?

Take up wailing for the mountains, and a lamentation regarding the paths of the wilderness, because they failed to the point that there are no people; they did not hear a sound of existence; from the birds of the air even to animals they departed; they went away.

And I will render Jerusalem a settlement of migrants and a lair of dragons, and I will make the cities of Judah an annihilation, to the point that it is uninhabited.

12 Who is the intelligent person? Let him also understand this, and him to whom a word of the mouth of the Lord has come, let him declare it to you. For what reason did the land perish, was kindled like a wilderness, to the point that nothing passes through it? 13And the Lord said to me: Because they forsook my law that I gave before them, they also have not obeyed my voice 14but have gone after what pleases their own evil heart and after the idols, which their fathers taught them.

Therefore this is what the Lord says: Behold, I will feed them anguish and will give them water with gall to drink. 16And I will scatter them among the nations to whom they and their fathers did not know, and I will send the dagger upon them until I have consumed them with it, says the Lord.

18 and let them raise a lament over us, and let our eyes bring down tears, and let our eyelids flow with water, because a sound of pity was heard in Sion: "How we have suffered hardship! We were utterly shamed, because we have abandoned the land and we have cast down our quarters."

Do hear, O women, a divine word, and let your ears accept words of his mouth, and teach to your daughters a dirge, and a woman to her companion a lament "because death has come up through our windows, has entered into our land, to destroy infants outside and young men from the squares.

And human corpses shall become an example upon the surface of the plain of the land, and like grass behind a mower, and there shall be no one to gather."

This is what the Lord says: Let not the wise boast in his wisdom, and let not the mighty boast in his might, and let not the wealthy boast in his wealth, but let him who boasts boast in this: that he understands and knows that I am the Lord when I do mercy and justice and righteousness in the earth, because in these things is my will, says the Lord.

Behold, days are coming, says the Lord, and I will visit on all circumcised their foreskin; on Egypt and on Judea and on Edom and on the sons of Ammon and on the sons of Moab and on every one who shaves all around what is on his face, those who live in the wilderness, because all the nations are uncircumcised in the flesh and all the house of Israel are uncircumcised in their heart.

Hear a word of the Lord that he spoke to you, O house of Israel. 2This is what the Lord says: Do not learn according to the ways of the nations, and do not be afraid of the signs of the sky, because they are afraid of them to their faces, because the precepts of the nations are vain: there is a tree from the forest, cut down, a work of a craftsman, and a molten image.

They have been beautified with silver and gold; they fastened them with hammers and nails, and they shall not be moved.

Wrought silver it is—they will not walk.

Beaten silver will come from Tharsis, gold of Mophas
and a hand of goldsmiths—works of craftsmen all;
they will clothe them in blue and purple.

Raised they will be carried,
because they will not walk.
Do not be afraid of them,
because they shall not do evil,
and there is no good in them.

Thus shall you say to them: Let gods who did not make the sky and the earth perish from the earth and from under this sky.

It is the Lord who made the earth by his strength, who set upright the world by his wisdom,
and by his prudence he stretched out the sky.

and a quantity of water was in the sky,
and he brought up clouds from the end of the earth.
Lightnings he made into rain,
and he brought out light from his storehouses.

Every person was stupid, a apart from a knowledge;
every goldsmith was put to shame at his carved images,
because they cast lies;
there is no breath in them.

Worthless they are, works of mockery;
at the time of their visitation they shall perish.

Such a portion is not Iakob's;
because he who formed all things,
he is his inheritance;
the Lord is his name.

He gathered your substance from outside, when it was residing in choice places—
because this is what the Lord says:
Behold, I am tripping up the inhabitants of this land with affliction so that your plague may be discovered.

Woe because of your fracture!
Your plague is painful.
So I said, “Truly this is my wound, and it seized me.”

My tent endured hardship,
and all my skins were torn;
my sons and my sheep are no more;
there is no longer a place for my tent,
a place for my curtains.

Because the shepherds played the fool and did not seek out the Lord, therefore the whole pasture did not comprehend,
and they were scattered.

A sound of a report! Behold, it is coming—

\^I.e. without \^goldsmiths <Gk = bômos and a great commotion from a land of the north, to make the cities of Iouda an annihilation and a nesting place for sparrows.

I know, O Lord, that a human being’s way is not his own,
nor shall a man journey and direct his journey.

Correct us, O Lord, but in just measure and not in anger so that you may not make us few.

Pour out your anger on nations that do not know you and on generations that did not call on your name, because they have devoured Iakob and they have consumed him and his pasture they have made desolate.

The word that came from the Lord to Ieremias, saying: 2Hear the words of this covenant. And you shall speak to the men of Iouda and to the inhabitants of Ierousalem. 3And you shall say to them, This is what the Lord, the God of Israel, says: Cursed be the person who will not heed the words of this covenant, 4which I commanded your fathers in the day that I brought them up out of the land of Egypt, out of the iron smelter, saying, Hear my voice, and do all that I command you. And you shall become a people to me, and I will become a god to you, 5that I may establish my oath that I swore to your fathers, to give them a land flowing with milk and honey, as this day. And I answered and said, “May it be, Lord.”

6 And the Lord said to me: Read these words in the cities of Iouda and outside of Ierousalem, saying: Hear the words of this covenant and do them. 8And they did not.

9 And the Lord said to me: A bond of union was found among the men of Iouda and among the inhabitants of Ierousalem. 10They have turned back to the injustices of their fathers of former times, who did not want to listen to my words, and behold, they are walking after foreign gods to be slaves to them, and the house of Israel and the house of Iouda have scattered the covenant that I made with their fathers. 11Therefore, this is what the Lord says, Behold, I am bringing evil upon this people from which they will not be able to escape from it, and they will cry out to me, and I will not listen to them. 12And the cities of Iouda and the inhabitants of Ierousalem will go and will cry out to the gods to whom they are burning incense to them. Surely, they will save them in the time of their troubles?—13because your gods were according to the number of your cities, O Iouda, and according to the number of exits of Ierousalem you have set up altars\^ to burn incense to the goddess Baal.

14 And as for you, do not keep praying for this people, and do not keep making a request with petition and prayer on their behalf, because I will not listen at the time they call to me in the time of their trouble. 15 Why has the beloved done an abomination in my house? Surely vows and holy flesh will not remove from you your wickedness, or will you escape by means of these things? 16 The Lord called your name a beautiful olive tree, well shaded in appearance; at the sound of its pruning the affliction was great on you; its branches were rendered useless. 17 And the Lord, who planted you, pronounced evil against you, in return for the evil of the house of Israel and the house of Judah, because they have done this to themselves to provoke me to anger by offering incense to the goddess Baal.

18 O Lord, make it known to me, and I will know; then I saw their doings.
19 But I, like an innocent lamb led to be slaughtered, did not know. They devised an evil scheme against me, saying, “Come, and let us throw wood into his bread, and let us wipe him out from the land of the living, and his name will no longer be remembered!”

20 O Lord, when you judge righteously, when you test kidneys and heart, may I see your avenging on them, because to you I have revealed my plea of right.
21 Therefore this is what the Lord says in reference to the men of Anathoth, who seek my soul, who say, “You shall not prophesy in the name of the Lord; otherwise you will die by our hands”— 22 Behold, I will visit upon them; their young men shall die by dagger, and their sons and their daughters shall come to their end by famine, and there shall be no remnant of them, because I will bring evil upon the inhabitants of Anathoth, in the year of their visiting.

12 You are in the right, O Lord, because I will make my defense to you, but I will speak of judgments to you. Why is it that the way of the impious prospers? Why did all who commit acts of faithlessness thrive?
2 You planted them, and they took root; they bred children and produced fruit; you are near to their mouths and far from their kidneys.
3 And you, O Lord, you know me; you have tested my heart before you. Purify them for a day of their slaughter!
4 How long will the land mourn, and all the grass of the field wither from the wickedness of those who live in it? Animals and birds were annihilated, because they said, “God will not see our ways.”

5 Your feet are running, and they undo you; how will you prepare for horses? And you trusted in a land of peace; how will you fare in the roaring of the Jordan?—
6 because even your kinsfolk and the household of your father, even they have dealt faithlessly with you; they too shouted; they were gathered behind you; do not believe them, because they will speak good things to you.

7 I have forsaken my house; I have let go of my heritage; I have given my beloved soul into the hands of her enemies.
8 My heritage has become to me like a lion in a forest; she has given forth her voice against me— therefore I hated her.
9 Surely my heritage is not a hyena’s cave to me or a cave all around her? Go, assemble all the animals of the field, and let them come to eat her.
10 Many shepherds have destroyed my vineyard; they have defiled my portion; they rendered my desired portion an untrodden wilderness.
11 It was made into an annihilation of destruction; on my account the whole land was annihilated with annihilation, because there is not a man who lays it to heart.
12 Upon every trail in the wilderness spoilers have come, because a dagger of the Lord will devour from one end of the land to the other end of the land; there is no peace for any flesh.
13 Sow wheat, and reap thorns. Their farms will not profit them. Be ashamed of your boasting, of reproaching before the Lord—
14 because this is what the Lord says concerning all the evil neighbors who touch my heritage that I have allotted to my people Israel: Behold, I am tearing them from their land, and Judah I will cast out from among them. 15 And it shall be after I have cast them out, I will turn and have mercy on them, and I will settle them, each in his heritage and each in his land. And it shall be, if when learning they learn the way of my people, to swear by my name, “The Lord lives,” as they taught my people to swear by the goddess Baal, and they shall be built up in the midst of my people.

13 This is what the Lord says, “Go, and acquire for yourself a linen loincloth, and put it on your loins, and it shall not pass through water.” 2 And I acquired the loincloth according to the word of the Lord and put it on my loins. 3 And a word of the Lord came to me, saying, 4 “Take the loincloth that is on your loins, and rise up, and go to the Euphrates, and hide it there in a hole of the rock.” 5 And I hid it by the Euphrates, as the Lord commanded me. 6 And it happened after many days that the Lord said to me, “Rise up, go to the Euphrates, and take from there the loincloth that I commanded you to hide there.” 7 And I went to the Euphrates river and dug, and I took the loincloth from the place, there where I had hidden it. And behold, it had been utterly destroyed—which will be good for nothing. 8 And a word of the Lord came to me saying: This is what the Lord says: 9 Just so I will destroy the pride of Iouda and the pride of Ierousalem, 10 this great pride, those who refuse to obey my words and have gone after foreign gods to be slaves to them and to do obeisance to them, and they shall be like this loincloth, which shall be good for nothing, 11 because as the loincloth clings to a person’s loins, so I made the whole house of Israel and the whole house of Iouda cling to myself in order that they might be for me a people of name, both as a boast and as a glory. And they did not listen to me. 12 And you shall say to this people: Every wineskin shall be filled with wine. And it shall be if they say to you, “Surely, in knowing shall we not know that every wine-skin will be filled with wine?” 13 And you shall say to them: This is what the Lord says: Behold, I am filling the inhabitants of this land—both their kings, the sons of Dauid who sit on their throne and the priests and the prophets and Iouda and all the inhabitants of Ierousalem—with drunkenness. 14 And I will scatter them, a man and his brother, and their fathers and their sons in the same manner; I will not yearn after, says the Lord, and I will not spare or have compassion at their destruction.

15 Hear, and give ear, and do not be lifted up, because the Lord has spoken. 16 Give glory to the Lord your God before he brings darkness and before your feet stumble on dark mountains, and you will wait for light, and a shadow of death is there, and they shall be placed in darkness. If you do not hear, your soul will weep in secret due to pride, and your eyes will bring down tears, because the Lord’s flock has been smashed.

18 Say to the king and to those in power: "Be humbled, and sit down, because your crown of glory has been removed from your head."

19 The cities toward the south were shut up, and there was no one to open; l ouda a was exiled; he completed a complete exile.

20 Lift up your eyes, O Ierousalem, and see those who come from the north. Where is the flock that was given you, sheep of your glory? What will you say when they visit you? And it was you who taught them lessons for rule over you. Will not pangs take hold of you, like a woman giving birth? And if you say in your heart, "Why have these things come against me?" it is for the greatness of your injustice that your hind parts were uncovered, that your heels were made a spectacle of. Will an Ethiopian change his skin, and a leopard her spots? And will you be able to do good, though you have learned evil? And I scattered them like firewood driven by the wind into the wilderness. This is your lot and portion for your disobeying of me, says the Lord, because you have forgotten me and hoped in lies. It is I that will reveal your hindquarters to your face, and your dishonor will be seen, both your adultery and your neighing and the estranging of your prostitution; on the hills and in the fields I have seen your abominations. Woe to you, O Ierousalem! Because you were not cleansed behind b me, how long will it yet be?

14 And a word of the Lord came to Ieremias concerning the drought:

2 Judea mourned, and her gates were emptied, and they were darkened in the land, and the cry of Ierousalem went up.

aIoudas = Zi bOr after
And her nobles sent their young men for water; they came to the cisterns and found no water, and they returned their vessels empty.

And the labors of the land failed, because there was no rain; farmers were put to shame; they covered their head.

Even does in the field gave birth and forsook atheir young, because there was no herbage.

Wild asses stood by wooded valleys; they snuffed up wind; their eyes failed, because there was no grass.

If our sins withstood us, O Lord, act for us for your sake, because our sins are many before you, because we have sinned.

You are Israel’s endurance, O Lord, and you save in time of trouble; why have you become like a resident alien in the land and like an indigenous person turning aside for lodging?

Surely you shall not be like a person asleep or like a man not able to save? And you are among us, O Lord, and your name has been called upon us; do not forget us!

Thus says the Lord with reference to this people: They have loved to move their feet, and they have not spared, and God found no pleasure in them; now he will remember their injustice.

And the Lord said to me: Do not pray concerning this people for good, because if they fast, I will not hear their petition, and if they offer whole burnt offerings and sacrifices, I will not have pleasure in them, because by dagger and by famine and by death I will make an end of them.

And I said: "You That Are, Lord! Behold, their prophets are prophesying and saying, 'You shall not see a dagger, nor shall famine be among you, because I bestow truth and peace on the land and in this place.' ”

The prophets are prophesying lies in my name; I did not send them, and I did not command them and did not speak to them, because they are prophesying to you lying visions and divinations and omens and preferences of their own heart.

Therefore this is what the Lord says concerning the prophets who prophesy lies in my name, and I did not send them, who say, “Dagger and famine shall not come on this land”: By a sickly death they shall die, and by famine the prophets shall come to an end. And the people, to them to whom they prophesy, they also shall be thrown out in the streets of Jerusalem, before the dagger and the famine, and there shall be no one to bury them—b and their wives and their sons and their daughtersb. And I will pour out their evil upon them.

And you shall say to them this word: Bring down upon your eyes tears day and night, and let them not cease, because the daughter of my people was shattered with a fracture and with a very grievous blow.

If I go out into the plain, and behold, casualties of a dagger! And if I enter into the city, and behold, hardship of famine, because priest and prophet went to a land of which they had no knowledge!

Surely when rejecting, you did not reject Iouda? And has your soul departed from Sion? Why did you strike us, and there is no healing for us? We waited for peace, and there was no good, for a time of healing, and behold, disturbance.

We were aware of our sins, O Lord, injustices of our fathers, because we have sinned before you.

Stop for your name’s sake; do not destroy the throne of your glory; remember, do not scatter your covenant with us.

Surely, there is no one among idols of the nations that brings rain? And whether the sky will give its abundance . . . ? Is it not you yourself? And we will wait on you, because it is you who did all these things.

And the Lord said to me: If Moyses and Samouel stood before me, my soul would not be toward them. Send this people away, and let them go! And it shall be, if they say to you, “Where shall we go?” you shall also say to them: This is what the Lord says: Those destined for death, to death, and those destined for a dagger, to a dagger; and those destined for famine, to famine, and those destined for captivity, to captivity.

And I will avenge on them four kinds, says the Lord: the dagger for slaughter and the dogs for tearing and the wild animals of the earth and the birds of the air for eating and for corruption.

It is you that have turned away from me, says the Lord; you will go backward, and I will stretch out my hand and destroy you, and I will let them off no more.

And I will disperse them in a dispersion in the gates of my people.

She who bore seven was depleted; her soul became miserable; the sun set for her while it was yet midday; she has been shamed and disgraced.

The rest of them I will give to a dagger before their enemies.

Woe is me, O mother! As whom did you bear me? A man being condemned and at variance with the whole land! I neither owed nor did any one owe me; my strength failed amongst those that curse me.

And your treasures I will give as plunder, as a payment for all your sins, and in all your borders.

And you, do not take a wife, says the Lord God of Israel, and no son or daughter shall be born to you in this place, because this is what the Lord says concerning the sons and concerning the daughters who are born in this place and concerning their mothers who bore them and their fathers who begot them in this land: They shall die by a sickly death. They shall not be lamented, and they shall not be buried; they shall become an example on the surface of the ground, both for the wild animals of the earth and for the birds of the air. By dagger they shall fall, and by famine they shall be brought to an end.

This is what the Lord says: Do not enter into their revel, and do not go to lament, and do not bemoan them, because I have removed my peace from this people.

And you shall not lament for them, nor shall they make incisions, and they shall not be shaved. And bread shall not be broken in their mourning, for comfort over the dead; they shall not make him drink a cup for comfort over his father and mother.

You shall not enter into a house of feasting, to sit with them to eat and drink, for this is what the Lord says, the God of Israel: Behold, I am banishing from this place, before your eyes and in your days, a voice of joy and a voice of gladness, a voice of bridegroom and a voice of bride.

And it shall be when you tell this people all these dicta, and they say to you, "Why has the Lord spoken all these evil things against us? What is our injustice? And what is our sin that we have committed before the Lord our God?" And you shall say to them: It is because your fathers have forsaken me, says the Lord, and were going after foreign gods and have been subject to them and did obedience to them and have forsaken me and have not kept my law, and you have behaved worse than your fathers, and behold, every one of you is following after the things that please your evil heart so as not to obey me. And I will hurl you from this land into a land that you and your fathers have not known, and there you shall be slaves to other gods who will show you no mercy.

Therefore, behold, days are coming, says the Lord, and they shall no longer say, “The Lord lives who brought the sons of Israel up out of the land of Egypt,” but “The Lord lives who brought the house of Israel up out of the land of the north and out of all the countries, there where they had been driven.” For I will restore them to their own land that I gave to their fathers.

Behold, I am sending many fishermen, says the Lord, and they shall catch them, and afterward I will send many hunters, and they shall hunt them on every mountain and on every hill and out of the clefts of the rocks, because my eyes were on all their ways and their acts of injustice were not concealed from my sight. And I will doubly repay their injustices and their sins with which they have polluted my land with the carcasses of their abominations and with their lawless acts, by which they erred against my inheritance.

O Lord, my strength and my help and my refuge in a day of troubles, to you shall nations come from the end of the earth and say: How have our fathers acquired false idols, and there is no profit in them!

Will a person make for himself gods? But these are no gods!

Therefore, behold, I will make clear to them at this time my hand and make known to them my power, and they shall know that my name is the Lord.

Cursed is the person who has his hope in a human and will steady the flesh of his arm on him, and his heart will stand away from the Lord.

And he shall be like a wild tamarisk in the wilderness; he shall not see when good things come. And he shall encamp by the seaside, in a wilderness, in a salt land that is not inhabited.

And blessed is the person who trusts in the Lord, and the Lord shall be his hope.

And he shall be like a tree thriving beside waters, and it shall send out its roots to moisture. And it shall not fear when heat comes, and the trunks on it shall be grove-like; in a year of drought it shall not fear, and it shall not cease to produce fruit.

The heart is deep above all else, and so is man, and who shall understand him?

I, the Lord, am one who tests hearts and examines kidneys, to give to each according to his ways and according to the fruit of his doings.

A partridge gathered what she did not hatch. When one produces his wealth not with discretion—at the midpoint of his days they will leave him, and at his end he will be a fool.

O exalted throne of glory, our sanctity!

O endurance of Israel! O Lord! Let all who forsake you be put to shame; let those who have turned away be recorded on the earth, because they have forsaken the fountain of life, the Lord.

Heal me, O Lord, and I shall be healed; save me, and I shall be saved, because you are my boast.

Behold, is it they that say to me, “Where is the word of the Lord? Let it come!”

But I have not tired of following after you, and man’s day I have not desired; you understand; what came from my lips is before you.

Do not become an alienation to me when you spare me in an evil day.

Let my persecutors be shamed, and may I not be shamed; may they be terrified, and may I not be terrified; bring on them an evil day; smash them with a double fracture!

This is what the Lord says: Go, and stand in the gates of the sons of your people, by them by which kings of Iouda enter and by them by which they go out and in all the gates of Ierousalem, and you will say to them: Hear a word of the Lord, you kings of Iouda, and all Judea and all Ie-rousalem, who enter by these gates. This is what the Lord says: Watch your souls, and do not bear burdens on the day of the sabbaths, and do not go in by the gates of Ierousalem. And do not carry burdens out of your houses on the day of the sabbaths, and you shall not do any work; keep the day of the sabbaths holy, as I commanded your fathers. (23) And they did not hear and did not incline their ear; and they stiffened their neck more than their fathers so as not to hear me and not to receive instruction.

24 And it shall be if you hear me by hearing, says the Lord, so as not to bring in burdens through the gates of this city on the day of the sabbaths and to keep the day of the sabbaths holy so as not to do any work, 25 then there shall enter through the gates of this city kings and rulers sitting on the throne of David, and mounted on chariots and horses, they and their rulers, men of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and this city shall be settled forever. 26 And they shall come from the cities of Judah and all around Jerusalem and from the land of Benjamin and from the plain and from the mountain and from the southern land, bringing whole burnt offerings and sacrificial victims and manna and frankincense, bringing praise into the house of the Lord. 27 And it shall be, if you do not listen to me, to keep the day of the sabbaths holy, so as not to carry in burdens and not to enter by the gates of Jerusalem on the day of the sabbaths, I will also kindle a fire in its gates, and it shall devour the quarters of Jerusalem and shall not be quenched.

18 The word that came from the Lord to Jeremiah, saying: 2 “Get up, and go down to the potter’s house, and there you will hear my words.” 3 And I went down to the potter’s house, and behold, he was doing a job on the stones. 4 And the vessel he was making failed in his hands, and again he made it into another vessel, as seemed good to him to do.

5 And a word of the Lord came to me, saying: 6 “Shall I not have the power to do with you, O house of Israel, just as this potter did? Behold, you are in my hands like the clay of the potter. 7 At last let me speak with reference to a nation or with reference to a kingdom, to remove them and to destroy, and let that nation turn from all their evil, and I will change my mind about the evils that I devised to do to them. 8 And at last let me speak in reference to a nation and in reference to a kingdom to rebuild and to plant it, and let them do evil before me so as not to hear my voice, and I will change my mind about the good things that I had spoken to do to them. 9 And now, say to the men of Judah and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem: Behold, I am shaping evil against you and devising a plan against you. Let each now turn from his evil way and make your doings more noble.

12 And they said, “We will play the man, because we will go after our own aversions, and each of us will do what pleases his evil heart!”

13 Therefore this is what the Lord says: Do ask among nations: Who has heard such horrible things which Virgin Israel did exceedingly?

14 Surely, breasts will not fail from a rock, or snow from the Lebanon?

15 Surely water violently carried by wind will not change course?

16 Because my people forgot me, they burned incense in vain, and they will become weak in their ways, to tread for miles on ancient paths, since they have no road for travel, to render their land an annihilation and a thing to be hissed at forever. All who pass through it will be astonished and shake their head.

17 I will disperse them before their enemies like a scorching wind. I will show them a day of their ruin.

18 And they said, “Come, let us devise a scheme against Jeremiah—because law shall not perish from a priest, and counsel from an intelligent person, and a word from a prophet. Come, and let us strike him with the tongue, and we will hear all his words.”
burial ground of the sons of their children which is at the entry of the gate Charsith\textsuperscript{a} and read there all the words that I tell you. \textsuperscript{3}And you shall say: Hear a word of the Lord, O kings of Iouda and men of Iouda and inhabitants of lerousalem and those who enter in these gates. This is what the Lord, the God of Israel, says: Behold, I am bringing evil upon this place so that the ears of everyone who hears of it will tingle. \textsuperscript{4}Because they have forsaken me and have made this place foreign and offered incense in it to foreign gods whom they did not know, they nor their fathers, and the kings of Iouda have filled this place with innocent blood \textsuperscript{5}and built high places of the goddess Baal to burn their sons with fire, which things I did not command nor intended in my heart. \textsuperscript{6}Therefore behold, days are coming, says the Lord, and this place will no longer be called Fall and Burial Ground of Slaughter. \textsuperscript{7}And I will slaughter the plan of Iouda and the plan of lerousalem in this place and will make them fall by dagger before their enemies and by the hands of people who seek their souls. And I will give their corpses for food to the birds of the air and to the wild animals of the earth. \textsuperscript{8}And I will make this city into an annihilation and into a hiss; everyone who passes by it will look sullen and will hiss because of all its blow. \textsuperscript{9}And they shall eat the flesh of their sons and the flesh of their daughters in this city and in the siege with which their enemies besiege them.

10 And you shall crush the jug in the sight of the men who go out with you \textsuperscript{11}and shall say: This is what the Lord says: Thus will I crush this people and this city, as an earthen vessel is crushed, which can never be mended again. \textsuperscript{12}Thus will I do, says the Lord, to this place and to the inhabitants in it, that this city be rendered as the one falling to ruin. \textsuperscript{13}And the houses of lerousalem and the houses of the kings of Iouda shall be like the ruinous place of unclean things in all the houses on whose roofs they have burned incense to the host of the sky and poured out libations to foreign gods.

14 And leremias came from the Fall, there where the Lord had sent him to prophesy, and he stood in the court of the Lord’s house and said to all the people: \textsuperscript{15}This is what the Lord says: Behold, I am bringing upon this city and upon its villages all the evil that I have spoken against it, because they have stiffened their neck so as not to listen to my commandments.

\textsuperscript{20}And the priest Paschor son of Emmer—he was also appointed leader of the house of the Lord—heard leremias prophesying these words. \textsuperscript{2}And he struck him and put him into the sluice, which was by the gate of a house designated “the upper,” which was in the house of the Lord. \textsuperscript{3}And Paschor brought leremias out of the sluice, and leremias said to him, The Lord has called your name not Paschor, but Deportee, \textsuperscript{4}for this is what the Lord says: Behold, I am assigning you to deportation with all your friends, and they shall fall by their enemies’ dagger, and your eyes shall see it. And I will give you and all Iouda into the hands of the king of Babylon, and they shall deport them and shall cut them down with daggers. \textsuperscript{5}And I will give all the strength of this city and all its toils and all the treasures of the king of Iouda into the hands of his enemies, and they shall bring them into Babylon. \textsuperscript{6}And as for you and all who live in your house—you shall go in captivity, and in Babylon you shall die, and there you shall be buried, you and all your friends, to them to whom you have prophesied lies.

\textsuperscript{7}O Lord, you have misled me, and I was misled; you got the upper hand and prevailed; I have become a laughingstock all day long; I continued to be mocked, because I will laugh with my bitter speech; I will call upon faithlessness and wretchedness, because the Lord’s word has become for me a reproach and a derision my whole day.

8 And I said, “I will not name the name of the Lord and will no longer speak in his name.” And it became like a burning fire flaming in my bones, and I became limp everywhere, and I cannot bear up, because I heard the blame of many gathered around, “Band together, and let us band together against him, all you men, his friends! Watch his intent, whether he can be misled, and we can prevail against him and take our revenge on him.”

11 And the Lord is with me like a strong warrior; therefore they persecuted me and were not able to consider. They were greatly shamed, because they did not consider their dishonor, which will never be forgotten.

12 O Lord, one who tests what is right, one who understands kidneys\textsuperscript{b} and hearts, may I see your avenging among them, because to you I have revealed my defensive pleas.

13 Sing to the Lord; praise him, because he has delivered the soul of the needy from the hand of evildoers!

\textsuperscript{a}Heb = potsherds  \textsuperscript{b}I.e. emotions Cursed be the day on which I was born on it! The day on which my mother bore me—let it not be longed for!

Cursed be the person who brought the good news to my father, saying, “A male child was born to you,” being glad.

Let that person be like the cities that the Lord overthrew in anger and did not repent; let him hear a cry in the morning and a shouting at noon, because he did not kill me in the womb, and my mother became my grave and the womb one of perpetual conception.

Why is it that I came forth from the womb to see toil and sorrow, and my days continued in shame?

The word that came from the Lord to Jerusalem, when King Sedekias sent to him Paschor son of Melchias and the priest Sophonias son of Maasaios, saying, “Inquire of the Lord about us, because the king of Babylon has taken a stand against us, if the Lord will do according to all his wonderful deeds and he will withdraw from us.”

And Jeremias said to them: Thus you shall say to Sedekias, king of Iouda: 4This is what the Lord says: Behold, I am turning back the weapons of war with which you are fighting with them, against the Chaldeans who have enclosed you outside the wall, into the midst of this city. 5And it is I who will fight you with outstretched hand and mighty arm, in anger and great wrath. 6And I will strike all the inhabitants in this city, human beings and animals, with great death, and they shall die. 7And afterwards, says the Lord, I will give Sedekias, king of Iouda, and his servants and the people left in this city from death and by dagger into the hands of their enemies who are seeking their souls, and they shall cut them into pieces with a dagger’s edge; I will not be sparing toward them, and I will not have compassion on them.

And to this people you shall say: This is what the Lord says: Behold, I have given before you the way of life and the way of death. 9He who sits still in this city shall die by dagger and by famine, but he who goes out to side with the Chaldeans who have closed you in shall live and his soul shall be as booty, and they shall cut them into pieces with a dagger’s edge; I will not be sparing toward them, and I will not have compassion on them.

And nations will pass through this city, and they will say, each to his fellow, “Why did the Lord deal in this way with this great city?” 9And they will say, “Because they abandoned the covenant of the Lord, their God, and did obeisance to foreign gods and were slaves to them.”

Do not weep for him who is dead, nor bemoan him; with weeping weep for the one who goes away, because he shall return no more nor see his native land—for this is what the Lord says regarding Selm son of Losias, who was reigning in place of his father Iosias, who went away from this place: He shall return there no more, but in the place where I have deported him, there he shall die, and he shall never see this land again.

13 Ah, he who builds his house not with righteousness and his upper rooms not with judgment, he will work at his fellow’s for nothing, and he will not pay him his wages.

14 You built for yourself a spacious house, ventilated upper rooms fitted with windows and paneled with cedar and painted with vermilion.

15 Surely, you will not be king, because you are irritated with Achaz your father? They will not eat, and they will not drink; it is better for you to execute judgment and righteousness.

16 They did not know; they did not judge the cause for the lowly nor the cause of the needy. Is not this so, because you do not know me? says the Lord.

17 Behold, are not your eyes and your heart on nothing but your greed and on innocent blood to shed it and on wrongdoing and on committing murder?

18 Therefore this is what the Lord says regarding King loakim son of loasias of Iouda: Woe to this man! They shall not lament for him, “Ah, brother!” nor shall they weep for him, “Alas, lord!”

19 With the burial of a donkey he shall be buried— swept up, he will be thrown out beyond the gate of Ierousalem.

20 Go up to Lebanon, and cry out, and give forth your voice in Basan, and shout to the other side of the sea, because all your lovers were crushed.

21 I spoke to you in your downfall, and you said, “I will not listen.” This has been your way from your youth; you have not obeyed my voice.

22 A wind shall shepherd all your shepherds, and your lovers shall go out in captivity, because then you will be ashamed and disgraced because of all who would kiss you.

23 O inhabitant of Lebanon, nesting among the cedars, you will groan when pangs come upon you, pains as of one giving birth!

24 I live, says the Lord, if King lechonias son of loakim of louda in being was a signet on my right hand, from there I would tear you off and give you into the hands of people seeking your soul, before whose face you are afraid, into the hands of the Chaldeans. And I will hurl you and your mother who bore you into a land, there where you were not born, and there you shall die. But to the land for which they long with their souls, they shall not return.

25 lechonias was dishonored like a vessel which is without its use, which was hurled out, and he was cast out into a land that he did not know.

26 O land, land, hear a word of the Lord! Record this man as a banished person, because none of his offspring shall grow up to sit on the throne of Daud as ruler again in Iouda.

23 Ah, the shepherds who destroy and scatter the sheep of their pasture! Therefore this is what the Lord says regarding those who shepherd my people: It is you who have scattered my sheep and have driven them away, and you have not visited them. Behold, I punish you for your evil doings. And it is I who will receive those remaining of my people from every land, there where I have driven them, and I will restore them to their pasture, and they shall increase and multiply. And I will raise up shepherds for them who will shepherd them, and they shall not fear any longer or be terrified, says the Lord.

5 Behold, days are coming, says the Lord, and I will raise up for Daud a righteous dawn, and a king shall reign and shall understand and shall execute judgment and righteousness in the land. In his days Iouda will be saved, and Israel will encamp in confidence. And this is the name by which he [the Lord] will call him: “Iosedek among the prophets.”

9 My heart was crushed; within me all my bones shook; I became like a crushed man and like a person overcome by wine, due to the Lord and due to the dignity of his glory, because due to these the land mourned, the pastures of the wilderness were dried up. And their course became evil, and their strength not so, because priest and prophet were defiled, and in my house I have seen their wickedness.

12 Therefore let their way be to them like slipperiness in thick darkness, and they shall be tripped up and fall in it.
Ieremias 23–24

23 And in the prophets of Samaria
I saw lawless deeds:
they prophesied by the goddess Baal
and led my people Israel astray.

24 If someone shall be hidden in secret places, is it not I that shall also see him? Do I not fill the sky and the earth? says the Lord. 25I have heard what the prophets are saying who prophesy lies in my name, saying, “I have dreamed a dream!” 26How long shall there be lies in the heart of the prophets who prophesy, when in fact they prophesy the will of their own heart, 27those who plan to forget my name by their dreams which they tell, each to his fellow, just as their fathers forgot my name by the goddess Baal? 28Let the prophet in whom there is the dream tell his dream, and let him in whom my word is to him tell my word in truth. What is the chaff to the grain? 29Are not my words just like fire and like an ax that cuts a rock?
30Therefore, behold, I am against the prophets, says the Lord God, who steal my words each from his fellow. 31Behold, I am against the prophets who receive prophecies of tongue and slumber their slumber. 32Behold, I am against the prophets who were prophesying lying dreams, and they kept telling them, and they led my people astray by their lies and by their errors, and it was not I that sent them, and I did not command them, and they will not profit this people with profit.

33 And if this people or a priest or a prophet asks you, “What is the issue of the Lord?” you shall then say to them, “You are the issue, and I will strike you, says the Lord.” 34And as for the prophet and the priest and the people who might say, “Issue of the Lord,” I will also punish that person and his household. 35Thus shall you say, each to his fellow and each to his brother, “What has the Lord answered?” and “What has the Lord spoken?” 36And “Issue of the Lord,” do not name it any more, because “the issue” will be the word belonging to the person. 37And what has the Lord, our God, spoken? 38Therefore, this is what the Lord God says: Because you have said this phrase, “Issue of the Lord,” and I sent to you, saying, You shall not say, “Issue of the Lord,” 39therefore, behold, I am taking you and striking you and the city that I gave to you and your fathers. 40And I will render upon you everlasting disgrace and everlasting dishonor which shall not be forgotten.

7 Therefore, behold, days are coming, says the Lord, and they shall no longer say, “The Lord lives who brought the house of Israel up out of the land of Egypt,” 8but “The Lord lives who gathered all the offspring of Israel from the land of the north and from all the countries, there where he had driven them, and restored them to their land.”

24 The Lord showed me two baskets of figs placed before the shrine of the Lord, after King Nabouchodonosor of Babylon had taken into exile from Jerusalemsm Iechonias son of loakim of Iouda and the rulers and the artisans and the prisoners and the wealthy and had brought them to Babylon. 2The one basket had very good figs, like first-ripe figs, and the other basket had very bad figs, which could not be eaten because of their badness. 3And the Lord said to me, “What do you see, Ieremias?” And I said, “Figs, the good ones very good and the bad ones very bad, which will not be eaten because of their badness.”

4 And a word of the Lord came to me, saying:

5 This is what the Lord, the God of Israel, says: Like these good figs, so I will regard those exiled from Iouda, whom I have sent away from this place to the land of the Chaldeans, for good. 6 And I will fix my eyes upon them for good, and I will restore them to this land. And I will rebuild them and never tear down, and I will plant them and never pluck up. 7 And I will give them a heart that they may know me, that I am the Lord, and they shall become a people to me, and I will become a god to them, because they shall return to me with their whole heart.

8 And as the bad figs which will not be eaten because of their badness—this is what the Lord says: So will I hand over King Sedekias of Iouda and his nobles and the remnant of Ierousalem, those left in this land and those who live in Egypt. 9 And I will give them as a scattering to all the kings of the earth and as a disgrace and as an illustration and as a thing to be hated and as a curse against its inhabitants and against all nations to which it shall not come there—those driven from Iouda. 10 And I will terrify them before their enemies who seek their soul, and I will bring evil upon them, the wrath of my anger. And I will send my dagger after them until I have consumed them. 11 And I will set my throne in Ierusalem and send out from there king and nobles.

12 And when seventy years are completed, I will punish that nation, and I will make them an everlasting waste. 13 And I will bring upon that land all my words that I have spoken against it, everything written in this book.

14(49.34) What Ieremias prophesied against the nations of Ailam.

15(35) This is what the Lord says: Let the bow of Ailam be crushed, mainstay of their dominance. 16(36) And I will bring upon Ailam four winds from the four quarters of the sky, and I will scatter them in all these winds, and there shall not be a nation to which it shall not come there—those driven from Ailam. 17(37) And I will terrify them before their enemies who seek their soul, and I will bring evil upon them, the wrath of my anger. And I will send my dagger after them until I have consumed them. 18(38) And I will set my throne in Ailam and send out from there king and nobles.

19(39) And it shall be in the last of days I will return the captivity of Ailam, says the Lord.

26 (46.1) In the beginning when King Sedekias reigned, this word came concerning Ailam.

2 For Egypt, regarding the force of Pharao Nechao, king of Egypt, who was by the river Euphrates at Charchamis, whom King Nabouchodonosor of Babylon struck in the fourth year of King Joakim of Iouda:

3 Take up weapons and shields, and advance for battle!

4 Saddle the horses; mount up, you horsemen! And take your stations with your helmets; throw your lances, and put on your breastplates!

5 Why is it that they are terrified and they fall back?—for their strong shall be beaten down. They have fled in flight and did not turn back, being encircled all around! says the Lord.

6 Let not the swift flee away, and let not the strong one escape; to the north, the regions by the Euphrates were powerless; they have fallen.

7 Who is this that will rise up like a river, and like rivers surge with water?

8 Waters of Egypt will rise up like a river, and it said, I will rise up and cover land and destroy inhabitants in it.

9 Mount on the horses; prepare the chariots! Go forth, O warriors of the Ethiopians and Libyans armed with weapons, and grasp, O Lydians; draw the bow.

10 And that day belongs to the Lord, our God, a day of vengeance, to take vengeance on his enemies.
And a dagger of the Lord shall devour and be sated and be drunk with their blood, because there is a sacrifice for the Lord
from the land of the north by the river Euphrates.

11 Go up, O Galaad, and take pine resin to the virgin daughter of Egypt!
In vain you have multiplied your medicines;
there is no help for you.

12 Nations have heard your voice, and the earth was filled with your cry,
because warrior was weak against warrior;
both have fallen together.

13 What the Lord spoke by the hand of Ieremias that the king of Babylon would come to smite the land of Egypt:
Declare in Magdolos, and proclaim in Memphis;
Say, “Set up, and be ready, because a dagger devoured your yew.”

15 Why has Apis fled?
Your [choice] bull calf did not remain,
because the Lord paralyzed him.

16 And your multitude was weak and fell,
and each kept saying to his fellow, “Let us rise up and return to our own people and to our fatherland, because of the Greek dagger.”

17 Call the name of Pharao Nechao, king of Egypt, Saon-esbi-emoed.

18 I live, says the Lord God, because he shall come like Itabyrione among the mountains and like Carmel by the sea.

19 Make for yourself implements for going into exile, resident daughter of Egypt,
because Memphis shall become an annihilation, and it shall be burned, because there are no inhabitants in it.

20 A beautified heifer is Egypt—
a fragment from the north came upon her.

21 And her mercenaries in her are like grain-fed calves, for they too have turned and fled together;
they did not stand,
because a day of ruin has come upon them,
and a time for their punishment.

22 A sound like of a hissing snake, because they will travel in sand,
and they will come against her with axes,
like people felling trees.

23 They shall cut down her forest,
says the Lord,
because there shall be nothing like it,
because it is more numerous than grasshoppers,
and they are without number.

24 The daughter of Egypt was put to shame;
she was handed over into the hands of a people from the north.

25 Behold, I am avenging Amon, her son,
on Pharao and on those who trust in him.

27 But as for you, have no fear, my slave Iakob, nor be terrified, O Israel;
for behold, I am saving you from far away
and your offspring from the land of their captivity.
And Iakob shall return and have quiet and sleep, and when I deem innocent, I will not deem you innocent.

27 (50.1) A word of the Lord, which he spoke regarding Babylon.

2 Declare among the nations, and make heard,
and do not conceal; say:
Babylon has been taken;
[Bel] the undaunted was put to shame;
the gentle [Marodach was undone], 3 because from the north a nation has come up against her;
he shall make her land an annihilation, and there shall be no one to live in it, from human being even to animal.

4 In those days and in that time the sons of Israel shall come, they and the sons of Iouda together;
they shall come walking and weeping as they seek the Lord, their God.

5 They shall ask the way to Sion, for here they will set their face, and they shall come and flee for refuge to the Lord God, for an everlasting covenant will not be forgotten.

6 My people have become lost sheep; their shepherds expelled them; they have misled them to the mountains; from mountain to hill they went; they have forgotten their fold. All who would find them would devour them; their enemies said, “Let us not release them, because they have sinned against the Lord. A pasture of righteousness they are for the one who gathered their fathers.”

8 Become a stranger from the midst of Babylon and from the land of the Chaldeans, and go out, and become like dragons before sheep, because behold, I am stirring up against Babylon gatherings of nations from the land of the north, and they shall array themselves against her; from there she shall be taken, as an arrow of a skilled warrior will not return empty. Chaldea shall be for plunder; all who plunder her shall be sated—

11 because you were rejoicing and boasting while plundering my heritage; for you were frisking about like heifers in pasture, and you were butting horns like bulls; your mother was utterly shamed, a mother for good, last of nations, a wilderness.

13 Because of the wrath of the Lord she shall not be inhabited, and all of her shall become an annihilation, and everyone who passes through Babylon shall be sullen and whistle because of her every wound.

14 Take up your positions against Babylon round about, all you that bend a bow; shoot at her; do not be sparing with your arrows.

15 And applaud exceedingly over her: “Her hands were paralyzed; her bulwarks have fallen, and her wall was razed.” Because vengeance is from God, take vengeance on her; do to her as she has done.

16 Utterly destroy seed from Babylon, and the wielder of the sickle in time of harvest; because of the Greek dagger, each of them shall return to his own people, and each of them shall flee to his own land.

17 Israel is a wandering sheep; lions drove him away. The first one, king of Assour, devoured him, and this later one, king of Babylon, his bones. Therefore, this is what the Lord says: Behold, I am taking vengeance on the king of Babylon and on his land, as I took vengeance on the king of Assour. And I will restore Israel to his pasture, and he shall feed on Carmel and on Mount Ephraim and in Galaad, and his soul shall be satisfied. In those days and at that time they will seek the injustice of Israel, and there shall be none, and the sins of Iouda, also they shall not be found, because I will be merciful to those that have remained in the land, says the Lord.

21 Go up bitterly against her and against the inhabitants in her; take vengeance, O dagger, and annihilate, says the Lord, and act according to all that I am commanding you.

22 A noise of battle and great destruction is in the land of the Chaldeans!

23 How was the hammer of the whole earth broken and shattered! How has Babylon turned into an annihilation among nations!

24 They will attack you, and you will be taken, O Babylon, and you will not know it; you were discovered and seized, because you withstood the Lord.

25 The Lord has opened his store room and brought out the implements of his wrath, because there is a task for the Lord God in the land of the Chaldeans.

26 For her times have come. Open her storehouses; search her like a cave, and destroy her utterly; let there be no remnant of her.

27 Dry up all her fruit, and let them go down to slaughter. Woe to them, because their day has come and the time of their punishment!

28 A sound of people fleeing and escaping from the land of Babylon to declare in Sion the vengeance of the Lord, our God.

29 Summon many against Babylon, every one who bends a bow. Make a camp against her, all around; let there be no one to escape. Repay her according to her deeds; just as she has done, do to her—because she withstood the Lord, holy God of Israel. Therefore her young men shall fall in her squares, and all her fighting men shall be thrown down, said the Lord.

30 Behold, I am against you the arrogant one, says the Lord, because your day has come and the time of your punishment.

32 And your arrogance shall become weak and fall, and there shall not be one to raise it up, and I will kindle a fire in her forest, and it will devour everything around her.

33 This is what the Lord says: The sons of Israel have been oppressed, and so too the sons of aLacking in Gk  bI.e. mother  cI.e. Babylon Iouda; all their captors have oppressed them, because they were unwilling to send them off. 34 And he that redeems them is strong; the Lord Almighty is his name. He will judge with judgment against his adversaries, that he may destroy the earth, and for those that inhabit Babylon he will incite

35 a dagger against the Chaldeans and against the inhabitants of Babylon and against her nobles and against her sages, 36 a dagger against her warriors—and they shall be paralyzed—a dagger against their horses and against their chariots, 37 a dagger against their warriors and against the mixed populace in her midst—and they shall become like women—a dagger against her treasures—and they shall be scattered by her water, and they shall be disgraced, because it is a land of carved images, and in the islands they were boasting.

39 Therefore phantoms shall live in the islands, and daughters of Sirens shall inhabit her; she shall never again be inhabited forever. 40 As when God overturned Sodoma and Gomorra and those adjacent to them, said the Lord, no person shall live there, and no son of man shall sojourn there.

41 Behold, a people is coming from the north, and a great nation and many kings shall be stirred from the farthest part of the earth, 42 wielding bow and hand knife;
it is reckless and will show no mercy.
The noise of them shall sound like the sea;
they will ride upon horses, equipped, like a fire for battle against you, O daughter Babylon!

43 The king of Babylon heard news of them,
and his hands became paralyzed;
affliction tightly seized him,
pains like those of one giving birth.

44 Behold, just like a lion it will come up from the Jordan into Aithan—because I will quickly pursue them away from her, and I will set every young man against her. For who is like me? And who will withstand me? And who is this shepherd who will stand against me? 45 Therefore, hear the plan of the Lord, which he has planned against Babylon, and his purposes that he has formed against the inhabiting Chaldeans: If the lambs of the sheep be not killed, if their pasture be not annihilated from them . . . —46 because at the sound of the capture of Babylon the earth shall tremble, and her cry shall be heard among nations.

28 (51.1) This is what the Lord says:
Behold, I am stirring up a destructive scorching wind against Babylon and against the inhabiting Chaldeans, and I will send insolent men to Babylon, and they shall treat her with insolence and shall maltreat her land.
Woe to Babylon on every side on the day of her trouble.

3 Let him that bends his bow bend it,
and let him who has his armor put it on.
Do not be sparing toward her young men,
and annihilate her entire force.
4 And they shall fall down slain in the land of the Chaldeans and be pierced outside of her, 5 for Israel and Iouda did not become widowed from their God, from the Lord Almighty, because their land is full of injustice against the holy things of Israel!

6 Flee from the midst of Babylon, and save your souls, each of you!
And do not be cast aside in her injustice, because it is a time of vengeance on her from the Lord; he is repaying repayment to her.

7 Babylon was a golden cup in the Lord’s hand, making all the earth drunken;
nations drank of her wine;
therefore they were shaken.

8 And suddenly Babylon fell and was shattered;
wail for her!
Bring pine resin for her ruin,
if perhaps she shall be healed.

9 We treated Babylon,
but she was not healed.
Let us forsake her, and let each of us go away to his own country, because her judgment has reached skyward; it rose up even to the stars.

10 The Lord has brought forth his judgment;
come, and let us declare in Sion the works of the Lord, our God.

11 Equip the arrows!
Fill the quivers!
The Lord has stirred up the spirit of the king of the Medes, because his wrath is against Babylon to destroy it utterly, because it is vengeance from the Lord, vengeance for his shrine.

12 Raise a standard on the walls of Babylon;
set up quivers;
awaken the watch;
prepare weapons;
because he has taken in hand and the Lord will do what he spoke against the inhabitants of Babylon,

13 though she encamps by abundant waters and by the multitude of her treasures—your end has truly come into your inwards,
because the Lord has sworn by his arm:
For I will fill you with people like grasshoppers, and those that come down shall utter a sound against you.

14 When he was making the earth by his strength,
when he was preparing the world by his wisdom,
by his understanding he stretched out the sky;
he made the sound of water a voice in the sky,
and he brought up clouds from the end of the earth.
Lightnings he made into rain
and brought out light from his store rooms.

15 Every person became vain, a apart from a knowledge;
every goldsmith was put to shame by his carved images;
because they b cast lies,
there is no breath in them.

16 Worthless they are, works to be ridiculed;
at the time of their visiting they shall perish.

17 Such a portion is not Jakob's,
because he who formed all things,
he is his inheritance;
the Lord is his name.

18 It is you who scatter for me implements of war, and in you I will scatter nations,
and from c you I will destroy kings,
and in you I will scatter a horse and its rider,
and in you I will scatter chariots and their charioteers,
and in you I will scatter young man and girl,
and in you I will scatter man and woman,
and in you I will scatter a shepherd and his flock, and in you I will scatter a farmer and his husbandry, and in you I will scatter leaders and generals.

20 And I will repay to Babylon and all the inhabiting Chaldeans all their wrongs that they have done against Sion before your very eyes, says the Lord.

21 Behold, I am against you, the corrupted mountain
d that corrupts the whole earth,
and I will stretch out my hand against you
and roll you down from the rocks
and render you like a burned-out mountain.

22 And they shall take no stone from you for a corner
and no stone for a foundation,
because you shall be an annihilation forever,
says the Lord.

23 Raise a standard on the land;
trumpet with a trumpet among nations;
consecrate nations against her,
summon against her kingdoms of Araret,
from me also the Aschanazeans;
set up siege engines against her;
mount up against her cavalry like a multitude of grasshoppers.

24 Consecrate nations against her,
the king of the Medes and of the whole earth,
his leading men and all his generals.

25 Behold, I am against you, the corrupted mountain that corrupts the whole earth,
and I will stretch out my hand against you
and roll you down from the rocks
and render you like a burned-out mountain.

26 And they shall take no stone from you for a corner
and no stone for a foundation,
because you shall be an annihilation forever,
says the Lord.

27 The land shook and toiled, for the Lord's purpose against Babylon stood,
to make the land of Babylon an annihilation and that she would not be inhabited.

28 Babylon's warrior gave up fighting;
they will sit there under siege;
their dominance was broken;
they became like women;
her quarters were set on fire;
her bars were crushed.

29 A pursuer will pursue to meet a pursuer, and a reporter to meet a reporter, to report to the king of Babylon that his city has been taken:
at the end of his fords they were seized,
and their communities were burnt with fire,
and his fighting men are coming out,
for this is what the Lord says:
Houses of the king of Babylon will be threshed like a threshing floor in season;
yet a little while and her harvest time will come.

30 "King Nabouchodonosor of Babylon has devoured me;
he has apportioned me;
he has seized me, a slim vessel;
he has swallowed me like a dragon;
he has filled his belly with my delicacies.

31 And I will repay to Babylon and all the inhabiting Chaldeans all their wrongs that they have done against Sion before your very eyes, says the Lord.

32 Behold, I am against you, the corrupted mountain
Ierousalem shall say.

Therefore this is what the Lord says:
Behold, I am judging your adversary and will take vengeance for you.
And I will make desolate her sea
and make her fountain dry, and Babylon shall become an annihilation and shall not be inhabited.

As well, like lions they were aroused,
and like lions’ whelps.
When they are hot I will give them drink and make them drunk in order that they be stupefied and sleep a perpetual sleep and never wake,
says the Lord.

I will bring them down like lambs to slaughter and like rams with kids.

How she was taken,
and the boast of the whole earth taken prey!
How Babylon has become an annihilation among the nations!

The sea has come up to Babylon
by the sound of its waves, and she has been covered up.

Her cities have become a waterless land and untrodden;
no one will live in her,
nor will a son of man lodge in her.

I will take vengeance on Babylon and bring out from her mouth what she has swallowed.
And the nations shall no longer gather to
her.

And in Babylon slain of all the earth will fall.

Since you are survivors of the land,
go, and do not stop!
You afar off, remember the Lord, and let Ierousalem come up into your heart:
We were put to shame, because we have heard our insult;
dishonor has covered our face;
aliens have entered into our holy places,
into the Lord’s house.

Therefore behold, days are coming, says the Lord,
and I will take vengeance on her carved
images,
and in all her land wounded shall fall, because, if Babylon should mount up like
the sky,
and because, if she should fortify the height of her strength, from me those who destroy utterly will come upon her,
says the Lord.

A sound of a cry in Babylon!
And a great crashing in the land of the Chaldeans,
because the Lord utterly destroyed Babylon and ruined her great voice roaring like
many waters;
he gave her voice to destruction, because distress has come against Babylon;
her warriors were taken;
their bow has been terrified,
for a god is repaying them.

The Lord repays repayment to her,
and he will make drunk with drunkenness her leaders and her sages and her generals,
says the King; Lord Almighty is his name.

This is what the Lord says:
Babylon’s wall was made broad;
in being leveled it shall be leveled,
and her high gates
shall be set on fire.
And peoples will not exhaust themselves for nothing,
and nations shall fail in rule.

The word that the Lord commanded Ieremias the prophet to speak to Saraias son of Nerias son of Maasaias, when he was going with King Sedekias of Iouda to Babylon, in the fourth year of his reign. And Saraias was ruler of gifts. 60And Ieremias wrote in one book all the evils that would come on Babylon, all these words that have been written regarding Babylon. 61And Ieremias said to Saraias: “When you come to Babylon, also see and read all these words, 62and you will say, ‘O Lord, O Lord, it was you who spoke against this place to destroy it utterly and so that neither human nor animal inhabitants be in it, because it shall be an annihilation forever.’ 63And it shall be when you finish reading this book, you will then tie a stone to it and throw it into the middle of the Euphrates, 64and you will say, ‘Thus shall Babylon sink, and it shall rise up no more before the Chaldeans whom I am bringing on her.’ ”

Regarding the allophyles.

(2) This is what the Lord says:
Behold, waters are rising from the north and shall become a wadi overflowing and shall overflow a land and all that fills it,
a city and those who live in it.
And humans shall cry out,
and all the inhabitants of the land shall shout.

At the noise of his onslaught, at the hoofs of his horses and at the commotion of his chariots, the noise of his wheels, fathers did not turn back for their sons,
because of the feebleness of their hands,
in the day that is coming to destroy all the allophyles, and I will annihilate Tyre and Sidon and all those that remain for their help, because the Lord will utterly destroy those remaining in the islands.
5 Baldness has come upon Gaza; Ascalon was cast away,
and the remaining Enakim.
6 How long will you cut, you dagger of the Lord?
How long until you will be quiet?
Restore yourself to your scabbard;
est, and be lifted up!
7 How shall it be quiet?
And the Lord has ordered it a against Ascalon and against the seashores, against those remaining,
that it b be aroused.

8(49.7) For Idumea.

This is what the Lord says:
There is no longer wisdom in Thaiman;
counsel has perished from the prudent;
their wisdom is vanishing;
their face was misled.
Sink deep into sitting,
you that live in Dedan,
because he did difficult things.
I brought them b upon him at the time
when I visited upon him, 10(9) because grape gatherers came,
who shall not leave for you things gleaned.
As thieves by night they shall place their
hand.
11(10) Because I have ravaged Esau,
I have uncovered their hiding places;
they will not be able to hide;
his brother’s and his neighbor’s rewards perished,
and it is not possible 12(11) for your orphan to be left in order to live, and widows trust in me—13(12) because this is what the Lord says: They who were not accustomed to drink the cup drank, you, though being deemed innocent, shall not be declared innocent. 14[13] because by myself I have sworn, says the Lord, that you shall become, in her c midst, untrodden and an object of reproach and of cursing and all her towns shall be desolate forever.
15(14) I have heard a tiding from the Lord,
and he sent messengers to nations: “Gather yourselves together and come against her; d rise up for battle!”
16(15) I rendered you small among nations, despised among humankind.
17(16) Your sporting laid hands on you;
recklessness of your heart broke up holes in rocks;
it seized strength of a high hill.

Because like an eagle he set his nest high,
from there I will bring you down.
18(17) Idumea shall become untrodden; everyone who passes by will hiss at her. 19(18) Just as Sodom was overthrown, and Gomorra and her resident-alien towns, said the Lord Almighty, no person shall ever set down there, and no son of man shall dwell there. 20(19) Behold, just like a lion its e will come up from the midst of the Jordan to a place of Aithan—because I will quickly pursue them away from her f. Appoint over her g the young men—because who is like me? And who can withstand me? And who is this shepherd who will stand against me? 21(20) Therefore, hear the Lord’s plan, which he planned against Idumea, and his purpose, which he purposed against the inhabitants of Thaiman: If the least of the sheep be not swept away, if their lodging be not untrodden to her! —22(21) because at the sound of their fall the earth feared, and a cry was heard at the sea of Souph. 23(22) Behold, just like an eagle, he will see and extend the wings over her strongholds!
And the heart of the strong of Idumea in that day shall be like the heart of a woman in labor.

30 (49.1) For the sons of Ammon.

Thus did the Lord say:
Surely, there are no sons in Israel,
or have they none to succeed f?
Why did Melchol take Galaad, and shall their people settle in their towns?
2 Therefore behold, days are coming,
quoth the Lord,
I will make heard the tumult of battles against Rabbath;
they shall become untrodden and a
destruction,
and her altars g shall be burned down
with fire,
and Israel shall succeed h his rule.
3 Shout, O Hesebon, because Gai perished!
Cry out, O daughters of Rabbath!
Put on sackcloth,
and lament,
because Melchol shall go in exile,
his priests and his rulers together.
4 Why will you rejoice in the plains,
O daughter of disgrace who trusted in her treasures, who said,
"Who will enter against me?"
5 Behold, I am bringing fear upon you,
said the Lord,
from all your surrounding area,
and you will be scattered, each headlong, and there shall be no one to gather.
6(28) For Kedar, the queen of the court, whom King Nabouchodonosor of Babylon struck.
Thus did the Lord say:
Rise up, and advance against Kedar,
and strike the sons of Kedem!

7(29) They shall take their tents and their sheep;
their clothes and all their implements and their camels they shall take for themselves.
And summon destruction against them all around!

8(30) Flee very much; sink deep into sitting,
you seated in the court,
because the king of Babylon has planned a plan against you and formed a purpose against you.

9(31) Rise up, and advance against a nation at ease,
that sits in respite;
they have no doors, no bolt pins; [no bars]
they lodge alone.

10(32) And their camels shall become plunder, and the multitude of their cattle,
destruction.
And with every wind I will winnow them, when they have been sheared before
them.
I will bring their rout from their every side,
said the Lord.

11(33) And the court shall become a haunt of sparrows
and untrodden forever;
no person shall ever sit down there,
and no son of an earthborn shall settle
there.

12(23) For Damascus.

Hemath and Arphad were put to shame,
because they have heard bad tidings;
they were astonished; they were angered;
they will not be able to rest.

13(24) Damascus has become undone; she turned to flight;
trembling seized her.

14(25) How did she not forsake a praiseworthy city,
a village which I loved?

15(26) Therefore young men shall fall in your squares,
and all your warrior men shall fall,
quoth the Lord.

16(27) And I will burn a fire at Damascus' wall, and it shall devour the quarters of the son of Hader.

1(48.1) For Moab.

Thus did the Lord say:
Woe for Nabau, because he perished!
Kariathaim was taken;
Hamasagab was put to shame, and Hatath.
2 Healing of Moab is no more;
in Hesebon they planned evil against her:

“We cut her off from being a nation!”
She shall stop with a stop;
a dagger shall go after you, because a voice of people that cry from Horonaim,
“Desolation and a great fracture!”

4 “Moab was crushed!” announce to Zogora.
Because Halaoth was filled by weeping, he will go up weeping by way of Horonaim;
a cry of fracture you have heard.

6 Flee, and save your souls, and you shall be like a wild ass in a wilderness!

7 Seeing that you trusted in your strongholds, you also shall be seized.
And Chamos shall go out in exile,
his priests and his rulers together.

8 And destruction shall come upon every city;
it shall not be saved.
And the valley shall perish,
and the plain shall be destroyed utterly,
as the Lord has said.

9 Give signs to Moab, because she will be kindled with kindling,
and all her cities shall become untrodden;
from where will she get an inhabitant?

10 Accursed is the one who is doing the work of the Lord carelessly by keeping back his dagger from bloodshed.

11 Moab was at rest from childhood and trusted in his glory;
he did not pour from vessel to vessel,
and he was not going into exile;
therefore his flavor remained in him, and his aroma did not leave.

12 Therefore behold, days are coming, quoth the Lord, and I shall send to him people that deviate, and they will make him deviate, and they shall pulverize his vessels and break up his mixtures.

13 And Moab shall be ashamed of Chamos, as the house of Israel was ashamed of Baithel, when they had confidence in them.

14 How will you say, “We are strong and a strong person in warfare”?

15 Moab perished;
his city and his choice young men went down to slaughter.

16 Moab's day is near to come,
and his wickedness, very swiftly.

17 Stir for him, all you round about him
and all who know his name;
say, “How has a renowned staff broken to pieces,
a rod of magnificence!”
Come down from glory,
and sit on moist ground;
seated she is being destroyed,
because Moab has perished;
he that ruins your stronghold came up against you.

Stand by the road, and watch,
you that sit in Aroer!
And ask him that flees and escapes,
and say, "What has happened?"

Moab was put to shame, because he was broken to pieces;
wail, and cry!
Tell it in Arnon
that Moab has perished.

And judgment is coming to the land of Misrah, upon Chelon and upon Rephas and upon Mophath 22 and upon Daibon and upon Nabau and upon the house of Deblathaim 23 and upon Kariathaim and upon the house of Gamol and upon the house of Maon 24 and upon Karioth and upon Bosor and upon all the cities of Moab, those far and those near. Moab’s horn was cut off, and his effort was crushed.

Make him drunk, because he was magnified against the Lord, and Moab shall clap with his hand, and he too shall become a laughingstock.

If not, was Israel a jest for you? If he was found among your thefts, bis itb because you kept fighting him?

The inhabitants of Moab left the cities and lived among rocks;
they became like doves that nest among rocks
at the mouth of a gorge.

I heard of Moab’s insolence;
he was very insolent in his insolence and his arrogance.
And his heart was lifted up.

But I knew his works.
It was not enough for him;
he did not do thus.

Therefore wail for Moab on all sides;
shout to the men of Kir Hadas, of drought.

As with the weeping for Lazer I will weep for
you,
O vine of Sebema!
Your branches crossed over the sea;
cities reached Lazer;
upon your summer fruit, upon your grape gatherers destruction has fallen.

Joy and gladness were swept away from the land of Moabitis, and wine was in your vats;
they did not tread in the early morning;
"aided"c "aided"c, [they did] not "aided"c

From a cry of Hesebon as far as Eleale, their cities gave forth their voice, from Zogor as far as Horonaim and Agela Salasia, because even the water of Nebrim shall become something burnt.
And I will destroy Moab, quoth the Lord, since he ascends upon an altard and offers incense to his gods. Therefore my heart will ‘rumble’b for Moabc as pipes will rumble; my heart will rumble like a pipe for the people of Kir Hadas. Therefore, what one gained perished [from a person].

They will have every head in every place shaved, and every beard shall be shaved, and all hands shall beat, and sackcloth on every loin, 38 even on all the housetops of Moab and in her squares, because I have crushed her, quoth the Lord, like a container for which no one has any use. 39 How Hatat shouted! How Moab turned her back! Moab was ashamed and became a laughingstock and an object of indignation to all those about her—because thus did the Lord say:

Hakkarioth was seized,
and the strongholds were also seized.
And Moab shall be destroyed from being a crowd,
because he was magnified against the Lord.

Trap and fear and pit are upon you,
you seated one of Moab!
He who flees from before fear shall fall into the pit, and he who climbs out of the pit shall be caught in the trap, because I will bring these things upon Moab in the year of their visiting.

(25.15) Thus did the Lord, the God of Israel, say: Take from my hand the cup of this unmixed wine, and you shall make all the nations, to them to whom I send you, drink, 2(16) and they are vomiting and will go out of their minds before the dagger that I am sending among them.

And I took the cup from the Lord’s hand and made the nations, to whom the Lord sent me to them, drink: 4(18) Jerusalem and the cities of Louda and its kings and its rulers, to make them a desolation and something untrodden and a hissing 5(19) and Pharao king of Egypt and his servants and his nobles 6(20) and all his people and all the mixed peoples and all the kings of the allophyles, Ascalon and Gaza and Akkaron and the remnant vomit, and you will fall and rise no more from before the dagger that I am sending among you.

14(28) And it will be if they refuse to accept the cup from your hand so as to drink, and you shall say: Thus did the Lord say: In drinking you shall drink, 15(29) because I am beginning to bring evil on a city that my name is called on it, and you will not be cleansed with cleansing, because I am summoning a dagger against those settled on the earth.

16(30) And you shall prophesy against them these words, and you will say:

The Lord will give an oracle from on high;
from his holy place give forth his voice;
he will give a word as an oracle over his place,
and they will answer, “aided”a, like those that reap,
and destruction has come on the inhabitants of the earth, 17(31) on a part of the earth, because the Lord has an indictment against the nations;
he is entering into judgment with all flesh, and the impious will be given over to a dagger,
says the Lord.

18(32) Thus did the Lord say:
Behold, evil is coming from nation to nation, and a great tempest is issuing from the farthest part of the earth!

19(33) And there shall be slain by the Lord on the day of the Lord from one part of the earth even to another part of the earth. They shall not be interred; they shall become dung on the surface of the ground.

20(34) Shout, you shepherds, and cry out, and beat yourselves, you rams of the sheep, because your days for slaughter have been fulfilled, and you shall fall like the choice rams.

21(35) And flight shall perish from the shepherds, and deliverance from the rams of the sheep.

22(36) A sound of a cry of the shepherds and a shouting of the rams of the sheep, because the Lord despoiled their fatted animals!

23(37) And the lodgings of peace will cease from before the wrath of my anger.

24(38) Like a lion he has left his lodging, because their land became untrodden from before the great dagger.

33 (26.1) At the beginning of King Ioakim son of Iosias, this word came from the Lord:

2 Thus did the Lord say: Stand in the court of the Lord's house, and you will give an oracle to all the Judeans that come to do obeisance in the house of the Lord all the words, which I instructed you to give them as an oracle; do not hold back a thing.

3 Perhaps they will hear and will turn each from his evil way, and I will cease from the evils that I am planning to do to them on account of their evil doings. 4 And you shall say: Thus did the Lord say: If you do not hear me, to walk in my precepts that I have given before you, 5 to heed the words of my servants the prophets whom I send to you early in the morning, and I sent and you did not heed me, 6 I will also give over this house like Selo, and I will give over the city as a curse, to all the nations of the entire earth.

7 And the priests and the pseudo-prophets and all the people heard Jeremias speaking these words in the house of the Lord. 8 And it happened when Jeremias had stopped speaking all that the Lord had instructed him to speak to all the people, then the priests and the pseudo-prophets and all the people laid hold of him, saying, "You shall die by death! 9 Whatever did you prophesy in the name of the Lord, saying, 'This house shall be like Selo, and this city shall be made desolate of inhabitants'?" And all the people assembled against Jeremias in the house of the Lord.

10 And louda's rulers heard this matter, and they came up from the king's house to the house of the Lord and took their seat in the entry of the new gate of the house of the Lord. 11 And the priests and the pseudo-prophets said to the rulers and to all the people, "A sentence of death on this person, because he has prophesied against this city, as you have heard with your own ears."

12 And Jeremias spoke to the rulers and to all the people, saying, "The Lord sent me to prophesy against this house and this city all the words you have heard. 13 And now make your ways and your deeds better, and obey the voice of the Lord, and the Lord will cease from the evils that he has spoken against you. 14 And behold, I am in your hands. Do with me as seems advantageous and as is better to you. 15 Only, in knowing you will know that, if you kill me, you are bringing innocent blood upon yourselves and upon this city and upon its inhabitants in it, because in truth the Lord has sent me to you to speak all these words in your ears."

16 And the rulers and all the people said to the priests and to the pseudo-prophets, "There is no sentence of death on this person, because he has spoken to us in the name of the Lord, our God."

17 And men of the elders of the land arose and said to the entire gathering of the people, 18 "There was Michaias the Morasthite in the days of King Hezekias of Iouda, and he said to all the people of Iouda: 'Thus did the Lord say, Sion shall be plowed like a field; and Ierousalem shall become untrodden, and the mountain of the house a forest grove.'

19 Surely, when killing, Hezekias and all Iouda did not kill him? Was it not that they feared the Lord and that they entreated the face of the Lord, and the Lord ceased from the evils that he had spoken aHeb = shouting against them? And we did great evils against our souls!

20 There was a person prophesying in the name of the Lord, Ourias son of Samaiais from Kariathiarim, and he prophesied concerning this land according to all the words of Ieremias. 21 And King Joakim and all the rulers heard all his words, and they were seeking to kill him, and Ourias heard of it and entered into Egypt. 22 And the king sent men to Egypt, 23 and they brought him from there and led him to the king, and he struck him with a dagger and threw him into the burial place of the sons of his people.

24 In any case, the hand of Achikam son of Saphan was with Ieremias so as not to hand him over into the hands of the people to kill him.

34 Thus did the Lord say: Make bonds and collars, and put them around your neck. 2(3) And you will send them to the king of Idumea and to the king of Moab and to the king of the sons of Ammon and to the king of Tyre and to the king of Sidon by the hands of their envoys who are coming to meet them in Ierousalem, to King Sedekias of Iouda. 3(4) And you will instruct them to say to their masters: Thus did the Lord, the God of Israel say: Thus you shall say to your masters:Because it is I who by my great strength and my lofty effort have made the earth, I will also give it to whom it may seem good in my eyes, 5(6) I have given the earth to King Nabouchodonosor of Babylon to be subject to him, and the wild animals of the field to work for him.

6(8) And the nation and the kingdom, as many as do not put their neck under the yoke of the king of Babylon, I will visit them with dagger and with famine, said the Lord, until they fail in his hand. 7(9) And you, do not keep heeding your pseudo-prophets and your diviners and your dreamers and your soothsayers and your sorcerers, when they say, “You shall not work for the king of Babylon,” because they are prophesying lies to you so as to distance you far from your land. 9(11) And the nation that brings its neck under the yoke of the king of Babylon and works for him, I will also leave him on his own land, and it will work for him and will live in it.

10(12) And I spoke to King Sedekias of Iouda according to all these words, saying: Bring your neck, and work for the king of Babylon, 11(14) because they are prophesying wrong things to you, 12(15) because I did not send them, quoth the Lord, and they are prophesying wrongly in my name so as to destroy you, and you will perish, you and your prophets who are [wrongly] prophesying lies to you.

13(16) I spoke to you and all this people and the priests, saying, Thus did the Lord say: Do not listen to the words of the prophets who are prophesying to you, saying, “Behold, the vessels of the Lord’s house are returning from Babylon,” b because they are prophesying wrong things to you; 14(17) I did not send them, 15(18) if they are prophets and if there is a word of the Lord in them, let them counter me, 16(19) because thus did the Lord say: Even some of the remaining vessels, 17(20) which the king of Babylon did not take when he exiled lechonias from Ierousalem, 18(22) shall enter into Babylon, says the Lord.

35 And it happened in the fourth year of King Sedekias of Iouda, in the fifth month that the pseudo-prophet Hananias son of Azor, from Gabaon, said to me in the house of the Lord, in the sight of the priests and all the people, saying, “Thus did the Lord say: I have crushed the yoke of the king of Babylon. 3(4) Yet two years of days and I will bring back to this place the vessels of the Lord’s house 4(5) and lechonias and the exile of Ierousalem, because I will crush the yoke of the king of Babylon.”

5 And Ieremias said to Hananias, “You shall not prophesy this word, but say, ‘Thus did the Lord say: Truly, thus may the Lord do; may the Lord establish the word which you prophesy, to bring back to this place Babylon the vessels of the house of the Lord and all the exile. 7(8) In any case, hear a word of the Lord that I speak in your ears and in the ears of all the people. 8(9) The prophets who preceded me and preceded you from ancient times also prophesied with reference to much land and great kingdoms for war. 9(10) As for the prophet who prophesied for peace—when the matter came to pass, they would know the prophet, him whom the Lord had sent in faithfulness.”

10 And Hananias in the sight of all the people took the collars from the neck of Ieremias and crushed them. 11(12) And Hananias said in the sight of the people, saying, “Thus did the Lord say: Thus I will crush the yoke of the king of Babylon from the necks of all the nations.” And Ieremias went on his way.

12 And a word of the Lord came to Ieremias after Hananias had crushed the collars from his neck: 13 Go, and say to Hananias, saying, Thus did the Lord say: Wooden collars you have crushed, and I will make iron collars in place of them!—because thus did the Lord say: I have put an iron yoke on the neck of all the nations so that they might work for the king of Babylon. 15(16) And Ieremias said to Hananias, “The Lord has not sent you, and you have made this people trust wrongly. 16 Therefore thus did the Lord say: Behold, I am sending you from off the earth. In this year you will die.” 17 And he died in the seventh month.

36 And these are the words of the book, which Ieremias sent from Ierousalem to the elders of the exile and to the priests and to the pseudo-prophets, as a letter to the exile in Babylon and to all the people, later than when King lechonias and the queen and the eunuchs and every free person and prisoner and artisan had departed from Ierousalem, 3by the hand of Eleasa son of Saphan and Gamarias son of Chelkias, whom King Sedeckias of Iouda sent to the king of Babylon in Babylon, saying: 4Thus did the Lord God of Israel say to the exile which I exiled from Ierousalem: 5Build houses, and settle down, and plant orchards, and eat their fruit, 6and take wives, and produce sons and daughters, and take wives for your sons, and give your daughters to husbands, and multiply, and do not decrease, 7and seek for peace of the land into which I have exiled you there, and pray to the Lord on their behalf, because in their peace there will be peace for you— 8because thus did the Lord say: Do not let the pseudo-prophets who are among you persuade you, and do not let your diviners persuade you, and do not listen for your dreams that you dream, 9because it is wrong what they are prophesying to you in my name, and I did not send them— 10because thus did the Lord say: When Babylon's seventy years are about to be completed, I will visit you, and I will establish my words upon you to bring your people back to this place. 11And I will plan a plan of peace for you, and not to give you these evils. 12And pray to me, and I will listen to you, and I will establish my words upon you to bring your people back to this place.

Ieremias, saying: 13Seek me out, and you will find me, because you will seek me with your whole heart, and I will appear to you.

15Because you have said, "The Lord appointed prophets for us in Babylon," 21 thus did the Lord say with reference to Achiab and with reference to Sedeckias: Behold, I am delivering them into the hands of the king of Babylon, and he shall strike them before your eyes. 22And from them they shall receive a curse in the whole exile of Iouda in Babylon, saying: "May the Lord make you as he made Sedeckias and as Achiab, whom the king of Babylon roasted in the fire," 23on account of the lawlessness they perpetrated in Israel, and they would commit adultery with the wives of their citizens and gave as oracle in my name a word that I did not instruct them, and it is I that am witness, quoth the Lord.

24And to Samaias the Nelamite you shall say: 25I did not send you in my name and to say to the priest Sophonias son of Maasaias: 26The Lord has given you as priest instead of the priest Iodae to be an officer in the house of the Lord over every person prophesying and every person in a frenzy, and you will give him over to the lockup and to the sluice. 27And now why have you not reviled Ieremias of Anathoth who prophesied to you? 28Has he not for this reason sent to us in Babylon, saying, "It is far off; build houses, and settle down, and plant gardens, and eat their fruit"?

29And Sophonias read the document in the ears of Ieremias. 30And a word of the Lord came to Ieremias, saying: 31Send to the exile, saying, Thus did the Lord say with reference to Samaias the Nelamite: Whereas Samaias has prophesied to you, and I did not send him, and he has made you trust wrongly, 32therefore thus did the Lord say: Behold, I am going to visit upon Samaias and upon his family, and he shall not have a person in your midst to see the good that I am going to do for you.

37 (30.1) The word that came to Ieremias from the Lord to say: 2Thus did the Lord, the God of Israel, say, saying: Write in a book all the words that I gave you as oracles, 3because, behold, days are coming, quoth the Lord, and I will bring back the exile of my people, Israel and Iouda, said the Lord, and I will bring them back to the land that I gave to their fathers, and they shall have dominion over it.

4And these are the words that the Lord spoke with reference to Israel and Iouda.

5Thus did the Lord say:

A sound of fear you will hear.

Fear there is, and no peace.

6Ask, and see if a male gave birth, and about fear, with which they will hold on to loin and safety.

[Why have I seen every person, and his hands are on his loins?]

Faces turned, they became jaundiced, because that day is great and there is none like it;

it is a limited time for Jakob,

and from this he shall be saved.

(8) On that day, said the Lord, I will shatter a yoke from off their neck, and I will burst their bonds, and they shall no more work for foreigners.

9And they shall work for the Lord, their God, and I will raise up Dauid as their king for them.

12Thus did the Lord say:

I raised up a fracture;

your wound was grievous.

13There is no one to judge your cause;

you were doctored into pain;

there is no benefit for you.

14All your friends have forgotten you;

they will never inquire;

because I struck you a blow of an enemy, firm discipline, your sins multiplied relative to all your injustice.

16Therefore all who eat you shall be consumed, and all your enemies shall eat all their own flesh,

and those who plunder you shall become plunder, and all those who ravage you I will give over to ravaging, because I will bring up your healing and I will cure you from a painful blow, quoth the Lord, because you were called dispersed:

"She is our prey, because there is no one seeking for her!"

18Thus did the Lord say:

Behold, I am bringing back the exile of Jakob and will have mercy on his captivity, and a city shall be built upon its mound, and the shrine will sit on its rightful site.

And out of them shall come singers and the sound of merrymakers. And I will make them many, and they shall not be made few.

And their sons shall go in as formerly, and their testimonies shall be rectified before me, and I will visit those who oppress them.

And his stronger ones shall be over them, and his ruler shall come out from his midst, and I will gather them, and they shall return to me, because who is this that gave his heart to return to me?

quoth the Lord, because a fierce wrath of the Lord has gone forth; a revolving wrath has gone forth; it will come upon the impious.

Wrath of the Lord’s anger shall not turn back until he has executed and until he has accomplished the undertaking of his heart. In the latter days you will understand them.

38

(31.1) At that time, said the Lord, I will become a god to the race of Israel, and they shall become a people to me.

Thus did the Lord say:

I found him warm in a wilderness with people that perished by dagger.

Go, and do not destroy Israel!

The Lord appeared to him from far away.

I have loved you with an everlasting love; therefore I have drawn you into compassion.

Again I will build you, and you shall be built, O virgin Israel!

Again you shall take your tambourine and go forth with a gathering of jesters.

Again you shall plant vineyards on the mountains of Samaria.

Plant, and praise, because it is a day of calling of people who argue in the mountains of Ephraim: "Rise up, and go up to Sion, to the Lord our God," because thus did the Lord say to Jakob: Be glad, and neigh for the head of nations; make heard, and give praise; say, "The Lord saved his people, the remnant of Israel."

Behold, I am bringing them from the north, and I will gather them from the farthest part of the earth at the feast of phasek,b and you will breed a large crowd, and they shall return here.

With weeping they went out, and with consolation I will bring them up, making them lodge by channels of waters in a straight road, and they shall not wander in it, because I became a father to Israel, and Ephraim is my firstborn.

Hear a word of the Lord, O nations, and declare it in the islands far off; say, “He who winnowed Israel will gather him and will keep him, as he who feeds his flock.”

Because the Lord has redeemed Jakob, he has delivered him from the hand of people stronger than he.

And they shall come and be glad on the mountain of Sion, and they shall come to the good things of the Lord, to a land of grain and wine and fruit and cattle and sheep, and their soul shall become like a fruitful tree, and they shall hunger no more.

Then shall girls rejoice in a gathering of young men, and the old shall rejoice, and I will turn their mourning into joy, and I will make them glad.

I will magnify and intoxicate the soul of the priests, sons of Leui, and my people shall be satisfied with my good things.

Thus did the Lord say:

A voice of lamentation and weeping was heard in Rama; Rachel did not want to stop weeping for her sons, because they are not.

Thus did the Lord say:

Let your voice cease from weeping, and your eyes from tears, because there is a wage for your works, and they shall come back from a land of enemies; there will be permanence for your children.

In hearing I heard Ephraim mourning: "You instructed me, and I was instructed; I was not trained like a calf. Bring me back, and I shall come back, because you are the Lord my God.

Because later than my captivity I repented, and later than that I became aware, I sighed for days of shame, and I yielded to you, because I bore the disgrace of my youth."
Ephraim is my beloved son, a child to delight in; because, since my words are in him, I will remember him with remembrance. Therefore I hurried for him; in having mercy I will have mercy on him, quoth the Lord.

Set up for yourself sionim; make timrorim; give your heart to the shoulders. Return by the road which you went, O virgin Israel. Return to your cities in mourning.

How long will you turn away, O dishonored daughter?—because the Lord has created salvation for a new planting in which people will go about in safety.

Thus did the Lord say: Once more they shall speak this word in the land of Iouda and in his cities when I bring back his captivity: “Blessed be the Lord on his righteous, holy mountain!”

And there shall be people dwelling in the cities of Iouda, and in all his land, together with the farmer, and he shall be ‘raised up’ with a flock, because I intoxicated every thirsty soul and every hungry soul I replenished.

For this reason I awoke and saw, and my sleep was pleasant to me.

Therefore behold, days are coming, quoth the Lord, and I will sow Israel and Iouda with the seed of a human and the seed of an animal. And it shall be just as I used to watch over them to pull down and bring evil, so I will watch over them to build and to plant, quoth the Lord. In those days they shall not say: “The fathers have eaten unripe grapes, and the children’s teeth were set on edge.”

But each shall die for his own sins, and the teeth of him who eats unripe grapes shall be set on edge.

Behold, days are coming, quoth the Lord, and a city shall be built for the Lord from the tower of Hananeel to the gate of the corner. A city shall be built for the Lord from the tower of Hananeel to the gate of the corner. And its measuring shall go out before them to the hills of Gareb, and it shall be encompassed all round with a circle of choice stones. And all hasaremoth as far as Nachal Kedron, to the corner of the gate of horses in the east, a holy precinct to the Lord, and it shall never again fail and shall never ever be destroyed.

The word that came from the Lord to Ieremias in the tenth year of King Sedekias; this was the eighteenth year for King Nabouchodonosor of Babylon.

And the force of the king of Babylon raised a barricade against Ierousalem, and Ieremias was being confined in the court of the guard that was in the house of the king in which King Sedekias had shut him up, saying, “Why do you prophesy, saying: Thus did the Lord say: Behold, I am giving this city in the hands of the king of Babylon, and he shall take it, and Sedekias shall not be saved out of the hand of the Chaldeans, because in handing over he shall be handed over into the hands of the king of Babylon, and his mouth shall speak to his mouth and his eyes shall see his eyes, and Sedekias shall enter into Babylon and be seated there.”

And a word of the Lord came to Ieremias, saying: “Behold, Hanameel son of Salom your father’s brother is coming to you, saying, ‘Acquire for yourself the field that is at Anathoth, because the right of acquisition is yours to take.’” And Hanameel son of Salom my father’s brother came to me in the court of the guard and said to me, “Acquire my field that is in the land of Beniamin at Anathoth, because the right to acquire is yours, and you are the elder. And I knew that it was a word of the Lord.

9 And I acquired the field from Hanameel son of my father’s brother and weighed out to him seventeen shekels of silver. 10 And I wrote in a document and sealed it and got witnesses to witness and weighed the silver on a scale. 11 And I took the document of purchase, the sealed one and the open one, 12 and I gave it to Barouch son of Nerias son of Maasaias, in the sight of Hanameel son of my father’s brother and in the sight of those who were present and signed the document of purchase, and in the sight of the Judeans who were in the court of the guard. 13 And in their sight I instructed Barouch, saying, 14 Thus did the Lord Almighty say: Take this document of purchase and the open document, and you shall put it in an earthenware jar in order that it may last for rather many days, 15 because thus did the Lord say: Fields and houses and vineyards shall again be bought in this land.

16 And after I had given the document of purchase to Barouch son of Nerias, I prayed to the Lord, saying: 17 “You That Are, Lord! It is you who made the sky and the earth by your great strength and by your high arm! Nothing shall be hidden from you when you do mercy for thousands and repay the sins of fathers into the laps of their children after them, you the great, the strong God, 19 Lord of great counsel and powerful in deeds, the great God Almighty, Lord of great name. Your eyes are on the ways of the sons of men, to give each according to his way. 20 You who performed signs and wonders in the land of Egypt to this day both in Israel and among the earthborn, and you have made yourself a name, as this day. 21 And you brought your people Israel out of the land of Egypt with signs and with wonders and with a strong hand and with a high arm 22 and with great spectacles, and you gave them this land, which you swore to their fathers, a land flowing with milk and honey, 23 and they entered and took it and did not obey your voice and did not walk by your ordinances; all you commanded them they did not do. And you have made all these evils to happen to them. 24 Behold, a crowd has come against the city to take it, and the city has been given into the hands of the Chaldeans who are fighting it from before the dagger and the famine. As you spoke, so it happened. 25 And you are saying to me, ‘Acquire for yourself the field for money.’ And I wrote a document and sealed it and had witnesses witness it, and the city was given into the hands of the Chaldeans.

26 And a word of the Lord came to me, saying: 27 I am the Lord, the God of all flesh; surely nothing will be hidden from me. 28 Therefore, thus did the Lord say: When this city is surrendered it will be given over into the hands of the king of Babylon, and he shall seize it. 29 And the Chaldeans who are fighting against this city shall come and shall burn this city with fire, and they shall burn down the houses in which, on their roofs, they burnt incense to the goddess Baal and they would pour libations to other gods so as to embitter me, 30 because the sons of Israel and the sons of Loyalda were alone in doing evil in my sight from their youth, 31 because this city existed for my wrath and for my anger, from the day they built it even until this day, to remove it from before me, 32 because of all the evils of the sons of Israel and Loyalda that they did to embitter me, they and their kings and their rulers and their priests and their prophets, men of Loyalda and those that inhabit Jerusalem. 33 And they have turned their back to me and not their face, and I have taught them in the early morning, and I have taught, and they did not hear to accept instruction. 34 And they set up their defilements in the house, where my name is called on it, in their impurities. 35 And they built the altars to the goddess Baal, which are in the valley of Hennom’s son, to offer up their sons and their daughters to ‘the king’, things which I did not instruct them to do, and it did not arise in my heart that they do this abomination so as to cause Loyalda to sin.

36 And now thus did the Lord, the God of Israel, say with reference to the city of which you say, “It will be given over into the hands of the king of Babylon by dagger and by famine and by dispatch”: 37 Behold, I am gathering them from every land, where I dispersed them in their wrath and in my anger and in great irritation, and I will bring them back to this place, and I will settle them in confidence. 38 And they shall become a people to me, and I will become a god to them. 39 And I will give them another way and another heart, to fear me all the days, both for their own good and for that of their children after them. 40 And I will make an everlasting covenant with them, which I will not turn away from behind them, and I will assign my fear to their heart so that they may not turn away from me. 41 And I will visit them to do good to them, and I will plant them in this land in faithfulness, both with all my heart and with all my soul, 42 because thus did the Lord say: Just as I have brought all these great evils upon this people, so I will bring upon them all the good that I told them. 43 And fields shall be acquired again in the land of which you are saying. It is un trodden by human being or animal, and they were given over into the hands of the Chaldeans. 44 And they shall acquire fields with money, and you shall write in a document and seal it and have witnesses witness it in the land of Benjamin and around Jerusalem and in the cities of Loyalda and in the cities of the mountain and in the cities of the Sephela and in the cities of the Nageb, because I will bring back their exiles.

a Or into b Gk = bômos c Heb = Molech did the Lord say, when he was making earth and forming it to establish it—the Lord is his name: you shall see his eyes, and you shall enter into Babylon. And as they wept for your fathers, those who reigned before you, they shall also weep for you and lament for you: “Alas, Adonb,” because I have spoken a word, said the Lord.

6 And Jeremiah spoke all these words to King Sedekias in Jerusalem, and the force of the king of Babylon was fighting against Jerusalem and against the cities of Judah, against Lachis and against Azekah, because these were left among the cities of Judah as strong cities.

8 The word that came to Jeremiah from the Lord, after King Sedekias had concluded a covenant with the people to call for a release, to send off free each his Hebrew male servant and each his Hebrew female servant so as not to have a man from Judah in slavery. And all the nobles and all the people, who had entered into the covenant to dismiss each his male servant and each his female servant, reneged and let them be their male and female servants. And a word of the Lord came to Jeremiah, saying: Thus did the Lord say: It was I that made a covenant with your fathers in the day I delivered them from the land of Egypt, from a house of slavery, saying, When six years are complete, you shall dismiss your Hebrew brother, who will be sold to you. And he shall work for you for six years, and you shall send him off free. And they did not hear me and did not incline their ear. And today they have turned to do what is right before my eyes, to call for a release, each of his fellow, and they concluded a covenant before me in the house where my name is called on it. And you turned and profaned my name when each of you turned back his male servant and each his female servant, whom you had sent off free, for their own self, as male and female servants for you. Therefore, thus did the Lord say: You have not obeyed me by calling for a release, each pertaining to his fellow. Behold, I am calling for a release for you to the dagger and to death and to the famine, and I will give you as a dispersion to all the kingdoms of the earth. And as for the men who have transgressed my covenant, those that did not stand by my covenant that they made before me, I will render them as the bull calf which they made, to work for it: the rulers of Judah and those with power and the priests and the people. And I will hand them over to their enemies. And their carcasses shall become food for the birds of the air and the wild animals of the earth. And as for King Sedekias of Judah and their rulers, I will hand them over into the hands of their enemies—and the force of the king of Babylon is for those that are running away from them. Behold, I am giving instructions, quoth the Lord, and will bring them back to this land, and they will fight against it and take it and burn it down with fire, and the cities of Judah, and I will render them desolate aside from inhabitants.

41 (34-1) The word that came to Jeremiah from the Lord, and King Nabuchodonosor of Babylon and all his army and all the land under his dominion were fighting against Jerusalem and against all the cities of Judah, saying: Thus did the Lord say: Go to King Sedekias of Judah, and you shall say to him: Thus did the Lord say: In surrender this city shall be surrendered into the hands of the king of Babylon, and he shall seize it and burn it with fire. Even you shall not be saved from his hand, and with a seizing you shall be seized and given over into his hands, and your eyes shall see his eyes, and you shall enter into Babylon.

42 (35.1) The word that came to Jeremia from the Lord in the days of King Ioakim of Iouda, saying: 2Go to the house of Archabina, and you shall bring them into the house of the Lord, into one of the courts, and you shall offer them wine to drink. 3And I brought out lezonia son of Jeremian son of Chabasin and his brothers and his sons and the whole house of Archabina. 4And I brought them into the house of the Lord into the priestly chamber of the sons of Hanaia son of Godolias, man of God, which was near the house of the rulers who were over the house of Maaiasia son of Selom, the keeper of the court. 5And I gave before them a jug of wine and cups, and I said, “Drink wine.” 6And they said, “We will not drink wine, because our father Ionadab son of Rechab commanded us, saying, ‘You shall not drink wine, you and your sons forever, and you shall not build a house, and you shall not sow seed, and you shall not have a vineyard, because you shall live in tents all your days, that you may live many days in the land in which you spent time in it’. 7And we have obeyed the voice of our father Ionadab so as not to drink wine all our days, we and our wives and our sons and our daughters, and so as not to build houses to live there. And we did not have vineyard and field and seed, and we have lived in tents and obeyed and acted in accordance with all that our father Ionadab commanded us. 8And it happened, when King Nabouchodonosor of Babylon came up against the land, we also said, ‘Come, and let us enter into Ierousalem from before the force of the Chaldeans and from before the force of the Assyrians, and we are living there.’ 12And a word of the Lord came to me, saying: 13Thus says the Lord: Go, and say to a person of Iouda and the inhabitants of Ierousalem, Will you not receive instruction to obey my words? 14The sons of Ionadab son of Rechab upheld the dictum which he commanded his children so as not to drink wine, and they did not drink. And I spoke to you early, and I spoke, and you did not obey. 15And I have sent to you my servants the prophets, saying, “Turn, everyone from his evil way, and make your doings better, and do not go after other gods to be slaves to them, and live in the land that I gave to you and your fathers.” And you did not incline your ears and did not obey. 16And the sons of Ionadab son of Rechab have upheld the command of their father, but this people have not obeyed me. Therefore, thus did the Lord say: Behold, I am bringing on Iouda and on the inhabitants of Ierousalem all the evils that I have spoken against them. 18Therefore, thus did the Lord say: Whereas the sons of Ionadab son of Rechab have obeyed the command of their father, to do just as their father commanded them, Ionadab son of Rechab shall not lack a man to stand before me for all the days of the earth.

43 (36.1) In the fourth year of Ioakim son of Iosias, king of Iouda, a word of the Lord came to me saying: 2Take for yourself a small roll of a book, and write on it all the words that I gave you as oracles against Ierousalem and against Iouda and against all the nations, from the day of my speaking to you, from the days of King Iosias of Iouda even until this day. 3Perhaps the house of Iouda will hear of all the evil that I intend to do to them in order that they turn from their evil way, and I shall be gracious regarding their injustices and their sins. 4And Jeremia called Barouch son of Nerias, and Barouch wrote on a small roll of a book from the mouth of Jeremia all the words of the Lord that he had given as oracles to him. 5And Jeremia commanded Barouch, saying, “I am under guard. I shall not be able to enter into the house of the Lord, and on a day of fasting you shall read from this small roll into the ears of the people in the Lord’s house and in the ears of every one of Iouda, those that come out from their city—you shall read to them. 6Perhaps mercy for them will come about before the Lord, and they will turn them out of their evil way, because great is the anger and wrath of the Lord that the Lord spoke against this people.” And Barouch did according to all that Jeremia commanded him, to read in the book the Lord’s words in the Lord’s house. 9And it happened in the eighth year of King Ioakim, in the ninth month, all the people in Ierousalem and the house of Iouda proclaimed in assembly a fast before the Lord. 10And in the ears of the people, Barouch would read words of Jeremia from the book, in the house of the Lord, in the house of Gamarias son of Sapban the secretary, in the upper court, at the entry of the new gate of the Lord’s house. 11And Michaias son of Gamarias son of Saphan heard all the words of the Lord from the book. And he went down to the king’s house, into the secretary’s house, and behold, all the rulers were sitting there: Elisama the secretary and Dalaias son of Selemias and Jonathan son of Akchobor and Gamarias son of Sapban and Sedekias son of Hanania and all the rulers. 13And Michaias told them all the words that he had heard Barouch read in the ears of the people. 14And all the rulers sent Ioudin son of Nathania son of Selemias son of Chousi to Barouch son of Nerias, saying, “The small roll in which you were reading in it, in the ears of the people, take it into your hand, and come.” And Barouch son of Nerias took the small roll and went down to them. 15And they said to him, “Again read it into our ears.” And Barouch read. 16And it happened, when they heard all the words, they took counsel, each with his fellow, and they said, “In reporting let us report all these words to the king.” And they questioned Barouch, saying, “From where did you write all these words?” 18And Barouch said, “From his mouth Ieremias proclaimed to me all these words, and I would write them in a book.” 19 And they said to Barouch, “Go, hide, you and Ieremias, and let no person know where you are.”

20 And they entered to the king in the court, and the small roll they gave to be watched in the house of Elisama, and they reported all the words to the king. 21 And the king sent loudin to take the small roll, and he took it from the house of Elisama, and loudin read it into the ears of the king and into the ears of all the rulers who stood around the king. 22 And the king was sitting in his winter house, and there was a hearth of fire in front of him. 23 And it happened when loudin would read three or four columns, he would cut them off with the secretary's penknife and would throw them into the fire that was in the hearth, until the entire roll had vanished into the fire that was in the hearth. 24 And the king and his servants, who were hearing all these words, were not alarmed, and they did not tear their garments. 25 And Elnathan and Dalaias and Gamarias suggested to the king not to burn the small roll. 26 And the king commanded Iereemel the king's son and Saraias son of Esriel to arrest Barouch and Ieremias. And they were hidden.

27 And after the king had burned the small roll, all the words that Barouch wrote from the mouth of Ieremias, a word of the Lord came to Ieremias, saying: 28 Again, take another small roll, all the words that Barouch wrote from the mouth of Ieremias. And they were hidden. 29 And you shall write all the words that were in the small roll, and you shall say: Thus did the Lord say, “You burned this small roll, saying, Why have you written on it, saying, In coming the king of Babylon will come and destroy utterly this land, and human and animals will fall from it?” 30 Therefore did the Lord say with reference to King Ioakim of Iouda: He shall have no one to sit upon the throne of Dauid, and his carcass shall lie cast out in the heat of the day and in the frost of the night. 31 And I will visit upon him and upon his family and upon his servants, and I will bring upon them and upon the inhabitants of Jerousalem and upon the land of Iouda all the evils, which I have spoken to them—and they did not listen.

32 And Barouch took another small roll and wrote on it from the mouth of Ieremias all the words of the book, which words Ioakim had burned, and more words like these were yet added to them.

44 (37.1) And Sedekias son of Iosias became king in place of Ioakim, whom King Nabouchodonosor of Babylon made king to be king over Iouda. 2 And he and his servants and the people of the land did not obey the words of the Lord that he spoke by the hand of Ieremias.

3 And King Sedekias sent loachal son of Selemias and the priest Sophonias son of Maasaia to Ieremias, saying, “Pray for us to the Lord.”

4 And Ieremias went and passed through the midst of the city, and they had not consigned him to the house of the guard. 5 And a force of Pharao had come out of Egypt, and the Chaldeans heard news of them, and they withdrew from Jerou- salem.

6 And a word of the Lord came to Ieremias, saying: 7 Thus did the Lord say: Thus you shall say to the king of Iouda, who sent to you to inquire of me, Behold, Pharao's force, which came out for assistance, will return to the land of Egypt. 8 And the Chaldeans themselves shall return and fight against this city, and they shall seize it and burn it with fire, 9 because thus did the Lord say: Do not suppose in your souls, saying, “In departing the Chaldeans will go away from us,” for they will not go away. 10 Even if you struck the whole force of the Chaldeans, those who are fighting you, and there remained of them some pierced, each in his place, these would rise up and burn this city with fire.

11 And it happened, when the force of the Chaldeans had withdrawn from Jerousalem from before Pharao's force, 12 Ieremias set out from Jerousalem to go to the land of Beniamin to buy property there among the people. 13 And he was at the gate of Beniamin, and there was a person with whom he used to lodge, Sarouia son of Selemias son of Hananias, and he arrested Ieremias, saying, “You are fleeing to the Chaldeans.” 14 And he said, “That is a lie; I am not fleeing to the Chaldeans.”

And he did not listen to him, and Sarouia arrested Ieremias and brought him to the rulers. 15 And the rulers were embittered against Ieremias, and they struck him and sent him to the house of the secretary Ionathan, because they had made this into a house of the guard. 16 And Ieremias went into the house of the cistern and into the chereth and sat there many days.

17 And King Sedekias sent word and called him. And the king questioned him secretly to say if there was a word from the Lord. And he said, “There is! You shall be handed over into the hands of the king of Babylon.” 18 And Ieremias said to the king, “What wrong have I done you and your servants and this people that you are giving me over into the house of the guard? 19 And where are your vants and this people that you are giving me over before you, and why do you return me to the house of the secretary Ionathan? And shall I not die there?” 21 And the king gave instructions, and they committed him to the court of the guard and would give him one loaf of bread a day from outside where they bake until the bread of the city was gone. And Ieremias sat in the court of the guard.

45 (38.1) And Saphatias son of Matthan and Godolias son of Paschor and loachal son of Selemias heard the words that Ieremias was... speaking to the crowd, saying, 2 Thus did the Lord say, He who lives in this city shall die by sword and by famine, and he who goes out to the Chaldeans shall live, and his soul shall be his windfall, and he shall live, 3 because thus did the Lord say, In being handed over this city shall be handed over into the hands of the force of the king of Babylon, and he shall seize it. 4 And they said to the king, “Let that person be put to death, because he is relaxing the hands of the people that fight, who are left in the city, and the hands of all the people, by speaking such words to them. For this person does not utter an oracle of peace to this people but only hardship.” 5 And the king said, “Behold, he is in your hands,” because the king was powerless against them. 6 And they threw him into a cistern of Melchias, the king’s son, which was in the court of the guard, and they let him down into the cistern. And there was no water in the cistern, but only mire, and he was in the mire.

And Abdemelech the Ethiopian—and he was in the king’s house—heard that they had consigned Jeremiah to the cistern. And the king was at the gate of Benjamin. 8 And he went out to him, and he spoke to the king and said, 9 “You acted wickedly in what you did to kill this person from before the famine, because there is no longer any bread in the city.” 10 And the king commanded Abdemelech, saying, “Take in hand thirty persons from here, and bring him up out of the cistern so that he may not die.” 11 And Abdemelech took the persons and entered into the house of the king—the underground chamber—and took from there old rags and old ropes and threw them into the cistern to Jeremiah. 12 And he said, “Put these under the ropes.” And Jeremiah did so. 13 And they drew him up by the ropes and brought him up out of the cistern. And Jeremiah sat in the court of the guard.

14 And the king sent word and called him to himself at the house of Aselisel, which is in the house of the Lord. And the king said to him, “I will ask you a matter, and do not hide any dictum from me.” 15 And Jeremiah said to the king, “If you acted, will you not put me to death with death? And if I give you advice, you will not hear me.” 16 And the king swore to him, saying, “The Lord lives, who made for us this life, if I shall kill you and if I shall give you into the hands of these people!”

17 And Jeremiah said to him, “Thus did the Lord say, If in going out you go out to the leaders of the king of Babylon, your soul shall live, and this city shall not be burned with fire, and you shall live and your house. 18 And if you do not go out, this city shall be handed over into the hands of the Chaldeans, and they shall burn it with fire, and you shall not be saved.” 19 And the king said to Jeremiah, “I have a concern regarding the Judeans who have fled to the Chaldeans, lest they give me into their hands and they shall mock me.” 20 And Jeremiah said, “They will not deliver you up. Obey a word of the Lord, which I say to you, and it shall be better for you, and your soul shall live. 21 And if you are not willing to go out, this is the word the Lord has shown me: 22 Behold, all the women that are left in the house of the king of Judah were being led out to the rulers of the king of Babylon, and they kept saying, ‘Your men of peace have misled you and will overpower you, and they will sink your feet in slipperiness; they turned away from you.’

23 And your wives and your children they shall lead out to the Chaldeans, and you shall not be saved, because you shall be seized by the hand of the king of Babylon, and this city shall be burned down.”

24 And the king said to him, “Let no person know any of these words, and you will not die. 25 And if the rulers hear that I have spoken with you, and they come to you and say to you, Tell us what the king said to you; do not conceal it from us, and we will not kill you. And what did the king say to you?” 26 And you shall say to them, ‘I am casting pity for me in the sight of the king so as not to return me to the house of Jonathan to die there.’ 27 And all the rulers came to Jeremiah and questioned him, and he told them according to all these words which the king had commanded him. And they maintained silence, because a word of the Lord was not heard. 28 And Jeremiah sat in the court of the guard until the time when Jerusalem was seized.

46 And it happened in the ninth year of King Sedekias of Judah, in the tenth month, King Nabouchodonosor of Babylon and all his force came against Jerusalem, and they were laying siege to it, and in the eleventh year of Sedekias, in the fourth month, on the ninth of the month, the city was breached. 3 And all the leaders of the king of Babylon entered and sat in the middle gate: Nargalsarsar, Samagoth, Nabousarsachar, Nabousaris, Nargalsaraser, Rabamag and the rest of the leaders of the king of Babylon. 4 And they sent and took Jeremiah from the court of the guard and gave him to Godolias son of Achikam son of Saphan, and they brought him out, and he sat in the midst of the people.

15 And a word of the Lord came to Jeremiah in the court of the guard, saying: 16 Go, and say to Abdemelech the Ethiopian: Thus did the Lord, the God of Israel, say: Behold, I am bringing my words against this city for evil and not for good. 17 And I will save you on that day, and I shall not hand you over into the hands of the people, before them whom you fear, 18 because in saving I will save you, and you shall not fall by sword, and your soul shall be your windfall, because you have trusted in me, quoth the Lord.

47 The word that came from the Lord to Jeremiah after Nabouzardan the chief cook from Dama sent him off, when he took him in...
And it happened in the seventh month, Ismael son of Nathaniel son of Eleasa of the family of the king came and ten men with him to Godolias at Massepha. And they ate bread together there. 2And Ismael got up, and the ten men who were with him, and they struck Godolias, whom the king of Babylon had appointed over the land, 3and all the Judeans who were with him at Massepha and all the Chaldeans who were found there.

4And it happened on the second day after he had struck Godolias, and no person knew, 5men also arrived from Sychem and from Salem and from Samaria, eighty men with their beards shaved and their clothes torn and beating themselves, and manaa and frankincense in their hands to bring to the house of the Lord. 6And Ismael came out to meet them. They were going and weeping, and he said, "Enter to Godolias." 7And it happened, when they came into the middle of the city, he slaughtered them into the well. 8And ten men were found there, and they said to Ismael, "Do not kill us, because we have stores of wheat and barley, honey and oil in a field." And he passed them over and did not kill them in the midst of their brothers.

11And Ioanan son of Karee and all the leaders of the force, those with him, heard of all the evil that Ismael had done, 12and they brought their whole army and went out to fight him. And they found him at a great water in Gabaon. 13And it happened when all the people who were with Ismael saw Ioanan and the leaders of the force that was with him, 14they then went back to Ioanan. 15And Ismael was saved with eight people and went to the sons of Ammon. 16And Ioanan and all the leaders of the force, those with him, took all the rest of the people whom he had turned away from Ismael—mighty men in war and the women and the rest and the eunuchs, whom he brought back from Gabaon. 17And they went out and settled at Gaberoto Chamaam, which is near Bethleem, to go to Egypt from before the Chaldeans, because they feared before them, because Ismael had struck Godolias, whom the king of Babylon had appointed in the land.

48 (41)And it happened in the seventh month, Ismael son of Nathaniel son of Eleasa of the family of the king came and ten men with him to Godolias at Massepha. And they ate bread together there. 2And Ismael got up, and the ten men who were with him, and they struck Godolias, whom the king of Babylon had appointed over the land, 3and all the Judeans who were with him at Massepha and all the Chaldeans who were found there.

49 (42)And all the leaders of the force and Ioanan and Azarias son of Maasaia and all the people from small even to great approached the prophet Ieremias and said to him, "Let mercy for us come about before you, and pray to the Lord, your God, for these that remain, because there are a few of us left out of many, as your eyes see. 2And let the Lord your God tell us the way we should go in it and the word we should do." 3And Ieremias said to them, "I have heard; behold, I shall pray to the Lord, your God, according to your words, and it shall be, the word whichever the Lord will answer, I will tell you; I will not hide from you what is said.” 5And they in their turn said to Jeremias, “Let the Lord be among us as a just and faithful witness, if—according to every word with which the Lord sends you to us—we shall not act thus. 6Both if it is good and if it is bad, we will obey the voice of the Lord, our God, to him to whom we are sending you, in order that it may go better with us, because we will obey the voice of the Lord our God.”

7 And it happened after ten days a word of the Lord came to Jeremias. 8And he summoned Ioanan and the leaders of the force and all the people from small even to great 9and said to them, “Thus did the Lord say: 10If in settling you settle in this land, I will build you up and not pull down, and I will plant you and not pluck up, because I am at rest regarding the evils that I have done to you. 11Do not be afraid before the king of Babylon, whom you fear before him. Do not be afraid, quoth the Lord, because I am with you, to rescue you and to save you from his hand. 12And I will grant you mercy, and I will have mercy on you and return you to your land. 13And if you keep saying, ‘We will not settle in this land,’ so as not to obey the voice of the Lord, 14because we will go into the land of Egypt, and we shall not see war, and we shall not hear a trumpet sound, and we shall not be hungry because of bread, and there we will live,’ 15therefore hear a word of the Lord. Thus did the Lord say: If you incline your face towards Egypt and enter to live there, 16it shall also be that the sword, which you fear before it, shall find you in Egypt, and the famine, regarding which you have a concern before it, shall seize you in Egypt, and there you shall die. 17And there shall be: all the people and all the aliens who have set their faces towards the land of Egypt to live there, they shall expire by sword and by famine, and there shall not be any of them that escapes from the evils that I am bringing upon them, 18because thus did the Lord say: Just as my anger dripped on the inhabitants of Jerusalem, so my anger will drip on you, when you go into Egypt. And you shall become unlodged, and be in subjection and become a curse and a reproach, and you shall see this place no more. 19This is what the Lord has spoken to you who remain of Judah: Do not enter into Egypt. And now in knowing you shall know 20that you my servants the prophets early in the morning, saying, ‘Pray for us to the Lord, and according to everything, whatever the Lord speaks to you, we will do.’ 21And you have not obeyed the voice of the Lord by which he sent me to you. 22And now you shall expire by sword and by famine in the place where you desire to go to settle there.”

50 (43.1) And it happened, when Jeremias stopped saying to the people all the words of the Lord, with which the Lord had sent him to them—all these words—2then Azarias son of Maasaias said, and Ioanan son of Karee and all the men who had spoken to Jeremias, saying, “Lies! The Lord did not send you to us to say, ‘Do not enter into Egypt to live there,’ 3but Barouch son of Nerias is inciting you against us in order that you hand us over into the hands of the Chaldeans that they put us to death and that we be exiled to Babylon.” 4And Ioanan and all the leaders of the force and all the people did not obey the voice of the Lord, to settle down in the land of Judah. 5And Ioanan and all the leaders of the force took all those remaining of Judah who had returned to settle down in the land—6the mighty men and the women and the rest and the daughters of the king and the souls whom Nabouzardan had left with Godolias son of Achikam and the prophet Jeremias and Barouch son of Nerias. 7And they entered into Egypt, because they did not obey the voice of the Lord. And they entered into Taphnas.

51 (44.1) The word that came to Jeremias for all the Judeans living in Egypt, even those settled in Magdolos and in Taphnas and in the land of Pathoures, saying, 2Thus did the Lord, the God of Israel, say: You have seen all the evils that I have brought on Jerusalem and on the cities of Judah. And behold, they are desolate of inhabitants 3because of their wickedness that they committed, to embitter me, by having gone to burn incense to other gods that they did not know. 4And I sent to you my servants the prophets early in the morning, and I sent, saying, “Do not do the thing of this desfilement that I hated!” 5And they did not listen and did not incline their ear, to turn from their evils so as not to offer incense to other gods. 6And my wrath and my anger dripped, and it burned in the cities of Judah and outside of Jerusalem, and they became a desolation and something untrodden, as this day. 7And now thus did the Lord Almighty say: Why are you doing great harm to your souls, to cut off your man and woman, infant failed by sword and by famine. 19And because we queen of the sky, we all were diminished and have and a curse. 13And I will visit upon those who are and they shall become a reproach and destruction by famine they shall fail from small even to great, who are in Egypt, and they shall fall; by sword and and a curse. 18But when we left off offering incense to the filled with bread, and we were well-off and saw no

of Iouda and outside of Ierousalem. And we were

15 And all the men, who were aware that their wives were offering incense to other gods, and all the women, a great gathering, and all the people who settled in Pathoures in the land of Egypt answered Jeremias, saying: 16 As for the word that you have spoken to us in the name of the Lord, we are not going to hear you, 17because in doing we will do every word that shall come out of our mouth, to offer incense to the queen of the sky and to pour out libations to her, just as we and our fathers and our kings and our rulers did in the cities of Iouda and outside of Ierousalem. And we were filled with bread, and we were well-off and saw no evil. 18But when we left off offering incense to the queen of the sky, we all were diminished and have failed by sword and by famine. 19And because we were offering incense to the queen of the sky and poured out libations to her—surely, we did not make cakes for her and poured out libations to her without our husbands? 9

20 And Jeremias said to all the people, the mighty men and the women and all the people who answered him words, saying: 21 As for the incense offering that you offered in the cities of Iouda and outside of Ierousalem, and you and your fathers and your kings and your rulers and the people of the land, did not the Lord remember it, and did it not come up in his heart? 22And the Lord could no longer bear up before the evil of your deeds, before the abominations that you committed, and your land became a desolation and something untrodden and a curse, as this day. 23Because you were burning incense and because you sinned against the Lord and did not obey the voice of the Lord and did not walk by his ordinances and by his law and by his testimonies, these evils have also taken hold of you.” 24

25 Thus did the Lord, the God of Israel, say: You wives have spoken with your mouth and have accomplished with your hands, saying, ‘In enacting we will enact our agreements to which we have agreed, to burn incense to the queen of the sky and to pour out li-bations to her.’ In respecting you respected your agreements, and in enacting you enacted! 26There-fore hear a word of the Lord, all Iouda who settled in the land of Egypt: Behold, I swore by my great name, said the Lord, if my name shall ever be in the mouth of all Iouda in all the land of Egypt to say, ‘The Lord lives!’—27because, behold, I am watchful over them to harm them and not to do good, and all Iouda, those who live in the land of Egypt, shall fail by sword and by famine until they expire. 28And those who have escaped from the sword shall return to the land of Iouda, few in number, and those remaining of Iouda, who are established in the land of Egypt to sojourn there, shall know whose word will endure! 29And this shall be the sign that I am going to visit upon you for evil: 30Thus did the Lord say, Behold, I am giving Ouaphre, king of Egypt, into the hands of his enemy and into the hands of people that seek his soul, just as I gave King Sedekias of Iouda into the hands of King Nabouchodonosor of Babylon, his enemy and one who sought his soul.”

31(45.1) The word that the prophet Jeremias spoke to Barouch son of Nerias, when he would write these words in a book from the mouth of Jeremias, in the fourth year of Ioakim son of King Losias of Iouda: 32(2)Thus did the Lord say with reference to you, O Barouch: 33(3)Because you said, “Woe is me! Woe is me! because the Lord has added sorrow to my pain, I slept in groaning, and I found no rest.” 34(4)Say to him, “Thus did the Lord say: Behold, I bring down whom I have built up and pluck up whom I planted. 35(5)And you will seek great things for yourself. Do not seek them because, behold, I am bringing evil upon all flesh, says the Lord, but I will give your soul as a windfall in every place, there where you may go.”

52 It being Sedekias’ twenty-first year when he began to reign—and he reigned eleven years in Ierousalem, and his mother’s name was Hamital daughter of Jeremias from Lobena.
4 And it happened in the ninth year of his reign, in the tenth month, on the tenth of the month, King Nabouchodonosor of Babylon came with all his force against Ierousalem, and they blockaded it and walled it in on four sides, all around. 5And the city came under siege until the eleventh year of King Sedekias. 6On the ninth of the month also the famine took a firm hold in the city, and there were no loaves for the people of the land. 7And the city was breached, and all the men of war went out by night by the way of the gate between the wall and the outer wall, which was by the king’s garden, and the Chaldeans were at the city, all around. And they went in the direction of Araba. 8And the force of the Chaldeans pursued after the king and overtook him across from Ieri-cho, and all his servants were scattered from him.
9And they captured the king and brought him to the king of Babylon at Deblatha, and he spoke to him in judgment. 10And the king of Babylon slew the sons of Sedekias before his eyes, and he slew all the rulers of Iouda at Deblatha. 11And he blinded the eyes of Sedekias and bound him in fetters, and the king of Babylon brought him to Babylon and delivered him to the mill house until the day he died.
12 And in the fifth month, on the tenth of the month, Nabouzardan the chief cook, who stood before the king of Babylon, came to Ierousalem.
13And he set on fire the house of the Lord and the house of the king and all the houses of the city,
and every great house he set on fire with fire.
14And the force of the Chaldeans, which was with the chief cook, pulled down every wall around Ie-rousalem. 16And the chief cook left a residue of the people to be vinedressers and tillers of the soil.
17 And the pillars of bronze that were in the house of the Lord and the bases and the bronze sea that was in the house of the Lord, the Chaldeans broke in pieces and took their bronze and carried it off to Babylon. 18And the rim and the saucers and the meat hooks and all the bronze vessels with them with which they were ministering. 19And the chief cook took away the saphphoth and the mas-maroth and the pitches and the lampstands and the censers and the ladles, which were gold and which were silver. 20And as for the two pillars and the one sea and the twelve bronze bull calves under the sea, which things King Salomon had made for the house of the Lord, there was no weighing of their bronze. 21And as for the pillars, the height of the one pillar was thirty-five cubits, and a cord of twelve cubits encompassed it, and its thickness was four fingers all round. 22And upon them was a bronze cornice, and the excess of the one cornice was five cubits in length, and lattice-work and pomegranates were on the cornice all round; all was of bronze. And the second pillar had the same, with eight pomegranates to a cubit for the twelve cubits. 23And there were ninety-six pomegranates on the one side, and all the pomegranates on the latticework were one hundred, all around.
24 And the chief cook took the first priest and the priest ranked second and the three that were guarding the threshold and one eunuch, who was overseer of the men of war, and seven men of name in the presence of the king, who were found in the city, and the recorder of the forces, who was recording for the people of the land, and sixty persons of the people of the land, who were found in the midst of the city. 26And Nabouzardan the chief cook took them and brought them to the king of Babylon at Deblatha. 27And the king of Babylon struck them at Deblatha in the land of Hemath.
31 And it happened in the thirty-seventh year after King Ioakim of Iouda had been exiled, in the twelfth month, on the twenty-fourth of the month, King Oulaimaradach of Babylon, in the year in which he became king, received the head of King Ioakim of Iouda and brought him out the house where he was being guarded, 32and he spoke kindly to him and gave him a seat above the seats of the other kings who were with him in Babylon. 33And he exchanged his prison robe, and he would always eat bread in his presence all the days he lived.
34For the allowance was given him always by the king of Babylon, from day to day, until the day he died.

thermore postulates that the same reviser also revised Bar 1.1–3.8. Since Ieremias is clearly based on a Hebrew original, its affinities with the first section of Barouch (1.1–3.8) provide solid support for an original Hebrew of this section.

Barouch as Greek Composition

The second section (3.9–5.9) is the subject of much debate concerning its original language. On the one hand, there is a general Greek character to it. It also possesses one Septuagintal hapax legomenon, the μυθολογοί “storytellers” (3.23), and several words, many of which are neologisms, that only appear here in all of the Septuagint, i.e., συμμαίνω “to be defiled with” (3.11), μακροβίωσις “longevity” (3.14), ἀντανάστησι το “to rise up against” (3.19), the ἵκος “seekers” (3.23), ἐπιμήκης “extensive” (3.24), λάμψις “shining” (4.2) and δεκαπλασίαζω “to multiply by ten” (4.28). Add to these data the facts that 4.36–5.9 has strong parallels with the Greek version of the Psalms of Solomon 11 and that the phraseology of 4.28 is difficult to reconstruct back into biblical Hebrew, and one might have good grounds to argue for an original Greek composition.

On the other hand, the literary style, especially the use of the vocative or the imperative and the strong use of parallelism, allow for the possibility of a Hebrew original. There are also a few instances where the Greek appears to be a mistranslation of the Hebrew, such as the unique appearance of the city Merran (3.23), which may have been a Hebrew corruption of Midian (the r and d in Hebrew are easily confused), followed by the Greek doubling of the r, which occurs occasionally in the transliteration of Hebrew proper names (e.g., Sarrá in LXX Gen 17.19 and Gomorra in LXX Gen 18.20). David G. Burke has produced his own retroversion of this second section based on the conclusion that it was originally composed in Hebrew. Despite Burke’s ability to retrovert this section into Hebrew, however, the evidence for this section being translation Greek is by no means conclusive. It is just as possible that it was originally written in Greek. Much earlier, J. J. Kneucker was satisfied that the entire book had originally been written in Hebrew, and he created his own retroversion of what he thought to be the original Hebrew.

Ultimately though, since one does not find ties between Ieremias and this second section of Barouch as is clearly the case with the first section, it is likely that it was the work of a different author who could easily have composed in Greek. All of the biblical citations found here are based on the LXX rather than on the Hebrew and therefore are suggestive of a Greek origin. It is just as likely that the author of this section of Barouch was trained in a Septuagintal style of writing and deliberately created an original Greek text in this manner. Perhaps by the time of Barouch’s composition Hebraisms such as τῆς πνεύμονος (4.34) “to mourning” (Hebrew לִבָּנָן, 2 Sam 19.3; Amos 8.10; Lam 5.15) were becoming commonplace in the Jewish tradition of biblical composition and therefore are nothing more than stylistic imitations of the Septuagint. Nevertheless, despite the apparent problems of determining the original language of composition for 3.9–5.9, since no Hebrew text for any part of Barouch has survived, NETS is based in its entirety solely on the Greek. That being the case, any attempt to create a translation profile for the book lacks credibility. Since the Hebrew “versions” we do have available are retroversions from the Greek and thus are based on assumed Hebrew-Greek equivalences, using them as evidence is inherently problematic.

General Character of the Greek

There are subtle differences in the style or presentation of Greek between the two sections. Whereas the first section is replete with Hebraisms in the Greek, the second has far fewer. Nevertheless, since it attempts to imitate Hebrew poetry, the Greek is not altogether a fluid rendering.

Content

Barouch is a highly eclectic text. It reads like a patchwork of expressions and ideas borrowed from other parts of biblical material rather than an original work of its own. To give just a few examples, 1.15–2.12 shows considerable influence from Dan 9.7–14, and 2.13 compares well with Deut 28.62 and Ier 42.2. Barouch 3.29–4.4 is indebted to Iob 28.12–27 as well as Deutero-Isaiah (e.g., 3.36 and 5.5, 7), Ecclesiast (Qoheleth) and the Psalms of Salomon for most of its ideas and expressions. Barouch 3.14 is reminiscent of Prov 3.13–18, and 4.15 is based on Deut 28.49–50. There are faint echoes of Reigns as well. And, of course, the book of Jeremiah/Ieremias lies behind much of the content in the first section.

Barouch shows inconsistency in the use of divine titles. Though not problematic as Greek per se, such inconsistency might be indicative of multiple authors/translators and hence would constitute a way of noting different Greek usage. The first section (1.1–3.8) prefers κύριος to refer to the deity, whereas the first part of second section (3.9–4.4) commonly uses θεός. The second part of the second section Barouch then introduces ὁ αἰώνιος “the everlasting one” as a preference. There is even the unique (to Barouch) and unexpected use of παντοκράτωρ “Almighty” as a divine epithet in 3.1, which almost suggests a different author/translator for the first eight verses of chapter three.

The appearance of very different basic words and phrases in the second section, not evident in the first, is both interesting and significant. In the previous prose section, the Greek καὶ (probably translating the Hebrew 'ו) is very prominent, but in this poetic section ἐπὶ appears most often. As well, ὁτι seems to be the translation of choice for the prose, but the translator prefers γάρ for the poetic material (both no doubt translating the Hebrew 'ת). Perhaps, all such “clues” to different translators/authors are merely due to a change in the content.

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL NOTE

I owe an immeasurable debt to Albert Pietersma for his precedent-setting initial translation of the Psalms that has been the beacon for all subsequent NETS work. I wish to express a heartfelt, sincere gratitude for his personal encouragement and inexhaustible patience in advising on and editing this particular translation. There is clearly a debt here that can never be wholly repaid.

1 And these are the words of the book which Barouch son of Nerias son of Maasaias son of Sedekias son of Hasadias son of Chelkias wrote in Babylon, in the fifth year, on the seventh of the month, at the time when the Chaldeans took Jerusalem and set it on fire.

2 And Barouch read the words of this book in the ears of Iechonias son of Ioakim, king of Iouda, and in the ears of all the people, those who came to the book, and in the ears of the mighty and the sons of the kings and in the ears of the elders and in the ears of all the people, from small to great, all who lived in Babylon by the river Soud.

3 And they kept weeping and fasting and praying before the Lord, and they collected silver as the hand of each was able and sent it to Jerusalem to the priest Ioakim son of Chelkias son of Salom and to the priests and to all the people who were found with him in Jerusalem when he took the vessels of the house of the Lord which were carried out of the shrine to return to the land of Iouda on the tenth of Siouan—the silver vessels that King Sedekias of Iouda son of Iosias had made, after Nabouchodonosor, king of Babylon, exiled lechonias and the magistrates and the prisoners and the mighty and the people of the land from Jerusalem, and he brought him to Babylon.

4 And they said: Look, we sent you silver; and buy with the silver whole burnt offerings and for sin and incense, and make manaab, and offer them on the altar of the Lord our God; and pray concerning the life of King Nabouchodonosor of Babylon and regarding the life of his son Baltasar so that their days on the earth may be like the days of the sky. And the Lord will give strength to us, and he will illuminate our eyes, and we shall live under the shadow of King Nabouchodonosor of Babylon and under the shadow of his son Baltasar, and we shall be subject to them many days, and we shall find favor before them.

10 And they said: Look, we sent you silver; and buy with the silver whole burnt offerings and for sin and incense, and offer them on the altar of the Lord our God; and pray concerning the life of King Nabouchodonosor of Babylon and regarding the life of his son Baltasar so that their days on the earth may be like the days of the sky. And the Lord will give strength to us, and he will illuminate our eyes, and we shall live under the shadow of King Nabouchodonosor of Babylon and under the shadow of his son Baltasar, and we shall be subject to them many days, and we shall find favor before them.

13 And pray
concerning us to the Lord our God, for we have sinned against the Lord our God, and the anger of the Lord and his wrath have not turned away from us until this day. 14 And you shall read aloud this book, which we sent to you to declare in the house of the Lord on a feast day and on days of a season.

15 And you shall say: To the Lord, our God, belongs righteousness but to us shame of faces as this day, to a person of Iouda, to the inhabitants of Jerousalem, to our kings and to our magistrates and to our priests and to our prophets and to our fathers, for which things we have sinned before the Lord, and we disobeyed him and have not listened to the voice of the Lord, our God, to walk by the decrees of the Lord that he gave before us. 19 From the day when the Lord brought our fathers out of the land of Egypt even until this day, we were being disobedient to the Lord our God, and we were acting carelessly so as not to listen to his voice. 20 And there have clung to us the bad things and the curse that the Lord instructed to his servant Moyses in the day he brought out our ancestors from the land of Egypt, to give to us a land flowing with milk and honey, as this day. 21 And we did not listen to the voice of the Lord our God according to all the words of the prophets whom he sent to us, and each of us went off in the intent of his evil heart to work for other gods, to do evil things in the eyes of the Lord our God.

2 And the Lord established his word which he spoke to us and to our judges who judged Israel and to our kings and to our magistrates and to a person of Israel and Iouda. It was not done under the whole sky as he did in Jerousalem, according to that which is written in the law of Moyses—that we should eat, a person the flesh of his son and a person the flesh of his daughter. And he gave them as subjects to all the kingdoms around us as a disgrace and as something untrodden, among all the peoples around us there where the Lord scattered them. And they became beneath and not above, because we sinned against the Lord, our God, so as not to listen to his voice.

6 To the Lord, our God, belongs righteousness but to us and to our fathers shame of faces, as this day. All these bad things which the Lord spoke to us have come upon us. And we did not entreat the face of the Lord to turn away, each from the designs of their wicked heart. And the Lord kept watch over the bad things, and the Lord brought them upon us, for the Lord is just in all his works, which he commanded us. And we have not listened to his voice to walk by the decrees of the Lord that he gave before us.

11 And now, O Lord God of Israel, you who brought out your people from the land of Egypt by a mighty hand and with signs and with wonders and with great power and with a high arm and you made yourself a name, as this day. We have sinned; we have been impious; we have done wrong. O Lord our God, against all of your requirements. Let your anger turn away from us, for few of us have been left behind among the nations, there where you scattered us. Listen, O Lord, to our prayer and our petition, and deliver us for your sake, and give us favor before the face of those who carried us off to exile in order that all the earth may know that you are the Lord our God, for your name has been called upon Israel and upon his family.

16 O Lord, look down from your holy house, and think of us. Incline, O Lord, your ear, and listen. Open your eyes, and see, for the dead in Hades, whose spirit has been taken from their inward parts, will not give glory and justification to the Lord. But the soul who is grieving over the magnitudes, that walks bowed and is weak, and the eyes that are failing and the soul that is hungry—they shall give you glory and righteousness, O Lord.

19 For it is not because of acts deemed righteous of our fathers and our kings that we throw down our mercy before you, O Lord, our God. For you have brought your anger and your wrath against us, as you had spoken by the hand of your servants the prophets, saying: Thus did the Lord say: Incline your shoulder, and work for the king of Babylon, and sit upon the land which I gave to your fathers. And if you do not obey the voice of the Lord to work for the king of Babylon, I will make to fail from the towns of Iouda and from outside of Jerousalem a voice of merriment and a voice of delight, a voice of bridegroom and a voice of bride, and all the land will become untrodden by inhabitants.

24 And we did not obey your voice to work for the king of Babylon, and you have established your words which you spoke by the hands of your servants the prophets, that the bones of our kings and the bones of our fathers may be carried out from their place. And look, they are cast out in the heat of the day and the frost of the night, and they died in wicked pains, by famine and by sword and by dispatch. And you made the house, where your name was called over it, as this day because of the wickedness of the house of Israel and the house of Iouda.

27 And you have done to us, O Lord, our God, according to all your fairness and according to all your great compassion as you spoke by the hand of your servant Moyses in the day when you commanded him to write your law before the sons of Israel, saying: If you do not obey my voice, surely this great, voluminous buzzing will turn into a small one among the nations, there where I will scatter them. For I knew that they would not obey me, because the people are stiff-necked. And they will return to their heart in the land of their exile, and they will know that I am the Lord their God. And I will give them a heart and hearing ears, and they will praise me in the land of their exile, and they will remember my name, and they will turn away from their hard back and from their wicked deeds, because they will remember the way of their fathers who sinned before the Lord. And I will return them to the land, which I swore to their fathers, to Abraam and to Isaak and to Jakob, and they will rule over it, and I will multiply them, and they will not diminish. I will establish with them an everlasting covenant, that I be god to them and they be a people to me, and I will not disturb again my people Israel from the land that I have given them.

O Lord Almighty, God of Israel, a soul in straits and a weary spirit calls out to you. Listen, O Lord, and show mercy, for we have sinned before you. For you are seated forever, and we are perishing forever. O Lord Almighty, God of Israel, listen now to the prayer of those of Israel who have died and of the sons of those who kept sinning before you, who did not listen to the voice of the Lord, their God, and bad things have clung to us. Do not remember the injustices of our ancestors; rather, remember your hand and your name in this season. For you are the Lord, our God, and we will praise you, O Lord. For because of this you have given your fear in our heart in order that we call upon your name, and we will praise you in our exile, for we have put away from our heart all the injustice of our fathers who sinned before you. Look, we are today in our exile, there where you have scattered us for a reproach and for a curse and for a penalty according to all the injustices of our fathers who departed from the Lord our God.

Hear, O Israel, commandments of life; give ear to learn insight. Why is it, O Israel, why is it that you are in the enemies' land, that you became old in a foreign land; you were defiled with corpses, you were counted among those in Hades? You have forsaken the spring of wisdom. If in the way of God you had gone, you would be living in peace forever. Learn where there is insight, where there is strength, where there is intelligence, to know at the same time where there is longevity and life, where there is light for eyes and peace. Who has found her place, and who entered into her treasuries? Where are the magistrates of the nations and those who have dominion over the beasts that are on the earth, those who make sport among the birds of the sky and who store up silver and gold, in which humans have trusted, and there is no end to their acquisition, those who scheme for silver and are anxious, and there is no trace of their works? They have vanished and gone down to Hades, and others have arisen in their place. Younger ones saw light, and they lived upon the earth, but they did not know the way of knowledge nor understood her paths, nor did they take hold of her. Their sons ended up far away from their way. She has neither been heard of in Chanaan nor been seen in Thaiman—nor the sons of Hagar who seek out intelligence upon the earth, the merchants of Merran and Thaiman and the storytellers and the seekers for intelligence. But they did not know the way of wisdom nor remembered her paths.

Ah Israel, how great is the house of God, and how extensive is the place of its estate! It is great and has no end; it is high and immeasurable. The giants were born there, those renowned, those of old, seeing that they were large, experts in war. Not these did God choose, nor did he give them the way of knowledge, and they perished because they had no insight; they perished through their recklessness. Who has gone up into the sky and taken her and brought her down from the clouds? Who has crossed over the sea and found her and will bring her in exchange for choice gold? There is no one who is familiar with her way, nor one who thinks much about her path. But he who knows all things is familiar with her; he discovered her by his intelligence; he who equipped the earth for all time, he filled it with quadrupeds. He who sends the light, and it goes—he summoned it and it obeyed him, with a shudder, 34 but the stars shone in their watches and were glad;
35 he called them, and they said, “We are present!”
They shone with gladness for him who made them.
36 This is our God;
no other will be reckoned with him.
37 He discovered the whole way of knowledge and gave her to his servant Iakob and to Israel who was loved by him.
38 After this she appeared on earth and associated among humans.

4 She is the book of the decrees of God and the law that remains forever.
All who seize her are for life, but those who forsake her will die.
2 Turn, O Iakob, and take hold of her; pass through toward the shining in the presence of her light.
3 Do not give your glory to another and your benefits to a foreign nation.
4 Happy are we, O Israel, because what is pleasing to God is known to us.

5 Take courage, my people, reminder of Israel!
6 You were sold to the nations not for destruction, but because you angered God you were delivered to your adversaries.
7 For you provoked the one who made you by sacrificing to demons and not to God.
8 And you forgot the one who nursed you, God everlasting, and you even grieved Ierousalem who reared you.
9 For she saw the anger that came upon you from God, and she said: Listen, you neighbors of Sion, God has brought great mourning upon me;
10 for they saw the captivity of my sons and daughters, which the Everlasting brought upon them.
11 For I reared them with gladness, but I sent them away with weeping and grief.
12 Let no one rejoice against me, the widow and one forsaken by many; I was left desolate because of the sins of my children, because they turned away from God’s law.
13 And they did not recognize his statutes; neither did they walk in the ways of God’s commandments nor tread on the paths of instruction by his righteousness.

14 Let the neighbors of Sion come. And remember the captivity of my sons and daughters, which the Everlasting brought upon them.
15 For he brought against them a far off nation, a shameless nation and one speaking an alien tongue, who did not respect an old man nor showed mercy to a child.
16 And they led away the beloved sons of the widow and isolated the lonely woman from her daughters.
17 But I, how am I able to help you?
18 For he who brought these bad things upon you will deliver you from the hand of your enemies.
19 Walk, children, walk, for I have been left desolate.
20 I have taken off the robe of peace and put on sackcloth for my petition; I will cry out to the Everlasting in all my days.

21 Take courage, O children; call out to God, and he will deliver you from domination, from the hand of enemies.
22 For I have hoped in the Everlasting for your salvation, and joy has come to me from the Holy One because of the mercy that will soon come to you from your everlasting savior.
23 For I dispatched out with mourning and weeping, but God will give you back to me with delight and merriment forever.
24 For as the neighbors of Sion have seen your captivity now, so they will quickly see your salvation from God, which will come to you with the great glory and splendor of the Everlasting.
25 O children, bear patiently the wrath that has come upon you from God. The enemy has pursued you, but you will quickly see their destruction and will tread upon their necks.
26 My pampered children have traveled rough roads; they were taken away like a flock carried off by enemies.
27 Take courage, O children, and call out to God, for there will be mention of you by the one who brought this.

\textsuperscript{a}I.e. way of knowledge \textsuperscript{b}I.e. Ierousalem 28 For just as your intention became to go astray from God, multiply by ten when you return to seek him.
29 For the one who brought these bad things upon you will bring you everlasting merriment with your salvation.
30 Take courage, O Jerusalem;
he who named you will comfort you.
31 Wretched will be those who have harmed you and who have rejoiced at your fall.
32 Wretched will be the cities that your children served as slaves;
wretched will be the one a that received your sons.
33 For just as she rejoiced at your fall and was glad for your ruin,
so she will be grieved at her own desolation.
34 And I will take away her rejoicing of her great population, and her insolence will be turned to mourning.
35 For fire will come upon her from the Everlasting for long days, and for a rather long time she will be inhabited by demons.
36 Look around toward the east, O Jerusalem, and see the merriment that is coming to you from God.
37 Behold, your sons are coming, whom you sent away;
they are coming, gathered from east until west,
at the word of the Holy One, rejoicing in the glory of God.

5 Take off your robe of mourning and affliction, O Jerusalem, and put on the dignity of the glory from God forever.
2 Put on the b double-cloak of the righteousness that is from God;
put on your head the headband of the glory of the Everlasting.
3 For God will show your splendor in the whole earth beneath heaven.
4 For your name will be called by God forever,
"Peace of righteousness and glory of piety."
5 Arise, O Jerusalem, and stand upon the height, and look around toward the east, and see your children gathered from the setting of the sun until its rising at the word of the Holy One, rejoicing at God's remembering.
6 For they went out from you on foot, led away by enemies,
but God will bring them to you,
taken up with glory, as on a royal throne.
7 For God has instructed that every high mountain and the everlasting mounds be made low and the valleys be filled to make level the ground
so that Israel may walk safely by the glory of God.
8 And even the woods and every fragrant tree

LAMENTATIONS
TO THE READER

Edition of the Greek Text
The basis for the NETS translation of Lamentations is the critical edition of the Greek text established by Joseph Ziegler for the Göttingen Septuagint Series (J. Ziegler, Septuaginta: Vetus Testamentum Graecum Autoritate Societatis Litterarum Gottingensis editum XV: Jeremias Baruch Threni Epistula Jeremiae [Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1957]).

I have departed from the critical text of Ziegler in four instances. First are the alphabetic labels. The Hebrew book of Lamentations is comprised of five poems. The first four are alphabetic acrostics: each verse (or triplet of verses in the case of chapter 3) begins with a successive letter of the Hebrew alphabet. While the fifth poem is not an acrostic per se, the number of lines (22) does correspond to the Hebrew alphabet. This acrostic structure is clearly represented not only in the Hebrew manuscript tradition by spacing techniques but also in the Greek (as well as in the Peshitta and Vulgate) tradition by including the Hebrew alphabet letters in Greek transcription as discrete labels heading each unit. Neither Alfred Rahlfs’ Handausgabe (1935) nor Joseph Ziegler’s critical edition recognizes these alphabetic labels as original text. Albert Pietersma has recently shown that they are indeed from the hand of the translator. The alphabetic labels, therefore, are included in the NETS translation.

Second, neither the lemma of Rahlfs’ or Ziegler’s text includes 3.22–24 as original text. This is the entire προτοφρονήσεως. Since the endings of v. 21 and v. 24 are virtually identical (in both Hebrew and Greek), the omission might be blamed on an error of parablepsis due to homoiooteleuton.

Pietersma has argued cogently, however, that the parablepsis occurred in the textual transmission of the Greek text and that the verses were part of the original translation. The missing text may be gleaned from Ziegler’s apparatus as follows:

τά ελέη κυρίου, ὅτι οὐκ ἐξελίπομεν, ὅτι οὐ οὐρανοκράτεσιν οἱ οἰκτιρμοὶ αὐτοῦ.
καὶ εἰς τὰς προφανείας, πολλῆς ἡ πίστις σου.
μερίς μου κυρίος, ἐπεν ἡ ψυχὴ μου dia τοῦτο ὑπομενώ σου.

Third, neither Rahlfs’ nor Ziegler’s lemma have anything corresponding to 3.29. Certain witnesses in the textual transmission of the Septuagint do have the verse as follows:

fin. Or. II 176] + (29) δῶσει εἰς χωρίσται (+ το 407) στοιχεία αὐτοῦ εἰ ἀρραβωνία άλλως (+ ὑπομονής L·

The omission of the line was doubtless caused by parablepsis due to homoioteleuton. While the omission might be blamed on either pre-Greek transmission or on the translator, since both vv. 29 and 30 begin with ἠλίθατί, it is also possible that the parablepsis occurred in the textual transmission of the Greek. Both Rahlfs and Ziegler no doubt thought the entire line hexaplaric and therefore secondary. Moreover, Ziegler boldly attributes the text to Symmachus, though no manuscript attributes it to one of the Three. Indeed, support for the inference that the line is hexaplaric is weak. Text extant in Hebrew but not in Origen’s Old Greek was added to his Fifth Column from one of the Three, usually Theodotion. Material in the Hexaplaric Text that clearly cannot be connected with the Three, as is the case here, is almost certainly Old Greek. Origen himself stated that for Lamentations, versions from Aquila and Theodotion were not extant, only those from the Septuagint and Symmachus (see Ziegler, p. 467). This statement, however, is only partially supported by evidence elsewhere: fragments attributed to Aquila are extant for Lamentations, but none attributed to Theodotion is found. Therefore one cannot on the basis of this statement automatically assign marginal materials lacking attribution to Symmachus. Ziegler’s attempt to attribute 3.29 to Symmachus is not convincing; the translation technique may well fit Theodotion or Aquila but not the style of Symmachus. Note, for example, the rendering of ἁμαρτία by χώμα. In 2.10b, the only other occurrence of ἁμαρτία in Lamentations, we have the similar term χώμας. This pattern is similar to Theodotion in lōb (ρεβμ = χώμα 14.8b, 19b; 17.16b; 19.25b; 20.11b; 22.24a; 28.6b = χώμας 39.14b), but uncharacteristic of Symmachus. Where Symmachus can be distinguished from Old Greek, Aquila and Theodotion, he has χώμα only in lōb 41.25, never χώμας, and uses alternative equivalents like κόνις in lōb 5.6: 40.13; Ps 21(22).30; 29(30).10. An unanswered question is whether or not our Old Greek text of Lamentations is the work of Theodotion. Either Theodotion did not render or revise this book, or he did, and all evidence is now lost, or the Old Greek text we now have is from Theodotion. The external evidence for 3.29 does look suspiciously recensional, but interestingly, most of the support is from witnesses that have also preserved 3.22–24, although support is not as widespread. True, a full citation of 3.27–29 by Origen (Contra Celsum 7.25) does not have the line in question, but it is possible that the parablepsis occurred before Origen’s time. The case is by no means as straightforward as that of 3.22–24 and external evidence weaker, but it is easier to imagine the mistake being made in the transmission of the Greek text than being made by the original translator. The text will be included, but enclosed within square brackets to indicate uncertainty.

Fourth is the case of 3.42. The editions of Rahlfs and Ziegler are as follows, including Apparatus I of Ziegler and the Masoretic Text:

Rahlfs: ἡμαρτισάμενοι, ἁμαρτίσαμεν, καὶ οὐκ ἠλάσθης.

Ziegler: ἡμαρτισάμενοι καὶ παρεπικράσαμεν, καὶ οὐκ ἠλάσθης.

See: ἡμαρτισάμενοι ἁμαρτίσαμεν καὶ παρεπικράσαμεν, καὶ οὐκ ἠλάσθης.

PsCypr. | > rel.: homoioit. | οὐχ pr. su O-Qm L’ c-239 Tht. PsCypr. = MT

This problem can best be resolved by careful consideration of translation technique. Clearly καὶ οὐκ ἠλάσθης renders τὸν λόγον τῆς σεβασμοῦ or τὴς σεβασμοῦ in the parent text. Less clear, however, are the original renderings of the first two predications. Leaving 3.42 aside for the moment, all instances of the verb ἁμαρτάω are rendered solely by ἁμαρτάω (1.8a; 5.7a, 16b). The noun ἁμαρτία occurs twice in the parent text and in both instances is translated by ἁμαρτία (1.8a; 3.39). The noun ἁμαρτία occurs three times in the Hebrew and is twice rendered by ἁμαρτία (4.6a, 13a), once by ἁμαρτία ἁμαρτάω 4.22b. The verb ἁμαρτάω occurs only in 3.42, but the noun is found three times in the parent text and is rendered by ἁμαρτέα in 1.5b, by ἁμαρτέα in 1.14a and by ἁμαρτάω in 1.22b. The parent text has three instances of the verb ἁμαρτάω and all are rendered by παρεπικράσαω (1.18a, 20bbis). In addition, the adjective ἁμαρτέα is translated by παρεπικράσαω in 1.4c and the noun ἁμαρτία by παρεπικράσαω in 3.15. The adjective also renders Hebrew לָשׁוּ and 3.20[19 MT], but χωμάς is employed for the other instance of this word in 3.15. To complete the picture, note that the noun ἁμαρτία is rendered by ἁμαρτία three times, (4.6a, 22a, 22b), by ἁμαρτία once (5.7b) and by ᾑδίκεια twice (4.14b; 4.13a). While the Greek translator of Lamentations is not absolutely rigid in his equivalents for Hebrew terms for “sin,” the degree of stereotyping is high. Normally words from the ἁμαρτάω – root are employed for words in Hebrew from לְשׁוֹן, words from לָשׁוּ are rendered by lexemes from the ἁμαρτέα – root, and ἁμαρτία is rendered by ἁμαρτία and ᾑδίκεια. The translator tries to distinguish the nouns ἁμαρτία and לָשׁוּ by employing ᾑδίκεια for the former and ἁμαρτία for the latter. The use of ἁμαρτία in 4.22a for ἁμαρτία is what motivates the use of ἁμαρτέα as an alternative for לָשׁוֹן in 4.22b. The rendering of lexemes from לְשׁוֹן by words from the πικράω – root is stereotypical.

If Rahlfs is right, ἁμαρτάω would be rendered by ἁμαρτάω and ἁμαρτία by ἁμαρτέα, uniquely in both cases. Neither is likely in terms of translation technique. Ziegler is an advance on Rahlfs, since he correctly includes καὶ παρεπικράσαω, omitted due to parablepsis. Ziegler is also aware that 3.42 is a confession of sin that is somewhat typical in the Old Testament and attributes variants largely in the L group (Lucianic recension) to the influence of parallel passages. Unfortunately, he did not pursue this tack far enough. Almost certainly, ἁμαρτιοῦμεν is the rendering of the Greek translator for ἁμαρτία and ἁμαρτομένοι is due to harmonization from parallel passages along with the loss of καὶ παρεπικράσαω through parablepsis.

There is also no good reason to exclude the pronouns ημείς and σοῦ as hapaxlegaric just because they are in the Hexaplaric Group and equal MT. First, there is no textual testimony to indicate that they were introduced from the Three. Second, in terms of translation technique, the independent first and second person pronouns are always rendered by pronouns in Greek elsewhere by the Greek translator (\(\text{καὶ/καὶ} = \text{εἰ} \text{γὼ}\)) and (\(\text{αὐτὸς/αὐτὸς} = \text{οὐχ} \text{ιλάσθης}\)).

TRANSLATION PROFILE OF THE GREEK

Greek Lamentations is chiefly characterized by formal equivalence to the source language, i.e., Hebrew. More particularly, it belongs to a group of both translations and revisions known as the \(\text{kai/καὶ}\) tradition, due to its standard rendering of \(\text{καὶ} = \text{καὶ/καὶ}\). D. Barthélemy first identified the tradition in his Les Devanciers d'Aquila (1963). He delineated nine key chief characteristics of members of the tradition. The chart below lists the traits and marks their presence (P) or inapplicability (NA) in the case of Greek Lamentations.

1. \(\text{καὶ/καὶ} = \text{καὶ/καὶ} \quad P\)
2. \(\text{αὐτὸς/αὐτὸς} = \text{οὐχ} \quad P\)
3. \(\text{εἰπάνωθεν/απάνωθεν + Genitive} \quad \text{NA}\)
4. \(\text{καὶ/καὶ/καὶ} = \text{στηλόω} \quad P\)
5. \(\text{σάλπιγξ/πρωπι} = \text{κερατίνη} \quad \text{NA}\)
6. Elimination of Historical Presents \(P\)
7. \(\text{οὐκ \text{ἐστίν} when context = future / past} \quad P\)
8. \(\text{εἰ} \text{γὼ/εἰμι} \quad \text{NA}\)
9. \(\text{εἰς \text{συνάντησιν}} \quad \text{NA}\)

Brief comments on patterns present in the Greek Lamentations are necessary.

1) \(\text{καὶ/καὶ} (\text{καὶ/καὶ} \text{does not occur}) \text{ is well attested: 1.8c; 2.9c; 3.8; 4.3a, 15b, 21b.}\)
2) \(\text{αὐτός/αὐτός} \text{ appears in 3.33, but not as a distributive.}\)
3) \(\text{καὶ/καὶ} \text{is rendered twice. In 2.4a \(\text{καὶ/καὶ} \text{is translated ἐστερέασε δεξιὰν αὐτόῦ. Thus the equivalent is στερέω, and the Hebrew parent text appears to be read as Hiphil rather than Niphal.}\)}\)
4) \(\text{Since in only one instance (4.19a = MT 18b) does a Greek present appear, it can safely be said that the translator was not in the habit of using historical presents.}\)
5) \(\text{The pseudo-verbal \(\text{οὐκ} \text{ἐστίν} \text{is glossed six times as \text{οὐκ} \text{ἐστίν} (1.9b, 17a, 21a; 2.9b; 4.4b; 5.8b), once as \text{οὐκ ἥν} (1.7c), and three times as \text{οὐκ ὑπάρχει/ὑπάρχουσιν (1.2b; 5.3a, 7a). Once \(\text{οὐκ} \text{ἐστίν} \text{is rendered by τοῦ μὴ ἐίναι (3.49).\)}}\)

In sum, only three of the five patterns provide strong support that the Greek Lamentations belongs to the \(\text{καὶ/καὶ}\) tradition.

Other scholars have proposed patterns additional to these nine, but they are not as crucial or significant. It is clear that some relationship exists between Greek Lamentations and other texts in the \(\text{καὶ/καὶ}\) tradition, but it is not systematic.

For the purposes of NETS it is useful to note that the approach of the translator to his task is one where faithfulness is defined and measured by a degree of quantitative alignment between Greek translation and Hebrew original. The Greek translation of Ruth is similar.

THE NETS TRANSLATION OF LAMENTATIONS

In accordance with NETS policy this translation makes an attempt at reflecting the style of the Greek.

Though ungrammatical English has been avoided, less than felicitous English may be expected. Formal equivalence is frequently given higher priority than idiomatic English.

The attempt to follow a model of translation similar to that of the Greek translator has occasionally created clashes with the NRSV. For example, in 3.33 NRSV has a free and idiomatic rendering of the Hebrew text: “for he does not willingly afflict or grieve anyone.” Greek Lamentations renders the same Hebrew in extreme literalism. Some differences between NETS and NRSV are due to the fact that the Greek translator interprets the Hebrew differently; others reflect a difference in translational approach between the two.

On occasion the gender inclusive language policy of NRSV had to be abandoned in order to reflect the Greek adequately. For example, according to the approach of the Greek translator, ἀνθρώπος (3.36, 39) and ὄνημ is rendered by ἀνθρώπος (3.33). This enables the Greek reader to track the differences between the two words in the parent text. In NETS, while gender inclusive renderings may be maintained for ἀνθρώπος, ὄνημ is gender specific in Greek and is translated accordingly in English. There are also instances where gender inclusive language has been achieved by converting generic masculine singular pronouns and verbs to common gender plural pronouns and verbs or by altering active constructions to passive. Sometimes this so alters the formal equivalence between NRSV and the Hebrew that the formal equivalence between the Greek and the Hebrew cannot be fairly represented this way. 3.35 and 36 may illustrate the attempt in NETS to represent the exact way in which the Greek reproduces the Hebrew text.

EDITORIAL POLICY
While the Greek translator does not always read the beginning and ending of sentences or connections between clauses in the Hebrew in the same way as NRSV, in essence the same versification is used. Differences can be indicated by different grammar and punctuation.

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL NOTE
NETS is for the most part a completely fresh translation of the Greek adapted to NRSV. Occasionally, the translation of Brenton was consulted and found to be useful. The doctoral dissertation of I. Assan-Dhote⁷ was graciously sent to me by the author, but unfortunately not until the Fall of 2000 when all research for the NETS Lamentations was virtually complete. It is interesting to note that she connects the Greek Lamentations with Theodotion, but her analysis of translation technique is not exhaustive.

PETER J. GENTRY

And it happened, after Israel was taken captive and Jerusalem was laid waste, Jeremiah sat weeping and gave this lament over Jerusalem and said:

alph
1 How the city sat alone, she who was full of peoples! She has become like a widow—multiplied among the nations! A ruler among the countries, she has become tribute.

2 Weeping she wept in the night, and her tears were on her cheeks; of all those who love her there is no one to comfort her.

⁷ Assan-Dhote, “La version grecque.”
her young girls are being led away, and she, being embittered in herself.

Those that oppress her have become head, and her enemies kept flourishing, because the Lord humbled her for the multitude of her impieties; her babes went away in captivity before an oppressor.

And from daughter Sion has departed all her majesty. Her rulers became like rams that find no pasture, and they were going in no strength before a pursuer.

Ierousalem remembered days of her humiliation and her rebuffs. As for all her desired objects that were from days of old—when her people fell into the hands of an oppressor, then there was no one to help her. When her enemies saw, they laughed at her being settled.

Ierousalem sinned sin, so she became ashaken; all those that honored her humiliated her, for they saw her shame; indeed, while she herself is groaning, she also turned her face away.

Her uncleanness was from her feet; she did not remember her extremities. And she brought down things of great size; there is no one to comfort her. “O Lord, look at my humiliation, for an enemy became great!”

An oppressor spread out his hand over all her desired objects; for she saw nations enter into her holy precinct, with reference to whom you commanded that they not enter into your assembly.

All her people are groaning as they search for bread; they gave her desired objects for food to restore life.

Look, O Lord, and see that I have become one dishonored.

It is nothing to you, all you who pass along the road! Turn, and see if there is a sorrow like my sorrow, which has happened; the Lord humbled me on the day of the wrath of his anger.

From his height he sent fire in my bones; he brought it down; he spread a net for my feet; he turned me backwards; he gave me as one put away, suffering pain all day long.

He was kept awake over all my impious deeds; by my hands they were plaited together; they came up upon my neck; my strength became weak; because the Lord gave them in my hands, I shall not be able to stand.

The Lord removed all my strong men from my midst; he proclaimed a season against me to crush my choice men; the Lord trod the wine vat for virgin daughter Iouda. (16) For these things I weep.

My eye has brought down water, because the one to comfort me is far from me, the one to restore my life; my sons became put away, for an enemy prevailed.

Sion spread out her hands; there is no one to comfort her; the Lord commanded regarding Iakob; around him are those oppressing him. Ierousalem became as one sitting apart among them.

The Lord is in the right, because I have made his mouth bitter. Hear then, all you peoples, and behold my sorrow; my young women and my young men went away in captivity.

LETTER OF IEREMIAS
TO THE READER

Edition of Greek Text

Translation Profile of the Greek

Translation from Hebrew?
Although in the Septuagint the Letter of Ieremias (LetIer) is a discrete unit, in the Vulgate it forms chapter 6 of the book of Barouch. Many scholars are convinced that, even though no Semitic Vorlage for the Greek text is extant, it is indeed a translation. A number of features of the book are more typical of original Greek composition, however. Carey Moore identifies “three lines of linguistic evidence” that he considers probative for concluding that the Letter originated as a translation.1 First, a number of Greek readings seem to stem from misreadings of a Hebrew parent text. So, for example: (1) In v. 11 the Greek claims that the idols of the Gentiles cannot save themselves from “rust and foods (βρωματων).” The “translator” has apparently confused two possible pointings of λκωμα— one meaning “from a devourer” (so, for example, in Mal 3.11 a consuming insect, locust or moth) and one meaning food;2 (2) γνωριμοι in v. 14 represents a mistake on the part of the “translator,” who evidently read μορφωμενοι instead of γνωριμοι (so, for example, as noun rather than as participle); and (3) in v. 71 the translator produced “from the purple and marble (μαρμαρου) that rots upon them.” Of course, marble does not rot, and here we see a confusion of the Hebrew word for “alabaster” or “marble,” ים, with its homograph, which means “fine linen.”3 Second, a Semitic original seems the best explanation for the existence of some variant readings. So, for instance, in v. 54, the Greek reads, “like crows (κορωναι) between heaven and earth,” for which the Syriac has “ravens.” The inherent difficulty of the verse and the Syriac’s “ravens” together suggest that the Greek “translator” may have read a Hebrew מְכָרָה, “as the clouds,” as מְכָרָה, “as the crows.”4 Third, Moore notes the presence of what he identifies as “Hebraisms,” such as the use of the Greek future tense as a present tense and what looks like the rendering of the Hebrew infinitive absolute in v. 4— μή καὶ υμεῖς ἀφομοιωθῆτε τοῖς ἀλλοφύλοις ἀφομοιώθητε, “lest you too, having been made like the allophyles, become like them.”5 One last bit of evidence that we have in LetIer is that in v. 69 the Greek has, “For like a scarecrow in a cucumber patch,” a phrase that occurs in the Hebrew of Jer 10.5, but not in the Greek, which indicates that the author of the Letter drew on the Hebrew of Jeremiah, and the Greek translator rendered what he had before him.

Each of these “lines of linguistic evidence”—misreadings, variant readings, and Hebraisms—are characteristic of the translation process, and they could point to the genesis of LetIer as a translation. At least two of Moore’s examples are somewhat weak, however. First, the use of γνωριμοι in v. 14 might not be a misreading at all, since the Greek word can just as well be an adjective as a noun. Second, two obstacles stand in the way of understanding the phrase ἀφομοιωθήτε τοῖς ἀλλοφύλοις ἀφομοιώθητε as reflecting an infinitive absolute in a presumed Hebrew Vorlage. Both the existence of paranomasia in the Greek and the interposition of τοῖς ἀλλοφύλοις between the participle and the verb, since the infinitive absolute in Hebrew keeps the two verbal forms immediately adjacent to one another, mitigate the force of this interpretation.

Composition in Greek?

Whereas LetIer undeniably contains elements indicative of translation, other features of this work are not typical of the kind of Greek normally seen in the Septuagint. One of the most frequently occurring is the use of Greek particles. LetIer often uses as connectors particles that require second position in the clause—a feature not found in Hebrew grammar. The numbers are really quite staggering for a book of a scant 72 verses: όν, 12x; γρα, 16x; δέ, 23x; τε (counting its use as a coordinator of all types, including the negative ούτε) 33x. Some entire books of the Septuagint do not contain 23 occurrences of δέ. The appearance of these particles might suggest that the Greek writer was interested in the logical connection of one clause to another, but that is by no means apparent in the frequency with which these words appear. In fact, their logical force is almost blunted by how many times they appear sequentially in one clause after the other.

Finally, there are a number of places where the Greek text really makes little sense, or, at least, one has to work very hard to wrest some sense from it. In other books of the Septuagint, scholars often understand such difficult passages as indicating the translator’s inability to make sense of the Hebrew Vorlage. Perhaps the best example of such a case in LetIer is vv. 40–41. In these two verses, one is often at a loss to know what the writer is trying to communicate. In v. 40 the claim is made that the Chaldeans dishonor their gods. The Greek as we have it, however, really does not satisfactorily say how they do this. They encounter and then bring a mute person to Bel—but then the uncertainty really begins. The third clause of the verse, because the object is not explicit, is not clear as to whether the Chaldeans expect the mute person to speak or whether it is their god Bel who should talk. In v. 41, the Greek grammar suggests that the Chaldeans, even though they understand that their gods cannot speak or make the mute speak, cannot abandon their gods and thus are as senseless as they. How, one wonders, does their inability to leave their gods dishonor them? Perhaps the logical difficulty is what prompts both the NRSV and Moore to render the text so that, contrary to the Greek, the Chaldeans do not perceive and thus they actually abandon their gods—precisely the opposite of what the Greek grammar would lead one to think. Moore’s and the NRSV’s English translations at least bring a logical consistency to the passage and the actions could thus be understood as dishonoring the idols.

One approach to this conundrum would be to conclude that the difficulty reflects a translator who did not understand the full import of a Hebrew parent text or who got lost in a difficult Hebrew sentence, and as a result he made something of a mess out of these verses. A possible way to check or confirm this explanation might be to reconstruct a possible Hebrew Vorlage for these verses. Although any attempt at retroversion from Greek into Hebrew ought to be undertaken with caution, these verses do not retrovert into Hebrew very readily at all. Indeed, the complexity of the verses really looks more like an overworked stab at Greek rhetorical style than a translation.

Inconclusive Evidence

So, LetIer presents us with a confusing situation. On the one hand, several features of this text could be the result of the process of translating from Hebrew to Greek. On the other hand, the relatively frequent appearance of elements of compositional style and certain normal features of Greek, such as the extensive use of particles and the occurrence of verbal adjectives ending in -τεος (for which there is no Hebrew equivalent) indicate that the writer is working at the least at the discourse level (and perhaps originally in Greek). When one surveys the entire work, there is a notable absence of telltale signs of the different translational styles that one finds elsewhere in the Jewish-Greek corpus. Further study of this problem in LetIer seems necessary and would benefit from an analysis of the letter’s Greek style, which seems a desideratum for the work. At best, then, we can conclude that the evidence for LetIer being a translation is inconclusive at this juncture.

The NETS Translation of the Letter

Since LetIer does display at least some evidence of being a translation, I have taken a practical approach and followed all of the usual NETS guidelines for a translated text. In those cases where the Greek could be a misreading of a missing Semitic parent, I have retained the “misreading.” So, for example, even though marble does not rot, that is what the Greek writer produced and that is the text I have translated. In several cases where the Greek is awkward or even close to nonsensical, I have retained that flavor in NETS, while maintaining grammatical English. As a result, the NETS translation varies from the NRSV (and Moore’s translation incidentally) at quite a number of places, since the NRSV assumes that the Letter is a self-standing Greek text that should be comprehensible on its own. NETS does not make such assumptions.
A copy of a letter that Jeremias sent to those who would be led as captives into Babylon by the king of the Babylonians to proclaim to them just as it was commanded to him by God.

1 On account of the sins that you have sinned against God, you will be led into Babylon as captives by Nabouchodonosor, king of the Babylonians. When, therefore, you come into Babylon, you will be there for rather many years, even for a long time, as long as seven generations. But after this, I will bring you from there with peace. Now then, you will see in Babylon silver and gold and wooden gods being carried upon shoulders causing fear to the nations. Beware, therefore, lest you too, having been made like the allophyles, become like them and reverence for them seizes you when you see a crowd before and behind them doing obeisance to them, but say in thought, "It is necessary to bow down to you, O Master." For my angel is with you, and he himself is seeking out your souls.

7 For their tongue has been smoothed by a craftsman, and they are overlaid with gold and silver. Yet they are fake and are not able to speak. And just as for a maiden who loves ornamentation, taking gold, they construct crowns upon the heads of their gods. But it is also the case that the priests, purloining gold and silver from their gods, will spend it on themselves. And they will give of them also to the prostitutes at the brothel. And they adorn them with clothes like human beings—gods of silver and gold and wood. But they are not kept safe from rust and food. When they are dressed in purple clothing, they have their face wiped because of the dust from the house, which is rather much upon them. And he has a scepter like a human district judge, he who will not destroy the one who sins against him. And he has a hand-knife in his right and an ax but will not deliver himself from war and robbers. Whence they are recognizable as not being gods. Do not, therefore, fear them.

15 For just as when a person’s implement, when broken, becomes useless, such are their gods, though they are established in houses. Their eyes are full of dust from the feet of those who enter. And just as the courtyards are fortified all around against anyone who has wronged the king as though sentenced to death, the priests secure their houses with doorways and bolts and bars, lest they be stripped by robbers. They burn lamps even more than for themselves, none of which they can see. Just like one of the beams of the house they are, and they do not notice that their hearts, it is said, are licked out, as the creeping creatures from the earth devour both them and their clothing. blackened in their face by the smoke from the house. Bats, swallows and birds ride upon their bodies and their heads, just as also the cats do. Whence you will know that they are not gods. Do not, therefore, fear them.

23 For the gold, which they wear for beauty, unless someone wipes off the corrosion, they will not make it shine, for they were not sentient, even when they were cast. Those things in which there is no breath are bought at all cost. Lacking feet they are carried upon shoulders displaying their dishonor to people, and even those who attend to them are ashamed on account of the fact that they are made to stand up by them, lest it fall to the ground. Not even if some one makes it stand upright, will it move by itself, nor if it leans over, will it straighten itself up, but gifts are placed before them, just as before the dead. But their priests, by selling their sacrifices, use them. And likewise also their wives preserve some of them, but they do not share any with the poor or disabled. One who sits apart and one who has just given birth touch their sacrifices. Since you know, therefore, from these things that they are not gods, do not fear them.

29 For on what basis can they be called gods? Because women serve up for gods of silver and gold and wood, And in their houses the priests take their seat with their tunics torn and their heads and beards shaved, whose heads are uncovered. And they howl and shout before their gods as some do at a funeral feast for a corpse. Taking from their clothing, the priests clothe their wives and children. Whether they experience evil from someone, or whether it be good, they will not be able to repay. They can neither empower a king nor can they remove him. Likewise they can neither give wealth nor money. If anyone, professing a vow to them, does not keep it, they will not demand it. They will not deliver a person from death nor rescue a weak person from a strong one. They will not restore a blind person to sight; they will not rescue a person who is in anguish.

They will not have pity on a widow nor treat an orphan well. These things that are made of wood and overlaid with gold and silver are like stones from a mountain, and those who attend to them will be put to shame. Why then should they be thought to be or be called gods?

Furthermore, though the Chaldeans themselves bring them into disrespect—when they see a mute incapable of speech, bring him and request that Bel utter an articulate sound, as though he a were capable of sensation— they are incapable of abandoning themb, though they themselves have observed it. For theyc have no sense. And the women, wrapping cords around themselves, sit in the streets burning bran as incense! And when one of them is drawn away by one of those who passes by to have sexual intercourse, she chides her companion, because she was not valued as she herself was, nor has she had her cordd torn. Everything that happens for themb is fake. How then should one consider or call them gods?

They have been constructed by carpenters and goldsmiths; they are nothing other than what the artisans want them to be. And they who construct them will not themselves be long-lived. How then indeed are the things made by them going to be gods? For they have left behind lies and disgrace for those who come after. And they will not set up a king of a country, nor will they give rain to people. Since they are powerless. For like crows between heaven and earth they are. For also when fire attacks a house of gods who are wooden or overlaid with gold or silver, their priests flee and will come through safely, but theyb will be burned up like the center beams. And they shall not withstand king or enemies. How then must it be admitted or reckoned that they are gods?

Gods made of wood and overlaid with silver and gold will not be safe either from thieves or from bandits, the strong of whom will strip away the gold and silver, and they make off with the clothing theyb wear. Nor shall theyb help themselves. So it is better to be a king who displays his manliness or a useful vessel in a house, which the owner will use, than these fake gods, or even a door in a house that keeps safe those things that are in it than these fake gods, and a wooden pillar in palaces than these fake gods.

For sun and moon and stars are bright, and when they are sent for a service, they are obedient. So also lightning, when it flashes, is conspicuous. And the same wind also blows in every country. And as for clouds, when ordered by God to traverse the entire inhabited world, they accomplish what is ordained. And the fire sent out from above to destroy utterly mountains and woods will do what is prescribed. But these thingsb are similar neither in appearances nor in powers. Whence one should neither think them to be nor call them gods, since they are not able either to judge a case or to treat humans well. Since you know, therefore, that they are not gods, do not fear them. For they cannot curse or bless kings, and they cannot show signs in heaven among the nations or shine like the sun or give light like the moon. The animals, which, fleeing to shelter, are able to help themselves, are superior to them. It is clear to us that they are in no manner gods. Therefore do not fear them.

For as a scarecrow in a cucumber field guards nothing, so are their gods of wood and gold and silver overlay. In the same way also their gods of wood and overlaid with gold and silver are similar to a thorn bush in a garden on which every bird perches, and so also to a corpse thrown out in darkness. And from the purple and marblee that rots upon them you will know that they are not gods. And finally they will themselves be consumed, and there will be disgrace in the country. Better, therefore, is a righteous person who does not have idols, for he will be far from reproach.

The NETS version of Iezekiel (Ezekiel) follows the Greek edition by Joseph Ziegler Septuaginta: Vetus Testamentum Graecum Auctoritate Academiae Scientiarum Gottingensis editum XVI.1: Ezekiel (Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1977) in all points with the exception of some matters of punctuation and sentence divisions.

With the MT as the point of comparison, the LXX text features numerous omissions as well as some additions. Larger omissions occur in chaps. 32 and 33, where all of 32.19; and 33.26 are absent from the Septuagint text, and the larger part of 32.23, 25, 31; 33.25 and 27 are lacking. Larger plusses occur in Iezek 40.6–8 and 43 and 44. The reader will also note a shuffling in the order of verses at the beginning of chap. 7.

Translation Profile of the Greek

The Greek translators follow an isomorphic model of translation quite closely, preferring to employ a Greek item to represent each Hebrew item. But within this approach, (explained as the interlinear model; see “TO THE READER OF NETS”), the Greek translators employ relative freedom in the choice of the exact terms used in various contexts. The translation shows both semantic leveling, as one Greek term can be used to represent several Hebrew terms, but it also shows a great deal of semantic differentiation, as many Greek terms can be used to render one Hebrew term. To cite a particularly clear example of semantic differentiation, the single Hebrew term “sword” (תֵּפְעָל) is translated by four different Greek terms: “sword” (ῥομφαίον), “dagger” (μαχαιρά), “hand-knife” (ἐγχειρίδιον) and “rapier” (Εἴφος). The first two terms alternate as the most common translation of תֵּפְעָל depending on the political context of the prophecies, while the latter two terms occur only five times overall, being reserved for specific contexts. In chaps. 5–24 where the prophecies concern Israel, the standard translation is “sword” (ῥομφαίον), occurring 34x, whereas “dagger” (μαχαιρά) only occurs twice in these same chapters. The relative frequency inverts in chaps. 25–32 where the focus of the prophecies shifts to other nations. There “dagger” (μαχαιρά) occurs 27x compared to only 7 for “sword” (ῥομφαίον). Then in chap. 33 the situation inverts again as the focus of the prophecies shifts back to Israel and “sword” (ῥομφαίον) occurs 5x compared to one for “dagger” (μαχαιρά). In yet another reversal the prophecies concerning Gog and Magog in chaps. 38 and 39 “dagger” (μαχαιρά) occurs four times as the exclusive translation for תֵּפְעָל. “Hand-knife” (ἐγχειρίδιον) occurs only three times, in 21.3, 4 and 5, where it describes the Lord’s own weapon, and “rapier” (Εἴφος) occurs only in 16.40 and 23.47, in both contexts describing a lover’s sword used to slay a prostitute.

The choice of terms in many cases possibly reflects changes made according to political contexts, since terms seem to vary based upon the nation being discussed, be it Israel, Egypt, Idumea (Edom), Tyre, Sidon or others. While it is possible that the translators were trying to be sensitive to political nuances, another explanation would be that different translators handled different materials and therefore word choices reflect the individual preferences of separate translators.

So for example, the terms for political leaders show both semantic leveling and differentiation that generally correspond to political contexts. The translators seem to avoid using royal language to describe the rulers of Israel, even when the Hebrew employs royal language to describe them. Instead, to describe the leaders in Israel the translators use the rather generic terms “leader/guide” (ἀδελφοῦνες) and “guide/leader” (ἤγομενος) or “ruler” (ἄρχων). So even when the Hebrew uses the term “king” (暭) three times to describe the kings of Israel in 43.7 and 9, the Greek translators use the term “guide/leader” (ἤγομενος). Elsewhere, the translators regularly use the royal term “king” (βασιλεὺς) to translate暭, but in those contexts it does not describe the kings of Israel but rather the kings of Babylon (17.12 and 16 and elsewhere), of the earth (27.33), of the islands (27.35), of Egypt (29.2; 30.10 and elsewhere). The only king of Israel or Judah who bears the title “king” (βασιλεὺς) is Ioakim in 1.2. Even David is not described as “king” (βασιλεὺς) in 37.24 but rather as “ruler” (ἄρχων), even though the Hebrew reads “king” (יוֹלֵם). Likewise, the term רַעֲשָׁה, which the NRSV translates as “prince” when referring to princes in Israel, is rendered with the terms “ruler” (אֵ contiene), “leader/guide” (אֵ このような) and “guide/leader” (אֵ このような) (see 12.12; 46.2; 45.7).

The translators also (possibly) show variations in their choice of terms to describe the destruction of different political entities, including cities and countries. So they translate the term “desolation” (בַּשָּׁלֶל) as “annihilation” (אַפְּנָי), i.e., devastation to the point of complete disappearance, when describing the destruction of Israel in chaps. 6–23. But when describing the “desolation” (בַּשָּׁלֶל) of Egypt in chap. 29, the Greek has the term “destruction/ruin” (ἀπαχώρει), and then “desolation” (ἱερβή or ἱρβή) when describing Mount Seir in chap. 35, which implies that the land is emptied but still exists. So “wilderness” (ἱερβή) translates the term “wilderness” (בְּנַחֲלָה) in chaps. 6–20, when the discussion concerns Israel; then it translates “ruins” (בַּשָּׁלֶל) in chaps. 25–30 when the discussion switches to Edom, Tyre and Egypt. In chaps. 33–35 where the discussion concerns the mountains of Seir and Israel, “wilderness” (ἱερβή) translates “desolation” (בַּשָּׁלֶל). Then in chaps. 36 and 38, which promise the restoration of the ruined areas in Israel, “wilderness” (ἱερβή) once again translates “ruins” (בַּשָּׁלֶל). Other words for destruction in both noun and verb forms show similar patterns of differentiation.

As a final set of examples of possible political contextualization, the terms regarding sin show a high degree of differentiation in various political contexts, although not as consistently as the terms for rulers or even the terms for destruction. So the term “misdeed” (נְפָרִית) is rendered as “injustice” (ἀνομία) in chaps. 3–24, regarding the sin of Israel. An exception occurs in 16.49, in the long comparison of Israel to a prostitute and where “misdeed” (נְפָרִית) is translated as “lawless act” (ἀνομία). But the same term “misdeed” (נְפָרִית) is rendered as “sin” (ἁμαρτία) regarding the ruler of Tyre in 28.18 and as “lawlessness” (ἀνομία) regarding the misdeeds of Egypt, Mosoch (Meshech) and Thobel (Tubal) in 29.16 and 32.27. Then, in chaps. 33–44, where the discussion reverts to Israel, “misdeed” (נְפָרִית) is translated by four different terms, “lawlessness” (ἀνομία), “impious” (ἀσέβεια), “sin” (ἁμαρτία) and “injustice” (ἀνομία) in 33.8; 33.9; 39.23 and 44.10, respectively.

The variation of terms found in the Greek translation does not concern only political contexts but is reflected in many other terms as well. For example, the term “spirit” or “wind” (ψυχή) is translated by six different Greek terms: “wind” (πνεῦμα), “spirit/wind” (πνεῦμα), “blast/breath” (πνοή), “fervor” (θυμός), “face” (πρόσωπον) and “part” (μέρος), depending on the precise linguistic context.

As a result of the nuancing of their terms, the translators produce a Greek text that is, for the most part, quite understandable, although their excessive literalism can present problems for the reader of the Greek text. Very problematic is the lack of nuance shown in rendering the Hebrew word שבע “give,” which can also mean “to set,” “establish,” “appoint” or “turn into.” But despite the variations of the Hebrew meanings, the translators almost always render it with δίδωμι “give,” which does not have the same extended range of meanings as does Hebrew שבע, with the result that many turns of phrase must have sounded odd to a Greek ear.

Also problematic is the literal translation of the Hebrew oath formula, as exemplified in 16.48: “I live, says the Lord, if your sister Sodoma has acted, she and her daughters, as you and your daughters acted! . . .” What follows the “if” clause is left unspoken, so the reader is left with an unresolved conditional clause and a sentence fragment.

The NETS Translation

There are two ways to depart from a literal one-for-one correspondence of Greek terms for Hebrew terms. Either several Greek terms can be used to translate a single Hebrew term or a single Greek term can be used for several Hebrew terms. Both are commonplace in the Greek translation of Iezekiel in a way that cannot be characterized as either pure semantic leveling or as pure semantic nuancing, because one-for-many and many-for-one substitutions occur for the same terms. For example, the Greek term “stretch out” (ἐκτείνω) translates five different Hebrew terms: דִּבֵּר (1.11); דַּשֶּׁה (1.23); הַשָּׁלֶל (2.9); הַשָּׁלֶל (1.22); and אֶרֶן (37.6). Taken by itself it would appear to be a case of semantic leveling. But if one looks at הַשָּׁלֶל, one of the Hebrew terms translated by ἐκτείνω, הַשָּׁלֶל is itself translated by five distinct Greek terms: ἐκστασέω (3.6); ἀπαστάτεω (7.3); ἐκτείνω (8.3); ἐπαστάτεω (14.19); ὠνόμα (44.20). As a result, it is impossible to assert that the translators were leveling the translations for the term נְפָרִית and related terms. There is an interlocking pattern of both one-for-many and many-for-one substitutions.

As a result where there is a pattern of one-for-one substitutions for terms, NETS also follows a straight one-for-one substitution following the NRSV, as much as possible. But where there is a many-for-one pattern interwoven with a one-for-many pattern, NETS varies the terms that are used for the Greek terms, as much as possible. Each Greek-for-Hebrew translation couplet is represented by distinct English terms. So when ἐκτείνω translates πλύσα, it is represented in NETS by “extend,” but when it translates πέπλα, it is represented by “stretch out,” since ἐκτείνω is being used in two different ways. Likewise, when πέπλα is translated by ἐξαποστέλλω, NETS uses “send,” whereas when πλύσα is translated by ἐκτείνω, again NETS uses “extend,” because two different terms are being used to translate a single Greek term. Since the translations display neither pure leveling nor nuancing, the departures from literal one-for-one substitutions are both marked by a variation of the terms in NETS.

As for the exceptional one-for-one literalism in the use of δίσωμι for ΓΩ, NETS seeks to represent the problem by rendering “give” (δίσωμι) with synonyms for “give,” even when they produce a somewhat forced translation, to try to represent the literalism of the Greek translation with regard to the term.

Finally, there are numerous cases of disagreement between subject and verb of the sentence, where a plural noun disagrees with a singular verb. In these cases, the offending noun and pronoun or verb are rendered as they are in Greek to indicate a disruption of the normal pattern of grammatical agreement. For example 3.7 reads: “But the house of Israel shall not be willing to listen to you, for they do not wish to listen to me, because all the house of Israel are contentious and hard-hearted.” The singular “house of Israel” does not agree with the plural forms of the verb in the next clauses, resulting in a lack of agreement in the NETS translation.

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL NOTE
I would like to thank Albert Pietersma for all his insightful comments regarding the translation of iezekiel, Benjamin Wright for his efforts to organize the project and keep it on track, and Matt Olsen and my wife, Meredyth Hubler, for their patient proofreading. Good use has been made of the standard grammars and lexica.

1 And it happened in the thirtieth year, in the fourth month, on the fifth of the month, and I was in the middle of the captivity by the river Chobar, and the heavens were opened, and I saw divine appearances. 2On the fifth of the month (this was the fifth year of the captivity of King loakim) (3)and a word of the Lord came to the priest iezekiel son of Bouzi, in the land of the Chaldeans by the river Chobar, 3and the hand of the Lord came upon me.

4 And I looked, and behold, a rising wind was coming out of the north, and a great cloud was in it, and radiance was all around it and fire flashing forth, and in the middle of it (4)was something like a sight of electrum in the middle of the fire, and radiance was in it. 5And in the middle was something like a likeness of four living beings, and this was their appearance: a human likeness was upon them, 6and one had four faces, and one had four wings. 7And their legs were straight, and their feet were winged, and there were sparks like flashing bronze, and their wings were nimble. 8And a human hand was underneath their wings on their four parts, and the faces of the four (9)were not veering when they were moving. Each was moving opposite their face. 10And as for the resemblance of their faces: there was a face of a human, and the four had a face of a lion on the right, and the four had a face of a calf on the left, and the four had a face of an eagle. 11And the four had their wings, stretched out above. Each had two adjoined to each other, and two were covering up over their body. 12And each was moving according to its face. Wherever was the spirit as it moved, they were moving and were not veering. 13And in the middle of the living beings was an appearance like burning coals of fire, as the look of torches coming together between the living beings, and a radiance of the fire, and lightning was issuing from the fire.

15 And I looked, and behold, the four had one wheel on the ground, close to the living beings. 16And the aspect of the wheels was like the aspect of tharsis, and the four had one likeness, and their construction was just as if a wheel was within a wheel. 17They were moving upon their four parts, and they were not veering when they were moving. 18nor were their backs, and they had height, and I looked at them, and the four had their backs full of eyes all around. 19And when the living beings were moving, the wheels were moving next to them, and when the living beings rose from the ground, the wheels were raised. 20Wherever was the cloud, there was the spirit to move; the living beings were moving, and the wheels were being raised with them, for a spirit of life was in the wheels. 21When the living beings were moving, they were moving, and when the living beings stopped, they stopped, and when the living beings rose from the ground, they were raised with them, for a spirit of life was in the wheels.

*I.e. the wind  bPossibly the wind or the fire or the gold  ഹ Heb = topaz
And over the head of the living beings, they had a likeness just like a firmament—like a sight of ice—stretched out on their wings from above. And under the firmament, their wings were stretched out, flapping, one against the other. Each had two wings covering over their bodies. And when they were moving, I heard the sound of their wings, like the sound of abundant water, and when they were pausing, their wings were resting. And behold, a voice from above the firmament that was over their heads.

Like an appearance of a lapis lazuli stone was the likeness of a throne upon it, and on the likeness of the throne was a likeness just as a form of a human above. And I saw something like the view of electrum from the appearance of the loin and up, and from the appearance of the loin and all the way down, I saw something like an appearance of fire, and its radiance was all around. Like an appearance of a bow whenever it is in the cloud in a day of rain, so was the vision of the radiance all around.

This was the appearance of a likeness of the glory of the Lord, and I looked and fell upon my face, and I heard a voice of one speaking.

And he said to me: Son of man, stand upon your feet, and I will speak to you. And a spirit came upon me and took me up and raised me and set me upon my feet, and I heard him speaking to me, and he said to me, Son of man, I am sending you out to the house of Israel, those who are embittering me—who embittered me, they and their fathers, to this very day, and you shall say to them, “This is what the Lord says.” Whether then they hear or are terrified (for it is an embittering house), they shall also know that you are a prophet in their midst. And you, son of man, do not be afraid of them nor be dismayed from before them, because they will sting and band together against you all around, and you live in the midst of scorpions; do not be afraid of their words, and do not be dismayed from before them, for it is an embittering house. And you shall speak my words to them, whether then they hear or are terrified (for it is an embittering house).

And you, son of man, hear the one speaking to you. Do not become one who embitters just like the embittering house; open wide your mouth, and eat the things that I give you. And I saw and, behold, a hand stretched out to me, and in it was a scroll of a book. And he unrolled it before me, and on it the front and back were inscribed, and lamentation and strain and woe had been inscribed.

And he said to me, Son of man, devour this scroll, and go, and speak to the sons of Israel. And I opened wide my mouth, and he fed me the scroll. And he said to me, Son of man, your mouth shall eat, and your belly shall be filled with this scroll that has been given to you. And I ate it, and in my mouth it was like sweet honey.

And he said to me, Son of man, go, enter to the house of Israel, and speak my words to them, for not to a thick-lipped and heavy-tongued people are you being sent out, to the house of Israel—nor to many people of other languages or other tongues, neither being robust with their tongue, whose words you will not understand. Even if I had sent you out to such, these would have listened to you. But the house of Israel shall not be willing to listen to you, for they do not wish to listen to me, because all the house of Israel are contentious and hard-hearted. And behold, I have rendered your face powerful against their faces, and I will make strong your contention against their contention, and it shall be continually stronger than rock. Do not be afraid of them, nor be terrified from before them, for it is an embittering house. And he said to me, Son of man, all the words that I have spoken with you, take into your heart, and hear with your ears, and go, enter into the captivity, to the sons of your people, and you will speak to them and say to them, “This is what the Lord says”; whether, then, they hear, whether, then, they give in.

And a spirit lifted me up, and I heard behind me a sound of a great shaking. “Blessed is the glory of the Lord from his place.” And I perceived the sound of the wings of the living beings as they flapped, one against the other. And there was a sound of the wheels beside them, and a sound of the shaking. And the spirit lifted me up and took me up, and I went in a rush of my spirit, and the hand of the Lord came strong upon me. And I came into the captivity high up and went around those living by the river Chobar, those that were there, and I sat there seven days face about among them.

And after seven days, a word of the Lord came to me, saying: Son of man, I have given you as a sentinel to the house of Israel, and you shall hear a word from my mouth, and you shall warn them from me. When I say to the lawless, “By death you shall be put to death,” and you did not give him strict orders, nor did you speak in order to give the lawless one strict orders to turn back from his ways that he might live, that lawless one shall die for his injustice, and I will demand his blood from your hand. If you give the lawless one strict orders and he does not turn back from his lawlessness and his way, that lawless one shall die for his injustice, and you shall rescue your soul. And when a righteous one turns away from his righteous acts, and if he commits transgression, and I will give the test in front of him, he shall die, because you did not give him strict orders. And he shall die in his sins, for his righteous acts that he did shall not be remembered, and I will demand his blood from your hand. But you, if you give the righteous strict orders not to sin, and he does not sin, the righteous shall live by life, because you gave him strict orders, and you shall rescue your own soul.
22 And the hand of the Lord came upon me, and he said to me, “Rise up, and go out into the plain, and there it shall be spoken to you.” 23 And I rose up and went out into the plain, and behold, the glory of the Lord stood there, just like the appearance and just like the glory that I saw by the river Chobar, and I fell upon my face. 24 And a spirit came upon me and set me on my feet, and he spoke to me and said to me: Enter, and be closed in within your house. 25 As for you, son of man, behold, bands have been given upon you, and they shall bind you with them, and you shall not go out from among them. 26 And I will bind fast your tongue, and you shall be made mute, and to them you shall not be as a man who reproves, for it is an embittering house. 27 And when I speak to you, I shall open your mouth, and you shall say to them, “This is what the Lord says.” Let the one who hears hear, and let the one who refuses refuse, for it is an embittering house.

4 And you, son of man, take for yourself a brick, and you shall set it in front of you and portray upon it a city, Jerusalem. 2 And you shall give an enclosure against it and build siege walls against it and cast a palisade against it and give camps against it and line up the batteries of war engines all around. 3 And take for yourself an iron frying-pan, and you shall place it as an iron wall between you and between the city, and you shall ready your face against it. And it shall be in an enclosing, and you shall enclose it. This is a sign for the sons of Israel.

5 And you, son of man, take for yourself a sharp sword. Just like a barber’s razor you shall acquire it for yourself and lay it upon your head and upon your beard. And you shall take a balance of weights and divide them. 2 A quarter you shall burn in the fire in the midst of the city according to the completion of the days of the enclosing, and you shall take a quarter, and you shall burn it up in its midst, and a quarter you shall cut up with a sword around it; a quarter you shall scatter by the wind, and I will unsheathe a dagger after them. 3 And from there you shall take a few in number and bundle them in your robe. 4 And you shall take some from them again and throw them into the midst of the fire and burn them up in the fire; from it a fire shall go forth. 5 And you shall say to all the house of Israel, This is what the Lord says: This is Jerusalem, I have set her and the countries surrounding her in the midst of the nations. 6 And you shall speak my statutes and my laws to the lawless one out of the nations, out of the countries around her, for they rejected my statutes and in my precepts they have not walked in them. 7 Therefore, this is what the Lord says: Because your starting point was from the nations around you and you did not walk in my precepts and did not perform my statutes—on the contrary, you have not even acted according to the statutes of the nations around you—therefore, this is what the Lord says: Behold, I am against you, and I will execute judgment in your midst before the nations, 9 and I will do in you what I have not done and the like of which I will not do again because of all your abominations. 10 Therefore, fathers shall eat children in your midst, and children shall eat fathers, and I will execute judgments against you, and I will scatter all your survivors to every wind. 11 Therefore, I live, says the Lord. Surely, because you defiled my holy places with all your abominations, I will also thrust you aside. My eye shall not spare, and I will have no pity.
quarter of you shall be dispensed by death, and a quarter of you shall be finished off by famine in your midst, and a quarter of you, to every wind I will scatter them, and a quarter of you shall fall by the sword around you, and a dagger I will unsheathe after them.

13 And my wrath and my fury shall be completed upon them, and you shall recognize that I, the Lord, have spoken in my jealousy, when I spend my anger on them. 14 And I will make you and your daughters around you into a wilderness before every passer-by. 15 And you shall be mourned and be wretched among the nations around you when I execute my judgments against you in the punishment of my wrath; I, the Lord, have spoken. 16 When I send out my missiles of famine upon them, they shall also become a wiping out, and I will shatter your support of bread. 17 And I will send out famine and harmful animals against you, and I will take vengeance against you, and death and blood shall pass through upon you, and I will bring a sword upon you from all around; I, the Lord, have spoken.

6 And word of the Lord came to me, saying, 2 Son of man, set your face upon the mountains of Israel, and prophesy against them. 3 And you shall say, As for the mountains of Israel—hear a word of the Lord. This is what the Lord says to the mountains and the hills and the ravines and the dells: Behold, I myself am bringing a sword upon you, and I will utterly destroy your high places, 4 and your altars and your sacred precincts shall be shattered, and I will throw down your wounded in front of your idols. 5 And I will scatter your bones around your altars. 6 In every habituation of yours the cities shall be devastated, and the high places will be annihilated so that your altars shall be utterly destroyed and your idols broken and your sacred precincts razed. 7 And the wounded shall fall in your midst, and you shall recognize that I am the Lord.

7 And a word of the Lord came to me, saying: 2 And you, son of man, say, This is what the Lord says to the land of Israel:

8 When there are some of you who are rescued from the sword among the nations and are in your dispersion among the countries, 9 the rescued ones of you shall also remember me among the nations, there where they were taken prisoner. I have sworn by myself, I will not let you go from the land of Egypt, into the land of Canaan, a land of flowery plants, to eat the flowers thereof and to be filled with my fury for all your abominations. 10 And I will send it upon you, 11 for I will give your way against you and your abominations shall be in your midst, and you shall recognize that it is I, the Lord, who strike.

12 And a word of the Lord came to me, saying:

13 For the buyer shall no longer return to the seller, and the seller shall no longer return to the buyer, for the buyer shall no longer return to the seller, and a person shall not gain control of his life by his eye.

14 And I will stretch out my hand against them and make their land into an annihilation and destruction from the wilderness of Debutha, out of every habitation, and you shall recognize that I am the Lord.

15 War by the sword is from without, and famine and death from within. The one on the plain shall come to an end by the sword, while those in the city famine and death shall finish off.

16 And the survivors of them shall survive and shall be upon the mountains; I will slay them all, each in his injustices. 17 All hands shall grow feeble, and all thighs shall be sullied with moisture.

18 And they shall gird themselves round with sackcloth, and amazement shall cover them. And shame shall be on every face on them, and baldness on every head.

19 Their silver shall be thrown into the streets, and their gold shall be despised. Their souls shall not be satisfied, and their bellies shall not be filled, for a test of their injustices has occurred. Choice things of decoration—they made them into arrogance, and they made from them images of their abominations; therefore I have given them to them as impurity.

21 And I will hand them over into the hands of foreigners to seize them and to the pestiferous ones of the earth as plunder, and they shall profane them.

22 And I will turn back my face from them, and they will defile my visitation. And they will enter into them without precaution, and they will profane them.

23 And they shall create disorder, because the land is full of peoples and the city is full of lawlessness.

24 And I will turn back the wantonness of their strength, and their holy things shall be defiled.

25 Atonement shall come, and it shall seek peace, and it shall not be.

26 Woe shall be upon woe, and rumor shall be upon rumor. And vision shall be sought from a prophet, and law shall perish from the priest, and counsel from the elders.

27 And a ruler shall be clothed in annihilation, and the hands of the people of the land shall be disabled. According to their ways I will deal with them, and by their judgments I will judge them. And they shall know that I am the Lord.

5 And he said to me, “Son of man, look up with your eyes to the north.” And I looked up with my eyes to the north, and behold, from the north to the gate of the east! And he said to me, “Son of man, have you seen what these are doing? They are committing great acts of lawlessness here by keeping themselves far from my holy things. And you will see still greater acts of lawlessness.”

7 And he brought me to the entry of the court and said to me, “Son of man, dig.” And I dug and beheld, one door. And he said to me, “Go in, and see the lawless acts that they are committing here.”

8 And I went in and looked, and behold, vain abominations and all the idols of the house of Israel were portrayed on it all around, and seventy men from the elders of the house of Israel; lezoniath the son of Saphan stood in the midst of them in front of them, and each had his censer in his hand, and the vapor of the incense was ascending. And he said to me, “Son of man, have you seen what the elders of the house of Israel are doing, each of them in their hidden bedroom? For they said, ‘The Lord does not see; the Lord has forsaken the land.’” And he said to me, “You will see still greater acts of lawlessness that these are committing.”

14 And he brought me to the entry of the gate of the house of the Lord looking north, and behold, women sitting there, lamenting Thammouz, and he said to me, “Son of man, have you seen? And you will see still practices greater than these.”

16 And he brought me into the inner court of the house of the Lord, and behold, at the entry of the shrine of the Lord, between the ailamd and between the altar there were about twenty men, their backs to the shrine of the Lord and their faces opposite, and they were doing obeisance to the sun. And he said to me, “Have you seen, son of man? Is it only a small thing for the house of Loudas to commit the lawless acts that they have committed here? For they filled the land with lawlessness, and behold, they are like ones that turn their nose up. And I will act against them with wrath; my eye shall not spare, nor will I show pity.”

9 And he cried out into my ears in a loud voice, saying, “The judgment of the city has come near,” and each had the instruments of annihilation in his hand. And behold, six men were coming from the way of the high gate looking north, and each had an ax in his hand, and one man in the midst of them wearing a full-length robe, and a sapphiree belt was upon his loin, and they entered and stood close to the bronze altar.

3 And the glory of the God of Israel ascended from the cherubim. It was upon them up to the atriump of the house. And he summoned the man who wore the full-length robe who had the belt upon his loin. And he said to him, “Pass through the middle of Jerusalem, and give the mark upon the foreheads of the men who sigh and have been afflicted over all the lawless acts that happen in aPossibly choice things  bOr places  cGk = pl  dHeb = porch  eOr lapis lazuli

And to these he said as I was listening, “Go over after him into the city, and smite, and do not spare with your eyes, and you shall show no pity; exterminate elder and young man and unmarried girl and little children and women unto obliteration, but you shall not approach anyone upon whom is the mark, and begin from my holy places.” And they began from the men who were inside, in the house. And he said to them, “Defile the house, and fill the roads with the dead as you go out, and smite.” And it happened, when they were smiting, I also fell upon my face and shouted out and said, “Woe is me, O Lord, are you wiping out the survivors from Israel when you pour out your wrath upon Jerusalemi?” And he said to me, “The injustice of the house of Israel and loudas has become very, very great, because the land was filled with many people and the city was filled with injustice and uncleanness, for they said, ‘The Lord has forsaken the land; the Lord does not watch.’ And my eye shall not spare, nor shall I show pity; I have given their ways against their head.

And behold, the man who wore the full-length robe and girded with a belt on his loin and he answered, saying, “I have done as you commanded me.”

And I saw, and behold, above the firmament over the head of the cherubin was something like a lapis lazuli stone; a likeness of a throne was upon them. And he said to the man clothed in the robe, “Go into the midst of the wheelworks under the cherubin, and fill your hands with coals from the fire in the midst of the cherubin, and scatter them upon the city.” And he went in before me. And the cherubin stood on the right of the house when the man was entering, and the cloud filled the inner court. And the glory of the Lord arose from the cherubin into the atrium of the house, and the cloud filled the house, and the court was filled with the radiance of the glory of the Lord. And a sound of wings of the cherubin was heard as far as the outer court like a voice of God Saddai when he speaks.

And it happened, when he was commanding the man clothed in the holy robe, saying, “Take fire from the midst of the wheelworks from the midst of the cherubin,” and he went in and stood close to the wheels. And he extended his hand into the midst of the fire that was among the cherubin and took and gave it into the hands of the one clothed in the holy robe, and he took it and went out. And I saw the cherubin; a likeness of human hands was underneath their wings.

And I saw, and behold, four wheels stood close to the cherubin, one wheel close to one cherub, and the appearance of the wheels was as the appearance of a stone of carbuncle. And their appearance was one likeness belonging to the four, as whenever a wheel is in the midst of a wheel. When they were moving, they were moving in their four parts. They were not veering when they were moving, because they were moving to whichever place looked, and they were not veering when they were moving.

And their backs and their hands and their wings and their wheels were full of eyes all around the four wheels. Now, as I was listening, the name Gelgel was assigned to these wheels.

And the cherubin rose up. This is the living being that I saw by the river Chobar. And when the cherubin were moving, the wheels were moving, and they were close to them. And when the cherubin were lifting up their wings to be borne aloft from the earth, their wheels were not veering. When they stopped, they stopped, and when they were being borne aloft, they were being borne aloft with them, for a spirit of life was in them.

And the glory of the Lord went out from the house and mounted upon the cherubin. And the cherubin lifted up their wings, and they were borne aloft from the earth before me when they went out together with the wheels beside them, and they stood at the entry of the opposite gate of the house of the Lord, and the glory of God of Israel was upon them from above.

This is the living being that I saw below the God of Israel by the river Chobar, and I knew that they were cherubin. One had four faces, and one had eight wings, and a likeness of human hands was underneath their wings. As for the resemblance of their faces: these were the faces that I saw below the glory of the God of Israel by the river Chobar, and they were moving, each in front of them.

And a spirit lifted me up and brought me to the opposite gate of the house of the Lord, the one looking east, and behold, at the entry of the gate were about twenty-five men, and in the midst of them I saw lezonias the son of Ezer and Phaltias the son of Banaias, the commanders of the people. And the Lord said to me, “Son of man, these are the men who devise empty things and deliberate wicked counsel in this city, the ones who say, ‘Have not the dwellings been built recently? This is the cauldron while we are the meat.’ Therefore, prophesy against them; prophesy, son of man.”

And a spirit fell upon me and said to me, “This is what the Lord says: Speak thus, O house of Israel, I understand even the deliberation of your spirit. You multiplied your dead in this city and deliberated wicked counsel in this city, and the one looking east and the one looking west and the one looking north and the one looking south, and you said, ‘Have not the dwellings been built recently? This is the cauldron while we are the meat.’ Therefore, prophesy against them; prophesy, son of man.”

And I saw, and behold, four wheels stood close to the cherubin, and one wheel close to one cherub, and the appearance of the wheels was as the appearance of a stone of carbuncle. And their appearance was one likeness belonging to the four, as whenever a wheel is in the midst of a wheel. When they were moving, they were moving in their four parts. They were not veering when they were moving, because they were moving to whichever place looked, and they were not veering when they were moving.

And their backs and their hands and their wings and their wheels were full of eyes all around the four wheels. Now, as I was listening, the name Gelgel was assigned to these wheels.

judge you at the borders of Israel, and you shall recognize that I am the Lord. 11 This shall not be for you as a cauldron, and you shall not become in its midst as meat. I will judge you at the borders of Israel, and you shall recognize that I am the Lord.

13 And it happened, while I was prophesying, and Phaltias son of Banaias died, and I fell upon my face, and I shouted with a loud voice and said, "Woe is me; woe is me, O Lord; are you making an end of the remnant of Israel?"

14 And a word of the Lord came to me, saying:

15 Son of man, your brothers and the men of your captivity and the entire house of Israel have been finished off, those to whom the inhabitants of Jerusalem have said, "You keep far from the Lord. To us the land has been given as a portion."

16 Therefore, say: This is what the Lord says, "I will drive them away into the nations, and I will scatter them into all the earth, and I will be for them as a small holy precinct in the countries, there where they enter." 17 Therefore I said, This is what the Lord says: And I will take them in from the nations where I dispersed them, and I will give them back to Jerusalem, and to the house of Israel.

18 Son of man, you shall eat your bread in grief, and drink your water in torture and suffering, 19 and you shall carry out your baggage, baggage of captivity, by day before their eyes, and you shall go out in the evening as a captive goes out. 20 Before them you shall be lifted up as a sign to the house of Israel, and you shall go out through it. 21 And I will spread out my net over him, and he shall be caught in my enclosure, and I will bring him to Babylon, to the land of the Chaldeans, and he shall not see it, and he shall come to an end there. 22 And I will distribute to every wind all his helpers around him and all who assist him, and I will unsheathe a sword after them. 23 And they shall know that I am the Lord after I scatter them among the nations, and I will distribute them among the countries. 24 And I will retain from them men by number, from sword and from famine and from death, so that they shall tell of all their lawless acts among the nations where they enter, and they shall know that I am the Lord.

17 And a word of the Lord came to me, saying:

18 Son of man, you shall eat your bread in grief, and you shall drink your water in torture and suffering. 19 And you shall say to the people of the land of Israel, This is what the Lord says to the inhabitants of Jerusalem in the land of Israel: They shall eat their bread in need, and they shall drink their water in annihilation so that the land is extinguished together with its fullness, for all who live in it are engaged in impiety, and they shall drink their water in annihilation so that the land shall become an annihilation, and you shall recognize that I am the Lord.

21 And a word of the Lord came to me, saying:

22 Son of man, what is this comparison of yours about the land of Israel as they are saying, "Distant are the days; vision has perished?" 23 Therefore, say to them, "This is what the Lord says: And I will turn back the comparison, and the house of Israel shall no longer speak this comparison," because you shall speak to them, "The days and word of every vision have come near." 24 For there shall no longer be any false vision and one giving divination for favor in the midst of the sons of Israel. 25For I, the Lord, will speak my words; I will speak and act and no longer delay, because in your days, O house that embitters, I will speak a word and perform it, says the Lord.

26 And a word of the Lord came to me, saying: 27Son of man, behold, the house of Israel that embitters—when they speak, they say, “The vision that he holds is for many days, and he prophesies for far times.” 28Therefore, say to them, This is what the Lord says: No longer shall any of my words delay, whatever I will speak; I will speak and perform, says the Lord.

13 And a word of the Lord came to me, saying: 2Son of man, prophesy against the prophets of Israel, and you shall prophesy and say to them: “Hear a word of the Lord!” 3This is what the Lord says: Woe to those who prophesy from their heart and perhaps do not see at all. 4Your prophets are like foxes in the deserts, O Israel. 5They did not stand upon a solid body and gather flocks to the house of Israel. Those who say, “In the day of the Lord” did not stand up. 6Those who say, “The Lord says” are seers of falsehoods and diviners of vanities, and the Lord has not sent them, and they began to set up a word. 7Have you not beheld a false vision and spoken vain divinations?

8 Therefore, say, This is what the Lord says: Because your words are false and your divinations are vain, therefore, behold, I am against you, says the Lord, 9and I will stretch out my hand against him and sat down in front of me. 2And a word of the Lord came to me, saying: 3Son of man, these men set their thoughts upon their hearts, and they set the punishment of their injustices in front of them; am I to answer them by answering? 4Therefore speak to them, and you shall say to them, This is what the Lord says: Person by person who stitch together cushions for far times.” 28Therefore, say to them, This is what the Lord says: No longer shall any of my words delay, whatever I will speak; I will speak and perform, says the Lord.

20 Therefore, this is what the Lord says: Behold, I am against your cushions whereby you collect souls, and I will tear them from your arms, and into a dispersion I will send out their souls, which souls of theirs you distort. 21And I will tear through your veils, and I will rescue my people from your hand, and they shall no longer be in your hands for gathering, and you shall recognize that I am the Lord. 22Because you were perverting the heart of a righteous person and I was not perverting him even to make strong the hands of a lawless person so that he might not turn back at all from his wicked way and he might live, 23therefore, you shall not behold falsehoods and no longer perform divinations, and I will rescue my people from your hand, and you shall know that I am the Lord.

14 And men from the elders of Israel came to me and sat down in front of me. 2And a word of the Lord came to me, saying: 3Son of man, these men set their thoughts upon their hearts, and they set the punishment of their injustices in front of them; am I to answer them by answering? 4Therefore speak to them, and you shall say to them, This is what the Lord says: Person by person from the house of Israel, whoever sets his thoughts upon his heart and arranges the punishment of his injustice in front of him and comes to the prophet, I, the Lord, will answer him by those things by which his mind is held fast 5in order that he may turn aside the house of Israel according to their hearts that are estranged from me through their notions.

6 Therefore say to the house of Israel, This is what the Lord says: Turn about, and turn back from your practices and from all your impieties, and turn your faces around. 7For person by person from the house of Israel and from the guests who are guests in the house of Israel, whoever is estranged from me and sets his notions upon his heart and arranges the punishment of his injustice in front of him and comes to the prophet to inquire of him by me—I, the Lord, will answer him by that whereby he is held fast. 8And I will set my face against that person, and I will make him into a wildness and into annihilation, and I will take him away from the midst of my people, and you shall recognize that I am the Lord.

9 And the prophet, if he should ever deceive and speak, I, the Lord, have deceived that prophet, and I will stretch out my hand against him and will annihilate him from the midst of my people, Israel. 10 And they shall receive their injustice; like the wrongdoing of the inquirer and like the wrongdoing, so shall it be for the prophet 11 so that the house of Israel may no longer go astray from me and so that they may not defile themselves further in all their transgressions, and they shall be for me as a people, and I will be a god for them, says the Lord.

12 And a word of the Lord came to me, saying:
13 Son of man, if a land sins against me so that transgression occurs, I will also stretch out my hand against it and will shatter its support of bread, and I will send out famine upon it and will take away human and cattle from it. 14 Even if these three men were in its midst, Noe and Daniel and Job, they shall be saved by their righteousness, says the Lord. 15 Even if I bring harmful animals against the land, I shall also take vengeance on it, and it shall be as an annihilation, and there shall not be one who passes through from before the animals, even if these three men were in its midst, I live, says the Lord, if sons or daughters shall be saved! But they alone would be saved, while the land would be for annihilation. 17 Or again, if I bring a sword upon that land and say, “Let a sword pass through the land” and I will take away human and cattle from it 18 and these three men be in its midst, I live, says the Lord, they shall rescue neither sons nor daughters. They alone shall be saved. 19 Or again, if I send out death upon that land and I pour out my wrath upon it with blood so as utterly to destroy human and cattle from it and these three men be in its midst, I live, says the Lord, if sons or daughters should be left behind! They shall rescue their souls by their righteousness.

21 This is what the Lord says: But even if I send out my four grievous punishments, sword and famine and harmful animals and death, upon Jerusalem so as utterly to destroy human and cattle from it 22 and behold, those rescued from it who bring out their sons and daughters are left behind in it, behold, they come out to you, and you shall see their ways and their thoughts, and you shall regret the evil that I brought upon Jerusalem, all the evil that I brought upon it, 23 and they shall console you; for you shall see their ways and their thoughts, and you shall recognize that I have not done all the things that I did in it without cause, says the Lord.

15 And a word of the Lord came to me, saying:
2 And you, son of man, what might the wood of the vine become from all the trees, the branches that are among the trees of the forest?
3 Shall they take wood from it to make it into a product?
4 Shall they take a peg from it to hang any object on it?

4 On the contrary, it has been given to the fire for consumption; the fire consumes the yearly cleansing of it, and it fails completely; shall it actually be useful for production?
5 Not even when it is still whole shall it be for production. How much less if ever fire consumes it completely shall it still be fit for production?

6 Therefore, say: This is what the Lord says: Like the wood of the vine among the trees of the forest, that which I have given to the fire for consumption, so have I given the inhabitants of Jerusalem. 7 And I will give my face against them; they shall go out from the fire, and fire shall devour them, and they shall recognize that I am the Lord when I set my face against them. 8 And I will give the land into annihilation, because they fell away in transgression, says the Lord.

16 And a word of the Lord came to me, saying:
2 Son of man, testify to Jerusalem about her lawless acts. 3 And you shall say, This is what the Lord says to Jerusalem: Your origin and your birth is from the land of Chanaan; your father is an Amorite, and your mother a Chettite. 4 And as for your birth—in the day that you were born, they did not bind your breasts, and you were not bathed with water, nor were you salted with salt, and you were not wrapped in cloths, 5 neither did my eye spare you so as to do for you one of all these things to show feeling to you. And you were thrown out on the surface of the plain by the perversion of your soul in the day that you were born.

6 And I passed by you and saw you fouled by your own blood and said to you, “From your blood is life; 7 grow up, just like the sprouting of the field I have rendered you.” And you grew up and became tall and entered into cities of cities; your breasts were set right, and your hair grew, but you were naked and disgraced.

8 And I passed by you and saw you, and behold, your season was a season of lodgers, and I spread my wings over you and covered your disgrace, and I swore to you and entered into a covenant with you, says the Lord, and you became mine. 9 And I bathed you with water and washed your blood from you and anointed you with oil, 10 and I clothed you with embroidered clothes and shod you with blue and girded you with fine linen and clothed you in a fine hair-veil, 11 and I adorned you with an ornament and put bracelets around your arms and a chain around your neck, 12 and I gave an earring on your nostril and small rings on your ears and a crown of boasting upon your head.

13 And you were adorned with gold and silver, and your wraps were of fine linen and of woven hair and embroidered. You ate choice flour and oil and honey, and you became very beautiful. 14 And your fame went out among the nations on account of your beauty, because you had been completed in attractiveness by the elegance that I set upon you, says the Lord.

15 And you trusted in your beauty, and you whored because of your fame and poured out your whoring on every passer-by. 16 And you took some of your garments and made for yourself stitched figures and played the whore on them, and you shall not enter, nor shall it happen. 17 And you took your objects of boasting from my gold and from my silver, from that which I gave you, and you made for yourself male images and played the whore with them. 18 And you took your embroidered apparel and put them on, and you set my oil and my incense in front of them. 19 Even my bread that I gave you. I fed you choice flour and oil and honey, and you set them in front of them as an odor of fragrance, and it happened, says the Lord. 20 And you took your sons and your daughters whom you bore, and you sacrificed them to them as consumption, as if you played the whore just a little. 21 And you slaughtered your children and delivered them up when you were appeasing them through them. 22 This was in addition to all your whoring, and you did not remember the days of your childhood, when you were naked and disgraced, and you lived fouled in your blood.

23 And it happened after all your evil acts, says the Lord, 24 you also built for yourself a whoring chamber, and you made a proclamation for yourself in every boulevard. 25 And at the head of every way you built your whoreshouses, and you spoiled your beauty and drew your legs apart for every passer-by and multiplied your whoring. 26 And you played the whore with the sons of Egypt who accompanied you, who were great in flesh, and you did not remember the day of your childhood, when you were naked and disgraced, and you lived fouled in your blood.

27 Now if I stretch out my hand against you and I will take away your precepts, I will also give you to the souls of those who hate you, to daughters of al-lophyles who divert you from your way in which you acted impiously. 28 And you played the whore with the daughters of Assour, and even so you were not satisfied, and you played the whore but were not satiated. 29 And you multiplied your covenants with the land of the Chaldeans, and you were not even satisfied with them.

30 How should I treat your daughter, says the Lord, when you did all these things, deeds of a woman of whoredom? And you played the whore three times with your daughters. 31 You built your brothel at every head of a road, and you made your pedestal in every boulevard, and you became like a whore gathering payments. 32 The adulterous wife is like you, taking payments from her husband. 33 She would dole out payments to all those who played the whore with her, and you have given payments to all your lovers, and you would load them down to come to you from all around for your whoring. 34 And there was something perverted in you compared to other women in your whoring, and next after you they have not played the whore, while you would dole out payments, and payments were not given to you. And there were in you things perverted.

35 Therefore, O whore, hear a word of the Lord: 36 This is what the Lord says, Because you have poured out your money, your shame in your whoring shall also be uncovered to your lovers, both for all the thoughts of your lawless acts and because of the streams of blood of your children that you gave them. 37 Therefore, behold, I am gathering against you all your lovers, those with whom you consorted, and all those you loved, with all those you hated, and I will gather them against you from all around and will uncover your evil acts to them, and they shall see all your shame. 38 And I will take vengeance on you with vengeance of an adulteress, and I will place you in the blood of wrath and jealousy. 39 And I will give you over into their hands, and they shall eradicating your brothel, and they shall demolish your pedestal, and they shall strip you of your apparel and take the objects of your boasting and leave you naked and disgraced. 40 And they shall bring on thongs against you, and they shall stone you with stones, and they shall slay you with their rapiers. 41 And they shall burn your houses with fire, and they shall execute judgments against you before many women, and I will turn you back from whoring, and you shall not make payments any more. 42 And I will let loose my wrath on you, and my jealousy shall be taken away from you, and I will take my rest, and I will no longer be vexed. 43 Because you did not remember the day of your childhood and you would pain me with all these things, and behold, I have given your ways against your heads, says the Lord.

And thus you have committed impiety in addition to all your lawless acts. 44 These are all the things that they said about you in a comparison, saying, “Like mother 45 like daughter.” You are your mother’s daughter, she who thrust aside her husband and her children, and the sisters of your sisters are those who thrust aside their husbands and their children; your mother is a Chettite, and your father an Amorrite. 46 Your elder sister is Samaria, she and her daughters, she who was living on your left, and your younger sister who was living on your right is Sodoma and her daughters. 47 And you did not even walk in their ways, nor did you act according to their lawless acts; in fact, you almost surpassed them in all your ways. 48 I live, says the Lord, if your sister Sodoma has acted, she and her daughters acted! 49 But this was the lawless act of Sodoma, your sister: arrogance. She and her daughters were indulging in excess of bread and in prosperous ease; this belonged to her and her daughters, and they were not holding the hand of the poor and the needy. 50 And they were boasting and committed lawless acts before me, and I took them away, just as I saw. 51 And Samaria sinned not half of your sins, and you multiplied your lawless acts beyond them and made your sisters right by all your lawless acts that you committed. 52 And you shall bear your trial, for you ruined your sisters with your sins by which you acted lawlessly beyond them and rendered them right beyond yourselves, and be ashamed, you, and receive your dishonor for rendering your sisters right.

53 And I will turn back your turning back, the turning back of Sodoma and her daughters, and I will turn back the turning back of Samaria and her daughters, and I will turn back your turning back in their midst 54 in order that you may bear your trial and be dishonored as a result of all that you have done when you provoked me. 55 And your sister Sodoma and her daughters shall be restored, just as they were from the beginning, and Samaria and her daughters shall be restored, just as they were from the beginning. 56 And surely Sodoma your sister was not as a report in your mouth in the days of your arrogance, 57 before your evil acts were uncovered, as you are now an ignominy to daughters of Syria and all the daughters of allophyles around her that enclose you all around? 58 Your impieties and your lawless acts—you have carried them off, says the Lord.

59 This is what the Lord says: And I will deal with you just as you have done, as you have dishonored these things so as to transgress my covenant. 60 And I will remember my covenant with you in the days of your childhood, and I will establish with you an everlasting covenant. 61 And you will remember your way, and you shall be completely dishonored when you receive back your elder sisters with your younger ones, and I will give them to you for a building and not on account of your covenant. 62 And I will establish my covenant with you, and you shall recognize that I am the Lord 63 in order that you shall remember and be ashamed and it be impossible for you any longer to open your mouth from before your dishonor, when I am appeared with you for everything that you have done, says the Lord.

17 And a word of the Lord came to me, saying:

2 Son of man, tell a tale, and speak an illustration to the house of Israel, 3 and you shall say: This is what the Lord says:

The great eagle with great wings, large in extent, full of talons, who a has the guidance to enter into Lebanon.

And he took the select parts of the cedar; he broke off the tender tops. And he carried them to the land of Chanaan; he set them into a walled city.

And he took from the seed of the earth and gave it into the plain. A plant by abundant water, he set it out as something gazed upon.

And it sprouted and turned into a weak vine, small in size for it to appear. Its shoots were upon it, and its roots were under it. And it turned into a vine and made layers and extended its climbers.

7 And another great eagle came with great wings and many talons. And behold, this vine was wrapped around him, and its roots were against him. And it shot out its shoots toward him to water it b together with the bed of its planting.

8 Into a good plain by abundant water it thrives so as to make shoots and to bear fruit, to be as a large vine.

9 Therefore, say: This is what the Lord says: Will it go straight? Will not its tender roots and fruit rot, and all that first sprouts from it wither? And not by a great arm nor by many people so as to pull it from its roots.

10 And behold, it thrives; will it actually go straight? Shall it not be withered in dryness as soon as the scorching wind touches it? It shall wither together with the clump of its sprouting.

11 And a word of the Lord came to me, saying:

12 Son of man, say now to the embittering house: Did you not understand what these things were? Say: When the king of Babylon comes upon Ierousalem, he shall also take its king and its rulers and bring them to himself to Babylon. 13 And he shall take the royal offspring and shall make a covenant with him and will bring him in under an imprecation, and he shall take the chief men of the land so that it might become an altogether weak reign so that he might not be raised up to keep his covenant and to raise it up. 15 And he shall rebel against him so as to send out his own ambassadors to Egypt, that he might give him horses and many people. Shall he go straight? Shall he who produces opposition escape? And when he transgresses a covenant, shall he be saved? 161 live, says the Lord, if he shall not come to an end in the place where the king is who made him king—he who dishonored my imprecation and who transgressed my covenant—with him in the midst of Babylon! 17 And not with a great force or with a great throng shall Pharao make war with him, in casting up a palisade and in constructing batteries of war-engines to take away souls. 18 And he dishonored oath-making so as to transgress a covenant, and behold, he has given his hand, and he did all these things to him. Shall he then be saved? 19 Therefore, say: This is what the Lord says: I live, if I will not also impart upon his head my oath-making that he dishonored and my covenant a L.e. is led b L.e. the vine c L.e. royal offspring d Possibly for that he transgressed! 20 And I will spread out the net over him, and he shall be captured in its enclosure. 21 In his every battle they shall fall by the sword, and I will disperse the survivors to every wind, and you shall recognize that I, the Lord, have spoken.

22 Therefore, this is what the Lord says:
And it is I who will take some from the select parts of the cedar;
I will snip off something from the top of their heart.
And it is I who will transplant on a high mountain.
And I will hang him in a mountain of Israel high in the air.
And I will transplant him, and he shall produce a shoot and bear fruit and become a large cedar.
And every animal shall rest under him, and every winged creature shall rest under his shade, and his shoots shall be restored.

23 And all the trees of the plain shall know that I am the Lord, he who brings low a high tree and exalts a low tree and withers a green tree and makes a dry tree flourish. I, the Lord, have spoken, and I will do it.

18 And a word of the Lord came to me, saying:
2 Son of man, why do you4 have this comparison among the sons of Israel, when they are saying, “The fathers ate unripe grapes, and the teeth of the children had pain?” 3 I live, says the Lord, if this comparison ever comes to be spoken again in Israel! 4 For all the souls are mine; as is the soul of the father mine, so also is the soul of the son. Mine they are. The soul that sins, this one shall die.

5 Now, the person who shall be righteous, the one who performs judgment and righteousness, 6 upon the mountains he shall not eat, and he shall not lift up his eyes to the notions of the house of Israel and shall not draw near a woman during her separation, 7 and he shall not oppress a person, shall restore a debtor’s pledge and shall not commit robbery; gave his bread to the needy and clothed the naked and turned his hand back from iniquity, he did not take interest nor excess, performed justice and walked in my ordinances, he shall not come to an end for the iniquities of his father; he shall live by life. 18 But his father, if he extorts with extortion and robs what was robbed, he did the opposite in the midst of my people, and he shall die for his injustice.

19 And you shall say, “Why is it that the son of the father did not receive the injustice?” Because the son did justice and mercy, he observed all my precepts and did them; he shall live by life. 20 But, the soul that sins shall die, but the son shall not receive the injustice of the father, nor shall the father receive the injustice of the son; the righteousness of the righteous shall be upon him, and the lawlessness of the lawless shall be upon him.

21 And if the lawless turns back from all his lawless acts that he committed and keeps all my commandments and does justice and mercy, he shall live by life; he shall not die. 22 None of his transgressions that he committed shall be remembered; by his righteousness that he did he shall live. 23 By my will do I actually will the death of the lawless one, says the Lord, rather than for him to turn back from his wicked way and live? 24 After the righteous one turns back from his righteousness and commits injustice like all the lawless acts that the lawless commits, none of his righteous acts that he performed shall be remembered, for his transgression by which he transgressed and in his sins that he committed in these he shall die.

25 And you said, “The way of the Lord does not go straight.” Hear now, O house of Israel; does my way not go straight? Is it not your way that does not go straight? 26 When the righteous turns back from his righteousness and should he commit transgression and die, by the transgression that he committed—by it he shall die. 27 And when a lawless one turns back from his lawlessness that he committed and should he perform judgment and righteousness, he has preserved his soul and has turned back from all his impieties that he committed; he shall live by life; he shall not die. 28 And they say—the house of Israel—“The way of the Lord is not straight.” Is my way not straight, O house of Israel? Is it not your way that is not straight?"
30 I will judge you, each one, according to his way, O house of Israel, says the Lord. Turn about, and turn back from all your impieties, and they shall not be for you as a punishment for injustice.

31Throw away from yourselves all your impieties that you committed against me and make for yourselves a new heart and a new spirit. And why are you dying, O house of Israel? 32For I do not will the death of the dying, says the Lord.

19 And as for you, take up a lamentation over the ruler of Israel, and you shall say:
What is your mother?
A whelp in the midst of lions!
She was born in the midst of lions and multiplied her whelps.

3 And one of her whelps ran off and became a lion,
and he learned to catch prey
and ate human beings.

4 And nations heard of him;
he was caught in their destruction, and they brought him in a muzzle
to the land of Egypt.

5 And she saw that he had rejected her,
and her confidence perished.
And she took another of her whelps and made him a lion.

6 And he would dwell among lions;
he became a lion,
and he learned to catch prey;
he ate human beings.

7 And he would feed in his rashness and devastated their cities, and he annihilated the land and its fullness,
with a voice of his roaring.

8 And they gave nations against him from countries all around.
And they spread their nets upon him,
and he was caught in their destruction.

9 And they put him in a muzzle and in a cage.
He came to the king of Babylon, and he brought him into custody
so that his voice might not be heard on the mountains of Israel.

10 Your mother was like a vine,
like a flower in a pomegranate planted in water;
its fruit and its shoot came to be from abundant water.

11 And a rod of strength became for it as a tribe of leaders, and it was exalted in its size
in the midst of trunks, and hea saw its size
in the multitude of its shoots.

12 And it was broken off in wrath, thrown upon the ground,
and a scorching wind withered its choice parts,
and they were punished.
And its rod of strength was withered;

13 And now they have planted it in the wilderness,
in a waterless land.

14 And fire went out from a rod of its choice parts and has devoured it.
And a rod of strength was not in it.

A tribe for an illustration of a lament it is, and it shall become a lament.

20 And it happened in the seventh year, in the fifth month, on the tenth of the month, men came from the elders of the house of Israel to inquire of the Lord, and they sat down in front of me.

And a word of the Lord came to me, saying: 3Son of man, speak to the elders of the house of Israel, and you shall say to them: This is what the Lord says: Are you coming to inquire of me? I live, if I will answer you! says the Lord. 4Will I judge them with punishment? Son of man, testify to them of the lawless acts of their fathers, and you shall say to them: This is what the Lord says: From the day that I chose the house of Israel and I was made known to the offspring of the house of Jakob and became known to them in the land of Egypt and took hold of them with my hand, saying: I am the Lord, your God, in that day I took hold of them with my hand to bring them out from the land of Egypt into the land that I prepared for them, a land flowing with milk and honey; it is a honeycomb beyond every land. 7And I said to them: Let each throw away the abominations of his eyes, and do not defile yourselves with the practices of Egypt; I am the Lord, your God. 8And they rebelled against me and were unwilling to listen to me; they did not throw away the abominations of their eyes and did not forsake the practices of Egypt.

And I spoke in order to pour out my wrath upon them, to spend my rage against them in the midst of the land of Egypt. 9And I acted so my name shall not be altogether profaned before the nations out of which I brought them before their eyes. 10And I led them out from the land of Egypt and brought them into the wilderness, 11and I gave them my ordinances, and I made known to them my statutes, those that a person shall perform, and by them he shall live. 12And I gave them my sabbaths to be a sign between me and between them, that they might know that I am the Lord who sanctifies them. 13And I said to the house of Israel in the wilderness: Walk by my ordinances. And they did not walk, and they rejected my statutes, those that a person shall perform and shall live by them, and they greatly profaned my sabbaths.

And I spoke in order to pour out my wrath upon them in the wilderness so as to consume them. 14And I acted so my name shall not be altogether profaned before the nations out of which I brought them before their eyes. 15And I raised my hand against them in the wilderness so that I might not bring them at all into the land that I gave them, a land flowing with milk and honey—it is a honeycomb beyond every land—because they rejected my statutes, and by my ordinances they did not walk by them, and they were profaning my sabbaths and were going after the notions of their hearts. And my eye spared them from wiping them out, and I did not make an end of them in the wilderness.

18 And I said to their children in the wilderness: Do not walk by the precepts of your fathers, and do not keep their statutes, and do not be mixed up together with their practices, and do not defile yourselves. I am the Lord, your God; walk by my ordinances, and keep my statutes, and perform them, and hallow my sabbaths, and it shall be as a sign between me and you, that you might know that I, the Lord, am your God. And they and their children embittered me; they did not walk by my ordinances, and they did not keep my statutes so as to perform them, that a person shall perform and live by them, and they were profaning my sabbaths.

And I spoke in order to pour out my wrath upon them in the wilderness so as to spend my rage on them. And I acted so my name shall not be altogether profaned before the nations, out of which I brought them before their eyes. And I raised up my hand against them in the wilderness so as to scatter them among the nations, to disperse them in the countries, because they did not perform my statutes and rejected my ordinances and were profaning my sabbaths, and their eyes were after their fathers’ notions. And it was I who gave them ordinances that were not good and statutes whereby they shall not live. And I will defile them with their gifts when I am passing through everything that opened up a womb so that I might annihilate them.

27 Therefore, speak to the house of Israel, son of man, and you shall say to them: This is what the Lord says: Thus far your fathers angered me by all their transgressions by which they transgressed me. And I brought them into the land of Egypt, so will I judge you, says the Lord. And I will drive you under my rod and bring you in by number, and I will select out of you the impious and rebellious; for from a land of their sojourn I will bring them out, but they shall not enter into the land of Israel, and you shall recognize that I am the Lord.

39 And you, O house of Israel: This is what the Lord says: Each one of you, take away your practices and after this, unless you listen to me, and you shall no longer profane my holy name with your gifts and with your practices.

40 For, on my holy mountain, on a lofty mountain, says the Lord, there they shall be slaves to me, the entire house of Israel completely, and there I will accept them, and there I will look upon your first fruits and the first fruits of what has been set apart, you defile yourselves in all your holy precincts.

41 In an odor of fragrance I will accept you, when I bring you out from the peoples and take you in from the countries, those in which you were scattered, and I will be hallowed among you in the eyes of the peoples. And you shall recognize that I am the Lord, when I bring you into the land of Israel, into the land to which I raised my hand to give it to your fathers. And there you shall remember your ways and your practices in which you were defiling yourselves, and you shall strike your faces because of all your evil acts. And you shall recognize that I am the Lord, when I deal thus with you so that my name shall not be profaned according to your evil ways and according to your corrupt practices, says the Lord.

45 And a word of the Lord came to me, saying: Son of man, set your face toward Thaiman, and gaze upon Darom, and prophesy against the land of the Nageb. And you shall say to the forest of the Nageb: Hear a word of the Lord, This is what the Lord says: Behold, I am kindling a fire in you, and it shall devour every green tree in you and every dry tree; the kindled flame shall not be quenched, and by it every face shall be burned up from east wind to north. And all flesh shall recognize that I, the Lord, have scorched it; it shall not be quenched. And I said, Never Lord, O Lord; they are saying to me, “Has not this comparison been spoken?”

21 And a word of the Lord came to me, saying: Therefore, prophesy, son of man; set your face toward Jerusalem, and gaze upon their holy things, and you shall prophesy against the land of Israel, and you shall say to the land of Israel: Behold, I am against you and will draw my hand-knife out of its sheath and will utterly destroy the unjust and the lawless from you. Because I will utterly destroy the unjust and the lawless from you, thus my hand-knife shall come out of its sheath against all flesh from the east wind to the north, and all flesh shall recognize that I, the Lord, have drawn my hand-knife out of its sheath. No longer shall it turn back. And you, son of man, sigh in the rubbing together of your loin, and in grief you shall groan before their eyes. And it shall be, if they say to you, “Why do you groan?” and you shall say, “Because of the news, for it comes, and every heart shall be enfeebled, and all hands shall be paralyzed, and all flesh and every spirit shall pass out, and all thighs shall be sullied with moisture.” Behold, it comes, and it shall be, says the Lord.

8 And a word of the Lord came to me, saying:

9 Son of man, prophesy, and you shall say: This is what the Lord says, Say:

O sword, O sword, be sharp and enraged.

That you might slaughter victims, be sharp, that you might become aflashing, prepared for undoing.

Slaughter; annihilate; expel every tree.

And he gave it, ready for his hand to grasp; a sword was sharpened; it is ready to give into a slayer’s hand.

Shriek, and wail, son of man, because it came to be among my people; it is among all the leaders of Israel; they shall sojourn upon a sword; it came to be among my people; therefore, clap upon your hand.

For it has been deemed just, and why, even if a tribe has been rejected? It shall not be, says the Lord.

And as for you, son of man, prophesy, and clap hand upon hand.

And double a sword; the third sword for casualties is the great sword for casualties.

And it shall confound them, that the heart might be broken and the weak be multiplied upon every gate.

They have been given over as victims of the sword.

Good! It has come for slaying.

Good! It has come for flashing.

But I too will clap my hand against my hand and will let loose my wrath; I, the Lord, have spoken.

And a word of the Lord came to me, saying:

And you, son of man, lay out for yourself two ways so that a sword of the king of Babylon might enter; the two will issue from one country, and a hand is at the beginning of the way of the city. (20)From the beginning of the way you shall lay it out so that a sword might come against Rab-bath of the sons of Ammon and against Judea and against Jerusalem in its midst. For the king of Babylon shall stand upon the prime way, at the beginning of the two roads to practice divination, to throw up a rod and to consult by carved objects and to inspect livers upon his right. And the oracular response came against Jerusalem, to throw up a palisade, to open wide a mouth in a shout, to raise up high a voice with a cry, to throw up a palisade against its gates and to put up a ramp and to build batteries of war-engines. And he shall be to them as one divining vain things before them, and he shall be as one recalling injustice to be seized.

24 Therefore, this is what the Lord says: Because you recalled your injustices when your impieties were uncovered, that your sins be seen in all your impieties and in your practices—because you recalled, you shall be captured by means of them.

25 And as for you, profane, lawless leader of Israel, whose day has come, an end in a time of injustice,

this is what the Lord says:

Remove the turban, and put off the crown; this shall not be such.

You abased that which is high and exalted that which is low.

Injustice, injustice, I will make it! (But this shall not be such.) Until he comes to whom it is due, I will also give it over to him.

28 And as for you, son of man, prophesy, and you shall say: This is what the Lord says to the sons of Ammon and to their reproach, and you shall say:

A sword, a sword drawn for victims and drawn for completion.

Rouse yourself that you may flash in your vain vision and in your divining of lies, to give you over onto necks of lawless wounded, whose day has come, an end in a time of injustice.

Turn back, do not lodge in this place in which you were born; in your own land I will judge you, and I will pour out my indignation upon you.

In a fire of my wrath I will breathe upon you and give you into hands of barbarian men as they devise destruction.

You shall be food in the fire; your blood shall be in the midst of the earth.

There will not be any memory of you, for I, the Lord, have spoken.
And a word of the Lord came to me, saying:

And you, son of man, will you judge the city of streams of blood? So declare to it all its lawless acts, and you shall say: This is what the Lord says: Oh city, shedding streams of blood in its midst so that its time might come and producing notions against it so as to defile it; by their streams of blood that you shed you have transgressed, and by your notions that you kept producing you were defiling yourself, and you brought your days near and brought a time of your proceedings, and by your notions that you kept producing you were defiling yourself, and you brought your days near and brought a time of your years. Therefore, I have given you as a disgrace to the nations and for mockery to all the countries that come near to you and to those that are far from you, and they shall mock you: Your fame is unclean and great in lawless acts.

Behold, the leaders of the house of Israel, each with his kindred—they wallowed together in you so that they shed blood; they were reviling father and mother in you and dealing unjustly with the guest in you; they were oppressing orphan and widow in you, and they were despising my holy things and were profaning my sabbaths in you. Men were robbers in you so that they shed blood, and upon the mountains in you they ate; they were committing unholy acts in your midst. They uncovered a father’s shame in you and were abasing a woman sitting apart in uncleanness in you. Each one with his neighbor’s wife—they would act lawlessly, and each would defile his bride in impiety, and each one his sister, a daughter of his father—they would abuse in you. In you, they would take bribes in order to shed blood; they would take interest and excess in you, and you completed a completion of your evil by oppression, and they forgot me says the Lord.

If I will bring my hand upon my hand over what you have completed, that which you have done, and over your streams of blood that have come about in your midst, shall your heart endure? Shall your hands be strong in the days that I will act against you? I, the Lord, have spoken, and I will do it. And I will scatter you among the nations and disperse you in the countries, and your uncleanness shall depart from you. And I will receive my heritage in you before the eyes of the nations and for mockery to all the countries that come near to you and to those that are far from you, and they shall mock you: Your fame is unclean and great in lawless acts.

Son of man, behold, the house of Israel have all become to me mixed up with bronze and iron and tin and lead; in the midst of silver it is mixed up. Therefore, say: This is what the Lord says: Because you have become as one mixture, therefore, behold, I take you into the middle of Jerusalem. Just as silver and bronze and iron and tin and lead are taken into the middle of a furnace to blow fire into it to be melted, so I will take you in with my rage and gather and melt you, and I will blow upon you with the fire of my wrath, and you shall be melted in the midst of it. As silver is melted in the midst of a furnace, so you shall be melted in its midst, and you shall recognize that I, the Lord, poured out my wrath upon you.

Son of man, say to it: You are a land that is not rained upon, nor did rain come upon you in a day of indignation, whose leaders in its midst are like roaring lions catching prey, devouring souls with dominance, taking honors, and your widows have been multiplied in your midst. And its priests nullified my law and were profaning my holy things; they were making no distinction between holy and profane, and they were hiding their eyes from my sabbaths, and I was being profaned in their midst. Its rulers in its midst were like wolves catching prey to shed blood so that they gain through greed. And its prophets, while smearing them, shall fall, while they behold idle things, giving lying divination, saying, “This is what the Lord says,” and the Lord has not spoken, while they oppress the people of the land in injustice and committing robberies, oppressing poor and needy, and did not deal with judgment toward the guest. And I was seeking from them a man who behaved rightly and stood in front of me entirely in the time of the land so as not to wipe it out completely, and I did not find him. And I poured out my ire upon it with the fire of my wrath to complete it; I have given their ways upon their heads, says the Lord.

Son of man, two woman were daughters of one mother, and they played the whore in Egypt in their youth; there their breasts fell; there they lost their virginity. And their names were Oola the elder and Ooliba her sister. And they became mine and bore sons and daughters. As for their names: Oola was Samaria, and Ooliba was Jerusalem.

And Oola played the whore away from me and laid herself upon her lovers, upon the Assyrians who were coming near to her clothed in blue, governors and commanders. They were all elite young men, horsemen riding upon horses. And she granted her whoring to them; they were all the chosen sons of Assyrians, and she was defiling herself upon all, upon whom she laid herself, with all her notions. And she did not give up her whoring from Egypt, for they were lying with her in her youth, and they took her virginity and poured out their whoring upon her. Therefore, I gave her over into the hands of her lovers, into hands of the sons of Assyrians upon whom she was laying herself. They uncovered her shame; they took her sons and daughters and killed her by sword, and she became prattle for women, and they executed judgment against her upon her daughters.

And her sister, Ooliba, saw and was corrupting her aggression beyond her and her whoring beyond the whoring of her sister. She applied herself to the sons of Assyrians, governors and commanders near her, wearing fine purple, horsemen riding upon horses. They were all elite young men. 13 And I saw that she had been defiled, one way for the two. 14 And she added to her whoring, and she saw men painted upon the wall, images of the Chaldeans, painted by brush, adorned with brocades upon their loins and dyed tiaras on their heads; all had a triple aspect, a likeness of sons of Chaldeans of their native land. 16 And she applied herself to them in the vision of her eyes and sent out messengers to them into the land of the Chaldeans. 17 And the sons of Babylon came to her for a bed of lodgers, and they were defiling her in her whoring, and she was defiled with them, and her soul recoiled from them. 18 And she uncovered her whoring, and she was defiled with them, and their privates were privates of horses. 21 And I saw that she had been defiled, one way for the two. 22 Therefore, O Ooliba, this is what the Lord says: Behold, I am rousing your lovers against you, those from whom your soul recoiled, and I will bring them against you from all around, 23 sons of Babylon and all the Chaldeans, Phakoud and Soue and Koue and all the sons of Assyrians with them, elite young men, all leaders and commanders, triples and famed riders upon horses. 24 All shall come against you from the north, chariots and wheelworks with a throng of people, oblong and small shields, and they shall cast a guard upon you all around. 25 And I will give judgment in front of them, and they shall judge you with their judgment. And I will give my jealousy against you, and they shall deal with you in hatred of humans, when they would come out of the wilderness—they would also give bracelets upon their arms and a crown of boasting upon their heads.

24 And a word of the Lord came to me in the ninth year, in the tenth month, on the tenth of the month, saying: 2Son of man, write for yourself for a day from this day, from which the king of Babylon leaned on Jerusalem, from this very day. 3And speak an illustration to the embittering house, and you shall say to them: This is what the Lord says: Set on the cauldron, and pour water into it, and throw in it pieces cut in two, every good piece cut in two, leg and shoulder, flesh cleaned from the bones taken from choice cattle, and burn the bones underneath them. It boiled; it boiled, and her bones were kindled in her midst.

6 Therefore, this is what the Lord says: Oh city of shed blood, a cauldron wherein there is rust, and the rust did not leave her. She brought forth from her piece by piece; no lot has fallen upon her, for her blood is in her midst; I have arranged it upon a bare rock; I have not poured it out on the ground, that the earth might cover it, that wrath might ascend for vengeance to be avenged; I have given her blood upon a bare rock in order not to cover it.

9Therefore, this is what the Lord says: And I shall magnify the firebrand. And I will multiply the wood and stoke the fire so that the meat may dissolve and the broth be lessened and it stand upon the coals so that it be set on fire and her copper be made hot and melt in the midst of her uncleanness, and her rust be gone, and much of her rust may not come out of her, and her rust shall be completely shamed, because you were defiling yourself. And what if you are no longer cleansed until I will sate my fury?

14I, the Lord have spoken, and it shall come, and I will act; I will not distinguish, nor will I show mercy; according to your ways and according to your notions I will judge you, says the Lord. Therefore, I will judge you according to your spilled blood, and I will judge you according to your notions, you "the unclean one," "the notorious one and abundant in embittering."

15And a word of the Lord came to me, saying: Son of man, behold, I am taking from you the desires of your eyes in battle; you shall not mourn nor weep. It is a groan of blood, of a loin, of mourning; your hair shall not be plaited upon you, or your sandals on your feet; you shall not be consoled by their lips, and you shall not eat the bread of men. And I spoke to the people in the morning as he commanded me in the evening, and I did in the morning as I was ordered. 19And the people said to me, "Shall you not proclaim to us what these things are that you are doing?" And I said to them: A word of the Lord came to me, saying: Say to the house of Israel, This is what the Lord says: Behold, I will profane my holy things, the wantonness of your power, the desires of your eyes, and over which your souls are concerned. And your sons and your daughters whom you left behind shall fall by the sword. And you shall do as I have done; from their mouth you shall not be consoled, and you shall not eat the bread of men, and your hair shall be on your head, and your sandals on your feet; you shall neither mourn nor weep and break down in your injustices, and you shall console, each his brother. And Iezekiel shall be to you for a sign; according to everything, whatever he has done, you shall do, when these things come, and you shall recognize that I am the Lord.

25And you, son of man, in the day when I take their strength from them, the swelling of their boast, the desires of their eyes and the swelling of their soul, their sons and their daughters—surely in that day he who has escaped shall not come to you to report to you, to your ears? In that day your mouth shall be opened wide to the one who has escaped, and you shall speak and be mute no longer, and you shall be to them for a sign, and they shall recognize that I am the Lord.

26Son of man, set your face against the sons of Ammon, and prophesy against them. And you shall say to the sons of Ammon, Hear a word of the Lord: This is what the Lord says: Because you exulted over my holy things that they were profaned and over the land of Israel that it was annihilated and over the house of Lousadas that it went into captivity, therefore, behold, I am giving you over to the sons of Kedem as a portion, and they shall encamp with their equipment among you, and they shall give their coverts in you; they shall eat your fruits, and they shall drink your drinks. And I will give the city of Ammon as pastures for camels and the sons of Ammon as a pasture for sheep, and you shall recognize that I am the Lord. For this is what the Lord says: Because you clapped your hand and stamped with your foot and rejoiced from your soul over the land of Israel, therefore, I will stretch out my hand against you and give you for plundering among the nations, and I will utterly destroy you from the peoples and destroy you from the countries with destruction, and you shall recognize that I am the Lord.

8 This is what the Lord says: Because Moab said, "Behold, the house of Israel and Lousadas is like all the nations," therefore, behold, from the cities

*a.e. Jerusalem(s)  b.I.e. the blood  c.I.e. the broth of his extremities I will loose the shoulder of Moab, an excellent land, a house of Asimouth above the fount of the city by the sea. 10I will give them along with the sons of Ammon to the sons of Kedem as a portion so that there be no memory of the sons of Ammon. 11And I will take retribution against Moab, and they shall recognize that I am the Lord. 12 This is what the Lord says: Because of what Idumea did when they retaliated against the house of Ioudas with retaliation and they bore a grudge and retaliated with judgment, 13therefore, this is what the Lord says, So I will stretch out my hand against Idumea and utterly destroy from it human being and cattle and will make it a wilderness, and those pursued from Thaiman shall fall by the sword, 14and I will give my vengeance against Idumea by the hand of my people, Israel, and they shall act against Idumea according to my rage and according to my wrath, and they shall recognize my vengeance, says the Lord. 15 Therefore, this is what the Lord says: Because the allophyles acted in vengeance and raised up vengeance while rejoicing from their soul so as to wipe it out forever, 16therefore, this is what the Lord says, Behold, I myself will stretch out my hand against the allophyles and utterly destroy Cretans and destroy the survivors living on the seacoast, 17and I will execute great acts of judgment against them, and they shall recognize that I am the Lord, when I give my judgment against them. 26 And it happened in the eleventh year, on the first of the month, a word of the Lord came to me, saying: 2Son of man, because Sor said concerning Jerusalem, “Good! It was shattered; the nations have perished; she has turned toward me; she that was full has become desolate”; 3therefore, this is what the Lord says: Behold, I am against you, O Sor, and I will bring up against you many nations, as the sea comes up with its waves. 4 And they shall overthrow the walls of Sor and cast down your towers, and I will winnow its soil from it and render it as a bare rock, and it shall be a drying-place for dragnets in the midst of the sea, for I have spoken, says the Lord. And it shall become plunder for the nations. 6 And its daughters in the plain shall be killed by dagger. And they shall know that I am the Lord. 7 For this is what the Lord says: O Sor, behold, I am bringing against you Nabouchodonosor, king of Babylon, from the north—he is king of kings— together with horses and chariots and riders and a gathering of very many nations. 8 By dagger he shall kill your daughters on the plain and give an outpost against you. And he shall build around you and make a palisade and an encirclement of troops against you all around, and his spears he shall give opposite you. 9 He shall drop your walls and your towers with his daggers. From the number of his horses—their dust shall cover over you. And your walls shall be shaken from the sound of his riders and the wheelworks of his chariots, when he enters your gates as one enters a city from a plain. They shall trample all your streets with the hoofs of his horses. He shall kill your people by dagger and bring down the foundation of your power onto the ground. 12 And he shall plunder your force and seize your belongings and cast down your walls and demolish your desired houses. And he shall cast your stones and wood and soil into the midst of the sea. 13 And he shall disband the multitude of your musicians, and the voice of your harps shall be heard no longer. 14 And I will give you as a bare rock; you shall be a drying-place for dragnets. You shall never again be built, for I have spoken, says the Lord. 15 For this is what the Lord says to Sor: Shall not the islands be shaken from the voice of your fall, when a wounded groans when a dagger is drawn in your midst? 16And all the rulers from the nations of the sea shall step down from their thrones and remove the headdresses from their heads and take off their embroidered apparel; they shall become amazed with amazement, they shall sit on the ground and be frightened for their destruction and become sullen over you. 17And they shall take up for themselves a lament over you and say: How have you been dismissed from the sea, you laudable city that imposed terror of itself on all its inhabitants? 18 And the islands shall be frightened from the day of your fall. 19 For this is what the Lord says: When I render you as a desolate city, like the cities that are not inhabited, when I bring up the abyss against you, abundant water shall also cover you, 20and I will force you down to those who descend into a hole, to a people of long ago, and I will make you live in the depths of the earth as an everlasting wilderness with those who descend into a hole so that you

aI.e. the sons of Moab shall not be inhabited nor rise upon a land of life.

21 And I will give you into destruction, and you shall no more exist forever, says the Lord.

27 And a word of the Lord came to me, saying:

2 Son of man, take up a lament over Sor,

3 and you shall say to Sor, which lives at the entrance to the sea, to the trading-station of the peoples from many islands: This is what the Lord says to Sor:

You have said,

“I wrapped myself with my beauty.”

4 In the heart of the sea of Gobelin, your sons wrapped you with beauty.

5 A cedar from Sanir was built for you, fillets of timber of cypress were taken from Lebanon

6 to make fir-tree masts for you.

7 They made your oars from Basanitis;

they made your holy things from ivory,

woodland houses from the islands of the Chettin.

7 Fine linen with embroidery from Egypt became your bedding so as to wrap you with glory and to clothe you with blue and purple from the islands of Elisai, and they became your covering.

8 And your rulers, those who inhabited Sidon, and Aradians became your rowers; your skilled ones, O Sor, were among you; these were your pilots.

9 The elders of the Byblians and their wise ones were within you, and they were strengthening your counsel, and all the ships of the sea and their rowers became yours unto the west of the west.

10 Persians and Lydians and Libyans were in your force; your warrior men hung up small, light shields and helmets in you; these furnished your glory.

11 Sons of Aradians and your force were guards on your walls, in your towers. They hung up their quivers on your places of anchorage all around; they made perfect your beauty.

12 Carthaginians, your dealers from all the abundance of your strength, gave your market silver and gold and iron and tin and lead. Greece and its entirety and its neighboring regions—they were trafficking in human souls for you and gave bronze vessels as your merchandise. From a house of Thegrama, horses and riders supplied your market. Sons of the Rhodians, merchants from islands, multiplied your commerce in ivory tusks, and for the imports you would exchange your wages, human beings as your commerce from an abundance of your sundries: oil of myrrh and brocades from Tharsis and Ramoth and Chorchor supplied your market; Ioudas and the sons of Israel—these are your merchants in sale of grain and myrrh and cassia, and they gave first honey and oil and resin into your sundries. Damascus is your merchant, as a result the abundance of all your might. Wine was from Chelbon and wool from Miletus, and they supplied wine to your market; from Asel, wrought iron and casting are among your sundries; Dedan are your merchants with choice beasts for chariots; Arabia and all the rulers of Kedar—these are your merchants through your hand: camels and rams and lambs in which they do business with you. Merchants of Saba and Ragma—these are your merchants in first fragrances and fine stones, and they supplied your market gold; Charran and Channa—these are your merchants; Assour and Charran are your merchants bearing commerce in blue and choice treasures bound with cords and cypress wood ships. In them are Carthaginians as your merchants, in abundance, among your sundries, and you were filled up, and you were greatly weighed down in the heart of the sea.

26 Your rowers would lead you in much water; the wind of the south wrecked you in the heart of the sea.

27 They were your powers and your wage even of your sundries.

And your rowers and your pilots and your advisers and your sundries from your sundries and all your men, your warriors that are in you and all your gathering in your midst—they shall fall in the heart of the sea in the day of your fall.

28 At the voice of your cry, your pilots shall fear with fear, and all the rowers and passengers and bow-officers of the sea shall debark from the ships and stand on the ground, and they shall howl loudly over you with their voice and cry bitterly. And they shall put earth upon their head and shall make a bed of ashes.

30 And their sons shall take up a lament over you and a lamentation for Sor:

33 “How great a wage have you found from the sea? You satisfied nations from your abundance and from your sundries; you enriched all kings of the earth. Now, you have been shattered in the sea, in a depth of water; your sundries and all your gathering, all your rowers, fell in your midst.

35 All the inhabitants of the islands became sullen over you, and their kings became astounded with astonishment, and their face cried tears.

36 Merchants from nations hissed at you; you have become destruction, and you shall no more exist forever."

28 And a word of the Lord came to me, saying: And you, son of man, say to the ruler of Tyre, This is what the Lord says: Because your heart was exalted and you said, "I am a god; I have inhabited a habitation of a god in the heart of the sea," yet you are human and not a god, and you rendered your heart as a god's heart.

3 Surely, you are not wiser than Daniel? Or did wise ones not discipline you with their knowledge?

4 Surely, by your knowledge and by your prudence you did not make for yourself power, both gold and silver in your treasuries?

5 Or by your great knowledge and commerce did you multiply your power? Was your heart exalted by your power?

6 Therefore, this is what the Lord says: Since you have rendered your heart as a god's heart, therefore, behold, I am bringing against you foreign pests from the nations, and they shall unsheathe their daggers against you and against the beauty of your knowledge and wound your beauty unto destruction.

8 And they shall bring you down, and you shall die by the death of the wounded in the heart of the sea.

9 When you speak, will you actually say, "I am a god," before those that are killing you? But you are a human and not a god.

10 By a multitude of the uncircumcised you shall perish, by the hands of foreigners, for I have spoken, says the Lord.

11 And a word of the Lord came to me, saying: Son of man, take up a lament over the ruler of Tyre, and say to him, This is what the Lord says: You were a signet in likeness and a crown of beauty.

12 In the delight of the orchard of God you were born; you have bound on every fine stone, carnelian and topaz and emerald and carbuncle and lapis lazuli and jasper and silver and gold and ligyrion and agate and amethyst and chrysolite and yellow topaz and beryl and onyx.

13 In the delight of the orchard of God you were born; you have bound on every fine stone, carnelian and topaz and emerald and carbuncle and lapis lazuli and jasper and silver and gold and ligyrion and agate and amethyst and chrysolite and beryl and onyx.

14 And you filled with gold your treasuries and your storerooms among you.

15 From the day you were created, I placed you with the cheroub in a holy, divine mountain; you were born in the midst of fiery stones.

16 You were born blameless in your days from the day you were created until acts of iniquity were found in you.

17 From the abundance of your commerce you filled your storehouses with lawlessness, and you sinned and were wounded from God's mountain, and the cheroub drove you from the midst of the fiery stones.

18 Your heart was exalted because of your beauty, and your knowledge was corrupted by your beauty. Because of the multitude of your sins, I threw you on the ground; before kings I gave you to be made an example.

19 And all who understand you among the nations shall become sullen over you; you became destruction, and you shall exist no more forever.

20 And a word of the Lord came to me, saying: Son of man, set your face against Sidon, and prophesy against it, and say, This is what the Lord says: Behold, I am against you, O Sidon, and I will be glorified in you, and you shall know that I am the Lord, when I execute judgments against you, and I will be hallowed in you.

21 Blood and death shall be in your streets, and those who have been wounded by daggers shall fall in you all around you. And they shall know that I am the Lord.

22 Son of man, set your face against Sidon, and prophesy against it, and say, This is what the Lord says: Behold, I am against you, O Sidon, and I will be glorified in you, and you shall know that I am the Lord, when I execute judgments against you, and I will be hallowed in you.

23 And the house of Israel shall no longer have a thorn of bitterness or a prick of pain from those all around them, who dishonor them, and they shall know that I am the Lord.

24 This is what the Lord says: And I will gather Israel from the nations, there where they were scattered, and I will be hallowed among them before the peoples and the nations. And they shall live upon their land, which I have given to my slave, Jakob, and they shall live upon it in hope and shall build houses and plant vineyards and live in hope, when I execute judgment among all who dishonor them among those around them, and they shall know that I am the Lord, their God, and the God of their fathers.

29 In the tenth year, in the tenth month, on the first of the month, a word of the Lord came to me, saying: 2Son of man, set your face against Pharao, king of Egypt, and prophesy against him and against all Egypt, 3and say, This is what the Lord says: Behold, I am against Pharao, the great dragon who is ensconced in the midst of his streams and the one who says, “The streams are mine, and I made them.”

4 And I will give snares into your jaws and glue the fish of your stream to your fins. And I will bring up you and all the fish of your stream from the midst of your stream.

5 And I will fling you and all the fish of your stream down with speed; upon the surface of the plain you shall fall, and you shall not be gathered and shall not be interred. I have given you to the animals of the earth and to the birds of the air for food.

6 And all who inhabit Egypt shall know that I am the Lord, because you became a rod of reed for the house of Israel.

7 When they seized you with their hands, you were crushed, and when every hand prevailed over them and when they rested upon you, you were shattered, and you broke every loin of theirs.

8 Therefore, this is what the Lord says: Behold, I am bringing against you a sword, and I will destroy human beings and cattle from you, 9and the land of Egypt shall be destruction and a wilderness, and they shall know that I am the Lord, instead of your saying, “The streams are mine, and I made them.”

10 Therefore, behold, I am against you and against all your streams, and I will give the land of Egypt into a wilderness and a sword and destruction from Magdolos and Syene and as far as the borders of the Ethiopians. 11And no human foot shall pass through it, and no cattle hoof shall pass through it, and it shall not be inhabited for forty years. 12And I will give its land as a destruction in the midst of a desolated land, and its cities shall be in the midst of desolated cities for forty years, and I will scatter Egypt among the nations and winnow them into the countries.

13 This is what the Lord says: After forty years, I will gather Egyptians from the nations, there where they were scattered, 14and I will turn back the captivity of the Egyptians and settle them in a land of Pathoures in the land, there from where they were taken, and it shall be a lowly principality compared to all principalities, and it will never again be exalted over the nations, and I will make them least so that they might not be rather numerous among the nations. 16And the house of Israel shall no longer have them for a hope that recalls lawlessness, when they follow after them, and they shall know that I am the Lord.

17 And it happened in the twenty-seventh year, on the first of the first month, a word of the Lord came to me, saying: 18Son of man, Nabouchodonosor, king of Babylon, treated his force as slaves with great slavery against Tyre. Every head was bald, and every shoulder hairless, and no wage accrued to him and to his force against Tyre even in return for the slavery with which they slaved against it. 19This is what the Lord says: Behold, I am giving to Nabouchodonosor, king of Babylon, the land of Egypt, and he shall foray for its booty and seize its spoils, and there shall be a wage for his force. 20In return for his ministry, which he slaved against Tyre, I have given him the land of Egypt. This is what the Lord says: 21In that day a horn shall sprout up for all the house of Israel, and I will give to you an open mouth in their midst, and they shall know that I am the Lord.

30 And a word of the Lord came to me, saying: 2Son of man, prophesy, and say, This is what the Lord says: Ah, ah the day, 3for the day of the Lord is near; a day shall be an end of nations. 4And a dagger shall come upon the Egyptians, and there shall be tumult in Ethiopia, and those who have been wounded shall fall in Egypt, and its foundations shall collapse. 5Persians and Cretans and Lydians and Libyans and all those mixed in and some of the sons of my covenant shall fall in it a by dagger.

6 And the supports of Egypt shall fall, and the insolence of its power shall come down from Magdolos to Syene; they shall fall in it a by dagger, says the Lord.

7 And it shall be made desolate in the midst of desolated countries, and their cities shall be in the midst of desolate cities.

8 And they shall know that I am the Lord, when I give fire upon Egypt and all those who help it are shattered.

9 In that day, messengers shall go out rushing to annihilate Ethiopia, and there shall be tumult aI.e. Egypt

among them in the day of Egypt, for behold, it has come.

10 This is what the Lord says: And I will destroy a mass of Egyptians by the hand of Nabouchodonosor, king of Babylon, of him and of his people; pests they are, dispatched from nations to destroy the land, and all shall unsheathe their daggers against Egypt, and the land shall be filled with wounded.

11 And I will render their streams desolate and destroy the land and its fullness by the hands of foreigners; I, the Lord have spoken,

12 And I will execute judgment in Egypt, and they shall know that I am the Lord. And I will scatter Egypt into the nations and winnow them into the countries, and all shall know that I am the Lord.

31 And it happened in the eleventh year, in the third month, on the first of the month, a word of the Lord came to me, saying: Son of man, say to Pharao, king of Egypt, and to his mass: To whom did you liken yourself in your height?

3 Behold, Assour is a cypress in Lebanon; beautiful in limbs he is and high in size; his top came to be into the midst of clouds.

4 Water nourished him; the abyss raised him high; it led its rivers around his plants, and it sent out its systems to all the trees of the plain.

5 On this account, his size was exalted above all the trees of the plain, and his branches were multiplied from abundant water.

6 All the birds of the air nested in his limbs, and underneath his branches all the animals of the plain gave birth; in his shade all the multitude of nations lived.

7 And he became beautiful in his height, because of the multitude of his branches, because his roots came into abundant water.

8 Such cypresses do not exist in the orchard of God, and pine trees were not like his limbs, and silver firs were not like his branches; no tree in the orchard of God resembled him in his beauty

9 on account of the abundance of his branches. The trees in the orchard of God’s delight were jealous of him.

10 Therefore, this is what the Lord says: On account of the fact that you became great in size and you gave your top into the midst of clouds, I also looked after he was exalted, and I gave him over into the hands of a ruler of nations, and he accomplished his destruction. And foreign pests from nations destroyed him utterly and flung him down upon the mountains; in all the ravines his branches fell, and his trunks were shattered in every plain of the earth, and all the peoples of the nations came down from their shelter and beat him flat.

13 All the birds of the air rested upon his fall, and all the animals of the field came to be upon his trunks, that all the trees in the water might not be exalted in their size, and they did not give aI.e. Nabouchodonosor  bOr it  cPossibly what  dI.e. the abyss  ePossibly seedlings their top into the midst of the clouds, and all those who would drink water did not approach them in their height.

All were handed over to death into the depth of the earth, in the midst of sons of humans, to people who descend into a hole.

15 This is what the Lord says: In the day he descended into Hades, the abyss lamented him, and I halted its rivers and blocked an abundance of water, and Lebanon grew dark over him; all the trees of the plain fainted because of him. 16 From the sound of his fall, the nations were shaken, when I was bringing him down into Hades with those who descend into a hole. And all the trees of delight even the choice ones of Lebanon, all that drink water, were consoling him on eartha. 17 For they descended into Hades with him among those wounded by dagger, and his offspring, those who lived under his shelter, perished in the middle of their life.

18 To whomb were you likened? Descend, and be brought down with the trees of delight into the depth of the earth; in the midst of the uncircumcised you shall lie among those wounded by dagger. This is Pharao and all the multitude of his strength, says the Lord.

32 And it happened in the eleventh year, in the twelfth month, on the first of the month, a word of the Lord came to me, saying:

2 Son of man, take up a lament over Pharao, king of Egypt, and you shall say to him:

You were likened to a lion of nations, and you were like a dragon that is in the sea,
and you were raising a horn against your streams and were troubling water with your feet and trampling down your streams.

3 This is what the Lord says:
And I will wrap you with nets of many peoples and haul you up by my hook.

4 And I will stretch you out upon the ground; plains shall be filled with you.
And I will settle upon you all the birds of the air and satisfy all the animals of the earth.

5 And I will give your flesh upon the mountains and fill all the earth from your blood.

6 And the earth shall be given to drink from your excrement, from your mass upon the mountains;
I will fill ravines with you.

7 And I will cover over heaven after you are extinguished and make its stars dark;
I will cover the sun with a cloud,
and the moon shall not show its light.

8 All that shine light in the sky shall grow dark over you, and I will give darkness against your land, says the Lord.

9 And I will provoke the heart of many peoples, when I take your captivity into the nations,
into a land that you did not know.

10 And many nations shall become sullen over you,
and their kings shall be amazed with amazement
when my sword flies in their face, as they accept their fall after the day of your fall.

For this is what the Lord says:
A sword of the king of Babylon shall come to you with daggers of giants.

And I will throw down your strength;
all are pests from nations,
and they shall destroy the insolence of Egypt,
and all its strength shall be shattered.

And I will destroy all its cattle from abundant water,
and no human foot shall trouble itd any longer,
and no cattle print shall trample itd.

So then their waters shall be quiet,
and their streams shall run like oil, says the Lord.

15 When I give Egypt into destruction and the land is made desolate together with its plenty,
when I disperse all the inhabitants in it,
then they shall know that I am the Lord.

16 A lament it is, and you shall elament ite,
and the daughters of the nations shall elament ite.

Over Egypt and over all its strength, they shall elament ite,
says the Lord.

17 And it happened in the twelfth year, in the first month, on the fifteenth of the month, a word of the Lord came to me, saying:

18 Son of man, bewail the strength of Egypt, and the nations shall bring down its daughters dead into the depth of the earth to those who descend into a hole.

20 In the midst of those wounded by daggers, they shall fall down with himf, and all hisg strength shall lie down. 21 And the giants in the depth of the hole shall say to you, “You are greater than whom? Descend, and lie with the uncircumcised in the midst of those wounded by dagger.”

22 Assour is there, and all his gathering; all the wounded were given there, and their burial is in a depth of a hole, and his gathering came to be all

And you, son of man, I have given you as a sentinel to the house of Israel, and you shall hear a word from my mouth. 8When I say to the sinner, “By death you shall be put to death,” and should you not speak so that the impious might take heed from his way, the lawless one himself shall die by his lawlessness, but his blood I will seek from your hand. 9But you, if you announce to the impious his way, to turn back from it, and he does not turn back from his way, he shall die by his lawlessness, and you have delivered your own soul.

10Now you, son of man, say to the house of Israel, Thus you spoke, saying, “Our errors and lawless acts are with us, and in them we waste away. And how will we live?” 11Say to them, I live, says the Lord; I do not wish the death of the impious, rather that the impious turn back from his way and he live. Turn back from your way by turning back, and why are you dying, O house of Israel? 12Say to the sons of your people, The righteousness of the righteous shall not deliver him in whatever day he err, and the lawlessness of the impious shall not harm him on whatever day he turn back from his lawlessness, and the righteous shall not be able to be saved. 13When I say to the righteous, “He trusts in his righteousness,” and should he commit lawlessness, none of his righteous acts shall be recalled in his injustice that he has committed; in it he shall die. 14And when I say to the impious, “By death you shall be put to death, and you shall turn back from your sin,” and should he perform judgment and righteousness, he shall also lie down in the midst of the uncircumcised, with those who have been wounded by dagger.

29And you shall lie in the midst of the uncircumcised and their lawless acts came to be upon their arms and placed their daggers under their heads, long ago, who descended into Hades by military and those who descend uncircumcised into the depth of the earth, who gave their fear upon the land of life, and their lawless acts came to be upon their bones, because they terrified giants in the land of life. 28And you shall lie in the midst of the uncircumcised, with those who have been wounded by dagger.

And I will render the land a wilderness, and the insolence of its strength shall perish, and the mountains of Israel shall be made desolate so as not to be passed through. And they shall know that I am the Lord, and I will make their land a wilderness, and it shall be made desolate because of all their abominations that they committed.

And as for you, son of man, the sons of your people who speak about you by the walls and in the gateways of their dwellings, and they speak, a person to his brother, saying, “Let us go together and hear what comes from the Lord,” they also come to you, as a people comes together, and they sit before you and hear your words, and they shall not do them, because a lie is in their mouth, and their heart is after defilements. And you shall be to them as a tone of a sweet, harmonious harp, and they shall hear your words, and they shall not do them. And whenever it comes, they shall say, “Behold, it has come,” and they shall know that a prophet was in their midst.

And a word of the Lord came to me, saying:

Son of man, prophesy against the shepherds of Israel; prophesy, and say to the shepherds, This is what the Lord says: Oh, you shepherds of Israel, do shepherds feed themselves? Do not shepherds feed the flocks? Behold, you devour the fatlings, but you do not feed my sheep. You did not strengthen the weakened and did not build up the unwell and did not bind up the crushed, and did not turn about the one that strayed and did not seek the lost, and you subdued the strong with hardship. And my sheep were scattered because there were no shepherds, and they were as food for all the animals of the field.

And my sheep were scattered on every mountain and upon every lofty hill, and they were scattered upon the surface of every land, and there was not one who searched for them nor one who turned them back.

Therefore, shepherds, hear a word of the Lord: I live, says the Lord, surely because my sheep were for plunder and my sheep were as food for all the animals of the plain, because there were no shepherds and the shepherds did not search for my sheep and the shepherds fed themselves but did not feed my sheep—because of this, you shepherds, this is what the Lord says: Behold, I am against the shepherds, and I will search for my sheep from their hands and turn them back so as not to shepherd my sheep, and the shepherds shall no longer feed them, and I will deliver my sheep from their mouth and they shall no longer be for them as food.

For this is what the Lord says: Behold, I will search for my sheep and watch over them. Just as the shepherd seeks his flock by day, when there is thick darkness and cloud in the midst of the separated sheep, so will I seek out my sheep and drive them away from every place, there where they were scattered in a day of cloud and thick darkness. And I will bring them out from the nations and gather them from the countries and will bring them into their land, and I will feed them upon the mountains of Israel and in the ravines and in every habitation of the land. I will feed them in a good pasture; their folds shall be on the lofty mountain of Israel; there also they shall lie down, and there they shall rest in fine luxury, and they shall be fed in a rich pasture on the mountains of Israel.

It is I who will feed my sheep, and it is I who will give them rest, and they shall know that I am the Lord. This is what the Lord says: I will seek the lost, and I will turn about the one that strayed, and I will bind up the crushed, and I will strengthen the abandoned, and I will watch the strong, and I will feed them with judgment.

And you, O sheep, this is what the Lord says: Behold, I am deciding between sheep and ram, and between rams and goats. And was it not enough for you that you were feeding in a beautiful pasture, and you were treading with your feet the rest of the pasture? And you were drinking the calm water, and you were troubling the rest with your feet? And my sheep were feeding upon the troettings of your feet and were drinking the water troubled by your feet.

Therefore, this is what the Lord says: Behold, it is I who am deciding between a strong sheep and between a feeble sheep. Since you pushed through with your sides and shoulders and were butting with your horns and were afflicting every abandoned one, I will also save my sheep, and they shall no longer be as plunder, and I will judge between ram against ram.

And I will raise up over them another shepherd, and he shall shepherd them, my slave Daudid, and he shall be their shepherd, and I, the Lord, will be a god for them, and Daudid shall be ruler in their midst; I, the Lord, have spoken.

And I will make with Daudid a covenant of peace, and I will annihilate harmful animals from the land, and they shall live in the wilderness and sleep in the forests. And I will give them all around my mountain, and I will give rain to you, a rain of blessing. And the trees in the plain shall yield their fruit, and the land shall yield its strength, and they shall live upon their land in hope of peace, and they shall know that I am the Lord, when I shatter their yoke, and I will deliver them from the hand of those who enslaved them. And they shall no longer be for plunder for the nations, and the animals of the land shall no longer eat them, and they shall live in hope, and there shall be no one who terrifies them. And I will raise up for them a plant of peace, and I will give them rest, and they shall know that I am the Lord, their God, and they are my people, the house of Israel, says the Lord.

And a word of the Lord came to me, saying:

2 Son of man, turn your face against Mount Seir, and prophesy against it, 3 and say to it, This is what the Lord says:

Behold, I am against you, Mount Seir, and will stretch out my hand against you and render you a wilderness, and you shall be made desolate.

4 And I will make a solitude in your cities, and you shall be a wilderness, and you shall know that I am the Lord.

5 Because you had everlasting enmity, you also took your seat against the house of Israel in treachery by the hand of enemies, by dagger in a time of injustice to the uttermost; 6 therefore, I live, says the Lord, surely unto blood you sinned, and blood shall pursue you. 7 And I will render Mount Seir into a wilderness and as desolate, and I will destroy human beings and cattle from it, and I will fill your hills and your ravines with wounded, and in all your plains wounded by dagger shall fall in you. 9 I will make you as an everlasting solitude, and your cities shall no longer be inhabited, and you shall know that I am the Lord.

10 Because you said, “The two nations and the two countries shall be mine, and I will take possession of them”—and the Lord is there, 11 therefore, I live, says the Lord, I will also deal with you according to your enmity, and I will be known to you, when I judge you. 12 and you shall know that I am the Lord. I have heard the voice of your blasphemies; for you said, “The mountains of Israel are desolate; they have been given to us for food,” 13 and you talked big against me with your mouth. I heard! 14 This is what the Lord says: In the joy of all the earth, I will make you a wilderness. 15 A wilderness you shall be, Mount Seir, and all Idumea shall be consumed, and you shall know that I, the Lord, am their God.

And you, son of man, prophesy against the mountains of Israel, and say to the mountains of Israel, Hear a word of the Lord. 2 This is what the Lord says: Because the enemy said of you, “Good! Everlasting desert places have become for us a possession,” 3 therefore, prophesy, and say: This is what the Lord says: Because of your being dishonored and your being hated by those around you so that you are as a possession for the remaining nations and you ascended as prattle to the tongue even as an insult for nations, 4 therefore, O mountains of Israel, hear a word of the Lord: This is what the Lord says to the mountains and to the hills and to the ravines and to the wadis and to the devastated and annihilated places and to the abandoned cities, which became as plunder and as a downtrodden place for the nations that were left, all around; 5 therefore, this is what the Lord says: Surely I spoke in the fire of my ardor against the rest of the nations and against all Idumea, for they have given themselves my land as a possession with joy, dishonoring souls so as to annihilate in plunder. 6 Therefore, prophesy against the land of Israel, and say to the mountains and to the hills and to the ravines and to the dells, This is what the Lord says: Behold, I spoke in my jealousy and in my wrath, because you bore the insults of nations. 7 Therefore, I will raise my hand against the nations that are all around you; they shall receive their dishonor.

8 But as for your mountains, O Israel, my people shall devour your grapes and fruit, for they are getting close to coming. 9 For behold, I am for you, and I will look upon you, and you shall be worked and sown. 10 And I will multiply human beings upon you, every house of Israel totally, and the cities shall be inhabited, and the desolate one shall be built. 11 And I will multiply human beings and cattle upon you and settle you as in your beginning, and I will treat you well just as was your former condition, and you shall know that I am the Lord. 12 And I will produce human beings upon you, my people Israel, and they shall take possession of you, and you shall be for them as a possession, and no longer shall you continue to be childless by them.

13 This is what the Lord says: Because they said to you, “You are one who has devoured human beings, and you have become childless by your own nation,” 14 therefore, you shall no longer eat human beings, and you shall no longer deprive your nation of children, says the Lord. 15 And no longer shall the dishonor of nations be heard against you. You shall no longer bear the insults of the peoples, says the Lord.

16 And a word of the Lord came to me, saying: 17 Son of man, the house of Israel lived on their land, and they defiled it with their way and with their idols and with their unclean acts; their way became before me like the uncleanness of a woman sitting apart. 18 And I poured out my wrath upon them, and scattered them into the nations and winnowed them into the countries; in accordance with their way and their sin I judged them. 20 And they came into the nations, there where they entered, and they profaned my holy name when it was said of them, “These are a people of the Lord, and they have gone out of his land.” 21 And I considered them because of my holy name, which the house of Israel profaned among the nations, there where they entered.

22 Therefore, say to the house of Israel, This is what the Lord says: I do not act for you, O house of Israel, but rather on account of my holy name, which you profaned among the nations, there where you entered. 23 And I will sanctify my great name, which was profaned among the nations, which you profaned in their midst, and the nations shall know that I am the Lord, when I am hallowed among you before their eyes. 24 And I will take you from the nations and gather you sheep of my flock, and I, the Lord, am your God, says the Lord.
from all the lands and bring you into your own land. 25 And I will sprinkle clean water upon you, and you shall be cleansed from all your unclean acts and from all your idols, and I will cleanse you. 26 And I will give you a new heart, and a new spirit I will give in you, and I will remove the stone heart from your flesh and give you a heart of flesh.

27 And I will give my spirit in you and will act so that you walk in my statutes and keep my judgments and perform them. 28 And you shall live upon the land that I gave to your fathers, and you shall be for me as a people, and I will be a god for you. 29 And I will save you from all your unclean acts and will summon the grain, 30 and I will multiply it and will not give famine upon you, and I will multiply the fruit of the tree and the produce of the field so that you may not take the reproach of famine among the nations. 31 And you shall remember your wicked ways and your practices that were not good, and you shall be sorely angered in front of them by your lawless acts and by your abominations. 32 Not for you do I act, says the Lord; it shall be known to you; be put to shame, and turn back from your ways, O house of Israel.

33 This is what the Lord says: In the day I will cleanse you from all your lawless acts; I will also settle the cities, and the deserts shall be built, 34 and the annihilated one shall be tilled instead of becoming annihilated before the eyes of every passer-by. 35 And they shall say, "That annihilated land became like a garden of delight, and the cities devastated and annihilated and razed sat firm." 36 And whatever nations are left around you shall know that I, the Lord, built the desolated ones; I, the Lord, have spoken, and I will do it.

37 This is what the Lord says: I will yet be in great demand to the house of Israel to do this for them: I will multiply them, human beings like sheep. 38 Like holy sheep, like the sheep of Jerusalem at her feasts, so the deserted cities shall be full of sheep, of human beings, and they shall know that I am the Lord.

And the hand of the Lord came upon me, and the Lord brought me out in a spirit, and set me in the midst of the plain, and this was full of human bones, 2 and he brought me all around them in a circle, and behold, very many, very dry, upon the surface of the plain. 3 And he said to me, "Son of man, shall these bones live?" And I said, "O Lord, you know these things." 4 And he said to me, Prophesy over these bones, and you shall say to them: O dry bones, hear a word of the Lord. 5 This is what the Lord says to these bones: Behold, I am bringing into you a spirit of life, and I will give sinews on you and bring flesh upon you and draw out skin over you and give my breath into you, and you shall live, and you shall know that I am the Lord.

7 And I prophesied as he commanded me. And it happened, when I prophesied, and behold, a shaking, and he brought forth the bones, each to its joint. 8 And I looked, and behold, sinews and flesh were growing upon them, and skin was coming upon them, on top, but no breath was in them. 9 And he said to me, Prophesy to the breath; prophesy, son of man, and say to the breath, This is what the Lord says: Come from the four winds, and blow into these corpses, and they shall live. 10 And I prophesied just as he commanded me. And the breath came into them, and they lived and stood upon their feet, a very great gathering.

11 And the Lord spoke to me, saying: Son of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel, and they say, "Our bones have become dry; our hope has perished; we are lost." 12 Therefore, prophesy, and say, This is what the Lord says: Behold, I am opening your tombs and will bring you up out of your tombs and bring you into the land of Israel, 13 and you shall know that I am the Lord, when I open your graves so that I might bring my people up out of their graves. 14 And I will give my spirit into you, and you shall live, and I will place you upon your own land, and you shall know that I, the Lord, have spoken, and I will act, says the Lord.

15 And a word of the Lord came to me, saying: 16 Son of man, take for yourself a rod, and write on it, "Ioudas and the sons of Israel who are joined to him," and you shall take for yourself a second rod, and you shall inscribe it "For Joseph," a rod of Ephraim and all the sons of Israel who have been added to him. 17 And you shall join them to each other into one rod for yourself so as to bind them, and they shall be in your hand. 18 And it shall be when the sons of your people shall say to you, "Will you not proclaim to us what is this thing of yours?" 19 then you shall say to them, This is what the Lord says: Behold, I will take the tribe of Joseph (which is through the hand of Ephraim) and the tribes of Israel joined to him, and I will give them onto the tribe of Ioudas, and they shall be as one rod in the hand of Ioudas. 20 And the rods, those upon which you wrote, shall be in your hand before them, 21 and you shall say to them, This is what the Lord says: Behold, I am taking the whole house of Israel from the midst of the nations, there where they went, and I will gather them from all those around them and bring them into the land of Israel, 22 and I will give them into one nation in my land and on the mountains of Israel, and they shall have one ruler, and they shall no longer be as two nations, nor shall they be divided into two kingdoms so that they never again defile themselves with their idols. And I will rescue them from all their lawless acts, whereby they have sinned, and I will cleanse them, and they shall be for me as a people, and I, the Lord, will be a god for them.

24 And my slave, Dauid, shall be ruler in their midst, and they shall all have one shepherd, for they shall walk by my ordinances and keep my judgments and perform them. 25 And they shall live upon their land that I have given to my slave, Israel, and the land of the house of Jacob, where their fathers lived, and they shall live upon it, and David, my slave, shall be their ruler forever. And I will make a covenant of peace with them, and it shall be an everlasting covenant with them; I will set my holy things in their midst forever. And my encamping shall be among them, and I will be a god for them, and they shall be my people. And the nations shall know that I am the Lord who sanctifies them when my holy things are in their midst forever.

38 And a word of the Lord came to me, saying:

Son of man, set your face against Gog and the land of Magog, ruler of Ros, Mosoch and Thobel, and prophesy against him, and say to him, This is what the Lord says: Behold, I am against you, Gog, ruler of Ros, Mosoch and Thobel, and I will round up you and all your force, horses and riders, clothed in all their armor, a great gathering, shields and helmets and daggers, Persians and Ethiopians and Libyans, all with helmets and shields, Gomer and all around him, the house of the Amorites and all the families of the plain, for I have spoken, says the Lord; a person’s dagger shall be against his brother. And I will summon my horsemen, one against him and all those around you and many nations with you. Be ready, ready yourself, you and all your gathering, the ones amassed with you, and you shall be an outpost to me. After rather many days he shall be prepared, and at the end of years he shall arrive and come into the land turned back by dagger, assembled from many nations, against the land of Israel that became deserted throughout, and he has come out from the nations, and all shall live in peace. And you shall go up like rain and come like a cloud to deluge the land, and there shall you be, and all those around you and many nations with you.

This is what the Lord says: And it shall be in that day, words shall come up into your heart, and you will scheme a wicked scheme, and you shall say, I will come up into a rejected land, and I will come upon people resting in quiet, living in peace, all inhabiting the land, in which there does not exist a city-wall nor barriers, and they have no doors, to foray for booty and seize their spoils, to turn my hand to the desolate one, which was settled, and against a nation gathered from many nations, people that have acquired possessions, living at the navel of the earth. Saba and Dedan and Carthaginian dealers and all their villages shall say to you, Are you coming to forage for booty and to seize spoils? Have you gathered your gathering to take silver and gold, to carry away for yourselves property, to seize spoils? Therefore, prophesy, son of man, and say to Gog: This is what the Lord says: In that day, when my people Israel are settled in peace, shall you not be roused? And you shall come from your place out of the extreme north and many nations with you, all riders on horses, a great gathering and a large force, and you shall come up against my people Israel like a cloud to cover the land. At the end of days it shall be, and I will lead you up against my land so that all the nations know me, when I have been hallowed in you before them.

This is what the Lord says to Gog: You are the one of whom I spoke before the former days by a hand of my slaves, the prophets of Israel, in those days and years to bring you up against them. And it shall be in that day, in a day on which day Gog comes upon the land of Israel, says the Lord, my wrath shall go up, and my jealousy. In the fire of my anger I spoke: Surely, in that day there shall be a great shaking upon the land of Israel, and the fish of the sea and the birds of the air and the animals of the plain and all the creepers that creep on the ground and all the human beings on the surface of the earth shall be shaken from before the Lord, and the mountains shall be rent asunder, and the ravines shall fall, and every city-wall shall fall to the ground. And I will summon every fear against him says the Lord; a person’s dagger shall be against his brother. And I will judge him with death and blood and torrential rain and hailstones, and I will rain fire and sulfur upon him and upon all who are with him and upon many nations with him. And I will be made great and be hallowed and glorified and known before many nations, and they shall know that I am the Lord.

39 And you, son of man, prophesy against Gog, and say, This is what the Lord says: Behold, I am against you, Gog, ruler of Ros, Mosoch and Thobel, and I will gather you and guide you down and bring you up from the extreme north and lead you up against the mountains of Israel. And I will destroy your bow from your left hand and your arrows from your right hand and throw you down upon the mountains of Israel, and you shall fall, you and all those around you, and the nations that are with you shall be given to a multitude of birds, and I have given you to every winged creature and all the animals of the plain for food. You shall fall upon the surface of the plain, for I have spoken, says the Lord. And I will send fire upon Gog, and the islands shall be inhabited in peace, and they shall know that I am the Lord.

And my holy name shall be known in the midst of my people, Israel, and my holy name shall no longer be profaned, and all the nations shall know that I am the Lord, the holy one of Israel. Behold, it has come, and you shall know that I am the Lord, the holy one of Israel, and all the nations shall be ashamed and deprived of power, and all the dwelling places of the nations shall be inhabited in peace, and they shall know that I am the Lord.

9 Therefore, prophesy, son of man, and say to Gog: This is what the Lord says: In that day, when my people Israel are settled in peace, shall you not be roused? And you shall come from your place out of the extreme north and many nations with you, all riders on horses, a great gathering and a large force, and you shall come up against my people Israel like a cloud to cover the land. At the end of days it shall be, and I will lead you up against my land so that all the nations know me, when I have been hallowed in you before them.

This is what the Lord says to Gog: You are the one of whom I spoke before the former days by a hand of my slaves, the prophets of Israel, in those days and years to bring you up against them. And it shall be in that day, in a day on which day Gog comes upon the land of Israel, says the Lord, my wrath shall go up, and my jealousy. In the fire of my anger I spoke: Surely, in that day there shall be a great shaking upon the land of Israel, and the fish of the sea and the birds of the air and the animals of the plain and all the creepers that creep on the ground and all the human beings on the surface of the earth shall be shaken from before the Lord, and the mountains shall be rent asunder, and the ravines shall fall, and every city-wall shall fall to the ground. And I will summon every fear against him says the Lord; a person’s dagger shall be against his brother. And I will judge him with death and blood and torrential rain and hailstones, and I will rain fire and sulfur upon him and upon all who are with him and upon many nations with him. And I will be made great and be hallowed and glorified and known before many nations, and they shall know that I am the Lord.

9 And the inhabitants of the cities of Israel shall go out and burn among the weapons, shields and poles and bows and arrows and hand-rods and spears, and they shall burn among them for seven years. And they shall not take trees from the plain or chop from forests, but they shall burn weapons with fire, and they shall plunder those who plundered them and will despoil those who despoiled them, says the Lord.

11 And it shall be in that day, I will give to Gog a noteworthy place as a tomb in Israel, the common burial-place of those who reach to the sea, and they shall build around the aperture of the ravine, 12 and they shall bury there Gog and all his multitude, and it shall be named The Gai, the common burial-place of Gog. 13 And the house of Israel shall bury them so that the land may be cleansed in a seven-month period, (13) and all the people of the land shall bury them, and it shall be for them as something noteworthy on the day that I was glorified, says the Lord. 14 And continually they shall set apart men traversing the land to bury the ones remaining upon the surface of the earth to cleanse it after the seven-month period, and they shall make their search. 15 And everyone who passes through the land and sees a human bone shall build a marker by it until the buriers bury it in The Gai, the common burial-place of Gog, 16 for even the name of the city shall be, Common Burial-place, and the land shall be cleansed.

17 And you, son of man, say, This is what the Lord says: Say to every winged bird and to all the animals of the plain, Be gathered, and come; be gathered from all around the surrounding areas for my sacrifice that I have slaughtered for you, a great sacrifice upon the mountains of Israel, and you shall eat meat and drink blood. 18 You shall eat the flesh of giants and drink the blood of rulers of the earth, rams and calves and goats. And all the bull calves have been fattened. 19 And you shall eat fat unto satiety and drink blood unto drunkenness from my sacrifice that I slaughtered for you. 20 And you shall be satisfied at my table: horse and rider and giant and every warrior, says the Lord.

21 And I will give my glory among you, and all the nations shall see my verdict that I have executed and my hand that I brought upon them. 22 And the house of Israel shall know that I am the Lord, their God, from this day and beyond. 23 And all the nations shall know that, because of their sins, the house of Israel was taken captive, because they dealt treacherously with me, and I averted my face from them and gave them over into the hands of their adversaries, and they all fell by dagger. 24 I dealt with them according to their unclean acts and according to their lawless acts and averted my face away from them.

25 Therefore, this is what the Lord says: Now I will turn back the captivity of Jakob and show pity on the house of Israel and be jealous because of my holy name. 26 And they shall receive their dishonor and injustice, which they practiced, when they are settled upon their land in peace, and there shall be none who terrifies. 27 After I turn them back from the nations and gather them from the countries of their burial-place of Gog, 12 and they shall bury there Gog and all his multitude, and it shall be named The Gai, the common burial-place of Gog. 13 And the house of Israel shall bury them so that the land may be cleansed in a seven-month period, (13) and all the people of the land shall bury them, and it shall be for them as something noteworthy on the day that I was glorified, says the Lord. 14 And continually they shall set apart men traversing the land to bury the ones remaining upon the surface of the earth to cleanse it after the seven-month period, and they shall make their search. 15 And everyone who passes through the land and sees a human bone shall build a marker by it until the buriers bury it in The Gai, the common burial-place of Gog, 16 for even the name of the city shall be, Common Burial-place, and the land shall be cleansed.

40 And it happened in the twenty-fifth year of our captivity, in the first month, on the tenth of the month, in the fourteenth year after the city fell, on that day the hand of the Lord came upon me and brought me 2 in a divine vision into the land of Israel and set me upon a very high mountain, and upon it was something like a construction of a city, opposite. 3 And he brought me there, and, behold, a man, and his appearance was like an appearance of flashing bronze, and in his hand was a builders’ cord and a measuring reed, and he stood by the gate. 4 And the man said to me, “Have you seen, son of man? Look with your eyes, and listen with your ears, and set out into your heart all that I show you, for you have entered here in order to show you, and you shall show all that you see to the house of Israel.”

5 And behold, an enclosing wall outside the house all around, and in the hand of the man was a reed, the measure of six cubits, 6 in a cubit and a handbreadth 5, and he measured the outer wall; its breadth was equal to the reed, and its elevation was equal to the reed. 6 And he went into the gate that looks to the east by seven steps and measured the thee 6, six on one side and six on the other, and the ailam 6 of the gate was equal to the reed. 7 And the thee 6 was equal to the reed in length and equal to the reed in breadth, and the ailam 6 to the middle of the thaelatha 6 was six cubits, and the second thee 6 was equal to the reed in breadth and equal to the reed in length, and the ailam 6 was five cubits, 8 and the third thee 6 was equal to the reed in breadth and equal to the reed in length. 9 And the ailam 6 of the gateway near the ailam 6 of the gate was eight cubits, and the ailam 6 of the gate was within. 10 And the thee 6 of the gate were opposite a thee 6, three on one side and three on the other, and the three had one measure, and the thee 6 had one measure on one side and on the other. 11 And he measured the breadth of the door of the gateway ten cubits and the width of the gateway thirteen cubits. 12 And there was a cubit being gathered in front of the thee 6 on one side and on the other, and the thee 6 was six cubits on one side and six cubits on the other. 13 And he measured the gate from the wall of the thee 6 to the wall of the thee 6 in breadth, twenty-five cubits; this gate was upon a gate. 14 And the atrium of the ailam 6 of the gate was sixty cubits; the gate had twenty thee 6 all around, 15 and the atrium of the outside gate to the atrium of ailam 6 of the inside gate was fifty cubits. 16 And covered windows were on the thee 6 and upon the thee 6 inside the gate of the court all around, and likewise the thee 6 had windows all around inside, and on the ailam 6 were palms on one side and on the other.

17 And he brought me into the outer court, and behold, shrine-carriers' chambers and colonnades around the court; thirty shrine-carriers' chambers were in the colonnades. 18 And the colonnades were along the side of the gates, along the length of the gates was the lower colonnade. 19 And he measured the breadth of the court from the atrium of the outer gate from the inside up to the atrium of the gate that looks out, one hundred cubits belonging to the one that looks to the east. And he brought me up to the north.

20 And behold, the outer court had a gate that looks to the north, and he measured it, its length and breadth, 21 and the three on one side and three on the other, and the aileuc and the ailammod and its palms, and they were like the measurements of the gate that looks east, fifty cubits, its length and twenty-five cubits, its width. 22 And its windows and the aileuc and its palms were just as the gate that looks to the east, and on seven rungs they would ascend upon it, and the aileuc and the ailammod were inside. 23 And the inner court had a gate that looks upon the gate of the north like the gate that looks to the east, and he measured the court from gate to gate, one hundred cubits.

24 And he led me toward the south, and behold, a gate that looks to the south, and he measured it and the three on one side and three on the other, and the aileuc and the aileuc by these measurements. 25 And its windows and the aileuc mod had windows all around just like the windows of the aileuc, fifty cubits, its length and twenty-five cubits, its width. 26 And its windows and the aileuc mod and its palms were windows and the aileuc mod and its palms were windows and the aileuc on one side and on the other, and it had eight rungs.

27 And there was an aileuc that was inside. 28 And he brought me into the inner court of the gate to the south, and he measured the court by these measurements 29 and the three on one side and on the other, and the aileuc and the aileuc by these measurements, and its windows and the aileuc mod had windows all around, fifty cubits, its length and its width, twenty-five cubits. 30 And there was an aileuc mod into the outer court, and the aileuc had palms and eight rungs.

31 And he brought me into the gate that looks to the east, and he measured it, its length and its width, twenty-five cubits. 32 And he brought me into the gate that looks to the south like the gate that looks to the east, and on seven rungs they would ascend upon it, and the aileuc and the ailammod were inside. 33 And the inner court had a gate that looked upon the gate of the north like the gate that looks to the south, and he measured the court from gate to gate, one hundred cubits.

34 And he brought me into the inner court, and behold, two halls in the inner court, one behind the gate that looks to the south but looking to the north. 35 And he said to me, "This hall that looks to the south is for the priests keeping guard over the house. 36 And the hall that looks to the north is for the priests keeping guard over the altar; they are the sons of Saddouk, who come near from Leui to the Lord to minister to him." 37 And he measured the court, its length, one hundred cubits, and width, one hundred cubits on its four parts and the altar opposite the house.

38 And he brought me into the aileuc of the house. And he measured the aileuc of the aileuc, five cubits its breadth on one side and five cubits on the other, and the width of the doorway, fourteen cubits, and the shoulders of the door of the aileuc, three cubits on one side and three cubits on the other, and the length of the aileuc, twenty cubits and the width, twelve cubits, and by ten steps they would ascend upon it, and pillars were upon the aileuc, one on one side and one on the other.

39 And he brought me into the shrine whose aileuc he measured, six cubits the breadth on one side and six cubits the width of the aileuc on the other. 40 And the width of the gateway was ten cubits, and the shoulders of the gateway, five cubits on one side and five cubits on the other, and he measured its length, forty cubits, and its width, twenty cubits. 41 And he entered into the inner court and he measured the aileuc of the doorway, two cubits and the doorway, six cubits, and the shoulders of the doorway, seven cubits on one side and seven cubits on the other. 42 And he measured the length of the doors, forty cubits and their width, twenty cubits facing the shrine. And he said, "This is the holy of holies."
5 And he measured the wall of the house, six cubits, and the width of the side, four cubits all around. 6 And the sides, side upon side, were thirty three, twelve, and a space was in the wall of the house on the sides all around to be for those undertaking to see so that they might not at all touch the walls of the house. 7 And the width of the upper one of the sides was like the addition from the wall to the upper one all around the house so that it be widened above and they might go up from the lower part to the upper part and from the middle part to the third story. 8 And the threshold of the house was a summit all around; the space of the sides was equal to the reed, a space of six cubits. 9 And the width of the wall of the side from the outside was five cubits, and the areas left free between the sides of the house and between the halls were a width of twenty cubits: the periphery of the house all around. 11 And the doors of the halls were on the area left free of the door, of the one to the north, and the one door was to the south, and the width of the light-opening of the area left free was five cubits, its breadth all around.

12 And the divider facing the area left open like the one to the sea was seventy cubits; the breadth of the dividing wall was five cubits, its width all around, and its length was ninety cubits.

13 And he measured opposite the house a length of one hundred cubits, and the areas left open and the dividers and their walls were a length of one hundred cubits, and the width facing of the house and the areas left open opposite were one hundred cubits.

15 And he measured the length of the divider facing of the area left open of the rear parts of that house, and the areas left open on one side and on the other, its length, one hundred cubits.

And the shrine and the corners and the outer ailm were paneled, and the windows were netted, narrow openings around the three for looking out, and the house and the nearby areas were made of wood all around, also the pavement and from the pavement up to the windows, and the windows would open threefold for looking out. 17 And right next to the inside and as far as the outside and on the whole wall all around on the inside and in the outside were carved cherubim and palms between cherub and cherub; the cherub had two faces, a human face toward the palm on one side and on the other; the whole house was engraved all around; from the pavement up to the coffering the cherubim and palms were engraved.

21 And the holy place and the shrine would open on four sides. Facing the holies, there was a sight like a view of a wooden altar, its height, three cubits, and its length, two cubits and its width, two cubits, and it had horns, and its base and its walls were wooden, and he said to me, “This is the table in front of the Lord.” And the shrine had two doorways, and the holy place had two doorways. 24 As for the two pivoting doorways, one had two panels and the second door had two panels. 25 And carving was on them, and on the doorways of the shrine were cherubim and palms like the carving of the holies, and there was excellent wood facing the ailm outside, and hidden windows. And he measured on one side and on the other to the ceilings of the ailm and to the joined sides of the house.

42 And he brought me out into the outer court by the east, opposite the gate toward the north, and he brought me in, and behold, five halls next to the area left open and next to the divider to the north, one hundred cubits was its length to the north and its breadth, fifty cubits, engraved as were the gates of the inner court, as were the colonnades of the outer court. Triple stoas were set in rows, facing each other. And opposite the halls was a passage, its breadth was ten cubits by one hundred cubits, its length and its doorways were to the north. And in like manner were the upper passages, because the colonnade projected from it, from the colonnade underneath, and its dimension. Thus colonnade and space, and thus stoas. Therefore, they were triple, and they had no pillars, as there were the pillars of the outer parts; for that reason they projected beyond the parts underneath and beyond the middle parts—from the ground. 7 And there was a light-opening outside, like the outer court’s halls that look opposite the halls to the north, its length, fifty cubits; because the length of the halls that look into the outer court was fifty cubits, they also were facing those; the whole was one hundred cubits. 9 And these halls of the entrance to the east had doors for entering through them from the outer court, as is the light-opening at the head of the passage.

And the parts toward the south, facing the south, the area left open and facing the divider, were halls, and the passage facing them was like the measurements of the halls to the north, both like their length and like their width and like all their exits and like all their curves and like their light-openings and like their doorways of the halls toward the south, and like the doorways from the head of the passage—since it is approximately a reed’s space for light—and on the east, are for entering through them.

13 And he said to me, “The halls northward and the halls southward that are opposite the spaces—these are the halls of ‘the holy’ in which the priests, the sons of Saddouk, who come near to the Lord, shall eat the holy of holy things, and there they shall place the holy of holy things and the sacrifice, both the sacrificial victims for sin and the sacrificial victims for ignorance, for the place is holy. They shall not enter there except the priests; they shall not go out from ‘the holy’ into the outer court so that those who approach may always be holy and lest they touch their vestments, those in which they minister, because they are holy, and they shall wear other garments when they touch the people.”

15 And the measuring of the house from the inside was completed. And he brought me out by way of the gate that looks to the east, and he measured the plan of the house all around in its arrangement. 16 And he stood behind the gate that looks to the east and measured five hundred by the measuring reed, 17 and he turned toward the north and measured the part facing the north, five hundred cubits with the measuring reed. 18 And he turned toward the sea and measured the part facing the sea, five hundred by the measuring reed, 19 and he turned toward the south and measured opposite the south, five hundred by the measuring reed. 20 The four were parts of the same reed. And he laid it out in order, even an enclosing wall for it all around of five hundred to the east and a width of five hundred cubits to separate between the holies and between the outer wall, which is in the design of the house.

43 And he led me to the gate that looks to the east and brought me out, 2 and behold, the glory of the God of Israel was coming by way of the gate that looks to the east, and there was a sound of the camp like the sound of many doubling up, and the earth was shining forth like splendor from the glory all around. 3 And the appearance that I saw was like the appearance that I saw when I was entering to anoint the city, and the appearance of the chariot that I saw was like the appearance that I saw by the river Chobar, and I fell upon my face. 4 And the glory of the Lord went into the house by way of the gate that looks to the east. 5 And a spirit took me up and brought me into the inner court, and behold, the house was full of the glory of the Lord.

6 And I stood, and behold, a voice of one speaking to me from the house, and the man stood next to me. 7 And he said to me, “You have seen, son of man, the place of my throne and the place of the print of my feet, in which my name shall encamp in the midst of the house of Israel forever, and the house of Israel shall no more desecrate my holy name, they and their leaders, by their whoring and by the murders of the leaders in their midst, 8 when they place my entry by their entries and my doorposts next to their doorposts, and they rendered my wall as if mine and theirs were joined and desecrated my holy name by their lawless acts that they were committing, and I wiped them out in my fury and by murder. 9 And now let them drive away from me their whoring and the murders of their leaders, and I will encamp in their midst forever.

10 And you, son of man, show the house to the house of Israel, and they shall grow weary of their sins—and its appearance and plan. 11 And they shall receive their punishment for all they have done. And you shall describe the house and its exits and its substructure, and you shall make known to them all its ordinances and all its precepts, and you shall describe it before them, and they shall keep all my statutes and all my ordinances and shall perform them. 12 And the description of the house: On the top of the mountain; all its borders all around; holies of holies.

13 And these are the measurements of the altar by cubit (of the cubit and a handbreadth): 14 in depth, up to a cubit and a cubit its width and a rim upon its lip: a span all around. And this is the height of the altar: 15 In depth, from the start of its cavity to the great, lower propitiatory, two cubits and its width a cubit, and from the small propitiatory to the great propitiatory is four cubits, and its width a cubit, 16 and the ariel was twelve cubits in length by twelve cubits in breadth, square in its four parts, 17 and the propitiatory was fourteen cubits, its length, by fourteen cubits, its width in its four parts, and its rim all around is circled by it, half a cubit, and its ring a cubit all around and its rungs looking to the east.

18 And he said to me: Son of man, this is what the Lord says, the God of Israel: These are the ordinances of the altar in the day of its making, to offer upon it whole burnt offerings and to pour blood against it. 19 And you shall give to the priests, to the Levites from the offspring of Saddouk, who come near to me, says the Lord, to minister to me, a calf from the cattle for a sin, 20 and they shall take some of its blood and put it on the four horns of the altar, and on the four corners of the propitiatory and on the base all around, and they shall make atonement for it, 21 and they shall take the calf that is for a sin, and it shall be burnt up in the separated part of the house, outside the holies.

22 And on the second day they shall take two kids of goats, unblemished, for sin and make atonement for the altar just as they made atonement with the calf, 23 and after you complete the atonement, they shall offer an unblemished calf from cattle and an unblemished ram from sheep, 24 and you shall offer them before the Lord, and the priests shall throw salt on them and offer them up as whole burnt offerings to the Lord. 25 For seven days you shall do a kid for sin every day and a calf from cattle and a ram from sheep; unblemished they shall do them 26 for seven days, and they shall make atonement for the altar and cleanse it and fill their hands. 27 And it shall be from the eighth day and beyond, the priests shall do upon the altar your whole burnt offerings and your victims for deliverance. And I will accept you, says the Lord.

44 And he turned me by the way of the outer gate of the holies that looks to the east, and it was shut. 2And the Lord said to me: This gate shall be shut; it shall not be opened, and no one shall go through it, because the Lord, the God of Israel, shall enter through it, and it shall be shut. 3Therefore, the leader—he shall sit in it to eat bread before the Lord; he shall enter by the way of the aílam of the gate, and he shall go out by his way.

4 And he brought me in by way of the gate to the north, opposite the house, and I looked, and behold, the house of the Lord was full of glory, and I fell upon my face. 5And the Lord said to me: Son of man, assign to your heart, and look with your eyes, and with your ears hear everything that I am speaking with you in relation to all the ordinances of the house of the Lord and in relation to all its precepts, and you shall assign your heart to the entrance of the house by all its exits in all the holies. 6And you shall say to the embittering house, to the house of Israel, This is what the Lord says: Let there be enough for you of all your lawless acts, O house of Israel, 7to bring in alien sons, uncircumcised in heart and uncircumcised in flesh, to be in my holies, and they were profaning them when you were offering bread, fat and blood, and you were transgressing my covenant in all your lawless acts, and you arranged to keep blood, and you were transgressing my covenant in all your lawless acts, 8and you arranged to keep blood, says the Lord. 16They shall enter into my holies. 17And it shall be, when they are entering the gates of the inner court, they shall wear linen vestments, and they shall not wear wool when they minister from the gate of the inner court, 18and they shall have linen turbans on their heads, and they shall have hard linens on their loins, and they shall not gird themselves bizar. 19And when they go out into the outer court to the people, they shall take off their vestments, those in which they minister, and they shall place them in the halls of the holies, and they shall wear other vestments, and they shall not hallow the people in their vestments. 20And they shall not shave their heads, and they shall not strip off their hair; covering they shall cover their heads. 21And no priest shall drink wine when they enter into the inner court. 22And they shall not take for themselves a widow or a divorced woman as wife, but an unmarried girl from the offspring of Israel, but a widow, if she be of a priest, they shall marry. 23And they shall teach my people between holy and profane, and between unclean and clean they shall make known to them. 24And they shall preside in a case of blood to decide it; they shall deem right my statutes and judge my judgment, and they shall keep my precepts and my ordinances at all my feasts, and they shall hallow my sabbaths. 25And over a departed spirit of a human they shall not enter to be defiled, but for a father and for a mother and for a son and for a daughter and for a brother and for a sister who did not belong to a man, he shall be defiled. 26And after he is cleansed, he shall count seven days for him, 27and on whatever day they enter the inner court to minister in the holy place, they shall offer an atonement, says the Lord.

28 And it shall be for them as an inheritance: I am their inheritance, and no possession shall be given to them among the sons of Israel, because I am their possession. 29And they shall eat the offerings and the victims for sin and the victims for ignorance, and everything set apart in Israel shall be theirs. 30First fruits of everything and the first-advance deductions from all your first fruits shall belong to the priests, and your firstlings you shall grant the priest to set your blessings upon your houses. 31And the priests shall not eat any carcass and prey of animals, from the birds or from the cattle.

45 And when you are measuring out the land by inheritance, you shall set aside first fruit for the Lord, a holy thing from the land, twenty-five thousand its length, and its width, twenty thousand; it shall be holy in all its borders all around. 2And there shall be from this a holy precinct five hundred by five hundred square all around, and fifty cubits will be its space all around. 3And from this measure, you shall measure a length of twenty-five thousand and a width of twenty thousand, and in it shall be a holy precinct, holy of holies. 4From the land, it shall belong to the priests who minister in the holy place, and it shall belong to those who come near to minister to the Lord, and it shall be to them a place for houses set aside for their sanctification. 5Twenty-five thousand, its length, and its width, twenty thousand, shall belong to the Leuites who minister to the house, for them as a possession, cities to live in.

6 And you shall give the possession of the city, five thousand, its width and its length twenty-five thousand; like the first fruit of the holies they shall belong to the house of Israel.

7 And to the leader it shall belong, out of this and from this, for the first fruits of the holies as a possession of the city facing the first fruits of the holies and facing the possession of the city the parts toward the sea and from the parts toward the sea to the east and the length as one of the portions from the borders toward the sea and the length on the borders toward the east of the land. And it shall belong to him as a possession in Israel, and the leaders of Israel shall no longer oppress my people, and the house of Israel shall allocate the land according to their tribes.

9 This is what the Lord says: Let it suffice for you, leaders of Israel; remove from yourselves injustice and abuse, and perform judgment and righteousness; take away oppression from my people, says the Lord.

10 You should have a just balance and a just measure and a just choenix. The measure and the choenix shall likewise be one to receive; the choenix shall be a tenth of the gomor, and the measure shall be the tenth of the gomor; to the gomor it shall be equal. And the stathmion shall be twenty obols; five shekels shall be five and ten shekels shall be ten and fifty shekels shall be one mina for you.

13 And this is the first fruit that you shall set aside: a sixth of the measure from the gomor of wheat and the sixth of the oiphi of barley. And the ordinance for oil: a kotyle of oil from ten kotyles, because ten kotyles are a gomor; and a sheep from ten sheep is an advance deduction from all the paternal families of Israel for offerings and for whole burnt offerings and for deliverance to atone for you, says the Lord. And through the leader shall be the whole burnt offerings and the offerings and the libations at the feasts and on the new moons and on the sabbaths, six unblemished lambs and an unblemished ram as pastrY with the ram and with the lambs as an offering, a gift of his hand, and the hin of oil for the pastrY. And when the leader enters, he shall come in by the way of the ailm of the gate and the lambs just as his hand shall furnish and the hin of oil for the pastrY. And when the leader enters, he shall enter by the way of the ailm of the outer gate and stand at the entry of the gate, and the priests shall make his whole burnt offerings and the victims for his deliverance.

18 This is what the Lord says: In the first month, on the fourteenth of the month, the pascha shall be a feast for you; seven days you shall eat unleavened bread. And in that day the leader shall do a calf for a sin for himself and for the house and for all the people of the land. And for the seven days of the feast, he shall make whole burnt offerings to the Lord, seven unblemished calves and rams every day for seven days and a kid from the goats for sin, every day. And you shall make an offering and pastrY with the bull calf and pastrY with the ram and the hin of oil for the pastrY. And in the seventh month, on the fifteenth of the month, at the feast, for seven days you shall do in like manner, just like the victims for sin and just like the whole burnt offerings and just like the manaa as and just like the oil.

46 This is what the Lord says: The gate in the inner court, which looks to the east, shall be shut for the six work days, but in the day of the sabbaths, it shall be opened, and in the day of the new moon, it shall be opened. And the leader shall enter by the way of the ailm of the outer gate and stand at the entry of the gate, and the priests shall make his whole burnt offerings and the victims for his deliverance.

9 And when the people of the land enter before the Lord on the feasts, he that enters by way of the gate to the north shall go out by way of the gate to the south, and he that enters by way of the gate to the south shall go out by way of the gate to the north; he shall not return by the gate that he entered, but he shall go out straight ahead. And when they come in, the leader in their midst shall enter in with them, and when they go out, he shall go out.

11 And at the feasts and at the festal assemblies

there shall be the manaa\(^a\) as pastry with the bull calf and pastry with the ram and with the lambs just as his hand shall furnish and the hin\(^b\) of oil for the pastry. 12 But if the leader makes as an acknowledgement a whole burnt offering of deliverance to the Lord, and he shall open for himself the gate that looks to the east and shall make his whole burnt offering and the victims for his deliverance as he does in the day of the sabbaths, then he shall go out and shut the doors after he goes out.

13 And a yearling lamb, unblemished, he shall make as a whole burnt offering every day to the Lord; in the morning he shall make it. 14 And he shall make manaa\(^a\) with it in the morning, a sixth of the measure and the third of an hin\(^b\) of oil by mixing the choice flour, manaa\(^a\) for the Lord, an ordinance continually. 15 You shall make the lamb and the manaa\(^a\) and the oil, and you shall make a whole burnt offering in the morning continually.

16 This is what the Lord says: If the leader gives a gift to one of his sons from his inheritance, this shall be his sons' possession by inheritance. 17 But if he gives a gift to one of his servants, then it shall belong to him until the year of release, and he shall pay back to the leader; except for the inheritance of his sons, it shall belong to them. 18 And the leader shall not take from the inheritance of the people so as to oppress them; from his possession he shall apportion an inheritance for his sons in order that my people not be scattered, each from his possession.

19 And he brought me into the entrance behind the gate into the hall of the holies of the priests, the hall that looks north, and behold, a separated place there. 20 And he said to me, "This is the place where the priests shall boil the victims for ignorance and the victims for sin, and there they shall bake the entire manaa\(^a\) so as not to bring it out into the outer court to hallow the people.

21 And he brought me out into the outer court and brought me around to the four parts of the court, and behold, a court by the slope\(^c\) of the court. 22 It was a court by the slope\(^c\) of the court. 23 On the four slopes\(^c\) of the court was a small court. Its length was forty cubits, and its width thirty cubits; the four had one measure. 24 And halls were all around in them, around the four, and kitchens situated underneath the halls all around. 25 And he said to me, "These are the houses of the cooks where those that minister to the house boil the sacrificial victims of the people."

47 And he brought me in by the entry of the house, and, behold, water was flowing underneath the atrium by the east, because the front of the house was looking to the east, and the water was descending from the right slope, from the south by the altar. 2 And he brought me out by way of the gate to the north and led me around the outer side way to the gate of the court that looks to the east, and behold, the water was flowing down from the right slope.

3 Just as there was a going out of a man from the opposite direction, there was also a measure in his hand, and he measured a thousand with the measure, and he passed through in the water; it was water of release. 4 And he measured a thousand, and he passed through in the water; the water was up to his thighs. And he measured a thousand, and he passed through, because the water was violently rushing as the rush of a wadi, which they shall not cross. 5 And he said to me, "Have you seen, son of man?"

And he led me by the bank of the stream. 7 On my return and, behold, on the bank of the stream a great many trees on one side and on the other.

8 And he said to me, This is the water that flows into Galilee, which is to the east, also used to descend to Arabia and would come all the way to the sea to the water of the outlet, and the waters will cure. 9 And it shall be, every soul of the living beings that bubble up in all places, in those where the stream reaches, shall live, and very many fish shall be there, because this water has come there, and it will cure, and they shall live. Everything that the stream reaches shall live.

10 And fishermen shall stand there from Aingaddi to Ainagalim. A drying-place for dragnets is\(^d\) shall be; by itself\(^d\) it shall be, and its\(^d\) fish, like the fish of the great sea, shall be a very great multitude. 11 And at its\(^e\) outlet and at its\(^e\) winding and at its\(^e\) overflowing, they will not cure; they have been given as salt. 12 And at the stream, on its bank every edible tree shall come up on one side and on the other; it shall not become old upon it, nor shall the fruit fail; it shall bear the first of its newness, because these their waters issue from the holies, and their fruit shall be for eating and their ascent for health.

13 This is what the Lord says: You shall apportion for inheritance these borders of the land. The twelve tribes of the sons of Israel will have an addition of allotment. 14 And you shall apportion it for an inheritance—each one just like his brother—for which I raised my hand to give it to their fathers, and this land shall fall to you by inheritance.

15 And these are the borders of the land northward: from the great sea that descends and surrounds the entrance of Hemath Seddada, and Berotha, Sebraim, Heliam, between the borders of Damascus and between the borders of Hemath, a court of Saunan, which\(^f\) are above the borders of Hauranitis. 16 These are the borders from the sea: from the court of Ainain, borders of Damascus and those northward.

18 And those eastward: between Hauranitis and between Damascus and between Galaaditis and between the land of Israel, the Jordan divides to the sea which is eastward of Palmgrove; these are those eastward.

19 And those southward and southwestward: from Thaiman and Palmgrove as far as the water of Marimoth Kades, extending to the great sea.

20 This part is the south and southwest. This is the part of the great sea; it divides as far as opposite the entrance of Hemath, as far as its entrance; these are those seaward of Hemath.

21 And you shall divide this land for them, for the tribes of Israel. 22 You shall cast it by lot for you and for the guests who sojourn in your midst, whoever produce sons in your midst, and they shall be to you as natives among the sons of Israel, with you they shall eat by inheritance in the midst of the tribes of Israel. 23 And they shall be in a tribe of guests among the guests with them; there you shall give an inheritance to them, says the Lord.

48 And these are the names of the tribes: from the beginning, which is northward along the part of the descent of that which cuts all round, to the entrance of Hemath, court of Ainain, borders of Damascus northward along the part of Hemath Court: also eastward as far as the sea shall belong to them: of Dan, one. 2 And from the borders of Dan, those eastward as far as those seaward: of Aser, one. 3 And from the borders of Aser, from those eastward as far as those seaward: of Nephthali, one. 4 And from the borders of Nephthali, from those eastward as far as those seaward: of Manasses, one. 5 And from the borders of Manasses, from those eastward as far as those seaward: of Ephraim, one. 6 And from the borders of Ephraim, from those eastward as far as those seaward: of Rueben, one. 7 And from the borders of Rueben, from those eastward as far as those seaward: of Loudas, one.

8 And from the borders of Loudas, from those eastward as far as those seaward, shall be the first fruit of what is set apart, twenty-five thousand in width and in length, just like one of the portions from those eastward and as far as those seaward, and that which is holy shall be in their midst, a first fruit, which they shall set apart for the Lord, in length twenty-five thousand and in width twenty-five thousand. 10 Of these shall be the first fruit of the holies: the priests shall have twenty-five thousand, as far as the borders that are seaward, being the part of the descent of that which cuts all round, between the borders of Judas and the borders of Issachar.

11 To the consecrated priests, sons of Saddouk, who keep the guard over the house, who did not go astray in the straying of the sons of Israel as the Levites went astray. 12 To them shall also be the first fruit as given from the first fruits of the land, a holy of holies away from the borders of the Levites.

13 Now to the Levites shall belong the parts next to the borders of the priests, in length twenty-five thousand and in width ten thousand, its whole length twenty-five thousand, and in width twenty thousand. 14 Of it nothing shall be sold, neither shall anything be measured out, nor shall the firstlings of the land be removed, for it is something holy to the Lord.

15 Now the five thousand in breadth, which are left over, in addition to ‘the twenty-five thousand’—it shall be an outer wall for the city, for habitation and as space for him, and the city shall be in his midst. 16 And these are its measurements: from those northward, four thousand five hundred, and from those southward, four thousand five hundred, and from those eastward, four thousand five hundred, and from those seaward, four thousand five hundred. 17 And a space shall belong to the city: northward, two hundred fifty, and southward, two hundred fifty, and eastward, two hundred fifty, and seaward, two hundred fifty. 18 And what is in excess of the length, which is next to the first fruits of the holies, ten thousand eastward and ten thousand seaward, they also shall be the first fruits of what is holy, and its products shall be for bread for the workers of the city. 19 But the workers of the city, out of all the tribes of Israel, shall cultivate it. 20 The entire first fruit shall be twenty-five thousand by twenty-five thousand. You shall set apart of it, being square, the first fruit of what is holy, away from the possession of the city.

21 Now, what is in excess belongs to the leader from this and from this from the first fruits of what is holy and to the possession of the city, in length, to twenty-five thousand, as far as the borders eastward and seaward, to twenty-five thousand as far as the borders that are seaward, being next to the portions of the leader. And it shall be the first fruit of the holies and the holy precinct of the house in its midst. 22 And some of the possession of the Levites and some of the possession of the city shall be in the midst of the leaders. Between the borders of Loudas and the borders of Benjamin shall belong to the leaders.

23 As for what is in excess of the tribes: from the borders eastward as far as those seaward: of Benjamin, one. 24 And from the borders of Benjamin, from those eastward as far as those seaward: of Simeon, one. 25 And from the borders of Simeon, from those eastward as far as those seaward: of Issachar, one. 26 And away from the borders of Issachar, from those eastward as far as those seaward: of Zaboulon, one. 27 And from the borders of Zaboulon, from those eastward as far as those seaward: of Gad, one. 28 And from the borders of Gad as far as those southsouthwestward—and his borders shall be from Thaiman and an inheritance of the water of Marimoth Kades as far as the great sea. 29 This is the land that you shall assign by lot to the tribes of Israel, and these are their divisions, says the Lord.

30 And these are the exits of the city: those northward, four thousand five hundred by measure. 31 And the gates of the city shall be after the names of the tribes of Israel: three gates northward: gate of Rouben, one, and gate of Ioudas, one, and gate of Leui, one. 32 And the ones to eastward: four thousand five hundred, and three gates: gate of Ioseph, one, and gate of Beniamin, one, and gate of Dan, one. 33 And the ones southward: four thousand five hundred by measure, and three gates: gate of Symeon, one, and gate of Isschar, one, and gate of Zaboulon, one. 34 And the ones to the sea shall be four thousand five hundred by measure, and three gates: gate of Gad, one, and gate of Aser, one, and gate of Nephthali, one. 35 En-circlement: eighteen thousand. And the name of the city: after whatever day it comes to be, it shall be its name.
SOUSANNA

EDITION OF THE GREEK TEXT

The NETS translation for the two versions has been based on the critical editions of Joseph Ziegler and Olivier Munnich (Septuaginta: Vetus Testamentum Graecum Auctoritate Academiae Scientiarum Gottingensis editum XVI.2: Susanna Daniel Bel et Draco [Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1999]). Munnich has revised Ziegler’s critical edition of the Old Greek (OG) version (1954), because Ziegler did not have access to several important portions of papyrus 967. Accordingly, the NETS translation of the OG has been based on Munnich, while Theodotion (TH) has been translated from Ziegler.

THE TWO GREEK VERSIONS

Sousanna, like some other books, has a special place in the Septuagint because there are extant in Greek two complete ancient versions: the Old Greek (OG) and Theodotion (TH). Since these are two versions of one story, a very brief introduction and comparison is in order.

Although the nucleus of the story is the same, OG is significantly shorter than TH. The omission of some of the details gives a faster pace to the OG version. The opening four verses of TH are absent from OG, as are 15–18, 20–21, 24–27 (details on the attempted rape of Sousanna), 42–43, 46–47, 49–50 (Daniel’s involvement in uncovering the elders’ deception), though OG tells the story somewhat differently. Also OG and TH have distinct endings. TH concludes with Daniel’s rise to fame whereas OG ends with a self-admonition to look out for able sons. As a result of these differences Daniel is more prominent in TH than he is in OG, possibly because in TH Sousanna serves as an introduction to Daniel while in OG it appears as the final chapter (13).

While there are considerable differences between the OG and TH, they also have identical wording for all or most of a verse ten times (vv. 5, 9, 22–23, 34, 40–41, 52, 57–58). In a further eleven verses they have large or distinctive agreements in wording (7, 10, 29, 32, 33, 48, 51, 53, 55, 61, 62). It appears that Sousanna was revised and enlarged in its Semitic form in order to enhance the role of Daniel. As noted, in TH Sousanna precedes Daniel.

It appears likely that OG and TH derive from the same source text, but also that they are related at the level of the Greek.

TRANSLATION PROFILE OF THE GREEK

General Character

Any detailed description of the translation of Sousanna is hampered by the absence of an extant Hebrew or Aramaic source. Sousanna is brief, sixty-four verses in TH and c. forty-six in OG. Both versions may, however, be characterized as formal correspondence type of translations, meaning that the vocabulary and syntactic structure of the Greek are heavily determined by the presumed Semitic source texts. The nature of this dependence fits the paradigm of interlinear translations, though the OG exhibits more freedom with respect to its source than does TH. Though in the absence of an extant Semitic source uncertainty remains, there are several features of Sousanna that suggest a translation. The frequent appearance of καί “and” points to conjunctive י in the source text, as in other translated books. In TH the phrase καί ἐγένετο “and it happened” for the Semitic יְהִי also occurs four times (vv. 7, 15, 19, 28). Though this idiom does not appear in OG, both versions do have ἵδον “lo” (TH vv. 20, 43; OG vv. 13, 44). Though this typically reflects יָהִי in the LXX, admittedly it is not un-Greek. The phrase στενά μοι πάντοτε “Things are narrow for me on all sides” in TH v. 22 is almost certainly a Semitic idiom (cf. 2 Rgs 24.14), and there are a couple of instances where the definite article signals the vocative (v. 42[TH] and v. 48).

In some instances the two versions are very similar in content and grammar, but they employ different vocabulary. These cases are best explained as translations of the same Semitic text by the two translators. For example, TH v. 23 has σίρετον μοι ἔστι “It is preferable for me,” while OG reads κάλλιον δέ με “But it would be better for me.” Other such instances can be found in vv. 53 and 54.

Though both versions are generally literal, the OG is the freer of the two (see above), an example being OG’s more frequent use of adverbial participles where the source text would have finite verbs. Although it is not impossible that OG’s shorter scope is in part attributable to its translator, it might just as well be due to a shorter original. As noted above, expansion might have occurred to enhance the role of Daniel. Though OG is the shorter version, it contains many phrases and clauses not found in TH, and usually these contain adverbial participles (e.g., vv. 28 and 29).

THE NETS TRANSLATION OF SOUSANNA

General Approach

Since both versions are fairly literal and are therefore often written in translationese, NETS has attempted to mimic their close linguistic relationship to the source. As a result, compared to the NRSV, NETS will at times appear stilted and awkward. So, the parataxis of the Greek is typically retained in NETS, and standardized vocabulary is meant to suggest source-target equivalence. At the same time, variety in the Greek is typically reflected in NETS, whether within or between the two versions.

The Two Translations

One of the most challenging aspects of translating the two Greek versions into English has been to provide renderings that clarify both where the two versions are the same and where they are not. Thus, where the identical terms occur in both Greek version, identical terms have been used in NETS, even if these appear in different locations. For example, ὁ εἰδὼς τὰ πάντα πρὶν γενέσεως αὐτῶν “You who know all things before their beginning” appears in OG 35a and in TH 42. In cases where TH and OG vary only slightly, alternative vocabulary choices in English were readily available (see e.g., vv. 14, 48, 53). In short, every effort has been made to reflect sameness and difference, in vocabulary and grammar, between the two Greek versions.

EDITORIAL DETAIL

Since TH is the basis for the NRSV translation of Sousanna, the versification of NRSV and NETS TH correspond, which in turn agrees with Rahlfs and Ziegler. For the OG I have followed Ziegler/Munnich, which differs only slightly from Rahlfs.

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL NOTE

In addition to the standard reference tools I was most appreciative of the translation and commentary on Sousanna by Carey A. Moore, Daniel, Esther and Jeremiah: the Additions (AB 44; Garden City: Doubleday, 1977) as well as by John J. Collins, Daniel (Hermeneia; Minneapolis: Fortress, 1993).

THEODOTION

1 And there was a man living in Babylon, and his name was Ioakim. 2 He took a wife named Sousanna daughter of Chelkias, very beautiful and fearing the Lord. 3 And her parents were righteous and had taught their daughter according to the law of Moyses. 4 And Ioakim was very rich and had an orchard adjoining his house, and the Judeans used to come to him because he was the most honored of them all.

5 And that year two elders from the people were appointed as judges, concerning whom the Master had said: “Lawlessness came forth from Babylon, from elders who were judges, who were supposed to govern the people.” 6 These men were always to be found at Ioakim’s house, and all who had a case to be tried would come to them there.

7 And it happened when the people left at noon that Sousanna would enter and walk about the sons of Israel, named Sousanna daughter of Chelkias, wife of Ioakim—walking about in her husband’s orchard, and since they lusted after her, they diverted their mind and turned away their eyes in order not to look to heaven nor to remember to make right decisions. But both were transfixed by her, and one to the other pretended the opposite to the evil that possessed them because of her (nor did the woman know of this matter).

And as soon as dawn would break, they would come and cheat one another, being anxious who should appear to her first and should speak to her.

And lo, according to her custom, she was walking around. And the one elder had already come, and lo, the other arrived, and one questioned the other saying, “Why did you come out so early in the morning and not take me along?”

And they acknowledged to one another each his distress.

And one said to the other, “Let us go to her!” So having agreed, they approached her and tried to force her.

And the Judean lady said to them, “I know that if I do it, it is death for me, and if I do not, I will not escape your hands. But it would be better for me to fall into your hands by not doing it than to sin before the Lord.”

So the scoundrels turned away, uttering threats among themselves and lay in ambush so that they might have her put to death. And when they came to the city assembly, where they sojourned, all the sons of Israel who were there deliberated.

And when the two elders and judges stood up, they said, “Send for Sousanna daughter of Chelkias, who is the wife of Ioakim.” So they immediately summoned her. Now, when the woman arrived with her own father and mother, even her servants and maids (who numbered five hundred) came and Sousanna’s four children.

And when the two elders and judges stood up, they said, “Send for Sousanna daughter of Chelkias, who is the wife of Ioakim.” So they immediately summoned her. Now, when the woman arrived with her own father and mother, even her servants and maids (who numbered five hundred) came and Sousanna’s four children.

22 And Sousanna groaned and said, “Things are narrow for me on all sides. For if I do this, it is death for me; if I do not, I will not escape your hands. But it is preferable for me to fall into your hands by not doing it than to sin before the Lord.”

24 And Sousanna cried out with a loud voice, but also the two elders shouted against her.

25 And running, the one opened the orchard doors. But when those from the house heard the shouting in the orchard, they rushed in through the side door to see what had happened to her. But when the elders spoke their words, the slaves felt very ashamed, for never had a word like this been said about Sousanna.

28 And it happened the next day, when the people gathered to her husband Ioakim, the two elders came, full of the lawless plot against Sousanna, to have her put to death. And in the presence of the people they said, “Send for Sousanna daughter of Chelkias, who is the wife of
OLDEGREEK

31 Now the woman was very refined. 32 And the scoundrels ordered to uncover her in order that they could be sated with lust for her beauty. 33 And all those who were with her and all who knew her wept.

34 Then after the elders and judges stood up, they placed their hands on her head. 35 But her heart trusted in the Lord, her God, and when she lifted her head, she wept, saying to herself. 36a "O Lord, everlasting God, you who know all things before their beginning, you know that I have not done what these men are maliciously alleging against me." And the Lord heeded her supplication. 37 Then the two elders said, "We were walking around in her husband's orchard, and as we were going around the walk, we saw this woman resting with a man. And while we stood, we saw them having intercourse together. 38 And they did not know that we stood there. Then we agreed together, saying, 'Let's find out who they are.' 39 And as we approached we recognized her, but the young man fled, covered over. 40 But when we had seized this woman, we asked her, 'Who is the man?' 41 But she would not tell us who he was. These things we testify.

And as they were elders and judges of the people, the whole assembly believed them.

44-45 And lo, there was an angel of the Lord as she was being taken off to be executed. And the angel, just as he was ordered, gave a spirit of understanding to a youth, being Daniel.

48 Then Daniel parted the crowd, and after he stood among them, he said, "Are you such fools, O sons of Israel? Without examining or learning the plain truth, do you kill a daughter of Israel? 51 And now, separate them far from one another for me so that I can test them." 51a So, when they were separated, Daniel said to the assembly, "Now, have no regard that they are elders, saying, 'They would never lie!' But I will examine them according to what occurs to me."

52 And he summoned one of them, and they brought the elder to the youth and Daniel to him, "Hear! Hear! You that have grown aged in wicked days, your sins have now come, which you have committed formerly. 53 When you were entrusted to hear and to judge cases carrying a death sentence and you sentenced the innocent while you were acquitting the guilty, though the Lord says, 'You shall not kill an innocent and righteous person.' 54 Now, therefore, under what tree and at what hour did you kill a daughter of Israel?" And when Daniel had turned and spoken thus, he heard the multitude loudly crying. 55 Then Daniel ran to the elders and to the judges of the people and said, "Return to the court, for these men have testified lies against me. And lo, I, will die, though I have done nothing that they have maliciously alleged against me!"

44 And the Lord heeded her voice. 45 And as she was being led away to be executed, God awakened the holy spirit of a young lad whose name was Daniel. 46 And he shouted with a loud voice, "I am innocent of this woman's blood!"

47 Then all the people turned to him and said, "What is this word that you have spoken?" 48 So he, as he stood among them said, "Are you such fools, O sons of Israel? Without examining or learning the plain truth, do you condemn a daughter of Israel? 49 Return to the court, for these men have testified lies against her."

50 And all the people returned quickly. And the elders said to him, "Come, sit among us, and tell us, for God has given you the right of an elder." 51 And Daniel said to them, "Separate them far from one another, and I will examine them."

52 So when they were separated one from the one, he summoned one of them and said to him, "You that have grown aged in wicked days, your sins have now come, which you have committed formerly. 53 When you judged unjust cases, and condemning the innocent, while releasing those responsible, though the Lord says, "You shall not kill an innocent and righteous person." 54 Now, what sort of place of the orchard did you see them with one another?" And the impious one said, "Under a mastich." Then the youth said, "Truly you have lied to the detriment of your own soul, for this very day the angel of the Lord will split your soul."

56 And after he had this one removed, he told them to bring the other to him. Then he also said to that one, "Why is your seed twisted, like that of Sidon, and not like that of Iouda? Beauty has deceived you [or paltry lust]. And thus you used to treat the daughters of Israel, and they, being afraid, would have intercourse with you, but a daughter of Iouda did not tolerate bearing your sickness in lawlessness. Now, therefore, tell me: Under what tree did you catch them having intercourse together?" Then, he said, "Under an evergreen oak." And Daniel said, "Sinner! Now, the angel of the Lord stands with the sword until the people destroy you so that he may saw you in pieces."

60-62 And the whole assembly shouted for the youth, how out of their own mouths he had established them both as false witnesses by their own admission. And as the law states explicitly, they did to them just as they had wickedly intended against their sister. And they silenced them and took them away and threw them into a ravine. Then the angel of the Lord threw fire in their midst. And guiltless blood was saved that day. For this reason youths are beloved by Iakob, because of their simplicity. And as for us, let us watch out for young able sons. For youths will be pious, and a spirit of knowledge and understanding shall be with them forever and ever.

therefore, if you really saw this woman, tell: Under what tree did you see them having intercourse together? Then he said, "Under a mastich." Then Daniel said, "Truly you have lied to the detriment of your own head, for already as the angel of God receives the sentence from God he will split you in two."

56 And after he had him removed, he ordered them to bring the other. And he said to him, "O seed of Chanaan and not Iouda, beauty has beguiled you, and lust has twisted your heart. Thus you used to treat the daughters of Israel, and they, being afraid, would have intercourse with you, but a daughter of Iouda did not tolerate your lawlessness. Now, therefore, tell me: Under what tree did you catch them having intercourse together?" Then, he said, "Under an evergreen oak." Then Daniel said to him, "Truly you also have lied to the detriment of your own head, for the angel of God is waiting with the sword to saw you in two so as to destroy you."

60 And the whole assembly shouted with a loud voice and blessed the God who saves those who hope in him. And they rose up against the two elders, because Daniel had implicated them out of their own mouth that as false witnesses, and they did to them what they had wickedly intended to the neighbor, by doing to them according to the law of Moyses, and they killed them. And guiltless blood was saved that day.

63 Then Chelkias and his wife expressed praise concerning their daughter together with her husband Ioakim and all the relatives, because no shameful deed was found against her. And Daniel became great in the presence of the people from that day onward.
Edition of the Greek Text

The NETS translations of the two versions of Daniel have effectively been based on the critical editions by Joseph Ziegler and Olivier Munnich (Septuaginta: Vetus Testamentum Graecum Auctorisitate Academiae Scientiarum Gottingensis editum XVI.2: Susanna Daniel Bel et Draco [Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1999]). Munnich, however, has revised Ziegler’s edition of the Old Greek (OG), based on additional textual evidence from Papyrus 967, the most important manuscript for the OG, but he has reprinted Ziegler’s text of Theodotion (TH). In a few cases I have emended Munnich’s text. Instances that result in changes in (English) translation appear in the footnotes, while items judged to be doublets and therefore of dubious originality are enclosed in brackets in accordance with Göttingen and NETS practice.

The Two Greek Versions

General Statement

The Book of Daniel with its so-called Additions has a special place in the Septuagint because, along with a few other books, it is extant in two complete, ancient versions. The (earlier) OG translation, of which few witnesses remain, had been supplanted by the TH version by the first or second century CE. A brief introduction to both, and some discussion about their relationship, will be offered. The first six chapters are comprised of narratives about Daniel and his three friends in the courts of Babylonia. The last six chapters are reports of Daniel’s apocalyptic visions, written in the first person. A precise statement on the relationship between the OG and TH translations is complicated by the fact that they do not reflect the same relationship consistently. Furthermore, one’s conclusions have to be tempered by the available evidence. The best place to begin is chapters 4–6 where the differences are most numerous.

Chapters 4–6

The plot in Daniel 4–6 is the same, respectively, in the OG and TH/MT, but there are numerous differences in details. For example, chapter 4 in the OG narrates the story of Nabouchodonosor’s (Nebuchadnezzar’s) madness, but his confession and the publication of his decree occur in a much expanded form at the end of the chapter in vv. 34–34c rather than at the beginning. Relative to TH/MT there are other pluses to vv. 14, 19, 23–25, 28, 30 as well as significant minuses that comprise vv. 20–22. Moreover, there is no equivalent to 4.3–6. Chapter 5 recounts the mysterious writing on the wall, but the OG includes an abbreviated form of the story as a preface and omits significant portions of vv. 3, 10–13. Lacking too is any counterpart to vv. 14–15, 18–22 and 24–25. Chapter 6, in which Daniel is thrown into the lion’s den, is much closer in length in the respective versions. Yet there are large pluses in the OG (vv. 3, 5, 12a, 14, 17–18, 22) and minuses (vv. 15, 23). But even where pluses and minuses are lacking, in these chapters the Greek versions show little relationship in style, grammar and, more importantly, vocabulary.

A detailed comparison of the Greek texts in Daniel 4–6 reveals that less than 19% of any of the vocabulary of TH agrees with the OG. However, when the vocabulary is similar, about 83% of it is exact. Agreements are so few that it is clear that TH is not a revision of the OG in these chapters. At the same time, given the high percentage of verbatim agreements despite the low frequency of shared readings overall, the only reasonable explanation is that the majority of these agreements are due to textual corruption of the OG with TH readings. Indeed, numerous passages can be isolated where there are double translations in the OG that include the reading of TH.

The relationship between the OG and TH is different in chapters 1–3. Although in a few places the OG has larger omissions (e.g., 2.40, 42; 3.3, 15) or additions (2.9; 3.1) relative to TH/MT, the texts are generally much closer in content. The closer relationship between the content of the chapters is reflected in the vocabulary as well, though the number of agreements is still relatively low. When proper nouns are excluded, the vocabulary of the OG and TH is similar about 38% of the time. The highest incidence of agreement is in chapter 3 where it is about 44%. Throughout most of chapters 1–2 and for portions of chapter 3, it is clear that the translation of TH is distinct from the OG. In many passages that contain agreements, they can be demonstrated to be due to corrections and corruptions of the OG from the text of TH. This is consistent with the evidence in chapters 4–6. It is only in chapter 3 that there is a higher degree of agreement between the texts. It would seem unlikely, however, that one chapter out of the first six would be a revision. Therefore, rather than speaking of “revision” in these chapters, one might better label OG and TH independent translations. Agreements are either incidental—since both versions are translating a similar source—or they are textual corruptions in the OG under the influence of TH.

Chapters 7–12

It is not until chapters 7–12 that one generally finds the common vocabulary in the two Greek versions to run around 50% and portions (e.g., 7.10, 25; 8.11–17, 21–23; 9.3–4, 11–12, 19–20, 27; 10.3–6, 19–20; 11.38) where there is extensive agreement for a verse or more. Some of the places where there is agreement can be demonstrated to be due to textual corruption, while others are incidental agreements that would be expected from two independent translators working from a similar source text. However, the portions of the Greek versions in these chapters where the verbal agreements between the texts are strong give the appearance that the TH text is a revision of the OG.

Translation Profile of the Greek

General Character

Though differences in translational approach among Septuagint translators are not difficult to find, there is little doubt that TH is characterized by formal equivalence to its source, while the OG is more dynamic. Hard and fast distinctions between them, however, are difficult to document, as indicated by the use of καί “and” for Hebrew. Though the OG employs δε “just over 50 times, compared to only 7 in TH, most often the default equivalent for both is καί. Another problem in this regard is the nature of the OG translation. In chapters 4–6 the source text underlying the OG seems to be very different from the MT, as a result of which the OG is quite different from TH. On the other hand, in chapters 7–12 the OG seems to be based on a source text very similar to the MT. Consequently, it is much easier to compare their approaches in the later chapters, though the style of the OG does appear to differ in the earlier chapters. Examples of stereotyped equivalents in TH are γινώσκω (“to know”) = ἤκουσε, γνωρίζω (“to make known”) = ἣκουσε (Aramaic), δίδωμι (“to give”) = ἤκουσε, ἐρωτάω (“to go”) + cognates = ἤκουσε, ἀκολούθω (“to speak”) = ἢκουσε and συντελέω (“to finish”) = ἢκουσε. The TH version is not slavishly literal, however. Although it employs stereotyped equivalents in many cases, there are instances where alternative renderings are chosen. For example, γραφή (“writing”) or its cognate verb renders every instance of ἡγγάζω (“writing”) except 6.10 where ἤγγαζομαι (“decree”) is used. In other cases TH has many equivalents for the one Hebrew word. For example, ἡγγάζω (“strength”) is rendered by ἰσχύς (“strength”), υποστήριγμα (“support”), δυναστεία (“sovereignty”), μασχαί (a transcription) and καταφυγή (“refuge”). Verbs, particularly verbs of saying, are more susceptible to multiple equivalents. For example, the verbal form ἀναγινώσκω (“call”) is rendered by ὄνομα (“shout”), φωνέω (“speak loud”), ἀναγινώσκω (“read”), καλέω (“call”) and ἐπικάλεω (“summon”). Excluding γνωρίζω (“to make known”) from the list above, the OG uses some of the same stereotypes as TH, though OG departs more frequently from the default rendering and normally exhibits greater variety in vocabulary choices. The fact that they do employ some of the same stereotypes is more of a reflection of the pattern throughout the LXX than any necessary connection between the OG and TH in Daniel.

Selected Features

There are specific examples that demonstrate that both the OG and TH were concerned to produce readable and reliable translations of their source texts. For example, they both exhibit a flair for using similar sounds either in the Greek or to echo the source text. In 3.4 OG renders MT’s ἀναγινώσκω with καὶ οἱ κήρυξε ἐκπιάλεξε (“And the herald heralded”). In 12.10 TH has καὶ ἀνοιγόμενον ἄνοιμον (“and the lawless act lawlessly”) where OG employs καὶ ἀμαρτώμενοι οἱ ἀμαρτωλοί (“and the sinners sin”).

Despite TH’s concern to produce a faithful translation, the OG is normally superior. For example, ἐδαβλεια (“idol’s temple”), κινδυνεύω τῷ ἄνωτρῳ τραχύλῳ (“I will risk my own neck!”) and δι’ αὐτής ἰδιαεξελεξα (Munnich reads διαμεταλεξα) καὶ ἡ οὐσία αὐτοῦ διεφεύγεται (“will be dismembered, and his possessions confiscated”) are accurate, yet colorful translations. TH’s tendency to adhere more closely to the word order and a word-for-word translation limits the translator’s ability in this area.

A notable difference between the translators is their approach to texts they had trouble understanding. While the OG attempts to offer a translation based on the context, it appears that TH sometimes uses a transcription if the unknown word looks like it could be a proper noun. So TH renders ἰωρεὶ (“watcher”) with ἰωρ ("Ir") while OG has ἀγγέλος ("angel"). Other transcriptions by TH are φορθβομιν (1.3), οὐβολ (8.2), φελμοου (8.13), βουδιν (10.5), μασξιν (11.38) and εφάδωμ (11.45). Incidentally, the fact that TH did not depend on the OG translation when TH did not understand the source text is significant evidence that TH is not a revision of the OG.

The NETS Translation of Daniel

General Approach

I have suggested that TH could be characterized as exhibiting formal equivalence to the source text, whereas OG may be understood as more dynamic or functional in its approach. I have attempted to reflect the subtle nuances in the differences in the translations according to the Greek, although the textural evidence for the OG is less than desirable in terms of producing a critical text. The evidence that we have suggests that both translations tend to follow the word order and reflect the syntax of the original; therefore, this equivalence to the source text is reflected in NETS. The OG departs more frequently from standard equivalents, though any variation of either translation is marked. Normally lexical equivalents for simple verbs and their compounds are distinguished with separate equivalents in NETS.

One of the areas where the basically literal approach of the translators will shine through is in the frequent appearance of the conjunction "and." Both versions of Daniel tended to use the stereotyped equivalent καί ("and") for the Semitic ו, though there are occasions, more frequent in the OG, where participles or alternative conjunctions appear. Thus, it may be concluded that, when other conjunctions appear in NETS, this reflects a difference in the Greek and that, when sentences do not begin with a conjunction, there is an absence of such in the Greek.

The NETS Versions of OG and TH

One of the most challenging aspects of translating the two versions of Daniel into English is providing renderings that clarify both where the two versions are the same as well as where they are different. The process of comparison is a constant juggling act, but there are some immediate and obvious guidelines that were followed that help to understand the translation. Since we are dealing with two translations and there is a desire to indicate both aspects of their relationships, there is an attempt to be consistent in the translation of vocabulary, particularly for stereotyped equivalents. Therefore, even if the word or phrase appears in different places in the narrative they are translated consistently. At the same time, variations in lexical or syntactical choices in the Greek versions are always marked in some way. Differences in the person of verbs are evident from the context, but singular vs. plural forms of verbs or nouns are indicated as well. Thus, in 1.10 the OG has the singular πρόσωπον ("face") where TH has the plural πρόσωπα ("faces"). On the other hand, differences in case are not usually reflected in nouns. Therefore, when some of the vocabulary in the two versions is the same but there are other differences in word order or content, the reader may conclude that these are accurate representations of the vocabulary and syntax of the Greek.

The reader should also be warned that it was not always possible to signal differences in the syntax of the Greek compared to the Hebrew. At times the translator of the NRSV chose a more idiomatic way to represent the Semitic text of Daniel, which coincides with changes introduced by the Greek translators. As a result, NETS and NRSV agree in such cases.

Editorial Detail

The TH version of Daniel is very similar to the Semitic text in the MT, and for this reason it will very often be quite similar to the NRSV. Besides the text of the OG, which often differs markedly from TH, particularly in chapters 4–6, there are a number of differences in the ordering of the verses among the versions. For the numbering of the verses I have followed Ziegler/Munnich for both versions, but the NRSV number will follow in parentheses where it differs. A brief description of the variations is offered here. The inclusion of the Prayer of Azarias and the Song of the Three Young Men in chapter 3 in both Greek versions beginning in v. 24 (end of v. 23 in the OG) requires that the equivalent to 3.24–30 in the MT be numbered 3.91–97 in the Greek versions. The first three verses in chapter 4 in the NRSV actually correspond to 3.31–33 in the MT. So in TH they are numbered 3.98–100, but the equivalent to these verses, along with the additional material, is found at the end of chapter 4 in the OG. The result of this is that the verse numbers in the Greek versions are the same as the MT throughout chapter 4 but are three less than the NRSV, and the OG has additional material numbered 34a–c at the end of the chapter. In addition, there are also a number of omissions, pluses and alternative versions of passages throughout chapters 4–6 in the OG. Chapter 5 has an extra preface at the beginning of the chapter in the OG. The first verse of chapter 6 is actually the last one in chapter 5 for the Greek versions, so the verse numbers are one less than the MT throughout the whole chapter, but the same as the NRSV. There are other isolated instances where the OG has a small difference in verse order or omits a verse.

R. TIMOTHY MCLAY

OLD GREEK

1 During the third year of King Ioakim of Judea, when Nabouchodonosor, king of Babylon, arrived at Ierousalem, he besieged it. 2And the Lord delivered it into his hands as well as Ioakim, king of Judea, and some part of the sacred vessels of the Lord. And taking them to Babylonia, he deposited them in his idol temple.

3 And the king told Abiesdri, his own chief eunuch, to bring to him some of the sons of the nobles of Israel and of royal descent and of the aristocracy: young men without physical defect and good-looking and knowledgeable in all wisdom and educated and wise and strong to be in the king's house, and to teach them letters and Chaldean speech and that they be given a prescribed portion from the king each day, both from the royal table and of the wine, which the king drank, and to educate them for three years and to place some of them before the king.

4 And there were of the race of the sons of Israel who were from Judea: Daniel, Hananias, Misael, Azarias. 5And the chief eunuch assigned them names: to Daniel, Baltasar, but to Hananias, Sedrach and to Misael, Misach and to Azarias, Abdenago.

8 And Daniel was determined in his heart that he not with the king's dinner and the wine that he drank, and he petitioned the chief eunuch so that he not be contaminated. 9And the Lord gave Daniel honor and favor before the chief eunuch. 10And the chief eunuch said to Daniel, "I am distressed because of my lord the king who appointed your food and drink lest he should see your faces more drawb than the other youths of your own age, and you would sentence my head with the king." 11And Daniel said to Abiesdri, the chief eunuch, who was assigned to Daniel, Hananias, Misał, Azarias: 12Do test your servants over a period of ten days, and let us be given some pulse from the earth to gulp down.

THEODOTION

1 In the third year of the reign of Ioakim, king of Iouda, Nabouchodonosor, king of Babylon, came to Ierousalem and besieged it. 2And the Lord gave in his hand King Ioakim of Iouda and a part of the vessels of the house of God. And he brought them to the land of Sennaar, to the house of his god, and brought the vessels into the house of the treasure of his god.

3 And the king told Apshanez, his chief eunuch, to bring in some of the sons of the captivity of Israel, both of the seed of the kingdom and of the Phorthommin: young men, who had no physical defect in them and were handsome in appearance and versed in all wisdom and endowed with knowledge and full of discernment and who had strength in them to stand in the king's house, and to teach them the literature and language of the Chaldeans. 5And the king assigned them the daily portion every day from the king's table and from the wine of his drink and to nurture them for three years and after this that they stand in the king's house, and to teach them the language and literature of the Chaldeans.

6 And among them from the sons of Iouda were Daniel and Hananias and Misał and Azarias. 7And the chief eunuch assigned them names: to Daniel, Baltasar and to Hananias, Sedrach and to Misał, Misach and to Azarias, Abdenago.

8 And Daniel set in his heart how he would never be defiled with the table of the king and with the wine of his drink, and he petitioned the chief eunuch how he might never be defiled. 9And God gave Daniel to mercy and to compassion before the chief eunuch. 10And the chief eunuch said to Daniel, "I am afraid of my lord the king who appointed your food and your drink lest he should see your faces more drawb than the other youths of your own age, and you would sentence my head with the king." 11And Daniel said to Hamelsad whom the chief eunuch had appointed over Daniel, Hananias, Misał, Azarias: 12Do test your servants for ten days, and let them give us some seed, and we will eat, and we will drink water.
and water to drink. 13And if our appearance seems more pale than the other young men who are eating of the royal dinner, as you observe so deal with your servants." 14And he dealt with them in this manner and tested them for ten days. 15Now, after ten days their appearance and physical condition was shown to be better than that of the other young men who were eating the royal dinner. 16And Abiesdri continued to withhold their dinner and their wine and would give them some pulse instead. 17And the Lord gave the young men knowledge and clever insight in every literary art. And to Daniel he gave insight into every vision and dreams and in all wisdom.

18 Then after these days, the king ordered them to be brought in, and they were led by the chief eunuch to Nabouchodonosor the king. 19And the king conversed with them, and no one was found among the wise like Daniel and Hananias and Misael and Azarias, and they were in the king's presence. 20And in every topic and understanding and education, which the king inquired of them, he took them to be ten times wiser, surpassing the savants and scholars that were in the whole kingdom. And the king glorified them and appointed them in affairs in his whole kingdom. 21And Daniel lasted until the first year of the reign of Cyrus.

2 And in the twelfth year of Nabouchodonosor's reign, it happened that visions and dreams befell him, and he was disturbed in his sleep. 2And the king ordered that the enchanters and the magicians and sorcerers of the Chaldeans be brought in to tell the king his dreams. And when they arrived, they stood in front of the king. 3And the king said to them, "I have seen a dream, and my spirit was startled so as to know the meaning of the dream." 4And the Chaldeans spoke to the king in Syrian, "O lord, you shall live forever! Tell the dream to your servants, and we will explain it." 5Then the king said in reply to the Chaldeans, "Unless you tell me the dream with certainty and disclose its sense, you will be made an example, and your possessions will be expropriated into the royal treasury. 6But if you make plain to me the dream and tell its sense, you will receive all kinds of gifts, and you will be glorified by me. Therefore, disclose the dream, and interpret." 7Then they answered a second time, saying, "O king, state the vision, so your servants will interpret regarding these matters." 8And the king said to them, "It is certain you are trying to buy time; therefore, as I have commanded: unless you render to me the dream and disclose its meaning, you will meet up with death. For you have agreed to make lying words in my presence until the occasion changes. Now, therefore, if you state the vision, which I saw during the night, I shall know that you can also disclose its sense." 9And the Chaldeans answered in the presence of the king. "Nobody on earth can say to the king what he has seen as you are asking! And, no king or dynast has our forms be seen before you, and the forms of the youths who are eating the king's table, and do with your servants according to what you see." 10And he heeded them and tested them for ten days. 11And at the end of ten days their forms were seen to be good and strong in flesh, superior to the youths who had been eating the king's table. 12And there was Hamelsad withholding their dinner and the wine of their drink, and he would give them seeds. 13And these youths, these four—God gave them insight and skill in every aspect of literature and wisdom. And Daniel had insight into every vision and dreams.

18 And at the end of the days that the king had said for them to be brought forth, the chief eunuch also brought them before Nabouchodonosor. 19And the king spoke with them, and from among them all none were found like Daniel and Hananias and Misael and Azarias, and they stood before the king. 20And in every matter of wisdom and knowledge that the king inquired of them, he found them ten times better than all the enchanters and magicians who were in his whole kingdom. 21And Daniel continued until year one of Cyrus the king.
asked a such a matter of any sage or magician or Chaldean.

11 And the thing that you seek, O king, is difficult and important. And there is no one who can disclose these things except some angel, whose habitation is not with any flesh; therefore, it is not possible that it happen, as you imagine.”

12 Then the king, being anxious and very sad, ordered to bring forth all the savants of Babylonia.

13 And it was decreed to execute all of them, but Daniel and all those who with him were sought in order to be killed as well.

14 Then Daniel spoke counsel and knowledge to Arioch, the king’s chief cook, who was ordered to bring forward the savants of Babylonia.

15 And he inquired of him, saying, “Why is it being decreed so harshly by the king?” Then Arioch made the ordinance clear to Daniel.

16 Now Daniel immediately went in to the king and petitioned that time might be given to him, and he would disclose everything in the presence of the king.

17 Then Daniel, departing to his own home, declared everything in detail to Hananias and Misael and Azarias, his companions.

18 And he proclaimed a fast and supplication and that help be sought from the Lord Most High about this mystery so that Daniel and those with him might not be delivered to destruction together with the savants of Babylon.

19 Then the mystery was revealed to Daniel in a vision of the night, and Daniel blessed the God of heaven

20 and said:

“Let the name of the great Lord be blessed forever, because wisdom and majesty are his.

And he changes seasons and times,

deposing kings and setting up,

giving to the sages wisdom and understanding to those who have knowledge and revealing deep and obscure things and knowing what is in the darkness and in the light, and with him there is release.

You, Lord of my ancestors,

I acknowledge and praise,

because you gave me wisdom and intelligence, and now you have shown as much as I petitioned in order to disclose regarding these things to the king.”

24 So when Daniel went in to Arioch, who had been appointed by the king to execute all the savants of Babylonia, he said to him, “Do not destroy the savants of Babylon, but bring me in to the king, and I will disclose everything in detail to the king.”

25 Then Arioch quickly brought Daniel in to the king and said to him: “I have found a wise person among the captives of the sons of Judea who will disclose everything in detail to the king. 26 So having answered, the king said to Daniel, but called Baltasar in Chaldean, “Are you able to disclose to me the vision that I have seen and its sense?” 27 So Daniel spoke aloud in the presence of the king and said, “That which the king has seen: the explanation is not of the sages and enchanters and sorcerers and Gazerenes, 28 but there is a Lord in heaven illumining mysteries who has disclosed to King Nabouchodonosor what must happen at the end of days. O King, you shall live forever! The dream and the vision of your head upon your bed is this: 29 O king, after you reclined upon your couch, saw everything that must happen at the end of the days, and he that reveals mysteries has disclosed to you what is about to happen. 30 But as for me, this mystery was not brought to light because of wisdom that I have beyond all persons, but it was shown to me what you pondered in your heart by knowledge in order that it might be disclosed to the king.

31 “And you saw, O king. And lo! There was one image. And that image was exceedingly great. And its appearance, being extraordinary, stood in front of you, and the appearance of the image was frightening. 32 And the head was of good gold, the chest and the arms silver, the belly and the thighs bronze, 33 and the legs iron, the feet partly of iron and partly of earthenware. 34 And you saw until when a stone was cut from a mountain, without hands, and it struck the image on the iron and earthenware feet and crushed them. 35 Then the iron as well as the earthenware and the bronze and the silver and the gold became powdery together as it were, than the chaff on a threshing floor, and the wind threw them so that nothing remained of them. And the stone that struck the image became a great mountain, and it struck the whole earth.

36 “This was the vision. Now we will also tell the meaning in the presence of the king. 37 You, O king, are king of kings, and to you the Lord of heaven has given the kingdom and power and honor and glory. 38 In the whole world from humans and wild animals and birds of the air and fish of the sea, he has delivered them into your hands to rule over all—you are the gold head. 39 And after you will rise a kingdom smaller than yours and another kingdom of bronze, which will rule over the whole earth, 40 and another kingdom, strong as iron, which saws everything and cuts down every tree, and the whole earth will be shaken. 41 And as you saw its feet partly of iron and partly of potter’s ware: there will be another kingdom in two parts, and some of the iron base will be in it; just as you saw the iron commixed with the clay ware. 42 Part of the kingdom will be strong, and part of it will be broken. 43 And as you saw the iron admixed with the clay ware, they will be commixed in races of humans, but they will not be in agreement or well disposed to one another, even as swered and said to Daniel, whose name was Baltasar, “Are you able to tell me the dream that I have seen and its interpretation?” 27 And Daniel answered before the king and said, “The mystery that the king asks: it is not of sages, magicians, enchanters, Gazerenes to tell to the king, 28 but rather, there is a God in heaven revealing mysteries, and he has made known to King Nabouchodonosor what must happen at the end of days. Your dream and the visions of your head upon your bed is this: 29 O king, your thoughts upon your bed ascended to what must happen after this, and he that reveals mysteries has made known to you what must happen. 30 But as for me, this mystery was not revealed by wisdom that I have more than any living beings but in order to make known the interpretation to the king in order that you may know the thoughts of your heart.

31 “You were looking, O king. And lo! There was one image. That great image and its appearance was extraordinary. It was standing before you, and the sight of it was frightening. 32 As for the image whose head was of good gold, its hands [and chest] and arms silver, the belly and the thighs bronze, 33 the shanks iron, the feet partly of iron and partly of earthenware—34 you kept looking until a stone was severed from a mountain, not by hands, and it struck the image on the iron and earthenware feet and completely pulverized. 35 Then the earthenware, the iron, the bronze, the silver, the gold were ground all at once and became as dust from a summer threshing floor, and the greatness of the wind arose, and 36 their place was not found. And the stone that struck the image became a great mountain, and it filled the whole earth.

36 “This is the dream, and we will tell before the king its interpretation. 37 You, O king, are king of kings to whom the God of heaven has given a powerful and mighty and honorable kingdom. 38 In every place where the sons of men live, and both animals of the field and birds of the air, he has given into your hand, and he has established you as lord of all—you are the gold head. 39 And behind you will arise another kingdom inferior to yours and a third kingdom that is the bronze, which will rule over the whole earth. 40 And there will be a fourth kingdom, strong as iron; as iron pulverizes and overpowers everything, so it will pulverize and overpower everything. 41 And you saw that the feet and toes were partly of earthenware and partly of iron: it will be a divided kingdom, and some of the root of the iron will be in it, as you saw the iron mixed with the earthenware. 42 And the toes of the feet, partly of iron but partly of earthenware: part of the kingdom will be strong,
And in the times of these kings the God of heaven will establish a kingdom that will not be destroyed forever, and his kingdom will not be left to another people. And it will pulverize and scatter all the kingdoms, and it will stand forever, just as you have seen a stone cut out of a mountain, without hands, and it ground the earthenware and the iron and bronze and silver and gold. The great God has shown the king what will be at the end of the days, and the vision is precise, and the meaning of it trustworthy.

46 Then Nabouchodonosor the king, falling facedown on the ground, did obeisance to Daniel and ordered that sacrifices and libations be carried out to him. 47 And the king cried out to Daniel and said, “It is certain; your God is God of gods and Lord of lords and Lord of kings who alone brings to light hidden mysteries, because you have been able to disclose this mystery!” 48 Then King Nabouchodonosor, after he magnified Daniel and bestowed many great presents, appointed him over the affairs of Babylonia and designated him ruler and leader of all the savants of Babylon. 49 And Daniel petitioned the king that Sedrach, Misach, and Abdenago might be appointed over the affairs of the kingdom of Babylon. And Daniel was in the royal court.

3 In the eighteenth year of Nabouchodonosor, when he was managing cities and regions and all who lived from India to Ethiopia, he also made a golden image. Its height was sixty cubits, and its width was twelve cubits. And he set it up on the plain of the enclosure of the region of Babylonia. 2 And Nabouchodonosor, king of kings and ruling the whole inhabited world, sent to gather all the nations, tribes, and languages, satraps and generals, local rulers and magistrates, administrators and the authorities by region and all those in the inhabited world to come to the dedication of the golden image, which King Nabouchodonosor had established, and the aforementioned stood in front of the image. 4 And the herald heralded to the crowds, “I tell you, O nations, peoples, and languages, whenever you hear the sound of the horn, pipe, lyre, trigon, harp and a symphony of all kinds of musical instruments, you should fall down and do obeisance to the gold image, which King Nabouchodonosor has set up. 6 And anyone who does not fall down and do obeisance, they will throw him into the furnace of fire.” 7 And at that time when all the nations heard the horn and all the sounds of musical instruments, all the nations, tribes and languages, falling down they did obeisance to the gold image that Nabouchodonosor had set up.
8 At that time, when Chaldean men came forward, they denounced the Judeans. 9 And they answered and said, "O lord king, live forever! 10 You, O king, have ordered and decided that every person who hears the horn and all the sounds of musical instruments should fall down and do obeisance to the gold image. 11 And whoever does not do obeisance will be thrown into the furnace blazing with fire. 12 But there are certain Judean men whom you have appointed over the region of Babylonia—Sedrach, Misach, Abdenago—these people do not fear your command, and they do not serve your idol, and they do not do obeisance to your gold image, which you have set up."

13 Then Nabouchodonosor, being angered, in a rage ordered that Sedrach, Misach, Abdenago be brought in. Then the men were brought to the king. 14 So when King Nabouchodonosor saw them, he said to them, "O Sedrach, Misach, Abdenago, for what reason do you not serve my gods and do not do obeisance to the gold image, which I have set up? 15 And now, if you are now prepared, as soon as you hear the horn and all the sounds of musical instruments to fall down and do obeisance to the gold image that I set up . . . . But if not—know that if you do not do obeisance, you will be thrown immediately into the furnace blazing with fire, and what god will deliver you out of my hands?"

16 But Sedrach, Misach, Abdenago answered and said to King Nabouchodonosor, "O king, we have no need to answer you about this command, 17 for there is God who is in heaven, our one Lord, whom we fear, who is able to deliver us from the furnace of fire, and out of your hands, O king, he will deliver us. 18 And then it will be clear to you, that we will neither serve your idol nor will we do obeisance to your gold image, which you have set up."

19 Then Nabouchodonosor was filled with anger, and the form of his face was distorted against them. And he ordered that the furnace be heated sevenfold more than it was necessary for it to be heated 20 and ordered very strong men, who were in his command, after they had tied those with Azarias, to throw them into the furnace blazing with fire. 21 Then these men were tied with their sandals on and their hats on their heads in their clothing, and they were thrown into the furnace of fire. 22 Because the king's command was insistent, the furnace was also heated sevenfold more than before, and the men who had been selected, after they had tied and brought them to the furnace, threw them into it. 23 Then the flame coming out from the furnace burned and killed the men who tied those with Azarias, but they were preserved.

24 So, therefore, Hananias and Azarias and Misael prayed and sang hymns to the Lord, when their骨头 = Mu the king ordered them to be thrown into the furnace. Then Azarias stood and prayed in this way. And he opened his mouth, and he acknowledged the Lord together with his companions in the middle of the fire, while the furnace was being heated exceedingly by the Chaldeans, and he said:

26 Blessed are you, O Lord, God of our ancestors, and praiseworthy and glorified is your name forever!

27 For you are just in all you have done for us, and all your works are genuine and your ways right, and all your judgments are genuine.

28 And you have executed true judgments in all you have brought upon us and upon Ierousalem, your holy city of our ancestors, because in truth and judgment you have done all these things because of our sins.

29 For we have sinned in everything and broken your law in turning away from you, and in all matters we have sinned grievously.

30 And we have not heeded the commandments of your law, and we have not kept them or done as you have commanded us so that it might go well for us.

31 And now all that you have brought upon us you have done by a true judgment.

32 And you have handed us over into the power of our enemies, lawless and hateful rebels, and to an unjust king, the most wicked in the world.

33 And now we cannot open our mouth: it has become a shame and a reproach for your slaves and those who worship you.

34 For your name’s sake do not give us up completely, and do not annul your covenant.

35 And do not withdraw your mercy from us, for the sake of Abraam beloved by you and your slave Isaak and Israel your holy one, as you spoke to them saying that their offspring would be multiplied like the stars of heaven in multitude and like the sand on the shore of the sea.

36 For we, O Master, have become fewer than any other nation and are brought low this day in all the earth because of our sins.

37 And in this time there is no ruler and prophet and leader, no whole burnt offering or sacrifice or oblation or incense, no place to make an offering before you
and to find mercy.

39 But rather with a broken life and a humbled spirit may we be accepted,
as though it were with whole burnt offering
of rams and bulls
and with tens of thousands of fat lambs;
thus let our sacrifice come before you
today,
because no shame will come to those
who trust in you,
and may it come to maturity behind you.

40 And now with a broken life
and a humbled spirit may we be accepted,
as though it were with whole burnt offering
of rams and bulls
and with tens of thousands of fat lambs;
thus let our sacrifice come before you
today,
because no shame will come to those
who trust in you,
and may it come to maturity behind you.

41 And now with our whole heart we follow,
and we fear you and seek your face.

42 Do not put us to shame, but deal with us in your fairness and in your abundant mercy.

43 And deliver us in accordance with your marvelous works,
and bring glory to your name, O Lord.

44 And may all who display evil to your slaves
also be put to shame, and may they be disgraced by all dominance
and their strength be broken.

45 Let them know that you alone are the Lord glorious over the whole world.

46 And when they cast the three in all at once into the furnace, the furnace was red hot, sevenfold in its heat. And when they threw them in, those who threw them in were over them, and those below them kept on stoking from underneath with naptha and pitch and tow and brushwood. 47 And the flame poured out above the furnace forty-nine cubits and flared out and burned those of the Chaldeans who were caught near the furnace. 49 But an angel of the Lord came down into the furnace to be with Azarias and his companions and shook the flame of the fire out of the furnace and made the inside of the furnace as if a moist breeze were whistling through. And the fire did not touch them at all and caused them no pain or distress. 51 Now,
the three resuming, as though from one mouth, were singing hymns and glorifying and blessing and exalting God in the furnace, saying:

52 Blessed are you, O Lord, God of our ancestors,
and to be praised and highly exalted
forever.
And blessed is your glorious holy name,
and to be highly praised and highly exalted forever and ever.

52 I.e. sacrifice
54 Blessed are you upon the throne of your kingdom, and to be greatly hymned and highly glorified forever.
55 Blessed are you who view the depths sitting upon cheroubin, and to be praised and glorified forever.
56 Blessed are you in the firmament, and to be hymned and glorified forever.
57 Bless the Lord, all you works of the Lord; sing hymns, and highly exalt him forever.
58 Bless the Lord, you angels of the Lord; sing hymns, and highly exalt him forever.
59 Bless the Lord, you heavens; sing hymns, and highly exalt him forever.
60 Bless the Lord, all you waters above the heavens; sing hymns, and highly exalt him forever.
61 Bless the Lord, all you powers of the Lord; sing hymns, and highly exalt him forever.
62 Bless the Lord, sun and moon; sing hymns, and highly exalt him forever.
63 Bless the Lord, stars of heaven; sing hymns, and highly exalt him forever.
64 Bless the Lord, all you rain and dew; sing hymns, and highly exalt him forever.
65 Bless the Lord, all you winds; sing hymns, and highly exalt him forever.
66 Bless the Lord, fire and heat; sing hymns, and highly exalt him forever.
67 Bless the Lord, chill and winter cold; sing hymns, and highly exalt him forever.
68 Bless the Lord, dews and falling snow; sing hymns, and highly exalt him forever.
69 Bless the Lord, ice and cold; sing hymns, and highly exalt him forever.
70 Bless the Lord, snows and hoarfrosts; sing hymns, and highly exalt him forever.
71 Bless the Lord, nights and days; sing hymns, and highly exalt him forever.
72 Bless the Lord, darkness and light; sing hymns, and highly exalt him forever.
73 Bless the Lord, lightnings and clouds; sing hymns, and highly exalt him forever.
74 Let the earth bless the Lord; let it sing hymns and highly exalt him forever.
75 Bless the Lord, mountains and hills; sing hymns, and highly exalt him forever.
76 Bless the Lord, all that grows in the ground; sing hymns, and highly exalt him forever.
77 Bless the Lord, rain storms and springs; sing hymns, and highly exalt him forever.
78 Bless the Lord, seas and rivers; sing hymns, and highly exalt him forever.

80 Or spirits
Bless the Lord, you sea-monsters and all that move in the waters; sing hymns, and highly exalt him forever.

Bless the Lord, all birds of the air; sing hymns, and highly exalt him forever.

Bless the Lord, four-footed and wild animals of the land; sing hymns, and highly exalt him forever.

Bless the Lord, all humans on earth; sing hymns, and highly exalt him forever.

Bless the Lord, O Israel; sing hymns, and highly exalt him forever.

Bless the Lord, you priests, slaves of the Lord; sing hymns, and highly exalt him forever.

Bless the Lord, spirits and righteous souls; sing hymns, and highly exalt him forever.

Bless the Lord, you who are holy and humble in heart; sing hymns and highly exalt him forever.

Bless the Lord, Hananias, Azarias, Misael; sing hymns, and highly exalt him forever.

For he has rescued us from Hades and saved us from the hand of death and released us from the fire.

Acknowledge the Lord, for he is kind, for his mercy is forever.

All who worship the Lord, bless the God of gods; sing hymns, and acknowledge him, for his mercy is forever and ever.

And it happened that when the king heard them singing hymns and when he stood, he saw them alive. Then Nabouchodonosor the king was astonished. And he rose quickly and said to his nobles, "Lo, I see four men unbound and walking in the fire, and no ruin has come to them, and there is no destruction on them, and the appearance of the fourth is like a divine son." And approaching the door of the still blazing furnace, the king called them by name, "Sedrach, Misach, Abdenago, servants of the Most High God, come out of the fire!" So then, the men came out from the middle of the fire. And the governors, the local rulers, the heads of families and the king's Friends gathered together and looked at these men, that the fire had not touched their body, and their hair was not burned, and their trousers were not changed, nor was a smell of fire on them. Then in response Nabouchodonosor the king said, "Blessed be the Lord, the God of Sedrach, Misach, Abdenago, who has sent his angel and saved his servants who hope in him; for they disregarded the king's order and yielded up their body for burning in order that they might not serve or do obeisance to another god except to their God. And now, I decide that any nation and all tribes and languages—whoever blasphemes the Lord, God of Sedrach, Misach, Abdenago will be dissected, and his possessions confiscated, because there is no other god who is able to deliver in this way.” So then, after the king gave authority to Sedrach, Misach, Abdenago over his whole region, he appointed them rulers.

4 In the eighteenth year of his reign, Nabuchodonosor said,
“I was living at peace in my home and prospering on my throne.

2 I saw a dream, and I was alarmed, and fear fell upon me.

7 I was sleeping, and lo, a tall tree was growing on the earth. Its appearance was huge, and there was no other like it.

9 Its branches were about thirty stadia long, and all the animals of the earth found shade under it, and the birds of the air hatched their brood in it. Its fruit was abundant and good, and it sustained all living creatures.

8 Its appearance was great. Its crown came close to heaven, and its span to the ends of the whole earth. The sun and the moon dwelled in it and illuminated the whole earth.

10 I continued looking in my sleep; lo, an angel was sent in power out of heaven. And he called and said:
‘Cut it down, and destroy it, for it has been decreed by the Most High to uproot and render it useless.’

12 And thus he said: ‘Spare one of its roots in the ground so that he may feed on grass like an ox with the animals of the earth in the mountains, and his body may be changed from the dew of heaven, and he may graze with them for seven years until he acknowledges that the Lord of heaven has authority over everything.

4, 96(29) And I publish a decree: Any people, tribe, language that speaks blasphemy against the God of Sedrach, Misach, Abdenago—they will be for destruction and their houses for plunder, as there is no other god who is able to rescue in this way.”

97(30) Then the king restored Sedrach, Misach, Abdenago in the region of Babylon and deemed them worthy to govern all the Judeans who were in his kingdom.

4, 98(4.1) King Nabuchodonosor to all peoples, tribes and languages who live throughout the earth: May you have abundant peace! The signs and wonders that the Most High God did for me I am pleased to recount to you—how great and mighty they are!

His kingdom is an eternal kingdom, and his authority is for generation upon generation.

4, 99(2) The signs and wonders that the Most High God did for me I am pleased to recount to you—how great and mighty they are!

2, 100(3) how great and mighty they are!

His kingdom is an eternal kingdom, and his authority is for generation upon generation.
Nevertheless, leave the growth of its roots in the ground and with a band of iron and bronze, and he will lie in the tender grass of the outdoors and in the dew of heaven.
And his lot will be with the animals in the grass of the earth.

His heart will be changed from that of humans, and the heart of an animal will be given to him,
and seven seasons will be altered over him.

The sentence is by meaning of Ir b, and the demand is the word of holy ones in order that those alive may know that the Most High is Lord of the kingdom of humans, and he will give it to whom he will,
and he will set over it what is contempted of humans.

This is the dream that I, King Nabuchodonosor, saw. And you, Baltasar, tell the meaning, since all the sages of my kingdom are unable to explain to me the meaning. But you, Daniel, are able, because a holy, divine spirit is in you.

Then Daniel, whose name was Baltasar, was mute for about one hour, and his thoughts troubled him. And the king answered and said, “Baltasar, do not let the dream or the interpretation press you.” And Baltasar answered and said, “Sir, may the dream be for those who hate you, and its interpretation come upon your enemies! The tree that was planted in the earth, whose appearance was great—it is you, O king. And all the birds of the air which nest in it. The strength of the earth and the nations and all the languages unto the ends of the earth and all countries are slaves to you. Furthermore, the fact that that tree was exalted and neared heaven and that its span touched the clouds is: You, O king, have been exalted above all humans who are upon the face of the whole earth. Your heart was exalted with pride and power vis-à-vis the holy one and his angels. Your works were seen, how you ravaged the house of the living God pertaining to the sins of the sanctified people. And the vision, which you saw, that an angel was sent in power by the Lord and that he said to destroy and cut down the tree: the verdict of the great God will come upon you, and the Most High and his angels are pursuing you. They will take you away to prison and send you away into a desert place. And the root of the tree, which was spared, since it was not uprooted: the place of your throne will be kept for you for a season and an hour. Lo, they are being prepared against you, and they will whip you, and they will bring the judgments against you. The Lord lives in heaven, and his authority is over the whole earth. 24(27) Entreat him concerning sins, and atone for all your iniquities with alms so that equity might be given to you and you might be long-lived on the throne of your kingdom and not be destroyed. Gladly receive these words, for my word is accurate and your time is complete.”

25(28) And at the completion of the words, Nabouchodonosor, as he heard the verdict of the vision, kept the words in his heart. 26(29) And after twelve months the king was walking on the walls of the city in all his glory and going through its towers, 27(30) and answering he said, “This is the great Babylon, which I have built by the might of my power, and it will be called my royal house.” 28(31) And at the completion of his word, he heard a voice from heaven: “O King Nabouchodonosor, to you it is said: The kingdom of Babylon has been taken away from you and is being given to another, a condemned person in your house. Lo, I establish him over your kingdom, and he will receive your authority and your glory and your luxury so that you may recognize that the God of heaven has authority in the kingdom of humans and he will give it to whomever he desires. Now, by sunrise, another king will rejoice in your house and will take your glory and your power and your authority. 29(32) And the angels will pursue you for seven years, and you will never be seen, nor will you ever speak with any person. They will feed you grass like an ox, and your pasture will be from the tender grass of the earth. Lo, instead of your glory they will tie you, and another will have your luxurious house and the kingdom. 30(33) Now, by morning everything will be completed concerning you. O King Nabouchodonosor of Babylon, and none of all these things will fail.”

30a “I, Nabouchodonosor, king of Babylon, was bound seven years. They fed me grass like an ox, and I would eat the tender grass of the earth. And after seven years I gave my soul to supplication, and I petitioned before the Lord, the God of heaven, concerning my ignorance. 30(34) And my hair became like wings of an eagle, my nails like those of a lion. My flesh and my heart were changed. I would walk about naked with the animals of the field. I saw a dream and forebodings gripped me, and after a while a great sleep overtook me, and drowsiness fell upon me. 30c And at the completion of seven years my time of redemption came, and my sins and my ignorances were fulfilled before the God of heaven, and I entreated the great God of gods concerning my ignorances, and lo, one angel called me from heaven: ‘Nabouchodonosor, be subject to the holy God of heaven, and give glory to the Most High. The dominion of your nation is being given back to you.’

2Or acts of mercy
At the same time my reason was returned to me, and I came into the honor of my kingdom, and my form returned to me. And my despots and my nobles sought me, and I became strong over my kingdom, and still more greatness was added to me. Now, therefore, I, Nabouchodonosor, praise and extol and glorify the king of heaven, because all his works are true and his paths are justice; and he is able to bring low all those who walk in pride.

34a From now on I will serve him, and trembling has gripped me from fear of him, and I praise all his holy ones, for the gods of the nations do not have power in them to give away the kingdom of a king to another king and to kill and to make alive and to do signs and great and terrible marvels and to change very great matters as the God of heaven has done with me. And he changed great things about me. I will offer sacrifices to the Most High as an odor of fragrance to the Lord for my life every day of my reign, and I will do what is pleasing before him, I and my people, [my nation] and my lands that are in my authority. And as many as have spoken against the God of heaven and as many as should be caught speaking anything, I will condemn these to death.”

34b Then King Nabouchodonosor wrote a circular letter to all the nations in each place and to countries and languages who live in all the countries, generations and generations. “Praise the Lord, God of heaven. Bring sacrifice and offering to him gloriously. I, the king of kings, acknowledge him gloriously, because he has done thus with me. In the same day he established me on my throne, and I took possession of my authority and my kingdom among my people, and my greatness was restored to me. King Nabouchodonosor to all nations and all countries and all the inhabitants in them: May peace be multiplied to you at every time. And now, I will show to you the deeds that the great God has done with me. Moreover, it seemed good to me to show you and your savants that God is one, and his marvels are great; his rule is forever; his authority is from generation to generation.”

And he sent letters about everything that happened to him during his reign to all the nations which were under his reign.

[King Baltasar gave a great reception on the day of the dedication of his palace, and he invited two thousand men of his nobles. On that day, Baltasar, in high spirits from the wine and boasting in his drink, praised all the molten and carved gods of the nations, and he did not give praise to the Most High God. On that same night, fingers, as though of a human, came forth and inscribed on the wall of his house, on the plaster, opposite the light: MANE PHARES THEKEL. Their translation is: MANE, it has been numbered; PHARES, it has been taken away; THEKEL, it has been established.]
1 King Baltasar made a great feast for his associates. 2 And he was drinking wine, and his heart was exalted, and he said to bring the gold and silver vessels of the house of God that his father Nabuchodonosor had brought from Jerusalem and to pour wine in them for his associates. 3 And they were brought, and they were drinking with them. 4 And they blessed their handmade idols, and they did not bless the eternal God who had authority over their spirit.

5 In that very same hour fingers, as though of a human hand, came forth and wrote on the wall of his house, on the plaster opposite the light, facing King Baltasar. And he saw a hand writing, and his appearance was changed, and foreboding pressed him. Therefore, the king hastened and stood up and kept looking at that writing, and his companions spoke loudly around him. 7 And the king called in a loud voice that the enchanters and sorcerers and Chaldeans and Gazarenes be summoned to tell the meaning of the writing. And they came to the spectacle to see the writing, and they were unable to interpret the meaning of the writing for the king. Then the king published a declaration, saying: Anyone who can explain the meaning of the writing—he will dress him in purple, and the gold torque he will put on him, and authority over a third of my kingdom will be given to him. 8 And the enchanters and sorcerers and Gazarenes came in, and none was able to tell the meaning of the writing. 9 Then the king summoned the queen about the sign, and he explained to her how large it was and that no person was able to tell the king the meaning of the writing.

10 Then the queen reminded him concerning Daniel who was among the captives of Judea. 11 And she said to the king, “That person was prudent and wise and surpassed all the sages of Babylon, and a holy spirit is in him. And in the days of your father the king he explained difficult meanings to Nabuchodonosor your father.”

13 Then Daniel was brought in to the king. And answering the king said to him, “O Daniel, are you able to explain to me the interpretation of the writing? And I shall dress you in purple, and a gold torque I shall put on you, and you will have authority over a third part of my kingdom.”
17 Then Daniel stood in front of the writing and read, and thus he answered the king, “This is the writing: it has been numbered; it has been reckoned; it has been taken away. And the writing hand ceased, and this is their interpretation.

23 O King, you made a feast for your Friends, and you were drinking wine, and the vessels of the house of the living God were brought to you, and you were drinking with them, you and your nobles. And you praised all the idols made by human hands, and you did not bless the living God. And your spirit is in his hand, and he himself gave to you your reign, and you did not bless him nor praise him. 26 This is the meaning of the writing: the time of your kingdom has been reckoned; your kingdom is coming to an end. 27 It has been cut short, and it has finished. 28 Your kingdom is being given to the Medes and to the Persians.”

29 Then Baltasar the king clothed Daniel in purple, and he put a gold torque on him, and he gave him authority over a third part of his kingdom.

30 And the meaning came upon Baltasar the king, and the rule was taken away from the Chaldeans and was given to the Medes and to the Persians, 31(6.1) and Xerxes, who was king of the Medes, received the kingdom.

32 In that very night Baltasar, the Chaldean king, was killed. 31(6.1) And Darius the Mede received the kingdom, being sixty-two years old.
And when Darius was full of days and esteemed in old age, he set one hundred twenty-seven satraps over his whole kingdom and over them three men their leaders, and Daniel was one of the three men, since he had authority over everyone in the kingdom. And Daniel was clothed in purple and was great and esteemed before King Darius, as he was knowledgeable and intelligent and a holy spirit was in him, and he prospered in the affairs of the king that he performed. Then the king decided to set Daniel over all his kingdom, and the two young men whom he had appointed with him and the one hundred twenty-seven satraps.

Now, when the king decided to appoint Daniel over all his kingdom, then the two young men, speaking to each other, agreed to a plan and resolve among themselves, since they found neither sin nor ignorance against Daniel for which they could accuse him to the king. And they said, "Come, let us establish an interdict by ourselves that no one will present a petition and never pray a prayer to any god for thirty days, except from you, O king, otherwise he will die," so that they might vanquish Daniel before the king and he might be cast into the lions' pit. For they knew that Daniel prayed to and entreated the Lord, his God, three times a day.

Then those men went and said before the king, "We have established an interdict and stipulation that any person who prays a prayer or requests some request from any god, for thirty days, except from King Darius, will be cast into the lions' pit." And they requested the king so that he might establish and enforce an interdict, by royal stipulation, that whoever makes a request of any god or human, for thirty days, except from you, O king, will be thrown into the lions' pit. Now, then, O king, establish the interdict and publish a document so that the decree of the Persians and Medes may not be changed.

And the tacticians and the satraps were trying to find a pretext for complaint against Daniel, and they could not find any pretext or corruption against him, because he was faithful. And the tacticians said, "We shall not find a pretext against Daniel except in the laws of his God."

6 Then the tacticians and the satraps approached the king and said to him, "O King Darius, live forever! All those over your kingdom, generals and satraps, magistrates and local rulers counseled together to establish and enforce an interdict, by royal stipulation, that whoever makes a request of any god or human, for thirty days, except from you, O king, will be thrown into the lions' pit. Now, then, O king, establish the interdict and publish a document so that the decree of the Persians and Medes may not be changed."

And King Darius ordered that the decree be written.

And when Daniel knew that the decree had been registered, he entered into his house, and the windows in its upper rooms were open for him opposite Jerusalem, and he was getting down on his knees three times a day and was praying and making confession to his God, just as he was doing previously. Then those men spied and found Daniel petitioning and entreating his God. And they approached the king and said, "O king! Did you not post an interdict, that any person who makes a request of any god or human, for thirty days, except from you, O king, will be thrown into the lions' pit?" And the king said, "The thing is real, and it is the decree of the Medes and Persians, which shall not be passed over." Then they answered and said before the king, "Daniel, one of the sons of captivity of Judea, has not submitted to your decree, and he requests his requests of his God three times a day." Then the king, as he heard the charge, was greatly grieved over him, and he agonized for Daniel to deliver him, and they said, “Lo, we have found Daniel, your Friend, praying and entreating the face of his God thrice a day. 14 And grieving, the king said that Daniel be cast into the lions’ pit according to the interdict, [which he established against him]. Then the king grieved exceedingly for Daniel, and he kept assisting to deliver him until sunset from the hands of the satraps. 15 And he was unable to deliver him from them. 16 Now Darius the king cried out and said to Daniel, “Your God, whom you continually serve thrice a day, he will deliver you from the power of lions! Have courage until morning.”

17 Then Daniel was thrown into the lions’ pit, and a stone was brought and laid on the mouth of the pit, and the king sealed it with his signet and with the signet of his nobles so that Daniel might not be removed by them or the king pull him up from the pit. 18 Then the king returned to his palace and passed the night without eating and was grieving for Daniel. But the God of Daniel, having taken forethought for him, shut the mouths of the lions, and they did not bother Daniel.

19 And King Darius rose early in the morning and took the satraps with him. And he went and stood at the opening of the lions’ pit. 20 Then the king called Daniel in a loud voice with wailing, saying, “O Daniel, are you still alive, and has your God whom you continually serve saved you from the lions, and have they not injured you?”

21 Then Daniel heeded the loud voice and said, “O king, I am still alive, and the Lord has saved me from the lions, because righteousness was found in me in his presence, and also in your presence, O king, neither ignorance nor sin was found in me. But you listened to people who deceive kings, and you cast me into the lions’ pit for destruction.” 23 Then all the authorities gathered and saw Daniel, how the lions had not bothered him. 24 Then these two men who testified falsely against Daniel—they and their wives and their children were cast to the lions. And the lions killed them and shattered their bones, and Daniel was appointed over the whole kingdom of Darius.

25 Then Darius wrote to all nations and countries and languages who inhabited his whole earth, saying: 26 “Let all people who are in my kingdom do obeisance and worship Daniel’s God, for he is an enduring and living God for generations and generations, forever.

27 I, Darius, will do obeisance and be subject to him all my days, for the handmade idols are not able to save as God redeemed Daniel.”

28 And King Darius was added to his fathers, and Cyrus the Persian received his kingdom.

19 Then the king rose in the morning with the daylight and went quickly to the lions’ pit. 20 And as he came near the pit, he cried out in a strong voice, “O Daniel, the slave of the living God, has your God whom you continually serve been able to deliver you from the mouth of the lions?” 21 Then Daniel heeded the loud voice and said, “O king, I am still alive, and the Lord has saved me from the lions, because righteousness was found in me in his presence, and also in your presence, O king, neither ignorance nor sin was found in me. But you listened to people who deceive kings, and you cast me into the lions’ pit for destruction.” 23 Then the king was exceedingly buoyed over him and said to bring up Daniel out of the pit. And Daniel was appointed over the whole kingdom of Darius.

25 Then Darius wrote to all peoples, tribes, languages who inhabited the whole earth: “May you have abundant peace! 26 A decree was established from before me, that in every realm of my kingdom people should tremble and fear before the God of Daniel, because he is a living God and endures forever, and his kingdom will not be destroyed, and his dominion is unto the end. 27 He helps and rescues, and he works signs and wonders in heaven and on earth; he delivered Daniel from the power of the lions.”

28 And Daniel prospered in the reign of Darius and in the reign of Cyrus the Persian.
7 During the first year of Baltasar's reign over the land of Babylonia, Daniel saw a vision from his head upon his bed. Then Daniel wrote down the vision that he saw. He wrote as a summary of the account: 2On my bed I was watching in my sleep during the night, and lo, the four winds of heaven fell upon a great sea, and four beasts were coming up out of the sea, each one differing from the other. 4The first was like a lioness, having as though wings of an eagle. I kept watching until its wings were plucked out, and it was lifted from the ground and was set upon human feet, and a human heart was given to it. 5And lo, another beast was after it, having the likeness of a bear. And it was placed on one side, and three ribs were in its mouth. And thus it said, "Rise, devour much flesh!" 6And after this, I was watching another beast like a leopard. And four wings of a bird were on it, and the beast had four heads, and language was given to it. 7But after this, I was watching in a vision by night a terrifying fourth beast, and the fear of it was surpassing in strength. It had great iron teeth, devouring and pounding; it was trampling with its feet round about, and it behaved differently from all the beasts before it, and it had ten horns. 8And many designs were in its horns, and lo, one horn grew up among them, a little one among its horns, and three of the earlier horns were removed by it. And lo, eyes like human eyes were in this horn, and a mouth speaking great things. And it made war against the holy ones.

9 I kept watching until thrones were set, and an ancient of days sat, having a cloak like snow, and the tuft of hair on his head was like pure wool. The throne was like a flame of fire shooting out, and a stream of fire went out from before him. A thousand thousands were waiting on him, and ten thousand times ten thousand stood attending him. And books were opened, and a court sat in judgment.

11I was then watching the noise of the great words, which the horn kept speaking, and the beast was beaten to death, and its body perished and was given over to burning with fire. 12And he removed those around him from their authority, and time of life was granted to them for a season and a time. 13I was watching in the night visions, and lo, it was a son of man coming upon the clouds of heaven. And he came as far as the ancient of days, and the attendants were present with him.

14 And royal authority was given to him, and all the nations of the earth according to posterity,

7 In the first year of Baltasar, king of the Chaldeans, Daniel saw a dream, and the visions of his head were upon his bed. And he wrote down the dream: 1I, Daniel, was watching, and lo, the four winds of heaven kept assaulting the great sea, and four great beasts were coming up out of the sea, differing from one another. 4The first was like a lioness, and the wings of this one were as of an eagle. I kept watching until its wings were plucked off, and it was lifted up from the ground and was set upon feet of a human, and the heart of a human was given to it. 5And lo, there was a second beast like a bear. And it was raised up on one side, and three ribs were in its mouth between its teeth. And thus, they told it, "Arise, eat much flesh!" 6Behind this one, I was watching, and lo, there was another beast like a leopard. And it had four wings of a bird on it, and the beast had four heads; and authority was given to it. 7Behind this one, I was watching, and lo, a fourth beast, terrifying and amazing and exceedingly strong. And its teeth were of iron; they were eating and pulverizing, and it stamped what was left with its feet. And it was exceedingly different from all the beasts that preceded it, and it had ten horns. 8I was considering its horns, and lo, another little horn came up among them, and three of the horns of those that preceded it were uprooted from before it. And lo, eyes like eyes of a human were in this horn, and a mouth speaking great things.

9 I kept watching until thrones were set, and an ancient of days sat, and his clothing was white like snow, and the hair of his head was like pure wool; his throne was a flame of fire; its wheels were burning fire.

10 A stream of fire drew in before him. A thousand thousands were serving him, and ten thousand times ten thousand stood attending him. A court sat in judgment, and books were opened.

11I was then watching because of the noise of the great words, which that horn kept speaking, until the beast was taken away and destroyed, and its body was given over to burning with fire. 12And as for the rest of the beasts, the dominion was taken away, and length of life was granted to them for a time and a season. 13I was watching in the night visions, and lo, as it were a son of man coming with the clouds of heaven. And he came as far as the ancient of days and was presented to him.

14 And to him was given the dominion and the honor and the kingship, and all peoples, tribes, languages and all honor was serving him. And his authority is an everlasting authority, which shall never be removed—and his kingship, which will never perish.

15 And as for me, Daniel, since I was exhausted by these things, by the night vision, 16I approached one of those standing and was seeking the truth from him about all these things. So answering, he spoke to me and disclosed to me the meaning of the words: 17“These great beasts are four kingdoms, which shall perish from the earth. 18And holy ones of the Most High will receive the kingdom and possess the kingdom forever—forever and ever.”

19 Then I wanted to learn accurately concerning the fourth beast, which was different from all others and extremely terrible. And lo, its teeth were iron, and its claws were bronze, consuming all round about and trampling with the feet. 20And concerning its ten horns that were upon its head, and the one, which was growing, and three fell out because of it—and that horn had eyes and a mouth speaking great things, and its looks surpassed the others. 21And I was observing that horn preparing for war against the holy ones and routing them 22until the ancient of days came, and he gave the verdict for the holy ones of the Most High, and the time was given, and the holy ones gained possession of the seat of empire.

23And it was said to me concerning the fourth beast:

“There shall be a fourth kingdom upon the earth, which shall excel over the whole earth and disturb it and grind it down.

24 And as for the ten horns of the kingdom, ten kings shall rise, and another king shall rise after these. And he shall excel more than the former ones in evil, and he shall humble three kings.

25 And he shall speak words against the Most High and shall wear down the holy ones of the Most High and shall expect to change seasons and law, and everything shall be delivered into his hands for a time and times and until half a time.

26 And the trial shall sit, and they shall destroy authority, and they shall resolve to defile and destroy completely.

27 And he shall give the authority and the kingdom and the magnitude of all the kingdoms, which are under heaven, to the holy people of the Most High,

28 As for me, Daniel, I was seized with great dismay, and my condition spread within me, and I fixed the matter in my heart.

8 During the third year, when Baltasar was king, there was a vision, which I, Daniel, saw after I saw the first one. And I saw in the vision of my dream. When I was in Sousa the city, which is in the region of Elymais, while I was still by the gate of Olam, when I looked up, I saw one large ram standing in front of the gate, and it had stately horns. And the one was more stately, and the stately one came up. But after this I saw the ram charging to the east and to the north and to the west and to the south. And no beasts stood after it, and no one could rescue from its hands. And it was doing as it wanted and became exalted.

5 And I was pondering, and lo, a male goat of goats was coming from the west, over the face of the earth, and it did not touch the ground. And one horn of the male goat was between its eyes. And it came to the ram, which had the horns, which I had seen standing by the gate, and it ran against it in a furious rage. And I saw it approaching toward the ram. And it was inflamed against it, and it struck and crushed its two horns. And there was no longer power in the ram to stand against the male goat, and it rent it asunder on the ground and crushed it, and there was no one who could rescue the ram from the male goat. And the male goat of the goats prevailed exceedingly, and when it prevailed, its great horn was crushed, and another four horns came up behind it toward the four winds of heaven.

9 And out of one of them sprang one strong horn, and it prevailed, and it struck against the south and against the east and against the north. And it was raised unto the stars of the sky. And it was thrown down upon the earth from the stars and was trodden upon by them until the commander in chief delivers the captives. And the mountains, which were from eternity, were overthrown on account of it and their place and sacrifice were taken away. And he put it to the ground upon the earth, and it prospered, and it emerged, and the sanctuary will be desolated.

12 And sins were on the offering, and justice was thrown to the ground, and it acted, and it prospered. And I kept hearing another holy one speaking, and the other one said to the Phelmouni who was speaking, "How long will this vision continue: even the sacrifice, which has been taken away, and the sin of desolation that has been given and the sanctuaries will be desolated unto trampling?" And he said to him, "Two thousand

28 As for me, Daniel, my thoughts were greatly troubling me, and my appearance was changed, and I kept the matter in my heart.

8 In the third year of the reign of King Baltasar, a vision appeared to me—I, Daniel—after the one that had appeared to me at the beginning. And I was in Sousa the citadel, which is in the region of Ailam, and I was by the Oubal. And I raised my eyes and saw, and lo, there was one ram standing before the Oubal, and it had stately horns. And the one was more stately than the other, and the stately one came up last. I saw the ram charging toward the sea and northward and southward. And no beasts will stand before it, and no one could deliver from its hand. And it did according to its will and became great.

5 And I was considering, and lo, a male goat of goats was coming from the southwest, across the face of the whole earth, and it was not touching the ground. And the male goat had a horn between its eyes. And it came to the ram, which had the horns, which I had seen standing before the Oubal, and it ran to it with an onrush of its force. And I saw it reaching unto the ram. And it was enraged against it and struck the ram, and it crushed both its horns. And there was no power in the ram to stand before it, and it threw it on the ground and trampled it under foot, and there was no one who could deliver the ram from its hand. And the male goat of the goats grew exceedingly great, and when it was strong, the great horn was crushed, and four horns came up under it toward the four winds of heaven.

9 And out of one of them came one strong horn, and it grew exceedingly great toward the south and toward the host. It became great all the way up to the host of heaven. And it fell upon the earth from the host and from the stars and trampled them under foot, even until the commander in chief delivers the captives. And sacrifice was overthrown on account of it. And it emerged, and things were prosperous for it, and the sanctuary will be desolated. And sin was given for an offering, and justice was thrown to the ground, and it acted, and it prospered. And I heard one of the holy ones speaking, and one holy one said to the Phelmouni who was speaking, "For how long will this vision continue: the sacrifice, which has been taken away, and the sin of desolation that has been given and the sanctuary and the host will be trampled under foot?"

14 And he said to him, "Two thousand and three hundred days, evenings and mornings, and the sanctuary will be purified."
15 And it happened that when I, Daniel, was seeing, I was seeking to comprehend the vision. And lo, one having the appearance of a man stood in front of me, and I heard a human voice in the midst of the Olam, and after the human cried out he said, “The vision is for this ordinance.” And he came and stood near where I stood, and when he came, I became bewildered and fell on my face. And he said to me, “Consider, O son of man, for this vision is yet for an appropriate time.”

16 And while he spoke with me, I fell on my face to the earth, and he touched me and set me on my feet. 17 And he said to me, “Lo, I am making known to you what will take place at the end of the wrath against the sons of the people, for yet will remain the appropriate time of consummation. 18 The ram that you saw, which had the horns, is the king of the Medes and Persians. 19 And the male goat of the goats is the king of the Greeks, and the great horn that is between its eyes, this one is the first king. 20 And as for the four horns that were crushed and came up after it: four kings will arise from his nation, not in accordance with their power.

21 And at the last of their reign, when their sins are full, a king shameless of countenance will arise who understands obscure sayings. 22 And his thought will be against the holy ones. And the lie will prosper by his hands, and his heart will be exalted. And by deceit he will annihilate many, and he will rise by the destruction of men. And he will make a gathering by hand and will repay.

23 The evening and morning vision was told truthfully. And now, the vision is closed, for it is yet for many days.”

24 I, Daniel, having been weak many days and having risen, again was conducting the royal affairs. And I was continually upset by the vision, and there was no one who comprehended it.

9 During the first year of Darius son of Xerxes, of Median lineage, who were reigning over the kingdom of the Chaldeans, in the first year of his reign, I, Daniel, pondered in the books the number of days when the ordinance of the Lord came to the prophet Jeremias to arise for the fulfillment of the reproach of Jerusalem—seventy years.

3 And I gave my face to the Lord God, to find prayer and compassion with fasting and with ashes and sackcloth. 4And I prayed to the Lord God and acknowledged him and said,

"O Lord, lo, you are the great and powerful God and the fear-inspiring one in maintaining the covenant and mercy with those who love you and keep your ordinance 5we have sinned, acted wickedly, done wrong and rebelled and passed over your commandments and your ordinances. 6And we have not obeyed your servants the prophets, what they spoke in your name to our kings and sovereigns and our ancestors and to every nation on the earth.

7 "Righteousness belongs to you, O Lord, and the shame of our face belongs to us, on this day, to the people of Juda and the settlers in Jerusalem and to all the people of Israel, those who are near and those who are farther off, in all the regions into which you have dispersed them there, because of the trespasses that they have perpetrated before you. 8O Master, the shame of our face belongs to us and to our kings and sovereigns and to our ancestors, because we have sinned against you. 9To the Lord belongs justice and mercy, for we have rebelled against you 10and have not obeyed the voice of the Lord our God by following your law, which you gave before Moyses and us through your servants the prophets.

11 "And all Israel has forsaken your law and turned away in order not to hear your voice. And the curse and the oath written in the law of Moyses, the servant of God, have come upon us, because we have sinned against him. 12And he has established his ordinances for us, what he spoke against us and against our judges who judged, by bringing great evils upon us such as have not happened under heaven as they have happened in Jerusalem. 13According to what is written in the covenant of Moyses, all the evils have come upon us. And we did not seek the face of the Lord our God, to turn away from our sins and to consider your righteousness, O Lord. 14And the Lord kept watch over the evils and brought them upon us, for the Lord God is right in everything that he does, and we have not obeyed his voice.

15 "And now, O Master, our God, that brought your people out of Egypt by your uplifted arm and you made a name for yourself at this day—we have sinned; we have failed to understand. 16O Master, according to your righteousness, let your anger turn away from us, and your wrath from your city Jerusalem, the holy mountain. Because by our sins and by the ignorance of our ancestors, Jerusalem and your common people, O Lord, became a disgrace among all our neighbors. 17And now, O Master, heed the prayer of your servant even for my suppli-

20 And while I was still speaking and praying and acknowledging my sins and the sins of my people Israel and entreat among the prayers before the Lord, my God, and on behalf of the holy mountain of our God 21 and while I was still speaking in my prayer, and lo, the man whom I had seen at first in my sleep, Gabriel, being carried swiftly approached me at the time of the evening sacrifice. 22 And he came and spoke with me and said, "Daniel, I have just come out to show you intelligence. 23 At the beginning of your supplication an ordinance went out from the Lord, and I have come to explain to you, for you are shown mercy. And think about the ordinance:

24 "Seventy weeks have been decided for your people and for the city, Sion: for sin to be consummated and to blot out iniquities and to comprehend the vision and for everlasting righteousness to be given and for the vision to be consummated and to seal sins and to atone for iniquities and for the view to be comprehended and to gladden a holy of holies. 25 And you shall understand and will rejoice and will discover ordinances to respond, and you will build Jerusalem as a city for the Lord. 26 And after seven and seventy and sixty-two weeks, an anointing will be removed and will not be. And a king of nations will demolish the city and the sanctuary along with the anointed one, and his consummation will come with wrath even until the time of consummation. He will be attacked through war. 27 And the covenant will prevail for many, and it will return again and be rebuilt broad and long. And at the consummation of times [even after seven years and seventy times and sixty-two times] [until the time of the consummation of the war even desolation will be removed] [when the covenant prevails for many weeks]. And in half of the week the sacrifice and the libation will cease, and in the temple there will be an abomination of desolations until the consummation of a season, and a consummation will be given for the desolation."

10 In the first year of King Cyrus of the Persians a decree was shown to Daniel, whose name was called Baltasar. And [the vision and] the decree was true. And the forceful multitude will understand the decree, and I understood it by means of a vision.

In the third year of King Cyrus of the Persians a word was revealed to Daniel, whose name was called Baltasar. And the word was genuine, and great power and understanding was given to him by the vision.

In those days, I, Daniel, was in mourning. I had not eaten food of desire, and no meat or wine had entered my mouth. I had not anointed myself with oil until I completed three weeks of days.

And it happened on the twenty-fourth day of the first month, and as I was on the bank of the great river, which is the Tigris, and I raised my eyes and saw, and lo, there was one person clothed in linen and girded with gold around the waist and a phas from his middle. And his body was like tharsis, and his face like an appearance of lightning, and his eyes like torches of fire, and his arms and feet like dazzling bronze, and the sound of his talking like the sound of a throng. And I, Daniel, saw this great vision, and the persons who were with me saw this vision, and a mighty fear fell on them, and they ran away in haste. And I remained alone, and I saw this great vision. And no strength remained in me, and I saw a spirit turned toward me in order to corrupt, and I did not prevail. And as I heard the sound of his talking, I fell on my face to the ground.

And lo, he reached out a hand to me and roused me on my knees to the soles of my feet. And he said to me, “Daniel, you are a person shown mercy. Ponder the ordinances that I am speaking to you. And stand in your position, because I have now been sent to you.” And while he spake this decree to me, I stood trembling. And he said to me, “Do not fear, Daniel, for from the first day that you gave your heart to understanding and to be afflicted before your Lord, your word has been heeded, and I have come because of your word. And the general of the kingdom of the Persians opposed me twenty and one day. Lo, one of the holy angels approached to help me, and I left him there with the general of the king of the Persians.” And he said to me, “I have come to explain to you that it will come upon your people at the end of days, for a vision is yet for days.”

And as he spoke with me these decrees, I gave my face toward the ground and was silent. And lo, as it were a likeness of a human hand touched my lips, and I opened my mouth, and I spoke and said to the one who stood in front of me, “Sir, as the vision turned to me, to my flank, there was not even strength in me. And how will my lord speak, for he has strengthened me.” And he said to me, “Do you understand why I have come to you? And now I will return to fight against the ruler of the kingdom of the Persians.”

Do you know why I have come to you? And now I will return to fight against the ruler of the kingdom of the Persians, 14and I, Daniel, alone saw the appearance, and the men who were with me did not see the appearance, rather a great terror fell upon them, and they fled in fear. And I was left alone, and I saw this great vision. And no strength was left in me, and my glory was changed into decay, and I did not retain strength. And I heard the sound of his words, and when I heard him, I was stunned, and my face was on the ground.

10 And lo, a hand touching me, and it roused me to my knees. And he said to me, “Daniel, man of desires, understand regarding the words that I am speaking to you. And stand in your position, because I have now been sent to you.” And while he spoke this word to me, I stood upright in trembling. And he said to me, “Do not fear, Daniel, for from the first day that you gave your heart to understanding and to be afflicted before your God, your words have been heard, and I have come because of your words. And the ruler of the kingdom of the Persians stood opposite me twenty and one day. And lo, Michael, one of the chief rulers, came to help me, and I left him there with the ruler of the kingdom of the Persians, 14and I have come to instruct you about what will meet your people at the end of days, because the vision is yet for days.”

And as he spoke with me according to these words, I gave my face toward the ground and was stunned. And lo, as it were a likeness of a son of man touched my lips, and I opened my mouth, and I spoke and said to the one who stood before me, “Sir, because of your appearance, everything inside me was upset, and I had no strength. And now, sir, will your servant be able to talk with this my lord?” And as for me, from now on, strength will not stay in me, and breath was not left in me.

18 And a specter of a human continued and touched me and strengthened me. And he said to me, “You are a person shown mercy. Do not fear; be well. Be courageous and strong!” And when he spake with me, I was strengthened and said, “Let my lord speak, for he has strengthened me.” 20And he said to me, “Do you understand why I have come to you? And now I will return to fight against the ruler of the contend with the general of the king of the Persians. And I was leaving, and lo, the commander of the Greeks was entering. 21 And the more I will explain to you the chief things that are in the register of truth. And there was no one with me who helped concerning these things except Michael, the mighty angel."

11 In the first year of King Cyrus, he told me to be strong and be courageous. 2 "And now I have come to explain the truth to you. Lo, three kings have risen in opposition in Persia. And the fourth will be rich with great riches beyond all, and when he is empowered by his riches, he will rise up against every king of the Greeks. 3 And a mighty king will arise, and he will be lord over a great dominion and will act just as he wishes. 4 And when he rises, his kingdom will be broken and distributed toward the four winds of heaven, not according to his strength nor according to his dominion which he dominated, for his kingdom will be removed and he will teach others these things.

5 "And the king of Egypt will grow strong, and one of the sovereigns will overpower him and will dominate a large domain. 6 And at the completion of the years he will lead them, and the king of Egypt will enter the northern kingdom to ratify an agreement. And he will never prevail, because his arm will not establish strength. And the arm of him and of those associating with him will grow numb, and he will continue for a season.

7 "And a plant from his root will arise against himself. And the king of the north will come upon his idleness with his strength, and he will cause turmoil and will prevail. 8 And he will overthrow their gods with their cast images and their crowds with their precious vessels. They will carry off the silver and gold to Egypt in captivity, and the king of the north will have a year. 9 And he will enter into the kingdom of Egypt for days, and he will return to his own land.

10 "And his son will both be irritated and will gather a gathering of a great crowd. And he will march against it, ravaging. He will pass through and will return and will be greatly provoked. 11 And the king of Egypt will be inflamed and will do battle against the king of the north, and the gathering will be given into his hands. 12 And he will carry off the gathering, and his heart will be exalted, and he will trouble many, and he will never be afraid. 13 And the king of the north will return and will gather [from the city] a gathering, greater than the previous, according to the completion of the time of the year. And he will advance into it with a large crowd and many goods.

11 And as for me, in the first year of Cyrus, I stood for power and strength. 2 "And now I will announce the truth to you. Lo, yet three kings will arise in Persia. And the fourth will be rich with great riches beyond all, and after he has become strong through his riches, he will rise up against all the kingdoms of the Greeks. 3 And a mighty king will arise, and he will be lord over a great dominion and will act according to his will. 4 And as it rises, his kingdom will be broken and divided toward the four winds of heaven and not to his last nor according to his dominion which he ruled, for his kingdom will be uprooted and is for others besides these.

5 "And the king of the south will grow strong, and one of their rulers will prevail against him and will rule a great dominion. 6 And after his years they will be united, and the daughter of the king of the south will come to the king of the north to ratify an agreement with him. And she will not gain strength of arm, and his seed will not endure. And she herself will be given up, and those supporting her, both the young woman and the one who put her in power in those times.

7 "And one from the shoot of her root will rise, of his preparation. And he will come against the army and enter the supports of the king of the north, and he will take action among them and will prevail. 8 And indeed their gods, with their cast images, all of their precious vessels of silver and gold, he will carry to Egypt with a body of captives, and he himself will rise above the king of the north. 9 And he will enter into the kingdom of the king of the south, and he will turn back to his own land.

10 "And his sons will assemble a crowd of great forces, and it will advance by going forward and overwhelming. And it will pass through and will remain and will struggle as far as its strength. 11 And the king of the south will be enraged and will go out and will do battle against the king of the north. And he will establish a great crowd, and the crowd will be given into his hand. 12 And he will carry off the crowd, and his heart will be exalted, and he will overthrow tens of thousands, and he will not prevail. 13 And the king of the north will return and will lead a crowd, larger than the former, and at the finish of the times of years he will attack the entrance with a great army and many supplies.

14 "And in those times thoughts will rise against the king of Egypt. And he will rebuild the fallen\(^a\) of your nation, and he will rise in order to restore prophecy, and they will take offense. 15 And the king of the north will attack and will turn his spears and will take the fortified city. And the arms of the king of Egypt will not stand with his mighty ones, and he will not have the strength to oppose him. 16 And he who comes upon him will act according to his will, and no one will oppose him. And he\(^b\) will stand in the land of desires, and everything will be completed by his hands. 17 And he will give his face to attack all of his work with force, and he\(^b\) will make an agreement with him. And in order to corrupt him, he will give him a daughter of man, and she will not stand and will not be. 18 And he will give his face to the sea and will take many. And he will return wrath for their insult, with an oath, according to his insult. 19 He will turn his face in order to strengthen his country, and he will stumble and will fall and will not be found.

20 "And a royal plant will arise from his root for rising up, a man striking the honor of the king. And in the last days he will be broken, and not in anger or in battle. 21 And a contemptible person will arise in his place, and the royal honor will not be granted to him, and he will come without warning, and the king will prevail by his lot. 22 And he will break the broken arms before his face. And he will revert to the covenant and the people drawn up with him and come against a strong nation with a very small nation. 24 Without warning he will desolate a city and will do what none of his ancestors nor his ancestors’ ancestors had ever done; he will give plunder and spoil and money to them. And he will take thought against the strong city, and his deliberations will be in vain. 25 And his power and his heart will be roused against the king of Egypt with a great crowd, and the king of Egypt will be provoked into battle with the king of the south. 26 And his strength and his heart will be stirred up against the king of the south, and his plans against him. 27 And he will join battle with a large and very strong army. 28 And he will return to his land with many goods, and his heart will be minded against them, and he will return and will be enraged against the

because they abandoned the covenant of the holy one. 31 And arms from him will rise and will defile the sanctuary of fear. And they will remove the sacrifice and will give an abomination of desolation. 32 And with sins against the covenant they will defile by means of a distributed portion, and the common people who know these things will stand firm and will take action. 33 And thoughtful ones of the nation will understand for many, and they will stumble by sword and will become old by it and by captivity, and they will be soiled by pillaging for days. 34 And when they are broken, they will gather a little strength. And many will be gathered to them [—in the city also many—] as by an allotment. 35 And some of the intelligent will be purified until the time of consummation, for there is yet a time.

“In that hour 36 the king will act according to his will. And he will be enraged and will be exalted over every god and will speak strange things against the God of gods. And he will succeed until the wrath is completed, for completion pertaining to him is coming. 37 And he will in no way have regard for the gods of his ancestors, and he will give no thought to the desire of a woman. He will be exalted in everything, [and strong nations will be subject to him]. 38 And he will honor a strong god in his place; even a god whom his ancestors did not know he will honor with gold and silver and valuable stone. And with desirable things 39 [of cities] he will act and will come into a strong fortress. With a foreign god whom he acknowledges he will increase honor, and he will rule over it far and wide, and he will divide the area freely.

40 "And according to the time of consummation the king of Egypt will lock horns with him. And the king of the north will be angry with him with chariots and with many horses and with many ships. And he will advance into the country of Egypt. 42 And there will be no one that is delivered in it. 43 And he will seize the place of gold and the place of silver and all the desire of Egypt, and Libyans and Ethiopians will be in his crowd.

And a rumor from the east and north will alarm him, and he will go out with mighty fury both to annihilate by sword and to kill many. 45 And he will set up his tent then between the seas and the mountain of the will of the holy one. And the hour of his consummation will come, and there will be no one who helps him.

12 "And at that hour Michael, the great angel who stands over the sons of your people, will pass by. That is a day of affliction, which will be such as has not occurred since they were born until that day. And on that day the whole people will rise and will gain an understanding with those who forsake the holy covenant. 31 And seed from him will arise and will profane the sanctity of sovereignty. And they will abolish the regular offering and will render an obliterated abomination. 32 And those who are lawless will introduce a covenant by means of slipperiness, and people who know their God will stand firm and will take action. 33 And the intelligent of the people will have understanding in many things, and they will become weak by sword and by flame and by captivity and by plunder of days. 34 And when they become weak, they will be aided with a little aid, and many will be joined to them by means of slipperiness. 35 And some of the intelligent will become weak so as to refine and select them and that they be revealed until the time at the end, because yet is the appointed time.

36 "And he will act according to his will. And the king will be exalted and will be magnified over every god and will speak outlandish things. And he will prosper until the wrath is completed, for it is coming to completion. 37 And he will not take notice of all the gods of his ancestors and the desire of women, and he will not take notice of any god, because he will be magnified above all. 38 And he will glorify the god Maozin in his place; even a god whom his ancestors did not know he will glorify with gold and silver and precious stone and with desirable things. 39 And he will act against the fortresses of refuge with a foreign god. And he will increase honor and will subject many to them and will distribute the land as presents.

40 "And at the end of time the king of the south will lock horns with him. And the king of the north will assemble against him with chariots and with horsemen and with many ships. And he will advance into the land and will crush and will pass by. 41 And he will advance into the land of Sabain, and many will fall weak, and these will come through safe from his hand: Edom and Moab and the rule of the sons of Ammon. 42 And he will stretch out his hand against the land, and the land of Egypt will not be for saving. 43 And he will be lord with the secrets of gold and of silver and with all the precious things of Egypt and the Libyans and the Ethiopians in their strongholds. 44 And rumors and dispatches from the east and the north will alarm him, and he will go with great fury to annihilate and to anathematize many. 45 And he will pitch his tent at Ephadano between the seas toward the holy mountain of Sabain. And he will come to his destiny, and there is no one who rescues him.

12 "And at that time Michael, the great ruler who stands over the sons of your people, will arise. And there will be a time of affliction such as had not occurred since a nation first came into existence until that time. And at that time
Daniel 12

Your people will be delivered, everyone who is written in the book. 2 And many of those who sleep in a mound of earth will be awakened, these to everlasting life and those to shame and everlasting contempt. 3 And those who are intelligent will shine like the splendor of the firmament, and some of the many righteous, like the stars forever and always. 4 And you, Daniel, bar the words and seal the book until the time of consummation, until many are taught and knowledge is increased.”

5 And I, Daniel, saw, and lo, two others stood, one on this side of the stream and one on the other. 6 And they said to the one wearing linen, “O, O Sir, when then will you do the consummation of the wonders and the purification of these things which you have told?” 7 And I heard the one wearing linen, who was above the water of the stream: “Until the time of consummation.” And he raised the right hand and left hand toward heaven, and he swore by God, who lives forever, “The consummation of the power for the release of the holy people will be at a time and times and half a time, and all these things will be accomplished.”

8 And I heard and did not comprehend regarding the time itself, and I said, “Sir, what is the interpretation of this word [and what are these illustrations]?” 9 And he said to me, “Run along, Daniel, for the ordinances have been hidden and sealed until the end of the ages, and no sinners will ever comprehend, and those who understand will pay heed. 10 And from the time that the [perpetual] sacrifice was taken away and the abomination of desolation was prepared to be given, there are one thousand two hundred ninety days. 11 Happy is the one who continues, because he will gather one thousand three hundred thirty-five days. 12 And you, come, and rest, and you will rise for your allotment at the consummation of the days.”

BEL AND THE DRAGON

TO THE READER

Edition of the Greek Text
The NETS translation of both versions has been based on the critical editions of Joseph Ziegler and Oliver Munnich (Septuaginta: Vetus Testamentum Graecum Auctoritate Academiae Scientiarum Gottingensis editum XVI.2: Susanna Daniel Bel et Draco [Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 1999]). Munnich has revised Ziegler’s critical edition of the Old Greek (OG) version (1954), because Ziegler did not have access to several important portions of papyrus 967. Accordingly, the NETS translation of the OG has been based on Munnich, while Theodotion (TH) has been translated from Ziegler. Items of dubious originality have been retained in square brackets.

The Two Greek Versions
Bel and the Dragon, like Susanna and Daniel, is extant in two versions: the Old Greek (OG) and Theodotion (TH).

Although in length the two are approximately equal, certain details in fact and narration suggest that, at the level of the Greek, their relationship was minimal. Minor differences in detail include v. 3 where “forty” (TH) contrasts with “four” (OG) sheep, and “wine” is read by the one (TH) but “oil” by the other (OG). Although the plot is very similar throughout, there are differences. So, for example, v. 9 of TH has the king placing the onus on the priests to show that Bel is eating the offering, while in OG it is Daniel who assumes the burden of proof (for similar instances see vv. 19, 21). Similarly, the narrative perspective differs when the dragon is destroyed and the reaction thereto is narrated. To be noted is the end of v. 27 to the beginning of v. 28 for the difference in wording and the relative roles played by the people and the king vis-à-vis Daniel. This difference gives rise to others: according to v. 30 of OG the king takes the initiative to give Daniel over to destruction, whereas in TH (v. 29) the Babylonians take the lead.

Consequently, there is evidence to suggest that the two Greek versions of Bel and the Dragon are independent versions. As further evidence it may be noted that in vv. 7, 9, 11 OG reads respectively “I swear to you by the Lord God of the gods,” “But they said, ‘It is Bel himself who eats them,'” and “Now the word pleased the king,” all three of which are lacking in TH. Though in v. 14 OG notes that only Daniel knew about the ashes that had been sprinkled—a note which anticipates Daniel’s instructions to both the priest and the king in vv. 15–17—according to TH the priests are not even on the scene. (For similar “additions” see vv. 24, 31–32, 39.)

TH, on the other hand, has a “plus” in v. 5 when it includes that God “has dominion over all flesh.” Another “plus” occurs in v. 25 when Daniel affirms that he worships the Lord, because he is the living God. (For smaller “pluses” see vv. 28, 32, 36.)

The comparative independence of the two Greek versions is further suggested by the few cases in which they share similar wording for large portions of a verse. An example is the first story about Bel, which ends at v. 22. Eleven times OG and TH have identical wording for part of a verse (4, 10, 23, 26, 28, 34, 35, 36, 38, 39, 41, 42), but in most of these cases changes in word order and/or significant pluses or alternative readings are also present. Only three short passages (23, 26, 35) are nearly identical. Occasional agreements in vocabulary are not incompatible with the notion that we have two independent translations of a similar source text.

On a few occasions there is a close textual relationship between the two versions, but these agreements may be due to textual corruption. The verb “strew” (κατασκόρω) occurs in v. 14, although OG and TH employ different forms and the manuscripts for TH have several variant readings. V. 27 has “cake” (μαύζω) in both versions, a word unique in the Septuagint. There may also be a relationship in v. 36: “take hold of the hair of his head” (ἐπέλαβε τοὺς κεφαλὰς τοῦ κόμης τῆς κεφαλῆς). Finally, the identical phrase “those responsible for his ruin” (τούς δὲ αἰτίους τῆς ἀπωλείας σωτοῦ) in v. 42 seems to reflect a direct relationship between the two versions, particularly in the choice of αἰτίους.

Based on the differences between the two versions it is possible that the source text of the OG was later edited, and the newer version is reflected in TH. For example, the identification of Daniel as a “priest, the son of Habal” in OG v. 2 is not reflected elsewhere in the Daniel stories. In addition, the heading of OG identifies the story as a “prophecy of Hambakoum the son of lesous of the tribe of Leui.” In TH, however, the story is dated to the time of Cyrus the Persian successor of Astyages (v. 1).

Given the paucity of distinctive agreements, the many differences in detail, and the way that the stories are told, they are best understood as distinct translations of a common story.

TRANSLATION PROFILE OF THE GREEK
The significant differences between the two versions raise the question of their possible source. Do the differences stem from widely differing Semitic source texts or from the translators? The answer is hampered by the fact that there is no extant Hebrew or Aramaic version of Bel and the Dragon. Moreover, the story is brief: forty-two verses in TH and thirty-eight in the OG. The differences between them, however, are probably a combination of diverging source and modes of translation.

Two main arguments may be used in support of Bel and the Dragon being a translation from a Semitic source: the presence of Semitisms and the relationship between the two versions. Unfortunately, there is not a great deal of evidence to consider. Semitic influence on the vocabulary and syntactic structure of the Greek texts is evident in the frequent appearance of καί “and” as a gloss for conjunctive ו. The Hebrew phrase καὶ ἐγένετο ("and it was") also occurs three times in TH (vv. 14, 18, 28) and twice in OG (vv. 15, 33). TH further has ἵδου twice (vv. 11, 40), though this need not be un-Greek. The odd expression εἰν τῷ ῥοιζῳ τοῦ πνεύματος αὐτοῦ “in a rush of his spirit” in v. 36 of TH is best explained as a corruption from Hebrew or Aramaic. Suggestions have been made for other examples of Semitic influence in the story, but they are less viable as independent evidence.

In addition there is the relationship between the two versions. They follow the same basic plot and have some common vocabulary, which could be due to them being translations of a similar source. Though it is difficult to identify aspects of the stories due to translation, TH reads like a translation based on formal equivalence of a Semitic text. OG does so at times, but it reads more like a dynamic translation or even a Greek composition. Thus, TH fits within the interlinear paradigm, while the OG is not so easily defined.

THE NETS TRANSLATION OF BEL AND THE DRAGON
General Approach
Assuming that both versions are translations from Semitic source texts requires that our NETS translation reflect the linguistic relationship between them as closely as possible. Thus, compared to the NRSV the translation will at times be somewhat stilted and the grammar awkward, because we are attempting to reflect the relationship of the Greek to the Hebrew or Aramaic parent text. Although this is more true of the TH version, the parataxis of the Greek is present in both versions; therefore, it is retained in NETS. The translation of vocabulary also assumes an emphasis on the particular word rather than the context due to the subservience of the Greek to its source text. At the same time, NETS distinguishes those places where either of the translations exhibits variety in how they translated what most probably was the same phrase or word. For example, in v. 3 OG has "were squandering" ἀναλύωτα, where TH employs “would spend” ἐδαπανώμενο, and OG refers to "false doors" ψευδοθύρας in v. 21, while TH has "hidden doors" κρυπτάς θύρας.

Comparing the OG and TH Translations
One of the most challenging aspects of the NETS translation for Daniel and the additional stories has been to compose a translation that both reflects the subservience of each version to its presumed source text while, at the same time, capturing the nature of the relationship of the two Greek versions to one another. This task has been the least difficult for Bel and the Dragon. Even when the stories overlap they often depart in other aspects. For example, in v. 18 when Daniel and the king (along with the king’s entourage in OG) enter the temple and find the food gone, the king addresses Bel in the second person (“you”) in TH, while Bel is referred to in the third person in the OG (see also v. 38). Throughout the two versions any connections between the vocabulary are maintained even when they appear in different verses or when there are other grammatical changes.

EDITORIAL DETAIL
The TH version of Bel and the Dragon is the basis for the NRSV translation; thus, the versification of NRSV and NETS TH correspond. The verse numbers are equivalent to those followed in both Rahlfis and Ziegler’s edition. For the OG I have followed Ziegler/Munnich, which differs only in two places (v. 13 and v. 25) from Rahlfis.

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL NOTE
In addition to the standard reference tools I was most appreciative of the translation and commentary on Bel and the Dragon by Carey A. R. TIMOTHY McLAY

From a prophecy of Hambakoum the son of Iesous of the tribe of Leui.

2 There was a certain person, a priest, whose name was Daniel son of Habal, a companion of the king of Babylon.

3 And there was an idol, Bel, which the Babylonians would revere. Now, every day they were squandering on it twelve bushels of choice flour and four sheep and six measures of oil. 4And the king would revere him, and the king would go every day and would do obeisance to him. But Daniel would pray to the Lord.

And the king said to Daniel, “Why do you not do obeisance to Bel?” 5And Daniel said to the king, “I revere no one except the Lord God, who created heaven and earth.”

6 So the king said to him, “Is this one, then, not a god? Do you not see how much is spent for him every day?” 7And Daniel said to him, “Not at all! Do not let anyone mislead you, for this one is only of clay inside and bronze outside. Moreover, I swear to you by the Lord God of the gods that this one has never eaten anything.”

8 And angered, the king called the leaders of the temple and said to them, “Produce the one who eats the things prepared for Bel.” 9And Daniel said to the king, “I revere one except the Lord God, who created heaven and earth.”

10 Now there were seventy priests of Bel, not counting wives and children. So he brought the king into the idol’s temple. 11And the food was set out in the presence of the king and Daniel, and the mixed wine was brought in and set out before Bel. And Daniel said, “You yourself, see, O king, that these things are set down. You, then, seal the bolts of the shrine when it is closed.” Now the word pleased the king. 14Now Daniel commanded those with him, after everyone departed from the temple, to strew the whole shrine with ashes, though no one else except him knew. And then, as he sealed the shrine, he commanded that it be sealed with the king’s signet and with the signets of certain illustrious priests. And so it happened.

15-17 And it happened on the next day that they went to the place. (But the priests of Bel, after entering through false doors, had eaten everything) the Babylonians would revere it. And the bakoum was having bread broken in a bowl of wine. And Daniel was in the pit six days. And he might be devoured and not even have the good for- the crowd threw Daniel into that pit so that he was condemned to death would be provided for them. And every day two bodies con- sumed and the tables empty. And the king was thrilled and said to Daniel, “Bel is great, and there is no deceit in him!”

19 And Daniel laughed exceedingly and said to the king, “Come, see the deceit of the priests.” And Daniel said, “O king, these footprints, whose are they?” 20 And the king said, “Of men and women and children.”

21 And he went to the house where the priests were staying, and they found Bel’s food and the wine. And Daniel showed the king the false doors through which the priests would enter and con- sume what was set out for Bel. 22 And the king brought them out of Bel’s temple and handed them over to Daniel. And he gave the provision that was for him to Daniel, but he destroyed Bel.

23 And there was a dragon in that same place, and the Babylonians would revere it. 24 And the king said to Daniel, “Surely you shall not also say about this one, that he is bronze! Look, he lives and eats and drinks! Do obeisance to him.” 25 And Daniel said, “O king, give me permission, and I will slay the dragon without iron or club.” And the king agreed with him and said, “I have given it to you.”

27 And taking thirty minas of pitch and fat and hair, Daniel boiled them together, and having made a cake, he threw it into the mouth of the dragon. And after eating, it burst open. And he showed it to the king, saying, “Aren’t these the things you revere, O king?”

28 And all those from the country assembled against Daniel and said, “The king has just now become a Judean. He has destroyed Bel and killed the dragon.” 29 And when the king saw that the crowd from the country had united against him, he called his companions and said, “I am giving Daniel over for destruction.”

31-32 Now, there was a pit in which seven lions would be fed, to which the conspirators of the king would be delivered. And every day two bodies con- demned to death would be provided for them. And the crowd threw Daniel into that pit so that he might be devoured and not even have the good fortune of a burial. And Daniel was in the pit six days.

33 And it happened on the sixth day, and Ham- bakoum was having bread broken in a bowl of

19 And Daniel laughed exceedingly and said to the king, “Come, see the deceit of the priests.” And Daniel said, “O king, these footprints, whose are they?” 20 And the king said, “Of men and women and children.”

21 And he went to the house where the priests were staying, and they found Bel’s food and the wine. And Daniel showed the king the false doors through which the priests would enter and consume what was set out for Bel. 22 And the king brought them out of Bel’s temple and handed them over to Daniel. And he gave the provision that was for him to Daniel, but he destroyed Bel.

23 And there was a dragon in that same place, and the Babylonians would revere it. 24 And the king said to Daniel, “Surely you shall not also say about this one, that he is bronze! Do obeisance to him.” 25 And Daniel said, “O king, give me permission, and I will slay the dragon without iron or club.” And the king agreed with him and said, “I have given it to you.”

27 And taking thirty minas of pitch and fat and hair, Daniel boiled them together, and having made a cake, he threw it into the mouth of the dragon. And after eating, it burst open. And he showed it to the king, saying, “Aren’t these the things you revere, O king?”

28 And all those from the country assembled against Daniel and said, “The king has just now become a Judean. He has destroyed Bel and killed the dragon.” 29 And when the king saw that the crowd from the country had united against him, he called his companions and said, “I am giving Daniel over for destruction.”

31-32 Now, there was a pit in which seven lions would be fed, to which the conspirators of the king would be delivered. And every day two bodies condemned to death would be provided for them. And the crowd threw Daniel into that pit so that he might be devoured and not even have the good fortune of a burial. And Daniel was in the pit six days.

33 And it happened on the sixth day, and Hambakoum was having bread broken in a bowl of boiled soup and a jar of mixed wine and was on his way to the plain to take it to the reapers. And an angel of the Lord spoke to Hambakoum, saying, “This is what God says to you: the food that you have, take it to Daniel, the one of Baltasar, in the lions’ pit in Babylon.” And Hambakoum said, “Lord God, I have not seen Babylon, and I do not know where the pit is.” And when the angel of the Lord had taken Hambakoum by the hair of his head, he set him down above the pit that was in Babylon.

And Hambakoum said to Daniel, “Rise! Eat the food that God has sent you.” And Daniel said, “For the Lord God who does not forsake those who love him has remembered me.” And Daniel ate. Then the angel of the Lord put Hambakoum whence he took him on that same day. [Now the Lord God remembered Daniel.] Now after these things the king came out mourning Daniel. And when he stooped down into the pit, he saw him seated! And when he had shouted out, the king said, “The Lord God is great, and there is no other besides him!” And the king brought Daniel out from the pit and threw into the pit those responsible for his ruin before Daniel, and they were devoured.

37 And Hambakoum shouted, saying, “Daniel, Daniel! Take the food that God has sent you.” And Daniel said, “For you have remembered me, O God, and have not forsaken those who love you.” And having risen, Daniel ate. Then the angel of God immediately returned Hambakoum to his place.

40 Now on the seventh day the king came out mourning Daniel. And when he came to the pit and looked in, and lo, Daniel was seated! And when he had shouted out with a loud voice, he said, “You are great, O Lord, the God of Daniel, and there is no other besides you!” And he pulled him out but threw into the pit those responsible for attempting his ruin, and they were immediately devoured before him.
